AN EXPOSITION

OF THE

BOOKS of the PROPHETS

OF THE

OLD TESTAMENT,

Both LARGER and LESSER.

VOL. II.

Containing the PROPHECIES of

EZEKIEL,
DANIEL,
HOSEA,
JOEL,
AMOS,
OBADIAH,
JONAH,
MICAH,
NAHUM, HABAKKUK, ZEPHANIAH, HAGGAI, ZECHARIAH,
MALACHI.

By JOHN GILL, D. D.

LONDON:
Printed for the AUTHOR;
And Sold by G. KEITH, at the Bible and Crown, in Grace-church-ſtreet; and by J. ROBINSON, at Dock-head, Southwark. M.DCC.LVIII.

Nº. XXIII.

BRITISH MUSEUM

AN EXPOSITION
OF THE
BOOKS of the PROPHETS
OF THE
OLD TESTAMENT.

The Book of the Prophet EZEKIEL.

THIS Book is rightly placed after Jeremiah; ſince Ezekiel was among the captives in Chaldea, when he propheſied; whereas Jeremiah began to propheſy long before that captivity, and concerning it. The name of this prophet ſignifies, as it is commonly interpreted, the ſtrength of God, or ſtrengthened by God; as he was, and as he needed to be, having great work to do, and a perverſe people to deal with; ſee ch. iii. 8. but the learned Hillerus [a] chuſes to render it, God ſhall prevail; with which compare Jer. xx. 7. There was a Levite of this name, of whom mention is made in 1 Chron. xxiv. 16. whoſe name is there read Jebezekel; and this prophet was a prieſt, ch. i. 3. and both Clemens Alexandrinus [b], and Euſebius [c], cite a Jewiſh writer of tragedies, of the ſame name; which ſome have very wrongly thought to be the ſame with our prophet; but whether Ezekiel is not the ſame with Nazaratus or Zabratus, the maſter of Pythagoras, mentioned by Clemens as ſuch, according to the opinion of ſome, is a matter of queſtion; and which the learned Selden [d] ſeems to think probable. According to the judgment and opinion of Jerom [e], his ſtile is neither very eloquent, nor very ruſtic; but between both, and has a mixture of each. The viſions he ſaw are very abſtruſe and difficult of interpretation, eſpecially the viſion of the living creatures and wheels; wherefore the Jews [f] forbad the reading of it, as well as the end of this prophecy, until perſons were thirty years of age. The divine viſions in this book; the whole ſubject-matter of it; its agreement with the prophecy of Jeremiah; and the accompliſhment of events predicted in it, prove the authority of it; and its divine authority has always been allowed, both by the Jewiſh ſynagogue, and the Chriſtian church. There were indeed ſome ancient Jewiſh Rabbins, who were perplexed about ſome things in it, and conſulted about laying it aſide, becauſe of ſome words in it, which ſeemed to them to be contrary to the law of Moſes; but R. Chananiah ben Goron, a very famous doctor in thoſe times, withdrew to his chamber, and wrote a commentary, in order to remove thoſe difficulties to ſatisfaction [g]. This book, in general, contains various viſions the prophet ſaw; ſeveral threatnings againſt the people of the Jews; and prophecies againſt other nations; and an abundance of comfortable promiſes of the Meſſiah, and of bleſſings of grace by him; and of the ſtate and condition of the goſpel-church, and the worſhip of it. Joſephus [h] ſays, Ezekiel left two books written by him; one of which Athanaſius [i], or the author of the Synopſis under his name, thinks is loſt; but the learned Huetius [k] is of opinion, that the prophecy of Ezekiel, in the times of Joſephus, was divided into two parts; the firſt containing the firſt thirty-nine chapters; and the other the nine laſt chapters; which is not improbable. If the authorities of Epiphanius [l]; or the writer of the lives of the prophets that goes by his name; and of Iſidorus [m], are of any weight, Ezekiel was born in the land of Sarera; killed by the governor in Babylon; and buried by the people in the field of Maur or Maburim, in the ſepulchre of Shem and Arphaxad. The account R. Benjamin Tudelenſis [n] gives is, that there is a ſynagogue of the prophet Ezekiel by the river Euphrates; and over-againſt the ſynagogue, ſixty towers; and between every tower, a ſynagogue.

---

[a] Onomaſt. Sacr. p. 224, 320, 845.

[b] Stromat. l. 2. p. 344.

[c] Præpar. Evangel. l. 9. c. 28. p. 436. & c. 29. p. 439.

[d] De Dis Syris, Syntag. 2. c. 1. p. 210, 211.

[e] Præfat. in Ezek. Tom. III. fol. 9. D.

[f] Præfat. in ib. ad Euſtochium, Tom. V. fol. 174. G.

[g] T. Bab. Sabbat, fol. 13. 2. & Taanith, fol. 17. 1, 2. & Maimon. & Bartenora in Miſn. Sabbat, c. 1. §. 4.

[h] Antiq. l. 10. c. 5. §. 1.

[i] Synopſ. Sacr. Script. p. 134, 136. Tom. II.

[k] Demonſtr. Evang. Prop. 4. p. 272.

[l] De Prophet. Vit. c. 9.

[m] De Vit. & Mort. Sanct. c. 39.

[n] Maſſaot, p. 78, 79.

gogue. In the court of the ſynagogue is a library; and behind it, the grave of Ezekiel the ſon of Buzi the prieſt; and over it a large vault, of a beautiful building, erected by Jeconiah king of Judah, and thirty-five thouſand Jews, who came with him, when Evil-Merodach brought him out of priſon; and over the grave, a lamp burns night and day. The Cippi Hebraici ſay [o], he was buried by the river Hiddekel; and Menaſſeh ben Iſrael [p] affirms, that he died in Babylon, and was buried there; and ſo Kimchi [q] ſays, the tradition is.

CHAP. I.

THIS chapter contains a viſion, which is the introduction to the prophet's call and commiſſion to perform his office; in the account of which may be obſerved the time when it was ſeen, ℣. 1, 2. and the place, both where the prophet was when he ſaw it; and the object or things that were beheld by him; and the original, form and manner of the viſion, ℣. 3, 4. next follow the particulars of it; and firſt, four living creatures appear, deſcribed by their general likeneſs, as human, ℣. 5. and, in particular, by their faces, feet, hands and wings, ℣. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. by their motion and progreſs, and the ſpirit by which they were influenced, ℣. 12. and by their forms of light, brightneſs and heat, in which they appeared and moved, ℣. 13, 14. and next the wheels, deſcribed by their number; for tho' they ſeemed to be as one, they were four; and by their ſituation on the earth, and by the ſide of the living creatures, ℣. 15. by their appearance, which was alike in them all, and as the colour of beryl, and as a wheel within a wheel, ℣. 16. by their motion, which was on their ſides, and not retrograde, ℣. 17. by their rings or circumferences, which were high, dreadful, and full of eyes, ℣. 18. by their dependence on the living creatures, moving as they, having the ſame ſpirit they had, ℣. 19, 20, 21. and then a firmament is ſeen, deſcribed by its ſituation, over the heads of the living creatures; and by its colour, as the terrible cryſtal, ℣. 22. by what were under it, the wings of the living creatures; of which a more particular account is given, ℣. 23, 24. by what was heard from it, a voice, ℣. 25. and by what was above it, a throne; deſcribed by its colour, as a ſapphire-ſtone; and by a perſon on it, who had the appearance of a man, ℣. 26. who, in general, looked like the colour of amber; within which was the appearance of fire from his loins upwards, and from his loins downwards; the fire had a brightneſs round about it; and that brightneſs was like a rain-bow in a cloud, on a rainy day; and this appearance was no other than that of a divine and glorious perſon; which, when ſeen by the prophet, cauſed him thro' reverence to fall upon his face; when he heard a voice ſpeaking to him, what is recorded in the following chapter, ℣. 27, 28.

℣. 1. Now it came to paſs in the thirtieth year, &c.] Either from the laſt jubilee, as R. Joſeph Kimchi [r], Jarchi and Abendana; or from the time that the book of the law was found by Hilkiah the prieſt [s]; ſo the Targum, which paraphraſes the words thus, "and it was in the thirtieth year after Hilkiah the high-prieſt found the book of the law, in the houſe of the ſanctuary, in the court under the porch, in the middle of the night, after the moon was down, in the days of Joſiah ſon of Amon king of Judah;" or according to Jerom [t], from the time of the prophet's birth, who was now thirty years of age; and was juſt entered into his prieſtly office; or rather it was the thirtieth year of Nabopolaſſar, or the father of Nebuchadnezzar: this was the twelfth year of the captivity, reckoning from the third of Jehoiakim, which was the firſt captivity, and from whence the ſeventy years are to be reckoned, and alſo the twelfth of Nebuchadnezzar's reign; and if two years are taken, as Vitringa [u] obſerves, from the twenty-one years, which are given to Nabopolaſſar in Ptolemy's canon, in which Nebuchadnezzar his ſon reigned with him; there will be found thirty years from the beginning of Nabopolaſſar's reign, to the fifth of Jeconiah's captivity, when Ezekiel began his prophecy; and which, as biſhop Uſher [w], Mr. Bedford [x], Mr. Whiſton [y], and the authors of the Univerſal Hiſtory [z], place in the year 593, before the birth of Chriſt: in the fourth month; the month Tammuz, as the Targum expreſſes it; which anſwers to part of June, and part of July: in the fifth day of the month; which ſome take to be on a ſabbath-day; becauſe ſeven days after, the word of the Lord came to him again, ch. iii. 16. juſt as John was in the ſpirit on the Lord's-day, Rev. i. 10. between one of whoſe viſions and this there is a very great likeneſs, as will be ſeen hereafter: (as I was among the captives by the river of Chebar); which is another agreement in circumſtance between Ezekiel and John, when they had their viſions; John was an exile in Patmos, and Ezekiel among the captives by the river Chebar in Chaldea. Some think this is the ſame river, which is called by Ptolemy [a], Chaboras; and is ſaid by him to paſs thro' Meſopotamia: others ſay, it was a river that was drawn off from the river Euphrates, by the order of one Cobaris or Gobaris a governor, from whence it had its name; that the river Euphrates might not, by its rapid courſe, hurt the city of Babylon; and by the Aſſyrians it was called Armalchar, or Narmalcha [b], the king's river; tho' it ſeems to be no other than Euphrates itſelf; and Kimchi obſerves, that in ſome copies of the Targum on this place, it is interpreted of the river Euphrates; and he ſays their Rabbins of bleſſed memory ſay, that Chebar is Euphrates; and ſo Abarbinel; ſee Pſ. cxxxvii. 1. Monſieur Thevenot [c] ſpeaks of a river called Chabur, which is leſs than Alchabour, another mentioned by him; and has its ſource below Moſul, and on the left-hand to thoſe that go down the Tigris, and at Bagdat loſes itſelf in the Tigris, which he takes to be the ſame as here: that the heavens were opened; as at our Lord's baptiſm,

---

[o] P. 74.

[p] De Reſurrect. Mort. l. 1. c. 2. §. 5.

[q] In Ezek. xliii. 19.

[r] Apud R. D. Kimchi in loc.

[s] Seder Olam Rabba, c. 26.

[t] Præfat. in Ezek. Tom. III. fol 9. D.

[u] Typus Doctrin. Prophetic. §. 7. p. 41. Vid. Witſii Miſcel. Sacr. Tom. I. l. 1. c. 19.

[w] Annales Vet. Teſt. A M. 3409. p. 127.

[x] Scripture chronology, p. 681.

[y] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

[z] Vol. XXI. p. 61.

[a] Geograph. l. 5. c. 18.

[b] Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 6. c. 26.

[c] Travels, Par. 2. B. 1. ch. 10. p. 46.

tiſm, and at the ſtoning of Stephen; and ſo when John had his viſion, which correſponds with the following, a door was opened in heaven, Rev. iv. 1: and I ſaw the viſions of God; which God ſhewed unto him, and which were great and excellent; as excellent things are called things of God, as mountains of God, and cedars of God, Pſ. xxxvi. 6. and lxxx. 10. and indeed he had a viſion of a divine perſon, in an human form; to which agrees the Targum, "and I ſaw in the viſion of prophecy, which abode on me, the viſion of the glory of the majeſty of the Lord." The Arabic and Syriac verſions read, the viſion of God.

℣. 2. In the fifth day of the month, &c.] The month Tammuz, as before: (which was the fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity); the ſame with Jeconiah and Coniah, as he is ſometimes called; he was taken by the king of Babylon, when he had reigned but three months, and his captivity held ſeven and thirty years, 2 Kings xxiv. 8, 12. and xxv. 27.

℣. 3. The word of the Lord came expreſsly, &c.] Or, in being was[d]; which phraſe denotes the reality, certainty, ſubſtantiality and evidence of the word of the Lord to him: unto Ezekiel the prieſt, the ſon of Buzi; which Buzi, ſome ſay, was Jeremiah. Kimchi obſerves, that in the Jeruſalem Targum, the prophet Ezekiel is called the ſon of Jeremiah the prophet; and Jeremiah was called Buzi, becauſe they deſpiſed him: this is rejected by Abarbinel; nor is there any reaſon to believe it, any more than what Nazianzen[e] ſays, that Ezekiel was a ſervant of Jeremiah: in the land of the Chaldeans, by the river Chebar; ſee the note on ℣. 1. The Chaldee paraphraſe makes the word of the Lord to come to him at two diſtinct times and places, "the word of prophecy from before the Lord was with Ezekiel the ſon of Buzi the prieſt, in the land of Iſrael: it returned a ſecond time, and ſpake with him in the province, the land of the Chaldeans, by the river Chebar:" and the hand of the Lord was there upon him; by which is meant the gift and word of prophecy, which came with power and efficacy, clearneſs and evidence; ſo the Targum, "and the ſpirit of prophecy from before the Lord there abode by him;" by which he ſaw all after viſions, and delivered out the following prophecies; ſee 2 Pet. i. 21.

℣. 4. And I looked, &c.] Being under the influence of the Spirit and power of God: and behold, a whirlwind came out of the north; which ſome underſtand of Nebuchadnezzar and his army coming from Babylon, which lay north of Judea; ſee Jer. i. 14. but it ſeems to me to be, with what follows, only an apparatus to the following viſion; and is deſigned to awaken the mind of the prophet, and to fix his attention to what ſhould proceed from hence, and be ſeen by him; juſt as the Lord appeared in, and anſwered Job out of, the whirlwind, Job xxxviii. 1: a great cloud, as is uſual when there is much thunder and lightning; tho' ſome underſtand this alſo of Nebuchadnezzar's army, which came in great numbers, ſwiftly and powerfully, as a cloud: and a fire infolding itſelf; in the cloud; rolling within it, when it burſt out in thunder and lightning. The Targum renders it, fire inflamed: the ſame phraſe is uſed of the ſtorm of thunder, lightning and hail, in Exod. ix. 24. Some underſtand this of the wrath of the Babylonian monarch; or of the wrath of God by him; or of the ſins of men, the cauſe thereof: and a brightneſs was about it; that is, the cloud. This brightneſs was an emblem of the glory of the divine being; who was now preſent, and enlightened the mind of the prophet to ſee the following things, and which all proceeded from him: and out of the midſt thereof, as the colour of amber out of the midſt of the fire; that is, out of the midſt of the fire, and out of the midſt of the brightneſs about it, there was ſomething which was as the colour of amber; or, like the Chaſmal[f]; which the Jews[g] ſay, is the name of an angel. It is aſked[h], what is Chaſmal? R. Judah ſays, חיות אש ממללות fiery animals ſpeaking; who, when God ſpeaks, are ſilent; and when he does not ſpeak, they ſpeak; but Chriſt is meant; for the appearance of the man upon the throne is ſaid to be as the colour of Chaſmal, ℣. 27. The word, read the contrary way, is the Meſſiah, or the anointed, or to be anointed. Jarchi thinks it is the name of a colour, neareſt to the colour of fire. Junius and Tremellius render it, a moſt lively colour; and perhaps may mean the colour of a burning coal; and Buxtorf tranſlates it, a coal exceedingly fired; a clear, burning, red-hot coal; which may denote the pure light of Chriſt, who is the brightneſs of his Father's glory; his flaming love for his people; his burning zeal for the glory of God, and the good of his church; and his fiery indignation againſt his enemies. We render the word amber, as do others; by which muſt be meant, not that which is the juice of certain trees, which is hardened by the air, and is of a yellowiſh colour; nor that liquid ſubſtance which comes from ſea ſhores and rocks, and being hardened in the ſame way, is of the colour of wax; but a ſort of mixed metal, compounded of gold and ſilver; the fifth part of it is ſilver, as Pliny[i] ſays, and four parts gold; tho' Bochart is of opinion, that the aurichalcum, a metal made of gold and braſs, is meant; which is the moſt fine braſs; to which the feet of Chriſt are compared in Rev. i. 15. and ſo this Chaſmal may denote the two natures in Chriſt; the preciouſneſs of his perſon; his brightneſs and glory; and his great ſtrength and power. R. Abendana[k] conjectures, that the colour of Chaſmal means the colour of ſome precious ſtone, as the colour of Tarſhiſh, or Beryl, ℣. 16. and ſo he that ſat upon the throne, in Rev. iv. 3. was to look upon like a jaſper and a ſardine ſtone.

℣. 5. Alſo out of the midſt thereof, &c.] The fire; or out of the whole that was ſeen; the whirlwind, cloud, fire, and the brightneſs about it: came the likeneſs of four living creatures; not really four living creatures; they appeared like to ſuch; they were in the form of ſuch; by which we are to underſtand, not the four monarchies; nor the four goſpels; nor the angels; but miniſters of the goſpel; the true key for the opening of this viſion is that which John ſaw, Rev. iv. 6, 7, 8. the four beaſts there, or living creatures, as it ſhould be rendered, are the ſame with theſe here, and theſe the ſame with them; and who manifeſtly appear to be not only worſhippers of the true God, but to be men redeemed by the blood of Chriſt; and are diſtinguiſhed from angels, and alſo from the four and twenty elders, the repreſentatives of the goſpel-churches; and ſo can deſign no other than the miniſters of the word, with whom all the characters of them agree, as in that viſion, ſo in this; ſee Rev. iv. 8, 9. and v. 8, 9, 10, 11. Creatures they are; not gods, but men; they are indeed in God's ſtead, and repreſent him, being embaſſadors of his; but they are frail, mortal, ſinful men, of like paſſions with others; and therefore great allowances muſt be made for their infirmities and weakneſſes: yea, as miniſters they are the creatures of God; he, and not men, has made them able miniſters of the New Teſtament: and they are living creatures; they have ſpiritual life in themſelves, and are the means of quickening others; and have need to be, and ſhould be, lively and fervent in their miniſtrations. Their number four, reſpects the four parts of the world, to which their commiſſion to preach the goſpel reaches; and whither they are ſent, whenſoever it is the will and pleaſure of God they ſhould go, and he has work for them to do. And this was their appearance, they had the likeneſs of a man; their general likeneſs was the human form, except in ſome particulars after-mentioned, becauſe they repreſented men; men humane, tender, kind, and pitiful; knowing and underſtanding, and acting like men.

---

[d] היה היה eſſendo fuit, Pagninus, Montanus, Heb. exiſtendo exſtitit, Polanus.

[e] Orat. 47. Vol. I. p. 724.

[f] כעין החשמל tanquam ſpecies Haſmal, vel Chaſmal, Calvin, Tigurine verſion, Starckius; angeli, Munſter; flammæ crepitantis, Montanus; prunarum ardentiſſimarum, Polanus; puriſſimi æris, Piſcator; ἠλέκτρου, Sept. electri, V. L. Pagninus.

[g] Baal Aruch, Philip. Aquinas. Vid. Jarchi & Kimchi in loc.

[h] T. Bab. Chagiga, fol. 13. 1. 2.

[i] Nat. Hiſt. l. 33. c. 4.

[k] Not. in Miclol Yophi in loc.

℣. 6. And or but every one had four faces, &c.] Which are deſcribed, ℣. 10. ſee the note there. The Targum multiplies the faces in a ſtrange monſtrous manner, paraphraſing the words thus, "each "had four faces, and there were four faces to "every one of them, and every creature had ſixteen "faces; the number of the faces of the four crea"tures was ſixty and four." And every one had four wings; the ſeraphim in Iſ. vi. 2. and the four beaſts or living creatures in Rev. iv. 8. had ſix wings; and ſo it ſeems that theſe had alſo, from ℣. 11, 23. as will be ſeen there; nor is this any contradiction to the account here given, ſince it is not ſaid, they had only four wings. The Targum gives the ſame monſtrous account of their wings, as of their faces, ſaying, "each had four wings, "and there were four wings for every one of "them, ſixteen wings to every face, and ſixty"four to every creature; and the number of the "wings of the four living creatures were two "hundred and fifty-ſix." Jarchi is of the ſame opinion, and confirms it in his note on the text, which is this, "four faces to one; that is, to the "face of a man only were four faces, and ſo to "the lion, to the eagle, and to the ox, lo ſixteen "to a living creature, and ſo to every living crea"ture; and four wings to every one of the faces, "lo ſixty and four wings to a living creature; "and which, according to the Targum of Jona"than, amounts to two hundred and fifty-ſix "wings;" what theſe wings ſignified, ſee the note on ℣. 11.

℣. 7. And their feet were ſtraight feet, &c.] And they went ſtraight forward, as in ℣. 12. they made ſtraight paths for their feet, and walked uprightly, according to the truth of the goſpel; did not go into crooked paths, or turn to the right-hand, or the left; and having put their hand to the plough of the goſpel, neither looked back, nor turned back. And or for the ſole of their feet were like the ſole of a calf's foot; round, and the hoof divided, and fit for treading out the corn, in which oxen were employed; denoting the firmneſs and conſtancy of miniſters in their work, treading out the corn of the word for the nouriſhment of ſouls, to whom they miniſter. The Septuagint render it, their feet were winged; or flying, as the Arabic verſion; in like manner as Mercury, the heathen god, is painted: this may denote the readineſs and ſwiftneſs of goſpel-miniſters to do their maſter's work; their feet being ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel, and ſo very beautiful, Eph. vi. 15. Iſ. lii. 7. The Targum is, "the ſole of their feet, "as the ſole of feet that are round [l], and they "moved the world where they went." And they ſparkled like the colour of burniſhed braſs; that is, their feet; being burning and ſhining lights in their converſation, as well as in their doctrine; ſee Rev. i. 15.

℣. 8. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four ſides, &c.] Hands of a man denote action, according to knowledge; miniſters of the goſpel are men of practice and buſineſs, as well as have the theory and knowledge of things; and they act like men in a rational way, according to the will of God revealed in the word: and theſe being on their four ſides, ſhew that they have much work to do all around, on every ſide; in miniſtring the word; adminiſtring ordinances; viſiting their people; giving counſel, caution, comfort, exhortation, inſtruction, &c. and that they have many hands to do it with, much grace and ſtrength from above; and they have need of all the hands they have; and what they have they conſtantly employ, and are ſtedfaſt and immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Briareus, a man of buſineſs, is repreſented by the poets as having an hundred hands. Theſe being under their wings, ſhew, that beſides their public miniſtrations, they do much work ſecretly and privately, in their cloſets and ſtudies, where no eye ſees them, but the eye of God, as well as in private houſes, by their viſits and converſation; and is alſo expreſſive of their modeſty and humility, not doing what they do to be ſeen of men, nor boaſting of their works; but aſcribing all to the grace of God, and ſtrength of Chriſt, by which they perform them, and which give them ſucceſs. The Jews, in the Talmud [m], interpret this of the hand of God himſelf, which is ſtretched out under the wings of the living creatures, to receive penitent perſons; becauſe it is written ידו his hand, but read ידי hands. And they four had their faces and their wings; that is, on their four ſides; a face and a wing before, and a face and a wing behind, and a face and a wing on each ſide; and under each wing a man's hand and arm. The Targum of the whole is, "and hands, as the hands "of a man, were made for them under their "wings on their four ſides; to take in them coals "of fire from between the cherubim under the fir"mament, which was over their ſeats, to put them "into the hands of the ſeraphim, to ſcatter upon "the place of the ungodly, to deſtroy the wicked "that tranſgreſs his word; and their faces and "their wings were equal to them four;" ſee ch. x. 2, 6, 7, 8.

℣. 9. Their wings were joined one to another, &c.] A woman to her ſiſter [n], in the Hebrew; denoting the concord, harmony, and agreement of goſpel-miniſters;

---

[l] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 60. 2.

[m] T. Bab. Peſachim, fol 119. 1.

[n] אשה אל אחותה fœmina ad ſororem ſuam, Montanus, Polanus; vira, ſive mulier ad ſociam ſuam, ſo ſome in Vatablus.

miniſters, and their affection to one another; they preach the ſame goſpel; adminiſter the ſame ordinances; do the ſame work of the Lord; have the ſame zeal for the glory of God; the ſame love for Chriſt, and affection for the ſouls of men; are of the ſame mind and judgment, and help each other in the ſervice of the Lord; and eſpecially ſo it will be in the latter day-glory, when the watchmen ſhall ſee eye to eye, Iſ. lii. 8. They turned not when they went; they went every one ſtraight forward; they go not into the path of error and immorality; they don't become apoſtates from the truth; they are not of them that draw back unto perdition; they go on in the courſe of their miniſtry ſtrait forward, let what will be in their way, nothing diverts them from it; notwithſtanding all difficulties and diſcouragements in themſelves; reproaches, afflictions, and perſecutions from men; and the temptations of ſatan; ſee the note on ℣. 7.

℣. 10. As for the likeneſs of their faces, they four had the face of a man, &c.] For theſe living creatures are men, redeemed from among men by the blood of Chriſt; their buſineſs lies with men, to preach the goſpel to them; and they ſhould be humane, kind, and tender in their behaviour towards them; wounded conſciences, weak believers, diſtreſſed and diſconſolate ſouls, requiring ſuch uſage; and they ſhould be men in underſtanding, have a large knowledge of the ſcriptures, of the truths of the goſpel, and of Jeſus Chriſt, ſince their work is to feed men with knowledge and underſtanding; and ſhould act the manly part, quit themſelves like men in defence of the goſpel, and the truths of it. And the face of a lion on the right ſide; denoting the ſtrength of goſpel-miniſters, the lion being the ſtrongeſt among beaſts, Prov. xxx. 30. and they have need to be ſtrong in the grace of Chriſt, and in the power of his might, to do the ſeveral parts of their work; to endure hardneſs as good ſoldiers of Chriſt; to wreſtle with principalities and powers, and to bear the infirmities of the weak: and alſo their courage and fortitude of mind; their boldneſs in preaching the goſpel of Chriſt, not fearing the faces of men, nor their revilings; ſee Prov. xxviii. 1. They four had the face of an ox on the left ſide; expreſſive of the patience of goſpel-miniſters in bearing the yoke that is upon them, not only of the miniſtry, but of the weakneſſes of ſaints, and the reproaches and indignities of the wicked; and in inſtructing thoſe that oppoſe themſelves, and in waiting the iſſue of their miniſtry: and alſo of their laboriouſneſs in their miniſtrations; particularly in treading out the corn of the word, for the ſubſiſtence of the ſaints; ſee 1 Cor. ix. 9, 10. They four alſo had the face of an eagle; ſhewing their ſtrong and clear ſight of the goſpel, and the myſteries of it; the eagle having ſo ſtrong an eye, that it is able to look full and ſtedfaſtly upon the ſun; and their diligence in ſearching into the deep things of God, and particularly to find out where the carcaſs is, a crucified Chriſt, to feed upon, themſelves, and to direct others to it likewiſe. It ſeems, as if theſe four living creatures, had four diſtinct heads, as well as faces, and that the poſition of them was in this manner; the face of a man before; the face of a lion on the right ſide; the face of an ox on the left; and the face of an eagle behind. Theſe four are the moſt excellent of creatures. The Talmudiſts have a ſaying, "there are four that are proud "(or excel) in the world; the lion among beaſts; "the ox among cattel; the eagle among birds; "and man, whom God has exalted above all, for "he rules over all [o]."

℣. 11. Thus were their faces: and their wings were ſtretched upward, &c.] The former clauſe, thus were their faces, either belongs to the preceding verſe; and the meaning is, this, as now repreſented, was the likeneſs of their faces, and this the poſition of them: or it may be read in connexion with the following clauſe, and be rendred, and their faces and their wings were ſtretched upwards; as they are in the Chaldee paraphraſe, the Vulgate Latin, Syriac, and Arabic verſions: their faces were ſtretched upwards, ſhewing that the miniſters of the goſpel look up to Chriſt for freſh ſupplies of gifts and grace, of light, knowledge, wiſdom, and ſtrength, to enable them to perform their work: and their wings were ſtretched upwards, that is, two of them; not four, as the Arabic verſion has it; for two covered their bodies, as is after ſaid. Thoſe that were ſtretched upwards, anſwer to the two with which Iſaiah's ſeraphim flew; for theſe were, as in the original text, parted upwards [p]; though they were joined together at the bottom of them, as in ℣. 9. yet being ſpread in flying, they opened wider and wider, and were at a greater diſtance from each other in their extreme points. This may deſign the agility, ſwiftneſs, and readineſs of miniſters in the performance of their work. Two wings of every one were joined one to another; with which they covered their heads and faces, as did Iſaiah's ſeraphim, as conſcious of their unworthineſs and infirmities; looking upon themſelves to be leſs than the leaſt of all ſaints, unfit to be miniſters of the goſpel; acknowledging they have nothing but what they have received, and therefore would not glory as tho' they had not received, and as aſhamed of their poor performances and miniſtrations. And two covered their bodies; their lower and ſecret parts, called their feet in Iſaiah; which however to others beautiful upon the mountains, running and bringing the good news of peace, righteouſneſs, and ſalvation by Chriſt; yet ſenſible of their deficiences, they cover them, and confeſs, when they have done all they can, they are but unprofitable ſervants; from hence it appears, that theſe living creatures had ſix wings, as the ſeraphim in Iſaiah, and the four beaſts in John's viſion.

℣. 12. And they went every one ſtraight forward, &c.] Or, over againſt his face [q]; for which way ſoever they went, whether forward or backward, or on either ſide, they had a face to go before them, to direct the way, and ſteer their courſe; ſo the miniſters of the goſpel have a face to go by, and follow after, the word of God, to look to and direct them, which way ſoever they go, or whatſoever ſervice they are called unto. Whither the ſpirit was to go, they went; which may be meant of their own ſpirit, will, and inclination; ſo the Targum, "to the place where it was their good "pleaſure to go, they went;" ſo Jarchi and Kimchi; but this is not always the caſe, ſee Acts xvi. 6, 7, 8, 9. rather the Holy Spirit of God is intended, by whom holy men of God were moved, and ſpoke formerly; and by whom goſpel-miniſters are led into the truth, as it is in Jeſus; and by by whom they are directed where to go, and what to do; and they are ſent, and go where the Spirit of God is deſigned to go, in order to work upon the hearts of men, and effectually call them by his grace, which is uſually done by the miniſtry of the word; and therefore goſpel-miniſters muſt go, and they do go, where the Spirit of God has work to do by them; ſee Acts xvi. 6, 7. And they turned not when they went; they had no occaſion to turn their bodies, becauſe which way ſoever they went, they had a face to go before them, and direct the way; ſee the note on ℣. 9.

[o] Apud Schindler. Lex. Pentaglott, p. 267.

[p] פרודות disjunctæ, Montanus; diviſæ, Calvin, Starckius. So Ben Melech.

[q] אל עבר פניו coram facie ſua, V. L. in tractum faciei ſuæ objectum, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; ante faciem ſuam, Starckius.

℣. 13. As for the likeneſs of the living creatures, &c.] That is, of their bodies; for their faces, feet, hands, and wings, are deſcribed before: their appearance was like burning coals of fire; becauſe of their miniſterial gifts; the gifts of the Spirit are compared to fire, and like coals of fire are to be ſtirred up, and not covered or quenched, Acts ii. 3. 2 Tim. i. 6. 1 Theſſ. v. 19. and becauſe of their clear ſhining light in the truths of the goſpel; and becauſe of their ardent love to Chriſt, and the ſouls of men; the coals whereof give a moſt vehement flame, which all the waters of reproach and perſecution cannot quench, Cant. viii. 6, 7. and becauſe of their burning zeal for the glory of God, and the intereſt of the Redeemer; hence they are called ſeraphim, fiery or burning, Iſ. vi. 2: and like the appearance of lamps; ſo the miniſters of the goſpel are compared to lamps, which hold forth the light of the goſpel to the ſons of men; they are the lights or lamps of the world, and ſome of them are bright burning and ſhining ones, as John was, Matt. v. 14. John v. 35: it went up and down among the living creatures; that is, fire went up and down among them; ſo the Targum, "and fire inflamed was among the creatures;" by which may be meant the word of God, comparable to fire, Jer. xx. 9. and xxiii. 29. common to all the miniſters of the goſpel, by which their minds are enlightened, and their hearts are warmed and filled with zeal, and by which they are the means of enlightening and warming others: and the fire was bright; and clear, as the word of God is: and out of the fire went forth lightning; by means of the miniſtry of the word, the kingdom and intereſt of Chriſt ſpread like lightning in the world, from eaſt to weſt; ſo the coming of the Son of man in his kingdom and power is compared to lightning, Matt. xxiv. 27. it denotes the quick, penetrating, and enlightening power and efficacy of the word.

℣. 14. And the living creatures ran, &c.] Did their work with great readineſs and ſwiftneſs; ſo eſpecially in the latter day, miniſters of the goſpel ſhall run to and fro, and knowledge ſhall be increaſed, Dan. xii. 4: and returned; for tho' before it is ſaid, they turned not when they went, they kept ſtraight on till they had done their work; but when they have done it, then they return, and give an account of it to him that has ſent them: and their running and returning are ſaid to be, as the appearance of a flaſh of lightning; very ſudden and ſwift.

℣. 15. Now as I beheld the living creatures, &c.] Whilſt he had the viſion of them, and when he was conſidering their form and likeneſs, and what ſhould be the meaning of them: behold, one wheel upon the earth; the Jews[t] underſtand this of an angel, who ſtood upon the earth, and his head reached to the living creatures, and his name is Sandalphon; and ſo many expoſitors interpret the wheels of angels: but the more common interpretation of them is, that they deſign the viſible world, and all things in it, which are moveable and uncertain; tho' the true interpretation of them, as of the living creatures, is to be fetched from the viſion in Rev. iv. and as the four living creatures here, are the ſame with the four beaſts there; ſo the wheels are the ſame with the four and twenty elders, the repreſentatives of goſpel-churches, as appears by both being in the ſame ſituation; as there is a throne, and next to that the four beaſts, and next to them the four and twenty elders, Rev. iv. 3, 4, 6. and v. 6, 11. ſo here alſo is a throne, and next to the throne the four living creatures or cherubim, and next the living creatures, and by the ſide of them, the wheels, ch. x. 1, 2, 6, 7, 9. and this is further manifeſt, by their being both under the ſame influence and motion; as the four beaſts were the firſt agents and movers, and the four and twenty elders, were directed by them, who went before them in their devotion, Rev. iv. 9, 10. and v. 14. ſo the wheels moved as the living creatures did; when the living creatures went, they went; when they ſtood, the wheels ſtood; and when the creatures were lifted up, the wheels were alſo, ℣. 19, 21. and x. 16, 17, 19. and the wheels are a very proper emblem of churches under the goſpel-diſpenſation; partly for their round form, a ſymbol of perfection; the churches of Chriſt being more perfect under the goſpel-diſpenſation, than the church was under the legal one: and partly for their moveableneſs from place to place; churches are not always in the ſame place; they have been removed from Judea into the Gentile world; and they have wheeled about there, ſometimes in one place, and ſometimes in another: as alſo for their changeable ſtate and ſituation; being ſometimes in proſperity, and ſometimes in adverſity: likewiſe for the work done by them; many things are done by the help, and with the uſe of wheels; much work is done in and by the churches of Chriſt; here the goſpel is preached, ordinances adminiſtered, divine worſhip in all its parts performed, ſinners are converted, and ſaints are edified and comforted: and as when wheels are in motion, they make a great noiſe and rattling; ſo when there is any great work going on in the churches of Chriſt, it makes a great noiſe in the world; as at the firſt preaching and ſpread of the goſpel, both in Judea, and among the Gentiles; and at the time of the Reformation; and as there will be when antichriſt ſhall be deſtroyed, and the goſpel ſhall be ſpread all the world over, Rev. xix. 1—6. to which may be added, that theſe wheels, together with the cherubim or living creatures, make a chariot; and as the cherubim in the temple are called the chariot of the cherubim, 1 Chron. xxviii. 18. ſo the author of Eccleſiaſticus, ch. xlix. 8. ſays, that Ezekiel was ſhown the glorious viſion upon the chariot of the cherubim; and nothing is more common with the Jews, than to call this viſion of Ezekiel מרכבה mercavah, or chariot. So in the Targum on 1 Kings vii. 33. it is ſaid, "the work of the wheels was as the work of the "wheels of the glorious chariot;" meaning this in Ezekiel; and a chariot is a fit emblem of the churches of Chriſt, in which he rides about the world, and does his work; ſee Cant. iii. 9; and tho' but one wheel is here mentioned, yet it appears that there were four, as in ℣. 16, and ch. x. 9. a wheel by every living creature; ſo tho' there is but one general aſſembly and church of the firſt-born written in heaven, of which Chriſt is the head, and for which he gave himſelf; yet there are many particular congregated churches, which may be ſignified by the number four; partly with reſpect to the four parts of the world, where Chriſt has an intereſt, and which will more manifeſtly appear in the latter day; and partly with reſpect to the four living creatures, a wheel to every cherub, a church to every miniſter and paſtor; for tho' ſometimes there have been more paſtors than one to a church when large, yet never more than one church under the care of one paſtor: moreover, this wheel or wheels were ſeen upon the earth; which is obſerved, to diſtinguiſh the church militant, from the church triumphant in heaven; and to point out the place where the churches are; which tho' they conſiſt of men that are not of the world, yet they are in the world: as alſo to denote the firmneſs of them; they are on the earth, not in the air or ſea, where wheels can't move and roll; but upon terra firma, and that to the churches is Chriſt Jeſus; and may alſo ſignify, that the mutability and moveableneſs of churches are only whilſt they are on earth, in the preſent ſtate of things: it follows, by the living creatures; that is, the wheel or wheels were ſeen by the ſide of the living creatures; which is more fully expreſſed in ch. x. 9. churches are placed by the miniſters of the goſpel, to direct them in matters of faith and worſhip; to put them in motion; to ſtir them up to the exerciſe of grace, and the diſcharge of duty; to watch over them in the Lord; and to feed them with ſpiritual knowledge and underſtanding: with his four faces; either the living creatures; and ſo the Vulgate Latin verſion renders it, having four faces; and the meaning is, that the wheel or wheels were on the four ſides of the living creatures: or rather, as Jarchi, the wheel's four faces; for upon every wheel there were the ſame four faces as were in the living creatures, as is clear from ch. x. 13, 14. there being a great likeneſs between goſpel-churches and goſpel-miniſters: the firſt was the face of a cherub or ox; which may denote the patience of goſpel-churches, and the members thereof, in bearing afflictions, reproaches, and perſecutions, for the ſake of Chriſt; their meditation on the word of God continually, the ox being a creature that chews the cud; and their conſtancy and laborіouſneſs in the work of the Lord: the ſecond was the face of a man; which may be expreſſive of their knowledge and underſtanding of divine and ſpiritual things; and of their tender-heartedneſs, ſympathy, and compaſſion one towards another in diſtreſſed circumſtances: the third was the face of a lion; ſignifying their boldneſs and intrepidity in the cauſe of Chriſt, and the profeſſion of his name: and the fourth was the face of an eagle; ſhewing that they mount up on the wings of faith and love, as on eagles wings; that they ſoar aloft, and dwell on high, and have their affections ſet on things in heaven, and not on earth. Cocceius interprets the wheel or wheels of the word of God, and the courſe of the miniſtry of it, under the influence of the Spirit; and ſo Starckius of late.

---

[t] T. Bab. Chagiga, fol. 13. 2.

℣. 16. The appearance of the wheels, and their work, was like unto the colour of a beryl, &c.] Which is a precious ſtone; ſee Exod. xxviii. 20. Rev. xxi. 20. the Syriac verſion renders it, a chryſolite; the Arabic, a jaſper; and ſo may denote the precіouſneſs, glory, and excellency of the churches, and the true members of them, which are as jewels and pearls of great price in the eſteem of Chriſt; and the colour of this ſtone being a ſea green, from whence it has here the name of Tarſhiſh, a word ſometimes uſed for the ſea, may ſignify the fluctuating and uncertain ſtate of the churches in this world, and in their preſent circumſtances: and they four had one likeneſs; this ſhows that there were four wheels, and that they were all alike, as the true churches of Chriſt are; they are alike gathered out of the world, and conſiſt of the ſame ſort of perſons, true believers in Chriſt; they profeſs the ſame faith; they have the ſame officers and ordinances; keep up the ſame diſcipline, and are under the ſame form of government; and have all the ſame power and authority: and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel; not as if one wheel was comprehended and included in another; for then one muſt be leſſer than another; whereas all the wheels were alike, as for form, ſo for bigneſs; but the work or make of them was in a tranſverſe way, or croſs way; juſt as two hoops may be put together croſs-ways, and ſo form four ſemicircles, and theſe a globe or ſphere; hence this wheel is called גלגל an orb or globe, in ch. x. 13. and it was on thoſe four ſemicircles, that the four faces of the ox, the man, the lion, and eagle, were engraved; the reaſon of their being wrought in this form was, for the motion of them, as follows:

℣. 17. When they went, they went upon their four ſides, &c.] On either of their croſſing rings, as they were directed by the living creatures, at whoſe ſide they ſtood: and they returned not when they went; they had no need to turn about when they were to go eaſt, weſt, north, or ſouth, as wheels uſually do; but they turned upon the croſſing ring, which was towards either of the four points. This denotes the perſeverance of the churches, and the true members thereof, in faith and practice; they don't turn back, nor look back, but go right on, walking in the fear of the Lord, and in all his ways and ordinances.

℣. 18. As for their rings, they were ſo high, that they were dreadful, &c.] The circles and circumferences of them were high; which may denote the viſibility and extenſiveneſs of the churches of Chriſt, eſpecially in the latter day; when they ſhall be exalted above the mountains and hills, the kingdoms and ſtates of this world; and there ſhall be ſuch numerous additions to them, that the place will be too ſtrait for the members of them to dwell in, Iſ. ii. 2. and xlix. 20. and they were dreadful; terrible, as the churches of Chriſt will be to their enemies to look at, when they ſhall be in their exalted ſtate, Rev. xi. 12, 13. or the words may be rendered, and they had fear[s]; there was fear and reverence in them; the fear of God, and a reverential affection for him; they were waiting on him, and attending his worſhip with great reverence, and godly fear: and their rings were full of eyes round about them four; every one of the four-wheels, and each of their four ſemicircles, were full of eyes; expreſſive of the knowledge of the goſpel, and the truths of it, in church-members; their continual looking to Chriſt for freſh ſupplies of grace and ſtrength; and their conſtant watchfulneſs over each other.

℣. 19.

---

[s] ויראה להם et timor illis erat, Cocceius; et timor ipſis, Starckius; and they were reverent, ſo Dr. Lightfoot, Proſpect of the Temple, &c. c. 38. p. 2055.

℣. 19. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them, &c.] When the miniſters of the goſpel begin the worſhip of God, and move in acts of devotion, the churches join with them; ſee Rev. iv. 9, 10. and v. 14. and in their lives and converſations they are examples to them; and churches and members ought to walk as they have them, for an example in word, in converſation, in charity, in ſpirit, in faith, in purity: and when the living creatures were lift up from the earth, the wheels were lift up; when the miniſters of the word have their affections raiſed, and are in lively frames of ſoul in preaching the goſpel, generally ſpeaking, ſo it is with the churches and the members thereof, that ſit under their miniſtrations; their hearts burn within them; their affections are raiſed, and their ſouls are lifted up heaven-wards, while the ſcriptures of truth are opened unto them.

℣. 20. Whitherſoever the ſpirit was to go, they went, &c.] That is, the Spirit of God; whereever that leads and directs, whether in the paths of faith or duty, they follow; they walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit; he guides their feet in the way of peace, and into all truth; and leads them in a right way to the land of uprightneſs: thither was their ſpirit to go; their ſpirits or ſouls being regenerated by the Spirit of God, are moved and actuated by him, and readily go where that directs: and the wheels were lifted up over againſt them; that is, over againſt the living creatures; being by their ſides, going where they go, and being lifted up when they are: for the ſpirit of the living creature was in the wheels; the ſame Spirit of God, which is a ſpirit of life, a quickening ſpirit, and a free ſpirit; which gives motion and liberty in religious exerciſes; that which is in the miniſters of the goſpel, is in the churches of God; there is but one Spirit, and miniſters and members are actuated and influenced by it; ſee Eph. iv. 4, 5.

℣. 21. When thoſe went, theſe went; and when thoſe ſtood, theſe ſtood, &c.] When miniſters are active and lively, then the churches are; but when they are indolent, dull and inactive, then the churches are ſo likewiſe: and when thoſe were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over againſt them; ſee the note on ℣. 19: for the ſpirit of the living creature was in the wheels; or, the ſpirit of life, as in ℣. 20. ſee Rev. xi. 11.

℣. 22. And the likeneſs of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature, &c.] This was not a real firmament, but the likeneſs of one; it was like the firmament which God created on the ſecond day, which divided between the waters above and below, and which he called heaven; and is no other than the airy and ſtarry heavens. Its name is in Hebrew רקיע an expanſe; from its being ſtretched out as a curtain, and a tent to dwell in; and a firmament, from its firmneſs and continuance; and therefore called the firmament of his power, Gen. i. 8. Iſ. xl. 22. Pſ. cl. 1. and this viſionary one was over the heads of the living creatures; which ſhows that they could not be angels, for thoſe have their habitation in the third heaven, above the firmament; much leſs an hieroglyphic of the trinity of perſons, who are the three that bear record in heaven, and are not under the firmament; but miniſters of the goſpel, who are on earth, and are ſubject to Chriſt, whoſe throne is above the firmament, ℣. 26. and who receive their commiſſion and gifts from him, and are accountable to him. This firmament was as the colour of the terrible cryſtal; cryſtal is a very white, tranſparent, precious ſtone, reſembling ice, from whence it has its name; hence Pliny [t] thought it was no other than ice vehemently frozen; and here it is called terrible, becauſe exceeding clear and bright, ſo that there was no looking upon it, without the eyes being dazzled with the glory of it. The ſky is called a molten looking-glaſs, in which the glory of God, and his handy work, may be ſeen, Job xxxvii. 18. Pſ. xix. 1. and as the throne of Chriſt was over this cryſtal firmament, it ſhows, that tho' he is in heaven, he ſees all that is done on earth, and in his churches, and by his miniſters; and the ſaints alſo ſee him by faith, and thro' the glaſs of the goſpel: it is only a cryſtal firmament that is between them, ſtretched forth over their heads above; that is, over the heads of the living creatures, as before; ſaid to be ſtretched out, in alluſion to its name, an expanſe, as before obſerved.

℣. 23. And under the firmament were their wings ſtraight, the one toward the other, &c.] A further account is here given of the wings of the living creatures, which were under the firmament: two of their wings were ſtretched ſtraight upwards towards the firmament, and joined each other; ſee the note on ℣. 9: every one had two which covered on this ſide; beſides the two that were carried ſtraight upright towards heaven, they had other two, which covered their back and belly: and every one had two which covered on that ſide their bodies; that is, on each ſide of their bodies; ſo that there were in all ſix wings, as in Iſaiah's viſion, and in that of the Revelation of John: as their wings in general denote the ſwiftneſs and readineſs of goſpel-miniſters to do the work of Chriſt, for which they expect help and aſſiſtance from above, ſignified by two being ſtretched ſtraight upwards; ſee ℣. 11. ſo covering the ſeveral parts of their bodies with the reſt, ſhews their modeſty and humility, as being aſhamed of themſelves and their ſervices, when performed in the beſt manner; it being altogether owing to the grace of God, they are what they are, have and do; they themſelves being the chief of ſinners, and the leaſt of ſaints, in their own account.

℣. 24. And when they went, &c.] In their miniſtrations, preaching the goſpel, and adminiſtring ordinances: I heard the noiſe of their wings, like the noiſe of great waters; ſo the voice of Chriſt, which is no other than his goſpel preached by his miniſters, is ſaid to be as the ſound of many waters, Rev. i. 15. which is heard a great way off, as the goſpel-miniſtry is, even to the ends of the earth; thither the ſound of the apoſtles words reached, Rom. x. 18. and which, as they move with great force, yield a pleaſant ſound; and may denote both the energy of the word, and the delightfulneſs of it: as the voice of the Almighty; the goſpel being the word of God, and not of man; which is quick and powerful, and full of majeſty, and works effectually in them that believe: the voice of ſpeech; an articulate voice, an human one, pronounced by men, whom God employs to deliver out his mind and will: as the noiſe of an hoſt; the church being militant, to whom they miniſter; ſo that their voice, in their miniſtry, is ſometimes reproving, convincing, confuting, contending and diſputing, as well as teaching and inſtructing. The Targum is, "and the voice of their words, when "they confeſs and bleſs the Lord, the living ever-

---

[t] Nat. Hiſt. l. 37. c.

“ laſting King, is as the voice of the hoſt of angels on high:” when they ſtood, they let down their wings; thoſe two with which they flew, and with them covered their faces, or ſome part of their bodies, as aſhamed of their own unworthineſs and imperfections; or this may denote their having done their work, and finiſhed their courſe.

℣. 25. And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, &c.] Which was the voice of Chriſt upon the throne, above the firmament, over the heads of the living creatures; which directed them when and where to go, and what to do, and when and where to ſtop: when they ſtood, and had let down their wings; either encouraging them to lift them up, and go on in their work, notwithſtanding the ſenſe they had of their own weakneſs and unworthineſs; or having done their work, calling them to himſelf in heaven.

℣. 26. And above the firmament that was over their heads, &c.] The heads of the living creatures: was the likeneſs of a throne; a ſymbol of Chriſt's kingly power and authority, who is the perſon that ſat upon it; as he is God, he is on the ſame throne with his Father; as Mediator, he is king of ſaints, and was ſo from eternity; he exerciſed his office before his incarnation; and as he was propheſied of as a king, he came as one, tho' little known, and his kingdom was not with obſervation; upon his aſcenſion he was declared Lord and Chriſt; and will appear on a throne, when he ſhall come to judge the world, and particularly in the new Jeruſalem church-ſtate: and this throne was as the appearance of a ſapphire-ſtone; which is a ſtone very clear and tranſparent; very hard, ſolid and durable; very precious and excellent; and of an azure ſky-colour; denoting the clear manifeſtation of Chriſt's righteous judgments, in the miniſtration of his kingly office; the duration of his government; the excellency of it; and its heavenly nature and original: and upon the likeneſs of the throne was the likeneſs of the appearance of a man above upon it; this was no other than Chriſt; who, tho' he was not really man before his incarnation, yet often appeared in the form of a man; and thro' his incarnation, he was found in faſhion as a man; and was really man, tho' not a mere man; nor was the perſon here deſigned; for this was the appearance and likeneſs of the glory of the Lord, ℣. 28. and this ſhows, that when Chriſt, as man, had done his work, he ſhould ſit down upon his throne above the firmament, being made higher than the heavens.

℣. 27. And I ſaw as the colour of amber, &c.] That is, the man upon the throne looked like the colour of amber; of which ſee the note on ℣. 4: as the appearance of fire round about within it; which may denote the deity of Chriſt, or Chriſt as God, who is a conſuming fire to his enemies; a fire enlightning and warming to his people; as a wall of fire protecting them; and as a pillar of fire guiding and directing them, as he did the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs; and who has ſuch light and glory in him, as is incomprehenſible to us; and therefore this fire appeared round about within, the colour of amber, and under his human nature, thro' which it broke forth: from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I ſaw as it were the appearance of fire; it reached upwards and downwards, as well as all around him: and it had brightneſs round about; the fire; which ſhone thro' the human nature, and was upon it, in virtue of its union to the Son of God; and thro' the goſpel, in which, as in a glaſs, the glory of the Lord is ſeen; and which will be brighter and brighter in the latter day; which may be ſignified by the appearance of his loins downward.

℣. 28. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, &c.] The rain-bow, which is no other than the reflexion of the rays of the ſun in a thin watry cloud on a rainy day: ſo was the appearance of the brightneſs round about it; ſo Chriſt is repreſented as clothed with a cloud, and a rain-bow about his head, Rev. x. 1. which is a token of the covenant of grace, in which Chriſt is concerned; it is round about him; he is the head, mediator, ſurety, and meſſenger of it; all the bleſſings and promiſes of it are in him; and he is that itſelf, which is only a reverberation of him, the ſun of righteouſneſs; and it is alſo about the throne on which he ſits, which is upheld by mercy and truth; and it is ever in his view, and he is always mindful of it: this part of the viſion agrees with Rev. iv. 3: this was the appearance of the likeneſs of the glory of God; of the divine Shekinah; the word of God that was made fleſh, and dwelt among us; whoſe glory is as the only begotten of the Father; and who is the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon: and when I ſaw it, I fell upon my face; thro' fear and reverence of the glorious perſon that appeared to him; ſee Rev. i. 17: and I heard a voice of one that ſpake; what is delivered in the following chapter; which contains Ezekiel's commiſſion from Chriſt, who is the perſon that ſpake unto him.

CHAP. II.

THIS chapter contains the prophet's call, commiſſion and inſtruction to propheſy. The preparation to it is in ℣. 1, 2. being fallen upon his face, he is bid to ſtand upon his feet, with a promiſe to ſpeak to him; and the Spirit entring into him, he is ſet by him on his feet, and he hears what is ſpoken to him; then follows his miſſion to the children of Iſrael, who are deſcribed as rebellious, impudent, and ſtiff-hearted; and to whom he is ſent, to render them inexcuſable, ℣. 3, 4, 5. and he is exhorted not to be afraid of their words, nor diſmayed at their looks, however fierce and furious they might be; but faithfully declare his meſſage, and not be diſcouraged, ſhould it be without ſucceſs, ℣. 6, 7. and he is inſtructed not to be rebellious, as they were; but open his mouth and eat, what ſhould be given him, ℣. 8. when, in a viſionary way, an hand was ſeen, and a roll in it, and this ſpread before him, written within and without, full of lamentation, mourning and woes, as a ſymbol of the ſubſtance of his prophecy, ℣. 9, 10.

℣. 1. And he ſaid unto me, &c.] The glorious perſon, who ſat upon the throne, whoſe appearance is deſcribed in the latter part of the preceding chapter: ſon of man; as he was to be, that ſpake unto him; and ſo it may denote relation, affection and familiarity; or otherwiſe it is expreſſive of humiliation; of the frail, mean and low eſtate of man, thro' the fall, Pſ. viii. 4. wherefore ſome think Ezekiel is thus addreſſed, leſt he ſhould be lifted up, and think himſelf as one of the angels, becauſe he had ſeen ſo great a viſion; juſt as the apoſtle Paul was humbled, leſt he ſhould be exalted above meaſure, thro' the viſions and revelations he had, 2 Cor. xii. 7. Kimchi mentions this, but aſſigns another reaſon; that becauſe he ſaw the face of a man in the above viſion, he let him know that he was right and good in the eye of God; and was the ſon of man, and not the ſon of a lion, &c. which is exceeding weak and trifling. Abendana, beſides theſe, mentions ſome other reaſons given; as that becauſe he ſaw the mercavah or chariot, and aſcended to the dignity of the angels on high, it is as if it was ſaid, there is none born of a woman, as this; or becauſe he was carried out of the holy land, as Adam was drove out of Eden; and therefore called the ſon of the firſt Adam, being drove out of Jeruſalem, and out of the temple, where he was a prieſt. It may be obſerved, that this is a name which our Lord frequently took to himſelf in his ſtate of humiliation; and that none but Ezekiel, excepting once the prophet Daniel, is called by this name; and no doubt the reaſon of it is, becauſe he was an eminent type of Chriſt; and particularly in his miſſion and commiſſion, as a prophet, to the rebellious houſe of Iſrael: ſtand upon thy feet; for he was fallen upon his face, at the ſight of the viſion, ch. i. 28. when a divine perſon ſpeaks, men ought to ſtand and hear, and be in a readineſs to do his pleaſure: and I will ſpeak unto thee; which is ſaid for his encouragement, being ſpoken by him who has the words of truth and grace, and of eternal life.

℣. 2. And the ſpirit entered into me, &c.] Not his own ſpirit or ſoul; for it does not appear that that went out of him upon the ſight of the viſion; nor any of the miniſtring ſpirits, the angels, who are never ſaid to enter into the prophets or people of God; but the holy Spirit of God; the ſame ſpirit that was in the living creatures, and in the wheels; in the miniſters, and in the churches; who entered with his gifts to qualify him for his office as a prophet; and who enters with his graces into the hearts of all the ſaints, to quicken, renew, comfort and ſanctify them: when he ſpake unto me; at the ſame time the Spirit went along with the word; and when the word of Chriſt is attended with the demonſtration of the Spirit and of power, it is effectual: and he ſet me upon my feet; not he that ſpake with him, and bid him ſtand on his feet; but the Spirit; for the word, tho' it is the word of God, and of Chriſt, yet is ineffectual without the Spirit; when he enters, he gives the word a place, and it works effectually; when he enters, as the ſpirit of life from Chriſt, the ſoul is quickened and ſtrengthened; and ſuch that are fallen down, ſtand up; yea, ſuch as are dead, ariſe and ſtand upon their feet: that I heard him that ſpake unto me; ſo as to underſtand; for the Spirit, who ſearches the deep things of God, reveals them to his miniſters, and cauſes them to underſtand the word of Chriſt, that they may be able to inſtruct others in it.

℣. 3. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] Now follow his miſſion and commiſſion, and an account of the perſons to whom he was ſent: I ſend thee to the children of Iſrael; that were captives in Babylon, in Jeboiakin's captivity; ſo Chriſt was ſent only to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Matt. xv. 24: to a rebellious nation, that hath rebelled againſt me; or, rebellious Gentiles[u]; not the nations of the earth, tho' Ezekiel did propheſy many things concerning them; but the Jews, the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin; or the twelve tribes of Iſrael, called Gentiles, becauſe they joined with them in their idolatries; and, as Kimchi ſays, were divided in their evil works; ſome worſhipping the gods of the Ammonites; and ſome the gods of the Moabites; and all guilty of rebellion and treaſon in ſo doing againſt the God of heaven: they and their fathers have tranſgreſſed againſt me, unto this very day; which is an aggravation of their rebellion; their fathers had ſinned, and they had followed their ill examples, and had continued therein to that day; and as they did to the times of Chriſt, when they were about to fill up the meaſure of their iniquity, Matt. xxiii. 31, 32.

℣. 4. For they are impudent children, &c.] Hard of face[w]; as is commonly ſaid of impudent perſons, that they are brazen-faced; they had a whore's forehead, and refuſed to be aſhamed, and made their faces harder than a rock, Jer. iii. 3. and v. 3. they declared their ſin as Sodom, and hid it not; they ſinned openly, and could not bluſh at it: and ſtiff-hearted; or, ſtrong of heart[x]; whoſe hearts were like an adamant-ſtone, and harder than the nether mill-ſtone; impenitent, obdurate and inflexible; they were not only ſtiff-necked, as Stephen ſays they were in his time, and always had been; but ſtiff-hearted; they were not ſubject to the law of God now, nor would they ſubmit to the goſpel and ordinances of Chriſt in his time, and in the times of his apoſtles, nor to his righteouſneſs, Rom. x. 3: I do ſend thee unto them; even to ſuch as they are: this is a repetition, and a confirmation of his miſſion; and ſuggeſts, that tho' they were ſuch, he ſhould not refuſe to go to them, ſince he had ſent him: and thou ſhalt ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God; that what he ſaid came from the Lord, and was ſpoken in his name.

℣. 5. And they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, &c.] Or ceaſe[y]; that is, from hearing, as Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it; or from ſinning, as the Targum. The ſenſe is, whether they would hear the word of the Lord, as ſpoken by the prophet, attend unto it, receive it, and obey it; or whether they would reject it, turn their backs on it, and diſcontinue hearing it; or whether they would ſo hear, as to leave their ſinful courſe of life, or not: this the prophet could not know before-hand, nor ſhould he be concerned about it, or be diſcouraged if his miniſtry ſhould be fruitleſs; ſince he could not expect much from them; (for they are a rebellious houſe); or, a houſe of rebellion[z]; a moſt rebellious one; hard of heart, face and neck: yet ſhall know that there hath been a prophet among them; ſo that they were left without excuſe, which was the end of the prophet's being ſent unto them; there was little or no hope of reclaiming them; but however, by ſuch a ſtep taken, they could not ſay that they had no prophet ſent to reprove them for their ſins, and warn them of their danger; had they, they would have liſtened to him, and ſo have eſcaped the evils that came upon them.

---

[u] אל גוים המורדים ad gentes rebelles, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius.

[w] קשי פנים duri facie, Pagninus, Vatablus, Calvin, Cocceius, Starckius.

[x] חזקי לב duri corde, Pagninus, Montanus; fortes corde, Vatablus, Polanus.

[y] יחדלו ceſſaverint, Pagninus, Montanus, Starckius; deſiſtent, Calvin, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

[z] בית מרי domus rebellionis, Montanus, Calvin, Piſcator, Junius & Tremellius, Starckius.

℣. 6. And thou ſon of man be not afraid of them, &c.] Of any of them, the greateſt among them, their princes and nobles; who, by their grandeur and authority, their ſtern looks, and big words, might awe and terrify him; wherefore it follows: neither be afraid of their words; of their calumnies, revilings and reproaches, their ſcoffs and jeers, their menaces and threatnings: tho' briers and thorns be with thee; that is, men comparable to ſuch; wicked men are like to briers and thorns, 2 Sam. xxiii. 6. Iſ. xxvii. 4. are grieving, pricking and diſtreſſing to good men, and are of no worth and value; are uſeleſs and unprofitable, and fit fuel for everlaſting burnings. The Targum is, "for "they are rebellious, and hard againſt thee;" ſo Jarchi and Kimchi explain the firſt word סרבים tranſlated briers, as ſignifying rebellious and diſobedient; tho' the former obſerves, that R. Doneſh interprets it, of a kind of thorns, of which there are twenty names, and this is one: and thou doſt dwell among ſcorpions; that is, as the Targum paraphraſes it, "thou dwelleſt in the midſt of a peo-"ple whoſe works are like to ſcorpions." Some interpret it, as Kimchi obſerves, of ſharp thorns, of a thorny plant that grows in the form of a ſcorpion [a]; but ſcorpions here are a kind of ſerpents, ſubtle, venomous and miſchievous, which have ſtings in their tails; which, as Pliny ſays, they are continually thruſting out, and ſtriking with, that they may loſe no opportunity of doing hurt [b]; and fitly deſcribe wicked men, their ſubtlety, and miſchievous nature: be not afraid of their words; as before; with which they are like briers, thorns, and ſcorpions, being very grievous, defamatory, and miſchievous: nor be diſmayed at their looks; their frowning, furious and angry countenances; forbidding with which, as well as with their words, the prophet from propheſying unto them: tho', or for they be a rebellious houſe; ſee ℣. 5.

℣. 7. And thou ſhalt ſpeak my words unto them, &c.] Not his own words, but thoſe the Lord ſhould put into his mouth. The Targum is, "and "thou ſhalt propheſy the words of my prophecy "unto them:" whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear; ſee the note on ℣. 5: for they are moſt rebellious; or rebellion [c] itſelf; as the carnal mind is ſaid to be enmity itſelf againſt God, Rom. viii. 7. which aggravates their character and ſtate.

℣. 8. But thou, ſon of man, hear what I ſay unto thee, &c.] Which was neceſſary, becauſe he was to ſpeak, not his own words, but the Lord's, and therefore ought to hear before he ſpoke; and indeed thoſe that ſpeak in a public way, for the inſtruction of others, ought to hear and learn of Chriſt firſt: be not thou rebellious, like that rebellious houſe; who would not hear what was ſaid unto them; but they were not to be imitated, no not in a leſſer degree; the prophet was to avoid every thing that looked like rebellion; as inattention to what was ſaid to him, heſitation about it, or backwardneſs to publiſh it: open thy mouth; be ready to receive what ſhould be given, as a ſymbol of the prophecy he was to deliver. The Targum is, "incline thy ſoul, and receive what I give thee." Jarchi's note is, incline thine ear and hear, and let it be ſweet to thee, as if thou didſt eat food for hunger; and Kimchi obſerves, the intention of the figurative expreſſion is to learn the words of the prophecy, and to remember them: and eat that I give thee; which may be ſafely done; for Chriſt gives his miniſters and people nothing but what is wholeſome; his doctrines are wholeſome words, and may be eaten without fear, 1 Tim. vi. 3.

℣. 9. And when I looked, behold, an hand was ſent unto me, &c.] Not of an angel, but of Chriſt himſelf, in a viſionary way; for this was not a real hand, but the likeneſs of one, as in ch. viii. 3. and ſo the Targum here "and I ſaw, and behold, "the likeneſs of a hand ſtretched out on the ſide "to me." This ſymbol was to ſhow that his prophecy, that he was ſent to deliver, was from heaven, and came from Chriſt; and that hand that delivered it to him, would protect and defend him: and lo, a roll of a book was therein; held in it, and held forth by it, to the prophet. Books were frequently written on parchment or vellum, and rolled about a ſtick, in form of a cylinder; and hence they were called volumes or rolls, Pſ. xl. 7. This roll was a ſymbol of the prophecy of this book.

℣. 10. And he ſpread it before me, &c.] Unrolled it, that what was written in it might be ſeen and read; that ſo underſtanding it, he might deliver the contents of it to the people: thus the goſpel, and the myſteries of it, muſt be explained by Chriſt to his miniſters; and their underſtandings muſt be opened, e're they will be capable of making them known to others: and it was written within and without; on the back of the vellum or parchment, as well as within ſide; and ſuch writings were called opiſthographa: of this kind was the book John ſaw, Rev. v. 1. It was uſual only to write on the inſide; but when they had a great deal to write, then they wrote on the backſide alſo [d]; ſo that this roll being thus written, denotes the largeneſs and abundance of the prophecies contained in this book; ſome reſpecting the Jews, and others the nations of the world. The Targum is "it was written "before and behind, what was from the begin-"ning, and what ſhall be in the end:" and there were written therein lamentations, and mourning, and wo; afflictions, chaſtiſements, and puniſhments, that ſhould be inflicted upon the Jews, and other nations of the world; which, when made known to them, and eſpecially when inflicted on them, would occaſion ſorrow and diſtreſs among them. In the Talmud, lamentations are interpreted of the puniſhments of the righteous in this world; mourning of the gift of reward to the righteous in the world to come; and wo of the puniſhments of the wicked in the world to come [e]. The Targum is, "if the houſe of Iſrael tranſgreſs the law, the peo-"ple ſhall rule over them; but if they keep the "law, lamentation, and mourning, and ſorrow, "ſhall ceaſe from them."

---

[a] Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 21. c. 15. and l. 22. c. 15.

[b] Ibid, l. 11. c. 25.

[c] מרי המה rebellio ipſi, Montanus, Polanus, Starckius; inobedientia ſunt, Cocceius.

[d] ——Aut ſummi plena tam margine libri
Scriptus, & in tergo, nec dum finitus Oreſtes. Juvenal. Satyr. 1.

[e] T. Bab. Erubin, fol. 21. 1.

CHAP. III.

THIS chapter contains a further account of the prophet's call and miſſion; of his preparation of him for his work; of the perſons to whom he was ſent; of what happened to him upon this; of the nature of his office, and the work of it; and of what followed upon the renewal of his call. His further preparation for propheſying is in ℣. 1, 2, 3. where he is bid to eat the roll ſhewed him, which he did, and found it in his mouth as honey for ſweetneſs; and then he receives freſh orders to go to the people of Iſrael, and propheſy to them, ℣. 4. and that he might not be diſcouraged, an account is given before-hand of the people to whom he was ſent; of their language, behaviour and diſpoſition; by which he could not expect ſucceſs, ℣. 5, 6, 7. and for his further encouragement, ſtrength, boldneſs, reſolution, firmneſs and preſence of mind, are promiſed him, ℣. 8, 9. alſo a revelation of more things to him; all which he ſhould hear, receive and ſpeak, whether the people would attend to them or no; which ought to be no diſcouragement to him, ſince it was not regarded by the Lord, ℣. 10, 11. then follows an account of his being lift up by the Spirit from the earth, when he heard a voice, which is deſcribed by the manner and matter of it; and a noiſe, both of the living creature's wings, and of the wheels he had ſeen in a former viſion, ℣. 12, 13. and next, of his being carried away by the ſame Spirit; and of the condition he was in, in his own ſpirit, as he went; and of the ſtrength he received from the Lord; and of the place to which he was carried; and his ſtate and circumſtances, and time of continuance there, ℣. 14, 15. where, after a time mentioned, he has a freſh call to his office, under the character of a watchman, whoſe buſineſs was to hear Chriſt's words, and warn the houſe of Iſrael from him; and who are diſtinguiſhed into wicked and righteous; and whom the prophet was to warn at his own peril, ℣. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. and the chapter is concluded with a narration of various events which befel the prophet; he is bid by the Lord to go into the plain, which he did, and there ſaw the glory of the Lord, as he had before ſeen it at the river Chebar; which ſo affected him, that he fell upon his face, ℣. 22, 23. the Spirit entered into him, ſet him on his feet, and ſpake with him; ordered him what he ſhould do himſelf, that he ſhould ſhut himſelf up in his houſe, ℣. 24. informed him what the people would do to him; bind him with bands, that he ſhould not come forth, ℣. 25. and what Chriſt would do to him; ſtrike him dumb in judgment to the people, that he might not be a reprover of them, ℣. 26. but he is told that when the Lord ſpoke to him, his mouth ſhould be opened, and he ſhould declare what was ſaid to him, ℣. 27.

℣. 1. Moreover, he ſaid unto me, &c.] The ſame glorious perſon, who had been ſpeaking all along in the preceding chapter; and who was ſeen by the prophet on a ſapphire throne, and deſcribed in ch. i. 26, 27, 28. the firſt fifteen verſes of this chapter are by Junius and Tremellius made a part of the ſecond; ſon of man, eat that thou findeſt; not any thing, but what he found in the hand ſent unto him; wherefore the Targum is, "ſon of man "receive what is given thee;" which was the roll, as follows: eat this roll; not literally, but figuratively, as John is bid to eat the little book, Rev. x. 9, 10. that is, read it, meditate upon the things contained therein, and digeſt them, that he might be able to impart them, and make them known to others: it is explained in ℣. 10. by hearing and receiving the words of the prophecy; and ſo the Targum, "receive what is written in this roll;" this is to eat it; as great readers of books are called helluones librorum, eaters of books, gluttons at them; read them greedily, deeply meditate upon what is in them, and thoroughly digeſt them; ſo it becomes all good men to eat the word, to mix it with faith, to receive it in the love of it, and conſtantly meditate on it, Pſ. i. 1, 2. and eſpecially miniſters of the goſpel, 1 Tim. iv. 15: and go, ſpeak unto the houſe of Iſrael; or, as the Targum, "go, and propheſy to the houſe of Iſrael; for by eating the roll, in the ſenſe given, he was fit for it; and when miniſters of the word have read, and thought of, and digeſted the truths of the goſpel themſelves; then they are prepared to go and enter upon their work, and feed others with knowledge and underſtanding.

℣. 2. So I opened my mouth, &c.] To take in the roll, and eat it; he was not diſobedient to the heavenly viſion; he did all that he could towards eating it, but was not ſufficient of himſelf; and therefore it follows: and he cauſed me to eat that roll; he, the Lord, put it into his mouth, cauſed him to eat it, and filled him with it, according to his promiſe, Pſ. lxxxi. 10. The efficacy and ſufficiency to think of good things, to meditate upon them, receive and digeſt them, are of God; it is he that makes men prophets, and able miniſters. The Targum is, "and I inclined my ſoul, "and he taught me (or made me wiſe, with) what "was written in this roll."

℣. 3. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, cauſe thy belly to eat, &c.] Or devour [r], and conſume; that is, concoct and digeſt; don't caſt it out of thy mouth, as ſoon as thou haſt taſted of it; but let it go down into the ſtomach, and there digeſt it; and from thence into the belly, that ſo upon the whole, virtue may be received, and nouriſhment come by it: and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee; eat to ſatiety; ſo the Targum, "ſon of "man, thou ſhalt ſatiate thy ſoul, and fill thy "belly, if thou receiveſt what is written in this "roll, which I give thee:" this was ſufficient to qualify the prophet for propheſying, and furniſh him with materials enough; and theſe fit and proper for the diſcharge of his office; and ſo ſuch who ſtudy the word of God with application, become ſcribes well inſtructed in the kingdom of heaven; and being filled themſelves, are able to bring forth things to the comfort and ſatisfaction of others: then did I eat it, and it was in my mouth as honey for ſweetneſs; that is, as the roll was ſpread before him, he looked into it, and read it, and meditated upon it, and laid it up in his memory, in order to deliver it out when commanded; and tho' it contained things very diſtreſſing, and which would occaſion lamentation, and mourning, and wo; yet conſidering that theſe were the will of God, and in righteous judgment to men, he could not but acquieſce in, and approve of them. All the words that come out of the mouth of God are as ſweet as honey, yea ſweeter than that, Pſ. xix. 10. and cxix. 103. and ſo the Targum interprets it, of the words of the Lord, "and I took it, "and his words were in my mouth as ſweet "honey;" and eſpecially the goſpel, and the truths of it, are like honey; they are gathered by laborious miniſters, as honey by the induſtrious bee, out of the various flowers of the ſcriptures, with which being laden, they bring into the hive of the church, and diſpoſe of for general uſefulneſs; theſe are like honey for healthfulneſs, for nouriſhment, and for ſweetneſs to the taſte; that which makes the goſpel ſo, are the exceeding great and precious promiſes in it; its doctrines of grace, and thoſe of peace and reconciliation, of pardon, righteouſneſs, eternal life and ſalvation by Jeſus Chriſt; and above all, Chriſt himſelf, who is the ſum and ſubſtance of it; and all its truths being quickning, comforting and refreſhing: but then the goſpel is only ſweet when it is eaten; not merely heard, aſſented to, and ſuperficially taſted of, but eaten and fed upon by faith; and ſo it is ſweet, not to unregenerate perſons, whoſe taſte is not changed; nor to nominal and notional profeſſors, who have only a ſuperficial taſte of it; but to true believers in Chriſt, ſpiritual men, who judge and diſcern all things; ſee Rev. x. 9, 10.

---

[r] תאכל devoret, conſumat, Vatablus.

℣. 4. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, go, &c.] After he had ate the roll; for then was he qualified to propheſy: get thee unto the houſe of Iſrael; to whom he was to propheſy: and ſpeak with my words unto them; not with his own words; nor with the words of men, the enticing words of man's wiſdom; but with the words of Chriſt; with the taught words of the Holy Ghoſt; with what is written in the roll; the words of this prophecy are meant. So the Targum, "and thou ſhalt pro- "pheſy the words of my prophecy unto them;" in like manner John, after he had ate the little book, is told that he muſt propheſy before many people, nations, tongues and kings, Rev. x. 9, 10, 11. tho' Ezekiel was only ſent to one nation, as follows:

℣. 5. For thou art not ſent to a people of a ſtrange ſpeech, &c.] Deep of lip [g], or ſpeech; difficult to be got at, and underſtood: and of an hard language; or heavy of tongue [h]; of a barbarous and unknown language, whom he could not underſtand, nor they him; and ſo would have been barbarians to one another; and conſequently it could not be thought his propheſying among them could have been of any uſe. This may be conſidered, either by way of encouragement to the prophet to go on his errand to ſuch a people; ſince, as he could underſtand them, and they him, he might hope to meet with ſucceſs; or however, he could deliver his meſſage, ſo as to be underſtood: or as an aggravation of the impiety, perverſeneſs and ſtupidity of the Iſraelites; that tho' the prophet ſpoke to them in their own language, yet they would not hear, nor receive his words: but to the houſe of Iſrael; who were a people of the ſame ſpeech and language with the prophet; all ſpoke and underſtood the language of Canaan; nor were the things he delivered ſuch as they were altogether ſtrangers to, being the ſame for ſubſtance, which Moſes, and the other prophets, had ever taught.

℣. 6. Not to many people of a ſtrange ſpeech, and of an hard language, &c.] The prophet was ſent, not to different nations, of different languages; but to one nation, of the ſame language; indeed ſeveral of his prophecies concern other nations, as the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Tyrians, Philiſtines, Egyptians and Aſſyrians; but then theſe had a relation to the people of Iſrael, and were chiefly on their account; and therefore he was not ſent to thoſe nations to deliver his prophecies unto them, but to the people of Iſrael only; and ſo had no difficulty on his part concerning their language, which he would have had, had he been ſent to the barbarous nations: whoſe words thou canſt not underſtand; the prophet being only uſed to the language of the Jews, and not having the gift of ſpeaking with, and underſtanding divers tongues; as the apoſtles of Chriſt had, when they were ſent to many people of different languages, and which is here tacitly intimated: ſurely had I ſent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee; which is an aggravation of the obſtinacy and diſobedience of the people of Iſrael; that had the barbarous nations been favoured with the ſame means of inſtruction they were, they would have been obedient; ſee Matt. xi. 21, 23. for tho' they could not underſtand the prophet's language, nor he theirs; yet, as Kimchi obſerves, they would have ſought for an interpreter to have explained the prophecy to them. The thing is very ſtrongly affirmed, ſurely, verily באמת of a truth; as the ſame Jewiſh writer interprets אם לא; and both he and Jarchi take it to be the form of an oath. Some render the words, if I had not ſent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee [i]; and the ſenſe is, either, that if the Lord had not ſent him to the Iſraelites, but to the people of a ſtrange ſpeech; they, the people, would have hearkened to him: or, if the Lord had not ſent the prophet, but he had gone of himſelf, as the falſe prophets, in their own name, the Iſraelites would have hearkened to him; ſuch was their perverſeneſs and rebellion: others render the words, if not, or had it not been for their ſtrange ſpeech and hard language, I would have ſent thee to them [k], the barbarous nations, and they would have hearkened unto thee; but the firſt ſenſe ſeems beſt; which is confirmed by the Targum, Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and the Oriental verſions.

℣. 7. But the houſe of Iſrael will not hearken unto thee, &c.] They are not willing [l]; they have no deſire, no inclination to hear and hearken; but the reverſe; tho' they were capable of hearing and underſtanding his ſpeech and language, and tho' he was ſent unto them by the Lord: and indeed the reaſon why they did not hearken to him, was not becauſe they rejected him and his words, but becauſe they rejected the Lord and his words; they were the words of the Lord, and his reproofs; and therefore they would not hearken to them, as follows: for they will not hearken unto me; and which is an argument why the prophet ſhould bear with patience their diſregard to him and his words, and their neglect and contempt of them; for ſeeing they would not hear the Lord, how could he expect they ſhould hear him; and therefore he ſhould not be uneaſy at it; ſee John xv. 20: for all the houſe of Iſrael are impudent and hard hearted; or, ſtrong of front, and hard of heart [m]; they had a whore's forehead, an impudent face, that could not bluſh and be aſhamed; and hearts of ſtone, like a rock, and harder than the nether mill-ſtone, on which no impreſſions could be made, by all the admonitions and reproofs given them; ſee ch. ii. 4. and this was the caſe of all of them in general, excepting ſome very few; which ſhows the ſad degeneracy of this people.

---

[g] עמקי שפה, profundi labii, Vatablus; profundorum labio, Polanus, Cocceius; profundi ſermonis, Starckius.

[h] כבדי לשון graves linguæ, Montanus; gravium lingua, Polanus.

[i] אם לא אליהם שלחתיך ſi non ad eos miſiſſem te, Vatablus; ſi non miſero te, Montanus; ſi non mitterem, Pagninus.

[k] Si non miſiſſem te ad eos, Calvin.

[l] לא יאבו non cupient, Montanus; non volunt, Cocceius; non illi volentes, Starckius.

℣. 8. Behold, I have made thy face ſtrong againſt their faces, &c.] Not that the prophet ſhould have the ſame ſort of impudence and confidence they had; but that God would give [n] him ſuch a face, as it is in the Hebrew text, ſuch ſpirit and courage, that he ſhould neither be aſhamed of the words of the Lord, nor afraid to ſpeak them to this people; ſo that he ſhould be a match for them; they ſhould not be able to out-face him, or look him out of countenance; he ſhould behave with an undaunted ſpirit, and with great intrepidity, amidſt all oppoſition made to him: the Lord fits his miniſters for the people he ſends them to, and gives them courage and ſtrength proportionate to the oppoſition they meet with; as their day is, their ſtrength is; and all that invincible courage, boldneſs and ſtrength, with which they are endowed, it is all from the Lord, and a gift of his: and thy forehead ſtrong againſt their foreheads; which is the ſame thing in different words.

℣. 9. As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead, &c.] Or, than a rock [o]; the adamant has its name in Greek, becauſe it cannot be conquered or ſubdued, neither by the hammer, nor by fire; the one can't break, nor the other conſume it; and it is called ſhamir in Hebrew, from its preſerving itſelf from both; it will cut iron in pieces, which is harder than ſtone, and therefore muſt be harder than that. Bochart takes it to be the ſame with ſmiris, a hard ſtone, which jewellers uſe to poliſh their gems with; ſee Jer. xvii. 1. and Zech. vii. 12. The deſign of the ſimile is to ſet forth the courage and fortitude of mind the prophet was endowed with, in order to face an impudent and hard-hearted people. Fear them not, neither be diſmayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious houſe; ſee the note on ch. ii. 6.

℣. 10. Moreover he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] The ſame glorious perſon as before, continued ſpeaking to him, and added, as follows: all my words that I ſhall ſpeak unto thee; not only what he had ſpoken to him, but what he ſhould hereafter; for he did not tell all at once what he ſhould ſay, but gradually, revealing his mind to him by little and little; but then, he was to receive all that he ſhould ſay, and reject nothing, nor ſhun to declare the whole counſel of God: receive in thine heart, and hear with thine ears; what the Lord ſays, ſhould not only be diligently attended to, and heard with eagerneſs, but ſhould be received in the love of it, into the heart, and laid up in the mind and memory, in order to be delivered out to others at a proper time.

℣. 11. And go, get thee to them of the captivity, &c.] Not in the times of Hoſhea king of Iſrael, by Salmaneſer king of Aſſyria, for theſe were placed in the cities of the Medes, 2 Kings xvii. 6. but in the times of Jeconiah king of Judah, ch. i. 2: unto thy people; the Jews, which were in the land of Chaldea: and ſpeak unto them, and tell them; the words the Lord ſpoke to him: thus ſaith the Lord God, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear; ſee the note on ch. ii. 7.

℣. 12. Then the ſpirit took me, &c.] Not the wind, nor an angel, but the Spirit of God; who took up the prophet from the ground, from the place where he was, among the captives by the river Chebar, and had ſeen the glorious viſion deſcribed in the firſt chapter; and had had his call and miſſion, as expreſſed in the ſecond chapter, and hitherto in this; and was carried by him to another company of captives, who were at another place by the ſame river, as appears by comparing ch. i. 1, 2, 3. with ch. iii. 15. for this was not done in a viſionary way, as Kimchi thinks, but in reality; not in ſpirit, but in body; juſt as the ſpirit caught away Philip from the eunuch, Acts viii. 39: and I heard behind me a voice of a great ruſhing; of the living creatures and wheels, as is afterwards explained: ſaying, bleſſed be the glory of the Lord out of his place; either out of heaven, the place where his glory is manifeſted; ſo the Targum, out of the place of his Shekinah or majeſty; or out of the temple, from between the cherubim over the mercy-ſeat, from whence he was about to remove, ch. x. 4. Theſe words may be conſidered either as a doxology of the church and people of God, aſcribing glory, bleſſing, and praiſe unto him; not only on account of the perfections of his nature, but becauſe of his works of nature, providence, and grace, and even for his righteous judgments on men. Maimonides [p], by his place, underſtands the eſſence of God. Or as a lamentation for the departure of the bleſſed and glorious majeſty of God from the temple, which ſeemed to be threatened; for the words may be rendered, the bleſſed glory of the Lord out of his place [q]; that is, it is juſt ready to go out of his place.

℣. 13. I heard alſo the noiſe of the wings of the living creatures, &c.] Which they clapped, when they uttered the preceding words; ſee the note on ch. i. 24: that touched one another; or kiſſed, a woman her ſiſter [r]; denoting their affection and agreement in the doxology or aſcription of glory to God; ſee ch. i. 9, 11, 23: and the noiſe of the wheels over-againſt them; the living creatures; for the wheels were by the living creatures, and went over-againſt them, as they went, ch. i. 15, 19, 20, 21. miniſters and churches join together in this doxology: and a noiſe of a great ruſhing; which is repeated for the confirmation of the thing, and to expreſs the greatneſs of the noiſe made by the living creatures and wheels, like that of thunder or an earthquake; it is ſaid to be like the noiſe of great waters, ch. i. 24.

℣. 14. So the ſpirit lifted me up, and took me away, &c.] Lifted him up from the earth, and carried him thro' the air: and I went in bitterneſs; full of trouble and ſorrow, that the Lord was departing from the temple; that his people had been guilty of ſuch crimes they had, and were ſuch an impudent and hard-hearted people they were; and

---

[m] חזקי מצח וקשי לב obſirmati fronte & duri corde, Polanus, Starckius; obſirmati frontis & duri cordis, Piſcator.

[n] נתתי את פניך dedi faciem tuam, V. L. Vatablus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[o] מצור rupe, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator; præ rupe, Cocceius; ex rupe, Starckius; præ petra, Montanus.

[p] More Nevochim, par. 1. c. 8. p. 12.

[q] ברוך כבוד יי ממקומו benedictam gloriam Jehovæ e loco ipſius, migrantem, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[r] משיקות אשה אל אחותה attingentium more oſculantium, vira ad ſororem ſuam, Vatablus; oſculantium, Polanus, Starckius. So Ben Melech.

that ſuch judgments were coming upon them, he had ſeen written in the roll, full of lamentations, mourning, and wo: in the heat of my ſpirit; the Targum and Vulgate Latin render it, in the indignation of my ſpirit; his ſpirit was hot and angry, he was froward and unwilling to go on the errand, to propheſy ſad and diſmal things to his people: but the hand of the Lord was ſtrong upon me; the Spirit of the Lord powerfully wrought upon him, and obliged him to go; and the hand of the Lord ſtrengthened him, and removed his frowardneſs and perverſeneſs of ſpirit. The Targum is, "and pro-"phecy from before the Lord was ſtrong upon "me;" ſo Kimchi interprets it of the hand of prophecy; the Spirit of the Lord, as a ſpirit of prophecy, came upon him, with great impulſe upon his ſpirit, and he could not refuſe going to his people, to declare it to them.

℣. 15. Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-Abib, &c.] For it ſeems the captive Jews were diſpoſed of at different places, and there were ſome at this place; for this was the name of a place, as Jarchi and Kimchi obſerve; as were Tel-melah, and Tel-harſa, Ezra ii. 59. Neh. vii. 69. it ſignifies an heap of new fruit, and ſo the Vulgate Latin verſion renders it: not that there were ſuch at this time here; and the captives were beating out the ripe ears of corn, as Abib ſignifies; whence the month Abib has its name, and which was the firſt month with the Jews; whereas it was in the fourth month when Ezekiel was here, and there could be no ears of new corn, ch. i. 1. according to Junius, this Tel-Abib was a tract in Meſopotamia, reaching from mount Maſius to the river Euphrates, and lay between two rivers, Chebar and Saocoras; and he thinks the captive Jews were placed here, partly that they might be ſecured ſafe from getting away, or returning from their captivity; and partly that they might ſecure and defend the place from enemies, it being thro' inundations uninhabited, and ſo expoſed unto them: that dwelt by the river of Chebar; ſee the note on ch. i. 1: and I ſat where they ſat; there is a double reading here; the Cetib or writing is ואשר, which Junius takes to be the name of a river the prophet calls Haeſher, the ſame with Saocoras, connecting it with the preceding clauſe, that dwelt by the river of Chebar and Haeſher; the Keri or marginal reading is ואשב, and I ſat or dwelt; but both ſignify the ſame thing, ſince אשר is from שרה, which in Chaldee ſignifies to dwell[a]; and the Keri is confirmed by the Targum, which we follow. The ſenſe is, that he placed himſelf among the captives, and remained there aſtoniſhed among them ſeven days; at the change of place and company; at the ſad condition his people were in; and above all, at the dreadful things he had to deliver to them. The Targum renders it, ſilent; through grief and trouble. So many days Job's friends kept ſilence, when they came to viſit him, and ſaw his diſtreſs, Job ii. 13. Or he might be waiting all this time for orders and inſtructions to propheſy; or to prepare the people to attend with more reverence and earneſtneſs, to hear what he had to ſay when he ſhould break ſilence. The Septuagint render it the reverſe, converſing in the midſt of them.

℣. 16. And it came to paſs at the end of ſeven days, &c.] Some think it was on the ſabbath-day he had the following declaration made to him, and inſtructions given him; but this is not certain; nor does it follow, or to be concluded, from ſuch a way of ſpeaking: that the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; the Targum is, "the word "of prophecy from before the Lord."

℣. 17. Son of man, I have made thee a watchman, unto the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] Not in a civil ſenſe, a watchman of a town or city, or of the whole country, but in an eccleſiaſtical ſenſe. So the Targum renders it by מליף a teacher; whoſe buſineſs it was to inſtruct the people in divine things, to warn them of their evil ways, and of the danger they expoſed them to; ſuch were the prophets of old, and ſuch are the miniſters of the New Teſtament: the office is the ſame with that of biſhops or overſeers; and lies in watching over the ſouls of men, as ſhepherds over their flocks, that they go into right paſtures, and not aſtray, and ſo preſerve them from beaſts of prey; and as watchmen of cities, to give the time of night, and notice of approaching danger; to the diſcharge of which office are neceſſary quick-ſight, diligence in looking out, ſobriety and vigilance, courage, conſtancy, and faithfulneſs: and they are ſons of men that are put into this office, and not angels; ſons of fallen Adam, ſinful men; men ſubject to infirmity, weak, frail, mortal men, and oftentimes of a mean and low extraction, and greatly unworthy of ſo high an honour; but Chriſt counts them faithful, and puts them into this office; they are not made and conſtituted watchmen or miniſters by themſelves, or by others, but by him; and they are given by him as ſuch to the church of God: ſon of man, I have given thee a watchman[b], &c. they become watchmen thro' gifts beſtowed upon them, qualifying them for this office; and they themſelves are gifts to the churches over whom they are placed, ſignified by the houſe of Iſrael; for a church is an houſe of Chriſt's building, and where he dwells, and a family named of him, which he takes care of, and conſiſts of Iſraelites indeed. Therefore hear the word at my mouth; for as the prophets of old, ſo the miniſters of the goſpel, are firſt to hear what Chriſt ſays; and then deliver out his doctrine, called the doctrine of Chriſt, and the wholſome words of our Lord Jeſus. So the Targum, "and "thou ſhalt receive the word from my word;" the word of prophecy, or the word of the goſpel, from Chriſt the eſſential word. And give them warning from me; in his name and ſtead, and as from his mouth, to take care of ſinning againſt him, diſhonouring his name, and wounding their own ſouls; that they live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly, and adorn the doctrine of God their Saviour; that they avoid all appearances of evil, and ſhun the company of wicked men: the houſe of Iſrael, or church of God, are to be warned to be careful who they take into their communion, and to exclude ſuch that are bad in principle and practice; to beware of innovations in worſhip, and of falſe teachers and falſe doctrines; and that they do not forſake the word, worſhip, and ordinances of God's houſe, but fill up their places, and perform all duties incumbent on them. The Targum is, "and thou ſhalt warn them from ſinning before "me."

℣. 18. When I ſay unto the wicked, thou ſhalt ſurely die, &c.] Not only a corporal, but an eternal death; for this is what the law threatens with, and there the Lord ſays this; and this is the wages, end, and iſſue of ſin, if grace prevent not: and thou giveſt him not warning; of the evil nature of ſin, and of the danger it expoſes to: nor ſpeakeſt to warn the wicked from his wicked way; to abſtain from it, and live another courſe of life: to ſave his life; for ſuch warning, caution, exhortation, and doctrine, may be a means of converting a ſinner from the evil of his way, and of ſaving a ſoul from death, 1 Tim. iv. 16. Jam. v. 20: the ſame wicked man ſhall die in his iniquity; with the pollution and guilt of ſin upon him, and ſo be puniſhed for it; ſee John viii. 24: but his blood will I require at thine hands; thou ſhalt be anſwerable for him; his death ſhall be laid to thy charge, and thou ſhalt be chaſtized for thy negligence; ſee Acts xx. 26.

---

[a] Vid. Hillerum de Arcano Kethib & Keri, l. 2. p. 329.

[b] צפה, נתתיך ſpeculatorem dedi, V. L. Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius. So Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

℣. 19. Yet if thou warn the wicked, &c.] Of his ſin and danger; lay before him his evil, and ſhew him the ſad conſequences of going on in a courſe of ſin, and warn him to flee from wrath to come: and he turn not from his wickedneſs, and from his wicked way; does not repent of it, nor abſtain from it: he ſhall die in his iniquity; and for it, and that very righteouſly: but thou haſt delivered thy ſoul; thou haſt done the duty of thine office; thou art clear from the charge of negligence and ſloth, and from being anſwerable for the death of the ſinner; and ſhalt ſave thyſelf, tho' not the wicked man; ſee 1 Tim. iv. 16.

℣. 20. Again, when a righteous man doth turn from his righteouſneſs, &c.] This is to be underſtood not of one that is truly righteous, or is juſtified by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt; for ſuch can never turn from that righteouſneſs, or be in an unjuſtified ſtate; ſeeing that is the righteouſneſs of God, and an everlaſting one; but of one that is denominated righteous, from his own righteouſneſs, from a righteouſneſs which he hath done, as is afterwards expreſſed; one that is outwardly righteous before men, that is outwardly reformed, that has a righteouſneſs of his own, conſiſting of a little negative holineſs, and a few moral performances; from ſuch a righteouſneſs a man may apoſtatize, and go into a vicious courſe of life: and commit iniquity; live in ſin, make a trade of it; lead a life, the whole ſeries and courſe of which is nothing elſe but ſin; in this ſenſe, one that is born of God, and has the righteouſneſs of Chriſt revealed from faith to faith unto him, and lives by faith upon it, cannot commit ſin, 1 John iii. 9: and I lay a ſtumbling-block before him; the Targum renders it, the ſtumbling-block of ſins; which deſigns either an occaſion of ſinning, which God permits, leaving him to his own luſts, and ſuffering him to fall thereby; and by this means he is diſcovered to be what he is, not a truly righteous man, but only one in appearance; that looked like a righteous perſon, but ſecretly a ſinner, and now the Lord by ſuch means expoſes him openly; ſo Jarchi, and other Jewiſh Rabbins; but Kimchi's father interprets this ſtumbling-block of proſperity in this world [u]: or rather the puniſhment of ſin is meant, as Kimchi himſelf obſerves; and the Septuagint render it, torment; ſince this follows upon his turning from righteouſneſs, and committing ſin; and ſeems to be explained by the next clauſe: he ſhall die; the ſecond death: becauſe thou haſt not given him warning; of the dreadful evil of apoſtacy, and the ſad eſtate of apoſtates, and the danger they are in, their laſt eſtate being worſe than the firſt: he ſhall die in his ſin; of apoſtacy, and for it, being never to be recovered and brought to repentance: and his righteouſneſs which he hath done ſhall not be remembred; according to the Keri or marginal reading it is, his righteouſneſſes; all his works of righteouſneſs which he hath done; and which reading is followed by the Targum, Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and the Eaſtern verſions; theſe ſhall not be remembred, neither in this world, nor in that to come; no account ſhall be taken of them, nor ſhall they be reckoned as a righteouſneſs unto him: but his blood will I require at thine hand; ſee the note on ℣. 18.

℣. 21. Nevertheleſs, if thou warn the righteous man, &c.] Every righteous man, that is ſo in a judgment of charity, whether truly righteous or no, which the event ſhows; who ſhould be warned not to truſt in their own righteouſneſs, but to depend on the righteouſneſs of Chriſt; that they be careful to maintain good works, to avoid ſin, and live holy lives and converſations, as follows: that the righteous ſin not; not that there is any juſt man that does good, and ſins not; the beſt of men are often ſinning in thought, word, or deed; but he is to be warned that he does not continue in ſin, and lead a ſinful courſe of life; which is contrary to his character, and to his faith in Chriſt for righteouſneſs, which is attended with good works: and he doth not ſin; the warning and exhortation given him having ſo good an effect, through the power of divine grace, as to be a means of preſerving him from a vain converſation: he ſhall ſurely live; ſpiritually and comfortably now, and eternally hereafter: becauſe he is warned; that being a means, and with the divine bleſſing taking effect: alſo thou haſt delivered thy ſoul; ſee the note on ℣. 19.

℣. 22. And the hand of the Lord was there upon me, &c.] At Tel-Abib, ℣. 15. The Targum interprets the hand of the Lord, of the ſpirit of prophecy, which remained upon him there; but it ſeems to deſign a freſh impulſe of the Spirit, a powerful motion of the Spirit upon his ſpirit, ſtirring up to attention to what might be ſaid unto him: and he ſaid unto me; the ſame glorious perſon, the Lord Chriſt, deſcribed in ch. i. 26, 27, 28: ariſe, go forth into the plain; or, the valley [w]; the Arabic verſion renders it, the deſert; a ſolitary place, free from noiſe and hurry, and from the company and converſation of men; and ſo more fit for retirement and contemplation, and for attention to divine orders. What plain this was, is not certain; Kimchi thinks it was the plain in which Babel was built, and where the Lord ſhewed the prophet what he had in his providence done in this place formerly, in confounding the languages of men, and cauſing their devices to ceaſe. And I will there talk with thee; when alone, ſedate, and compoſed; ſo God ſometimes brings his people into a low and humble ſtate and condition, into the valley of humility, and there grants them communion with himſelf; ſee Hoſ. ii. 14. perhaps the alluſion is to a cuſtom among the Jews, of revealing ſecrets to others in fields and deſerts, and ſuch like ſolitary places; ſee Gen. xxxi. 4, 5 [x].

℣. 23. Then I aroſe and went forth into the plain, &c.] He was obedient to the heavenly viſion, which was owing to the hand of the Lord being upon him; the power of the Spirit and grace of

---

[u] Vid. T. Bab. Yoma, fol. 86. 2.

[w] אל הבקעה in iſtam convallem, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; in vallem, Vatablus, Cocceius; in vallem, quaſi fiſſum locum, Starckius.

[x] Vid. Menaſſeh Ben Iſrael, Spes Iſraelis, p. 110.

God, influences and engages to obedience; he went forth where he was ordered, tho' he knew not what would be ſaid to him, or what he ſhould ſee there: and behold, the glory of the Lord ſtood there; the glorious perſon deſcribed in ch. i. 26, 27, 28: as the glory which I ſaw by the river of Chebar; ch. i. 2, 3, 28. which viſion was repeated for greater certainty, and to confirm the propheсies delivered to him, and to encourage him in the performance of his office: and I fell on my face; as he did before, when he firſt ſaw this glorious object, ch. i. 28.

ỷ. 24. Then the Spirit entered into me, &c.] Again; the Spirit of God, that was in the wheels and living creatures; ſee ch. ii. 2: and ſet me upon my feet; as he had done before, when in the ſame proſtrate condition, ch. ii. 2: and ſpake with me; either the Spirit that entered into him, and ſet him upright; or rather the Lord Chriſt, the glory of the Lord that ſtood where he was, and appeared to him: and ſaid unto me, go, ſhut thyſelf within thine houſe; this was not ſaid ironically, but in earneſt; and the reaſon either was, becauſe the people were not fit for reproof and correction, as Jarchi thinks, being a rebellious people; or that the prophet might receive further inſtructions, and have all the words of his prophecy delivered to him, before he began to propheſy. Some think this ſhutting up was an emblem of the ſiege of Jeruſalem. It may ſeem ſtrange, that the prophet ſhould be bid to go into the plain, where the Lord promiſed to talk with him; and this is all that is ſaid to him, to go home, and ſhut himſelf up in his houſe: but it ſhould be obſerved, that this was not the only thing for which he went into the plain; he was to have, and had, a freſh view of the glory of the Lord, and of the viſion he had before, for the further confirmation of him; beſides, this moving him from place to place, before he propheſied, might be partly to try his faith, and partly to preſerve him from the violence of the people; who, had he delivered his meſſage at once, might have been ſo provoked, as to have fallen upon him, and deſtroyed him; as well as to prepare them to receive his propheſies with more reſpect and reverence, when they ſaw he did not raſhly, and at once, deliver them out to them.

ỷ. 25. But thou, O ſon of man, behold, they ſhall put bands upon thee, &c.] Or, bands ſhall be put upon thee; either viſionally, or really; not by angels, but by the Jews, who taking the prophet for a madman by his motions and geſtures, would bind him, and keep him within doors: or figuratively this may be underſtood of the ſins of the people, their rebellion and obſtinacy, which hindered the prophet from propheſying among them as yet; and ſo this is obſerved to conciliate his mind to the divine order, to ſhut up himſelf for a while in his own houſe, and be ſilent: or elſe by theſe bonds may be meant the divine order itſelf, which reſtrained him from doing his office as yet. So the Targum, "behold, I have appointed the "words of my mouth upon thee, as a band of "ropes with which they bind." And ſhall bind thee with them; which ſome think is emblematical of the Jews being bound by the Chaldeans: and thou ſhalt not go out among them; to converſe with them, or propheſy unto them. The Septuagint verſion renders it, ſhalt not go out from the midſt of them; as if he ſhould be taken out of his own houſe by the Jews, and be bound by them, and kept among them, and not able to get away from them; but it is to be underſtood of his being bound in his own houſe, and not able to go out of that to them; and may ſignify, that in like manner the Jews ſhould not be able to go out of Jeruſalem when beſieged by the Chaldeans.

ỷ. 26. And I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou ſhalt be dumb, &c.] Which is to be underſtood not literally, as if he was really ſtruck dumb, as Zechariah was; ſee ch. iv. 9, 14. but that ſuch ſilence ſhould be charged upon him by the Lord, that he ſhould be as if his tongue cleaved to the roof of his mouth, as Kimchi interprets it, and as if he was a dumb man: and ſo the Septuagint verſion renders it, I will bind thy tongue; lay an embargo upon it, that is, it ſhall be ſilent; and this ſenſe is confirmed by what follows: and ſhalt not be to them a reprover; which was in judgment to them, and a giving them up to their own hearts luſts; for tho' reproofs were diſagreeable to them, and they choſe to be without them, yet they were neceſſary for them, and might have been uſeful to them; but they provoking the Lord, he takes away his word from them, and commands his prophet to be ſilent, and let them alone, to go on in their ſins without controul; which was a ſore judgment upon them: for they are a rebellious houſe; ſee ch. ii. 6.

ỷ. 27. But when I ſpeak with thee, &c.] Either when I have made an end of ſpeaking to thee, when I have told thee all my mind, and have given thee all the inſtructions and prophecies thou art to deliver out; or when I ſhall ſpeak to thee again, and give thee orders to ſpeak: I will open thy mouth; looſe thy tongue, cauſe thee to break ſilence, and thou ſhalt ſpeak freely and fully all that I command thee; fulneſs of matter, and freedom of ſpeech, are both from the Lord; liberty and opportunity of ſpeaking are at his pleaſure; and when he ſpeaks his ſervants muſt propheſy, Amos iii. 8: and thou ſhalt ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord; ſo and ſo, whatſoever he is pleaſed to order to be ſpoken; not that the following words are what were to be ſaid to the people; but they are ſaid to the prophet for his own uſe, that he might not be uneaſy at the unfruitfulneſs and unſucceſsfulneſs of his miniſtry: he that heareth, let him hear; if any will hearken to what is ſent to them, as few of them will, it is very well: and he that forbeareth, let him forbear; or, he that ceaſeth, let him ceaſe[y]; he that ceaſeth from hearing, let him do ſo, don't mind it, or be diſcouraged at it: for they are a rebellious houſe; ſee the note on ch. ii. 5. The Targum is, "he that "receiveth, let him receive inſtruction; and he "that ceaſeth, let him ceaſe from ſinning, for it "is a rebellious people."

---

[y] והחדל יחדל & qui ceſſat ceſſet, Pagninus, Tigurine verſion, Starckius; qui deſiſtere volet deſiſtat, Piſcator; qui deſiſtit audire, deſiſtet. So ſome in Vatablus.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy of the ſiege of Jeruſalem, and of the famine that attended it. The ſiege is deſcribed by a portrait of the city of Jeruſalem on a tile, laid before the prophet, ℣. 1. by ſeveral actions, repreſenting a ſiege of it, as building a fort, caſting a mount, and ſetting a camp and battering-rams againſt it, and an iron-pan for a wall, between the prophet, the beſieger, and the city, ℣. 2, 3. by his geſture, lying firſt on his left-ſide for the ſpace of 390 days, and then on his right-ſide for the ſpace of 40 days, pointing at the time when the city ſhould be taken, ℣. 4, 5, 6. and by ſetting his face to the ſiege, and uncovering his arm, and propheſying, ℣. 7. and by bands being laid on him, ſo that he could not turn from one ſide to the other, till the ſiege was ended, ℣. 8. the famine is ſignified by bread the prophet was to make of various ſorts of grain and ſeeds, baked with mens dung, and eat by weight, with water drank by meaſure, which is applied unto the people; it is ſuggeſted, that this would be fulfilled by the children of Iſrael's eating defiled bread among the Gentiles, ℣. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. but upon the prophet's concern about eating any thing forbidden by the law, which he had never done, cows dung is allowed inſtead of mens, to prepare the bread with, ℣. 14, 15. and the chapter is concluded with a reſolution to bring a ſevere famine on them, to their great aſtoniſhment, and with which they ſhould be conſumed for their iniquity, ℣. 16, 17.

℣. 1. Thou alſo, ſon of man, take thee a tile, &c.] Or brick [z]. The Targum renders it, a ſtone; but a tile or brick, eſpecially one that is not dried and burned, but green, is more fit to cut in it the figure of a city. Some think that this was ordered, becauſe cities are built of brick; or to ſhew the weakneſs of the city of Jeruſalem, how eaſily it might be demoliſhed; and Jerom thinks there was ſome deſign to lead the Jews to reflect upon their making bricks in Egypt, and their hard ſervice there; tho' perhaps the truer reaſon may be, becauſe the Babylonians had been uſed to write upon tiles. Epigenes [a] ſays, they had celeſtial obſervations of a long courſe of years, written on tiles; hence the prophet is bid to deſcribe Jeruſalem on one, which was to be deſtroyed by the king of Babylon. And lay it before thee; as perſons do, who are about to draw a picture, make a portrait, or engrave the form of any thing they intend: and pourtray upon it the city; even Jeruſalem; or engrave upon it, by making inciſions on it, and ſo deſcribing the form and figure of the city of Jeruſalem.

℣. 2. And lay ſiege againſt it, &c.] In his own perſon, as in ℣. 3. or draw the form of a ſiege, or figure of an army beſieging a city; or rather of the inſtruments and means uſed in a ſiege, as follows: and build a fort againſt it; Kimchi interprets it a wooden tower, built over-againſt the city, to ſubdue it; and Jarchi takes it to be an inſtrument by which ſtones were caſt into the city; and ſo the Arabic verſion renders it, machines to caſt ſtones; the Targum, a fortreſs; ſo Nebuchadnezzar in reality did, what was here only done in type, 2 Kings xxv. 1. where the ſame word is uſed as here: and caſt a mount about it; a heap of earth caſt up, in order to look into the city, caſt in darts, and mount the walls; what the French call a baſtion, as Jarchi obſerves: ſet the camp alſo againſt it; place the army in their tents about it: and ſet battering-rams againſt it round about; a warlike inſtrument, that had an iron-head and horns like a ram, with which in a ſiege the walls of a city were battered and beaten down. Jarchi, Kimchi, and Ben Melech, interpret the word, of princes and generals of the army, who watched at the ſeveral corners of the city, that none might go in and out; ſo the Targum ſeems to underſtand it [b]. The Arabic verſion is, mounts to caſt darts; ſee the note on ch. xxi. 22.

℣. 3. Moreover, take thou unto thee an iron pan, &c.] Which Kimchi thinks, for its metal, repreſented the hardneſs of the hearts of the people of Iſrael; and for its colour, the blackneſs of their ſins: tho' others are of opinion, this being a pan in which things are fried, it may ſignify the miſeries of the Jews in captivity; the roaſting of Ahab and Zedekiah in the fire, and particularly the burning of the city: others, the wrath of God againſt them, and his reſolution to deſtroy them: but rather, ſince the uſe of it was as follows, and ſet it for a wall of iron between thee and the city, it ſeems to repreſent all ſuch things as are made uſe of by beſiegers to ſkreen them from the beſieged; ſuch as are now uſed are trenches, parapets, baſtions, &c. for the prophet in this type is the beſieger, repreſenting the Chaldean army ſecure from the annoyance of thoſe within the walls of the city: and ſet thy face againſt it; with a firm reſolution to beſiege and take the city; which denotes both the ſettled wrath of God againſt this people, and the determined purpoſe of the king of Babylon not to move from it until he had taken it: and it ſhall be beſieged, and thou ſhalt lay ſiege againſt it; as an emblem of the army of the Chaldeans beſieging it, which is confirmed by the next clauſe: this ſhall be a ſign to the houſe of Iſrael; of the city of Jeruſalem being beſieged by the Babylonians; this was a ſign repreſenting it, and giving them aſſurance of it.

℣. 4. Lie thou alſo upon thy left ſide, &c.] Some think this was not in reality, but in viſion, as Kimchi obſerves; and ſo Maimonides [c]; and in like manner they underſtand his eating and drinking by meaſure, and preparing food, as he is directed in a following part of this chapter: but others are of opinion, that all this was really done. The reaſons given on both ſides are not deſpicable. It is urged againſt the reality of the fact, that the prophet, without a miracle, could never have lain ſo long on one ſide; and beſides, this ſeems to be contradicted by an after-account, of his ſitting in his houſe before the expiration of thoſe days; ſince from the fifth day of the fourth month of the fifth year, in which he began to propheſy, ch. i. 1, 2. and this order was ſeven days after that at leaſt, ch. iii. 15. to the fifth day of the ſixth month of the ſixth year, when we find him ſitting, ch. viii. 1.

---

[z] לבנה laterem, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

[a] Apud Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 7. c. 56.

[b] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 50. 2.

[c] More Nevochim, par. 2. c. 46.

1. were but four hundred and thirteen days; and if ſeven are taken out from thence, there are but four hundred and ſix; whereas the whole time of his lying for Iſraël and Judah were four hundred and thirty; and it is further obſerved, that it does not ſeem decent that the prophet ſhould be obliged really to eat ſuch bread as he was ordered to make. On the other hand it is obſerved, that the order of pourtraying the ſiege of Jeruſalem on a tile, and ſetting an iron pan for a wall, ſeem to direct to the doing of real facts, and to that this order is ſubjoined, without any mark of diſtinction; beſides, the prophet was to have this portrait in view, whilſt he was lying on his ſide, and uncover his arms, which ſeem to denote real facts; and was to propheſy, not by words, for he was to be dumb, ch. iii. 26. but by facts; and he was to do all this in the ſight of his people; and if the order to make a cake of bread was not to be really performed in the manner directed, there would have been no occaſion of deprecating it. The learned Witſius[d], who has collected the arguments on both ſides, is inclined to the latter; and obſerves from others, that ſome perſons have lain longer on one ſide than the prophet, without a miracle; particularly a certain paralytic nobleman, who lay ſixteen years in ſuch a manner: and as for the computation of time, Cocceius is of opinion, that the forty days for Judah, are included in the three hundred and ninety for Iſrael; and which indeed ſeem to be the whole number, ℣. 9. and which at once ſolves the difficulty; and beſides, the force of the objection may be taken off by obſerving, that the fifth year might be intercalated, and conſiſt of thirteen months, which was common with the Jews to have a Veadar or intercalated month: nor is it diſhonourable nor unuſual for the Lord to call his dear ſervants ſometimes to hard and diſagreeable ſervice, as both theſe caſes ſeem to be, when he has ends of his own glory, and the good of others, to be anſwered thereby. And the lying on the left ſide for the ſins of the houſe of Iſrael was, as Jarchi thinks, becauſe that Samaria, which was the head of the ten tribes, lay to the left of Jeruſalem; ſee ch. xvi. 46. or rather, becauſe the left hand is not ſo honourable as the right; it may ſhew, that the Lord had not ſuch an eſteem for Iſrael as for Judah. And lay the iniquity of the houſe of Iſrael upon it; not to atone for it, but to ſhow what was the cauſe of their captivity; for herein the prophet was no type of Chriſt, but perſonated the people of Iſrael; who had been grievouſly ſinning againſt God, during the term of time hereafter mentioned, and now would be puniſhed for it; for by iniquity is meant the puniſhment of it, which is often the ſenſe of the word uſed; ſee Gen. iv. 13. According to the number of the days that thou ſhalt lie upon it, thou ſhalt bear their iniquity; which are particularly declared in the following verſe.

℣. 5. For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, &c.] Or the iniquity which for ſo many years they have been guilty of; that is, the puniſhment of it: according to the number of the days, a day for a year, three hundred and ninety days; which ſignify three hundred and ninety years; and ſo many years there were from the revolt of the ten tribes from Rehoboam, and the ſetting up the calves at Dan and Bethel, to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; which may be reckoned thus: the apoſtacy was in the fourth year of Rehoboam, ſo that there remained thirteen years of his reign, for he reigned ſeventeen years; Abijah his ſucceſſor reigned three years; Aſa forty-one; Jehoſhaphet twenty-five; Joram eight; Ahaziah one; Athaliah ſeven; Joaſh forty; Amaziah twenty-nine; Uzziah fifty-two; Jotham ſixteen; Ahaz ſixteen; Hezekiah twenty-nine; Manaſſeh fifty-five; Amon two; Joſiah thirty-one; Jehoahaz three months; Jehoiakim eleven years; Jeconiah three months and ten days; and Zedekiah eleven years; in all three hundred and ninety years. Tho' Grotius reckons them from the fall of Solomon, to the carrying captive of the ten tribes by Salmaneſer. According to Jerom, both the three hundred and ninety days, and the forty days, were figurative of the captivities of Iſrael and Judah. The captivity of Iſrael, or the ten tribes, began under Pekah king of Iſrael, 1 Kings xv. 29. when many places in the kingdom were waſted; from whence, to the fortieth year of Ahaſuerus, when the Jews were entirely ſet at liberty, were three hundred and ninety years[e]; and the captivity of Judah began in the firſt year of Jeconiah, which, to the firſt of Cyrus, were forty years. The Jewiſh writers make theſe years to be the time of the idolatry of theſe people. In their Chronicle[f] they ſay, from hence we learn that Iſrael provoked the Lord to anger, from the time they entered into the land, until they went out of it, three hundred and ninety years. Which, according to Jarchi and Kimchi, are to be reckoned partly in the times of the judges, and partly in the times of the kings of Iſrael; in the times of the former, a hundred and eleven years; from Micah, till the ark was carried captive in the days of Eli, forty years; and from the time of Jeroboam to Hoſhea, two hundred and forty; which make three hundred and ninety-one: but the laſt of Hoſhea is not of the number, ſince it was in the ninth year of his reign the city of Samaria was taken. So Jarchi. Kimchi's reckoning is different. Abarbinel is of opinion, that theſe years deſcribe the four hundred and thirty years of Iſrael's bondage in Egypt; tho', he ſays, they may be underſtood of the time of the diviſion of the kingdom under Rehoboam, from whence, to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, were three hundred and ninety years; which ſenſe is beſt, and is what is firſt given. So ſhalt thou bear the iniquity of the houſe of Iſrael; as many days as anſwer to theſe years; by the houſe of Iſrael is meant not merely the ten tribes, who had been carried captive long before this time, but ſuch of them alſo as were mixed with the tribes of Judah and Benjamin.

℣. 6. And when thou haſt accompliſhed them, &c.] The three hundred and ninety days, by lying ſo long on the left ſide, bearing the ſins of the houſe of Iſrael in this way; or as Cocceius renders the words, and thou ſhalt accompliſh them, and thou ſhalt lie, &c[g]. that is, thou ſhalt ſo accompliſh theſe days, that thou mayeſt lie thro' forty days on the right hand, and then make bare thine arm, and propheſy againſt Jeruſalem; for he thinks the forty days are part of the three hundred and ninety, as before obſerved: and ſo Piſcator's note is, when thou ſhalt accompliſh, &c. namely, when there ſhall remain yet forty days, as appears by comparing ℣. 9. with this and the fifth; ſo Polanus interprets the paſſage: then lie again on thy right ſide; that is, for Judah; which tribe, as Jarchi obſerves, lay to the ſouth, and ſo to the right of Jeruſalem; ſee ch. xvi. 46. or rather, the prophet lay on the right ſide for Judah, becauſe more honourable, and in greater eſteem with the Lord; nor were their ſins ſo many, or continued in ſo long, as thoſe of the ten tribes; and therefore they, and the puniſhment of them, are borne a leſs time by the prophet, as follows: and thou ſhalt bear the iniquity of the houſe of Judah forty days; which ſome think anſwers to the forty years of Manaſſeh's evil reign; others reckon from the thirteenth of Joſiah, to the end of Zedekiah; and others from the eighteenth of Joſiah, to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, which was five years after the carrying of Zedekiah captive: I have appointed thee each day for a year; which is not only the key for the underſtanding of the forty days, but alſo the three hundred and ninety.

---

[d] Miſcel. Sacr. tom. 1. l. 1. c. 12. §. 14, 15, &c.

[e] Vid. Lyra in loc.

[f] Seder Olam Rabba, c. 26. p. 73.

[g] וכלית את אלה ושכבת & abſolves hos, & decumbes, Cocceius, Starckius; & conſummabis hæc, & jacebis, Montanus.

℣. 7. Therefore thou ſhalt ſet thy face toward the ſiege at Jeruſalem, &c.] All the while he was lying either on the left ſide or the right, his face was to be directed to the ſiege of Jeruſalem, pourtrayed upon the tile, and to all the preparations made for that purpoſe, to ſhew that all had reference to that, and that it would certainly be; for as the prophet repreſented the Chaldean army, the directing and ſetting his face to the ſiege, ſhows their reſolution and inflexibleneſs, that they were determined upon taking the city, and nothing ſhould divert them from it: and thine arm ſhall be uncovered; which was uſual in fighting in thoſe times and countries; for, wearing long garments, they were obliged to turn them up on the arm, or lay them aſide, that they might more expeditiouſly handle their weapons, and engage with the enemy; in this form the ſoldiers in Trajan's column are figured fighting; and it is related, that the Africans uſed to fight with their arms uncovered[h]; thus Scanderbeg in later times uſed to fight the Turks. The deſign of the phraſe is to ſhow, how ready, diligent, and expeditious the Chaldeans would be, in carrying on the ſiege. The Targum renders it, "thou ſhalt ſtrengthen thine arm;" and ſo do the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic verſions: and thou ſhalt propheſy againſt it; meaning not ſo much by words, if at all, but by theſe actions, geſtures, and habit; for they all foretold what would certainly come to paſs.

℣. 8. And behold I will lay bands upon thee, &c.] Repreſenting either the beſieged, ſignifying that they ſhould be taken and bound as he was; or rather the beſiegers, the Chaldean army, which ſhould be ſo held by the power and providence of God, that they ſhould not break up the ſiege until they had taken the city, and fulfilled the whole will and pleaſure of God; for theſe bands were an emblem of the firm and unalterable decree of God, reſpecting the ſiege and taking of Jeruſalem; and ſo the Targum paraphraſes it, "and lo the decree "of my word is upon thee, as a band of ropes;" and to this ſenſe Jarchi interprets it; and which is confirmed by what follows: and thou ſhalt not turn thee from one ſide to another, till thou haſt ended the days of thy ſiege; ſhewing that the Chaldean army ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, until it was taken; for tho' upon the report of the Egyptian army coming againſt them, they went forth to meet it; yet they returned to Jeruſalem, and never left the ſiege till the city fell into their hands, according to the purpoſe and appointment of God. Kimchi obſerves, that the word for ſiege is in the plural number, and ſignifies both the ſiege of Samaria, and the ſiege of Jeruſalem; but the former was over many years before this time: by this it appears, that the ſiege of Jeruſalem ſhould laſt three hundred and ninety days; indeed, from the beginning to the end of it, were ſeventeen months, 2 Kings xxv. 1—4. but the ſiege being raiſed by the army of the king of Egypt for ſome time, Jer. xxxvii. 5. may reduce it to thirteen months or thereabout; for three hundred and ninety days are not only intended to ſignify the years of Iſrael's ſin and wickedneſs, but alſo to ſhew how long the city would be beſieged; and ſo long the prophet in this ſymbolical way was beſieging it.

℣. 9. Take thou alſo unto thee, wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentils, and millet, and fitches, &c.] The firſt of theſe was commonly uſed to make bread of; in caſe of want and poverty, barley was uſed; but for the reſt, they were for cattel, and never uſed for the food of men, but in a time of great ſcarcity; wherefore this was deſigned to denote the famine, that ſhould attend the ſiege of Jeruſalem; ſee 2 Kings xxv. 3: and put them in one veſſel; that is, the flour of them when ground, in order to be mixed and kneaded together, and make one dough thereof; which mixed bread was a ſign of a ſore famine: the Septuagint call it an earthen veſſel; a kneading trough ſeems to be deſigned: and make thee bread thereof, according to the number of the days that thou ſhalt lie upon thy ſide; the left ſide, on which he was to lie three hundred and ninety days; and ſo as much bread was to be made, as would ſuffice for that time; or ſo many loaves were to be made as there were days, a loaf for a day: three hundred and ninety days ſhalt thou eat thereof; no mention is made of the forty days, perhaps they are underſtood, a part being put for the whole; or they were included in the three hundred and ninety days. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions read only an hundred and ninety days.

℣. 10. And thy meat which thou ſhalt eat, ſhall be by weight, twenty ſhekels a day, &c.] To eat bread by weight was a ſign of a grievous famine; ſee Lev. xxvi. 26. a ſhekel, according to Joſephus[i], weighed four Attic drams, or half an ounce, wherefore twenty ſhekels weighed ten ounces; ſo that the bread the prophet had to eat was but ten ounces a day: from time to time ſhalt thou eat it; at the certain time of eating, or but once a day; from a ſet-time in one day, to the ſame in another; as from morning to morning, or from noon to noon, or from evening to evening; ſee Jer. xxxvii. 21.

℣. 11. Thou ſhalt drink alſo water by meaſure, &c.] Not wine, but water; and this not as much as he would, but a certain meaſure; which ſhows great want of it, and expreſſes a very diſtreſſed condition; ſee Lam. v. 4: the ſixth part of an hin; an hin held twelve logs, or ſeventy-two egg-ſhells, or about three quarts of our meaſure; and the ſixth part of one were two logs, or twelve egg-ſhells, and about a pint of our meaſure; ſo that it was but a pint of water a day that the prophet was allowed, as a token of the great ſcarcity of it in the ſiege of Jeruſalem: from time to time ſhalt thou drink; as before.

℣. 12. And thou ſhalt eat it as barley cakes, &c.] That is, the bread made of wheat, barley, beans, lentils, millet, and fitches, was to be made in the form of barley cakes, and to be baked as they; not in an oven, but under aſhes; and theſe aſhes not of wood, or ſtraw, or turf, but as follows: and thou ſhalt bake it with dung, that cometh out of men, in their ſight; the prophet was to take human dung, and dry it, and then cover the cakes or loaves of his mixed bread with it, and burn it over them, and with it bake it; which muſt be a very diſagreeable taſk to him, and make the food very nauſeous, both to himſelf, and to the Jews, in whoſe ſight it was done; and this ſhows ſcarcity of fuel, and the ſeverity of the famine; that they had not fuel to bake with, or could not ſtay till it was baked in an oven, and therefore took this method; as well as points at what they were to eat when carried captive, as follows:

---

[h] Vid. Lydium de re militari, l. 4. c. 3. p. 160.

[i] Antiqu. l. 3. c. 8. §. 2.

℣. 13. And the Lord ſaid, even thus ſhall the children of Iſrael, &c.] Not the ten tribes only, or thoſe who were among the other two, but all the Jews in captivity: eat the defiled bread among the Gentiles, whither I will drive them; ſo called, not becauſe mixed, but baked in the above manner; which was a ſymbol of the defilements which they ſhould contract upon various accounts, by dwelling among the Gentiles; ſo that this foretels their captivity; their pollution among the nations of the world; and that they ſhould not be the holy people to the Lord they had been, and had boaſted of. The Jews [k] cite this paſſage to prove, that he that eats bread without drying his hands, is as if he eat defiled bread.

℣. 14. Then ſaid I, Ah, Lord God! &c.] The interjection Ah, is expreſſive of ſighing and groaning, as Jarchi; or of deprecation, as the Targum, which paraphraſes it, "and I ſaid, receive my "prayer, O Lord God:" behold my ſoul hath not been polluted; not meaning that his ſoul had not been polluted with ſin, or with an evil thought, as Kimchi interprets it; but by his ſoul he means the inward part of his body, his ſtomach and belly; which had not been defiled by taking in meats which were unclean by the law, as follows: for from my youth up even till now, have I not eaten of that which dieth of itſelf, or is torn in pieces; theſe were forbidden to be eaten by the law; and ſuch that did were defiled, and obliged to bathing in water. Lev. xvii. 15, 16. and from thoſe the prieſts more eſpecially were careful to abſtain, as Kimchi obſerves; and ſuch an one was the prophet; ſee Acts x. 14: neither came there abominable fleſh into my mouth; corrupt or putrified, or whatſoever was unclean by law, as ſwines fleſh, or any other. The argument is, that ſince he had never eat of any thing forbidden by the law of God; he could by no means think of eating that which was abhorrent to nature; as bread baked with mens dung was.

℣. 15. Then he ſaid to me, &c.] The Lord hearkened to the prophet's prayer and argument, and makes ſome abatement and alteration in the charge he gave him: lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung; that is, allowed him to make uſe of the one inſtead of the other, in baking his mingled bread: thou ſhalt prepare thy bread therewith; having gathered cows dung, and dried it, he was to burn it, and bake his bread with it, which is meant by preparing it. In ſome parts of our nation, where fuel is ſcarce, cows dung is made uſe of; it is gathered and plaiſtered on the walls of houſes, and being dried in clots, is taken and burnt.

℣. 16. Moreover he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] What follows opens the deſign, and ſhews what was intended by the ſymbol of the miſcellany bread, baked with cow-dung, the prophet was to eat by meaſure, as well as drink water by meaſure; namely the ſore famine that ſhould be in Jeruſalem at the time of the ſiege: behold I will break the ſtaff of bread in Jeruſalem; that is, take away bread, which is the ſtaff of life, the ſupport of it, and which ſtrengthens man's heart; and alſo the nouriſhing virtue and efficacy from what they had. The ſenſe is, that the Lord would both deprive them of a ſufficiency of bread, the nouriſhment of man; and not ſuffer the little they had to be nouriſhing to them; what they ate would not ſatisfy them, nor do them much good; ſee Lev. xxvi. 26. Iſ. iii. 1: and they ſhall eat bread by weight, and with care; that they might not eat too much at a time, but have ſomething for to-morrow; and to cauſe their little ſtock to laſt the longer, not knowing how long the ſiege would be: and they ſhall drink water by meaſure, and with aſtoniſhment; that ſuch a judgment ſhould fall upon them, who thought themſelves the people of God, and the favourites of heaven.

℣. 17. That they may want bread and water, &c.] Or, becauſe they ſhall want [l], &c. therefore they ſhall eat the one, and drink the other, by weight; or they ſhall do this till there ſhall be none to eat and drink: and be aſtoniſhed one with another; when they ſhall find they can't relieve one another; and not knowing what method to take for the ſupport of nature: and conſume away for their iniquity; their fleſh upon them black thro' famine, putrid and noiſome; and they waſting, pining and conſuming; reduced to ſkin and bones; and diſagreeable to look upon; and all becauſe of their ſins and iniquities.

CHAP. V.

THIS chapter is of the ſame argument with the former; and contains a type of Jeruſalem's deſtruction; an explanation of that type; what were the reaſons of God's judgments on that city; and the nature, riſe and end of them. The type is in ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4. the explanation of that type is in ℣. 5. the reaſons of the ſevere judgments threatened, are changing the ſtatutes of the Lord, and not walking in them, and defiling the ſanctuary with their abominations, ℣. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. an account of the judgments of God, anſwerable to the ſeveral parts in the type, ℣. 12. the ends of theſe judgments are with reſpect to God, the accompliſhment of his anger, and the ſatisfaction of his juſtice; with reſpect to the Jews, bringing them to an acknowledgment that he had ſpoken in his zeal; and with reſpect to the nations, their inſtruction and aſtoniſhment, ℣. 13, 14, 15. and the chapter is concluded with an aſſurance that theſe judgments would be ſent, ℣. 16, 17.

℣. 1. And thou, ſon of man, take thee a ſharp knife, &c.] Or ſword [m]. The word ſignifies any ſharp inſtrument, by which any thing is cut off, or cut aſunder; what is here meant is explained by the following: take thee a barber's razor. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions read this in conjunction with the former, thus, take thee a knife, or ſword, ſharper than a barber's razor; and ſo the Syriac verſion, take thee a ſword ſharp as a barber's razor; this ſharp knife, ſword, or razor, ſignifies, as Jarchi interprets it, Nebuchadnezzar; and very rightly; ſo the king of Aſſyria is called in Iſ. vii. 20: and cauſe it to paſs upon thine head, and upon thy beard; the head was a ſymbol of the city of Jeruſalem, the metropolis of Judea; the beard, of the cities, towns and villages about it; and the hair of both, of the common people; compared to hair for their numbers, for their levity and unſteadineſs, and for their being the beauty and ornament of the places where they lived; and the ſhaving of them, denotes their diſgrace and deſtruction, and mourning on account thereof: then take the balances to weigh and divide; the hair. The Syriac verſion adds, into three parts; ſignifying, that ſeveral diſtinct puniſhments would be inflicted on them, and theſe according to the righteous judgment of God; balances being a ſymbol of juſtice.

---

[k] T. Bab. Sota, fol. 4. 2.

[l] למען eo quod, Munſter, Vatablus; propterea, Tigurine verſion.

[m] חרב gladium, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius.

ỳ. 2. Thou ſhalt burn with fire a third part in the midſt of the city, &c.] Of Jeruſalem, as pourtrayed upon the tile, ch. iv. 1. for the prophet was now in Chaldea. The burning of the third part of the hair with fire, denotes ſuch who were deſtroyed by the peſtilence and famine during the ſiege; ſee Lam. v. 10. or it denotes the burning of the city itſelf, when the ſiege was over; ſince it follows: when the days of the ſiege are fulfilled; for when it was taken, it was burnt with fire, Jer. lii. 13: and thou ſhalt take a third part, and ſmite about it with a knife; which deſigns thoſe that fled out of the city when it was broken up, and were purſued after, and overtook by the Chaldean army, and cut off by the ſword, Jer. lii. 7, 8: and a third part thou ſhalt ſcatter in the wind; which intends thoſe that fled, and were diſperſed into ſeveral countries, as Moab, Ammon, and eſpecially Egypt, whither many went along with Johanan the ſon of Kareah, Jer. xliii. 5, 6, 7: and I will draw out a ſword after them; and deſtroy them; which, as it was threatened, Jer. xlii. 16. and xliv. 27. ſo it was accompliſhed when Egypt was ſubdued by Nebuchadnezzar. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions, in every clauſe, read a fourth part, inſtead of a third; but wrongly.

ỳ. 3. Thou ſhalt alſo take thereof a few in number, &c.] Theſe are they that were left in the land of Judea by Nebuzaradan, for vine-dreſſers and huſbandmen, and ſuch as returned out of Egypt into the land of Judah, Jer. xliv. 28. and lii. 16: and bind them in thy ſkirts; in the pockets of them; ſignifying both the very ſmall number of them, and their preſervation. Jarchi and Kimchi interpret theſe of thoſe that were carried captive to Babylon, and lived there, and were preſerved, and returned again.

ỳ. 4. Then take of them again, &c.] Of that ſmall number preſerved: and caſt them into the midſt of the fire, and burn them in the fire; this was fulfilled in Gedaliah and the Jews that were with him, over whom the king of Babylon had made him governor, who were ſlain by Iſhmael, Jer. xli. 1—7: for thereof ſhall a fire come forth into all the houſe of Iſrael; from this barbarous murder of Gedaliah and his men, judgment came upon all the houſe of Iſrael; a war commenced between Iſhmael and Johanan the ſon of Kareah; and afterwards Nebuzaradan carried captive great numbers of them that were left in the land. The Syriac and Arabic verſions render it, from theſe ſhall a fire come forth, &c. which Jarchi interprets of theſe intimations given the prophet, from whence judgments ſhould come upon all the houſe of Iſrael. It may be underſtood of thoſe that were left in the land, and of ſuch who returned from the captivity; for whoſe ſins, and thoſe of their poſterity, the wrath of God came forth upon all the houſe of Iſrael, to the utter deſtruction of their nation, city and temple, by Titus Veſpaſian.

ỳ. 5. Thus ſaith the Lord God, this is Jeruſalem, &c.] A type or ſign of it; it may refer both to the former and latter type. It is the city of Jeruſalem that is deſigned by the city pourtrayed upon the tile; and the ſame is ſignified by the head of the prophet that was to be ſhaved; that being not only the chief city of Judea, but of the whole world, as follows: I have ſet it in the midſt of the nations; as the chief of them; and diſtinguiſhed it from them by peculiar favours and bleſſings, natural and ſpiritual; being ſeated in a land flowing with milk and honey; and having the houſe and worſhip of God in it; and where were the ſymbols of his preſence, and his word and ordinances; and therefore ſhould have excelled them in true religion, devotion and holineſs, and ſet an example to them. The Jews generally underſtand this of the natural ſituation of Jeruſalem. Jarchi interprets it, of the middle of the world; as if it was mathematically placed in the center of the earth. Kimchi ſays, it was in the midſt of the continent; and ſo its air was better than others; and theſe ſort of writers [n] often ſpeak of the land of Iſrael being in the navel or center of the earth; they ſay [o], that the Sanhedrim ſat in the middle of the world; and therefore is compared to the navel, Cant vii. 1. becauſe it ſat in the temple, which was in the middle of the world; but the former ſenſe is beſt; tho' Jerom gives in to the latter: and countries that are round about her; this is a propoſition of itſelf; the former clauſe being diſtinguiſhed from it by the accent Athnach; and ſhould be rendered thus, and the countries are, or were round about her [p]; on the eaſt was Aſia, on the weſt Europe, on the ſouth Africa and Libya, and on the north Babylon, Scythia, Armenia, Perſia and Pontus; and was more conſpicuous, eminent and honourable than them all, having greater privileges, prerogatives and excellencies; and therefore ſhould have exceeded them in its regard to the laws and ſtatutes of God, which ſhe did not; hence this is ſaid, in order to upbraid her for her ingratitude, as appears by the following words.

ỳ. 6. And ſhe hath changed my judgments into wickedneſs, more than the nations, &c.] So they changed their glory for that which did not profit; and the glory of the incorruptible God, into an image made like to corruptible man; and the truth of God into a lie, Jer. ii. 11. Rom. i. 23, 25. or, for wickedneſs [q]; for judgments and laws that were not good, and which to obſerve was wickedneſs. The word rendered changed, ſignifies to rebel againſt, or to tranſgreſs; and the ſenſe may be, ſhe, that is, Jeruſalem, has rebelled againſt my judgments, and tranſgreſſed [r] them in a wicked manner, even to a greater degree than the nations of the world. The Targum and Jarchi interpret it changed, as we do: and my ſtatutes more than the countries that are round about her. Judgments and ſtatutes are the ſame laws and ordinances of worſhip, being juſt and righteous, and firm and unalterable; unleſs it ſhould rather be thought, that judgments belong to the moral law, being given forth by the Lord as a judge, and founded upon judgment and righteouſneſs; and ſtatutes to the ceremonial law, being of poſitive inſtitution and appointment, and to laſt ſo long as it was the pleaſure of the lawgiver: for they have refuſed my judgments and my ſtatutes; they refuſed to comply with them, and to yield an obedience to them, and that with loathing, diſdain and contempt, as the word [s] ſignifies: they have not walked in them; they did not make them the rule of their walk and converſation; they ſhewed no regard to them; they went out of the way of them, into crooked paths, with the workers of iniquity.

---

[n] Kimchi in Ezek. xxxviii. 12.

[o] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 37. 1. & Gloſſ. in ib.

[p] וסביבותיה ארצות & circa eam erant terræ, Cocceius.

[q] לרשעה ut improbe ageret, Cocceius.

[r] תמר tranſgreſſa eſt, vel rebellis fuit, Calvin; refractaria fuit, Cocceius.

℣. 7. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Having obſerved their ſins, and which are ſtill enlarged upon, the Lord proceeds to denounce his judgments againſt them: becauſe ye multiplied more than the nations that are round about you; not in numbers, nor in wealth and riches, or in bleſſings and privileges, and therefore grew wanton and forgetful; tho' this was true; but in ſins and wickedneſs, which abounded among them, and in which they exceeded the nations round about them; and ſo the Targum paraphraſes it, "becauſe that ye have ſinned more than the people that are round about you:" and have not walked in my ſtatutes, neither have kept my judgments; which is repeated to ſhew the certainty of fact, and how much the Lord reſented it: neither have done according to the judgments of the nations that are round about you. The Syriac verſion leaves out the negative particle לא; and renders the words thus, but ye have done the judgments of the nations which are round about you; and it may be obſerved, that it is omitted in a parallel text, Ezek. xi. 12. and this is what the Jews are often reproved for, that they followed the laws and cuſtoms of the Gentiles, and worſhipped their gods; and the oppoſition to the preceding clauſe ſeems to require this ſenſe; but the retaining the negative particle is confirmed by the Targum, Maſora, and the Septuagint and Arabic verſions; and alſo by the Talmud [t], which reconciles the paſſage with the parallel text beforementioned, thus, "according to thoſe things which are right among them (the Gentiles) ye have not done; but according to what are corrupt among them, ye have done;" and the meaning is, either that they did not walk according to the law and light of nature, which the Gentiles had, and attended to, Rom. ii. 14, 15. or that they did not follow them in their conduct and behaviour; they were not ſo zealous for the true God, as the heathens were for their idols; they were not ſo tenacious of the laws and worſhip of the true God of Iſrael, as the Gentiles were of their ſuperſtitious rites and ceremonies; the Gentiles did not change their gods, and manner of worſhip, but retained what they received from their anceſtors time immemorial; but the Jews changed their glory for that which did not profit, Jer. ii. 11.

℣. 8. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, behold I, even I, am againſt thee, &c.] Or, behold I am againſt thee, even I [u]; who am the Lord God omnipotent, a great king, and a dreadful one; and a terrible thing it is, for a people to have the mighty God againſt them; or for any to fall into the hands of the living God: this is repeated to ſhew that it certainly was ſo; and that the Lord was ſet upon it, and determined to come forth againſt them in the way of his judgments, as follows: and will execute judgments in the midſt of thee, in the ſight of the nations; that is, inflict puniſhments upon them for their diſregard to his righteous judgments, which ſhould take place in the midſt of them, and conſume them all around; and ſhould be ſo manifeſt, as to be ſeen by all the nations about them.

℣. 9. And I will do in thee, that which I have not done, &c.] In any other nation, or to any other people; not in the old world, when the flood was brought upon the world of the ungodly; not in Sodom and Gomorrha, when they were deſtroyed by fire from heaven; not in Egypt, when he inflicted his plagues on Pharaoh and his people; nor among the Canaanites, when they were drove out of their land for their abominations: and whereunto I will not do any more the like; at leaſt, not of a long time; and beſides, this may not only refer to the ſiege of Jeruſalem by the Chaldeans, but alſo by the Romans: becauſe of all thine abominations; the wickedneſſes of all ſorts that were committed among them, which were abominable to the Lord, and particularly their idolatries; theſe were the cauſes why he would do, or ſuffer to be done, things that were never ſeen, known or heard of before; and are as follow:

℣. 10. Therefore the fathers ſhall eat the ſons in the midſt of thee, &c.] Which was long ago threatened by the Lord, and propheſied of by Moſes, Lev. xxvi. 27. Deut. xxviii. 53, 55, 57. and was fulfilled at ſeveral times in the people of Iſrael; as at the ſiege of Samaria, 2 Kings vi. 28, 29. at the ſiege of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar, Lam. iv. 10. and at the ſiege of the ſame city by Titus Veſpaſian, as Joſephus [w] relates; for tho' theſe inſtances only ſhew that mothers eat their children, yet no doubt the fathers took part with them; and if mothers, who are naturally more tender, could do this, it is much more reaſonable to ſuppoſe that fathers did the ſame: and the ſons ſhall eat their fathers; this, tho' no where recorded, yet doubtleſs was done; it being as reaſonable to think that a ſon might eat his father, as a father his ſon; tho' both monſtrouſly ſhocking: and I will execute judgments in thee; puniſhments, ſuch as peſtilence, famine and ſword, after-mentioned: and the whole remnant of thee will I ſcatter into all the winds; that is, thoſe that remain, and are not cut off, by the above judgments, ſhall be carried captive into Babylon, or be diſperſed into Egypt, Ammon, Moab, and other places: this had a full accompliſhment, in the diſperſion of the Jews into the ſeveral parts of the world, when they were deſtroyed by the Romans.

℣. 11. Wherefore as I live, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This is a form of an oath, and ſhews that what is after-ſaid ſhould certainly be done; God would not repent of it, nor revoke it: ſurely becauſe

---

[s] Verbum מאס ſignificat ſpernere, reprobare, rejicere, idque ex contemptu & faſtidio, Polanus.

[t] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 39. 2.

[u] הנני עליך גם אני ecce ego ad te, etiam ego, Pagninus, Montanus; ecce ego contra te, etiam ego, Starckius.

[w] De bello Jud. l. 6. c. 3. §. 4. Ed. Hudſon.

cauſe thou haſt defiled my ſanctuary, with all thy deteſtable things, and with all thine abominations; that is, with their idols and idolatrous worſhip, which were deteſtable and abominable to the Lord; ſo Manaſſeh not only built altars for Baal in the houſe of the Lord, but ſet up in it a graven image of the grove, 2 Kings xxi. 3, 4, 7: therefore will I alſo diminiſh thee; as they leſſened his glory by ſuch abominable actions, ſo he threatens that he would leſſen their privileges and bleſſings; as they took away from him the worſhip and honour that were due to him, ſo he would take away from them their civil and church-ſtate, his ſanctuary, word and ordinances, and deprive them of every thing that was valuable and excellent. The Targum paraphraſes it, "I will cut off the ſtrength of thine arm;" weaken her power: neither ſhall mine eye ſpare, neither will I have any pity; when in the greateſt miſery and diſtreſs. The Targum is, "my word ſhall not ſpare," &c.

ỳ. 12. A third part of them ſhall die with the peſtilence, &c.] This, with what follows, explains the diviſion of the hair into the three parts, and what was done with them; and ſhows, that the burning of one third part, denotes their being deſtroyed by the peſtilence, mentioned along with burning coals, Hab. iii. 5. and by famine, as follows: and with famine ſhall they be conſumed in the midſt of thee; and tho' there is no account of the former, yet there is of the latter; and no doubt but the peſtilence raged, as well as the famine, at the ſiege of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar: and a third part ſhall fall by the ſword round about thee; ſignified by the third part of the hair, ſmitten with a knife; and intends ſuch as periſhed by the ſword of the Chaldeans at the taking of the city, and when they fled out of it; and ſo are properly ſaid to fall round about it: and I will ſcatter a third part into all the winds; the greateſt part of which were carried into Babylon, and others into other parts; ſee the note on ỳ. 2: and I will draw out a ſword after them; particularly after them that went into Egypt. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions read a fourth part in each clauſe, as before; and make it out thus, a fourth part of thee ſhall be conſumed with death (the peſtilence); and a fourth part of thee ſhall be conſumed with famine in the midſt of thee; and a fourth part of thee I will ſcatter to every wind; and a fourth part of thee ſhall fall by the ſword round about thee; and I will draw out the ſword after them.

ỳ. 13. Thus ſhall mine anger be accompliſhed, &c.] Finiſhed, perfected, conſummated, by bringing the above judgments upon them, peſtilence, famine and ſword, and by ſcattering them to every wind: what had been threatened long, and only ſome drops of it were let fall in times paſt, now was poured forth to the uttermoſt: and I will cauſe my fury to reſt upon them; to continue and abide upon them, and not move, at leaſt, for the ſpace of threeſcore and ten years; ſee Zech. i. 12: and I will be comforted; by taking vengeance on them; ſo ſatisfying his juſtice, and eaſing him of his enemies; ſee Iſ. i. 24. a ſpeech after the manner of men; who, when they have been affronted, and have avenged themſelves, are eaſy in their minds, and ſatisfied: and they ſhall know that I the Lord have ſpoken it in my zeal; that is, they ſhall find by experience, that what the Lord had ſpoken by his prophets, and had threatened to bring upon them, was ſaid in earneſt, and aroſe from a jealouſy for his own glory; this will be a clear caſe, and out of queſtion: when I have accompliſhed my fury in them; by the utter deſtruction of them, as follows:

ỳ. 14. Moreover I will make thee waſte, &c.] That is, their land; which being without inhabitants, lay untilled; and ſo became barren and unfruitful: and a reproach among the nations round about thee, in the ſight of all that paſs by; who, ſeeing it in this deſolate condition, ſhall throw out their taunts and jeers upon it, as in Lam. ii. 15, 16.

ỳ. 15. So it ſhall be a reproach, and a taunt, &c.] The ſubject of the reproaches and taunts of the enemy; ſee Jer. xxiv. 9. this is repeated for the greater confirmation of it: an inſtruction; or diſcipline, or correction [x]. The meaning is, that the Gentiles ſeeing the judgments of God upon the Jews, would hereby learn righteouſneſs, forſake their ſins, amend their ways, and fear the Lord: and an aſtoniſhment unto the nations that are round about thee; being amazed that ſuch judgments ſhould fall upon a people that had been ſo highly favoured of God; and at their ſtupidity, hardneſs and incorrigibleneſs under them: when I ſhall execute judgments in thee, in anger, and in fury, and in furious rebukes; a heap of words, not only denoting the certainty of divine judgments, but the greatneſs and fierceneſs of divine wrath, in the execution of them; that theſe were not fatherly chaſtiſements, rebukes in love, but the effects of vindictive juſtice: I the Lord have ſpoken it; or thoſe things, as the Arabic verſion; and as ſure as I have ſpoken, I will do. The Targum is, "I the Lord have decreed in my word;" and ſo in ỳ. 13. where it is added, and I will confirm or accompliſh.

ỳ. 16. When I ſhall ſend upon them the evil arrows of famine, &c.] Either famine itſelf, which is as an arrow; it is taken out of the quiver of the Lord of hoſts, and is ſhot by him; and moves ſwiftly when it has a commiſſion; and is very deſtructive: or arrows which bring on a famine, ſuch as drought, exceſſive rains, blaſting, mildew, locuſts, &c. or arrows which the famine brings, as leanneſs, faintneſs, blackneſs and death; and in either ſenſe, are evil ones; and are ſent of God for the following end: which ſhall be for their deſtruction, and which I will ſend to deſtroy you; God's deſign in ſending them was to deſtroy, and that was anſwered; and a very deſtroying arrow famine is, and therefore called evil: and I will increaſe the famine upon you; or gather [y] it upon, or againſt you; as if it was an army with bows and arrows: and will break your ſtaff of bread; take away the virtue from the little they had, that that ſhould not nouriſh and ſatisfy; ſee the note on ch. iv. 16.

ỳ. 17. So will I ſend upon you famine, and evil beaſts, &c.] Famine is repeated for the further confirmation of it; and evil beaſts are added, by whom are meant, not the Chaldeans, comparable to ſuch; but literally, lions, wolves, bears, &c. which are threatened the Jews, in caſe of diſobedience, Lev. xxvi. 22. and which ſometimes were ſent, 2 Kings xvii. 24: and they ſhall bereave thee; that is, of her children, whom the evil beaſts ſhould deſtroy; they not being able to defend themſelves againſt them, as men can: and peſtilence and blood ſhall paſs thro' thee, and I will bring the ſword upon thee; the peſtilence, famine, ſword, which is meant by blood, and evil beaſts, are the Lord's four ſore judgments; ſee ch. xiv. 21: I the Lord have ſpoken it; who was able to perform it, and did, both at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar and by Titus.

---

[x] מוסר diſciplina, Pagninus; caſtigatio, Montanus, Vatablus, Starckius.

[y] אסף עליכם famem congregabo ſuper vos, V. L. Pagninus; famem colligam ſuper vos, Montanus, Polanus, Starckius.

CHAP. VI.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy of the deſolation of the whole land of Iſrael, and a promiſe that a remnant ſhould eſcape, with a lamentation for the ſad deſtruction, ſignified by ſome geſtures of the prophet. The order to the prophet to deliver out the prophecy, is in ℣. 1, 2. the ſeveral parts of the land of Iſrael or Judea, to which the prophecy is directed, are ſignified by mountains, hills, rivers and valleys, on which the ſword ſhould be brought, ℣. 3. the deſolation is deſcribed, and the cauſe of it ſuggeſted, the idolatry of the people, ℣. 4, 5, 6, 7. the promiſe of a remnant that ſhould eſcape, who ſhould remember the Lord, loath themſelves for their ſins, acknowledge him, and that his word was not in vain, is in ℣. 8, 9, 10. the lamentation, ſignified by the prophet's ſmiting with his hand, and ſtamping with his foot, for the ſins of the people, and the judgments that ſhould come upon them, is in ℣. 11. a particular enumeration of theſe judgments follows, and of the places where they ſhould be executed, ℣. 12. the end of them was to bring them to the knowledge and acknowledgment of the Lord, againſt whom they had ſinned and offended by their idolatry, as the places where their ſlain fell would ſhew, ℣. 13. and the chapter is concluded with a reſolution to bring this deſolation on them, ℣. 14.

℣. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] That is, the word of prophecy from the Lord, as the Targum; this, according to Junius, was delivered out by the prophet on a ſabbath-day, the twenty-firſt of the fifth month, and in the ſixth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity; and ſo was more than a year after the viſion at Chebar, ch. i. 1, 2.

℣. 2. Son of man, ſet thy face towards the mountains of Iſrael, &c.] Or cities of Iſrael, the inhabitants of them; not the ten tribes, for they had been carried captive long before this time, even in the times of Hezekiah; unleſs it can be thought, that this prophecy is deſigned to ſhew the reaſon of their captivity, which was their idolatry; or that it is directed to thoſe of them which remained in the land, and were mixed with the other tribes; but rather the land of Judea is intended, in which were many mountains, and one part of it was called the hill-country, Luke i. 39, 65. and the mountains are mentioned, againſt which the prophet is ordered to direct his face, and look unto; partly becauſe idolatry was much practiſed upon them; and partly to ſhew the ſtupidity of the Jews, and the unſucceſsfulneſs of prophecy among them; that it was as well, or better, to ſpeak to the mountains, than to them; for ſince they had ſo often put away the word of God from them, they were unworthy of it; wherefore ſuch a direction to the prophet carries ſome degree of indignation and reſentment: and propheſy againſt them; as that the ſword ſhould be upon them, and the high places built upon them ſhould be deſtroyed: or unto them [a]; direct the prophecy to them; ſpeak to them as if they were capable of hearing: or concerning them, as the Syriac verſion; and ſo the Targum, concerning their deſolation.

℣. 3. And ſay, ye mountains of Iſrael, hear the word of the Lord God, &c.] Since the people of the Jews would not hear the word of the Lord, the mountains are called upon to hear it; unleſs the inhabitants of the mountains are meant: thus ſaith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the vallies; theſe are addreſſed, becauſe idols were worſhipped here; as upon the mountains and hills, ſo by rivers of water, and alſo in vallies, as in the valley of Hinnom, idols were worſhipped; upon mountains and hills, becauſe they thought themſelves nearer to heaven; by rivers, becauſe of purity; and in vallies, becauſe ſhady and obſcure, and had ſomething ſolemn and venerable in them: behold I, even I will bring a ſword upon you; that is, upon the idolaters, which worſhipped in theſe places; otherwiſe different inſtruments, as pick-axes, &c. would have been more proper. The Targum paraphraſes it, "them that "kill with the ſword;" meaning the Chaldeans, who doubtleſs are intended: and I will deſtroy your high places; the temples and altars, built on high places, and devoted to idolatrous worſhip, as follows.

℣. 4. And your altars ſhall be deſolate, &c.] Being pulled down; or becauſe the prieſts and worſhippers would now be ſlain, and there would be none to attend them: and your images ſhall be broken; the images of the ſun [b]. The word for images, has its derivation from heat; and were ſo called, either from the heat of the ſun, to whoſe worſhip they were devoted; or from the heat of the love and affections of their worſhippers: and I will caſt down your ſlain men before your idols; before your dung, or your dunghil-gods [c]; for the word uſed has the ſignification of dung, ch. iv. 12. The Targum renders it, "before the carcaſe of your idols;" where they committed idolatry, there they ſhould be ſlain; which points at the cauſe of their puniſhment.

℣. 5. And I will lay the dead carcaſes of the children of Iſrael before their idols, &c.] Which is repeated for the confirmation of it: and I will ſcatter your bones round about your altars; which were reckoned a pollution of them; ſee 2 Kings xxiii. 14, 16, 20.

℣. 6. In all your dwelling places your cities ſhall be laid waſte, &c.] Which denotes that the deſolation ſhould be general, wherever they had cities and places to dwell in; the idolatry being univerſal, as is ſaid in Jer. ii. 28: and the high places ſhall be deſolate; meaning ſuch as were in cities; as before, ſuch as were built upon mountains and hills; ſee 2 Kings xxiii. 5: that your altars may be laid

---

[a] אליהם ad eos, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Montanus; ad illos, Piſcator.

[b] חמניכם ſimulacra veſtra ſolis, Pagninus; ſolaria veſtra, Vatablus; ſubdiales ſtatuæ veſtræ, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus.

[c] לפני גלוליכם coram ſtercoreis diis veſtris, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; coram ſtercoribus veſtris, Cocceius.

laid waſte and deſolate; as they muſt be, the cities being deſtroyed in which they were ſet up: and your idols may be broken and ceaſe, and your images may be cut down; ſuch as were made of gold and ſilver, or of wood and ſtone; the ſame words are uſed for them as in ℣. 4: and your works may be aboliſhed; not only the works of their hands, but of their brain; whatever they had deviſed, and was contrary to the pure word and worſhip of God.

℣. 7. And the ſlain ſhall fall in the midſt of you, &c.] The word for ſlain is in the ſingular number, which perhaps is put for the plural; and ſo the Septuagint render it; unleſs it ſhould deſign ſome principal perſon that ſhould be ſlain; but, as king Zedekiah was not ſlain when the city was taken, only his ſons and his princes, it ſeems beſt to underſtand it of the multitude that were ſlain in the midſt of the land, not only in Jeruſalem, but in all the cities of Judea; and denotes how general and public the deſtruction would be: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; the only true God, and governor of the world; who only is to be worſhipped, feared and ſerved, and not idols.

℣. 8. Yet will I leave a remnant, &c.] Not in Judea, but in Babylon, and in the countries where they ſhould be diſperſed, as follows: that ye may have ſome that ſhall eſcape the ſword among the nations; which was threatened to be drawn, and ſent after them, ch. v. 2, 12. but all ſhould not periſh by it; ſome ſhould eſcape; for this was not the time to make a full end of them: when ye ſhall be ſcattered through the countries; that is, of Egypt, Ammon, Moab and Aſſyria; for this reſpects their diſperſion at the time of the Babyloniſh captivity, and not their preſent diſperſion.

℣. 9. And they that eſcape of you ſhall remember me, &c.] Either my grace and mercy to them, as Jarchi; or the fear of me, as the Targum; and ſo return by repentance, and worſhip the Lord their God, being influenced by his kindneſs and goodneſs to them: even when among the nations, whither they ſhall be carried captive; ſo that their afflictions ſhould be ſanctified and made uſeful to them: in proſperity men are apt to forget God; in adverſity they are brought to a ſenſe of themſelves and duty; and happy it is, when chaſtening diſpenſations are teaching ones, and bring to God, and not drive from him: becauſe I am broken with their whoriſh heart, which hath departed from me; by committing ſpiritual adultery, which is idolatry. The ſenſe is, either that he was grieved at heart with their idolatry, which was the reaſon of their being carried captive, which, when they were ſenſible of, wrought repentance in them; or that he was full of compaſſion towards them; his heart was tender and pitiful towards them, tho' they departed from him in ſuch a dreadful manner, juſtly to be reſented by him. The Targum is, "I have "broken their fooliſh heart;" and ſo the Syriac and Vulgate Latin verſions, I have broken their whoriſh heart; by afflictive providences humbled them, and brought them to repentance: and with their eyes which go a whoring after their idols; they committed fornication with their heart and eyes in a ſpiritual ſenſe, as wicked men do in a natural ſenſe; ſee 2 Pet. ii. 14: and they ſhall loath themſelves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations; abominable idolatry, 1 Pet. iv. 3. when men remember God, againſt whom they have ſinned, and conſider how grieving ſin is to him; and when they are broken for it themſelves, they then loath their ſins and themſelves for it; and where all this is, there is true repentance.

℣. 10. And they ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] As in ℣. 7: and that I have not ſaid in vain; either within himſelf, in his own purpoſes and decrees; ſo the Targum, "I have not in vain "decreed in my word;" or by the mouth of the prophets: that I would do this evil unto them; in carrying them captive, and diſperſing them in other lands; for this is not the evil of ſin, but the evil of puniſhment, or of affliction.

℣. 11. Thus ſaith the Lord God, ſmite with thine hand, and ſtamp with thy foot, &c.] Theſe are geſtures of perſons in diſtreſs and agony, who, to ſhew their trouble and grief, ſmite one hand againſt the other; or ſmite with the hand upon the thigh, as in Jer. xxxi. 19: and ſtretch out, or make a diſtenſion with the foot [d]; as it is in the Hebrew text; extend their thighs; throw out their feet; ſtamp with them; beat the earth, and make it ſhake, as the Syriac verſion; all expreſſive of anguiſh and ſorrow: and ſay, alas! for all the evil abominations of the houſe of Iſrael; the word alas or wo, as the Targum, Jarchi and Kimchi, an interjection of mourning and lamentation, explains the above geſtures; and what follows ſhews the cauſe of all; namely, the ſins and abominations committed by the houſe of Iſrael; which, they being inſenſible of, and unconcerned about, the prophet is ordered to take ſuch a method to awaken them out of their ſtupidity and lethargy; and the rather, ſince the heavieſt of judgments were coming upon them: for they ſhall fall by the ſword, by the famine, and by the peſtilence; which are threatened in ch. v, 12, 16, 17. and the perſons on whom they ſhould be ſeparately executed, are mentioned in the following verſe.

℣. 12. He that is far off ſhall die of the peſtilence, &c.] That flies from the enemy into the wilderneſs, or into other countries, thinking himſelf ſafe there, the plague ſhall ſeize him, and he ſhall die of that; there's no fleeing from God, and eſcaping his hand; when he reſolves to puniſh for ſin, he has various ways to execute his wrath: and he that is near ſhall fall by the ſword; that is, out of the city, and near it, attempting to get away; but within the reach of the enemy, ſhall be ſlain by him: and he that remaineth, and is beſieged, ſhall die by the famine; that abides in the city, and does not attempt to go out; but continues in the ſiege, hoping the enemy will be obliged to depart, ſhall periſh by the grievous famine. The Targum is, "he that remains, and goes into the cities of "ſiege, ſhall die with famine:" thus will I accompliſh my fury upon them; which before had been gradually, by little and little, falling upon them, in order to bring them to repentance; but being incorrigible, wrath is brought upon them to the uttermoſt; and God fulfils the whole counſel of his will in their deſtruction.

℣. 13. Then ſhall ye know that I am the Lord, &c.] Whom they had denied, by ſerving other gods; but now by thoſe puniſhments their eyes would be opened to ſee, and be obliged to acknowledge that there was no God but the Lord: when their ſlain men ſhall be among their idols round about their altars; as is threatened ℣. 5. by which it will appear, that the idols whom they worſhipped, could not ſave them; ſince they ſhould fall juſt by them, round about the altars on which they ſacrificed unto them; which idols were placed, and altars for their worſhip built, upon every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains: mountains and high hills were uſual places of idolatry among the heathens, in which the Jews imitated them; and particularly Herodotus [e] ſays of the Perſians, that going up to the higheſt parts of mountains, they offered ſacrifice to Jupiter; ſo they called the whole circle of the heavens: and under every green tree, and under every thick oak; ſee 1 Kings xiv. 23. 2 Kings xvi. 4. Jer. ii. 20. and iii. 6. here their ſlain were to fall, where they committed their idolatry: even in the place where they did offer ſweet ſavour to all their idols; or dunghil-gods; yet, tho' they were ſuch, ſweet ſavour or incenſe was offered to them; wherefore in righteous judgment, here their carcaſes ſhould fall and lie, and rot and ſtink.

---

[d] רקע ברגלך extende pede tuo, Pagninus, Montanus, Polanus; fac diſtenſionem cum pede tuo, Munſter; divarica pedes tuos, Calvin.

℣. 14. So will I ſtretch out mine hand upon them, &c.] Not unto them, in a way of mercy; but upon, or againſt them, in a way of judgment. The Targum paraphraſes it, “and I will lift up “the ſtroke of my power upon them;” his mighty hand of vengeance: and make the land deſolate; by deſtroying the inhabitants of it: yea, more deſolate than the wilderneſs towards Diblath, in all their habitations; ſo the Syriac verſion renders it, and I will make this land more deſolate than the land of Diblath; but other verſions, I will make the land deſolate from the wilderneſs of Diblath; to which the Targum agrees; or, from the wilderneſs to Diblath. Kimchi and Ben Melech think this is the ſame with Riblath; as Deuel is put for Reuel in Numb. i. 14. and ii. 14. which was in the land of Hamath; and which, Jerom ſays, was in his times called Epiphania in Syria; here it was that Nebuchadnezzar brought Zedekiah, and ſlew his ſons before him, Jer. xxxix. 5, 6. this, tho' in Hamath in Syria, was on the borders of the land of Iſrael, Numb. xxxiv. 8, 11. ſo that hence from the deſert of Diblath, as the Arabic verſion renders it, even to Jeruſalem, as may be ſupplied, takes in the whole land, and ſhews that it ſhould be utterly deſolate. There is a Beth-diblathaim mentioned in Jer. xlviii. 22. as in Moab; and there is alſo Almon-diblathaim, which was one of the ſtations of the Iſraelites; and ſeems to be in Moab, or on its borders, Numb. xxxiii. 46, 47. and appears by the places named with it, to be the ſame as that in Jeremy; and ſo was part of that terrible wilderneſs thro' which the Iſraelites paſſed; and to which the deſolation of the land of Iſrael by the Chaldeans is compared; and which ſerves to confirm our verſion, which makes the deſolation to be greater than that: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; the true God; the one and only Lord God; who never changes his purpoſes; fulfils his promiſes and threatnings; and there's no eſcaping his mighty hand.

CHAP. VII.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy of the ſpeedy deſtruction of the Jews, as being juſt at hand; of the particular judgments that ſhould come upon them; of the horror that ſhould ſeize them; and the diſtreſs that all ranks of men among them ſhould be in, a few only eſcaping, who are deſcribed as in mournful circumſtances. The deſtruction in general is denounced as being very near; the end being come, which is often repeated; and as it is repreſented as ſudden, ſo without mercy; which is declared ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. the particular judgments, ſword, peſtilence and famine, are mentioned in ℣. 15. and the few that ſhould eſcape are compared to mourning doves, ℣. 16. the trembling, horror and ſhame that ſhould be upon all are intimated in ℣. 17, 18. the unprofitableneſs of their gold and ſilver to deliver them; and the unſatisfying nature of theſe things are expreſſed, ℣. 19. the profanation and deſtruction of their temple are propheſied of, ℣. 20, 21, 22. and for their murder, rapine and oppreſſion, 'tis threatened that their houſes ſhould be poſſeſſed by the worſt of heathens, and their holy places defiled; and one calamity ſhould come upon another; when their application to prophets, prieſts and ancient men for counſel, would be in vain, ℣. 23, 24, 25, 26. and king, prince and people ſhould be in the moſt melancholy and diſtreſſed circumſtances, ℣. 27.

℣. 1. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] Or again, as the Arabic verſion; for this is a diſtinct prophecy from the former, tho' of the ſame kind with it; and was delivered out, either immediately upon the former; or however, ſome time between that and the following in the next chapter, which has a date to it. The Targum calls it, the word of prophecy from the Lord.

℣. 2. Alſo thou ſon of man, thus ſaith the Lord God unto the land of Iſrael, &c.] The inhabitants of it; not the ten tribes, who were already carried captive; but the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and thoſe that were with them, who dwelt in the land. The mountains, hills, rivers and vallies were before addreſſed; now the land itſelf: what the Lord by the prophet ſaid unto the land, or the people of it, follows: an end: for here a colon is to be placed; that is, the end of God's patience and forbearance; he would bear with them no longer, at leaſt but a very little while; the time of vengeance was coming upon them, and an utter conſumption ſhould be made of them; ſee Lam. iv. 18: the end is come upon the four corners of the earth, or land; for not the whole world, and the end of that, as in Matt. xxiv. 3. are meant; but the land of Judea, and the deſtruction of it, which ſhould be general; upon the four wings of it, as in the Hebrew text; that is, in all parts of it, eaſt, weſt, north and ſouth. The Targum is, “the “puniſhment of the end, or the puniſhment de“termined to come upon the four winds of the “earth;” ſee Rev. vii. 1. and this puniſhment was juſt going to be inflicted on them; for this prophecy was in the ſixth year of king Zedekiah; and in the ninth year of his reign, Nebuchadnezzar beſieged Jeruſalem; and in the eleventh year took it, 2 Kings xxv. 1, 2.

℣. 3. Now is the end come upon thee, &c.] This is repeated for the confirmation of it, and for the ſake of application of it to the people of Iſrael, of whom he had before ſpoken in the third perſon; but now in the ſecond, in order to arouſe them and excite attention: and I will ſend mine anger upon thee; the token of it, the puniſhment of their ſins: and I will judge thee according to thy ways; paſs ſentence, and execute it, as their evil ways and practices deſerved: and I will recompenſe, or put upon thee [f], all thine abominations; cauſe them to bear as a burden, the juſt puniſhment of their deteſtable iniquities; which would be more than they would be able to bear, though not more than they deſerved.

---

[e] Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 131.

ỳ. 4. And mine eye ſhall not ſpare thee, neither will I have pity, &c.] Tho' the puniſhment will be heavy, and the lamentation will be great; ſee ch. v. 11: but I will recompenſe thy ways upon thee; the evil of puniſhment, for the evil of ſin, the righteous demerit of their actions: and thine abominations ſhall be in the midſt of thee; not taken away, unatoned for, and indeed unrepented of. The Targum is, "and the puniſhment of thine "abominations ſhall be in the midſt of thee:" and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; to whom vengeance belongs; who takes notice of ſinful actions, and puniſhes for them; to whom appertain the perfections of omniſcience, omnipotence, and punitive juſtice.

ỳ. 5. Thus ſaith the Lord God: &c.] Here ſhould be a ſtop, a colon, requiring attention to what follows, it being ſomething awful and terrible: an evil, an only evil, behold it cometh; meaning the deſtruction of the city and temple; which, tho' but one, was ſuch an one, as was never known before, nor was there any like it. The Targum is, "evil after evil, lo it cometh;" one evil after another; when one evil is gone, another comes, as in ỳ. 26. The Syriac verſion is, behold evil for evil comes; the evil of puniſhment, for the evil of ſin.

ỳ. 6. An end is come, the end is come, &c.] Theſe words, ſo often repeated, ſhow the eagerneſs and concern of the prophet's mind; the ſpeed and haſte deſtruction was making; and the great ſtupidity of the people, which required ſuch a frequent repetition: it watcheth for thee; that is, their damnation ſlumbered not, but was awake, and waited till the time was up, which was juſt at hand, for it to take place; ſee 2 Pet. ii. 3: behold it is come; either the end, or rather the evil before-mentioned; it was juſt at the door; it denotes the certainty of it, and its near approach.

ỳ. 7. The morning is come upon thee, O thou that dwelleſt in the land, &c.] That is, early ruin was come, or was coming, upon the inhabitants of Judea, which before is ſaid to be awake, and to watch for them; and now the day being broke, the morning come, it haſtened to them. Some, becauſe this word [g] is uſed in Iſ. xviii. 5. for a crown or diadem, think a crowned head, a king, is here meant; particularly Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, the inſtrument of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. So the Targum, "the kingdom is re"vealed upon or againſt thee, O inhabitant of the "land." Jarchi interprets it of the morning ſetting as the ſun does, its light and glory diſappearing; and ſo denotes a dark and gloomy day. The time is come; the appointed time of Jeruſalem's ruin, the time of her viſitation: the day of trouble, or noiſe [h], is near; either of the Chaldean army, its chariots and horſes, and of their armour; or of the howling and lamentation of the Jews: and not the ſounding again of the mountains; not like the echo of a man's voice between the mountains, which is only imaginary, but this is real; ſo Kimchi and Ben Melech interpret it: or this was not like the ſhoutings of the vintage, which were joyful ones, Iſ. xvi. 9, 10. but this the voice of lamentation and ſorrow, doleful ſounds. Jarchi ſays, the word ſignifies the cry of the voice, proclaiming or calling on perſons to fly to the tops of the mountains, which now ſhould not be; and ſo the Targum, "and there is no fleeing or eſcaping to "the tops of the mountains."

ỳ. 8. Now will I ſhortly pour out my fury upon thee, &c.] It might be very well ſaid to be ſhortly, or near at hand, that the Lord would bring down his judgments upon this people; ſince it was ſome time in the ſixth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity that this prophecy was delivered; and it was in the ninth year that Nebuchadnezzar came up againſt Jeruſalem; ſo that it was but about three years, ere God would begin to pour out his fury on them: and accompliſh mine anger upon thee; not only ſend it, and begin to expreſs it, but go on to finiſh it, till he had ſpent all his fury upon them he meant and threatened, and their ſins deſerved: and I will judge thee according to thy ways, and I will recompenſe thee for all thine abominations; which is repeated from ỳ. 3. for the confirmation of it, and to ſhew the certainty of it, that nothing would prevent it.

ỳ. 9. And mine eye ſhall not ſpare, &c.] This verſe is the ſame with ỳ. 4. only inſtead of I will recompenſe thy ways upon thee, here it is, I will recompenſe thee according to thy ways; which have both the ſame ſenſe, ſhewing the equity and juſtice of the divine proceedings: and to the clauſe, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, 'tis added, that ſmiteth; with the rod of his anger, inflicts puniſhment for ſin. The Syriac verſion is, that ſmiteth them; the Jews, by ſuffering them to be carried captive: and ſo the Targum, "I am the Lord "that bringeth upon you a ſmiting," or the blow; the ſenſe is, that when it came, they ſhould be ſenſible that it was the Lord's doing.

ỳ. 10. Behold the day, behold it is come, &c.] That is, the day of trouble and diſtreſs, ſaid to be near, ỳ. 3: the morning is gone forth; ſee the note on ỳ. 7: the rod hath bloſſomed, pride hath budded; both theſe phraſes may be underſtood of Nebuchadnezzar; he was the rod, with which the Lord ſmote his people, as the Aſſyrian monarch is called the rod of his anger, Iſ. x. 5. and was a very proud prince, and had budded and bloſſomed, and had brought forth much bad fruit of that kind; ſee Dan. iii. 15. and iv. 30, 37. or theſe may be ſeparately conſidered; the rod may be interpreted of Nebuchadnezzar, which had been growing up, and preparing for the chaſtiſement of the people of the Jews, and now was juſt ready to be made uſe of; and pride may reſpect the ſin of that people, which was the cauſe of their being ſmitten with this rod, as the following words ſeem to indicate. The Targum is, "a ruler hath budded, a "wicked one hath appeared."

ỳ. 11. Violence is riſen up into a rod of wickedneſs, &c.] Some underſtand this of the Chaldeans, who came with great violence againſt the Jews, and were a rod in the hand of the Lord, to ſcourge them for their wickedneſs; and this ſeems to be the ſenſe of the Targum, "ſpoilers are riſen up to "viſit the wicked;" but rather the violence, oppreſſion, and rapine of the Jews are meant, and mentioned as the cauſe of their puniſhment; for this their oppreſſion of the poor and needy, the widow and the fatherleſs among them, God ſuffered the king of Babylon, a wicked prince, to come and chaſtiſe them: none of them ſhall remain, nor of their multitude, nor of any of theirs; meaning not the Chaldean army, as if they came not of themſelves, but of God, and much leſs were cut off, for they returned to their own land again; but the Jews, who either ſhould die in the ſiege with the famine and peſtilence, or be put to death by the ſword, or be carried into captivity: neither ſhall there be wailing for them; the deſtruction ſhould be ſo general, that there would be but few left to mourn; and thoſe that were left, would be ſtruck with ſuch a ſtupor and amazement at the calamity, that they would not be capable of mourning; or with ſuch a dread of the enemy, that there would be no place for lamentation over their dead friends and relations.

---

[f] נתתי עליך ponam ſuper te, Pagninus; dabo ſuper te, Montanus; reponam ſuper te, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[g] הצפירה corona, Tigurine verſion, ſo ſome in Vatablus; cidaris matutina, Montanus.

[h] מהומה tumultus, Montanus, Piſcator, Starckius; ſtrepitus, Calvin; clamoris, Vatablus.

℣. 12. The time is come, the day draweth near, &c.] According to the Targum, the time of the recompence of iniquities, and the day of puniſhment of ſins; of the ſins of the Jews, by the Chaldean army, which no doubt is true; but it ſeems chiefly to refer to what follows: and the ſenſe is, the time was coming on, in which let not the buyer rejoice, nor the ſeller mourn; it is uſual for the buyer of houſes or lands to rejoice, becauſe an addition is made to his eſtate, and eſpecially when he has made, as he thinks, a good purchaſe; and the ſeller, he mourns, becauſe he is obliged to part with his eſtate to pay his debts, and ſo is reduced in his circumſtances; but now the time was coming, when the one would have no occaſion to rejoice, nor the other to mourn; not the buyer rejoice, becauſe being carried captive, he can't enjoy his poſſeſſions; nor the ſeller mourn, becauſe if he had not ſold his houſe or field, he muſt have left it: for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof; upon the whole body of the Jewiſh nation, high and low, rich and poor, bond and free, buyer and ſeller; thoſe that are in good circumſtances, and thoſe that are in bad ones; ſo that hereby they were all upon a level, in the ſame caſe and condition.

℣. 13. For the ſeller ſhall not return to that which is ſold, &c.] In the year of jubilee, becauſe he ſhall be in captivity: according to the law in Lev. xxv. 13. when a man had ſold his poſſeſſion, he returned to it again, if alive, in the year of jubilee; let it come ſooner or later, within thirty, or twenty, or ten years after the ſale, be it as it will: now the Babyloniſh captivity being ſeventy years, in that time there muſt be a jubilee; and yet thoſe that had ſold their eſtates, being captives in another land, could not return to them: although they were yet alive; either tho' what they have ſold is in being, and in good condition; or rather, tho' they that have ſold them are in the land of the living, but not being in their own land, can't poſſeſs: for the viſion is touching the whole multitude thereof; the prophecy of the deſtruction of the Jews is general, and reſpects the whole body of the people; men of all ranks and degrees, the buyer and the ſeller, the rich and the poor: which ſhall not return; void and of no effect, but ſhall be fully accompliſhed; ſee Iſ. lv. 11. tho' ſome think this refers not to prophecy, but to the people, who did not upon it return by repentance; in this ſenſe it is taken by Jarchi and Kimchi; and ſo the Targum, "for the prophets propheſied to the whole "multitude of them to return by repentance, and "they returned not:" neither ſhall any ſtrengthen himſelf in the iniquity of his life; either ſecure himſelf from danger by his unrighteous mammon, his ill-gotten goods; or think to eſcape by his daring impiety, and vicious courſe of life, continued in without repentance.

℣. 14. They have blown the trumpet, even to make all ready, &c.] That is, the Jews, when they underſtood that the enemy was approaching, blew the trumpet, to give the inhabitants of their ſeveral cities and towns warning of it; that they might gather together, provide themſelves with armour, and put themſelves in a poſture of defence, or go forth to meet the enemy, and ſtop his progreſs: or, blow ye the trumpet, ſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions; and ſo may be conſidered as an irony or ſarcaſm; blow the trumpet, as an alarm of war, and ſee what will be the effect of it: but none goeth to the battel; not having courage enough to face the enemy, but inſtead of that fled to the fortified cities, and particularly to Jeruſalem: the reaſon of this timidity and cowardice was, for my wrath is upon all the multitude thereof; the intention of God was to deſtroy them all by one means or another; and therefore a heart was not given them to defend themſelves, or oppoſe the enemy.

℣. 15. The ſword is without, &c.] Without the city, where the enemy was beſieging; ſo that thoſe that went without, in order to make their eſcape, fell into their hands: and the peſtilence and the famine within; within the city; ſo that ſuch who thought themſelves ſafe in their own houſes, died by thoſe judgments: him that is in the field ſhall die by the ſword; by the hands of the Chaldeans: and he that is in the city, famine and peſtilence ſhall devour him; and he ſhall die by the hand of God.

℣. 16. But they that eſcape of them, ſhall eſcape, &c.] Some few ſhould eſcape the peſtilence, famine, and ſword, and flee to the mountains, where they ſhould live a very miſerable and uncomfortable life; ſo that this is no contradiction to the wrath of God being upon the whole multitude, ℣. 12, 14. as it follows: and ſhall be on the mountains; whither they ſhall flee, when the city is broken up and taken; and ſo the Syriac verſion reads it, in connexion with the preceding words, and they that eſcape of them ſhall eſcape to the mountains; barren and deſert places, where they ſhall find no ſubſiſtence, nor have any agreeable company and converſation, but live in ſolitude and diſtreſs: like doves of the vallies, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity; like doves that live in vallies, or gather together there, and hide themſelves in the holes of the rocks, on the ſides of the vallies, from birds of prey; or are ſo called, to diſtinguiſh them from wild doves, which when they have loſt their mates, make a very mournful noiſe, though not loud and clamorous. So thoſe Jews that eſcaped, being in ſuch an uncomfortable condition, turned out of houſe and home, and deprived of their ſubſtance, ſhould lament their fate; not in loud cries, leſt they ſhould be heard by the enemy and taken, but in ſecret ſighs, and in a mournful tone; acknowledging to God, and to one another, their ſins, they now became ſenſible of, which brought theſe calamities upon them. So God's people, the remnant according to the election of grace, who eſcape the general ruin ſin has brought on mankind, are for the moſt part upon the mountains, in an afflicted and perſecuted ſtate; they are like doves for their harmleſſneſs, amiableneſs, cleanneſs, modeſty, chaſtity, ſociableneſs, and timorous diſpoſition; and like doves of the vallies, in a low eſtate, thro' corruption, temptation, deſertion, affliction, and perſecution; and mourn over their own iniquity, the ſin of their nature, their unbelief and various tranſgreſſions, being committed againſt a God of love, contrary to his grace, grieving to his Spirit, and diſhonourable to his goſpel; and being what break their peace, bereave them of comfort, and deprive them of communion with God.

℣. 17. All hands ſhall be feeble, &c.] No ſtrength in them, to lay hold on weapons of war to defend themſelves, or fight the enemy; no heart nor courage in them, to go forth and meet him; and even afraid to lift up their voice in mourning, leſt they ſhould be heard, and purſued, and taken: and all knees ſhall be weak as water; tremble and beat one againſt another, for fear of the enemy; or, "ſhall flow with water," as the Targum; either with ſweat or urine, which are ſometimes both cauſed by fear.

℣. 18. They ſhall alſo gird themſelves with ſackcloth, &c.] As a token of mourning, Gen. xxxvii. 34: and horror ſhall cover them; either the horror of a guilty conſcience, or the perpetual dread and terror of the enemy: and ſhame ſhall be upon all faces; becauſe of their ſins and tranſgreſſions, which they ſhall now be convinced of; or becauſe of their deſolate condition, their ſins had brought them into: and baldneſs upon all their heads; thro' the plucking off of the hair of their heads in their diſtreſs; for to make baldneſs as a token of mourning for the dead, was forbidden the Jews, Deut. xiv. 1.

℣. 19. They ſhall caſt their ſilver in the ſtreets, and their gold ſhall be removed, &c.] As being of no uſe unto them to preſerve them from famine and peſtilence, and as being an hindrance to them in their flight from the enemy. Kimchi obſerves, that this may be interpreted of their idols of gold and ſilver, which ſhall now be had in contempt by them, and caſt away, when they ſhall find they cannot ſave them from ruin; ſee Iſ. ii. 20. Their ſilver and their gold ſhall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord; theſe can neither deliver from temporal judgments, nor from wrath to come; ſee Prov. x. 2. and xi. 4. nor idols made of them: they ſhall not ſatisfy their ſouls, nor fill their bowels; gold and ſilver cannot be eaten; theſe will not ſatisfy the craving appetite, nor fill the hungry belly: the words ſhew, that the famine would be ſo great, that bread could not be got for any money; and therefore gold and ſilver would be of no avail; ſince they could not be fed upon, or give any ſatisfaction to a famiſhing ſoul; nor could idols of gold and ſilver neither: becauſe it is the ſtumbling-block of their iniquity; what was the occaſion of their iniquity, covetouſneſs, and idolatry, at which they ſtumbled, and fell into ſin, and ſo into puniſhment for it.

℣. 20. As for the beauty of his ornament, he ſet it in majeſty, &c.] Or, for pride[i]. The gold, ſilver, jewels, riches, and treaſure, which the Lord gave to this people, they made a bad uſe of; and inſtead of contributing to the ſupport of his worſhip and intereſt, and of giving liberally to the poor, they converted it to their own pride and luxury: or rather the temple, as Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it, is meant; which was a beautiful ſtructure, and adorned with gifts, and ſet for glory, majeſty, and excellency by the Lord; yea, where his excellent majeſty dwelt himſelf: but they made the images of their abominations, and of their deteſtable things therein; or, of it[k]; that is, of their gold and ſilver, which is another bad uſe they put their riches to: or rather, in it[l]; that is, the temple; where having made their idols, they placed them; ſee Jer. vii. 30: therefore have I ſet it far from them; that being deſtroyed, and they being carried away captive into a ſtrange land, far from that.

℣. 21. And I will give it into the hands of the ſtrangers for a prey, &c.] The Babylonians, who lived in a foreign country, and were ſtrangers to the commonwealth of Iſrael; the temple was ſuffered of the Lord to fall into their hands as a prey; who ſpoiled it of all its riches and glory, and carried away the veſſels of gold, of ſilver, and of braſs, and other valuable things; ſee Jer. lii. 17—23: and to the wicked of the earth for a ſpoil; meaning the ſame perſons, and the ſame thing, and the ſame uſe they ſhould make of it; for not the wicked of the world in general are meant, but of the land, or this land; the land of Babylon, where the prophet was: and they ſhall pollute it; by entering into it and ſpoiling it, by pillaging and burning it.

℣. 22. My face will I turn alſo from them, &c.] Deny them his preſence, and withdraw his protection from them; ſhew them no favour, nor afford them any help and ſuccour in their diſtreſs, when they cry unto him; ſo the Targum, "I will "cauſe my Shekinah to remove from them:" unleſs the Chaldeans are meant, as ſome think, whoſe robberies and ravages the Lord would wink at, and not reſtrain, but ſuffer them to plunder and ſpoil at pleaſure: ſince it follows, and they ſhall pollute my ſecret place; the holy of holies, by going into it, which none but the high-prieſt might do, and he but once a year; tho' the Targum underſtands this of the Jews, and makes it to be a reaſon of what is threatened in the preceding clauſe, rendering it thus, "becauſe they have prophaned "the land of the houſe of my Shekinah:" for the robbers ſhall enter into it, and defile it; as did the king of Babylon and his army; and afterwards, in the ſecond temple, Antiochus, Pompey, and Titus Veſpaſian.

℣. 23. Make a chain, &c.] To bind them; not the robbers, the Chaldeans, but the Jews; in order either to bring them to the bar to be tried for capital crimes hereafter-mentioned, or to be led bound in chains into captivity; ſee Neh. iii. 10: for the land is full of bloody crimes; or, judgment of bloods[m]; capital crimes, ſuch as are deſerving of death, particularly murder, or ſhedding of innocent blood; ſo the Targum interprets it of ſins of murder: and the city is full of violence; rapine, oppreſſion, and injury done to the poor, the widow, and the fatherleſs; meaning the city of Jeruſalem, where was the great court of judicature, and where juſtice ought to have been adminiſtred.

---

[i] לגאון in ſuperbiam, V. L. Calvin, Starckius.

[k] בך ex eo, Tigurine verſion.

[l] In eo, Pagninus Montanus, Polanus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Starckius.

[m] משפט דמים judicio ſanguinum, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin, Polanus, Starckius; criminibus capitalibus, Piſcator; ſanguinariis judiciis, Caſtalio.

℣. 24. Wherefore I will bring the worſt of the heathen, &c.] The Chaldeans, notorious for their cruelty, ſavageneſs, and barbarity : and they ſhall poſſeſs their houſes; which they have built, and thought to have lived and died in, and left them to their children for an inheritance; but the Chaldeans, and not their children, became their heirs, and inherited their houſes and lands : I will alſo make the pomp of the ſtrong to ceaſe; or, the pride of the mighty ones [n]; the noble and the rich; their wealth and ſubſtance, by which their pride and grandeur were ſupported, being taken away from them : and their holy places ſhall be defiled; the temple, in which were the holy place, and the holy of holies : or, they that ſanctify them; the prieſts that offered ſacrifices, which only ſanctified to the purifying of the fleſh; even theſe holy perſons and things, as well as holy places, would be defiled.

℣. 25. Deſtruction cometh, &c.] Upon the temple, city, nation, and people; the king of Babylon, the deſtroyer of the Gentiles, and now of the Jews, being on his way, Jer. iv. 7 : and they ſhall ſeek peace, and there ſhall be none; that is, the Jews will ſeek to make peace with the Chaldeans; but the latter will not hearken to them, but go on with the ſiege, till they have taken the city, put part to the ſword, and carried the other captive.

℣. 26. Miſchief ſhall come upon miſchief, &c.] One misfortune or calamity after another; firſt one unhappy event, and then another, as was Job's caſe. The Targum is, "breach upon breach ſhall "come [o]:" and rumour ſhall be upon rumour; that the Chaldean army is in ſuch a place; and then that it is in another place ſtill nearer; and then that it is but a few miles off, and will be here immediately : rumours of wars, as well as wars themſelves, are very diſtreſſing; ſee Matt. xxiv. 6 : then ſhall they ſeek a viſion of the prophet; apply to him for a prophecy, to know the event of things, whether and when they might expect a deliverance : but the law ſhall periſh from the prieſt; whoſe lips ſhould keep knowledge, and from whoſe mouth the law, the doctrine and interpretation of it, might be expected; but now either there would be no prieſts at all; or ſuch as were, would be ignorant and unlearned, and uncapable of inſtructing the people : and counſel from the ancients; with whom it uſually is; and which is of great ſervice in a time of diſtreſs : this therefore adds greatly to the calamity, that there would be no prophet to tell them what ſhould come to paſs; no prieſt to inſtruct them; nor ſenator or wiſe man to give them counſel.

℣. 27. The king ſhall mourn, and the prince ſhall be clothed with deſolation, &c.] Meaning one and the ſame perſon, Zedekiah not being able to ſave himſelf and his people; and who falling into the hands of the king of Babylon, his children were ſlain before him; then his own eyes put out, and he bound in chains, and carried captive to Babylon, Jer. xxxix. 6, 7 : and the hands of the people of the land ſhall be troubled; weakened thro' fear and diſtreſs; uncapable of buſineſs, and unable to help themſelves and others; and the more ſo, when they found their caſe deſperate; which was manifeſt by the mourning and deſolation of their king, in whom their confidence had been placed : I will do unto them after their way; or, for their way [p]; becauſe of their evil ways and works : and according to their deſerts will I judge them; take vengeance on them, as the Targum : or, in their judgments will I judge them [q]; the ſame meaſure they have meted out to others, ſhall be meaſured out to them, Matt. vii. 1 : and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; the only Lord God, omnipotent, omniſcient, omnipreſent, true and faithful, holy, juſt, and good.

C H A P. VIII.

THIS chapter contains a viſion the prophet had of the idolatry of the Jews, which was the cauſe of their deſtruction. The time when, place where, and perſons with whom he was, when the hand of the Lord came upon him, are mentioned, ℣. 1. then follows a deſcription of the divine perſon that appeared to him, ℣. 2. and an account is given, how he was in a viſionary way brought to Jeruſalem, and to the temple, where he ſaw the glory of the God of Iſrael, and the idolatry of the people, ℣. 3, 4. which latter was gradually repreſented to him; firſt the image of jealouſy in the entry at the gate of the altar northward, ℣. 5. then greater abominations through a hole in the wall, by which he ſaw their idols, in the form of reptiles and four-footed beaſts, pourtrayed on the wall, ℣. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. next ſeventy of the ancients of Iſrael, among whom were one mentioned by name, offering incenſe to theſe idols, ℣. 11, 12. after this, greater abominations ſtill are ſhewed him, at the north of the temple, women weeping for Tammuz, ℣. 13, 14. and then again far greater ones, twenty-five men, between the porch and the altar, with their backs to the temple, and their face to the eaſt, worſhipping the ſun, and putting the branch to the noſe, ℣. 15, 16, 17. wherefore it is reſolved to deal with them in fury, without any mercy, pity, and compaſſion, ℣. 18.

℣. 1. And it came to paſs in the ſixth year, in the ſixth month, in the fifth day of the month, &c.] This was the ſixth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin; the ſixth month was the month Elul, which anſwers to part of Auguſt, and part of September. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions wrongly render it, the fifth month. The fifth day of the month is thought to have been the ſabbath-day, which ſeems probable by what follows; this was juſt a year and two months from the firſt viſion, ch. i. 1, 2. As I ſate in mine houſe; in Chaldea, by the river Chebar; he was now ſitting, the time of lying on his ſide, both right and left, being now up, even four hundred and thirty days. It was in the fifth year, and on the fifth of Tammuz, that the firſt viſion was; ſeven days the prophet ſat with them of the captivity at Tel-Abib; at the end of which, he was ordered to lie on his ſide; firſt on his left ſide three hundred and ninety days, and then on his right ſide forty days: now reckoning from the middle of Tammuz, to the fifth of Elul in the ſixth year, were but, as Kimchi obſerves, four hundred days; but this being, as another Jewiſh writer ſays [r], an intercalated year, by the intercalation of a month, which conſiſted of thirty days, the whole number was compleated, and the prophet was now ſitting: or it may be this poſition is obſerved, becauſe he was now teaching and inſtructing the people, which was frequently done ſitting; ſee Matt. v. 1. and the note there; and this in his own private houſe, being now in captivity, and having neither temple nor ſynagogue to teach in. And the elders of Judah ſat before me; to hear the word of the Lord from his mouth, the law explained, or any freſh prophecy delivered by him; or to have his advice and counſel in their preſent circumſtances. Theſe were the elders of Judah that were carried captive along with Jehoiachin; tho' ſome think they were thoſe that were at Jeruſalem, and that all this was only in a viſionary way; but the former ſenſe ſeems moſt agreeable; ſeeing this was previous to the viſion, and with what goes before deſcribes the time, place, and witneſſes of the viſion. That the hand of the Lord fell there upon me; which the Targum interprets of the Spirit of prophecy, which came with power upon him: it denotes the energy and efficacy of the Spirit of God, in throwing him into an exſtacy, and acting upon him, and revealing to him the things he did; which are related in the following verſes.

---

[n] גאון עזים ſuperbiam fortium, Calvin; ſuperbiam robuſtorum, Starckius.

[o] So R. Sol Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 96. 1.

[p] מדרכם pro viis ipſorum, Calvin; pro via ipſorum, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus.

[q] ובמשפטיהם אשפטם et in, ſive pro judiciis eorum judicabo eos, Calvin, Polanus, Cocceius.

℣. 2. And then I beheld, and lo a likeneſs, as the appearance of fire, &c.] The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, behold the likeneſs of a man; reading איש a man, for אש fire: but without ſuppoſing ſuch a reading, for which there is no foundation; this likeneſs may very well be underſtood of the likeneſs of a man; ſince mention is made of his loins in the next clauſe, and of his hand in the following verſe; and the deſcription agrees with the appearance of a man in ch. i. 26, 27. it was uſual for the Son of God, who doubtleſs is here meant, to appear in an human form; and ſo Junius and Tremellius ſupply the words, "and lo a "likeneſs of a man, as in the appearance of fire;" it was the form of a fiery man that was ſeen, as he is further deſcribed: from the appearance of his loins, even downward, fire; his lower parts, thighs, legs, and feet; expreſſive either of the light of grace communicated from Chriſt to his people; or of his fervent love towards them, or flaming zeal for God and his houſe; or rather, of his wrath againſt an idolatrous people; ſee Rev. i. 15. a like deſcription is in ch. i. 27: and from his loins, even upward, as the appearance of brightneſs; his upper parts, back, belly, breaſt, ſhoulders, arms, head, &c. which may denote his incomprehenſible majeſty and glory; his glory being the glory of the only begotten, the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon. The Targum renders both the one and the other part of the deſcription thus, "and I ſaw, and lo a likeneſs as "the look of fire, the look of glory, which the "eye cannot ſee, nor is it poſſible to look upon "it; and beneath the look of fire, and the look "of glory, which the eye cannot behold, nor is it "poſſible to contemplate it; and above, as the "look of brightneſs:" as the colour of amber; or chaſmal; which ſome take to be the name of an angel. The Syriac verſion is, as the look of God; ſee the note on ch. i. 4, 27.

℣. 3. And he put forth the form of an hand, &c.] That is, he that appeared in the likeneſs of a man, and with ſo much glory and ſplendor, out of the midſt of the fire and brightneſs which were about him, put forth the form of an hand, that looked like a man's hand; for this appearance was not real, only viſionary; and this ſeems to deſign the Spirit of God ſent forth by Chriſt, ſometimes called the finger of God, Luke xi. 20. as appears by what follows: and took me by a lock of mine head; without hurting him, ſhewing his power over him; and by this means raiſing him from his ſeat, as it ſeemed to the prophet: and the Spirit lift me up between the earth and heaven; took him off of his ſeat, and out of his houſe, lifted him up in the air, and carried him thro' it, as he thought; for this was not real and local; in like manner as the Spirit caught away Philip, Acts viii. 39. but in viſion, as follows: and brought me in the viſions of God to Jeruſalem; ſo it was repreſented to him in a true viſion, which was of God, and not of ſatan, that he was carried from Chaldea to Jeruſalem; not that he really was, for he was ſtill in Chaldea; and hither in viſion was he brought again, and found himſelf to be when that viſion was over, ch. xi. 24, 25. but things ſo appeared to him, as if he was actually brought to Jeruſalem by the power of the Spirit of God: to the door of the inner gate; not of Jeruſalem, but the temple; or rather the court, the inner court; ſee ch. x. 3. and ſo it ſhould be rendered, to the door of the gate of the inner court [s]; and thus it is explained by Jarchi, Kimchi, and Ben Melech: that looketh toward the north; for there were gates on every ſide: where was the ſeat of the image of jealouſy, which provoketh to jealouſy; ſome graven image, perhaps the image of Baal; ſo called, becauſe it provoked the Lord to jealouſy, Deut. xxxii. 21. Guſſetius [t] ſuggeſts, that סמל Semel, here may be the ſame with Semele; who, in the opinion of the heathens, made Juno jealous.

℣. 4. And behold the glory of the God of Iſrael was there, &c.] In the temple, between the cherubim, where the Shekinah or the glory of the divine majeſty dwelt; for as yet he had not removed, tho' provoked to it, and as he afterwards did; or he was here to deſtroy the idols, and both city and temple, for the idolatry of the people; or this is here mentioned, to ſhow the baſeneſs and wickedneſs of the people, that they ſhould place an idol where the Lord himſelf was: according to the viſion that I ſaw in the plain; it was the ſame glorious perſon he ſaw in the temple, whom he had before ſeen in the plain, ch. ii. 22, 23. and that was the ſame he had ſeen in the viſion by the river Chebar, ch. i. 3, 28.

℣. 5. Then ſaid he unto me, ſon of man, &c.] That is, the glorious perſon deſcribed above in this viſion, the glorious God of Iſrael, ſeen by the prophet in the temple, he ſpoke unto him, calling him ſon of man; a name by which he often goes in this prophecy: lift up thine eyes now toward the north; of the mountain of the houſe without the court, as Jarchi interprets it: ſo I lift up mine eyes the way toward the north; being obedient to the heavenly viſion: and behold, northward at the gate of the altar; at the northern gate of the inner court, where was the altar of burnt-offering, brought by Ahab; to the north of the altar he built in imitation of that at Damaſcus, 2 Kings xvi. 10—14. and here ſtood this image of jealouſy in the entry; or the image of this jealouſy; the image beforementioned, which provoked the Lord to jealouſy; this ſtood at the entry of the northern gate, which led into the inner court, and to the altar.

---

[r] Seder Olam Rabba, c. 26. p. 73. Vid. Kimchi in loc.

[s] אל פתח שער הפנימית ad oſtium portæ interioris, ſub. atrii, Pagninus, Vatablus, Piſcator.

[t] Ebr. Comment. p. 903.

℣. 6. He ſaid furthermore unto me, ſon of man, &c.] He continued his ſpeech to the prophet, ſaying, ſeeſt thou what they do? the idolatrous Jews, who had ſet up a graven image at the northern gate of the court, where the altar was, and were ſacrificing to it: even the great abominations that the houſe of Iſrael committeth here; for to ſet up an idol where he was, and an altar by his altar, and to ſacrifice to Baal, and not to him, or to Baal along with him, or beſides him, or to any other idol, were very abominable to the Lord: even to ſuch a degree, that I ſhould go far from my ſanctuary? be obliged to leave it, not being able to bear ſuch abominable idolatries: or, that they ſhould go far from my ſanctuary [u]; depart from the true worſhip and ſervice of it, and fall into idolatry: but turn thee yet again; from the north to the ſouth it may be; however, to ſome other part of the temple: and thou ſhalt ſee greater abominations; or, great abominations [w]; for there is no neceſſity of rendering it greater; but the meaning is, that he ſhould ſee other great abominations beſides what he had ſeen, than which there could not be any thing well greater.

℣. 7. And he brought me to the door of the court, &c.] Of the inner court, the court of the prieſts and Levites. Dr. Lightfoot [x] ſays, this was the eaſt-gate, and moſt common way of entrance; and in that gate the Sanhedrim uſed to ſit in theſe times; and there the prophet ſees their council-chamber painted about with imagery: and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall; of one of the chambers of the prieſts and Levites, where they lay.

℣. 8. Then ſaid he unto me, ſon of man, dig now in the wall, &c.] And ſo make the hole larger; that he might have a fuller view of what was to be ſeen within the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door; an opening, by which he could go into the cell or chamber, and take a full view of what was to be ſeen there. All this was viſionary; for in reality the prophet did not dig, nor could he, not having any thing to dig with; but ſo things appeared to his mind in the viſion; firſt a little hole, by which he could diſcern there was a room; then by making uſe of ſome means, a large door appeared, at which there was an entrance into it.

℣. 9. And he ſaid unto me, go in, &c.] Into the room or chamber the door opened into: and behold the wicked abominations they do here; the idolatries there committed, wicked in themſelves, and abominable to God.

℣. 10. So I went in, and ſaw, and behold, every form of creeping things, &c.] As beetles and others, worſhipped for gods: and abominable beaſts; unclean ones; not only oxen, but dogs and cats, and other impure creatures; for ſuch were the gods of the Egyptians, from whom the Jews took their deities: and all the idols of the houſe of Iſrael; which were many, even as numerous as their cities: pourtrayed upon the wall round about; the pictures of them were drawn and placed around the wall of the room or chamber; and where they were worſhipped by the prieſts and Levites, and members of the Sanhedrim; and this was not in one chamber only, but in many, as appears from ℣. 12.

℣. 11. And there ſtood before them, &c.] Before the pictures, as the Vulgate Latin verſion expreſſes it, praying, ſacrificing, and offering incenſe unto them: ſeventy men of the ancients of the houſe of Iſrael; the whole Sanhedrim, or great court of judicature among the Jews, as Kimchi; or at leaſt there is an alluſion to that number, which were appointed in Moſes' time to be officers over the people, and govern and direct them, Numb. xi. 16. which ſhows how ſadly depraved and corrupted the ſtate was, that not the common people only, but the civil magiſtrates, the chief rulers and governors, were given to idolatry; and thoſe that ſhould have taught the people the right way, led them wrong; and it is ſtill a further aggravation of their crime, that they ſhould do this in the chambers of the prieſts and Levites, where they ought not to have been: and in the midſt of them ſtood Jaazaniah the ſon of Shaphan; who was either the prince of the Sanhedrim, or at leaſt a perſon of great note and eſteem; and ſhows the corruption to be general, from the leaſt to the greateſt: Shaphan was a ſcribe in Joſiah's time, who had a ſon named Abikam, perhaps the father of this, 2 Kings xxii. 3, 12. in ch. xi. 2. he is ſaid to be the ſon of Azur, and one of the princes of the people: with every man his cenſer in his hand; to offer incenſe to the idols pourtrayed on the wall; and which they did, for it follows: and a thick cloud of incenſe went up; there were many that offered; and perhaps they offered a large quantity, being very liberal and profuſe in this kind of devotion to their idols.

℣. 12. Then ſaid he unto me, ſon of man, haſt thou ſeen, &c.] Here ſhould be a ſtop, as the accent ſegolta ſhows; haſt thou taken notice of, haſt thou conſidered what thou haſt ſeen, the amazing ſhocking abominations committed by theſe men? it follows, and the queſtion is to be repeated, haſt thou ſeen what the ancients of the houſe of Iſrael do in the dark; their deeds being evil, ſuch as will not bear the light, of which they had reaſon to be aſhamed before men; and which they imagined would not be ſeen by the Lord, tho' the darkneſs and the light are both alike to him: in the chambers of his imagery? the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic verſions render it, in his hidden or ſecret chamber; and the Vulgate Latin verſion, in the hidden place of his bed-chamber. The Targum is, "in "the chamber of the houſe of his bed;" in his bed-chamber; that is, in thoſe chambers of the temple, which belonged to the prieſts and Levites, on the walls of which were pourtrayed the images and pictures of their gods. Here they had their ſecret rites or myſteries performed, in imitation of the heathens; who had the ſeveral myſteries of their religion privately obſerved; to which none were admitted but thoſe that were initiated into them; as thoſe of Oſiris among the Egyptians; of Ceres with the Grecians; and of Bona Dea among the Romans; as Junius obſerves. Tho' ſome interpret this of the imaginations of their minds, according to which they framed to themſelves deities, and a form of worſhip. For they ſay, the Lord ſeeth not, the Lord hath forſaken the earth; this they gave as a reaſon of their idolatry, becauſe the Lord took no notice of them, did not help them when in diſtreſs, but as they concluded had forſaken them; therefore they betook themſelves to the gods of the Egyptians, Syrians, and other nations, for their aſſiſtance and protection: for theſe words are not the language of Epicureans, or ſuch who deny the providence of God in general; who think that God takes no notice of the lower world, only of the upper one, as Kimchi, and others interpret them; for theſe elders of Iſrael were not ſo ignorant and ſtupid as to deny the general providence of God, only diſtruſted his particular care of them.

---

[u] לרחקה מעל מקדשי ut longius recedant, vel abeant, ſub Iſraelitæ a ſanctuario meo, Vatablus; and to this ſenſe are the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic verſions; ad longe recedendum, Cocceius.

[w] תועבות גדלות abominationes magnas, Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

[x] Proſpect of the Temple, c. 28. p. 2018.

℣. 13. He ſaid alſo unto me, turn thee yet again, &c.] Towards the north, as before: and thou ſhalt ſee greater abominations that they do; or, the great abominations; for ſo the words may be ſtrictly rendered; nor does it appear that what follows, tho' great abominations, were greater than the creeping things, four-footed beaſts, and other idols, or dunghil-gods, pourtrayed upon the walls, which the elders of Iſrael burnt incenſe to.

℣. 14. Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's houſe, which was towards the north, &c.] By the Lord's houſe, no doubt is meant the temple, which the Targum here calls the houſe of the ſanctuary of the Lord; that gate of the temple, for the temple had ſeveral gates, which was to the north, was the gate called Teri or Tedi, and was very little uſed [y]. In this part of the temple were the ſacrifices offered; and therefore it was the greater abomination to commit idolatry where the Lord was more ſolemnly worſhipped: and behold, there ſat women weeping for Tammuz; they were not in the court of the women, where they ſhould have been; but at the northern gate, near the place of ſacrifice; and they were ſitting there, which none but the kings of the houſe of Judah, and of the family of David, were allowed in the temple [z]; but what was the greateſt abomination, they were weeping for Tammuz. Jarchi ſays, this was an image which they heated inwardly, and its eyes were of lead; and theſe being melted with the heat, it ſeemed to weep; wherefore (the women) ſaid, it aſks for an offering: but not the idol, but the women wept. Kimchi relates various interpretations of it, "ſome (he ſays) expound it by an antiphraſis, making Tammuz glad; in the month of Tammuz they made a feaſt to the idol, and the women came to make him glad: others ſay, that with great diligence they brought water to the eyes of the idol, called Tammuz, and it wept; ſignifying, that it deſired they would worſhip it: others interpret the word Tammuz, as ſignifying burnt; (from the words in Dan. iii. 19. למזא לאתונא to beat the furnace); as if you ſhould ſay, they wept for him, becauſe he was burnt; for they burnt their ſons and daughters in the fire, and the women wept for them. He further obſerves, that Maimonides [a] writes, that he found written in one of the books of the ancient idolaters, that there was a man of the idolatrous prophets, whoſe name was Tammuz; who called to a certain king, and commanded him to worſhip the ſeven ſtars, and the twelve ſigns of the Zodiac, for which the king put him to a violent death; and the ſame night he died, all the images from the ends of the earth gathered together to the temple of Babylon, to a golden image, which was the image of the ſun; and this image was hanging between the heavens and the earth, and it fell into the midſt of the temple, and ſo all the images round about it; and it declared unto them what had happened to Tammuz the prophet; and all the images wept and lamented all that night; and when it was morning, they all fled to their temples at the ends of the earth; and this became an everlaſting ſtatute to them, that at the beginning of the firſt day of the month Tammuz, every year they lament and weep for Tammuz; and there are others that expound Tammuz, the name of a beaſt which they worſhip;" but leaving theſe interpretations, Tammuz was either the Adonis of the Grecians; and ſo the Vulgate Latin verſion renders it, Adonis; who was a young man beloved by Venus, and being killed by a boar, his death was lamented by her; and, in reſpect to the goddeſs, an anniverſary ſolemnity was kept by men and women lamenting his death, eſpecially by women. So Pauſanias ſpeaking of a certain place, there (ſays he) the women of the Argives (a people in Greece) mourn for Adonis [b]. Lucian [c] gives a particular account of this ceremony, as performed at Byblus, a city in Phœnicia, not far from Judea; from whence the Jews might have borrowed this cuſtom. "I have ſeen (ſays he) in Byblus, a large temple of Venus Byblia, where they performed the rites unto Adonis, and I was a ſpectator of them. The Byblians ſay, the affair relating to Adonis (or his death) by a boar, happened in their country; and in memory of it, every year they beat themſelves, lament and offer ſacrifice, and great mourning goes thro' the whole country; and when they beat themſelves and mourn, they ſacrifice to Adonis as dead; but the day following they pretend he is alive; and they ſhave their heads, as the Egyptians do at the death of Apis;" and indeed it is thought by ſome that this Tammuz is the Oſiris of the Egyptians; the ſame with Mizraim, the firſt king of Egypt, who being ſlain in battel, his wife Iſis ordered that he ſhould be worſhipped as a God, and a yearly lamentation made for him; and indeed Oſiris and Adonis ſeem to be one and the ſame, only in different nations, called by different names. Mention is made in Plato [d], of Thamus a king that reigned at Thebes over all Egypt, and was the God called Ammon; no doubt the ſame with this Tammuz; and who is here called in the Syriac and Arabic verſions, Thamuz or Tamuz; he ſeems to be the ſame with Ham; and Egypt was called the land of Ham, Pſ. cv. 27. and it is moſt probable, the Jews borrowed this piece of idolatry from the Egyptians their neighbours; with whom they were now very familiar, and from whom they expected help againſt the Chaldeans; but as there were ſuch ſhocking obſcenities uſed in this idolatrous ſervice, it is moſt amazing that the Jewiſh women, who had been inſtructed in the law and worſhip of God, ſhould ever go into it. Guſſetius [e] thinks, that Bacchus the god of wine is meant; and gives ſeveral reaſons for it; and among the reſt obſerves, that in the fourth month, called Tammuz from him, the vine was forming in ripe grapes; near the beginning of a fifth month, it was preſſed out, and tunned up; and by the next month, having done hiſſing, it was ſtopped up, which repreſented him buried; and for which the weeping was in this month.

---

[y] Miſn. Middot. c. 5. §. 3.

[z] Maimon. Hilchot Melachim, c. 2. §. 4.

[a] More Nevochim, Par. III. c 29 p. 426.

[b] Corinthiaca, ſive l. 2. p. 121.

[c] De Dea Syria. Vid. Theocriti, αδωνιαζυσαι, Idyll. 15.

[d] Phædrus, Tom. III. p. 274. Ed. Serran.

℣. 15. Then ſaid he unto me, haſt thou ſeen this, O ſon of man? &c.] This ſhocking piece of idolatry, women weeping for Tammuz: turn thee yet again, and thou ſhalt ſee greater abominations than theſe; or, great abominations beſides theſe [f].

℣. 16. And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's houſe, &c.] The court of the prieſts, where they offered ſacrifice, and into which none might come but themſelves: and behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar; the porch that led into the temple, and the brazen altar, the altar of burnt-offerings, which was a very ſacred place, and reckoned more holy than the court of the prieſts [g]: were about five and twenty men; the number, more or leſs, not being exactly known; who they were, whether the prieſts or princes of the people, is not certain; probably ſome of both: with their backs towards the temple of the Lord; that is, the moſt holy place, which they were obliged to, in order to do what is afterwards affirmed of them; for the ſanctuary was built to the weſt, that in their worſhip the Jews might not look to the eaſt, as the Gentiles did; wherefore theſe men, that they might imitate the Gentiles in their idolatry, turned their backs to the moſt holy place; which is an aggravation of their impiety; caſting the utmoſt contempt on God, his worſhip, and the place of it: and their faces towards the eaſt; when the ſun riſes: and they worſhipped the ſun towards the eaſt; as many nations did, tho' forbidden the Jews by an expreſs law of God, Deut. iv. 19. and xvii. 2, 3. yet this they fell into, and had horſes and chariots devoted to this idolatry; ſee 2 Kings xxi. 3, 5. and xxiii. 5, 11. The word rendered worſhipped, is compounded of two words; one ſignifying to corrupt, the other to worſhip; ſhewing, that by worſhipping the ſun, they corupted themſelves, and the houſe of God; and ſo the Targum renders it, "and lo, they corrupted themſelves, worſhipping "in the eaſt the ſun;" and ſo it is explained in the Jeruſalem Talmud, "they corrupted the tem-"ple, and worſhipped the ſun;" but Kimchi thinks, the word [h] conſiſts of the verb in the paſt tenſe, and of the participle; and that the ſenſe is, when the prophet ſaw the men worſhipping the ſun to the eaſt, as amazed at it, put this queſtion to thoſe that went in, do ye worſhip alſo [i]? ſo Ben Melech.

℣. 17. Then he ſaid unto me, haſt thou ſeen this, O ſon of man? &c.] Took notice of, and conſidered this piece of idolatry, worſhipping the ſun toward the eaſt: is it a light thing to the houſe of Judah, that they commit the abominations which they commit here? could theſe things, which are ſuch dreadful abominations, committed here in the temple, be reckoned light things by them, as ſurely they cannot; yet theſe are not all that they have done: for they have filled the land with violence; with rapine and oppreſſion; doing injury to the poor and needy, the widow and the fatherleſs, in all places: and have returned to provoke me to anger; by other inſtances of idolatry: and lo, they put the branch to their noſe; a laurel, or olive, or vine-branch, which idolaters carried in their hands, and put to their noſe, in honour of the idol they worſhipped; in like manner as they kiſſed their hand at the ſight of the ſun, Job xxxi. 26, 27. and which the Jews did in imitation of the heathen. This is one of the eighteen places in which there is Tikkun Sopherim, or a correction of the ſcribes; who, inſtead of my noſe, direct to read their noſe; hence the words are differently interpreted by the Jewiſh commentators; who, by זמורה rendered branch, think an ill ſmell is meant; ariſing either from their poſteriors, their back parts being towards the temple; or from the incenſe which they offered up to their idols; ſo Kimchi and Menachem in Jarchi; agreeable to which Fortunatus Scacchus [k] underſtands this, not of any branch uſed by idolaters, which they put to the noſe of their idol, or their own, for the honour of that; but of the cenſer which the Iſraelites uſed, contrary to the command of God, and which they put to their noſe, to enjoy a forbidden ſmell; ſee ch. xvi. 18. and xxiii. 41. but Guſſetius [l] gives another ſenſe of the words, rendring them, they ſend forth a branch to their anger; the Iſraelites are compared to a vine, as in Iſ. v. 1. ſending forth bad branches, idolatrous actions as here in this chapter; and to theſe bad branches they ſent forth or added another, even anger againſt God, the prophets, true believers, and right worſhippers of God; and therefore he alſo would deal in fury and wrath, as in the next verſe; ſo Dr. Lightfoot [m] renders it, "they ſend the "branch to my wrath, or to their own wrath; that "is, to what they have deſerved; as if it was "ſaid, in the ſame manner, that any one puts "wood to the fire, the branch of the wild vine, "that it may the quicklier be burnt; ſo do theſe "put the branch to my wrath, that it may burn "the more fiercely; hence it follows, therefore "will I alſo deal in fury," &c. The Targum is, "and lo, they bring ſhame (or confuſion) to their "faces;" what they do, turns to their own ruin and deſtruction, as follows:

℣. 18. Therefore will I alſo deal in fury, &c.] Being provoked by ſuch abominable idolatries, and ſuch horrid inſolence, and moſt contemptuous treatment: mine eye ſhall not ſpare; neither will I have pity; ſee ch. v. 11. and vii. 4, 9: and tho' they cry in mine ears with a loud voice; very preſſingly and earneſtly for help, being in great diſtreſs: yet will I not hear them; as they turned their backs on him, he'll turn a deaf ear to them, and not regard their cries. The Targum is, "they ſhall pray be-"fore me with a great voice, and I will not re-"ceive their prayer."

---

[e] Ebr. Comment. p. 903. So Luther apud Dieteric. Antiq. Bibl. par. 2. p. 132.

[f] תועבות גדלות מאלה abominationes magnas præter iſtas, Calvin.

[g] Bemidbar Rabba, §. 7. fol. 184. 4.

[h] משתחוים.

[i] Vid. Hottinger. Smegma Orientale, l. 3. par. 1. c. 24. p. 154. who rather is of opinion, that the word is compounded of the participle and the particle את, or the pronoun אתם.

[k] Sacror. Eleaochr. Myrothec. l. 2. p. 536.

[l] Ebr. Comment. p. 231.

[m] Heb. & Talmud. Exercitat. in Johan. xv. 6.

CHAP. IX.

IN this chapter is contained a viſion, repreſenting the deſtruction of the idolatrous Jews, and the preſervation of the godly that were among them, in which different perſons were employed; they that were concerned in the deſtruction of the idolaters, are deſcribed by their office; they had charge over the city; by their form and appearance, men; by their number, ſix; by the quarter from whence they came, the way of the higher gate northward; and by the weapons they had in their hands, ſlaughter-ones; and by their place and poſture, ſtanding beſide the brazen altar, ℣. 1, 2. among theſe were one clothed in linen, with a writer's ink-horn by his ſide; to whom the glorious God of Iſrael, who was removed from the cherub to the threſhold of the houſe, gave orders to go thro' the city of Jeruſalem, and mark thoſe that mourned over the abominations of it, ℣. 3, 4. and the reſt he ordered to go thro' the city, and ſlay all of every age, and ſex, and ſtate, except thoſe that had the mark; beginning at the ſanctuary, and filling the courts with the ſlain; which orders were obeyed, ℣. 5, 6, 7. upon which the prophet expoſtulates with the Lord, and intercedes for the people; but is not heard, becauſe of the abounding of iniquity among them; their frequent ſhedding of blood; their perverſion of juſtice; and their abominable infidelity and atheiſm; for which reaſons he was determined to ſhew them no mercy, ℣. 8, 9, 10. and the chapter is cloſed with a report made by the man clothed with linen, that he had done as was commanded him, ℣. 11.

℣. 1. He cried alſo in mine ears with a loud voice, &c.] That is, the glory of the Lord God of Iſrael, whom the prophet ſaw in the temple, and who directed him from place to place, and ſhewed him all the abominations committed there: this loud voice of the Lord, was not ſo much to excite the attention of the prophet, as to call together the miniſters of his vengeance; and to ſhew the greatneſs of his indignation, and the vehemence of his wrath, which was ſtirred up by the ſins of the people: ſaying, cauſe them that have the charge over the city to draw near; or, "who were "appointed over the city," as the Targum; that is, the city of Jeruſalem; by whom are meant, either the miniſtring angels, who had been the guardians of it, but now were to be employed another way; or the princes of the Chaldean army, who had a charge againſt the city to deſtroy it; ſee Iſ. x. 6. Jer. xxxiv. 21. The Syriac verſion is, draw near ye avengers of the city; and the Septuagint and Arabic verſions are, the vengeance of the city draws nigh: even every man with his deſtroying weapon in his hand; weapons of war, as bows and arrows, ſword and ſpear; ſee Jer. vi. 22, 23.

℣. 2. And behold, ſix men, &c.] Either angels in the form of men; or the generals of Nebuchadnezzar's army, as Kimchi interprets it; whoſe names are, Nergal-ſharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarſechim, Rabſaris, Nergal-ſharezer, Rabmag, Jer. xxxix. 3. theſe ſix executioners of God's vengeance are, in the Talmud [n], called, "wrath, anger, fury, deſtruction, breach and conſumption:" came from the way of the higher gate. Kimchi obſerves from the Rabbins, that this is the eaſtern gate, called the higher or upper gate, becauſe it was above the court of the Iſraelites. Maimonides [o] ſays, the upper gate is the gate Nicanor; and why is it called the upper gate? becauſe it was above the court of the women; ſee 2 Kings xv. 35: which lieth toward the north; where were the image of jealouſy, and the women weeping for Tammuz, and other idolatrous practices were committed; which were the cauſe of the coming of theſe deſtroyers: moreover, the Chaldean army with its generals came out of the north; for Babylon lay north, or north-eaſt of Jeruſalem; and ſo this gate, as Kimchi ſays, was north-eaſt; and he adds, and Babylon was north-eaſt of the land of Iſrael; ſee Jer. i. 13, 14. and iv. 6, 7: and every man a ſlaughter-weapon in his hand; as ordered ℣. 1. a different word is here uſed; it ſignifies a hammer, with which rocks are broke in pieces, as the above-mentioned Jewiſh writer obſerves. The Septuagint render it, an ax or hatchet: and one man among them; not one of the ſix, but who made a ſeventh. The Jews ſay this was Gabriel [p]; but this was not a created angel, as they; nor the holy Spirit, as Cocceius; but the Son of God, in an human form; he was among the ſix, at the head of them, as their leader and commander; he was but one, they ſix; one Saviour, and ſix deſtroyers: was clothed with linen; not in the habit of a warrior, but of a prieſt; who, as ſuch, had made atonement for the ſins of his people, and interceſſion for them; and this may alſo denote the purity of his human nature, and his unſpotted righteouſneſs, the fine linen, clean and white, which is the righteouſneſs of the ſaints: and with a writer's ink-horn by his ſide; or at his loins [q]; not a ſlaughter-weapon, as the reſt; but a writer's ink-horn; hence Kimchi takes him to be the king of Babylon's ſcribe; but a greater is here meant; even he who took down the names of God's elect in the book of life; and who takes an account, and keeps a book of the words, and even thoughts, of his people; and alſo of their ſighs, groans and tears; ſee Mal. iii. 16. Pſ. lvi. 8. but now his buſineſs was to mark his people, and diſtinguiſh them from others, in a providential way; and keep and preſerve them from the general ruin and deſtruction that was coming upon Jeruſalem: or, a girdle on his loins, as the Septuagint, Syriac and Arabic verſions render it; and ſo was prepared and fit for buſineſs; which ſenſe of the word is approved of by Caſtell [r]; and he aſks, what has an ink-horn to do at a man's loins? but it ſhould be obſerved, that it was the cuſtom of the eaſtern people to carry ink-horns at their ſides, and particularly in their girdles, as the Turks do now; who not only fix their knives and poniards in them, as Dr. Shaw [s] relates; but the Hojias, that is, the writers and ſecretaries, hang their ink-horns in them; and by whom it is obſerved, that that part of theſe ink-horns which paſſes between the girdle and the tunic, and holds their pens, is long and flat; but the veſſel for the ink, which reſts upon the girdle, is ſquare, with a lid to claſp over it: and they went in; to the temple, all ſeven: and ſtood beſide the brazen altar; the altar of burnt-offering, ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from the altar of incenſe, which was of gold; here they ſtood, not to offer ſacrifice, but waiting for their orders, to take vengeance for the ſins committed in the temple, and at this altar; near to which ſtood the image of jealouſy, ch. viii. 5.

---

[n] T. Bab. Sabbat, fol. 55. 1. & Gloſſ. in ib.

[o] Hilchot Cele Hamikdaſh, c. 7. §. 6.

[p] T. Bab. Yoma, fol. 77. 1.

[q] במתניו in lumbis ſuis, Pagninus, Montanus, &c.

[r] Lexic. Polyglott. col. 3393.

[s] Travels, p. 227. Ed. II.

℣. 3. And the glory of the God of Iſrael was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, &c.] That is, the glorious God of Iſrael; or the glorious Shekinah, and divine majeſty, which dwelt between the Cherubim over the mercy-ſeat, in the moſt holy place, removed from thence, as a token of his being about to depart from the temple, which in a ſhort time would be deſtroyed. The Targum is, "the glory of the God of Iſrael departed in the cherub on which he dwelt, in the houſe of the holy of holies;" the cherubim removed with him, and were his chariot in which he rode; ſee ch. x. 18. and xi. 22: to the threſhold of the houſe; of the holy of holies, as Jarchi interprets it; and ſo was nearer to the brazen altar, where the ſeven men ſtood, to give them their orders; of which an account follows: and he called to the man clothed with linen, &c. he being the principal perſon, is called firſt; and his buſineſs being to preſerve the Lord's people, ſhews that this was the firſt care of God.

℣. 4. And the Lord ſaid unto him, &c.] This ſhews that a divine perſon is meant by the glory of the God of Iſrael: go thro' the midſt of the city; that is, as it is next explained, thro' the midſt of Jeruſalem; the city, the ſix men had the charge over, or againſt, ℣. 1: and ſet a mark upon the foreheads; not the Hebrew letter ת, as ſome ſay, becauſe in the form of a croſs, and ſo ſignifying ſalvation by the croſs of Chriſt; for this letter has no ſuch form, neither in the characters uſed by the Jews, nor by the Samaritans, at leaſt, in the preſent character; tho' Origen and Jerom on the place ſay, that the letter Tau had the form of a croſs in the letters the Samaritans uſed in their time; and this is defended by Walton[t], who obſerves, that Azariah in his Hebrew alphabet gives a double figure, one like that which is in preſent uſe, and another in the form of a croſs, called St. Andrew's croſs, and, as it appears in ſome ſhekels; and in the Vatican alphabet which Angelus E Roccha publiſhed, the laſt letter has the form of a croſs; as have the Ethiopic and Coptic alphabets, which, it is certain, ſprung from the ancient Hebrew; and ſo Montfaucon ſays[u], in ſome Samaritan coins, the letter Thau has the form of a croſs; which, if Scaliger had met with, he ſays he would never have oppoſed the teſtimonies of Origen and Jerom; tho', after all, it ſeems to be no other than the form of the Greek X; and ſo the Talmudiſts ſay[w], the high-prieſt was anointed on his forehead in the ſame form: ſome think this letter was the mark, becauſe it is the firſt letter of the word תורה the law; as if it pointed out ſuch who were obedient to it; or of the word תחיה thou ſhalt live. It is a Rabbinical fancy, mentioned by Kimchi[x], that Gabriel had orders to write the letter ת in ink upon the foreheads of the righteous, and in blood upon the foreheads of the wicked; in the one it ſignified תחיה thou ſhalt live, and in the other תמות thou ſhalt die; but, as Calvin obſerves, rather, if this letter could be thought to be meant, the reaſon of it was, becauſe it is the laſt letter of the alphabet; and ſo may ſignify, that the Lord's people marked with it, are the laſt among men, or the filth of the world; or that ſuch who perſevere to the end, ſhall be ſaved: but the word ſignifies, not a letter, but a mark or ſign; and ſo it is interpreted in the Septuagint verſion, and by the Targum, Jarchi, Kimchi, and others; and denotes the diſtinction the Lord had made by his grace between them and others; and now by his power and providence in the protection of them; for the Lord knows them that are his, and will preſerve them. The alluſion is, either to the marking of ſervants in their foreheads, by which they were known who they belonged to, Rev. vii. 3. or to the ſprinkling of the poſts of the Iſraelites houſes with blood, when the firſt-born of Egypt were deſtroyed, Exod. xii. 22, 23: of the men that ſigh, and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midſt thereof; the abominations were thoſe abominable idolatries mentioned in the preceding chapter, and thoſe dreadful immoralities hinted at in ℣. 9. all which were grieving and diſtreſſing to godly minds, becauſe they were contrary to the nature and will of God; tranſgreſſions of his righteous law; and on account of which his name was diſhonoured, and his ways blaſphemed, and evil ſpoken of; for theſe they ſighed and groaned in private, and mourned and lamented in public; bearing their teſtimony againſt them with bitter expreſſions of grief and ſorrow, by groans, words and tears; and ſuch as theſe are taken notice of by the Lord; he comforts thoſe that mourn in Zion, and preſerves them.

℣. 5. And to the others he ſaid in mine hearing, &c.] To the other ſix men that had the ſlaughter-weapons in their hands: go ye after him thro' the city; that is, after the man clothed with linen; for he was ſent out firſt to take care of the righteous, and preſerve them; and the reſt were not ſuffered to ſtir till he was gone; and then they are bid to go after him. The Syriac verſion is, "to them that were with him he ſaid to them before me, go thro' the city after me;" as if theſe were the words of the man clothed with linen to the other ſix; and ſo the Arabic verſion; but the other is the true reading, and gives the right ſenſe, as the following words ſhow: and ſmite; the inhabitants of the city: let not your eye ſpare, neither have ye pity; not that the Chaldeans were inclined to mercy and pity, for they were a cruel and barbarous people; but this is ſaid to ſhow the reſentment of God againſt the ſins of the Jews; and that it was his will they ſhould act the ſevere part they did.

℣. 6. Slay utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women, &c.] All of them objects of compaſſion, becauſe of their age and ſex; and yet none to be ſpared; and which orders were exactly obeyed; ſee 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17: but come not near any man on whom is the mark; theſe were not to be ſlain; and tho' ſome were carried captive, as Daniel, and others; yet it was for their good, and God's glory; ſee Rev. vii. 3, 4. and ix. 3, 4: and begin at my ſanctuary; the temple, the houſe of God, and the prieſts and Levites that dwelt there. The Septuagint verſion is, begin at my ſaints; thoſe who profeſſed themſelves to be the ſaints of the Lord, and were ſeparated and devoted to his ſervice; and ſo the Rabbins ſay [y], don't read ממקדשי at my ſanctuary; but ממקודשי at thoſe that ſanctify me, or my ſanctified ones; which they interpret of thoſe that keep the whole law, from Aleph to Tau; ſee 1 Pet. iv. 17: then they began at the ancient men, which were before the houſe; the ſeventy elders of Iſrael, who offered incenſe to the idols pourtrayed upon the walls of the chambers of the temple, ch. viii. 10, 11. theſe they ſlew firſt.

---

[t] Supplementum de Sicl. Formis, p. 37. 3. Prolegom. 3. de lingua Hebr. §. 36.

[u] Palæograph. Græc. l. 2. c. 3.

[w] T. Bab. Ceritot, c. 1. fol. 5. 2.

[x] Vid. T. Bab. Sabbat, fol. 55. 1.

℣. 7. And he ſaid unto them, defile the houſe, &c.] The temple; don't be afraid of ſlaying any perſon in it, for fear of defiling it; they have defiled it with their abominations, and now do you defile it with their blood: and fill the court with the ſlain; the court of the prieſts, and the court of the Iſraelites, and the court of the women, and all the chambers where the prieſts and Levites were, and had their images pourtrayed: go ye forth; from the brazen altar, by which they ſtood, and out of the temple, after they had done their buſineſs there, and had ſlain all they ſhould: and they went forth, and ſlew in the city; they went out of the temple, and ſlew in the city all but thoſe that had the mark.

℣. 8. And it came to paſs while they were ſlaying them, &c.] That were in the city: and I was left; in the temple; and the only one that was left there, the reſt were ſlain; for there were none marked in the temple, only in the city, ℣. 4: that I fell upon my face; as a ſupplicant with great humility: and cried, and ſaid; being greatly diſtreſſed with this awful providence: ah, Lord God! wilt thou deſtroy all the reſidue of Iſrael; the ten tribes had been carried captive before; there only remained the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and theſe were now threatened with an utter deſtruction: in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jeruſalem? ſhewn in the deſtruction of men, both in the city and temple, by famine, peſtilence and ſword.

℣. 9. Then he ſaid unto me, &c.] In order to ſatisfy the prophet, and make him eaſy, and ſhew the equity and juſtice of the divine proceedings: the iniquity of the houſe of Iſrael and Judah is exceeding great; it can't be well conceived or expreſſed how great it is; it abounded and ſuperabounded: this is the anſwer in general, but in particular it follows: and the land is full of blood; of murders, as the Targum interprets it; of ſhedding of innocent blood; and even of all atrocious and capital crimes: and the city full of perverſeneſs; or of perverſion of judgment, as the Targum; the city of Jeruſalem, where was the higheſt court of judicature; where the Sanhedrim of ſeventy one ſat to do juſtice and judgment, have nothing but perverſion and injuſtice: for they ſay, the Lord hath forſaken the earth, and the Lord ſeeth not; does not concern himſelf with human affairs, and takes no notice of what is done below; and having imbibed ſuch atheiſtical principles, were hardned in ſin, and gave themſelves over to all iniquity; having no reſtraints upon them, from the conſideration of the providence of God, and his government of the world: or elſe the ſenſe is, that the Lord had withheld his mercy and favours from them; and therefore they ſhewed no regard to him; and looked upon all their evils and calamities as fortuitous events, and not as ordered by him, as puniſhments for their ſins.

℣. 10. And as for me alſo, &c.] As they have not ſpared the poor and the needy, the widow and the fatherleſs, but have perverted their judgment, and ſhed innocent blood: mine eye ſhall not ſpare, neither will I have pity, but I will recompenſe their way upon their head; deal with them by the law of retaliation, and reward them according to their deſerts; ſee ch. vii. 4.

℣. 11. And behold, the man clothed with linen, which had the ink-horn by his ſide, &c.] ℣. 2. to whom the orders were given to mark the mourners in the city, ℣. 4. The Syriac verſion is, then I ſaw the man, &c. which muſt direct him to obſerve and call to mind the diſtinguiſhing goodneſs of God to his own people: reported the matter, ſaying, I have done as thou haſt commanded me; meaning that the righteous were marked, and had been preſerved, whilſt the others were ſlain. Chriſt, as man and mediator, ſuſtains the character of a ſervant; as ſuch he has commands enjoined him, which he has obeyed; he has done all he was to do; he has fulfilled the whole will of God, and wrought out the complete ſalvation of his people; a report of which he made when here on earth, John xvii. 4. and will do again at the laſt day; when all his people will be gathered in, and he ſhall deliver the kingdom to the Father, and preſent them all to him, having been kept by his power, ſaying, lo, I and the children thou haſt given me; when all will be done as was commanded, and he undertook, and the report made accordingly. Ben Melech obſerves, that the Keri or marginal reading is, "according to all which "thou haſt commanded me;" as if he ſhould ſay there is nothing wanting of all that was commanded.

CHAP. X.

IN this chapter is a viſion, very much like that in the firſt chapter, with ſome difference, and with a different view. The deſign of it being to repreſent the wrath of God againſt Jeruſalem, and his departure from the city and temple. A throne much like that in ch. i. 26. is deſcribed ℣. 1. orders are given from it to ſcatter coals over the city, ℣. 2. the ſituation of the cherubim when theſe orders were given, ℣. 3. the removal of the glory of the Lord from the cherub to the threſhold of the houſe, and the conſequences of it; the houſe filled with ſmoke; the court with the brightneſs of the Lord's glory; and the ſound of the cherubim's wings heard to the outer court, as the voice of God, ℣. 4, 5. the orders of taking and ſcattering fire over the city executed, and the manner in which they were, ℣. 6, 7. a deſcription of the cherubim and the wheels, much like that in the firſt chapter, ℣. 8—17. the departure of the glory of God from the threſhold to the eaſt-gate of the Lord's houſe, with the motion of the cherubim and wheels along with him, ℣. 18, 19. and the chapter is concluded with obſerving, that the cherubim are the ſame with the living creatures ſeen in the viſion of the firſt chapter, and had the ſame form, likeneſs and motion, ℣. 20, 21, 22.

---

[y] T. Bab. Avoda Zara, fol. 4. 1.

℣. 1. Then I looked, and behold, &c.] After the viſion of the deſtruction of the greater part of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem by the ſix men with ſlaughter-weapons, and of the preſervation of a few by the man clothed with linen; another viſion is ſeen by the prophet, in ſome things like to that he ſaw, of which there is an account in the firſt chapter; tho' in ſome circumſtances different, and exhibited with a different view; partly to repreſent the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by fire, and partly the Lord's removal from it, before or at that time: in the firmament that was above the head of the cherubim; the ſame with the living creatures, ch. i. 22, 26. where the firmament or expanſe of heaven is ſaid to be over their heads, as here; ſee the note there: there appeared over them as it were a ſapphire-ſtone, as the appearance of the likeneſs of a throne; ſee the note on ch. i. 26.

℣. 2. And he ſpake unto the man clothed with linen, &c.] That is, the God of Iſrael, or the glory of the Lord, that ſat upon the throne before deſcribed; he gave orders to the man clothed in linen, who appears in another character, and repreſents the Chaldean or Roman army: go in between the wheels, even under the cherub; the ſingular for the plural, the cherubim; the wheels were under theſe; the churches are under their miniſters, their paſtors, guides and governors; or rather, ſince the wheels were by the cherubim, it ſhould be rendered, as by ſome, unto the cherub, or cherubim [a]: and fill thine hand with coals of fire from between the cherubim, and ſcatter them over the city; theſe coals of fire were an emblem of the wrath of God againſt Jeruſalem, and of the deſtruction of it by fire; and theſe being fetched from between the cherubim, ſhew that the cauſe of this wrath and ruin was the ill treatment of the prophets of the Lord; ſee 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15—19. as the deſtruction of the ſame city afterwards by the Romans was owing, as to the rejection and killing of the Meſſiah, ſo to the perſecution of his apoſtles, 1 Theſſ. ii. 15, 16: and he went in my ſight; in the ſight of the prophet, as it appeared to him in viſion; he ſaw him go in, as he was ordered, between the wheels, and under the cherubim; but as yet he did not ſee him take the coals of fire, and much leſs ſcatter them; theſe were afterwards done, as related in the other part of the viſion.

℣. 3. Now the cherubim ſtood on the right-ſide of the houſe, &c.] According to the Targum, it was the ſouth-ſide of the houſe; and ſo Jarchi interprets it; oppoſite to the north, where the groſs idolatries were committed, ch. viii. 3, 5, 14. ſtanding at the greateſt diſtance from them, and bearing their teſtimony againſt them: when the man went in; they ſtood as it were in a levee, thro' which the man paſſed, waiting upon him; paying a reſpect to him; aſſenting to what he did; and approving of it: this circumſtance is mentioned, becauſe they were not always in this poſition, only at this time; nor did they continue ſo; we afterwards hear of their motion: and the cloud filled the inner court; the court of the prieſts, not as a token of God's preſence, as at the dedication of the temple; but rather of judicial blindneſs and darkneſs, which the people of the Jews were left unto.

℣. 4. Then the glory of the Lord went up from the cherub, &c.] Or cherubim; thoſe that were upon the mercy-ſeat, between which the Shekinah or glorious majeſty of God dwelt, in the moſt holy place: this is a token and intimation of the Lord's leaving of the temple; and a little before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans, to which this viſion chiefly, if not altogether, refers, a voice was heard in the temple, "let us go hence [b]:" and ſtood over the threſhold of the houſe; either of the holy of holies, from whence he was removing; or rather of the holy place, the court of the prieſts, the inward court, and ſo open to the outward court, and view of the people in it: and the houſe was filled with the cloud; the temple, being forſaken of God, was filled with darkneſs; as an emblem of that blindneſs which is come upon the Jews, and will continue on them till the fulneſs of the Gentiles is brought in: and the court was full of the brightneſs of the Lord's glory; either the inward court, as the glory of the Lord paſſed thro' it, from the holy of holies; or rather the outward court, of which mention is made in the next verſe; the glory of the Lord being on the threſhold of the houſe, which looked towards that, and ſo enlightened it. This outward court ſignifies the Gentiles; who, when the Lord removed from the Jewiſh nation and people, were favoured with the glorious light of the goſpel, and ordinances of Chriſt; whereby they were enlightened, and filled with the knowledge of the Lord; with the knowledge of him, who is the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon; ſo thro' the fall of the Jews ſalvation came to the Gentiles, Rom. xi. 11, 12.

℣. 5. And the ſound of the cherubims wings was heard even to the utter court, &c.] Or outward court. The ſound of the goſpel, which is a joyful ſound; a ſound of love, grace and mercy; of life, liberty, peace, pardon, righteouſneſs and ſalvation by Chriſt; the ſound of this in the ſwift miniſtry of the apoſtles, ſignified by the cherubims wings, went into all the earth, and throughout the whole Gentile world; by which many ſouls were quickened and inlightened; many churches were formed; and the glory of the Lord being revealed, was ſeen by all fleſh; and the whole world was filled with the brightneſs of the Lord's glory, as it will be again, and more abundantly in the latter day: and this ſound was as the voice of the Almighty God when he ſpeaketh; the goſpel is as thunder, which is the voice of God; and the miniſters of it are boanergeſes ſons of thunder: it ſhakes the conſcience; ſhews men their danger; and points at the Saviour: it is not the word of man, but in deed and in truth the word of God: it is the voice of Chriſt, who is the Almighty; and it appears to be ſo, by its powerful effects, when attended with a divine energy, in quickning dead ſinners; enlightning dark minds; unſtopping deaf ears; ſoftning hard hearts; and turning men from darkneſs to light, and from the power of ſatan to God; it is ſo when God ſpeaks in it, and by it; when it comes not in word only, but in the Holy Ghoſt, and in power.

℣. 6. And it came to paſs, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, &c.] After the orders were given by him that was upon the throne to the man thus deſcribed: ſaying, take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubim; as in ℣. 2: then he went in; immediately, into the place place where the wheels and cherubim were; even under the firmament of heaven, and the throne that was in it: and ſtood beſide the wheels, or wheel; to ſee what it was, as Kimchi thinks; or rather in order to go in between them, as he was bid to do, ℣. 2.

[a] אל תחת לכרוב in locum cerubinorum, vel cheruborum, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; ad cherubim, Tigurine verſion; which is approved by Noldius, p. 84. N°. 398.

[b] Joſephus de bello Judæorum, l. 6, c. 5. § 3.

℣. 7. And one cherub ſtretched forth his hand from between the cherubim, &c.] One of the four living creatures or cherubim, put out his hand from among the reſt: unto the fire that was between the cherubim; ſo fire is ſaid to go up and down among them, ch. i. 13. to which the reference is here: and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen; denoting as before obſerved; that it was for the ill-uſage of the miniſters of God's word, that wrath came upon the people of the Jews, and the deſtruction of their city by fire; ſo wrath will come upon antichriſt, and the antichriſtian ſtates, for their uſage of the miniſters and churches of Chriſt, and in conſequence of the prayers, and by the inſtigation of ſuch perſons; ſee Rev. vi. 9, 10, 11. and xviii. 4—7. ſo one of the four beaſts or living creatures, the ſame with the cherubim here, is ſaid to give to the ſeven angels ſeven golden vials, full of the wrath of God, Rev. xv. 7: who took it, and went out; took the fire, and went out of the temple, and ſcattered it upon the city of Jeruſalem; ſo repreſenting the Chaldean, or rather the Roman army, burning it with fire; ſee Matt. xxii. 7. where they are called the armies of the King of kings.

℣. 8. And there appeared in the cherubim, &c.] The Septuagint verſion is, I ſaw the cherubim; and ſo the Syriac verſion, I ſaw in the cherubim; what follows: the form of a man's hand under their wings; one of them put forth his hand, which was ſeen by the prophet, as declared in the preceding verſe; but this was only the form of one; which is obſerved to ſhew, that it is not to be taken literally, but as ſeen in the viſion of prophecy; and being under their wings, denotes ſecrecy and privacy: and the whole being applied to the miniſters of the word, is expreſſive of their activity and diligence in the work of the Lord, both in private and in public; and that they make no boaſt nor ſhow of their works and labours, and aſcribe nothing to themſelves, but all to the grace of God that is with them, 1 Cor. xv. 10. ſee the note on ch. i. 8.

℣. 9. And when I looked, behold, the four wheels by the cherubim, &c.] The churches by the miniſters: of theſe wheels, and why the churches are ſo called, and of their number four, and their ſituation by the cherubim, ſee the note on ch. i. 15: one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub; a miniſter to a church; every church has its own paſtor, elder, or overſeer, by it, and over it: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a beryl-ſtone; a precious ſtone of a ſea-green; ſee the note on ch. i. 16. The Targum renders it in general, a precious ſtone; the Septuagint verſion, a carbuncle; and the Vulgate Latin verſion, a chryſolite.

℣. 10. And as for their appearances, they four had one likeneſs, &c.] They were exactly like one another; they were all compoſed of the ſame matter, had all the colour of a beryl-ſtone, were all in the ſame form of a wheel; and in matter, form, and ſhape, entirely tallied and agreed one with another, as true goſpel-churches do; ſee the note on ch. i. 16: as if a wheel had been in the midſt of a wheel; not included in one another, but were formed in a croſs, or tranſverſe way; ſee the note as before.

℣. 11. When they went, they went upon their four ſides, &c.] Which four ſides they had, by being made in the tranſverſe way before-mentioned; juſt as the new Jeruſalem-church-ſtate is ſaid to be four-ſquare, Rev. xxi. 16. and this may denote the uniformity of goſpel-churches in every ſtate and condition, proſperous and adverſe; and the conſtancy of their walk, conduct, and converſation: they turned not as they went; neither to the right-hand or the left, but went on in the path of faith and duty, keeping cloſe to the word of God, and keeping up a converſation, diſcipline, and worſhip, according to it: but to the place where the head looked they followed it; meaning either the rulers, guides, and governors of churches, paſtors and elders; whoſe faith and converſation are followed by the members: or rather Chriſt himſelf, the head of the church, who is to be followed whither-ſoever he goes or directs: unleſs by the head is meant the ſame as the Spirit, ch. i. 20. the Spirit of God, by whom the true members of goſpel-churches are led, and after whom they walk. The Targum is, "the place to which the firſt turned (or looked) "after it they went;" that is, the firſt of the wheels; and ſo may ſignify, that the primitive churches are the pattern after which all the churches in after-ages are to go. They turned not as they went; this is repeated partly for the confirmation of it; and partly to excite attention to it, as being worthy of obſervation; ſee the note on ch. i. 17.

℣. 12. And their whole body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, &c.] This is to be underſtood not of the wheels, to whom body or fleſh, backs, hands, and wings, do not belong, but of the cherubim; and the ſenſe is, that as the wheels were alike, and had one and the ſame form and appearance, ſo had the cherubim; they were exactly alike in their body, backs, hands, and wings; denoting the agreement between goſpel-miniſters, in their doctrine, work, and converſation: and the wheels were full of eyes round about; that is, the rings or circles of the wheels, as in ch. i. 18. ſignifying, that churches conſiſted of enlightened perſons, who had a ſight of their ſin and danger, and looked to Chriſt for ſalvation, and walked circumſpectly, and watched over one another: even the wheels that they four had; the wheels that belonged to the four living creatures or cherubim.

℣. 13. As for the wheels, it was cried to them in my hearing, &c.] Or they were called, as the prophet heard in the viſion, by the following name; O wheel; or, the wheel; for tho' there are ſeveral particular churches, yet they make up but one general aſſembly and church of the firſt-born, written in heaven; and will be all together in their perfect ſtate, ſignified by the round form of the wheel; ſee the note on ch. i. 15.

℣. 14. And every one had four faces, &c.] That is, every one of the wheels, for of theſe the words are continued; and which agrees with ch. i. 15. ſee the note there: the firſt face was the face of a cherub; this being in the room of the ox's face, ch. i. 10. ſhows that the face of an ox and a cherub are the ſame; and that the living creatures have the general name of cherubim, from the face of an ox; and are ſo called from כרב, which in the Syriac and Chaldee languages ſignifies to plow; that creature being made uſe of in ſuch ſervice:

and the ſecond face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle; how theſe are applicable to goſpel-churches, and the true members of them, ſee the note on ch. i. 15.

℣. 15. And the cherubim were lifted up, &c.] From the earth, as in ch. i. 19. ſee the note there: this is the living creature that I ſaw by the river Chebar; a river in Chaldea, where the prophet was, when he had the viſion of the living creatures recorded in the firſt chapter; and hence it is out of doubt, that the living creatures and the cherubim are the ſame.

℣. 16. And when the cherubim went, the wheels went by them, &c.] Miniſters being guides to the churches in doctrine, worſhip, devotion, and converſation; ſee the note on ch. i. 19: and when the cherubim lift up their wings, to mount up from the earth, the ſame wheels alſo turned not from beſide them; miniſters and churches go together; if the one remove, the other do alſo; they can't long ſubſiſt without each other; and generally ſpeaking, as are the light, knowledge, zeal, affection, and devotion of the one, ſuch are thoſe of the other; ſee the note as above.

℣. 17. When they ſtood, theſe ſtood, &c.] When the one were inactive, lifeleſs, and without motion, making no progreſs in knowledge, experience, and practice, the other were ſo likewiſe; ſee the note on ch. i. 21: and when they were lifted up, theſe lift up themſelves alſo; like people, like prieſt, whether in things commendable or not, Hoſ. iv. 9: for the ſpirit of the living creature was in them; the ſame ſpirit that was in the cherubim, was in the wheels; and the ſame Spirit of God, who is a Spirit of life[c], as the words may be rendered, is in the churches, as in the miniſters; generally ſpeaking, if the one are lively, the other are alſo, and both move as they are acted by the Spirit; and alſo their motion from place to place, which is ſpoken of in the following verſe, is directed by the Spirit; ſee Acts xvi. 6, 7.

℣. 18. Then the glory of the Lord departed from off the threſhold of the houſe, &c.] Whither he had removed from the cherub or the cherubim, between the mercy-ſeat, ℣. 4. taking another ſtep towards a general departure from the temple and city, of which this was another ſignal and warning: and ſtood over the cherubim; not on the mercy-ſeat from whence he came, for hither he returned not; but over the cherubim or living creatures ſeen in the viſion, which were under the throne in the firmament of heaven; an emblem, as we have ſeen, of goſpel-miniſters: and this may denote the exaltation of Chriſt, who is the glory of the Lord, the brightneſs of his Father's glory, above them; his protection of them, and preſence with them; for let him move where he will, he will not depart from his faithful miniſters; he will be with them to the end of the world.

℣. 19. And the cherubim lift up their wings, &c.] As birds do, when they are about to remove and fly away; theſe being upon the motion, ready to depart, as well as the glory of the Lord: and mounted up from the earth in my ſight; the land of Judea, where the goſpel was firſt preached; but this being ſlighted and deſpiſed, the apoſtles and firſt miniſters of the goſpel took their flight from thence, and turned to the Gentiles: when they went out, the wheels alſo were beſides them; wherever they went in the Gentile world, their miniſtry was ſucceſsful, ſouls were converted, and churches formed; when the glory of the God of Iſrael departed from the temple, and from the city of Jeruſalem, and from the land of Judea, the goſpel-miniſtry and the goſpel-church-ſtate were removed likewiſe, and carried and fixed elſewhere: and every one ſtood at the door of the eaſt gate of the Lord's houſe; that is, the glory of the God of Iſrael, and the cherubim, and the wheels, they ſtood together in one place, the eaſtern gate of the temple, one of the outward gates; the gate of the court of the Iſraelites, or outward court, which looked to the eaſt; which ſhows that they were juſt going and leaving the houſe or temple deſolate, no more to return to it; ſee Matt. xxiii. 38, 39. the next remove was into the city, and then to a mountain on the eaſt ſide of it; ſee ch. xi. 23. it was in the eaſtern part of the world that the goſpel was firſt preached, after it was carried from Judea: and the glory of the God of Iſrael was over them above; both over the cherubim and the wheels; great gifts were beſtowed upon the miniſters, and great grace was upon the churches; and the preſence of God was with both, and a glory on them, and on that glory a defence.

℣. 20. This is the living creature that I ſaw under the God of Iſrael, by the river of Chebar, &c.] This is repeated from ℣. 15. not only for the confirmation of it; but with an addition to ſhow, that the appearance of the man upon the throne, ch. i. 26. is no other than the God of Iſrael; and inaſmuch as Chriſt is there meant, for the Father never appeared in an human form; it follows, that Chriſt is the God of Iſrael, under whoſe power, protection, and influence, the cherubim his miniſters are; and ſo this is a proof of the true and proper deity of Chriſt: and I knew that they were the cherubim; not by having ſeen the cherubim on the mercy-ſeat, and comparing theſe forms with them, which none but an high-prieſt could ever ſee; for tho' Ezekiel was a prieſt, it does not appear that he was an high-prieſt; but by the forms of them he had ſeen carved on the doors and walls of the temple, 1 Kings vi. 29, 35.

℣. 21. Every one had four faces a piece, &c.] Every one of the four living creatures or cherubim had four faces; which were the face of a man, of a lion, of an ox, and of an eagle, ch. i. 10: and every one four wings; the Septuagint verſion reads, eight wings; and the Syriac verſion, ſix; ſo many in all indeed they had, ſee the note on ch. i. 23: and the likeneſs of the hands of a man was under their wings; ſee the note on ℣. 8.

℣. 22. And the likeneſs of their faces was the ſame faces, &c.] Or their faces were like the ſame, which I ſaw by the river of Chebar; which prove that the living creatures and the cherubim muſt be the ſame: their appearance and themſelves; were exactly the ſame; there was no difference in their faces, or in their bodies: they went every one ſtraight forward; their motion, as well as their form, were alike; they kept one even courſe, looking right on, and their eyes right before them.

---

[c] רוח החיה, πνευμα ζωης, Sept. ſpiritus vitæ, V. L. Starckius.

CHAP. XI.

THIS chapter contains an account of the ſins of the princes of Judah; a prophecy of their deſtruction; ſome comfortable promiſes, reſpecting thoſe of the captivity; and the chapter is cloſed with the finiſhing of the viſion of the Lord's removing from Jeruſalem; and the whole being ended, the prophet related it to the men of the captivity. In ℣. 1. the prophet is ſhewn five and twenty men, among whom were two he knew, and are mentioned by name, and were princes of the people; and he is told, that theſe men deviſed miſchief, and gave bad advice to the people, ℣. 2, 3. wherefore he is bid to propheſy againſt them, ℣. 4. which he accordingly did, the Spirit of the Lord falling upon him, ℣. 5. declaring that their ſecret evils were known, as well as their publick ones; and that ſeeing they had multipled their ſlain, and had feared the ſword, the ſword ſhould come upon them; ſome ſhould fall by it, and others ſhould be carried captive; the conſequence of which would be, that God would be known, and his juſtice acknowledged, it being what their ſins deſerved, ℣. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. upon this prophecy being delivered out, one of the princes before named died immediately; which filled the prophet with great concern, and put him upon expoſtulating with God, ℣. 13. wherefore for his comfort he is told, that tho' the inhabitants of Jeruſalem had inſulted their brethren that were carried captive, and looked upon the land of Iſrael as their own poſſeſſion, that God would be a little ſanctuary to them; that he would gather them out of all lands, and give them the land of Iſrael; that they ſhould come thither, and remove all idolatry from it, and ſhould have regenerating and renewing grace given them, to walk in the ſtatutes and ordinances of the Lord, by which they ſhould appear to be his people, and he to be their God, ℣. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. but as for ſuch that continued in their abominable idolatries, theſe ſhould receive a juſt recompence of reward, ℣. 21. after which follows an account of the entire removal of the glory of the Lord from the city of Jeruſalem, ℣. 22, 23. and the prophet being in viſion brought again to Chaldea, reports the whole he had ſeen to them of the captivity, ℣. 24, 25.

℣. 1. Moreover, the Spirit lift me up, &c.] From the inner court of the temple, where the prophet was, according to the laſt account of him, ch. viii. 16. it was the ſame ſpirit that took him by the lock of his head, and lift him up, as in ch. viii. 3. and perhaps in the ſame manner: and brought me unto the eaſt gate of the Lord's houſe, which looketh eaſtward; where were the cherubim, and the wheels, and the glory of God above them, ch. x. 19: and behold, at the door of the gate five and twenty men; not the ſame as in ch. viii. 16. for they were in a different place, between the porch and the altar; and about different ſervice, they were worſhipping there; and ſeem to be men of a different order, prieſts; whereas theſe were at the door of the eaſtern gate, ſitting as a court of judicature, and were civil magiſtrates; tho' Jarchi and Kimchi take them to be the ſame. Some ſay Jeruſalem was divided into twenty-four pariſhes, diſtricts, or wards, and every one had its own head, ruler, and governor; and that there was one who was the preſident over them all, like the mayor and aldermen of a city. Among whom I ſaw Jaazaniah the ſon of Azur; not the ſame that is mentioned in ch. viii. 11. he was the ſon of Shaphan, this of Azur; he was one of the ſeventy of the ancients of Iſrael, this one of the twenty-five heads or rulers of the people; he ſeems to have been a prince; by having a cenſer in his hand, this was a prieſt: the Septuagint and Arabic verſions call him, Jechoniah: and Pelatiah the ſon of Benaiah; theſe two are mentioned by name, as being principal men, and well known by the prophet; and the latter is obſerved more eſpecially, for what befel him hereafter related: princes of the people; men who were intruſted with power and authority, to exerciſe the laws of the nation; and who ſhould have been reformers of the people, and ought to have given them good advice, and ſet them good examples; whereas they were the reverſe, as follows.

℣. 2. Then ſaid he unto me, ſon of man, &c.] That is, the Lord, or the Spirit of the Lord, that lift him up: theſe are the men that deviſe miſchief; or vanity [b]; this is to be underſtood not of the two only that are named, tho' it may of them chiefly; but of all the twenty five, who formed ſchemes for the holding out of the ſiege, and for the ſecurity of the city, and of themſelves in it, which was all folly and vanity: and give wicked counſel in this city; either in eccleſiaſtical affairs, to forſake the worſhip of God, and cleave to the idols of the nations; or in civil things, as follows.

℣. 3. Which ſay it is not near, let us build houſes, &c.] Meaning that the deſtruction of the city was not near, as the prophet had foretold, ch. vii. 3, 6, 7, 10, 12. and therefore encourage the people to build houſes, and reſt themſelves ſecure, as being ſafe from all danger, and having nothing to fear from the Chaldean army; and ſo putting away the evil day far from them, which was juſt at hand: tho' the words may be rendered, it is not proper to build houſes near [c]; near the city of Jeruſalem, in the ſuburbs of it, ſince they would be liable to be deſtroyed by the enemy; but this would not be condemned as wicked counſel, but muſt be judged very prudent and adviſeable: and the ſame may be objected to another rendering of the word, which might be offered, not in the midſt to build houſes; or it is not proper to build houſes in the midſt of the city, in order to receive the multitude that flock out of the country, thro' fear of the enemy, to Jeruſalem for ſafety; ſince by this means, as the number of the inhabitants would be increaſed, ſo proviſions in time would become ſcarce, and a famine muſt enſue, which would oblige to deliver up the city into the hands of the beſiegers; wherefore the firſt ſenſe ſeems beſt. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render them, are not the houſes lately built? and ſo not eaſily demoliſhed, and are like to continue long, and we the in them. This city is the cauldron, and we be the fleſh; referring to, and laughing at, what one of the prophets, namely Jeremiah, had ſaid of them, comparing them to a boiling pot, Jer. i. 13. and it is as if they ſhould ſay, be it ſo, that this city is as a cauldron or boiling pot, then we are the fleſh in it; and as fleſh is not taken out of a pot until it is boiled, no more ſhall we be removed from hence till we die; we ſhall live and die in this city; and as it is difficult and dangerous to take hot boiling meat out of a cauldron, ſo it is unlikely we ſhould be taken out of this city, and carried captive; what a cauldron or brazen pot is to the fleſh, it holds and keeps it from falling into the fire; that the walls of Jeruſalem are to us, our ſafety and preſervation; nor need we fear captivity.

---

[b] און vanitatem, Calvin, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius; vanum, Cocceius, Starckius.

[c] לא בקרוב בנות בתים non in propinquo ædificandæ domus, Junius & Tremellius, Cocceius, Polanus; non in propinquo ædificare domos, Montanus, Piſcator, Starckius.

℣. 4. Therefore propheſy againſt them, &c.] Evil things againſt them, things that are diſagreeable to them; ſince they flatter themſelves with good things, and cry peace and ſafety, let them know that deſtruction is coming upon them: or, concerning them[f]; what will befal them, and that it will be otherwiſe with them than they imagine: propheſy, O ſon of man; this is repeated, not only to ſtir up the prophet to the performance of his work and office, not fearing the faces, and revilings, and mockings of men; but to ſhew the indignation of the Lord at their ſcoffs and jeers, and the certain accompliſhment of what ſhould be predicted.

℣. 5. And the Spirit of the Lord fell upon me, &c.] In an extraordinary manner, and afreſh, and enlightened his mind, and ſhewed him things that ſhould come to paſs; and filled him with boldneſs and courage to declare them. The Targum interprets it of the ſpirit of prophecy: and ſaid unto me, ſpeak; what I ſhall ſhew and put into thy mouth, that ſpeak out; be not afraid, but boldly declare all that I give thee in commiſſion to ſay: thus ſaith the Lord, thus have ye ſaid, O houſe of Iſrael; as in ℣. 3. which perhaps was ſaid in ſecret, and ſpoken privately, but known by the Lord; and it was not only the princes that ſaid it, but the whole body of the people joined in with it, and agreed to it; tho' it is very probable, they were influenced by the former: for I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them; not only their ſcoffing words, but the thoughts of their hearts; not one of them eſcaped the knowledge of God; the conſideration of which ſhould command an awe on men, and engage them to a watchfulneſs over their thoughts, words, and actions.

℣. 6. Ye have multiplied your ſlain in this city, &c.] Had killed many of the prophets of the Lord that had been ſent unto them, and had ſhed much innocent blood; and not only had unjuſtly condemned many to die, and had put them to death without a cauſe; but alſo the death of all thoſe that were ſlain whilſt the city was beſieging, and when it was taken, were owing to their advice and counſel, in encouraging them to hold out, and not deliver up the city; fanſying they ſhould be able to defend it, contrary to the declarations of the Lord by the prophet; wherefore their death is laid to ſuch adviſers, and they are called their ſlain: and ye have filled the ſtreets thereof with ſlain; ſuch numbers of innocent perſons being put to death, as in the times of Manaſſeh, 2 Kings xxi. 16. or ſo many dying of the famine, peſtilence, and ſword, during the ſiege, and at the taking of Jeruſalem.

℣. 7. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Applying the parabolical expreſſions they had derided, and explaining them in a different ſenſe from what they had put upon them: your ſlain whom ye have laid in the midſt of it, they are the fleſh; the prophets they had killed; the perſons who had died innocently for crimes laid to their charge, they had not been guilty of; and ſuch who had fallen by one judgment or another ſince the ſiege, they were the perſons intended by the fleſh, and not ſuch as were alive; and therefore could promiſe themſelves nothing from this proverb they had took up, and ſcoffed at: and this city is the cauldron; that holds the ſlain, and in which they will lie and continue, and not the living: but I will bring you forth out of the midſt of it; where they promiſed themſelves ſafety, and a long continuance; yet ſhould not abide, but be carried captive.

℣. 8. Ye have feared the ſword, &c.] Of the Chaldeans; and therefore they ſent to the Egyptians for help. The Targum is, "ye have been afraid "of them that kill with the ſword;" and not afraid of the Lord; ſee Matt. x. 28: and I will bring a ſword upon you, ſaith the Lord God; or thoſe that kill with the ſword, as the Targum; meaning the Chaldeans, who were ſent by the Lord, and when they took the city, put many to death by the ſword, and carried captive others.

℣. 9. And I will bring you out of the midſt thereof, &c.] Jeruſalem, the cauldron, as they ſaid it was, and where they thought they ſhould be ſafe; this is repeated, to expreſs the certainty of it, and to excite their attention to it, and remove their vain confidence: and deliver you into the hands of ſtrangers; the Chaldeans: and will execute judgments among you; puniſhments for ſin, ſuch as famine, peſtilence, ſword, and captivity.

℣. 10. Ye ſhall fall by the ſword; &c.] Of the Chaldeans; not in the city of Jeruſalem, but out of it, when it was broken up, and they fled: I will judge you in the border of Iſrael; that is, inflict puniſhment on them, particularly by the ſword; which was done at Riblah in the land of Hamath, where the ſons of Zedekiah were ſlain, and all the princes of Judah, Jer. lii. 9, 10. and this was on the border of the land of Iſrael, Numb. xxxiv. 8, 11: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; who knows things, and foretels them before they are; and am able to accompliſh all that is threatened; and am juſt and righteous in all my ways and works; and who am known by the judgments executed by me.

℣. 11. This city ſhall not be your cauldron, &c.] It was one, as in ℣. 7. but not theirs; it was the cauldron for the ſlain, for the dead, but not the living: neither ſhall ye be the fleſh in the midſt of it; or, and ye ſhall be[g]; or, but ye ſhall be; the negative is underſtood, and rightly ſupplied by us; tho' the Targum renders it without it, "but ye "ſhall be in the midſt of it, as fleſh that is boiled "in the midſt of a pot:" but I will judge you in the border of Iſrael; this is repeated, that they might take notice of it, and to aſſure them that ſo it would be.

---

[f] עליהם de eis, Vulg. Lat. ſuper eos, Pagninus, Montanus.

[g] ואתם תהיו & vos eritis, Montanus, Cocceius.

℣. 12. And ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] See the note on ℣. 10: for ye have not walked in my ſtatutes, neither executed my judgments; which is the reaſon why the Lord would judge them on the border of Iſrael, and deliver them up into the hands of ſtrangers; nor can he be thought to act the ſevere and cruel part to them, when this their diſobedience is obſerved; ſince they had his ſtatutes and his judgments made known to them, which were not known to other nations, and yet they regarded them not; wherefore it was but righteous in him to inflict his judgments upon them; and which is the more aggravated by what follows, and which ſtill more clearly ſhows the juſtice of the divine proceedings againſt them: but have done after the manners of the heathens that are round about them; or, the judgments of the heathens[h]; regarded them, and acted according to them, when they ſlighted and diſobeyed the judgments of the Lord; inſtead of worſhipping of him according to his revealed will, they ſerved the idols of the nations round about them, and gave in to all their ſuperſtitious rites and ceremonies.

℣. 13. And it came to paſs when I propheſied, &c.] Or, as I propheſied[i]; that is, whilſt he was propheſying, or declaring the above things from the mouth of the Lord, concerning the ſlaughter of the Jews by the ſword, and the captivity of the reſt: that Pelatiah the ſon of Benaiah died; one of the princes of the people, and was among the five and twenty men the prophet ſaw at the door of the eaſt-gate of the temple, ℣. 1. this man dropped down dead on a ſudden, juſt as Ananias and Sapphira at the feet of Peter. It was in a viſion Ezekiel ſaw this, and in the temple; but no doubt at the ſame time this prince died at his own houſe, whoſe death was notified to the prophet in this way. Then fell I down upon my face; as greatly ſurprized at the event, and filled with concern at what would be the iſſue of this providence; looking upon it as a pledge and earneſt, a token and forerunner of the utter deſtruction of the people: and cried with a loud voice; expreſſing the vehemency of his affection, and the earneſtneſs of his ſupplication: and ſaid, ah Lord God, wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Iſrael? or, art thou making[k]? the ten tribes had been carried captive many years ago, and a large number of the other two tribes in Jeconiah's captivity, ſo that there were but a remnant left in the land; and upon the ſudden and awful death of this prince, the prophet feared the Lord was going to make an utter end of them at once; which he deprecates.

℣. 14. Again the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying, &c.] In anſwer to his prayer. The Targum calls it, "the word of prophecy from the "Lord;" this was by way of comfort to the captives in Babylon, as the former was by way of threatning to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem.

℣. 15. Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, &c.] Or, of thy redemption[l]; to whom the right of redemption of his lands and poſſeſſions belonged, as it did to thoſe that were next a-kin. The Septuagint, by a miſtake of the word, render it, the men of thy captivity; and ſo the Syriac and Arabic verſions following them. 'Tis true, thoſe were his fellow-captives who are here meant; ſome of them that were carried captive were his brethren by blood, and all by nation and religion; and theſe phraſes, and the repetition of them, are deſigned not only to excite the prophet's attention to, and to aſſure them of what is after declared; but to take off his concern for the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, who had uſed his brethren ill, and to turn his thoughts and affections towards his friends in Chaldea. Kimchi thinks, that theſe three expreſſions refer to three captivities; the captivity of the children of Gad and Reuben; the captivity of Samaria, or the ten tribes; and the captivity of Jehoiachin. It follows, and all the houſe of Iſrael wholly are they; or, "all the houſe of Iſrael, all of them," as the Targum; that is, all the whole houſe of Iſrael. The Septuagint render it, all the houſe of Iſrael is made an end of; the Syriac verſion, ſhall be blotted out; and the Arabic verſion, ſhall be cut off; all wrong; ſince theſe words are not a threatening to the ten tribes, or thoſe of the Jews in captivity, for all that follows is in favour of them; but only point at the perſons the prophet is turned unto, and who are the ſubject of the following diſcourſe. A colon, or at leaſt a ſemicolon, ſhould be here put; ſince the accent Athnach is upon the laſt word. Unto whom the inhabitants of Jeruſalem have ſaid, get ye far from the Lord; Kimchi interprets it, from the land of the Lord, the holy land; they being carried captive into a foreign country. The Targum is, "from the fear of the Lord;" the worſhip of the Lord; they being at a diſtance from the temple, and the ſervice of it. Theſe words are an inſult of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem upon the captives, ſuggeſting that they were great ſinners, and for their ſins were taken away from their own land, and carried to Babylon; and that they deſerved to be excommunicated from the houſe and people of God, and were ſo; and indeed, this is a kind of a form of excommunication of them: unto us is this land given in poſſeſſion; you have forfeited your right to it, and are diſinherited; we are ſole heirs, and in the poſſeſſion of it, and ſhall ever continue in it. The Syriac verſion reads this, and the preceding clauſe, as if they were the words of the Iſraelites to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, thus; "becauſe they ſaid to them, O inhabitants "of Jeruſalem, depart from the Lord, for unto "us is given this land for an inheritance." The Arabic verſion indeed makes them to be the words of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, but render the laſt clauſe thus; to you (i. e. the Iſraelites) is given the land for an inheritance.

℣. 16. Therefore ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Since they were ſo inſulted and ill-treated by their brethren the Jews: altho' I have caſt them afar off among the heathen; both the ten tribes, even all the houſe of Iſrael, who were carried into Aſſyria, and placed in the cities of the Medes, in Halath and Habor, by the river Gozan, 2 Kings xvii. 6. and thoſe of the Jews in Jeconiah's captivity, among whom were Ezekiel, and his brethren, and his kindred: and altho' I have ſcattered them among the countries; and therefore what with the diſtance of the place where they were, and the diſperſion of them among the people where they reſided, their caſe might ſeem to be deſperate; and that there was no probability, and ſcarce any poſſibility, of their being preſerved as a people, and of their reſtoration to their own land: yet will I be to them a little ſanctuary in the countries where they ſhall come; their dwelling-place, as he has been to his people in all generations; their protection from all their enemies, in whom, and by whoſe power they ſhould be ſafe; and whoſe preſence they ſhould enjoy, tho' deprived of public ordinances of temple-worſhip and ſervice; though they were at a diſtance from the great ſanctuary, the temple, the inhabitants of Jeruſalem boaſted of, yet the Lord would make up the want of that to them with himſelf. The Targum, Jarchi, and Kimchi [m], interpret this of the ſynagogues, which were ſecond to the temple, the Iſraelites had in foreign countries, where they prayed to the Lord, and worſhipped him, and enjoyed his preſence. It may be rendered, the ſanctuary of a few [n]; they being but few, eſpecially that were truly godly, that were carried captive: or, a ſanctuary for a little while [o]; that is, during ſeventy years, and then they ſhould be returned, as follows. The Targum is, "I have given them ſynagogues, ſecond to my ſanctuary, and they are as few in the provinces where they are carried captive."

---

[h] כמשפטי הגויים juxta judicia gentium, Pagninus, Montanus; ſecundum jura gentium, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; ſecundum judicia gentium, Cocceius, Starckius.

[i] כהנבאי me prophetante, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[k] אתה עשה tu faciens, Montanus, Starckius.

[l] אנשי גאלתך viri redemptionis tuæ, Montanus, Heb. viri redempturæ tuæ, Piſcator.

ỿ. 17. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, I will even gather you from the people, &c.] The Babylonians, Medes, and Perſians, where they had been carried captive: and aſſemble you out of the countries, where ye have been ſcattered; that is, out of Chaldea and Media, out of which they ſhould come in a body, and not ſingly, or in ſmall numbers, as they did, when Cyrus iſſued out his proclamation: and I will give you the land of Iſrael; not only the Jews of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, but many of the ten tribes came out of Babylon with Zorobabel, and ſettled in the land of Iſrael; and hither they came alſo in after-times, even thoſe that ſettled in other countries, at their ſeveral feſtivals, and about ſuch time more eſpecially that the Meſſiah was expected, and continued there; and this will have a fuller completion at the reſtoration of the Jews in the latter days.

ỿ. 18. And they ſhall come thither, &c.] That is, thoſe of the captivity ſhall come to the land of Iſrael, they or their poſterity: and they ſhall take away all the deteſtable things thereof; the idols of the nations, that had been there introduced, deteſtable to God and all good men: and all the abominations thereof from thence; idols as before, even all of them, ſo that idolatry ſhould be wholly rooted out; this had its accompliſhment under Zorobabel, Ezra, Haggai, &c. when the worſhip of God was reſtored, and there was a reformation of many abuſes in religion; and again, in the times of the Maccabees; and will have a greater fulfilment at the time of the converſion of the Jews; when every thing that is deteſtable and abominable among that people will be removed; of which converſion the following words are a prophecy.

ỿ. 19. And I will give them one heart, &c.] In oppoſition to a divided heart, Hoſ. x. 2. divided between the true God and idols, wavering and halting between two opinions, ſometimes ſerving God, and ſometimes Baal; a heart to purſue one way of worſhip, and to ſerve the Lord with one ſhoulder or conſent, Jer. xxxii. 40. Zeph. iii. 9. a heart ſincere to God and man, in oppoſition to a double or hypocritical one, Pſ. xii. 2. a heart ſingle to the honour and glory of God, and firmly attached to his word and worſhip: alſo concord, harmony, an unity of affections to one another, ſo as to be of one heart and one ſoul, as the firſt chriſtians were, who were Jews, Acts iv. 32. and an unity of judgment, an oneneſs of principle and practice, as there ought to be, 1 Cor. i. 10. and all this is the gift of God, and flows from his grace and favour. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, another heart; different from what they had before. And I will put a new ſpirit within you; meaning either the Holy Spirit of God, the author of regeneration and renovation: this is repreſented by the ancient Jews [p], as the ſame with the Spirit of the Meſſiah that moved upon the face of the waters, Gen. i. 2. or the ſpirit of man, the ſeat of this renewing work; or rather the work itſelf, called a new man, a new creature, Eph. iv. 24. 2 Cor. v. 17. and this is a new frame and diſpoſition of mind, in which are new principles of light and life, grace and holineſs; a new underſtanding of themſelves and ſtate, of God and of Chriſt, of divine things and goſpel-truths; new affections for God, and all that is good; new deſires after grace and righteouſneſs, after God and communion with him, after his word and ordinances, and conformity to Chriſt; new purpoſes and reſolutions to ſerve the Lord, and glorify him; new delights and joys, and in ſhort all things become new. Inſtead of within you, the Septuagint, and all the Oriental verſions, read, in them; and to this the Targum agrees. And I will take the ſtony heart out of their fleſh; a heart hardened by ſin, and confirmed in it; deſtitute of ſpiritual life, ſenſeleſs and ſtupid as to ſpiritual things; ſtubborn and inflexible, on which no impreſſions are made by corrections, admonitions, and inſtructions of ſuperiors; and ſo an impenitent one: this God only can remove; men can't ſoften their own hearts; nor can miniſters work upon them; nor will judgments themſelves bring men to repentance: it is the work of God only; who does it by his word, with which he breaks the rock in pieces; by the diſcoveries of his love, with which he melts the heart that is harder than the nether mill-ſtone; by giving repentance to them, by working faith in them, to look to a crucified Chriſt and mourn, and all this by his Spirit: this is ſaid to be taken out of their fleſh; not their body, but their nature corrupted by ſin, John iii. 6. which ſhows that this hardneſs is natural to men, and rooted in them, and that it requires omnipotence to remove it. And will give them an heart of fleſh; a ſenſible and penitent one; a ſoft and tender one; a ſanctified and ſpiritual one; one flexible and obſequious to the will of God; on which impreſſions are made; on which the laws of God are written; into which the doctrines of the goſpel are tranſcribed, Chriſt is formed, and the fear of God is implanted, with every other grace; all which are the gifts of God, and owing to his efficacious grace. The Targum of the whole is, "and I will give them a fearing heart, and a ſpirit of fear I will put in their bowels (or in the midſt of them); and I will break the heart of wickedneſs, which is as hard

---

[m] Ex T. Bab. Megilla, fol. 29 1.

[n] למקדש מעט ad ſanctuarium paucitatis, Calvin; in ſanctuarium paucorum, Cocceius. So Ben Melech ſays the word is a ſubſtantive in ſome copies.

[o] Pauliſper, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Caſtalio.

[p] Zohar in Gen. fol. 107. 3.

“ as a ſtone, out of their fleſh, and I will give “ them an heart fearing before me to do my “ will.”

℣. 20. That they may walk in my ſtatutes, &c.] Have their converſation ordered according to the will and word of God; to which there is neither will nor power, till God gives a new heart and ſpirit, or works in them both to will and to do: and keep mine ordinances, and do them; all things appertaining to religion and worſhip, both in public and private: and they ſhall be my people, and I will be their God; it will appear by walking in the ſtatutes of the Lord, and by keeping his ordinances, that they are his people, made willing in the day of his power to ſerve him; and by having covenant-bleſſings beſtowed on them, the grace of God wrought in them, his fear upon them, and new hearts and ſpirits given them, that he is their covenant-God and Father; by this means, what under the prevalence of idolatry was hid, will now be made manifeſt.

℣. 21. But as for them, &c.] Who remained in Jeruſalem, and were not carried captive, but continued in their own land, and worſhipped idols, the ſame as in ℣. 15: whoſe heart walketh after the heart of their deteſtable things, and their abominations; not images of gold and ſilver, which cannot be ſaid to have an heart; but devils and evil ſpirits worſhipped in them, who are well pleaſed and delighted with the worſhip given them; ſo that the hearts of the devils worſhipped, and the hearts of the idolatrous worſhippers, were alike and agreed; wherefore their hearts were very different from thoſe before-mentioned; ſo far from having one heart, that their hearts were double and divided, partly after God, and partly after their idols; and ſo far from walking in the ſtatutes of the Lord, that they were walking after the will of their idols, and in the worſhip of them; which were abominable and deteſtable to God, and all good men. The Targum is, “ and after the wor- “ ſhip of their idols, and of their abominations, “ their heart wanders.” I will recompenſe their ways upon their own heads, ſaith the Lord God; that is, puniſh them according to their deſerts, by the ſword, famine, peſtilence, and captivity.

℣. 22. Then did the cherubim lift up their wings, &c.] In order to remove, as in ch. x. 19: and the wheels beſides them; which were lifted up alſo along with the cherubim: and the glory of the God of Iſrael was over them above; both cherubim and wheels.

℣. 23. And the glory of the Lord went up from the midſt of the city, &c.] Of Jeruſalem, whither it was removed from the door of the eaſt gate of the temple, ch. x. 19. tho' no mention is made of ſuch removal; and now having left the temple, it leaves the city: and ſtood upon the mountain, which is on the eaſt ſide of the city; either waiting for the repentance of the inhabitants of it, leaving them with reluctance; or in order to bring down his judgments upon it, and behold its deſtruction and ruin: this mountain was the mountain of Olives, as the Targum interprets it; and ſo Jarchi and Kimchi; ſee Zech. xiv. 5. Chriſt ſtood on this mountain and wept over Jeruſalem, and from hence he aſcended to heaven. This Jarchi calls the third remove of the Shekinah or glory of the God of Iſrael. The Rabbins ſay [a] it removed ten times, and reckon them thus, “ from the mercy-ſeat to “ the cherub; from the cherub to the cherub; “ from the cherub to the threſhold; from the “ threſhold to the court; from the court to the “ altar; from the altar to the roof; from the roof “ to the wall; from the wall to the city; from “ the city to the mountain; from the mountain “ to the wilderneſs; and from the wilderneſs it “ aſcended and ſat in its own place, according to “ Hoſ. v. 15.

℣. 24. Afterwards the Spirit took me up, &c.] From the eaſt gate of the temple, whither he had brought him; when he had been ſhown, and every thing had been told him, neceſſary for the reproof of the Jews in Jeruſalem, and for the comfort of the captives: and brought me in viſion by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, to them of the captivity; all this was done in viſion; ſo it appeared to the prophet, under the influence of the divine Spirit of God, as if he was carried to Jeruſalem, and there ſaw and heard all he did, and then was brought back again to Chaldea; whereas this was only mental, not corporal; he was all the while in Chaldea, though things were ſo repreſented to his mind, as if he had been removed from place to place: ſo the viſion that I had ſeen went up from me; he returned to himſelf, and became as another man, or as he was before; and found himſelf in his own houſe, and among the elders of Judah. This ſhows that the viſion was from heaven, and therefore it is ſaid to go up from him; and that prophecy was not of the will of men, but of God; and that the prophets were not always under the influence of a prophetic ſpirit; but this came and went, and was only with them at certain times.

℣. 25. Then I ſpake unto them of the captivity, &c.] The elders of Judah, and others with them, at Tel-Abib, where the prophet had an houſe: all the things the Lord had ſhewed me; all the viſions contained in the preceding chapters, from the beginning of the 4th chapter to the end of this: as the pourtraying Jeruſalem on a tile, and lying on his ſide for a long time, as an emblem of the ſiege of that city; the barley cakes, denoting a famine; the ſharp knife with which he cut off his hair, ſignifying the deſtruction of its inhabitants; how he was brought to Jeruſalem, what idolatries he ſaw in the temple; the viſion of the ſix men with ſlaughter-weapons, and of another with a writer's inkhorn by his ſide; and alſo the viſion of the cherubim and wheels, and the glory of the God of Iſrael, and their departure from the city and temple, together with what was threatened to the Jews in Jeruſalem, and was promiſed to them in Chaldea; all which the prophet faithfully related, and kept back nothing that the Lord had made known unto him by words or ſigns.

---

[a] T. Bab. Roſh-haſhana, fol. 31. 1.

CHAP. XII.

IN this chapter, under the ſign of the prophet's removing houſhold-goods, is repreſented the removal of the king of Judah and his people, from their own land into captivity; and under another ſign, of the prophet's eating and drinking with quaking, and trembling, and carefulneſs, is ſet forth, either the famine that ſhould be during the ſiege of Jeruſalem, or the deſolations following the taking of it; and the chapter is concluded with a reproof of the Jews flattering themſelves that theſe prophecies reſpected times a great way off, and therefore hoped they would never be accompliſhed. The preface to the firſt ſign is in ℣. 1, 2. which deſcribes the people of the Jews as rebellious, and given up to judicial blindneſs and hardneſs; and ſuggeſts the cauſe of all their calamities; the order to prepare goods for removing, to ſhew to the people; for digging a wall; carrying the ſtuff out in their ſight, on his ſhoulders at twilight; and covering his face when he did it, is in ℣. 3, 4, 5, 6. the execution of this order, which is declared in part for the whole, is in ℣. 7. then follows the explication of this ſign, ℣. 8, 9, 10, 11. and the application of it, firſt to king Zedekiah, in whom ſhould be fulfilled ſeveral of the particulars mentioned, ℣. 12, 13. and to the people about him, and his army that ſhould be ſcattered and fall by the ſword, ℣. 14. the end of which ſhould be, that the Lord ſhould be known, his power, truth and righteouſneſs, by a few that ſhould eſcape the famine, peſtilence and ſword, ℣. 15, 16. The ſecond ſign, with the explication and application of it, is in ℣. 17, 18, 19, 20. and the chapter is cloſed with a reproof of the Jews; the proverbial expreſſion they uſed, and which the Lord reſented, is cited ℣. 21, 22. and the prophet is bid to aſſure them that it ſhould ceaſe, or there ſhould be no room for it; and alſo every vain viſion and flattering divination, ℣. 23, 24. and that the word of the Lord ſhould not be prolonged, but ſhould quickly and certainly be accompliſhed; and that their hopes of the contrary were in vain, ℣. 25, 26, 27, 28.

℣. 1. The word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] The word of prophecy, as the Targum; the viſion of the cherubim being over, this very likely, immediately followed upon the former; tho' the exact time of the prophecy cannot be fixed, becauſe the date is not given; it muſt be between the ſixth month of the ſixth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, ch. viii. 1. and the fifth month of the ſeventh year, ch. xx. 1.

℣. 2. Son of man, thou dwelleſt in the midſt of a rebellious houſe, &c.] The captives in Babylon, who murmured at their preſent condition and circumſtances, and looked upon the inhabitants of Jeruſalem to be in happy ones, and believed they would continue in them, as the falſe prophets perſuaded them; not believing the prophets of the Lord; and encouraged them to ſtand out againſt the king of Babylon, repenting that they had ſurrendered to him, and hoped they ſhould by their means be delivered; ſee the ſame character of them, ch. ii. 3, 5, 6, 7. and iii. 9, 26: which have eyes to ſee, and ſee not: they have ears to hear, and hear not; they had natural ſenſe and underſtanding, and means and opportunities of being better informed, and of knowing the true ſtate of things, and how they were, and would be; but they wilfully ſhut their eyes againſt all light and evidence, and ſtopped their ears, and would not hearken to the words of the prophets: for they are a rebellious houſe; ſtubborn, obſtinate and ſelf-willed: or, a houſe of rebellion [r].

℣. 3. Therefore, thou ſon of man, prepare thee ſtuff for removing, &c.] Or, veſſels of captivity [s]; ſuch as perſons take along with them when they go a journey, or into a far country; ſuch as a ſtaff, ſcrip, purſe, ſhoes, &c. or houſhold-goods; ſuch as tables, chairs, and the like, which are removed when a perſon goes from one houſe to another; by which ſign, they of the captivity were to be taught, that Zedekiah and the people of the Jews ſhould in like manner be carried captive into Babylon; which they were not willing to believe, and the falſe prophets had told them the contrary: and remove by day in their ſight; be carrying the ſtuff out day by day, ſeveral days running, as Jarchi from Menachem interprets it; that they may ſee and take notice of it, and aſk the reaſon of it; which when known, they might ſend to their correſpondents at Jeruſalem, and acquaint them with it: and thou ſhalt remove from thy place to another place in their ſight; from the houſe in which he dwelt, to another houſe at ſome diſtance; yet ſo as to be ſeen by them, both from whence, and whither he removed: it may be they will conſider; or ſee [t]; make uſe of their eyes, and of their underſtandings, and think better of things. The Targum is, "perhaps they will fear;" the Lord, and regard his prophets, and be afraid of his judgments: tho' they be a rebellious houſe; ſuch who are the moſt obſtinate, may be reclaimed.

℣. 4. Then ſhalt thou bring forth thy ſtuff by day in their ſight, &c.] Bring it forth, that they may be ſpectators of it; and by day, that it might be manifeſt to them what was carried out; and this day by day, till all was removed: as ſtuff for removing; that is intended to be removed from one place to another, and is carried away in the day-time, in the view of every one: and thou ſhalt go forth at even in their ſight; as a man having removed his goods in the day-time, goes forth himſelf at evening: this denotes the flight of Zedekiah from Jeruſalem in the night, Jer. xxxix. 4: as they that go forth into captivity; with a ſorrowful countenance, in a mournful habit, and with airs and geſtures ſhewing anger, anxiety and diſtreſs; with a bundle on their ſhoulders, and a ſtaff in their hands.

℣. 5. Dig thou thro' the wall in their ſight, &c.] The wall of the houſe where he was, as an emblem of the city of Jeruſalem cloſely beſieged, from whence there was no eſcape, but by digging thro' the wall: this ſhowed the manner in which Zede-

---

[r] בית מרי domus rebellionis, Montanus, Vatablus, Starckius; domus inobedientiæ, Cocceius. [s] כלי גולה vaſa tranſmigrationis, Pagninus, Montanus, Starckius; inſtrumenta migrationis, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus.

[t] אולי יראו fortaſſe viſuri ſunt, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; fortaſſe videbunt, Piſcator, Starckius.

Zedekiah made his eſcape, by the way of the gate, between the two walls, which was by the king's garden, Jer. lii. 7: and carry out thereby; not his ſtuff, as before; but proviſions for himſelf, neceſſary for his journey or flight; as no doubt Zedekiah and thoſe with him did.

℣. 6. In their ſight ſhalt thou bear it upon thy ſhoulders, &c.] The bundle, packed up for his uſe and ſervice, carried out thro' the wall dug by him. The Septuagint and Vulgate Latin verſions render it, as if he himſelf was to be carried out upon the ſhoulders of another, thus; in their ſight, upon the ſhoulders, thou ſhalt be carried; but the former ſenſe is beſt: and carry it forth in the twilight; ſignifying the ſame as before: thou ſhalt cover thy face, that thou ſee not the ground; or land; not the land of Iſrael, but the land of Chaldea, where the prophet was: this ſhews that great ſhame and confuſion which ſhould attend the king of Judah when he fled, and great fear and terror alſo; and likewiſe has regard to his eyes being put out by the king of Babylon; ſo that he ſaw not the land into which he was carried captive, Jer. lii. 11: for I have ſet thee for a ſign unto the houſe of Iſrael; to ſhew unto them by deeds, as well as by words, what ſhould befal them; ſee Iſ. viii. 18. and xx. 2, 3, 4.

℣. 7. And I did ſo as I was commanded, &c.] Tho' it might ſeem ridiculous in the ſight of men, and he be bantered and deſpiſed for it; yet it being the will of God, he was obedient to it; as it becomes the ſervants of the Lord to be with all readineſs and chearfulneſs; even in things for which they may be laughed at by others: I brought forth my ſtuff by day, as ſtuff for captivity; brought his goods out of his houſe, in order to be had to another place, as a type of the captivity of his countrymen the Jews: and in the even I digged thro' the wall with mine hand; not with an iron inſtrument, with which walls are dug; but with his hand, he having no ſuch inſtrument with him, and being in haſte, and alſo that it might be done without noiſe; denoting the ſuddenneſs of Zedekiah's flight, and the haſte he was in; not having time and leiſure to take proper inſtruments with him, he and his men pulled out the ſtones of the wall with their own hands, and ſilently made their way thro' and eſcaped; ſee ℣. 12: I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my ſhoulder in their ſight; that it might be a ſign and emblem of the above things to them, and they might learn ſome inſtructions from it.

℣. 8. And in the morning came the word of the Lord unto me, ſaying.] That is, in the morning after he had done all the above things commanded him; explaining the meaning of them, and ſhewing to whom they belonged.

℣. 9. Son of man, hath not the houſe of Iſrael ſaid unto thee, &c.] The Jews that were in captivity; for with theſe the prophet was, and before their eyes he had done the above things; and they only could put the following queſtion to him, who were the rebellious houſe, ℣. 2: what doſt thou? this they put not ſeriouſly, as deſirous of being informed what was meant by all this; but as deriding the prophet for acting ſuch a weak and ſilly part: this the Lord knew they had done, and therefore directs the prophet to make a proper anſwer; tho' ſome think the ſenſe is, hath not the houſe of Iſrael ſaid unto thee, what doſt thou? no, they have not; they take no notice of it; never ſay one word about it, or enquire into the meaning of it; quite careleſs, thoughtleſs and ſtupid; wherefore, tho' they will not aſk any thing concerning it, yet begin with them, and ſhew them the deſign of it.

℣. 10. Say thou unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] In anſwer to their ſneering queſtion; or notwithſtanding their ſtupidity and indolence, and in order to awaken them out of it: this burden concerneth the prince in Jeruſalem; the preſent reigning prince in Jeruſalem, king Zedekiah. The ſenſe is, either that that burden of goods the prophet carried out on his ſhoulders, had a regard to the king of Judah and his captivity, and was an emblem of it; or rather that the burden of prophecy, or that ſorrowful calamity predicted by the above ſign or type, had relation to that prince, and would be fulfilled in him; and ſo the Targum, "upon the prince is the burden of this prophecy;" in like manner Jarchi interprets it, of prophecy: and all the houſe of Iſrael which are among them; they were alſo concerned in it, and would be carried captive with their prince.

℣. 11. Say, I am your ſign, &c.] Which repreſents you, and ſhows what will befal you: like as I have done, ſo ſhall it be done unto them; as he had carried out his ſtuff, and had removed it from one place to another, ſo they ſhould be carried away out of their own land into a foreign country, as follows: they ſhall remove, and go into captivity; the Babyloniſh captivity.

℣. 12. And the prince that is among them, &c.] Zedekiah their king that reigned over them, in whom they truſted, and under whoſe government they thought themſelves ſafe and ſecure: ſhall bear upon his ſhoulder in the twilight, and ſhall go forth; out of Jeruſalem, where his palace and throne were, leaving the main of his riches behind him; only ſhould carry away what he could on his ſhoulder, a bundle of his moſt valuable effects, or proviſions for his flight: or, as Kimchi and Ben Melech think, his cloaths, for lighter march, and more ſpeedy haſte: they ſhall dig thro' the wall to carry out thereby; it ſeems by this, that when the king, and his nobles, and ſervants made their eſcape, they not only went forth between two walls, but broke thro' one, in order to get away; which was done, not by the king himſelf, but by his ſervants; ſo the Targum, "in a wall ſhall they dig to bring "him out by it;" and therefore the number is changed, not he, but they ſhall dig, &c. tho' in the following words the ſingular is again uſed: he ſhall cover his face, that he ſee not the ground with his eyes; either thro' ſhame at leaving the city, his palace, and all his grandeur. The Targum is, "he ſhall cover his face becauſe he hath "ſinned:" or that he might not be known and be diſcovered who he was; and ſo it was thro' fear of being betrayed by a falſe friend, or taken by the enemy: or elſe this may reſpect his having his eyes put out at Riblah, ſo that he could not ſee with them the land he was carried into; tho' it rather ſeems to refer to his firſt eſcape out of Jeruſalem with a maſk or vizor on him, which might hinder his ſeeing the ground he went upon; and which, in his fright, he could not attend to, looking out here and there, not being able to keep his eye long upon any place. The Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Arabic verſions render it, that he may not be ſeen with the eye, and he ſhall not ſee the land.

℣. 13. My net alſo will I ſpread upon him, &c.] Meaning the Chaldean army, which the Lord raiſed up, and brought againſt him, and gave ſucceſs unto: and he ſhall be taken in my ſnare; as a bird is taken in the ſnare of the fowler; or a wild beaſt by the hunter. The Jews have a tradition, which is mentioned both by Jarchi, Kimchi and Abendana on the place, that there was a cave which reached from Zedekiah's houſe to the plains of Jericho, by the way of which he fled; and that God prepared a deer, which went upon the top of the cave; and the Chaldeans purſued it; and when it came to the mouth of the cave, Zedekiah was coming out, and they took him; and I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans, yet ſhall he not ſee it; his eyes being put out at Riblah, Jer. xxxix. 7. The prophet Jeremiah ſays, that his eyes ſhould behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, Jer. xxxiv. 3. and yet here Ezekiel ſays, that he ſhould not ſee the land of the Chaldeans. Joſephus[u] obſerves, that Zedekiah thought theſe two prophecies contradicted each other, and therefore gave credit to neither; but they both proved true; he ſaw the king of Babylon at Riblah; but his eyes being there put out, he ſaw not Babylon, whither he was carried captive: tho' he ſhall die there; as he did, Jer. lii. 11.

℣. 14. And I will ſcatter to every wind all that are about him to help him, &c.] Either his life-guards, the men of war that were with him when he fled, Jer. lii. 7. or his auxiliary troops, the Egyptians, whom he had taken into his pay for his aſſiſtance: and all his bands; or wings[w]; the wings of his army. The Targum interprets it, his army; theſe were all ſcattered from him when he was taken, Jer. lii. 8: and I will draw out the ſword after them; which fled into Egypt, and other countries; ſo that they did not eſcape, tho' they went not into captivity; ſee ch. v. 12.

℣. 15. And they ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] God omniſcient, and can and do foreſee and foretell future events, when the above things ſhall come to paſs; and omnipotent, able to do what he purpoſed and declared he would; and true and faithful to his word, and holy and righteous in all his ways and works: when I ſhall ſcatter them among the nations, and diſperſe them in the countries; of Egypt, Babylon, Media, and other places.

℣. 16. But I will leave a few men of them, &c.] Or, men of number[x]; of a ſmall number, ſuch as are eaſily reckoned up; which will require no great ſkill in numbers, nor trouble to count them; from the ſword, from the famine, and from the peſtilence; during the ſiege of Jeruſalem, and at the breaking of it up; but then they ſhould be carried captive into other countries: that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; who obſerving their calamities and diſtreſſes, would read their ſin in their puniſhment; and conclude they muſt have been guilty of great enormities, who were puniſhed in ſuch a manner; ſo that their puniſhment was a viſible and ſtanding declaration to the heathens of the abominable ſins they had been guilty of: or elſe the end of reſerving a few of them from the above capital judgments, was, that they being brought to a ſenſe of their ſins by their afflictions, might freely confeſs them, expreſs their repentance for them, and juſtify God in his proceedings towards them: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; not the heathens, among whom this declaration would be made; but the Jews, brought under a conviction of their ſin, and of the juſtice of God in his dealings with them.

℣. 17. Moreover, the word of the Lord came to me, ſaying.] Here follows another ſign of the deſolation of the Jews, which the prophet was unto them; as the former ſignified their going into captivity, this their famine and diſtreſs at the ſiege of Jeruſalem, and the dreadful calamities attending, and following that.

℣. 18. Son of man, eat thy bread with quaking, &c.] As one in ſurpriſe or fear, or that has got an ague upon him: and drink thy water with trembling, and with carefulneſs; fearing want of it, or as apprehenſive of danger of its being taken away; ſee ch. iv. 16.

℣. 19. And ſay unto the people of the land, &c.] Of Chaldea, where the prophet now was; not the natives of the land, but the Iſraelites, who were captives in it, ; who were ready to murmur and repine at their own caſe, as miſerable; and at that of the Jews at Jeruſalem, as happy; and therefore they are taught by this ſign, as well as by the following prophecy, that they were miſtaken: thus ſaith the Lord God, of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem; or to them, or concerning them[y]; whom the captives in Chaldea thought lived ſo happily, and would continue ſo: and of the land of Iſrael; or, upon the land of Iſrael[z]; inhabitants on it; to this ſenſe the Targum and Septuagint verſion interpret it, and alſo Kimchi: they ſhall eat their bread with carefulneſs, and drink their water with aſtoniſhment; meaning at the ſiege of Jeruſalem, when they could not eat and drink in peace; but while they were eating and drinking, were diſturbed and put into fear and ſurpriſe by the beſiegers; and alſo hearing that their proviſions would not hold out, were careful how they ate and drank, and were frighted with the thoughts of being reduced to extreme want: that her land may be deſolate from all that is therein; or, from its fulneſs[a]; men and cattel, cities, towns, houſes, vineyards, fields, fruits, and plenty of all good things. Jarchi expounds it, of riches: becauſe of the violence of all them that dwell therein; not the violence of the Chaldeans, making a prey of all they met with, plundering cities and towns, and making forage of the fruits of the earth, by which means the land was deſolate; but the rapine, oppreſſion and injuſtice of the Jews, which were the cauſe of all theſe calamities which came upon their country.

℣. 20. And the cities that are inhabited, ſhall be laid waſte, &c.] Not only the city of Jeruſalem, but the other cities of Judea; as they were by the Chaldeans, which were then full of inhabitants: and the land ſhall be deſolate; the whole land of Judea, be deſtitute of men and cattel, and lie uncultivated, and become barren and unfruitful: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; who were then captives in Babylon, as well as thoſe who ſhould be diſperſed among the nations would; ſee ℣. 15, 16.

℣. 21. And the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] After he had been a ſign unto the people, in the two inſtances above-mentioned; and they had hardened themſelves againſt the belief of the things ſignified by them, becauſe the time of their accompliſhment was not yet.

---

[u] Joſeph. Antiq. l. 10. c. 7. §. 2. and c. 8. §. 2.

[w] אגפיו alas militum, Montanus; alas ejus, Cocceius, Starckius; ſo Ben Melech.

[x] אנשי מספר viros numeri, Montanus, Vatablus; homines numero, Starckius.

[y] ליושבי ירושלם habitatoribus Hieroſolymorum, Montanus, Starckius; de habitatoribus, Piſcator; de habitantibus Hieroſolymam, Cocceius.

[z] אל אדמת ישראל, επι της γης τȣ Ισραηλ, Sept. ſuper terram Iſrael, Calvin; in terram Iſraelis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; ſo Ben Melech.

[a] ממלאה a plenitudine ſua, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 22. Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Iſrael, &c.] Which queſtion is put, not as ignorant of it, but as filled with indignation at the impiety and boldneſs of thoſe that uſed it, and in order to expoſe the wickedneſs and folly of it: ſaying, the days are prolonged; the days of affliction and diſtreſs; the time of Jeruſalem's deſtruction, and of the Babyloniſh captivity, theſe were not to be of a long time; and therefore they were ready to flatter themſelves they would never be, at leaſt in their days; and hence, becauſe judgment was not immediately executed, their hearts were ſet in them to do evil; and thus they abuſed the patience and long-ſuffering of God; and they uſed this and the following expreſſion ſo often, and ſo long, that they became proverbial to them: and every viſion faileth? or periſhes[b]? every prophecy comes to nothing; no one is fulfilled; at leaſt becauſe not at once, therefore they concluded it never would, or however, hoped it never would; and ſo pleaſed themſelves, and continued in their impenitence and unbelief, and contempt of prophecy.

℣. 23. Tell them therefore, &c.] Plainly and boldly, with the greateſt aſſurance and confidence, as from God himſelf: thus ſaith the Lord God, I will make this proverb to ceaſe; by quickly accompliſhing the things which they, by this proverb, repreſented as at a great diſtance, and what would never be brought about: and they ſhall no more uſe it as a proverb; when the things predicted ſhall take place: but ſay unto them, the days are at hand, and the effect of every viſion; the time is haſtning on, and will quickly come, when every prophecy ſhall be fulfilled: it was in the ſixth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, that theſe prophecies were delivered out; and in the ninth year Nebuchadnezzar came with his army, and beſieged Jeruſalem; ſo that the days were at hand; in three years time there began an accompliſhment of the above predictions, which were ſcoffed at in the proverb uſed.

℣. 24. For there ſhall be no more any vain viſion, &c.] Or prophecy; ſuch as the falſe prophets had given out, that the people ſhould be in peace and ſafety, and not be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon; which they gave heed to, and ſo encouraged the lying prophets to go on propheſying ſmooth things; when the prophecies of the true prophets were accompliſhed, then the falſe ones were rejected, and their prophecies no more regarded; nor could there be any more a place for them, or a reception of them: nor flattering divination within the houſe of Iſrael. The Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, Syriac and Arabic verſions read, in the midſt of the children of Iſrael; and ſo the Targum; but Kimchi ſays, that copies that ſo read are wrong; and which is confirmed by the Maſora, which obſerves, that the reading is ſo in all places, but in this. The Syriac verſion renders it, doubtful prediction; and the Vulgate Latin verſion, ambiguous divination; like the prophecies and anſwers of the heathen oracles, which were delivered in terms of doubtful ſignification, and might be taken in more ſenſes than one. The Septuagint verſion is, he that divines for grace; in order to ingratiate himſelf into the people, to gain their good will, or their money, or both; and therefore divines ſmooth things, and flatters them with that which is moſt agreeable to their inclination; but when they ſhall ſee the city taken, and themſelves carried captive, they will no more regard ſuch ſoothing diviners, who pretended from the ſtars to tell what ſhall come to paſs, as the Arabic verſion ſuggeſts.

℣. 25. For I am the Lord, I will ſpeak, &c.] A ſovereign being, immutable and eternal; who will ſpeak by his prophets, what is his mind and will ſhall be done: and the word that I ſhall ſpeak ſhall come to paſs; the word of prophecy delivered out in his name by the true prophets never fails, but is always accompliſhed; as that was which reſpected the ſiege of Jeruſalem, and captivity of the Jews: it ſhall be no more prolonged; the judgment threatened ſhall be inflicted, and that in a very ſhort time: for in your days, O rebellious houſe; whilſt they were living; which they hoped would never be, at leaſt not till after their death; whereas, within five or ſix years after this, all came to paſs: will I ſay the word, and will perform it, ſaith the Lord God of hoſts; not only the prophecy of their ruin ſhould be given out in their days, but accompliſhed in that time; which they might depend upon, ſince he who ſaid it, is the mighty God, the Lord of armies in heaven and in earth.

℣. 26. Again, the word of the Lord came to me, ſaying.] This is repeated to confirm what was before ſpoken, and that they might aſſure themſelves that there would be a certain and ſpeedy accompliſhment of what the Lord had ſaid by his prophet.

℣. 27. Son of man, behold, they of the houſe of Iſrael ſay, &c.] Either they of the ten tribes in Babylon, or the Jews in Judea, who were alſo Iſraelites: theſe the Lord directs the prophet to take notice of, and be a witneſs of what they ſaid; ſince he himſelf, as a prophet, was concerned in it: the viſion that he ſeeth is for many days to come, and he propheſieth of the times that are afar off; that is, according to them, the viſion that Ezekiel the prophet ſaw concerning their ruin; and the prophecy which he delivered out relating to that was not to be fulfilled as yet; there were many days and years ſtill to come; it was at a great diſtance, and ſo they put away this evil day far from them; they own that he had a viſion and prophecy, but it reſpected future times, and diſtant ages; and therefore they did not trouble themſelves with it; it gave them no great concern, becauſe they conſidered it as afar off.

℣. 28. Therefore ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Carry this meſſage to them from me, whether they will hear it or no; ſo ſhall it be: there ſhall none of my words be prolonged any more; the fulfilment of prophecies delivered in the name of the Lord by the prophets ſhall be no longer deferred, but ſhall quickly be: but the word which I have ſpoken, ſhall be done, ſaith the Lord God; one jot and tittle of it ſhall not paſs away, till all be fulfilled; ſooner may heaven and earth paſs away, than that ſhall; it is for ever ſettled in heaven, and ſhall be fulfilled on earth; he that has ſaid it, is of one mind, and none can turn him; and is able to do whatſoever he pleaſes.

---

[b] אבד peribit, Munſter, Montanus, Tigurine verſion, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator; periit, Starckius.

CHAP. XIII.

IT being ſaid in the preceding chapter, ỿ. 24. that there ſhould be no more a vain viſion, nor a flattering divination; the prophet is ordered to propheſy againſt the falſe prophets and propheteſſes, ỿ. 1, 2, 17. the former are deſcribed as propheſying out of their own hearts, ỿ. 2. as fooliſh ones, following their own ſpirit, and ſeeing nothing, ỿ. 3. they are compared to foxes in the deſerts, ỿ. 4. and are repreſented as unconcerned to ſtand in the gap for the people, ỿ. 5. and as ſeeing vanity and lying divination; wherefore the Lord was againſt them, ỿ. 6, 7, 8. what they are threatened with are, that they ſhould not be in the aſſembly of God's people; nor written in the writing of the houſe of Iſrael; nor enter into the land of Iſrael, ỿ. 9. the reaſon of which was, becauſe they ſeduced the Lord's people, by ſpeaking peace to them when there was none; which is figuratively expreſſed by building a wall, and daubing it with untempered morter, ỿ. 10. upon which the wall is threatened to be rent, and cauſed to fall with a ſtormy wind; ſignifying the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Chaldean army; and the falſe prophets to have the wrath of God poured on them, who doubted it, ỿ. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. and then follows the order to the prophet to propheſy againſt the falſe propheteſſes, and ſet his face againſt them, and pronounce wo upon them in the name of the Lord; who are deſcribed as propheſying out of their own hearts; ſowing pillows to all arm-holes; and making kerchiefs on the head of all ſorts of perſons; and which they did for poor ſmall gain, and to the detriment of immortal ſouls, good and bad, ỿ. 17, 18, 19. wherefore the Lord threatens to tear off their pillows and kerchiefs, and deliver his people out of their hands, no more to be hunted by them, ỿ. 20, 21. the reaſon of which was, becauſe they ſaddened the hearts of the righteous, and ſtrengthened the hands of the wicked, ỿ. 22. and the chapter is concluded with a reſolution that they ſhould ſee no more vanity nor divine divinations; and that the Lord's people ſhould be delivered from them, and they ſhould know that he was the Lord, ỿ. 23.

ỿ. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] Giving orders to propheſy againſt the falſe prophets and propheteſſes, which were either in the land of Iſrael, of whom the prophet had notice; or rather, who were among the captives in Babylon, where Ezekiel now was.

ỿ. 2. Son of man, propheſy againſt the prophets of Iſrael, &c.] Who called themſelves ſo, and were accounted ſuch by others; tho' they were not true, but falſe prophets; and ſo the Targum calls them: that propheſy; that is, ſmooth things to the people; promiſing a ſpeedy return from the captivity; or that Jeruſalem ſhould not be taken by the Chaldeans, and the inhabitants of it, and of the land, be carried captive: and ſay thou unto them that propheſy out of their own hearts; who were not ſent of God, nor ſpake from him; but of themſelves, what came into their heads, and was agreeable to their fancies, imaginations and carnal hearts; ſuch are falſe teachers, that go forth without being ſent, and teach not according to the word of God, but according to their own carnal reaſonings; ſo the Targum, "according to the "will of their hearts;" what they pleaſed themſelves: hear ye the word of the Lord; which came from the Lord himſelf, and not from man, meaning the following prophecy; ſo the written word of God ſhould be attended to, both by teachers and hearers, as the only rule of faith and practice; ſee Iſ. viii. 20.

ỿ. 3. Thus ſaith the Lord God, wo unto the fooliſh prophets, &c.] The falſe prophets, as the Targum; who are fooliſh, as all are who are not ſent of God, and furniſhed by him with wiſdom and knowledge, and who propheſy out of their own hearts; for what elſe but folly can proceed from thence? this muſt be a great mortification to theſe prophets to be called fooliſh, when they reckoned themſelves wiſe men, being vainly puffed up in their fleſhly minds, and were accounted ſo by others; but what is wiſdom with men, is fooliſhneſs with God: that follow their own ſpirit; or walk after it [c]; and not the Spirit of God, who leads into all truth; they pretended to a ſpirit of prophecy, but it was their own ſpirit, and the dictates of it they followed, and not the Spirit of the Lord; and therefore it is no wonder that they propheſied falſe things, and led the people wrong; as all ſuch teachers do, who give way to their own fancies and imaginations, and forſake the word of God, and do not implore the aſſiſtance and teachings of the bleſſed Spirit: and have ſeen nothing; no viſion, as the Syriac verſion renders it; they pretended to have revelations of things future from the Lord, but they had none; what they ſaw were vain viſions and lying divinations, and were as nothing, and worſe than nothing; yea they ſaid what they never ſaw.

ỿ. 4. O Iſrael, thy prophets are like the foxes of the deſerts.] The falſe prophets, as the Targum; theſe are called Iſrael's prophets, becauſe received, embraced and encouraged by them; not the Lord's, for they were not ſent by him, nor had any meſſages from him; and ſuch are comparable to foxes, for their craftineſs and cunning, and lying in wait to deceive, as theſe ſeduced the Lord's people, ỿ. 10. and ſuch are falſe teachers, who walk in craftineſs, and handle the word of God deceitfully, and are deceitful workers; and to foxes in the deſerts, which are hungry and ravenous, and make a prey of whatſoever comes within their reach, as theſe prophets did of the people, ỿ. 19. Kimchi interprets deſerts of breaches and ruinous places in the walls of a vineyard, where the foxes lie, or thro' which they enter into the vineyard, and ſpoil it; as theſe falſe prophets entered in among the Iſraelites like to a vineyard, and did them much hurt and damage, by inſinuating themſelves among the weak, and thoſe of little faith, which the above writer compares to breaches in vineyards; ſee Cant. ii. 15. It may be, the deſerts may have reſpect to the land of Chaldea, where Iſrael was carried captive, and where theſe foxes, the falſe prophets, could play their part to advantage; not being under the notice and reſtraints of the Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem.

---

[c] הלכים אחר רוחם qui ambulant poſt ſpiritum ſuum, Pagninus, Calvin, Cocceius, Starckius.

ỳ. 5. Ye have not gone up into the gaps, &c.] Or breaches [d]; ſo the Targum. The alluſion is to breaches made in the walls of a city when beſieged; at which time, thoſe within gather together in great numbers to meet the enemy, and prevent his entrance by the breaches. Theſe words are either ſpoken to the princes of Iſrael, the civil magiſtrates; or to the prophets, who ſeeing the ſins of the people like a mighty torrent, opening a breach for the wrath and judgments of God to pour in upon them, ſhould have called them, and importunately preſſed them to repentance and reformation, and to have put up their prayers, and made interceſſion to God for them; neither of which they did, and therefore are here blamed; ſee ch. xxii. 30. Pſ. cvii. 23: neither made up the hedge for the houſe of Iſrael; or a fence, a fortification. The Vulgate Latin renders it, a wall; a new wall, which is generally made by the beſieged within, when a breach is made upon them: it ſignifies the ſame as before. Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it, of repentance and good works; and ſo the Targum, which paraphraſes the words thus, "neither have ye done for yourſelves good works, "to deprecate for the houſe of Iſrael, to ſtand "to pray for them:" to ſtand in the battel in the day of the Lord; when he came forth in battel-array againſt them, with great wrath and indignation, in the way of his righteous judgments. The Targum is, "when warriors come up againſt "them in the day of the wrath of the Lord;" when the Chaldeans came againſt them by the will of God, he being angry with them.

ỳ. 6. They have ſeen vanity, and lying divination, &c.] The viſions the falſe prophets pretended to ſee, were nothing but the fruit of their own fancies and imaginations, and had nothing real in them; and what they divined or foretold ſhould be, were all lies, and never came to paſs, and never would: ſaying, the Lord ſaith, and the Lord hath not ſent them; they came to the people with a lie in their mouths, giving out that the Lord ſpoke by them; when they had no miſſion from him; nor any commiſſion to ſay what they did; or any warrant from him for their prophecies: and they have made others to hope, that they would confirm the word; or, that the word would be confirmed [e]; that what was ſaid by them would have its accompliſhment; and that their prophecies would be fulfilled. By their ſolemn way of ſpeaking; by the uſe they made of the name of the Lord; by the ſtrong aſſurances they gave, and by their frequent repetition of their predictions, the people were brought to hope and believe that the event would anſwer to what they ſaid; wherefore, inſtead of bringing them to a ſenſe of their ſins, and repentance for them, whereby the judgments of God would have been prevented; they hardened them in them, and haſtened their ruin.

ỳ. 7. Have ye not ſeen a vain viſion? &c.] A viſion only in pretence, and not in reality; the effect of their own fancy, and not any thing ſhewn them by the Lord: and have ye not ſpoken a lying divination? delivered out a known lie, ſaying they had it from the Lord, when they had it not; or a prophecy that will deceive, and be without effect, and in the iſſue prove a falſhood: whereas ye ſay, the Lord ſaith it, albeit I have not ſpoken? this is a proof that what they gave out for a viſion and prophecy was a vain and falſe one; ſeeing they pretended they had it from the Lord, when he never ſpoke a word to them, or by them.

ỳ. 8. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This is what he ſays, and it may be depended on will come to paſs; tho' the other he ſaid not, they ſaid he did, but was a lying divination: becauſe ye have ſpoken vanity, and ſeen lies; which will in the iſſue prove ſo, lying and deceitful; what never came from God, but from themſelves, and the father of lies, and would never be accompliſhed: therefore behold, I am againſt you, ſaith the Lord God; or, I unto you; which may be ſupplied thus, I come, or will come unto you [f]; in a way of providence, and chaſtiſe and puniſh you; ſee Rev. ii. 16. or I will be your adverſary; and a ſad thing it is for any to have God to be againſt them; there's no contending with him; none ever hardened themſelves againſt him, and proſpered; men are but with him as ſtubble, or as thorns and briers to a conſuming fire.

ỳ. 9. And mine hand ſhall be upon the prophets that ſee vanity, and that divine lies, &c.] Meaning by his hand, not the true ſpirit of prophecy, attended with a divine power and energy, as in ch. i. 3. and ii. 14. but the wrath and power of God ſeizing on them, and puniſhing them. So the Targum, "and the ſtroke of my power ſhall "be upon the falſe prophets," &c. The ſenſe is, that they ſhould feel the weight of his hand, and the lighting down of his arm with the indignation of his wrath, by inflicting puniſhment upon them: they ſhall not be in the aſſembly of my people; ſhall have no place in the church of God, nor fellowſhip with the ſaints; they ſhall not join with them in religious worſhip here; but either ſhall be left by the righteous judgment of God to ſeparate themſelves from them; or ſhall be excluded their communion; and much leſs ſhall they ſtand in the congregation of the righteous hereafter: or, they ſhall not be in the ſecret, or council of my people [g]; ſhall not be conſulted by them on any account, civil or religious; or not be let into the ſecret counſels of the Lord, as the Lord's people be, who are his favourites, and his friends; ſee Pſ. xxv. 14. The Targum is, "in the good ſecret "which is hidden for my people, they ſhall not "be:" neither ſhall they be written in the writing of the houſe of Iſrael; their names ſhall not be in the roll or regiſter of thoſe that return from captivity, as in Ezra ii. but ſhall die in their exile; they ſhall not be in the liſt and catalogue of the citizens of any city in the land of Iſrael, particularly of Jeruſalem, the chief city; ſee Iſ. iv. 3. and it ſhould appear that their names were never written in the Lamb's book of life; or that they ever were among the number of God's elect, the true and ſpiritual Iſrael of God. So the Targum, "and in the writing of eternal life, which is writ"ten for the righteous of the houſe of Iſrael, they "ſhall not be written;" ſee Pſ. lxix. 28: neither ſhall they enter into the land of Iſrael; ſhould not return to the land of Iſrael, when the captives ſhould at the end of the captivity; nor enter into the land of Canaan, the heavenly reſt, which remains for the people of God; for into the new Jeruſalem-ſtate ſhall nothing enter that makes an abomination, or a lie, as theſe prophets had done; ſee Rev. xxi. 27. and xxii. 15: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord God; omniſcient, omnipotent, true and faithful, holy, juſt, and good.

---

[d] בפרצות in fracturas, Pagninus, Montanus, Tigurine verſion; rupturas, Calvin, Piſcator, Starckius.

[e] לקים דבר ut præſtet verbum, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; ratum fore, Grotius; eventurum eſſe, Caſtalio.

[f] הנני אליכם ecce ego ad vos, Vulg. Lat. ſub. venio, Grotius; veniam, Piſcator, Starckius; venturus ſum cum ira mea, Vatablus.

[g] בסוד עמי לא יהיו in ſecreto populi mei non erunt, Montanus; in arcano, Munſter; in conſilio, Junius & Tremellius, Calvin, Polanus; in concilio, Vatablus.

℣. 10. Becauſe, even becauſe they have ſeduced my people, &c.] Who were ſo by profeſſion; otherwiſe ſuch who are truly the people of God, tho' they may be deceived in civil things, yet not in religious matters, at leaſt, not totally and finally; in this ſenſe it is impoſſible to deceive the elect of God; but as falſe teachers are deceivers, they lie in wait, and uſe all means to deceive them, and do deceive nominal profeſſors, which is reſented by the Lord; and this is given as a reaſon of their puniſhment; and which is doubled, as in Lev. xxvi. 43. to ſhew the heinouſneſs of their ſin, and the certainty of their puniſhment: ſaying, peace, and there was no peace; giving out that peace would be made with the king of Babylon; that the captives would return to their own land, where, with thoſe that were in it, they would enjoy great proſperity; when no ſuch thing came to paſs, nor would; but the contrary was certain, by the predictions of the true prophets ſent by the Lord: and one built up a wall; one of the falſe prophets, and of the chief of them, gave out that Jeruſalem would continue a walled city, and abide firm and impregnable againſt the Chaldean army, and would never be taken: and lo, others daubed it with untempered morter; others of the falſe prophets, obſerving that what the firſt had delivered out was pleaſing to the people, not only aſſented to it, but ſtrongly affirmed it; and with colourings and ſpecious arguments, made it look more plauſible and probable; when alas! the whole was no other than like putting a parcel of looſe ſtones or bricks together, and throwing ſome ſluſhy ſtuff upon them, as moiſtened ſand without lime, or clay without ſtraw, as the Targum and Vulgate Latin verſions render it; which would never cement the bricks or ſtones together. R. Joſeph Kimchi interprets it of bricks not burnt: ſo falſe teachers imitate the true miniſters of the word, in preaching peace; but then they don't direct aright where it is to be had, which is only in Chriſt; or the proper perſons, ſinners preſſed with the guilt of ſin, and ſeeking for eaſe and peace in a right way; but publiſh it to thoſe to whom it does not belong, for there is no peace to the wicked; and put them upon making peace themſelves by their own works of righteouſneſs, and their legal repentance, and outward humiliation; or promiſe it to them, tho' they have no faith in Chriſt, and are not ſenſible of their ſin and danger: theſe men are builders, but not wiſe maſter-builders; they don't build upon the foundation Chriſt, but build up a wall without him; leaving himo ut of the building who is the chief corner-ſtone; deliver out ſome looſe and unconnected doctrines, that are not according to the ſcriptures, nor conſiſtent with each other; and encourage the people to perform ſome looſe duties and cold ſervices, without the cement of faith and love; and which is no other than building upon the ſand, or with it; tho' they fancy it to be a wall, a ſhelter, and protection to them, from the wrath and juſtice of God, and by which they ſhall climb up to heaven; which will prove a bowing wall, and a tottering fence; and in theſe miſtakes they are buoyed up by falſe teachers, and are flattered as being in a fair way for eternal happineſs.

℣. 11. Say unto them which daub it with untempered morter, &c.] The falſe prophets, that flattered the people with peace, proſperity and ſafety: that it ſhall fall; the wall they have built and daubed over; the city of Jeruſalem ſhall be taken and deſtroyed; the predictions of the prophets ſhall prove lies; and the vain hopes and expectations of the people fail: there ſhall be an overflowing ſhower; that ſhall waſh away the wall with its untempered morter; meaning the Chaldean army, compared to an overflowing ſhower of rain, for the multitude of men in it, and the force, power and noiſe with which it ſhould come, bearing down all before it; ſee Iſ. viii. 7, 8: and ye, O great hail-ſtones, ſhall fall; upon the wall, and break it down: or, ye, O great hail-ſtones, ſhall cauſe it to fall[h]; or, I will give great hail-ſtones, and it ſhall fall[i]. The word Elgabiſh, which in ſome copies is one word, and in others two, as Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve, is either the ſame with Gabiſh, which ſignifies a precious ſtone, and is rendered pearl in Job xxviii. 18. or it may be, as it ſeems to be, an Arabic word; and Hottinger[k] takes it to be Gypſus or lime, or the Lapis Laminoſus or ſlate; ſo the Lord threatens to rain down lime or ſlate upon them from heaven, which ſhould deſtroy the wall built with untempered morter: and a ſtormy wind ſhall rent it; this ſeems to ſignify the ſame as the overflowing ſhower, the Chaldean army, compared to a ſtrong tempeſtuous wind; ſee Jer. iv. 11, 12, 13. as the hail-ſtones may ſignify the king of Babylon, with his princes, nobles and generals.

℣. 12. Lo, when the wall is fallen, &c.] Jeruſalem is taken: ſhall it not be ſaid unto you; the falſe prophets, by the people who had been deceived by them: where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it? what's become of all your promiſes of peace, and aſſurance of ſafety and proſperity; your ſmooth words, and plauſible arguments; your ſpecious pretences, and flattering prophecies? thus would they be inſulted by thoſe they had deceived, as well as laughed at by ſuch who diſregarded their predictions, and believed the prophets of the Lord.

℣. 13. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Confirming what he had before bid the prophet ſay, ℣. 11: I will even rent it with a ſtormy wind in my fury; ſtormy winds ſometimes rend rocks aſunder, 1 Kings xix. 11: and much more feeble tottering walls; what is before aſcribed to the ſtormy wind, is ſaid to be done here by the Lord himſelf, making uſe of that as an inſtrument; ſtormy winds fulfil his word, Pſ. cxlviii. 8. the cauſe of which is his wrath, which made the diſpenſation, or the invaſion of the Chaldean army the more terrible; and this is mentioned in all the following clauſes: and there ſhall be an overflowing ſhower in mine anger, and great hail-ſtones in my fury to conſume it; which, coming from the Lord, and attended with his wrath and fury, muſt needs bring on utter ruin and deſtruction. The whole is paraphraſed by the Targum thus, "and I will "bring a mighty king with the force of tempeſts; "and a deſtroying people as a prevailing rain in my

---

[h] ואתנה אבני אלגביש תפלנה & vos, O lapides grandinis, ruere facietis ædificium, Munſter.

[i] Et dabo lapides grandinis, qui corruere facient parietem, Pagninus.

[k] Smegma Oriental. l. 1. c. 7. p. 119.

"fury ſhall come; and kings, who were powerful as hail-ſtones, in wrath to conſume."

℣. 14. So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered morter, &c.] Which is repeated and expreſſed in theſe words, both for the ſake of confirmation and explanation of what is before ſaid: and bring it down to the ground, ſo that the foundation thereof ſhall be diſcovered; meaning the city of Jeruſalem, and by theſe phraſes declaring the utter deſtruction of it; whereby alſo would be diſcovered the vain aſſurances and lying predictions of the falſe prophets, and which would appear to be entirely groundleſs: ſo the Targum, "and I will deſtroy the city in which ye have propheſied falſe prophecies; and I will cauſe it to fall to the ground, and its foundations ſhall be diſcovered:" and it ſhall fall, and ye ſhall be conſumed in the midſt of it; the falſe prophets periſhed in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and not one of them eſcaped: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; who is true to his word, and able to accompliſh it, whether of puniſhment, or of threatening.

℣. 15. Thus will I accompliſh my wrath upon the wall, &c.] Or upon the city, as the Targum; pour out all his indignation, and inflict juſt puniſhment upon the city of Jeruſalem and its inhabitants: and upon them that have daubed it with untempered morter; the falſe prophets: ſo the Targum, "and the falſe prophets that propheſy in it falſe prophecies:" and will ſay unto you, the wall is no more, neither they that daubed it; neither the city of Jeruſalem, nor the prophets that propheſied of its ſafety; nor their falſe prophecies; nor the vain hopes of the people they fed them with: ſo the Targum, "there is no city, nor falſe prophets."

℣. 16. To wit, the prophets of Iſrael, which propheſy concerning Jeruſalem, &c.] This explains who are meant by thoſe that daubed with untempered morter: and which ſee viſions of peace for her; not in reality, but in pretence; they boaſted that they had viſions and revelations from the Lord, and aſſured the people they ſhould enjoy great peace and proſperity; but theſe, as they are before called, were vain viſions and lying divinations: there ſeems to be in this an alluſion to the name of Jeruſalem, which according to ſome ſignifies, "they ſhall ſee peace:" and there is no peace, ſaith the Lord; not to the wicked; nor to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, who liſtened to the falſe prophets; nor to the falſe prophets themſelves.

℣. 17. Likewiſe, thou ſon of man, ſet thy face againſt the daughters of thy people, &c.] The falſe propheteſſes; for as there were women in ſome ages, who had the true ſpirit of prophecy, as Miriam, Deborah, and Huldah; ſo there were ſome that pretended to it, who had it not, as Noadiah in the times of Nehemiah, Neh. vi. 14. and ſuch there were in the times of Ezekiel; againſt whom he is bid to ſet his face, and look them out of countenance, and make them aſhamed; who contrary to the modeſty of the ſex, had impudently taken upon them to propheſy to the people; and ſuch have been ſince in the times of the goſpel, as Jezebel, Rev. ii. 20. and Priſca, Maximilla, Quintilla, and others: who propheſy out of their own heart; as the men did, ℣. 2. what their own hearts ſuggeſted to them; what came into their minds, and their own fancies and imaginations led them to; what was according to their carnal affections and deſires, and agreeable to thoſe that heard them: and propheſy thou againſt them; declare their prophecies falſe; warn the people from giving heed to them; and foretel what ſhall befal them for deceiving the people.

℣. 18. And ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, wo to the women that ſow pillows to all arm-holes, &c.] Or, put pillows to all elbows[l]; thereby ſignifying, that they might be at eaſe, and reſt ſecure, and look upon themſelves as in the utmoſt ſafety, and not fear any enemy, the invaſion of the Chaldeans; or that their city would be deſtroyed, and they carried captive, as the prophets of the Lord had foretold: and make kerchiefs upon the head of every ſtature; whether taller or lower; the word ſtature, according to Kimchi, is uſed, becauſe the people ſtood when they enquired of theſe propheteſſes, whether they ſhould have peace or no, or good or evil ſhould befal them: or, of every age, as the Septuagint verſion; young or old; they put theſe kerchiefs, or vails[m], as ſome render the word, upon all ſorts of perſons; for they refuſed none that came to them, they could get any thing by; upon their heads, either as a token of victory and triumph, ſignifying that they ſhould have the better of their enemies, and rejoice over them; or to make them proud, and ſuggeſt to them that they ſhould never be ſtripped of their ornaments; or elſe, as the former ſign ſhows that they lulled them aſleep upon pillows, and led them on in a carnal ſecurity, ſo they kept them in blindneſs and ignorance: and this they did, to hunt ſouls; to bring them into their nets and ſnares; to catch them with their falſe prophecies, and deceive them by their fallacious ſigns, and ſuperſtitious rites and ceremonies, and ſo ruin and deſtroy them[n]. Will ye hunt the ſouls of my people; that cleave to me, and regard my prophets; will ye endeavour to enſnare thoſe, and ſeek to deſtroy their peace and comfort, and even their ſouls? ye ſhall not be able to do it: and will ye ſave the ſouls alive that come unto you? and enquire of you how things will be, and liſten to your lying divinations; can you ſave them from the ruin and deſtruction that is coming upon them? no, you will not be able to do it; and what wickedneſs is it in you to attempt the one or the other? The Targum is, "the ſouls of my people, can ye deſtroy or quicken? your ſouls, which are yours, can you quicken?" the ſenſe is, they could neither do the one or the other; and yet ſuch was their iniquity, that they ſought to do both.

℣. 19. And will ye pollute me among my people, &c.] Defile the name of the Lord, by abuſing it, to cover their wicked deſigns and practices, pretending they were ſent by him, when they were not; that what they ſaid came from him, tho' he ſpoke not by them; and that it was his will they declared, when it was their own, and what came out of their own hearts and heads: ſo the Targum, will ye pollute my will among my people; to profane his name among the Gentiles was a great ſin, but to pollute it among his own people was greater; attempting to draw them aſide from his fear and worſhip, and that for gain, for ſmall gain too:

---

[l] למתפרות applicantibus, ſive accommodantibus, Gataker; conjungentibus, vel adunantibus, Guſſetius, Ebr. Comment. p. 947. כסתות על כל אצילי pulvillos ſuper omnes cubitos manus, Calvin; pro omnibus cubitis manuum, Piſcator.

[m] Velamina, Polanus. So Kimchi and Ben Melech.

[n] Guſſetius thinks, that by the words rendered pillows and kerchiefs, are meant nets, with which they covered their heads and arms; for otherwiſe, what connection is there between the above things and hunting? See Ebr. Comment. p. 395, 565.

for handſuls of barley, and for pieces of bread; which ſhows them to be abandoned creatures, that were ready to do or ſay any thing for the meaneſt trifle; their conſciences were ſeared; they gave up themſelves to work wickedneſs with greedineſs, and for filthy lucre's ſake, and for a ſmall portion of that; which exaggerates their ſin and folly; ſee Prov. xxviii. 21. Mic. iii. 5: to ſlay the ſouls that ſhould not die; by threatening the captives in Babylon, who had ſurrendered themſelves in Jehoiachin's time, with deſtruction and death; who ought to have been comforted in their exile, and whom the Lord in his own time would deliver: and to ſave the ſouls alive that ſhould not live; by promiſing the inhabitants of Jeruſalem long life, ſafety and proſperity; when they ſhould either die by the ſword, famine, and peſtilence; or be carried captive, which was as death; for ſo they did, or attempted to do, both the one and the other, by their falſe prophecies, as follows: by your lying to my people that hear your lies? their falſe prophecies, which ſome hearkened to, and believed; and others were intimidated by, and feared that ſo it would be.

℣. 20. Wherefore thus ſaith the Lord God, behold, I am againſt your pillows, &c.] Not only had an abhorrence of them, but was determined to deſtroy them, detect their fallacies, and expoſe the folly of ſuch actions and them to ſhame and contempt: wherewith ye there hunt the ſouls, to make them fly; to the places where they propheſied; into the toils and nets they ſpread for them, in order to catch them with their divinations and prophecies, and make a gain of them: or, into the gardens, or groves[*]; there to commit idolatry, Iſ. lxv. 3: and I will tear them from your arms; by which it ſeems, that thoſe pillows were not only put under the arms of thoſe that came to enquire of theſe ſhe-prophets or fortune-tellers; but they put them under their own arms, and lay upon them as if they were aſleep, and in a trance or exſtacy; and ſo the kerchiefs or veils were upon their heads, which covered their faces, to ſhew that they were quite retired from the world, and wholly attentive to the viſions and revelations they pretended were made them by the Lord; and which they gave out in this ſuperſtitious way, to the credulous people that flocked about them: and will let the ſouls go, even the ſouls that ye hunt to make them fly; which were captivated with their ſuperſtitions; drawn into their nets and ſnares; decoyed into the gardens, where they were prevailed upon to ſacrifice to idols, and were taken with their ſoothſaying and lying divinations; theſe the Lord promiſes to break the ſnare for them, and ſet them at liberty, and preſerve them from that ruin and deſtruction they were ready to come into; ſee Pſ. cxxiv. 7.

℣. 21. Your kerchiefs alſo will I tear, &c.] From their heads; diſcover their tricks, and expoſe them to the contempt of the people, and deſtroy both them and their works: and deliver my people out of your hand; from being hunted, enſnared, and deceived by them: and they ſhall be no more in your land to be hunted; but ſhould either flee into Egypt and other countries for ſhelter, or be carried captive into Babylon; and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; ſee ℣. 9, 14.

℣. 22. Becauſe with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous ſad, &c.] By polluting the name of the Lord; by hunting and decoying ſouls into their deſtructive nets; and by threatening ſuch who would not give heed to their ſuperſtitious rites, lying divinations, and falſe prophecies: ſo falſe teachers make the hearts of ſuch ſad, who having ſeen the inſufficiency of their own righteouſneſs, truſt in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and are juſtified by it; by teaching ſuch doctrines as depreciate the love and grace of God the Father; making his love dependent on the creature; his covenant conditional, and ſalvation to be by works, and not by grace: as detract from the perſon, offices, and grace of Chriſt; denying his deity and divine ſonſhip; making light of his blood, and ſetting up man's righteouſneſs againſt his: and ſuch as are injurious to the Spirit's work; aſcribing regeneration and converſion to man's free-will; giving ſuch marks and ſigns of grace as are not to be found in any, and repreſenting it as what may be entirely loſt: whom I have not made ſad; nor would he have them made ſad by others; neither by falſe prophets and their lies, nor by any other means; neither by any thing within them, or any thing without them; not by any or all of their ſpiritual enemies: he would have them comforted; the covenant of grace, and the promiſes of it, are made for ſuch a purpoſe; the ſcriptures are written for this uſe; ordinances are deſigned for this end; miniſters are appointed for this work; and this is the office of the divine Spirit; and the Son of God himſelf was ſent on this account: and ſtrengthened the hands of the wicked, that he ſhould not return from his wicked way; by repentance and reformation; and ſo far were the wicked from returning from it in this way, that they were emboldened in ſin, and hardened in it; and were more frequent and open in the commiſſion of it; and that thro' the prophecies of theſe falſe propheteſſes; as wicked men are by the doctrines of falſe teachers: and particularly by promiſing him life; or that he ſhould live long, and enjoy much peace and proſperity in the land of Iſrael, and not be carried captive into Babylon; and ſo falſe teachers harden men in ſin, by giving them hopes of eternal life, though they continue in their evil ways; or upon the foot of univerſal redemption, and upon their repentance, as the fruit of their own free-will; and therefore take their ſwing of ſin, as believing that Chriſt died for all men, and ſo for them, and therefore ſhall be ſaved, live as they will; and that it is in their power to repent when they pleaſe, and therefore procraſtinate it to the laſt.

℣. 23. Therefore ye ſhall ſee no more vanity, nor divine divinations, &c.] They ſhould not be ſuffered any longer to impoſe upon the people; and they ſhould be ſo ſufficiently expoſed, that the people would not give heed to their vain viſions and lying divinations any more; and no gain coming to them hereby, they would not be diſpoſed to make pretenſions to them, as they had done: or the ſenſe is, that they ſhould periſh in the ſiege and deſtruction of Jeruſalem; and ſo they and their falſe prophecies would ceaſe together: for I will deliver my people out of your hand, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; ſee ℣. 21.

---

[*] לפרחות in floralia, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius; in floridis hortis, Piſcator.

CHAP. XIV.

IN this chapter are contained, the diſpleaſure of God at hypocritical idolaters that ſought unto him, and at the falſe prophets; the judgments that ſhould come upon them, and which ſhould not be averted by the interceſſion of the beſt of men; and yet a promiſe that a remnant ſhould be ſaved. The elders of Iſrael are ſaid to ſit before the prophet, ℣. 1. to whom the Lord gives an account of them, ℣. 2, 3. and orders the prophet what he ſhould ſay to them, that the Lord would anſwer them himſelf, ℣. 4, 5. and that he ſhould bid the houſe of Iſrael repent and turn from their idols, or elſe the Lord would ſet his face againſt them, and cut them off, both them and the falſe prophets they ſought unto; and this is threatened, in order to reform them, and continue them his covenant-people, ℣. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. and then the judgment of famine is particularly threatened; to avert which, the prayers of the beſt of men would be of no effect, ℣. 12, 13, 14. and next the judgment of noiſome beaſts, with the ſame intimation, ℣. 15, 16. likewiſe the ſword, ℣. 17, 18. and alſo the peſtilence, ℣. 19, 20. and much leſs when they ſhould be all ſent together, ℣. 21. and the chapter is concluded with a promiſe, that a remnant ſhould be ſaved; which would be a comfort to the captives of Babylon, and accounts for what the Lord had done, or would do, in Jeruſalem, ℣. 22, 23.

℣. 1. Then came certain of the elders of Iſrael unto me, &c.] The Syriac verſion adds, to conſult the Lord; by the prophet. Theſe, according to Kimchi, were the elders of the captivity, the heads of the captives that were now in Babylon with Ezekiel: but there are others that think they were ſome that came from Jeruſalem to Babylon on ſome buſineſs or another; and having heard much of the prophet, came to viſit him, and to hear his prophecies, and enquire of the Lord by him: and ſat before me; ſilent and penſive, as perſons in anxiety and diſtreſs; or as hearers of him, for ſitting is an hearing-geſture; they ſat and heard with great attention, gravity, and ſeriouſneſs, with ſeeming affection and reverence; and all this was not in a viſionary way, but was a real fact; ſee Ezek. xxxiii. 31, 32.

℣. 2. And the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] Whilſt the elders were ſitting before him, and whiſpered ſecretly and powerfully the following things in his ears: ſaying,

℣. 3. Son of man, theſe men have ſet up their idols in their heart, &c.] Tho' they look ſo grave and demure, ſeem ſo devout and religious, and hear with ſo much attention and reverence, and expreſs ſuch a deſire of conſulting me by thee, they are no other than idolaters; and tho' they are at ſuch a diſtance from their native place, and have not their idols with them, yet they have them in their fancy and imagination, and their hearts are after them, and are ſet upon them; theſe engroſs their affections, they are near and dear unto them, notwithſtanding all their pretenſions: or, they have cauſed their idols to aſcend upon their heart [p]; their hearts are the altars on which they worſhip them, and the throne on which they have placed them; they are held in the higheſt eſteem by them, and have the greateſt honours done them, and have the aſcendent over them; even their dunghil-gods, as the word [q] ſignifies; though they are but dung, filthy and abominable, theſe they lay upon their hearts; and what elſe is man's righteouſneſs, when made an idol of, truſted to, and depended on? it is no other, as the apoſtle ſays, than loſs and dung, Phil. iii. 8. and ſo every carnal luſt that is gratified and indulged, is no other than an idol, or a dunghil-god, ſet up in the heart: and put the ſtumbling-block of their iniquity before their face; whenever they had an opportunity of ſo doing; for their hearts were not only inwardly affected to idols, but they outwardly worſhipped them; ſet them before them, and bowed the knee to them, and prayed: and theſe idols are called the ſtumbling-block of their iniquity, becauſe by worſhipping theſe they fell into ſin, and ſo into ruin; they were the occaſion of their ſin, and of their puniſhment; they ſtumbled at them, and fell, even tho' they were before their eyes; nay, they ſet them themſelves before their face, which ſhows their obſtinacy and reſolution to continue in idolatry, tho' it would be their ruin: ſhould I be enquired of at all by them? ſuffer them to come near me, and put a queſtion to me, or be conſulted by them thro' thee? no, I will not: or, am I ſeriouſly enquired of by them? ſo ſome [r] render the words; no, I am not: or, being aſked, ſhall I anſwer them? ſo the Targum and Vulgate Latin verſion: or, anſwering ſhall I anſwer them [s]? no, I will not, they deſerve no anſwer from me; they ſhall have none other of me, than ſuch an one as follows.

℣. 4. Therefore ſpeak unto them, and ſay unto them, &c.] That is, ſpeak unto them as a prophet, and as from the Lord, and ſay what follows; ſo the Targum, "propheſy unto them, and ſay "unto them:" thus ſaith the Lord God, every man of the houſe of Iſrael, that ſetteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the ſtumbling-block of his iniquity before his face; let him be who he will, one in public office, an elder of Iſrael, or a private perſon; no reſpect will be had, no diſtinction made, nor favour ſhown; being an idolater in heart and practice, ſecretly and openly, he ſhall bear the puniſhment of his ſin: and cometh to the prophet; the prophet Ezekiel, as the elders of Iſrael now did, or any other prophet of the Lord: the Vulgate Latin verſion adds, enquiring of me by him; expecting to have an anſwer, and one according to their wiſhes: I the Lord will anſwer him that cometh; that cometh to the prophet; or as the Targum, "that cometh to aſk inſtruction of me:" here is a various reading, a Keri and a Cetib; we follow the Keri or marginal reading, בא that cometh; and ſo does the Targum: but the Cetib or written text is, בו in it, thus; I the Lord will anſwer him in it [t]; in the queſtion he puts to the prophet, or to the Lord by him; or in that time, immediately; but not with ſmooth things as he expects, but with terrible things in righteouſneſs; not in a way of grace and mercy, but in a way of judgment; not as he deſires, but as he deſerves: according to the multitude of his idols; in proportion to the number of his gods, and his idolatrous actions, ſhall the anſwer or puniſhment be: or theſe words may be connected with the word cometh, and be read thus, that cometh with the multitude of his idols [u]; with his heart full of idols, ſet up there; which is an inſtance of his hypocriſy, ſeen and detected by the Lord; and of his impudence, in daring to come unto him in ſuch a manner; and of his folly, to expect a gracious anſwer from the Lord, this being his caſe. The Targum underſtands it quite otherwiſe, as if the anſwer the Lord would give, would be a kind and agreeable one, paraphraſing this clauſe thus, “ altho' he is mixed (implicated “ or entangled) in the multitude of the worſhip “ of his idols.”

---

[p] העלו גלוליהם על לבם aſcendere fecerunt idola ſua in, vel ſuper cor ſuum, Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin.

[q] גלוליהם ſtercoreos deos ſuos, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; ſtercora ſua, Cocceius; ſtercora ipſorum, Starckius.

[r] האדרש אדרש להם an igitur ſerio interrogor ab eis? Piſcator.

[s] An reſpondendo reſpondebo illis? Starckius So Sept. Ar.

[t] Eodem tempore, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; in illo tempore, Piſcator; in ea re, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 5. That I may take the houſe of Iſrael in their own heart, &c.] By which they are enſnared, and drawn aſide to their ruin; being given up to ſtrong deluſions, to believe a lie, and worſhip idols; God threatening to anſwer them by righteous judgments, and thereby take the wickedneſs, the hypocriſy, and idolatry, that were in their hearts, and expoſe and make it manifeſt unto others; or by puniſhing them, to draw out the corruption and ſin that were in them, that it might be ſeen what a wicked people they were. The Targum interprets the text in another way, “ that I may “ bring near the houſe of Iſrael, and put repent“ ance into their hearts.” Becauſe they are all eſtranged from me thro' their idols; they grew ſhy of God and his worſhip, when they fell into idolatry. Alienation from God, from the life of God, from the law of God, from the worſhip of God, and of the affections from him, is owing to ſome idol or another ſet up in the heart, or before the eye; whatever is worſhipped beſides God, or gains the aſcendent in the heart, alienates from him; and God will not admit of a rival, he cannot and will not bear it; and for this reaſon he inflicts puniſhment, or anſwers in a terrible way.

℣. 6. Therefore ſay unto the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] Deliver out the following exhortation to repentance unto them; for God's end, in all his threatnings and judgments, is to bring men to repentance: thus ſaith the Lord God, repent, and turn yourſelves from your idols; or, turn, and cauſe to be turned from your idols [w]; turn yourſelves from the worſhip of idols, as the Targum, and do all that in you lies to turn others from the ſame; particularly your wives and young men, as Kimchi; and the rather they were obliged to do this, ſince in all probability they had been the means of drawing them into idolatry: and turn away your faces from all your abominations; their idols, deteſtable to God, and ought to have been ſo to them; theſe he would have them turn their faces from, not ſo much as look at them, much leſs worſhip them, that they might not be enſnared by them; this is ſaid, in oppoſition to their ſetting of them before their face, ℣. 3, 4.

℣. 7. For every one of the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] King and ſubjects, princes and people, high and low, rich and poor, of every rank, ſex, and age: or of the ſtranger that ſojourneth in Iſrael; the proſelytes; whether of righteouſneſs, ſuch as were circumciſed and embraced the Jewiſh religion; or of the gate, who were only inhabitants with them; one as another were obliged to worſhip the God of Iſrael, and abſtain from idolatry; there was but one law to the Iſraelite, and to the ſtranger, reſpecting this matter: which ſeparateth himſelf from me; from the worſhip of God, and ſo from communion with him; turns his back on him, and becomes an apoſtate from him, by joining himſelf with idols: and ſetteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the ſtumbling-block of his iniquity before his face; theſe things are repeated, partly to obſerve the heinouſneſs of the ſin they were guilty of; and partly to ſhow the ſtupidity of this people, which required things to be ſaid over and over, ere they could take them in, and be convinced of their evil: and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; this explains what ſuch perſons would come to a prophet for, ℣. 4. and expoſes their hypocriſy: I the Lord will anſwer him by myſelf; not by the prophet to whom he comes, but by himſelf: or, in my word, as the Targum; yet not by words, but by blows; not in mercy, but in wrath; and in ſuch manner, that it ſhall appear to come from the Lord, and to be according to truth and juſtice.

℣. 8. And I will ſet my face againſt that man, &c.] And look him out of countenance, notwithſtanding all his daring impudence and preſumption in coming to a prophet of the Lord, and enquiring of him by him, when guilty of groſs idolatry; which muſt needs be the caſe, when the face of God is ſet againſt a man. The Targum renders it, my fury, or wrath; and indeed that is what is meant; when God ſets his face againſt a man, he pours out his wrath, or inflicts puniſhment on him; ſee Pſ. xxxiv. 16. Jarchi's note is, “ as a man “ that ſays I am at leiſure from all buſineſs, and “ I will attend to this;” laying aſide all other buſineſs, wholly giving himſelf up to one thing, on which he is ſet. Dreadful is a man's caſe, when the Lord thus ſets himſelf againſt him! And will make him a ſign and a proverb; a ſpectacle of horror to look at, becauſe of his miſery; and a proverb, to be took up, and ſpoke of, as Zedekiah and Ahab were, Jer. xxix. 22: and will cut him off from the midſt of my people; by a ſudden death, which the Jews call death from heaven, or by the immediate hand of God; and which is anſwering by himſelf, as in the preceding verſe: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; that is, thoſe that remain, are not cut off, but are reclaimed by theſe examples from idolatry, and are brought to repentance, the remnant among them that ſhould be ſaved; theſe ſhould know and acknowledge the Lord was omniſcient, and knew the hypocriſy of thoſe men above deſcribed; and was omnipotent, and could make good his threatenings, and inflict deſerved puniſhment; and that he was holy, juſt, and true in all his ways.

℣. 9. And if the prophet be deceived, when he hath ſpoken a thing, &c.] That is pleaſing to men, and is not true, in hope of reward and applauſe, but it never comes to paſs, and his expectations are not anſwered: I the Lord have deceived that prophet; by ſending a lying ſpirit to him, as to Ahab's prophets, 1 Kings xxii. 22, 23. by giving him up to ſtrong deluſions, to believe a lie, and publiſh it, 2 Theſſ. ii. 11. and to his own heart's luſts; juſts; being willing, for the ſake of gain, to propheſy ſmooth things, though falſe, to the people, promiſing them peace, when there was none; and then, by fruſtrating his predictions, and diſappointing him of his ends and views. R. Saadiah interprets this, as Kimchi obſerves, of God revealing and making it manifeſt that he was deceived; but more is meant by it than this, or even a bare permiſſion; for tho' God is not the author of ſin, yet he wills it to be done for wiſe ends and purpoſes, and ſometimes in a way of judgment, as a puniſhment for ſin; and which was the caſe here, both with reſpect to the prophet that deceived, who as the fruit of his ſin, his covetouſneſs was given up in juſt judgment to a reprobate mind; and the people that were deceived, who rejecting the true prophets of the Lord, were willing to have ſmooth things propheſied to them: and I will ſtretch out my hand upon them; his avenging hand; the ſtroke of his power, as the Targum; a heavy one, and that for giving heed to a lying ſpirit; for uttering falſhood, and that with a wicked deſign, to gain the applauſe of the people, or for filthy lucre-ſake: and I will deſtroy him from the midſt of my people Iſrael; by ſome ſore judgment or ſudden death, and ſo be made a public example of.

---

[u] בא ברוב גלוליו ipſi venienti in multitudine idolorum ſuorum, Pagninus, Montanus.

[w] שובו והשיבו convertimini, & facite converti, Pagninus, Montanus, Vatablus.

℣. 10. And they ſhall bear the puniſhment of their iniquity, &c.] Both the falſe prophet, and thoſe that ſought unto him, and were deceived by him; and which being laid according to the ſtrictneſs of divine juſtice, is intolerable: ſad is the caſe, when a man is obliged to bear his own ſins, and the puniſhment of them, and has no ſurety to undertake for him, and be a mediator between God and him, and make atonement for him: the puniſhment of the prophet ſhall be even as the puniſhment of him that ſeeketh unto him; they being both alike culpable, each purſuing the deſires of their own evil hearts; the one ſeeking for ſmooth things to be ſpoken to him; the other ſpeaking them, in order to gratify him, and for the ſake of gain; the one being a falſe prophet, and the other ſeeking to, and enquiring of him, tho' he was ſuch, ſlighting and rejecting the true prophets of the Lord; both being deceived, and both blind, and ſo ſhould fall into the ſame ditch, being under the ſame judicial blindneſs and hardneſs of heart. The Targum is, "according to the ſin of him that comes to learn and learns not; according to the ſin of the falſe prophet ſhall it be."

℣. 11. That the houſe of Iſrael may go no more aſtray from me, &c.] Or from his worſhip, as the Targum; from the law of God, and obedience to it: ſin is a going aſtray from God, a deviation from his commandments; it leads men out of the way of their duty into wrong paths, which iſſue in ruin, if grace prevent not; and ſometimes the means which God makes uſe of for the reſtoring of his own people, and bringing them back to himſelf, are the puniſhments which he inflicts upon others; and which is his end in ſo doing, as it was here; that the falſe prophets, and thoſe that followed them, being made examples of, might be a warning unto others, and caution them againſt falling into the ſame ſins, that ſo they might not bear the ſame puniſhment; or be a means of reclaiming them from their errors, and for the future beware of going aſtray again: neither be polluted any more with all their tranſgreſſions; for every tranſgreſſion, as it is an aberration from the law of God, ſo it is of a defiling nature; it defiles the mind and conſcience, yea the whole man, from which there is no cleanſing, but by the blood of Chriſt; it is loathſome in itſelf, contrary to the pure and holy nature of God, and abominable to a gracious mind, and therefore to be avoided; and which may be learnt from the puniſhment of it on others: but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, ſaith the Lord God; that is, that they may behave as ſuch, and that it may appear that God is their God, and they are his people.

℣. 12. The word of the Lord came again unto me, ſaying,] At the ſame time as before, continuing the prophecy, and a denunciation of judgments; for it does not ſeem to begin a new prophecy. The Targum renders it, the word of prophecy from the Lord.

℣. 13. Son of man, when the land ſinneth againſt me by treſpaſſing grievouſly, &c.] That is, the inhabitants of the land, when they are in general become ſinners againſt God and his law; and not merely ſinners, as all men are, but grievous ones, notorious ſinners, guilty of very groſs enormities, of great prevarication, perfidy, and treachery; for God is a God long-ſuffering, and has great patience with a people; and does not uſually come forth in his judgments againſt a nation, until ſin has univerſally prevailed among them, and they are guilty of grievous abominations, and thoſe continued in: but when this is the caſe, then will I ſtretch out mine hand upon it; his hand of vindictive wrath and juſtice, and cauſe it to fall heavily, and men to feel it: and will break the ſtaff of the bread thereof; take away bread-corn from the nation, the ſupport of human life; which is that unto it, and the ſtay of it, as a ſtaff is to a decrepit old man, that can't walk without one; or take away the virtue of it, ſo as tho' it might be had and eat, yet not be nouriſhing; ſee ch. iv. 16: and will ſend famine upon it; by cauſing a drought, reſtraining rain, ſending mildew, locuſts, caterpillers, &c. to eat up the fruits of the earth: and will cut off man and beaſt from it; the latter for the ſake of the former, and both thro' want of food.

℣. 14. Tho' theſe three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, &c.] In the ſinning land, and made interceſſion for it, that the famine might be removed, and the inhabitants of it be ſaved alive, this would not be granted; tho' they were men that found favour in the ſight of God, and were eminent for prayer, and ſucceſsful in it, and the means of ſaving many; as Noah his family, by preparing an ark according to the will of God; and Daniel was an inſtrument of ſaving the lives of his companions, and of the wiſe men of Chaldea; and Job, by his prayer for his friends, prevented the wrath of God, that was kindled againſt them, coming upon them; and yet, if they had been upon the ſpot at this time, their interceſſion for this people would have been of no avail; the decree was gone forth, and was not to be called in; it was unalterable, and God was inexorable: nor could it have been depended upon, if this declaration had not been made, that their prayers would have been effectual, had they been upon the ſpot, and put them up for this nation; ſince it might be obſerved, that the old world was not ſaved from a deluge in Noah's time, only he and his family; nor were the people of the Jews preſerved from captivity in Daniel's time, not even he himſelf; nor were Job's children ſaved, though he was greatly concerned for them: it may be obſerved ſerved from hence, that there was ſuch a man as Job, as well as Noah and Daniel; and that the latter, tho' a young man, not above thirty years of age at this time, yet was become very famous, not only for his dignity and grandeur in Babylon, but for his religion and piety; and is placed between thoſe two great men, Noah and Job; and being a perſon now living, precludes any argument being formed by the papiſts, in favour of the interceſſion of departed ſaints; and which would not be concluſive from ſuch a ſuppoſition as here made, had they been all ſuch as had departed this life; ſee Jer. xv. 1. the deſign of the whole is only to ſhow, that the prayers of the beſt of men would not have prevailed with the Lord, to avert his judgments from a people that had ſo grievouſly ſinned againſt him: they ſhould deliver but their own ſouls by their righteouſneſs, ſaith the Lord; as Noah was ſaved at the time of the flood; Daniel in the captivity; and Job amidſt his great afflictions: this is to be underſtood not of the eternal ſalvation of the ſouls of theſe men, which is not, nor can it be, by works of righteouſneſs done by the beſt of men; by theſe, men cannot be juſtified in the ſight of God, and ſo not ſaved; but of temporal ſalvation, of the ſalvation of their ſouls or lives from temporal calamities. Beſides, theſe men had knowledge of another and better righteouſneſs than their own, and believed in it, and truſted to it, even the righteouſneſs of faith, the righteouſneſs of Chriſt received by faith. Noah was both an heir and a preacher of the righteouſneſs which is by faith; and Daniel knew that it was one branch of the Meſſiah's work, to bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs; and Job was fully perſuaded that his Redeemer lived, by whom he ſhould be juſtified, Heb. xi. 7. 2 Pet. ii. 5. Dan. ix. 24. Job xix. 25. and xiii. 15, 16, 18.

℣. 15. If I cauſe noiſome beaſts to paſs thro' the land, &c.] Evil and hurtful ones; not ſo much thoſe that are poiſonous, as pernicious; ſuch as lions, tigers, foxes, wolves, and bears, that are very ravenous and devouring, and eſpecially in a time of famine before threatened; tho' ſometimes God makes uſe of leſſer creatures to do damage to a land, and the fruits of it, as locuſts, caterpillers, &c. but the former ſeem to be intended here, which ſometimes God threatens and ſends to a people diſobedient and rebellious; ſee Lev. xxvi. 22. 2 Kings xvii. 25: and they ſpoil it; or, make it childleſs[x]; they or I bereave the inhabitants of it, of their children; or bereave it of other cattel that are tame, as ſheep and oxen, as well as of men and women alſo, and even deſtroy the fruits of the earth: ſo that it be deſolate; having neither men nor cattel, corn or tillage, or any other fruit; all being deſtroyed by the evil beaſts, who have commiſſion to paſs thro' it, and lay it waſte wherever they come, without controul: that no man may paſs thro' becauſe of the beaſts; for fear of them: not only the inhabitants of the land ſhould be deſtroyed by them, but even travellers, ſuch as come from other countries, would not chuſe to paſs thro' it becauſe of the beaſts; ſo that it would on this account be deſtitute both of inhabitants and of travellers; and muſt be a moſt deſolate place, where only wild beaſts were to be ſeen, ranging about at pleaſure.

℣. 16. Though theſe three men were in it, &c.] Above-named, Noah, Daniel, and Job; as they were not, two of them not being in the land of the living, and the other in Babylon; but if all three had been in a land ſo threatened, and uſed all the intereſt they had with God by fervent prayer and ſupplication, to have called in the wild beaſts, and chained them up, and to preſerve the people from being deſtroyed by them, it would have been all in vain; the Lord was determined upon the deſtruction of them, and by means of theſe, as one of his ſore judgments: as I live, ſaith the Lord God; or by my life; for it is an oath with which God ſwears by himſelf, who has life in himſelf, and is the author and giver of life to others, and can take it away when, and in what manner, he pleaſes; and this oath is uſed, to ſhew the unalterableneſs of the judgment threatened, it being decreed and ſworn to: God's word or decree, and his oath, are two immutable things, in which he cannot lie, and from which he never departs: they ſhall deliver neither ſons nor daughters; meaning not grown-up perſons, but little ones, infant-ſons and daughters; ſuch as had not been guilty of the actual ſins and tranſgreſſions their parents were charged with; even theſe they ſhould not deliver by their prayers and ſupplications from being deſtroyed by noiſome beaſts, God puniſhing the iniquities of the fathers upon the children; and much leſs ſhould they deliver thoſe that were adult, and had committed the ſame idolatries and other ſins their parents had; no not even their own ſons and daughters; for no exception is made but of themſelves, as follows: they only ſhall be delivered; as Noah with his family was in the ark, when amidſt wild beaſts; and Daniel in the lions den; and Job, with whom the beaſts of the field were at peace, Job v. 23.

℣. 17. Or if I bring a ſword upon that land, &c.] The land which had grievouſly ſinned; the ſame land into which a famine ſhould come, and thro' which evil beaſts ſhould paſs; to which, if the Lord ſhould add, as he would, a third judgment, the ſword; ſuffer a foreign enemy to come in among them, and deſtroy them. So the Targum, "or if thoſe that ſlay with the ſword I "ſhould bring upon that land;" the Chaldean army, as he did; the ſword has its commiſſion from God; war is not by chance; the invaſion of a foreign enemy is from the Lord; and all the miſchiefs and ravages of a tumultuous army are all by divine order: and ſay, ſword, go thro' the land; not only enter the borders of it, or proceed far in it, but even go thro' it; which is terrible indeed! but if the Lord bids it go, it muſt go, and does; it is a ſervant of his, and punctually obeys his commands; that is, ſuch are thoſe that uſe it, however profane and wicked they may be in themſelves, as generally armies conſiſt of diſſolute perſons; yet theſe are under a divine direction, and are obedient to the will of God, though they may know it not. So the Targum, "and I "ſay that they that kill with the ſword paſs thro' "the land:" ſo that I cut off man and beaſt from it; by the ſword; the one being deſtroyed as an enemy, the other for food.

℣. 18. Though theſe three men were in it, &c.] Before-mentioned: as I live ſaith the Lord God, they ſhall deliver neither ſons nor daughters; believe me no more, or be it ſo and ſo, if they do; it is in the form of an oath, and in the ſame manner it is expreſſed in ℣. 16, 20: but they only ſhall be delivered themſelves; their own ſouls or lives, and by their righteouſneſs, as in ℣. 14.

---

[x] שכלתה orbaverit eam, Pagninus, Montanus; orbaturas eam, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; orbam fecero illam, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 19. Or if I ſend a peſtilence into that land, &c.] Or the plague, which is the deſtruction that waſtes at noon-day; this is from the Lord, and a ſore judgment it is: and pour out my fury upon it in blood; or, by blood[y]; by corrupting the blood, which is done when a man is ſeized with the peſtilence. The Targum renders it, with ſlaughter; by ſlaying a great number of perſons by that diſeaſe, as a token of fury and wrath, becauſe of their tranſgreſſions. It may be rendered, becauſe of blood[z]; and ſo expreſs the cauſe and reaſon of the judgment, the ſhedding of innocent blood: to cut off from it man and beaſt; man by the peſtilence, and beaſt by ſome contagious diſtemper or another.

℣. 20. Though Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, &c.] Who are again mentioned by name, as in ℣. 14. and are the three men referred to in ℣. 16, 18: as I live, ſaith the Lord God, they ſhall deliver neither ſon nor daughter; not ſo much as an only ſon, or an only daughter, no not even a ſingle child: the plural number is uſed before, as in ℣. 16, 18. here the ſingular, to ſhow how reſolutely determined the Lord was upon the deſtruction of the land; that even the prayers of the beſt of men among them, ſhould not prevail with him to ſave a ſingle perſon, no not a ſingle infant: they ſhall but deliver their own ſouls by their righteouſneſs; as in ℣. 14. ſee the note there.

℣. 21. For thus ſaith the Lord God, how much more, &c.] If the Lord would not be intreated by ſuch good men as thoſe mentioned, for a land that had ſinned againſt him, to whom he only ſends ſome one of the above judgments, either famine, or noiſome beaſts, or the ſword, or the peſtilence, how much more inexorable and deaf to all intreaties muſt he be; or if any one of thoſe judgments makes ſo great a deſolation in the land, then how much greater muſt that deſtruction be, when I ſend my four ſore judgments on Jeruſalem; or evil[a] ones; as they are to men, tho' righteouſly inflicted by the Lord; when all theſe four are ſent together, what a devaſtation muſt they make? namely, the ſword, and the famine, and the noiſome beaſt, and the peſtilence, to cut off from it man and beaſt; three of them, it is evident, were ſent upon Jeruſalem at the time of its ſiege by Nebuchadnezzar, the ſword, famine, and peſtilence; and no doubt the other, even the noiſome beaſts; and if not literally, yet figuratively, for Nebuchadnezzar himſelf is compared to a lion, Jer. iv. 7. and l. 17.

℣. 22. Yet behold, therein ſhall be left a remnant, &c.] That is, in Jeruſalem, on which God's four ſore judgments ſhould be ſent: though in a ſinful land as before deſcribed, where only one judgment was ſent, there was no eſcape, not ſo much as a ſon or a daughter were delivered; yet here, where four ſore judgments came together, there is a remnant that are ſaved; and which being wonderful, and beyond all expectation, is introduced with a behold, not only as a note of attention, but of admiration: that ſhall be brought forth both ſons and daughters; that is, which ſhould be brought forth out of Jeruſalem when taken, and ſhould not be deſtroyed either by famine, or by noiſome beaſts, or by the ſword, or by the peſtilence; and theſe, many of them, both ſons and daughters; ſome of each ſex, that ſhould be the means of propagating a poſterity, that ſhould return again, and repeople the land, and continue for many ages, as they have done: this is ſaid with reſpect to ℣. 16, 18, 20: behold, they ſhall come forth unto you; come out of Jeruſalem, and their own land, into Babylon, to the captives already there; with whom Ezekiel now was, and to whom he is ſpeaking: and ye ſhall ſee their way, and their doings; their wicked courſe of life and evil actions; which now being convinced of, and humbled for, they ſhall ingenuouſly acknowledge and confeſs to their brethren in captivity: tho' ſome think this is to be underſtood of wicked and reprobate men, that ſhould be not at all reformed by the judgments of God, but continue in their wicked courſe; which the godly captives ſeeing, would conclude from thence their manner of life before, and ſo the righteous judgment of God upon them; and their being a remnant preſerved, is thought not to be in a way of mercy, but judgment; who though they eſcaped each of the four ſore judgments, yet had a worſe inflicted on them, even captivity: and ye ſhall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jeruſalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it; that is, they ſhould be ſatisfied with the juſtice of God, and be reconciled to the providence of God, in bringing deſtruction upon Jeruſalem; which perhaps before they murmured at, or had hard thoughts of God concerning it; but now hearing the confeſſions of thoſe that were brought from thence to them; or ſeeing their wicked lives and converſations, they would now be fully ſatisfied that God was righteous in all that he had done; and that inſtead of being rigorous and ſevere, he had been kind and merciful.

℣. 23. And they ſhall comfort you, when ye ſee their ways and their doings, &c.] Not that their ſinful ways and doings would be comfortable to them, but either their acknowledgements of them, and repentance for them; or ſeeing their diſſolute manner of life, it would be a means of compoſing their minds, and making them eaſy under the providence; being now ſatisfied that God was juſt in bringing upon them all the evils he had, and that they were puniſhed according to their deſerts, and leſs than their ſins deſerved: and ye ſhall know that I have not done without cauſe all that I have done in it, ſaith the Lord God; that there was juſt reaſon for it; that he was ſufficiently provoked to do it; and that it was neceſſary it ſhould be done, for his own honour, and the good of others.

---

[y] בדם per ſanguinem, Piſcator. [z] Propter ſanguinem, Vatablus. [a] הרעים mala, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius; peſſima, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

CHAP. XV.

THE deſtruction of Jeruſalem is again propheſied of in this chapter, and is ſet forth under the ſimile of a vine-tree, which, for its uſeleſsneſs, is committed to the fire. The ſimile is in ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. the application of it in ℣. 6, 7, 8.

℣. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] The deſtruction of Jeruſalem had been repreſented under various types and ſimilies before, as of a ſiege, and a ſharp razor; and here of a fruitleſs and uſeleſs vine, only fit for the fire; which was delivered out by a ſpirit of prophecy. The Targum calls it, the word of prophecy, as uſual.

℣. 2. Son of man, what is the vine tree, more than any tree? &c.] Or, the wood of the vine, than any wood[b]? it is not better than other wood; it is not ſo good as any other wood; nay, it is good for nothing. The fruit of the vine-tree is good, but its wood is of no uſe: a vine-tree, if it bears fruit, is valuable; but if it does not, it is of no account. The people of the Jews are often compared to a vine, who, while they brought forth good fruit, were in eſteem; but when they became like an empty and fruitleſs vine, were rejected as good for nothing, Pſ. lxxx. 8. Iſ. v. 1, 2. Jer. ii. 22. Hoſ. x. 1. they were originally no better than others; what they had, were owing to the grace and goodneſs of God; and when they degenerated, they were the worſt of all people: or than a branch which is among the trees of the foreſt? a vine-tree that bears fruit, is better than a tree of the foreſt, or than a branch of one that is unfruitful; but a vine-tree that does not bear fruit, is not ſo good; becauſe the wood of the one may be uſeful, when the other is not; tho' the words may be better rendered, even the branch of a wild vine which is among the trees of the foreſt[c]; and ſo it explains what vine-tree is ſpoken of; not a fruitful one in the vineyards, but a wild and barren one in the foreſt. So Jarchi paraphraſes the words, "not of the vine in the vineyards which bears "fruit, ſpeak I unto thee; but of the branch of "the vine which grows in the foreſts;" and ſo Kimchi, "I do not aſk thee of the vine-tree which "beareth fruit, for that is valuable; but of the "branch (of the wild vine) which is among the "trees of the foreſt, and is as they that don't "bear fruit, concerning that I aſk thee; for even "it is not as the trees of the foreſt; for the trees "of the foreſt, tho' they don't bear fruit, they "are fit to do work of them, to make veſſels of "them, and to floor houſes with them; but the "wood of this vine is not ſo."

℣. 3. Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? &c.] The carpenter and joiner, the houſe or ſhip-builder are employed in; as to build houſes of, make beams, rafters, floors, &c. build ſhips with, make maſts of, &c. or any veſſel or utenſil for the uſe of man? it never is; it is not fit for any ſuch purpoſe. Pliny[d] ſpeaks of ſome rarities made of the wood of vines, but not things of common uſe; and theſe not of any vines, but of ſome peculiar ones, favoured by the air and ſoil: or will men take a pin of it to hang any veſſel thereon? it is not fit to make a peg of to hang a hat on; and much leſs for any thing that requires more ſtrength.

℣. 4. Behold, it is caſt into the fire for fuel, &c.] That is, a vine-tree when cut down, or a branch when cut off, it is good for nothing elſe; and that is the uſe it is generally put to; ſee John xv. 6. and this, 'tis ſuggeſted, would be the end of the Jewiſh nation; who were become by their ſins like a wild vine, and were fit fuel for the fire of divine wrath: the fire devoureth both the ends of it; the branch caſt into it, and ſo is quickly conſumed. Kimchi explains this by Iſ. ix. 12. the Syrians before, and the Philiſtines behind, and they devour Iſrael with open mouth; and Abendana of the ten tribes; but it ſeems only to deſign how ſoon the fire takes it; and how inevitable the conſumption is when it is fired at both ends: and the midſt of it is burnt; preſently; it being dried, and reduced to a brand by the heat of the fire at both ends: this Kimchi interprets of the city of Jeruſalem, which was in the midſt of the land: is it meet for any work? no; for if it was not fit for any work when cut down, or cut off, much leſs when burnt in the fire.

℣. 5. Behold, when it was whole it was meet for no work, &c.] Before it was cut into pieces, and caſt into the fire, it was not fit to make ſo much as a pin of to hang any thing on; ſo Iſrael when all together, before the ten tribes were carried captive; or the Jews before the captivity of Jeconiah, were uſeleſs and unfruitful, and to every good work reprobate: how much leſs ſhall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned? as its wood is good for nothing before it is burned, its aſhes are uſeleſs after.

℣. 6. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Now follows the application of the ſimile: as the vine-tree among the trees of the foreſt, which I have given to the fire for fuel; to be burnt, as other trees of the foreſt are, and along with them: ſo will I give the inhabitants of Jeruſalem; to be deſtroyed along with other nations by the Chaldeans; they being no better, but as bad, if not worſe, like wild vines among foreſt-trees; and therefore muſt fare no better: this was the decree and determination of the Lord.

℣. 7. And I will ſet my face againſt them, &c.] In wrath to deſtroy them; ſee ch. xiv. 8: and they ſhall go out from one fire, and another fire ſhall devour them; from one calamity to another; thoſe that eſcaped the famine and peſtilence in the city, fell by the ſword; and thoſe that eſcaped famine, ſword and peſtilence, were carried into captivity, and there paſſed from one hardſhip and affliction to another. The Targum is, "I will execute my "vengeance on them, becauſe of the words of "the law, which were given out of the midſt of "fire; they have tranſgreſſed, and people who are "ſtrong as fire ſhall conſume them." Some, as Abendana obſerves, interpret the fire, out of which they went, of Sennacherib, out of whoſe hand the Lord delivered them; and the fire which devoured them, of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and it may be rendered, they have gone out [e], &c. and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I ſet my face againſt them; he is known by his judgments to be the Lord God omnipotent, holy, juſt, and true.

---

[b] עץ הגפן מכל עץ lignum vitis præ omni ligno, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius.

[c] הזמורה ſurculus, Cocceius; ſurculus vitis, Starckius; vitis ſylveſtris, Munſter. So Ben Melech interprets the branch, of a vine.

[d] Nat. Hiſt. l. 14. c. 1.

℣. 8. And I will make the land deſolate, &c.] The land of Judea uncultivated, men and beaſt being cut off; ſee ch. xiv. 15, 21: becauſe they have committed a treſpaſs, ſaith the Lord; acted a treacherous and perfidious part; apoſtatized from God, having committed idolatry, which was the cauſe of their ruin; and therefore it was not without a cauſe, that the Lord did what he did in it; ſee ch. xiv. 23.

CHAP. XVI.

IN this chapter the Jewiſh nation is repreſented under the ſimile of a female-infant, whoſe birth, breeding, marriage, grandeur and conduct, are deſcribed, in order to ſhew the wickedneſs and ingratitude of this people; who, on account thereof, are threatened with judgments; tho' mercy is promiſed to a remnant that ſhould repent. The prophet is directed to make known to Jeruſalem her abominable ſins, ℣. 1, 2. and, in order to this, is bid to take up the following parable of a female-infant; whoſe deſcent, birth and wretched condition, at the time of it, are pointed at, ℣. 3, 4, 5. which are expreſſive of the low and forlorn eſtate of the Jews originally; and then follow the benefits and bleſſings of God beſtowed upon them, both in their infant and adult-ſtate; the preſerving them alive in Egypt, and their multiplication there; and afterwards, the covenant made with them, when brought out from thence; and the Lord's eſpouſal of them to himſelf, as his own people, having a ſtrong affection for them, ℣. 6, 7, 8. the large proviſion of good things he made for them, both in the wilderneſs, and eſpecially in the land of Canaan; the riches he beſtowed upon them, and the flouriſhing and proſperous kingdom he raiſed them to, which made them famous among all the nations round about them, ℣. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. and yet, after all this, ſuch was the ingratitude of this people, as to commit ſpiritual whoredom; that is, idolatry, to a very great degree, ℣. 15. which is aggravated by their converting and applying the good things which the Lord gave them to idolatrous uſes, ℣. 16, 17, 18, 19. by ſacrificing their ſons and daughters to idols, which were the Lord's, ℣. 20, 21. by not calling to mind the former wretched eſtate out of which they were brought, ℣. 22. by building high places in every ſtreet and way, and there committing idolatries, ℣. 23, 24, 25. by the various nations, whoſe examples they followed, and with whom they joined, as the Egyptians, Aſſyrians and Chaldeans, ℣. 26, 27, 28, 29. and by the great difference between them and all other harlots, whom they exceeded, ℣. 30, 31, 32, 33, 34. wherefore on account of all this, they are threatened to be dealt with as an adultereſs woman; made a ſpectacle of; condemned to die, to be ſtripped, ſtoned and burned, ℣. 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43. and that the Lord might appear to be juſt in executing ſuch judgments on them, they are declared to be as bad as the Hittites and Amorites their parents; and worſe than their ſiſters Samaria and Sodom; and therefore could expect to fare no better than they; and ſhould become a proverb and a bye-word, and bear their ſins, ſhame and puniſhment in the ſight of their neighbours, and be deſpiſed by them, ℣. 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59. nevertheleſs, the covenant of grace made with his choſen people among them ſhould ſtand firm; which being manifeſted to them, would be a means of bringing them to a ſenſe of ſin, ſhame for it, and an acknowledgment of the Lord's grace and goodneſs to them, ℣. 60, 61, 62, 63.

℣. 1. Again, the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] The word of prophecy from the Lord, as the Targum; the following repreſentation was made to him under a ſpirit of prophecy.

℣. 2. Son of man, cauſe Jeruſalem to know her abominations.] That is, the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, as the Targum; theſe are mentioned inſtead of the whole body of the people, becauſe that Jeruſalem was the metropolis of the nation, whoſe ſins were very many and heinous: called abominations, becauſe abominable to God, and rendered them ſo to him; particularly their idolatries are meant; which, tho' committed by them, and ſo muſt be known to them, yet were not owned, confeſſed and repented of by them, they not being convinced of the evil of them; in order to which the prophet is bid to ſet them before them, and ſhew them the evil nature of them; and which he might do by writing to them, for he himſelf was now in Chaldea with the captives there. The Targum is, "ſon of man, reprove the inhabitants of "Jeruſalem, and ſhew them their abominations."

℣. 3. And ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God unto Jeruſalem, &c.] To the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, as the Targum: thy birth, and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; here the Jewiſh anceſtors for a time dwelt and ſojourned, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob; and ſo the Targum, Jarchi, Kimchi and Ben Melech interpret the firſt word, thy habitation or ſojourning [f]: but whereas it follows, and thy nativity, this does not ſolve the difficulty; which may be ſaid to be of the land of Canaan, becauſe their anceſtors were born here; for tho' Abraham was a Chaldean, he was called out of Chaldea into the land of Canaan, where Iſaac was born; and ſo was Jacob the father of the twelve tribes; beſides, the Iſraelites were the ſucceſſors of the Canaanites in their land, and ſo ſeemed to deſcend from them; and it is not unuſual for ſuch to be reckoned the children of thoſe whom they ſucceed; to which may be added, that they were like to the Canaanites in their manners, particularly in their idolatries; and ſo their children, as ſuch, are ſaid to be the offspring and deſcendents of thoſe whoſe examples they follow, or whom they imitate; ſee the hiſtory of Suſannah, ℣. 56: thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite; Abraham and Sarah, who were properly ſpeaking, the one the father, the other the mother, of the Jewiſh nation, were Chaldeans; and neither Amorites nor Hittites; yet, becauſe cauſe they dwelt among them, are ſo called; and eſpecially ſince before their converſion they were idolaters, as thoſe were; beſides, the Jews who deſcended from Judah, and from whom they have their name, very probably ſprung from anceſtors who might be Amorites and Hittites; ſince Judah married the daughter of a Canaanite, and ſuch an one ſeems to be Tamar, he took for his ſon Er, and by whom he himſelf had two ſons, Pharez and Zarah, from the former of which the kings of Judah lineally deſcended, Gen. xxxvii. 2, 6, 29, 30. Matt. i. 3. beſides, the Jews were the ſucceſſors of theſe people, and poſſeſſed their land, and imitated them in their wicked practices, Amos ii. 10. and ix. 7. and theſe two, the Amorite and Hittite, of all the ſeven nations are mentioned, becauſe they were the worſt, and the moſt wicked, Gen. xv. 16. and xxvii. 46. The Jews [g] ſay, Terah the father of Abraham, and his anceſtors, came from Canaan.

---

[e] יצאו exiverunt, Cocceius, Starckius.

[f] מכריתיך habitationes tuæ, Pagninus, Calvin; manſiones tuæ, Montanus; habitatio tua, Vatablus, Grotius; ſo R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 50. 1.

℣. 4. And as for thy nativity in the day thou waſt born, &c.] Which refers either to the time when Abraham was called out of Ur of the Chaldeans, who had before been an idolater; or rather to the time when the children of Iſrael were in Egypt, and there grew and multiplied, and became a numerous body of people; who, upon their coming out of it, were brought into ſome form, and became a nation or body politic, which may be called the day of their birth, as a people; ſee Hoſ. ii. 3: thy navel was not cut; alluding to what is done to a new-born infant, when the midwife immediately takes care to cut the navel-ſtring, by which the child adheres to its mother, and takes in its breath and nouriſhment in the womb; but now being of no longer uſe that way, it is cut and tied up, for the ſafety both of mother and child, who otherwiſe would be in great danger; and this denotes the deſperate condition the Iſraelites were in when in Egypt, where they were greatly oppreſſed and afflicted, and in very imminent danger of being deſtroyed; to which the Targum refers it: neither waſt thou waſhed in water to ſupple thee; which alſo is done to an infant as ſoon as born, to cleanſe it from the menſtrous blood, to make the fleſh ſleek, and ſmooth, and amiable; which, as Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve, is done in hot water: thou waſt not ſalted at all; which was done, either by ſprinkling ſalt upon it, or uſing ſalt and water [h], as a deterſive of uncleanneſs, to prevent putrefaction, to dry up the humours, and harden the fleſh, and conſolidate the parts: nor ſwadled at all; to bring the ſeveral members of the body into form and ſhape; ſee Luke ii. 7. and theſe things being of neceſſity to be done immediately, were, as Kimchi obſerves, lawful to be done even on a ſabbath-day, according to the traditions of the elders [i].

℣. 5. None eye pitied thee, to do any of theſe unto thee, to have compaſſion upon thee, &c.] Or, one of theſe [k]; not ſo much as one of them: ſad muſt be the caſe of an infant, when it meets with no tender heart or kind hand from midwife, nurſe, or mother, to do theſe things for it: this is expreſſive of the helpleſs, forlorn and unpitied ſtate of the Iſraelites in Egypt; who, when their lives were made bitter with hard bondage, had no mercy ſhewn them by Pharaoh and his taſk-maſters, Exod. i. 14. and v. 9, 14, 17. So the Targum, "the "eye of Pharaoh did not ſpare you to do one good "thing for you, to give you reſt from your bond-"age, to have mercy on you:" but thou waſt caſt out in the open field; alluding to infants expoſed by their unnatural parents, or unkind nurſes, and left in an open field, or any deſert place, to periſh for want, unleſs ſome kind providence appears for them: this open field may deſign the land of Egypt, whither Jacob and his poſterity were, being drove out of Canaan by a famine; and where, after the death of Joſeph, they were expoſed to the hardſhips and cruelties of the Egyptians; and who, commanding their male children to be ſlain, doubtleſs occaſioned the expoſing of many of them, as well as Moſes, to which ſome reference may be had; and ſo the Targum paraphraſes it, "and he "(Pharaoh) decreed a full decree to caſt your "male children into the river, to deſtroy you "when you were in Egypt:" to the loathing of thy perſon, in the day that thou waſt born; the Iſraelites were loathſome to the Egyptians, as every ſhepherd was an abomination to them, and ſuch were they, Gen. xlvi. 34. and all this may be applied to the ſtate and condition of men by nature, even of God's elect, whoſe extraction is from fallen man; deſcend immediately from unclean parents; are conceived in ſin, and ſhapen in iniquity; can have no communication of grace from their parents, or others; by whom they cannot be waſhed from their ſins, or ſanctified, or clothed, or made righteous; but are in an hopeleſs and helpleſs condition; and are loathſome and abominable to God, and to themſelves too, when they come to ſee the ſtate they are in.

℣. 6. And when I paſſed by thee, &c.] Alluding to a traveller paſſing by where an infant lies expoſed, and looks upon it, and takes it up; or it may be to Pharaoh's daughter walking by the river-ſide, when ſhe ſpied the ark in which Moſes was, and ordered it to be taken up, and ſo ſaved his life: and ſaw thee polluted in thine own blood; keeping up the ſimile of a new born-infant, that has nothing done to it, but is all over covered with menſtruous blood; denoting the wretched and miſerable eſtate the Jews were in, when in Egypt; when they were not only loathſome and abominable to the Egyptians, and ill uſed and unpitied by them; but were in danger of being utterly deſtroyed, and ready to expire. The word rendered polluted, ſignifies trodden under foot [l]; like mire in the ſtreets; and ſo denotes both pollution and diſtreſs; ſo the Iſraelites were trodden under foot by the Egyptians, when they made them to ſerve with rigour, in morter, and in brick, and in all manner of ſervice in the field; and ſo the Targum paraphraſes it, "for it was manifeſt before me that "you were afflicted in your bondage;" as they then ſighed and cried becauſe of their bondage, the Lord looked upon them with an eye of pity and compaſſion, and delivered them, Exod. i. 14. and ii. 23, 24, 25. and iii. 7, 8: I ſaid unto thee, when thou waſt in thy blood, live: yea, I ſaid unto thee, when thou waſt in thy blood, live; the Lord preſerved them, and ſaved them alive, when they were near to ruin, and delivered them by the hands of Moſes, which was as life from the dead; and this he did of his own ſovereign good will and pleaſure, and not for any worth or merit in them, any goodneſs or righteouſneſs of theirs; for this he did when they were in their blood, pollution and guilt; and which, that it might be obſerved, is repeated. The word for blood, which is thrice mentioned, is in the plural number, bloods; and denotes not the blood of circumciſion, and the blood of the paſſover; for, or by which, the Lord had mercy upon them, and redeemed them, as the Targum and Jarchi interpret it; but the abundance of it, as upon a new-born infant; and the great pollution and diſtreſs in which the Iſraelites were, thro' the many murders committed on them by their enemies. The whole is an emblem of the ſtate and condition the elect of God are in, when they are quickened by him; who are by their firſt birth unclean; under the pollution, power, and guilt of ſin; wallowing and weltering in it; deſerving of the wrath of God, and liable to puniſhment for it; trodden under foot, quite neglected and deſpiſed in all appearance; and are both hopeleſs and helpleſs: when the Lord paſſes by them, not by chance, but on purpoſe, knowing where they are; and this he often does by the miniſtry of the word, under which they are providentially caſt; and where he ſees them, and looks upon them, not merely with his eye of omniſcience, much leſs with an eye of ſcorn, contempt and abhorrence; but with an eye of pity and compaſſion, and even of complacency and delight in their perſons, tho' not in their ſins: and when he ſpeaks life into them, a principle of ſpiritual life; or quickens them by his word, ſo that they live a life of faith and holineſs, which iſſues in everlaſting life: this flows from divine love, and is the effect of divine power; it is of pure rich grace, and not of man's merit; as his caſe, being in his blood, and dead in ſins, ſhew; ſee Eph. ii. 4, 5.

---

[g] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 44. 2. & Gloſſ. in ib.

[h] Vid. Alex. ab Alex. Genial. Dier. l. 2. c. 25.

[i] Vid. T. Bab. Sabbat, fol. 129. 2.

[k] אחת מאלה unum ex iſtis, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; unum ex his, Pagninus, Montanus, Starckius.

[l] מתבוססת conculcatam, Pagninus, Montanus, Starckius; præbentem conculcandam te, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

℣. 7. I have cauſed thee to multiply as the bud of the field, &c.] Or, made thee millions [m]; like the ſpires of graſs in the field. This refers to the multiplication of the children of Iſrael in Egypt, eſpecially after the death of Joſeph, and even whilſt they were ſorely afflicted, and likewiſe in after-times. Jacob went down to Egypt with ſeventy-five perſons only, but when his poſterity returned from thence, they were above ſix hundred thouſand that were able to go forth to war, Gen. xlvi. 27. Numb. i. 46. ſee Exod. i. 7, 12: and thou haſt increaſed and waxed great; and became large families, kindreds and tribes, as the Targum interprets it; as a child grows up, and becomes adult: and thou art come to excellent ornaments; or, ornament of ornaments [n]; as a young women, when ſhe is grown up, comes to wear better and finer cloaths than in infancy; perhaps there is an alluſion to the jewels the Iſraelites brought out of Egypt with them: this may be applied to the laws, ſtatutes and ordinances given them, which were an ornament of grace unto them, Prov. i. 9: thy breaſts are faſhioned; ſwelled and ſtood out; were come to a proper bigneſs and ſhape, as in perſons grown and marriageable; ſee Cant. viii. 10: and thine hair is grown; an euphemiſm, expreſſive of puberty, which in females was at twelve years of age: whereas thou waſt naked and bare; in a ſtate of infancy. Jarchi and Kimchi interpret this of the Iſraelites being without the commandments. The whole of what is here ſaid may be applied to quickened and converted perſons, who grow in grace, and increaſe in ſpiritual knowledge; and are adorned with the ornaments of grace and good works; and attend to the word and ordinances, which are the churches breaſts; who, whilſt in their nature-ſtate, were naked and deſtitute of righteouſneſs and grace.

℣. 8. Now when I paſſed by thee, and looked upon thee, &c.] Which the Targum refers to the Lord's appearance to Moſes in the buſh; ſee the note on ℣. 6: thy time was the time of love; which the Targum explains of the time of redemption of the people of Iſrael out of Egypt, which was an inſtance of the great love of God unto that people; and which time was fixed by him, and when it was come, at the exact and preciſe time, the redemption was wrought; ſee Gen. xv. 13, 14. Exod. xii. 40, 41. and ſo there is a ſet time for the calling and converſion of God's elect, who are therefore ſaid to be called according to purpoſe; and when that time comes, all means are made to concur to bring it about: and this is a time of love; for tho' the love of God to his people is before all time, yet it is manifeſted in time; and there are particular times in which it is expreſſed unto them; and the time of converſion is one of them; and indeed it is the firſt time that there is a manifeſtation and application of the love of God made to the ſouls of his people: and this is a time of loves [o], as it is in the original text; denoting the large abundance of it, which is now ſhewn forth; and the various acts of it now done; as bringing of them out of a moſt miſerable condition, out of an horrible pit; plucking them as brands out of the burning; quickening them when dead in ſin; ſpeaking comfortaby to them, and applying pardoning grace and mercy to their ſouls: and it may include both the love of God to his people, and their love to him; for now is the love of their eſpouſals, and the kindneſs of their youth, Jer. ii. 2. the grace of love is now implanted, to God and Chriſt, to his people, word, worſhip and ordinances, which before had no place in them: and I ſpread my ſkirt over thee, and covered thy nakedneſs; the Lord eſpouſed the people of Iſrael to himſelf in the wilderneſs, after he had brought them out of Egypt, and took them under the wings of his protection; both which this phraſe may be expreſſive of; ſee Ruth iii. 9. Some underſtand this of his giving them the ſpoils of the Egyptians, and alſo the law: it may very well be applied to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which is often compared to a garment, for which the ſkirt, a part, is put; and this is put on as a garment, and anſwers all the purpoſes of one; and particularly covers the nakedneſs of men, which their own righteouſneſs will not do; this the Lord ſpreads over his people, and covers them with; and being clothed with this, they ſhall not be found naked: yea, I ſware unto thee; to his love expreſſed to his people, and to his covenant he entered into with them, neither of which ſhall ever be removed; and this makes to their abundant comfort; ſee Pſ. lxxxix. 3, 35. Iſ. liv. 9, 10. Heb. vi. 13—18: and entered into covenant with thee, ſaith the Lord God; as he did with the people of Iſrael at Horeb, and which was a ſort of a marriage-contract with them; ſee Deut. xxix. 1. Jer. xxxi. 32. the covenant of grace was made from everlaſting with Chriſt, and the elect in him; but is made manifeſt at converſion, when the Lord makes himſelf known unto them as their covenant-God; leads them to Chriſt the mediator of it; ſends his Spirit down into their hearts, to make them partakers of the grace of it; and ſhews them their intereſt in the bleſſings and promiſes of it; all which may be meant by the phraſe here uſed: and thou becameſt mine; as Iſrael did at the time before-mentioned, became the Lord's peculiar people, and were avouched as ſuch by him, Exod. xix. 5. ſo in converſion, thoſe who before were ſecretly the Lord's by electing and redeeming grace, become openly his by calling and ſanctifying grace.

---

[m] רבבה decem millia dedi, Pagninus, Montanus; in multa millia, Tigurine verſion; in myriadem te auxi, Piſcator; ſo Ben Melech.

[n] עדי עדיים ornamenta ornamentorum, Pagninus, Montanus; in ornamentum ornamentorum, Calvin; pulchritudinem pulchritudinum, Starckius; ſo Ben Melech; elegantiam elegantiarum, Cocceius.

[o] עת דודים tempus amorum, Paguinus, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 9. Then waſhed I thee with water, &c.] Brought the Iſraelites out of the mean, abject, ſervile and ſordid ſtate in which they were, when among the morter, bricks and pots, into a ſtate of liberty; ſo the Targum, "and I redeemed you from the "ſervitude of the Egyptians; and I removed the "ſtrength of dominion from you, and brought "you into liberty;" perhaps ſome reference may be had to the ceremonial ablutions enjoined them; they were waſhed before the covenant was made with them at mount Sinai, juſt referred to; their prieſts, ſacrifices, veſſels, and all unclean perſons, were to be waſhed, and purifications were preſcribed them: yea, I thoroughly waſhed away thy blood from thee; as with an inundation overflowing; ſo the word [p] ſignifies; very fitly is this mentioned, ſince in ℣. 6. they are ſaid to be polluted in their blood, and now waſhed from it: all men are defiled with ſin, originally, naturally, internally and univerſally; nor can they cleanſe themſelves by any thing they can do, God only can; and this he promiſes to do; and this he does, not with water-baptiſm, which does not take away ſin, original or actual; nor with the waſhing of regeneration, or by regenerating grace; tho' that is ſometimes compared to water; which, among other things, is of a cleanſing nature; and of which men are born again, and by it ſanctified; and which is done by the Spirit, who is a ſpirit of judgment and burning, by whom the filth of the daughter of Zion is waſhed away; and becauſe this is done by the word and ordinances as means, hence theſe are called waters; ſee Ezek. xxxvi. 25. Iſ. xliv. 3. and iv. 4. and lv. 1. yet hereby men are not thoroughly waſhed; tho' a clean heart is created in them, a new man is formed in righteouſneſs and true holineſs; yet the filthineſs of the old man remains, which appears in thoughts, words and actions; but the thorough waſhing is by the blood of Chriſt; that is the fountain opened for ſin and uncleanneſs; with this men are waſhed by Chriſt from their ſins; this has a purgative and cleanſing nature; and it cleanſes from all ſin, and juſtifies from every one; ſo that hereby a man thoroughly waſhed is clear of all ſin, none to be found or ſeen in him; he is without ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing; and has ſolid peace in his ſoul; his heart being ſprinkled with this blood from an evil conſcience, and being purged, has no more conſcience of ſin; ſo that this is expreſſive of the fulneſs of juſtifying and pardoning grace: and I anointed thee with oil; alluding to the anointing-oil, with which the prieſts, tabernacle and veſſels were anointed; or to the land of Canaan, a land of oil-olive, into which the Iſraelites were brought; or to the cuſtom of waſhing and anointing women before marriage; ſee Ruth iii. 3. Eſth. ii. 10. and to the uſe of oil in baths, which was frequent: this may ſpiritually deſign the grace of the Spirit, which, like the oil on Aaron's head, is exceeding precious, as are faith, hope and love; and like the pure oil for the candleſtick, productive of purity of heart, lip and life; of a delightful ſmell, as are the churches ointments, ſhe has from Chriſt, Cant. i. 3. and iv. 10. and very chearing and refreſhing, and therefore called oil of gladneſs, Pſ. xlv. 7. Iſ. lxi. 3. and ornamental and beautifying, as all grace is; and oil will not mix with another liquor, as grace will not with ſin and corruption, and is of an abiding nature: now it is God that anoints with this; this oil comes from the God of all grace; is from Chriſt the holy one, and out of his fulneſs; from him the head it deſcends to all his members, and is applied by the bleſſed Spirit; ſee 2 Cor. i. 21.

℣. 10. I clothed thee alſo with broidered work, &c.] Or, with needle work [q]; with garments of divers colours, like Joſeph's coat; perhaps it may refer to the rich raiment borrowed of the Egyptians, when they came out from thence. So the Targum, "and I clothed you with various gar"ments, the deſirable things of your enemies;" and which, with their other cloaths, waxed not old all the while they were in the wilderneſs; ſee Exod. xii. 35. Deut. viii. 4. this may be expreſſive, either of the various graces of the Spirit of God, with which the ſaints are clothed and adorned; and when exerciſed by them, are ſaid to be put on as a garment, Col. iii. 12. or rather of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, called raiment of needle work, Pſ. xlv. 14: and ſhod thee with badger's ſkin; the ſame the covering of the tabernacle was made of, Exod. xxvi. 13. and tho' the word here uſed may not deſign the creature we ſo call, yet may intend one whoſe ſkin was fit for ſhoe-leather, and was very beautiful, and perhaps durable; reference may be had to the ſhoes of the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, which waxed not old, Deut. xxix. 5. Some think only the hyacinth or purple colour is here meant; and ſo the Septuagint verſion renders the word; agreeable to which, Bochart [r] gives this verſion of the words, I ſhod thee with the purple; that is, with ſhoes of a purple colour; and it is very probable, that of this colour were the ſhoes wore by the Jewiſh women of the firſt rank; ſince, as the ſame writer has not only ſhewn from Procopius, that great perſonages in other nations uſed to wear ſuch, as the Perſian and Roman emperors; who, in their own countries only, might wear them; but this was the cuſtom of neighbouring provinces, particularly the Tyrian women, as Virgil [s] plainly ſuggeſts. Bynæus [t] is of opinion, that they were of a red or ſcarlet colour; and that the words ſhould be rendered, I ſhod thee with ſcarlet; that is, with ſcarlet-coloured ſhoes; which he obſerves have been in great eſteem and uſe among perſons of figure and quality; and be they of what colour they will, they were, no doubt, made of ſkins of value, fine, ſoft, and pliable; as the Targum paraphraſes it, "I put precious ſhoes (or ſhoes of "value) upon your feet;" and therefore can't be well thought to be made of badgers ſkins, of which it was never known that ſhoes were made; with thoſe indeed quivers and ſhields have been covered, and of thoſe the harneſs of horſes, and collars of dogs have been made; but not mens ſhoes, and much leſs the ſhoes of delicate women. This may denote the agreeable walk of the ſaints, having their feet ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel of peace; or a converſation agreeable to the goſpel of Chriſt; which is very beautiful, and in which they are enabled to continue by the power and grace of God; ſee Luke xv. 22. Eph. vi. 15. Cant. vii. 1: and I girded thee about with fine linen; as the high-prieſt was with the linen girdle of the Ephod, Exod. xxviii. 8. So the Targum, "and "I ſeparated from you the prieſts, that they might "miniſter before me with linen mitres, and the "high-prieſt in garments of divers colours;" all the ſaints are made prieſts to God, and are girt about with the girdle of love, which conſtrains them to fear and ſerve the Lord with all readineſs and chearfulneſs; and with the girdle of truth, which they cauſe to cleave and keep cloſe unto them; ſee Eph. vi. 14. Luke xii. 35: and I covered thee with ſilk. The Targum interprets this of the clothing of the high-prieſt; but, if reſpect is had to that, ſilk cannot be intended; for, as the Jews themſelves ſay [u], the prieſts were not clothed for ſervice in the houſe of the ſanctuary, but with wool and linen; and indeed, tho' the Jewiſh commentators in general, as Jarchi, Aben Ezra, and Kimchi, and others [w], as well our verſion, take the word here uſed to ſignify ſilk; yet, as Braunius [x] obſerves, it does not appear that this was known among the Jews in the times of Ezekiel, nor even before the times of Chriſt; nor was it known among the Romans before the times of Auguſtus. The word ſeems to be derived from an Arabic word [y], which ſignifies to colour or paint clothes; and may be rendered, painted or coloured cloth, or garments; and ſo the Targum renders it, dyed or coloured garments; and ſo Aquila tranſlates it, by ανθινον, a flowered garment, either painted or wrought with flowers; and ſo Jerom, and the Vulgate Latin, by polymitum, a garment of divers colours; and may ſignify, as before, the rich apparel of the Jews, and the plenty of good things enjoyed by them; ſee Luke xvi. 19. and, in a myſtical ſenſe, the beautiful clothing of the church, with the robe of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and the graces of the Spirit.

---

[p] אשטף דמיך ut inundans eluerem ſanguinem tuum, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; inundavi ſanguines tuos, Montanus; affundendo ablui, Cocceius.

[q] רקמה veſte acupicta, Vatablus, Grotius; acupicto, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[r] Hierozoicon, par. 2. l. 3. c. 31. col. 992.

[s] Virginibus Tyriis mos eſt geſtare pharetram,
Purpureoque alte ſuras vincire cothurno. Æneid. l. 1.

[t] De Calceis Hebr. l. 1. c. 3. §. 16.

℣. 11. And I decked thee alſo with ornaments, &c.] The Targum interprets this, of the ornament of the words of the law; ſee Prov. i. 8, 9. but may be as well underſtood of good works done in obedience to them, from a right principle, and to right ends; which adorn profeſſors of religion, their profeſſion, and the doctrines of Chriſt, which they profeſs, 1 Tim. ii. 9, 10. Tit. ii. 10. or rather the graces of the Spirit, which are all of them very ornamental to the ſaints, as faith, hope, love, humility, &c. and are in the ſight of God of great price, 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4: and I put bracelets upon thine hands; which the Targum alſo explains of the law, written on two tables of ſtone, and given by the hands of Moſes; the words of which, as Jarchi ſays, were put one againſt another, five againſt five: hands being the inſtruments of action, may denote good works, which the Lord enables his people to perform; and which appear beautiful, as hands with bracelets on them, when they ſpring from love, are done in faith, and with a view to the glory of God: and a chain on thy neck; this the Targum underſtands of ſanctification, paraphraſing it, "and with the holineſs of my great name "I ſanctified you;" and may be applied to the graces of the Spirit, which are as a chain, whoſe links are inſeparably joined together; for where one grace is, there are all the reſt, faith, hope, charity, &c. ſee Cant. i. 10. and iv. 9. or elſe to the bleſſings of grace, which alſo are linked together, and can't be parted; where the one is, the other are likewiſe, Eph. i. 3. Rom. viii. 30, 32. and both graces and bleſſings make the ſaint very beautiful.

℣. 12. And I put a jewel on thy forehead, &c.] The ſame with the noſe-jewel, which was hung upon the forehead, and reached down to the noſe and mouth; and however diſagreeable it may ſeem to us, was reckoned very ornamental in the eaſtern countries, Iſ. iii. 21. Gen. xxiv. 22, 47. and where now, as in Perſia, as well as in all the Levant, the women put rings thro' their noſes, which they pierce with needles, as Monſieur Thevenot [z] relates; ſo Dr. Shaw [a] ſays, that noſe-jewels are uſed ſtill by the Levant Arabs. The Targum applies it to the ark, thus, "and I put the ark of my co-"venant among you;" but may be better applied to a public profeſſion of religion, which every good man ought to make, and take up from principles of grace received: this is bearing the name of Chriſt, and the name of his Father in their foreheads; which is very ornamental to the believer, and well pleaſing to Chriſt, Rom. x. 9, 10. Rev. xiv. 1. Matt. x. 32: and ear-rings in thine ears. The Targum is, "and the clouds of my glory "overſhadowed you;" but it may be better interpreted of the ſpiritual ears God gives his people in converſion; by which they hear his word, ſo as to underſtand it; hear the voice of Chriſt, ſo as to diſtinguiſh it from the voice of a ſtranger; and hear his goſpel, ſo as to believe and receive it, approve of it, and love it, and act in conformity to it: and a beautiful crown upon thine head. The Targum paraphraſes it, thus, "and an angel ſent "from before me, led at the head of you;" referring to Exod. xxiii. 20. with which Jarchi compares Mic. ii. 13. but may be better illuſtrated by the beautiful crown of twelve ſtars, the doctrine of the twelve apoſtles of Chriſt, ſaid to be upon the head of the church; and is upon the head of every believer that holds the myſtery of the faith in a pure conſcience; that holds faſt the faithful word, and will not let it go, that ſo no man may take away his crown, Rev. xii. 1. and iii. 11.

℣. 13. Thus waſt thou decked with gold and ſilver, &c.] The Targum interprets it, of the tabernacle adorned with gold and ſilver, and linen curtains, of various dyes and colours; but it refers to the ornaments, bracelets, chain, ear-rings, and crown before-mentioned; ſee Pſ. xlv. 9, 13: and thy raiment

---

[u] Miſn. Celaim, c. 9. §. 1.

[w] משי ſerico, Pagninus, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius. So Buxtorf, Stockius, &c.

[x] De veſtitu Sacerdot. Hebr. l. 1. c. 8. p. 168, 169.

[y] وشي coloravit, pinxitque pannum. Hinc موشي coloratus, pinctuſque pannus, Golius, col. 2678, 2679. Caſtel. col. 996.

[z] Travels, par. 2. b. 2. ch. 9. p. 94.

[a] Travels, p. 241. Ed. II.

raiment was of fine linen, and ſilk, and broidered work; ſee the note on ℣. 10. with this compare Rev. xix. 8: thou didſt eat fine flour, and honey, and oil; which did not a little contribute to her beauty and comelineſs; ſee Dan. i. 15. this the Targum explains of the manna with which the Lord fed the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, and was good, like fine flour, and honey, and oil; and had, as Jarchi ſays, the taſte of them all: but may be better applied to ſpiritual proviſions believers are fed with; to the goſpel, and the doctrines of it, which are as nouriſhing and ſtrengthening as bread of fine flour; as ſweet as honey to the taſte; and which make fat and plump, and cauſe the face to ſhine as oil: and thou waſt exceeding beautiful, and thou didſt proſper into a kingdom; the Targum is, “and ye became rich, and were greatly ſtrengthened, and proſpered, and ruled over all kingdoms;” and had its accompliſhment, as Kimchi obſerves, when the time of the kingdom of the houſe of David came: and is true of all believers, who are a kingdom of prieſts, a royal prieſthood, kings and prieſts unto God; have a kingdom of grace now, which can never be moved, and lies in righteouſneſs, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt; and are heirs of a kingdom of glory hereafter.

℣. 14. And thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty, &c.] Which conſiſted of the above things: with this compare Deut. vi. 4. Pſ. xlviii. 2. Lam. ii. 15. the church's beauty lies in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to her; in the holineſs of Chriſt reckoned unto her; in the blood of Chriſt being upon her, by which ſhe is waſhed and cleanſed, juſtified and pardoned; and in the graces of the Spirit of Chriſt implanted in her; and in the ſalvation of Chriſt ſhe is intereſted in; and in the preſence of Chriſt, which is the beauty of the Lord upon her; and in being in goſpel-order, and having goſpel-ordinances; ſee Pſ. xlv. 11, 13. and 149. 4. and xc. 17. Cant. vi. 4, 10: for it was perfect thro' my comelineſs, which I had put upon thee, ſaith the Lord God; all the outward happineſs and proſperity of the Iſraelites in the days of David and Solomon, or at other times, was not, as Kimchi obſerves, of themſelves, but of the Lord: and ſo the comelineſs of the ſaints and people of God is not of themſelves; they are by nature black and deformed; they are defiled with original and actual ſin; they are as an unclean thing; they are corrupt, abominable, and loathſome; and as they have not their comelineſs by nature, ſo not by art; as it is not native to them, it is not acquired by them; they don't obtain it by their humiliation, repentance, and ſervices; theſe can't remove their natural blackneſs and uncomelineſs, or waſh away their ſins, and render them beautiful in the ſight of God, Jer. xiii. 23. and ii. 22. Job ix. 30, 31. but they have their comelineſs from another, from Chriſt, who is altogether lovely; and from his righteouſneſs, which is put on them; and ſo they are in him, and thro' that, perfectly comely, a perfection of beauty, all fair, and without ſpot, even the faireſt in the whole creation, complete in Chriſt, and perfect in him, Pſ. l. 2. Cant. i. 5, 8. and iv. 7.

℣. 15. But thou didſt truſt in thine own beauty, &c.] As the Jews did in external gifts beſtowed upon them; in their outward proſperity and grandeur; in their riches, wealth, and wiſdom; and in the extent of their dominions, as in the days of David and Solomon; and in ſuch things men are apt to put their truſt and confidence, and to be elated with, and grow proud and haughty, as a woman becauſe of her beauty: ſo ſome profeſſors of religion, truſt in a form and profeſſion of it; in ſpeculative knowledge, and in outward duties and ſervices; being unconcerned for inward purity and holineſs; and not truſting in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, the real beauty of ſaints: and playedſt the harlot becauſe of thy renown; or name [b]; which the Jews got among the nations round about them, for their wiſdom, riches, and power, which was a ſnare unto them, as a woman's beauty is to her; and they were admired and courted, and complimented by their neighbours, and ſo drawn into idolatrous practices, as women into fornication and adultery by the admirers of them: idolatry, which is here meant, is frequently ſignified by playing the harlot, or by fornication and adultery: or, thou playedſt the harlot in thy name [c]; alluding to the cuſtom of harlots, notorious, infamous ones, who uſed to ſet their names over their apartments, to direct men unto them; and ſo it may denote, how famous and notorious the Jews were for their idolatries, and how impudent in them. Jarchi interprets this of the calf of the wilderneſs, and other idolatries, which the tribe of Dan committed there; but it rather reſpects the idolatries committed from the times of Solomon to the captivity, which were many and often repeated; and tho' ſometimes a ſtop was put to them by pious princes, yet broke out again: ſo truſting in a man's own righteouſneſs, or in any outward thing, is idolatry; and alſo falſe worſhip, and ſuperſtitious obſervances: and pouredſt out thy fornication on every one that paſſed by; which expreſſes the multitude of their idolatries, the meaſure of them, which ran over; the fondneſs they had for every idol of their neighbours, like a common ſtrumpet, that proſtitutes herſelf to every one, not only to the men of her own place and city, but to all ſtrangers and travellers; ſo the Jews, not content with the idols they had, embraced all that offered, or their neighbours could furniſh them with: his it was; or, to him it was; her deſire, her luſt, her fornication; every one that paſſed by that would, might enjoy her; ſo the Jews were ready to fall in with every idol, and every idolatrous practice. The Targum renders this clauſe, “and it is not right for thee to do ſo;” to commit and multiply idolatry.

℣. 16. And of thy garments thou didſt take, &c.] Which were made of fine linen, ſilk, and broidered work; which God had given them, and they were richly clad with: and deckedſt thy high places with divers colours; that is, with garments of divers colours; either they erected tents on their high places made with theſe; or they covered their altars with them, which were on their high places for the ornament of them, as harlots deck their beds to allure their lovers; ſee Prov. vii. 16, 17. or, thou haſt made for thyſelf high places ſpotted [d]; ſo the word is rendered in Gen. xxx. 32, 33, 35. alluding to garments ſpotted with the fleſh by adulterers. The Targum is, thou haſt made for thyſelf high

---

[b] על שמך propter nomen tuum, Pagninus, Montanus, Piſcator.

[c] In nomine tuo, V. L. Munſter, Tigurine verſion, Grotius; ſuper nomen tuum, Starckius; cum nomine tuo, Junius & Tremellius.

[d] ותעשי לך במות טלאות et feciſti tibi excelſa maculoſa, Montanus; excelſa conſperſa maculis, Calvin; latis maculis interſtincta, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus.

high places covered with idols; and ſo the Septuagint verſion renders it, idols ſewed together. The word, in the Talmudic language[e], has the ſignification of ſewing. Theſe idols were decked as children's babies are; and ſo the Syriac verſion, thou haſt made for thyſelf babies; images like babies, richly dreſt with their garments above deſcribed, ſuch as the papiſts now have. And playedſt the harlot thereon; committed idolatry on the high places: or, with them[f]; that is, with the images and idols decked with their garments, which were ſet on thoſe high places: the like things ſhall not come, neither ſhall it be ſo; the like idolatries ſhall not be committed any more; and after the Babyloniſh captivity, worſhipping of idols was not practiſed by the Jews; nor is it to this day: or, ſuch things have not come yet, and there ſhall not be the like[g]; the ſenſe is, there never were ſuch idolatries committed by this people before; and there never ſhall be, or will be, the like afterwards. Kimchi's note is, "the "high places ſhall not come as theſe; as if it was "ſaid theſe ſhall not be in futurity; and there "ſhall not be a man or a people that ſhall make "like theſe for multitude;" ſo Ben Melech; and במות high places, does agree with באות come. The Targum joins this with the preceding clauſe, "and "playedſt the harlot with them, as is not right and "fit."

℣. 17. Thou haſt alſo taken thy fair jewels of my gold, and of my ſilver, which I had given thee, &c.] Or, thy glorious veſſels of gold and ſilver[h]; meaning either the veſſels of gold and ſilver in the temple, as Jerom thinks, which they converted to idolatrous uſes; or rather their own houſhold-veſſels of gold and ſilver, which God had given them, as the bounties of his providence, and he had ſtill a right unto, and which they made uſe of to the diſhonour of his name; which argued great ingratitude in them: and madeſt to thyſelf images of men; images in the ſhape of men; ſome were in the ſhape of women, others in the ſhape of men; here only male-images are mentioned, becauſe the idolatrous Jews are repreſented by an adulterous woman committing adultery with men; and theſe were made by themſelves, of their jewels of gold and ſilver; or of their golden and ſilver veſſels, which they had to eat and drink out of; theſe they melted down, and made idols of them in the form of men, juſt as the molten calf was made of the ear-rings of the women, Exod. xxxii. 3, 4. to which ſome refer this paſſage: and as it was a piece of egregious folly in themſelves to part with their jewels and plate for ſuch purpoſes, and of great ingratitude to God their benefactor, ſo of the groſſeſt ſtupidity and ignorance to worſhip images ſo made; which was equally as ſtupid, or more ſo, than if a woman ſhould embrace the image of a man, inſtead of a man himſelf, as it follows: and didſt commit whoredom with them; the images; that is, idolatry, which is ſpiritual adultery.

℣. 18. And tookeſt thy broidered garments, and coveredſt them, &c.] The images of men, the idols they worſhipped; ſee Jer. x. 4. ſo the papiſts at this day cover their idols, the images of the virgin Mary, and other ſaints, with rich apparel, to draw the attention, admiration, and reverence of the people to them: and thou haſt ſet mine oil, and mine incenſe before them; the oil which the Lord gave them for food, the land of Canaan being a land of oil-olive; or which was to light the lamps in the temple with; or was uſed in ſacrifice to the Lord, particularly in the meat-offerings; and the incenſe, which was offered unto him on the altar of incenſe; theſe were ſet upon the altars of idols, and before them, the male-images before-mentioned; ſee Hoſ. ii. 8.

℣. 19. My meat alſo which I gave thee, &c.] Or my bread[i]; a general name for all eatables. The Targum renders it, "my good things." The Jews apply it to the manna, which, they ſay, deſcended the ſame day the molten calf was made, and they ſet it before it. This interpretation Jarchi and Kimchi make mention of; it includes what follows: fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee; for the land of Canaan was a land of wheat, of which fine flour was made; and of olives, from whence was the beſt oil; and a land flowing with milk and honey; and which was given by the Lord, and ſo he might be ſaid to feed them with them: and inſtead of glorifying him, and being thankful for them, and uſing them in the manner they ought, they ſet it before them for a ſweet ſavour; that is, they made a meat-offering of their fine flour, oil, and honey, and ſet it before their idols; to gain their favour and good-will; to appeaſe them, and render them propitious; ſuppoſing it would be acceptable unto them; all theſe things were uſed in meat-offerings and ſacrifices unto the Lord, excepting honey, and that was forbid; but was in uſe among the Gentiles; ſee Lev. ii. 1, 11: and thus it was, ſaith the Lord God; all this idolatry, ingratitude, and folly, have been committed; 'tis moſt notorious, there's no denying it; I, who am the Lord God omniſcient, affirm it. The Targum puts it by way of queſtion, and even of aſtoniſhment and admiration, "are not all theſe things done, ſaith the "Lord God!"

℣. 20. Moreover, thou haſt taken thy ſons and thy daughters, &c.] Their own fleſh and blood; which were more than to take their cloaths and cover their idols with them, and their food, and ſet it before them: to part with them was much, but to part with theſe, and that in ſuch a ſhocking manner as after-mentioned, was ſo irrational and unnatural, as well as impious and wicked, as is not to be paralleled; and what increaſed their wickedneſs was, that theſe were not only their own, but the Lord's: whom thou haſt born unto me; for tho' they were born of them, they were born unto the Lord, the creator of them, the Father of their ſpirits, and God of their lives, and who had the ſole right to diſpoſe of them; nor was it in the power of their parents to take away their life at pleaſure; for the Lord only has the ſovereign power of life and death; and theſe haſt thou ſacrificed unto them; the male-images before-mentioned; one of which was Molech, who is here particularly deſigned: to be devoured; in the arms of that image; or to be conſumed by fire, in which they were burnt, when ſacrificed unto it. The Targum is, "for oblation and worſhip." Is this of thy whoredoms a ſmall matter? which was ſo dreadfully heinous and inhuman, yet by ſome reckoned a ſmall matter; this was not the leaſt of their idolatries, but of all the moſt ſhocking, and the moſt aggravated: or the ſenſe is, is it a ſmall thing that thou ſhouldſt play the harlot, or worſhip idols? is it not enough for thee to do ſo, but thou muſt ſacrifice thy children alſo to them? and which are not only thine, but mine, as follows:

---

[e] T. Bab. Gittin, fol. 45. 2. Miſn. Celim, c. 27. §. 6.

[f] עליהם iiſque, Ar. Interpr.

[g] לא באות ולא יהיה non eventuræ ſunt tales ſcortationes, nec erit qui ſic ſcortetur, Piſcator.

[h] כלי תפארתך מזהבי ומכספי vaſa gloriæ tuæ de auro meo, & de argento meo, Pagninus, Montanus; vaſa tua inſigniora & elegantiora, facta ex auro meo, Vatablus.

[i] ולחמי & panem meum, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus, Starckius.

℣. 21. That thou haſt ſlain my children, &c.] By creation, as all born into the world are; and by national adoption, as all the Jewiſh children were; and particularly the firſt-born were eminently his, and which are here deſigned, as Jarchi interprets it; for they were the children that were ſlain and ſacrificed to Molech; ſee Ezek. xx. 26: and delivered them to cauſe them to paſs thro' the fire for them; for the ſake of idols, for the worſhip of them; this they did before they were ſlain; they firſt cauſed them to paſs thro' between two fires, and ſo dedicated them to the idol, and then ſlew them; or ſlew them by burning them in the fire, or by putting them into the arms of the idol made burning hot.

℣. 22. And in all thine abominations, and thy whoredoms, &c.] Or idolatries, which were abominable to God, and were many; of which that juſt mentioned was not one of the leaſt: thou haſt not remembred the days of thy youth; the deſtitute and forlorn condition then in, and what favours were then beſtowed: when thou waſt naked and bare, and waſt polluted in thy blood; ſee the notes on ℣. 6, 7. which is mentioned to upbraid the Jews with their ingratitude; they forgetting the miſerable condition they were in in Egypt, and what great things the Lord had done for them in bringing them out from thence, and the obligations they were laid under to him; and yet after all this, to commit ſuch abominable iniquities, and in the midſt of them all never once call to mind what they had received from him; which might have been a check to their idolatries, but ſo it was not.

℣. 23. And it came to paſs after all thy wickedneſs, &c.] This refers either to what goes before, ſo Kimchi; and the ſenſe is, it ſhall be again as it was at firſt, after and becauſe of all the above wickedneſs committed, thou ſhalt be left naked and bare, and deſtitute of all that is good: or rather to what follows in the next clauſe; and the meaning is, to all this wickedneſs before-mentioned, which was ſo great that it might be thought nothing more could be added to it; and yet the following things were, as building an eminent place, and high places, in all ſtreets and heads of ways: wo, wo unto thee, ſaith the Lord of hoſts; which is repeated, to ſhow the indignation of the Lord againſt all this wickedneſs; to arouſe their attention to their ſin and puniſhment, and to ſhew the certainty of it; and it may be, it denotes both their miſery in this world, and in that to come. The Targum of the whole is, "what ſhall be in thine end for all thy wickedneſs? the prophet ſaid unto her, wo unto thee, becauſe thou haſt ſinned; wo unto thee, becauſe thou art not converted, ſaith the Lord God."

℣. 24. That thou haſt alſo built unto thee an eminent place, &c.] Or a brothel [k]; and ſo the Septuagint verſion, a whoring-houſe; not content to commit idolatry privately, they built a public place for idolatrous worſhip. The Targum renders it, altar. The word has the ſignification of a pit or ditch; with which compare Prov. xxii. 14. and xxiii. 27. And haſt made thee an high place in every ſtreet; of Jeruſalem, and other cities; it was uſual to erect high places in ſtreets, where altars were built, and idols ſet up to be worſhipped: it denotes the public manner in which they committed idolatry, and the multitude of their idols; which ſhows their impudence and hardneſs of heart.

℣. 25. Thou haſt built thy high place at every head of the way, &c.] Where two or more ways, or two or more ſtreets met; and ſo was moſt conſpicuous, and was ſeen from different parts; which ſhows the ſame as before: and haſt made thy beauty to be abhorred; by the Lord himſelf, who otherwiſe greatly deſires and delights in the beauty of his people, when they worſhip him, Pſ. xlv. 11. and by all good men, and ſuch as fear the Lord, who cannot but abhor ſuch idolatrous practices, and thoſe that are guilty of them; and even by the heathens themſelves, to whom the Jews became mean and deſpicable, when they fell into idolatry; and under the diſpleaſure of God, whom they forſook; as a common ſtrumpet becomes, in proceſs of time, loathſome to her quondam lovers: and haſt opened thy feet to every one that paſſed by; an euphemiſm, ſignifying the expoſing to view the privities or ſecret parts, in order to allure to impure embraces; and the meaning is, that the Jews were ready to receive any idol, and give into any idolatrous worſhip that offered to them, and even courted and ſolicited the Gentiles to join with them in all idolatrous practices: and multiplied thy whoredoms; or idolatries; the number of their idols being anſwerable to their cities, and even were as many as the ſtreets and heads of ways in them.

℣. 26. Thou haſt alſo committed fornication with the Egyptians, &c.] By entering into leagues and alliances with them, and ſeeking to them for help and aſſiſtance againſt their enemies; from whoſe bondage they had formerly been delivered; and whoſe ſociety they were cautioned againſt; and yet they forſook the Lord, and joined themſelves to them by ſolemn covenant; and not only ſo, but fell into the worſhip of their idols, who were a people of all others the moſt ſuperſtitious, and given to idolatry; and many of their idolatrous rites and ceremonies were received and retained by the Jews, as the worſhipping of Tammuz, and other idols: thy neighbours, great of fleſh; being their neighbours, and full of power and ſtrength to aſſiſt them, they courted their friendſhip and alliance; and their idolatries being many and monſtrous, were the more courted by them: the alluſion is to women of ſhameleſs impudence and inſatiable luſt, who covet men, whoſe fleſh is as the fleſh of aſſes, and their iſſue as horſes, ch. xxiii. 20. fleſh here ſignifies the privy parts of men; ſo Ben Melech. And haſt increaſed thy whoredoms to provoke my anger; multiplied their idolatries, which they learned of the Egyptians, a people much given thereunto; and which were abominable and highly provoking to God, 1 Pet. iv. 3. The Targum is, "thou haſt increaſed thine idols."

℣. 27. Behold, wherefore I have ſtretched out my hand over thee, &c.] His chaſtizing and correcting hand, to ſhow his reſentment at their ſins, and bring them to a ſenſe of them, and repentance for them: and have diminiſhed thine ordinary food; their ſtated allowances, the common mercies and bleſſings of life they had been indulged with, but now were leſſened; and particularly a famine was brought upon them, as well as they were deprived of other favours for their ſins; God dealing with them, as huſbands with their wanton wives, who keep them to ſtraiter allowance, and cloſer confinement, in order to check and tame them: and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, the daughters of the Philiſtines; which perhaps may refer to the times of Ahaz, when the Philiſtines invaded the cities of the low country, and of the ſouth of Judah, and took many of their cities, and brought Judah low, 2 Chron. xxviii. 18, 19: which are aſhamed of thy lewd way; of their inconſtancy in changing their religion, relinquiſhing the worſhip of the true God, and embracing that of others, when they abode by their ancient religion and worſhip, Jer. ii. 10, 11. The Targum is, "to whom if I had ſent my prophets, they would have been aſhamed;" ſee Matt. xi. 21, 23.

---

[k] גב, οικημα πορνικον, Sept. lupanar, V. L; proſtibulum, ſo ſome in Starckius.

℣. 28. Thou haſt played the whore alſo with the Aſſyrians, &c.] By entering into alliances with them, and worſhipping their idols; which was done in the times of Ahaz, who ſent to Tiglath-Pileſer king of Aſſyria for help, and to Damaſcus for the faſhion of the altar there, and built one according to it, 2 Kings vii. 10, 11: becauſe thou waſt unſatiable; not content with the alliance and idolatries of the Egyptians: yea, thou haſt played the harlot with them; with the Aſſyrians: and yet couldeſt not be ſatisfied; with their idols, and the worſhip of them, but ſought out for new gods, and new modes of worſhip; like a lewd woman, who having proſtituted herſelf to one, and to another, yet remains inſatiable, and ſeeks out for other lovers.

℣. 29. Thou haſt moreover multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan, &c.] Or, with the land of Canaan[l]; with the inhabitants of it, doing the ſame evils, committing the ſame idolatries, as the old inhabitants of Canaan did; and ſo the Targum, "and thou haſt multiplied thine idols, that thou mighteſt be joined to the people of Canaan:" or, to the land of Canaan[m]; like to the land of Canaan; according to the abominations of the Canaanites, doing as they did. Jarchi takes the word Canaan to ſignify a merchant, as it does in Hoſ. xii. 7. and the land of Canaan to be the ſame with the land of Chaldea, called a land of traffick, and Babylon the city of merchants, Ezek. xvii. 4. ſince it follows, unto Chaldea: but the ſenſe is, that the Jews were not content with the idolatries in the land of Canaan, but ſent even to Chaldea, a remote country, to fetch new idols from thence; ſee Ezek. xxiii. 14, 15, 16. The Targum is, "to walk in the laws of the Chaldeans;" their religious ones, their rites and ceremonies reſpecting idolatrous worſhip: and yet thou waſt not ſatisfied herewith; but ſtill wanted other idols and modes of worſhip; not being content with the gods of the Egyptians, nor of the Aſſyrians, nor of the Canaanites, nor of the Chaldeans.

℣. 30. How weak is thine heart, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Thro' ſin; and being deſtitute of the grace of God, and ſo unable to reſiſt any temptation, or oppoſe any corruption or luſt, but carried away with every one that offers; indulging every luſt, and yet not ſatisfied; weak as water, unſtable, fickle, and inconſtant, ſeeking after new gods, and new kinds of worſhip. The Targum is, "how ſtrong is the wickedneſs of thy heart?" the ſtronger the wickedneſs of the heart, the weaker the heart is: ſeeing thou doſt all theſe things; all the idolatries before-mentioned; which was an argument not of her ſtrength, but weakneſs, and yet of boldneſs, impudence, and reſolution, to have her will: the work of an imperious whoriſh woman? a whore, as ſhe is impudent, is imperious, is one that rules and governs. The Targum is, who rules over herſelf; does what ſhe pleaſes, will have her will and way, and can't bear any contradiction; and who rules over others, ſuch as are her gallants, obliging them to do as ſhe commands. Jarchi's note is, "over whom her imagination (or corruption) rules."

℣. 31. In that thou buildeſt thine eminent place in the head of every way, &c.] Or brothel-houſe, as before; ſee the note on ℣. 24. which ſhowed her to be an whore, and an imperious one: and makeſt thine high place in every ſtreet; ſee the note as before: and has not been as an harlot; a common one, or as an harlot uſually is: in that thou ſcorneſt hire; which they do not; for it is for hire they proſtitute themſelves; and have their names, both in our language, and in the Latin tongue, from thence.

℣. 32. But as a wife that committeth adultery, &c.] Who has a huſband, and is provided for with all the neceſſaries of life, with food and cloathing; and ſo has no need to proſtitute herſelf for a livelihood, as common ſtrumpets do; but does it purely for the ſatiating of her luſt: and ſuch were the people of the Jews, they were married to the Lord, who took care of them, and provided every thing for them, and acted the part of an huſband to them; ſo that it was the weakneſs of their hearts, and the ſtrength of their corruptions, which led them to depart from him, and commit idolatry; which in them was adultery, whilſt the ſin of the Gentiles was as ſimple fornication: which taketh ſtrangers inſtead of her huſband; that takes other men into her bed inſtead of her huſband, not for the ſake of gain, but luſt; and this was the caſe of the Jews, who were a wicked people, an idolatrous generation, who took ſtrange gods to worſhip inſtead of the true God, who had been an huſband to them, Jer. xxxi. 32.

℣. 33. They give gifts to all whores, &c.] Gifts are uſually given to whores, by thoſe who commit whoredom with them; it is for the ſake of theſe they proſtitute their bodies, nor will they do this without gain; ſee Gen. xxxviii. 16, 17: but thou giveſt thy gifts to all thy lovers; the Jews gave the Egyptians and Aſſyrians money, to gain their friendſhip, and procure alliances with them; ſee 2 Kings xvi. 8. Iſ. xxx. 6, 7. and were at great expences with their idols, and in ſupport of their idolatrous worſhip: and hireſt them, that they may come unto thee on every ſide for thy whoredom; they courted the nations all around them for their favour and friendſhip, and bribed them into it, as the word[n] ſignifies.

℣. 34. And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, &c.] Of which an inſtance is given before, and another is added, with the repetition of the former: whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms; the Jews followed the examples, cuſtoms, and practices of the Gentiles, in worſhipping of their idols; but the Gentiles did not follow the Jews, they kept to their own gods, and did not worſhip the God of Iſrael; which with reſpect to their own gods would have been fornication: and whereas it is uſual for men to follow after whoriſh women, and ſolicit them by gifts and preſents, or promiſes, and not for them to follow the men, court and ſollicit them; on the other hand the Jews, who are compared to a whoriſh woman, followed after their lovers, and not their lovers after them: or, after thee there was not, or ſhall not be fornication [o]; like to thine; it being ſuch as never had been, nor never would be the like again: and in that thou giveſt a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary; to all other lewd women, who take, but give no reward.

---

[l] אל ארץ כנען cum terra Canaan, Munſter, ſo ſome in Vatablus, Tigurine verſion, Noldius, p. 39. N°. 288.

[m] Ad terram Canaan, ſo ſome in Vatablus. Approved by Kimchi and Ben Melech.

[n] תשחדי אותם munerana eos, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; & muneratis eos, Piſcator; & largita es ipſis, Cocceius; donaſti illis, Starckius.

℣. 35. Wherefore, O harlot, hear the word of the Lord,] The ſentence about to be pronounced; adjudging to be ſlain with the ſword, to be ſtoned and burned; the crime for which is to be read in the name of Harlot, juſtly given to an apoſtate people; as it often is to the church of Rome, in the book of the Revelation. The Targum is, "whoſe works are as an harlot's; O congregation of Iſrael, receive the words of the Lord;" which follow:

℣. 36. Thus ſaith the Lord God, becauſe thy filthineſs was poured out, &c.] Or, thy braſs [p]. The word is uſed by the Rabbins [q] for the bottom of a thing; and is here accordingly, by Kimchi and Ben Melech, interpreted of a woman's lower part, the ſame with her nakedneſs next mentioned; and from whence, by reaſon of her inordinate luſt, and the frequent exerciſe of it, and that with many different perſons, a gonorrhœa, as Jarchi explains it, or a filthy flux flowed, and was poured out on her lovers; from whence the filthy diſeaſe, the lues venerea: and thy nakedneſs diſcovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers; which ſhe diſcovered or expoſed to view, herſelf, in order to entice her lovers to lie with her, and for the ſake thereof; ſee ℣. 25: and with all the idols of thine abominations; or abominable idols, which were ſo in themſelves, were abominable to God, and made the worſhippers of them ſo likewiſe; theſe are diſtinguiſhed from her lovers, the Egyptians and Aſſyrians, her confederates, and by means of whoſe alliance ſhe fell into idolatry: and by the blood of thy children, which thou didſt give unto them; the idols, to whom they were dedicated and ſacrificed; and for whoſe ſake, and for the worſhip of them, they were cauſed to paſs through the fire, and were burnt in it; and by ſuch ſhocking murders, as well as idolatrous practices, the depravity of their nature, the wickedneſs of their hearts, their hypocriſy, treachery, and infidelity, were diſcovered and made known.

℣. 37. Behold, therefore I will gather all thy lovers with whom thou haſt taken pleaſure, &c.] Or, with whom thou haſt mixed [r]; in unlawful embraces, joined in ſinful alliances, or in idolatrous practices: and all them that thou haſt loved; the Egyptians and Aſſyrians, whoſe friendſhip and idolatrous cuſtoms they were fond of: with all them that thou haſt hated; as the Philiſtines, Moabites, and Ammonites: I will even gather them round about againſt thee; as they were in the Chaldean army, which conſiſted of many nations: and will diſcover thy nakedneſs unto them, that they may ſee all thy nakedneſs; as a juſt retaliation for diſcovering it herſelf, as in the preceding verſe; than which nothing can be more diſagreeable to the ſex. The Mileſian virgins were reſtrained from ſelf-murder by a law, which ordered that ſuch ſhould be drawn naked thro' the market-place. This is to be underſtood of the ſpoiling of the city and temple.

℣. 38. And I will judge thee as women that break wedlock, &c.] The marriage-covenant, defile the marriage-bed, and were adultereſſes, who by the law of Moſes were to be puniſhed with death, Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22: and ſhed blood are judged; who alſo were puniſhed with death, according to the original law in Gen. ix. 6. the Jews were not only guilty of ſpiritual adultery, that is, idolatry; but alſo of murder, by ſacrificing their infants to idols; and murder often follows upon adultery, as Kimchi obſerves; and theſe people were guilty of ſhedding innocent blood on other accounts; but the firſt mentioned is chiefly deſigned here: and I will give thee blood in fury and jealouſy; by way of retaliation; blood being ſhed, blood is given, and that in wrath and vengeance; the alluſion is to a jealous and abuſed huſband, that avenges himſelf of the perſon that has injured him; ſee Rev. xvi. 6.

℣. 39. And I alſo will give thee into their hand, &c.] Into the hand of their lovers and enemies, that ſhould be gathered againſt them, the Aſſyrians and Chaldeans, with others that joined them, as in ℣. 37: and they ſhall throw down thine eminent place, and ſhall break down thine high places; the city of Jeruſalem, the temple, and altars; and not only theſe, but even the high places and altars, which were ſet up for idolatrous uſes; all ſhould be deſtroyed by the Chaldean army. The Targum is, "and they ſhall deſtroy thy walls, and thy high places ſhall be deſtroyed:" they ſhall ſtrip thee alſo of thy cloaths; as perſons commonly are, when taken captives: and ſhall take thy fair jewels; or, the veſſels of thy glory [s]; the veſſels of the ſanctuary of gold and ſilver, and their own houſhold-furniture, with all their riches and ſubſtance: and leave thee naked and bare; as at firſt when in Egypt; ſee ℣. 7.

℣. 40. They ſhall alſo bring up a company againſt thee, &c.] An army, ſo the Targum; the Chaldean army: and they ſhall ſtone thee with ſtones; caſt out of their engines and ſlings, by which they battered the walls, as well as killed the inhabitants; and ſo the Targum renders it, with ſling-ſtones; the alluſion is to the ſtoning of adulterous perſons, Deut. xxii. 24. John viii. 5: and thruſt thee thro' with their ſwords; ſuch as attempted to eſcape out of the city, or fell into the hands of the enemy when it was taken, were ſlain with the ſword.

℣. 41. They ſhall burn thine houſes with fire, &c.] As the houſes in Jeruſalem were by Nebuchadnezzar's army, even the temple, the houſe of the Lord, and the king's houſe, and the houſes of great men, even all the houſes in the city, Jer. lii. 13. and as was commanded to be done to idolatrous cities, Deut. xiii. 16. and this alſo may be ſaid in alluſion to the burning of adulterous perſons, Gen. xxxviii. 24: and execute judgments upon thee in the ſight of many women; or provinces, as the Targum; meaning the Philiſtines, Moabites, Am-

---

[o] ואחריך לא זונה et poſt te non fornicatio fuit, Pagninus, Montanus; nec poſt te fuit ſic fornicatum, ſo ſome in Vatablus; poſt te non erit fornicatio, Calvin.

[p] נחשתך, τον χαλκον σου, Sept. æs tuum, Montanus, Vatablus, Calvin, Tigurine verſion, Starckius; virus tuum, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator, Grotius; ærugo tua, Cocceius.

[q] Miſn. Celim, c. 8. §. 3. Vid. T. Bab. Nidda, fol. 41. 2. & Gloſſ. in ib.

[r] אשר ערבת עליהם quibus commixtuiſti cum illis, Starckius.

[s] כלי תפארתך vaſa decoris tui, V. L. inſtrumenta ornatus tui, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; vaſa ornatus tui, Piſcator, Starckius.

Ammonites, and Edomites, who would rejoice in their ruin; the judgments deſign thoſe before-mentioned: and I will cauſe thee to ceaſe from playing the harlot, and thou alſo ſhalt give no hire any more; their idols, high places, and altars, being demoliſhed, and they plundered of their ſubſtance; and after the Babyloniſh captivity, the Jews never returned to idolatry any more.

℣. 42. So will I make my fury towards thee to reſt, &c.] When the Jews ſhould ceaſe from their idolatries, and no more worſhip the gods of the nations, then the fury of the Lord, and the effects of it, ſhould ceaſe: God no longer contends with a people, than while they are ſinning; when a reformation is brought about, by afflictions or judgments, his end is anſwered, and he puts a ſtop to the ſpread of his wrath and fury; or it is made to reſt, becauſe there is nothing left for it to work upon, a total conſumption of people and ſubſtance being made by it: or it may be rendered, I will make my fury to reſt upon thee [t]; and the ſenſe be, that his wrath ſhould abide upon them, and not remove until an utter end was made of them; tho' the firſt ſenſe ſeems beſt to agree with what goes before, and follows after: and my jealouſy ſhall depart from thee; as it does from a man when he has utterly rejected his wiſe becauſe of whoredom, and is divorced from her; and his burning jealouſy has ſatisfied itſelf, and there is no other way to operate and ſhew itſelf in; or when a woman returns to her huſband, and gives him ſatisfaction, keeps cloſe unto him, and lives chaſtely with him, having relinquiſhed her former lewd ways and practices: and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry; the effects of his anger ceaſe, his judgments averted, and he at peace with them, and they with him; for he retains not his anger for ever: tho' ſome underſtand this of his being quiet and at eaſe, in the deſtruction of the Jews; there being no more to wreak his vengeance upon.

℣. 43. Becauſe thou haſt not remembred the days of thy youth, &c.] The low eſtate they were once in, and the great favours beſtowed upon them, which laid them under great obligation to ſerve the Lord, and him only; but theſe they forgot, which highly provoked him, and cauſed him to do the things he did; ſee ℣. 22: and has fretted me in all theſe things; irritated, provoked him, moved him to wrath and anger, ſtirred up in his breaſt a tumult, ſpeaking after the manner of men; this they did by their ingratitude, idolatry, and other ſins: behold therefore, I alſo will recompence thy way upon thine head, ſaith the Lord God; retaliate their evils, puniſh them according as their ſins deſerved, and in a way which they led unto: and thou ſhalt not commit this lewdneſs above all thine abominations; or add to all thine abominable idolatries, this ſhocking piece of wickedneſs, the ſacrificing of their children to their idols: or rather the words may be rendered, for thou haſt not taken this thought (or counſel) upon or concerning all thine abominations [u]; to repent of them, and turn from them. So the Targum, "and thou haſt not taken counſel "to thyſelf, to turn from all thine abominations." Or as Jarchi, "thou haſt not taken counſel to "put thy heart upon thine abominations to turn "from them;" and he obſerves, that the word here uſed always ſignifies counſel, either good or evil. There is a double reading of this clauſe; we follow the Keri or marginal reading; but the Cetib, or textual writing or reading is, and I have not done according to this lewdneſs above all thine abominations; and ſo expreſſes the mercy and long ſuffering of God [w].

℣. 44. Behold, every one that uſeth proverbs, &c.] That affects a proverbial way of ſpeaking; that is witty and facetious, and has a talent at ſatyrizing and ſcoffing, as ſome have had; ſuch were Lucian, and others: ſhall uſe this proverb againſt thee; ſignifying that the ſins of the Jews ſhould be well known and expoſed, and they ſhould become the ſubject of the gibes and jeers of men: ſaying, as is the mother, ſo is her daughter; an ancient and common proverb, uſed to expreſs a likeneſs and agreement between perſons in their nature and diſpoſition, in their behaviour, conduct, and converſation. So the Targum, "as are the works of the mother, ſo "thoſe of the daughter;" the mother is the land of Canaan, and the daughter the congregation of Iſrael, as Kimchi. The Jews were the ſucceſſors of the old Canaanites, and they imitated them in their practices; and becauſe both of their ſucceſſion and imitation, they are called the daughter of them; a bad daughter of a bad mother.

℣. 45. Thou art thy mother's daughter, &c.] Exactly like her; they that have known the one, muſt know the other. The Targum is, "where"fore art thou become the daughter of the land "of Canaan, to do according to the works of the "people:" that loatheth her huſband, and her children; a true character of an adultereſs; and which agrees both with the mother the Canaanites, and with the daughter the Jews; who both deſpiſed, rejected, and forſook God their huſband, creator, and lawgiver, and ſacrificed their children to idols; ſee ℣. 20, 21. and Lev. xviii. 21, 24: and thou art the ſiſter of thy ſiſters; the true genuine ſiſter of them, Samaria and Sodom after-mentioned; being not only allied to them in blood, more nearly to the one, more remotely to the other, but exceedingly alike in manners, religion, and worſhip: which loatheth their huſbands, and their children; as before: your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite; theſe the Iſraelites ſucceeded in their land, and followed their cuſtoms; ſee the note on ℣. 3. The Targum is, "was not your "mother Sarah among the Hittites, and ſhe did "not do according to their works; and your fa"ther Abraham was among the Amorites, and he "walked not in their counſels."

℣. 46. And thine elder ſiſter is Samaria, &c.] The metropolis of the ten tribes; ſiſter to the Jews, becauſe of the ſame deſcent, having one and the ſame father; the elder or greater [x], becauſe more in number and power; the kingdom of Iſrael conſiſted of ten tribes, and the kingdom of Judah but of two; and the ten tribes alſo were the firſt in the apoſtacy from the true worſhip of God: ſhe and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand; as Samaria the ſiſter was the metropolis of the ten tribes, her daughters are the other cities and towns belonging thereunto; and ſo the Targum renders it, ſhe and her villages; theſe were ſituated to the north of the land of Iſrael, as Judah was to the ſouth, which with the Jews were left and right; as a man ſtanding with his face to the eaſt, has the north on his left, and the ſouth on his right-ſide: and thy younger ſiſter that dwelleth at thy right-hand, is Sodom and her daughters; where Lot the kinſman of Abraham lived, and from whom ſprung the Ammonites and Moabites. Sodom was a leſſer kingdom than that of Judah, and which lay to the ſouth; that is, to the right of it; even that and the other cities, which periſhed with it, called her daughters, as Admah, Zeboim, &c.

---

[t] והנחתי חמתי בך et requieſcere faciam iram meam in te, Pagninus, Montanus, Vatablus, Cocceius.

[u] ולא עשית את זמה על כל תועבתיך et non feciſti cogitationem ſuper omnibus abominationibus tuis, Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin; nec tamen feciſti, &c. Vatablus, Grotius.

[w] This is followed by the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, Luther, Starckius, and others.

[x] הגדולה major, V. L. Pagninus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Cocceius.

℣. 47. Yet haſt thou not walked after their ways, &c.] But in ways more evil; were not content to keep pace with them, and do as they did; but out-went them, out-ſtripped them in wickedneſs: nor done after their abominations; but committed greater abominations than they did; ſins of a more heinous nature, and attended with more aggravated circumſtances; having more power and wealth, more wiſdom and underſtanding; the means of grace, the word and ordinances of God: but as if that were a very little thing; to commit the ſins that Samaria and Sodom did: or, it was loathing to thee as a little thing [a]; they deſpiſed and loathed their ſins as too mean and little, and not flagitious and enormous, or bold and daring enough to be committed; and looked upon them with contempt, as ſneaking ſinners, that had no ſoul nor ſpirit in them, or taſte for ſinful pleaſures, in compariſon of them: or the ſenſe is, it would have been a little thing, comparatively ſpeaking, had they only walked after the ways and abominations of Samaria and Sodom, and ſtopped there; but they had greatly exceeded them; and ſo the Targum, "if thou "hadſt walked in their ways, and done according "to their abominations, thy ſin had been ſmall." Kimchi interprets it, of a ſmall time that the Jews continued in the ways and worſhip of God, after the captivity of the ten tribes, which were carried away in the ſixth year of Hezekiah; ſo that there were but three and twenty years left of his reign, when his ſon Manaſſeh ſucceeded him, and was more wicked than all before him; and theſe three and twenty years are the little time here ſpoken of: and within a very little time, and thou waſt corrupted more than they in all their ways; this explains what is meant by not walking after their ways and abominations; they were greater ſinners than they; more corrupt in their principles and practices; more hardened in them, and more difficult to be reclaimed from them; ſee Matt. xi. 23, 24.

℣. 48. As I live, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This is an oath, which the Lord God ſwore; who, becauſe he could ſwear by no greater, he ſwore by himſelf, by his life; and this he did to confirm what he had, and was about to ſay, that the ſins of Judah were greater than thoſe of Samaria and Sodom; which might not be eaſily believed, but it was as true as he was the living God: Sodom thy ſiſter hath not done, ſhe nor her daughters, as thou haſt done, thou and thy daughters; that is, the inhabitants of Sodom, and of the villages adjacent, as the Targum, had not committed ſuch groſs iniquities as the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and of the towns and villages about it, and of other cities of Judah.

℣. 49. Behold, this was the iniquity of thy ſiſter Sodom, &c.] Namely, the firſt after-mentioned, the ſource and ſpring of the reſt; the cauſes and means of which are declared; and the ſame, as is ſuggeſted, was the ſin of Jeruſalem; namely, pride; which was the ſin of the devils, and the cauſe of their ruin; the ſin of our firſt parents, by which they fell, and deſtroyed themſelves, and their poſterity; and is the prevailing, governing ſin of human nature: it has been the ruin of kingdoms and ſtates, of cities and particular perſons; a ſin hateful to God, and deſtructive to man: fulneſs of bread; the land of Sodom was very fruitful before it was deſtroyed; it was like the garden of the Lord, Gen. xiii. 10. it brought forth plentifully, ſo that there was great fulneſs of proviſion, of all ſorts of food, which is meant by bread: this, conſidered in itſelf, was not ſinful, but a bleſſing; it was the Lord's mercy and goodneſs to them, that they had ſuch plenty; but it was their ſin, that they abuſed it; luxury and intemperance, eating and drinking to exceſs, are here meant; which led on to that ſin, and kindled the flames of it, and were the fuel to it, which has its name from them; and beſides, this fulneſs of good things enjoyed by them, was the ſource of their pride, and ſerved to increaſe that, as before-mentioned: and abundance of idleneſs was in her, and in her daughters; or, peace of reſt [b]; proſperity and eaſe, ſecurity and quietneſs, at leiſure, and without labour; two words are uſed to expreſs the ſame thing, and to denote, as Kimchi obſerves, the abundance of it: ſloth and idleneſs, as they often ariſe from the goodneſs and fruitfulneſs of a country, and fulneſs of proviſion, ſo they are the cauſe of much ſin and wickedneſs; for if perſons are not employed in ſome buſineſs or another, either of the head or hand, they will be doing evil: neither did ſhe ſtrengthen the hands of the poor and needy; tho' ſhe had ſuch abundance of food to ſupply them with, and ſo much leiſure to attend to their diſtreſs; but her pride would not ſuffer her to do it; and ſhe was too idle and ſlothful to regard ſuch ſervice; perhaps more is intended than is expreſſed; that ſhe weakened the hands of the poor and needy, and cruelly oppreſſed them; which is often done by proud men, in great affluence and at leiſure, which they abuſe to bad purpoſes.

℣. 50. And they were haughty, &c.] Sodom and her daughters, the inhabitants of that place, and the cities adjacent; they lifted up themſelves above God and man; they were above regarding the poor and needy; and were elated and ſwelled with their plenty and proſperity, and behaved very inſolently, both to fellow-citizens and ſtrangers; ſee Gen. xix. 4, 5, 9: and committed abomination before me; perhaps referring to that ſin, which has its name from them; a ſin abominable to God, and ſcandalous to human nature; and which they committed openly and publickly, neither fearing God, nor regarding men; and are ſaid to be ſinners before the Lord, Gen. xiii. 13: therefore I took them away as I ſaw good; both as to time and manner, as he in his ſovereignty thought moſt fit and proper, by raining fire and brimſtone on them, and ſetting them forth as an example of the vengeance of eternal fire: or, when I ſaw [c]; their ſin and wickedneſs, as ſoon as he ſaw it; ſee Gen. xviii. 20, 21. The Vulgate Latin and Arabic verſions render it, as thou ſaweſt, or haſt ſeen; appealing to the Jews themſelves, who were very well acquainted with the fact; for the deſtruction of Sodom was notorious and flagrant.

---

[a] כמעט קט tanquam parvum, faſtidio fuit hoc, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; velut parum faſtidii. Starckius.

[b] ושלות השקט quies otii, vel otium quietis; ſo ſome in Vatablus; proſperitas otii, Caſtalio; tranquillitas quietis, Starckius.

[c] כאשר ראיתי cum vidi, Cocceius; ſo ſome in Vatablus; poſteaquam, Tigurine verſion, Piſcator, Starckius.

℣. 51. Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy ſins, &c.] The ſins of Samaria, or the ten tribes, of which Samaria was the metropolis, were the worſhipping of the calves at Dan and Bethel; but the gods of Judah were according to the number of their cities, and they even ſet up their idols in the temple of Jeruſalem, Jer. ii. 28. and vii. 30. Ezek. viii. 5, 10, 14, 16. and beſides, their ſins were aggravated by the benefits and privileges they enjoyed; having the temple, the right place of worſhip among them; the prieſts of the Lord to officiate for them; the prophets to inſtruct and teach them; and many good kings to rule over them, who encouraged them in the pure worſhip of God, and ſet them examples; as alſo by their not taking warning at the captivity of the ten tribes, which were ſome years before; ſo that they were guilty of great ingratitude and obduracy: but thou haſt multiplied thine abominations more than they; than Samaria, and her daughters, or the ten tribes; or than Sodom and Samaria, ſince both are intended in the next clauſe: and haſt juſtified thy ſiſters in all thine abominations which thou haſt done; juſtified them in what they did; countenanced them in their wickedneſs, by doing the ſame abominations, and more, and much greater; ſaying, in effect, that they did right in what they did; and, by exceeding them in ſin, made them to appear righteous in compariſon of them; and gave them an opportunity of ſaying, in excuſe for themſelves, that the men of Judah had been guilty of more and greater ſins than they, and yet had not been puniſhed as they had been.

℣. 52. Thou alſo which haſt judged thy ſiſters, &c.] Sodom and Samaria, by cenſuring and condemning them for their ſins; ſee 2 Chron. xiii. 8, 9, 10. in which ſenſe Jarchi and Kimchi interpret the word; or by defending and patronizing them, acquitting and abſolving them, by committing the ſame ſins, and more heinous ones: bear thine own ſhame for thy ſins that thou haſt committed more abominable than they; look upon thy ſins, and bluſh at them; confeſs them with ſhame and confuſion of face; take ſhame to thyſelf for them, in that thou haſt cenſured and condemned theſe ſins in others, thou haſt been guilty of thyſelf; and the rather, ſince thy ſins are greater, and attended with more aggravating circumſtances than thoſe thou haſt blamed in others; or this is a prophecy of their puniſhment for their ſins, when they ſhould be carried captive, and be put to ſhame before their neighbours: or, thou ſhalt bear [d]; ſhame is the fruit of ſin, ſooner or later: they are more righteous than thou; in compariſon of her; tho' neither of them were righteous in the ſight of God, yet comparatively one was more righteous than another, having committed fewer ſins, and leſſer abominations: yea, be thou confounded alſo, and bear thy ſhame, in that thou haſt juſtified thy ſiſters; this is repeated in ſtronger expreſſions, and with the reaſons of it, to ſhew the great confuſion they ſhould be brought unto, and the certainty of it, the more to ſtrike and affect their minds with it.

℣. 53. When I ſhall bring again their captivity, &c.] The captivity of Sodom and Samaria, as after-mentioned: the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters; which ſome underſtand as what never will be, as it never yet has been: Sodom remains to this day a dead ſea, and the ten tribes are not returned: then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midſt of them; that is, it ſhall never be brought again, according to the above ſenſe; but rather this is to be underſtood of the calling of the Gentiles, comparable to Sodom for their wickedneſs, as the great city of Rome is, Rev. xi. 8. and of the calling of God's elect among the ten tribes, ſcattered up and down among the Gentiles, by the preaching of the apoſtles; and when the fulneſs of the Gentiles is brought in, then will follow the converſion of the Jews, and all Iſrael will be ſaved, Rom. xi. 25, 26. for 'tis certain, thoſe ſiſters Sodom and Samaria, were to be reſtored, and received into the church, and given to her for daughters, ℣. 61. thus the converſion of the Gentiles is ſignified by bringing again the captivity of Moab and Ammon, in Jer. xlviii. 47. and xlix. 6.

℣. 54. That thou mayeſt bear thine own ſhame, &c.] So long as the captivity remains; even until Sodom and Samaria, the Gentiles, and the ten tribes, are called and converted: and mayeſt be confounded in all that thou haſt done; or, for all that thou haſt done [e]; for and becauſe of all the abominable ſins they had been guilty of: in that thou art a comfort to them; to Sodom and Samaria; countenancing them in their ſins; juſtifying their iniquities, and ſtrengthening their hands in their wickedneſs, by doing the ſame, and greater abominations; or in partaking of the ſame puniſhment with them, captivity; this being a kind of ſolace to them, that they were not puniſhed alone; ſo Jarchi.

℣. 55. When thy ſiſters, Sodom and her daughters, ſhall return to their former eſtate, &c.] The Jews, as Jerom ſays, are of opinion, that in the days of their vainly-expected Meſſiah, Sodom will be reſtored to its ancient ſtate, and be as the garden of God, and as the land of Egypt; and Jarchi interprets the bringing again the captivity of Sodom, in ℣. 53. by the Lord's healing the land of brimſtone and ſalt, and placing inhabitants in it; and it is aſſerted by the Jews [f], that Sodom and Gomorrah ſhall be rebuilt in future times, in the times of the Meſſiah, according to the ſenſe of this paſſage: but this is not to be underſtood in a literal ſenſe, of the rebuilding of Sodom and cities adjacent, and of reſtoring them to their former fruitfulneſs and fertility, and of the inhabitants to their former proſperity, and much leſs to their former ſtate of wickedneſs; but ſpiritually, of the converſion of Gentile ſinners to their ancient and happy eſtate in Chriſt: and Samaria and her daughters ſhall return to their former eſtate; to the knowledge of the Meſſiah, and the pure worſhip of God: then thou and thy daughters ſhall return to your former eſtate; the converſion of Judah, and of Iſrael or the ten tribes, here meant by Samaria, is frequently propheſied of, as what will be at the ſame time, Jer. xxiii. 6. and l. 4. Hoſ. v. 11.

℣. 56. For thy ſiſter Sodom was not mentioned by thy mouth, &c.] Or, was not for a hearing, or a report in thy mouth [g]; the deſtruction of Sodom, tho' it was ſuch an awful judgment of God, ſo flagrant and notorious, was viſible and juſt at hand; yet it was not taken notice of, nor talked of; it was not the ſubject of converſation among friends; it was not reported from father to ſon, or heard of the one by the other; it was not regarded, nor was warning taken by it, which might have been, had it been more frequently mentioned; but they did not care, or neglected to ſpeak of it; tho' it was an enſample to thoſe that ſhould after live ungodly; yet it was not for inſtruction to them, as the Targum paraphraſes it; they learned nothing by it; or Sodom was ſo infamous for ſin and puniſhment, that they ſcorned to make mention of its name; and yet they were as great or greater ſinners, and deſerving of ſorer puniſhment: in the day of thy pride; or prides, or excellencies [h]; in the time of their proſperity, in the days of David and Solomon, and other kings of Judah. Proſperity is apt to make men proud, and to lift them above themſelves; and to forget what they have been, and what they may be; and to neglect obſerving the judgments of God on others, and to take warning by them.

---

[d] את שאי imperat. pro fut. i. e. confunderis, Vatablus.

[e] מכל אשר עשית propter omnia quæ feciſti, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

[f] Shemot Rabba, §. 15. fol. 101. 3.

[g] לשמועה בפיך in auditu in ore tuo, Pagninus, Montanus; in auditum, Vatablus.

℣. 57. Before thy wickedneſs was diſcovered, &c.] By the puniſhment of it, by the judgments of God brought upon them; then they were humbled, who before were proud and haughty; and might ſpeak and think of the vengeance of God on Sodom, which before they made no mention of. It is a ſad thing only to know ſin, and to have it diſcovered only by the puniſhment of it: as at the time of thy reproach of the daughters of Syria, and all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philiſtines; this ſeems to refer to the times of Ahaz, when the Syrians ſmote the men of Judah, and carried many of them captive; and the Philiſtines invaded the cities of the low country, and ſouthern parts of Judah, and took many of them, 2 Chron. xxviii. 5, 18. at which time the wickedneſs of the Jews was diſcovered; and it was a plain caſe they had ſinned againſt the Lord, by his ſuffering their enemies to come upon them, and prevail over them; which was to their reproach. The Syrians reproached them, and ſo did the Philiſtines: which deſpiſe thee round about; they ſpoiled and plundered them on all ſides; and treated them with ſcorn and contempt, who before were formidable and terrible to them: thus it is with a people when they are left of God, they are deſpiſed by men.

℣. 58. Thou haſt borne thy lewdneſs, and thine abominations, &c.] Openly and publickly; their abominable iniquities were written as it were upon their foreheads, and were to be ſeen of all men; their ſin was to be read in their puniſhment, which is meant by bearing their lewdneſs and abominations; namely, the puniſhment due unto them: ſaith the Lord; who always ſpeaks what is juſt and true: this is added to denote the truth of what had been, and the certainty of what would be, as follows:

℣. 59. For thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] And what he ſays may be depended upon as truth, and what will certainly come to paſs: I will even deal with thee as thou haſt done; reward them according to their works; or execute the law of retaliation upon them; and reject them, as they had rejected him; and caſt them off from being his people, ſince they had forſook him as their God; they being the aggreſſors and tranſgreſſors of the covenant, he was under no obligation by virtue of that to bleſs and protect them: which hath deſpiſed the oath by breaking the covenant; the covenant at mount Sinai; or which was made in the plains of Moab, which had an oath annexed to it, Deut. xxix. 12. but by breaking the covenant, which they did by their many abominations, they deſpiſed the oath by which they were ſworn to keep it; and therefore it was but juſt with God to do with them as they had done with him and his covenant. The words are by ſome rendered, I might even deal with thee as thou haſt done [i], &c. I ſhould be juſtified in ſo doing, and you could not juſtly complain of me; but I will not, as follows:

℣. 60. Nevertheleſs, I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, &c.] The covenant made with them at Sinai, quickly after they came out of Egypt, when they were both as a body politic and eccleſiaſtical in their infant-ſtate; for, as Kimchi ſays, all the while they were in Egypt, and until they came into the land of Canaan, were called the days of their youth; and to this covenant, which had the nature of a matrimonial contract, the prophet refers when he ſpeaks of the love of their eſpouſals, and the kindneſs of their youth, Jer. ii. 2. this covenant the Lord remembered, and made good his part, tho' they neglected theirs; and it was particularly remembered when Chriſt was made under this law, and became the fulfilling end of it to his people; yielding perfect obedience to it, and bearing the penalty of it in their room and ſtead; for here begins a declaration of the grace and mercy of God to the remnant, according to the election of grace, which were among this degenerate people, and whom the Lord had a ſpecial regard unto: and I will eſtabliſh unto thee an everlaſting covenant; the covenant of grace, made with the Meſſiah and his ſpiritual ſeed; which is confirmed of God in Chriſt; ordered in all things and ſure; whoſe promiſes are yea and amen in Chriſt; and the bleſſings of it, the ſure mercies of David; a covenant that ſhall never be broken, made void, or removed; but will continue for ever. This is the new covenant, or the covenant of grace, as exhibited and adminiſtered under the New Teſtament; ſee Heb. viii. 8—13.

℣. 61. Then thou ſhalt remember thy ways, and be aſhamed, &c.] When covenant-grace is manifeſted and applied, it brings perſons to a ſenſe of their ſins, and to an ingenuous acknowledgment of them, with ſhame and bluſhing; they remember their evil ways in which they have walked, and bluſh at the thoughts of what they have been guilty of; and how they have ſinned againſt a God of love, grace and mercy; and what vile, ungrateful creatures they have been: when thou ſhalt receive thy ſiſters, thine elder and thy younger; Samaria and Sodom, ℣. 46. the ten tribes, or Benjamin and Simeon, whoſe part was in Judah, as Ben Melech; rather the Gentiles, even of all nations, ancient and modern, great and ſmall, where the goſpel ſhould come, and ſuch of them as are called and converted by it; theſe, according to this prophecy, ſhould be received into the communion of the church, to participate of all the privileges and ordinances of it, under the goſpel-diſpenſation. The paſſage reſpects the calling of the

[h] ביום גאוניך in die ſuperbiarum tuarum, Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin; in die excellentiarum tuarum, Piſcator; in die erectionum tuarum, Cocceius, Starckius.

[i] ועשית אותך כאשר עשית ego quidem agerem tecum, quemadmodum feciſti mecum, Tigurine verſion.

the Gentiles, and the incorporating of them into the goſpel-church-ſtate. The Syriac verſion renders it, when I ſhall receive thy ſiſters, &c. which the Targum interprets of greater and leſſer provinces: and I will give them unto thee for daughters; to be nurſed up by the church, thro' the miniſtry of the word and ordinances, where they have a place, and a name better than that of ſons and daughters; become members of the church, and ſo daughters of Jeruſalem, the mother of us all, Gal. iv. 26. to the laws, rules and ordinances of which they ſubmit, and yield an obedience, as daughters to their mother. The Targum is, "I "will deliver them unto thee for obedience." The Septuagint renders it, for edification; to be built up on their moſt holy faith: but not by thy covenant; made with the Iſraelites at Sinai, which genders to bondage, and under which the Jewiſh church with her children were in bondage, Gal. iv. 24, 25. but, by virtue of the covenant of grace made with Chriſt; one article of which is, I will be their father, and they ſhall be my ſons and daughters, 2 Cor. vi. 18. or not on condition of obſerving the rites and ceremonies of the law, under which the former covenant was adminiſtered, the Gentiles being freed from that, the ceremonial law being abrogated by Chriſt; or, not becauſe thou haſt kept the covenant made with thee, therefore I give thee thoſe; for that thou haſt broken, but of my own mere grace and favour, ſo Jarchi: or I will give daughters to thee, which are not of thy covenant, of thy law, ſo Kimchi, who are not of the ſame religion, meaning the Gentiles; and ſo the phraſe is the ſame with that in John x. 16. which are not of this fold. There is an ancient expoſition of the Jews, mentioned by Jarchi, Kimchi and Abarbinel, which renders it, but not of thy patrimony; and explains it of the inheritance which God gave to Abraham between the pieces; as if the perſons intended by thoſe who are given for daughters, did not belong thereunto.

ỿ. 62. And I will eſtabliſh my covenant with thee, &c.] See on ỿ. 60. and which is repeated for the comfort of the Lord's people, being aſhamed upon the remembrance of their evil ways; and to ſhew the certainty of it, as well as becauſe it is a matter of the greateſt importance: and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord; a covenant-keeping God; true and faithful to my promiſes, and able to make them good: this is a principal bleſſing of the covenant of grace, to know the Lord, Jer. xxxi. 34.

ỿ. 63. That thou mayeſt remember, and be confounded, &c.] The more ſouls are led into the covenant of grace, and the more they know of God in Chriſt, and of him as their covenant-God and Father, the more they remember of their former evil ways, and reflect upon them with ſhame and confuſion: and never open thy mouth any more; againſt God, and the diſpenſations of his providence; againſt his goſpel, truths and ordinances; againſt his people, the followers of Chriſt, and particularly the Gentiles; ſeeing they'll now ſee themſelves as bad and worſe than ever they were; for this may have a ſpecial regard to the converſion of the Jews in the latter day, when they ſhall look on him whom they have pierced, and mourn, Zech. xii. 10. and remember the evil ways of their anceſtors, and their own ſtubbornneſs and infidelity, and be aſhamed thereof; and ſay not one word by way of complaint of the judgments of God that have been upon them as a nation ſo long: becauſe of thy ſhame; becauſe they will now be aſhamed of their oppoſition to Chriſt and his goſpel; of their rejection and treatment of him; and of the evil things they have been guilty of: when I am pacified toward thee, for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God; God may be ſaid to be pacified, or propitious, when he is at peace with men, his anger is turned away, his law and juſtice are ſatisfied, reconciliation and atonement are made for ſin, and he ſignifies that for Chriſt's ſake; and eſpecially when his pardoning love and grace is manifeſted and applied: and this pacification is made, not by men themſelves, by their obedience, or repentance, or faith; but by the blood and ſacrifice of Chriſt; which, when made known to the conſcience; or when this atonement, propitiation and pacification is received by faith; or there is a comfortable ſenſe of pardon thro' the blood of Chriſt, for all ſins and tranſgreſſions that have been committed in heart and life; it has ſuch an effect, as to cauſe men to remember and call to mind their former evil ways, and to fill them with ſhame for them, and to put them to ſilence, ſo as never more to open their mouths to excuſe their ſins; or commend themſelves and their own righteouſneſs; or to murmur againſt God, or cenſure others. This is the nature of pardoning grace and mercy.

CHAP. XVII.

UNDER the ſimile of two eagles and a vine, are repreſented the kings of Babylon and Egypt, and the condition of the Jews, who are threatened with ruin for their perfidy; and yet a promiſe is made of the raiſing up of the houſe of Judah, and family of David, in the Meſſiah. The prophet is bid to deliver a riddle or parable to the houſe of Iſrael, ỿ. 1, 2. The riddle or parable is concerning two eagles and a vine, which is delivered, ỿ. 3—10. and the explanation of it is in ỿ. 11—15. and then the deſtruction of the Jews is threatened for their treachery to the king of Babylon, ỿ. 16—21. and the chapter is cloſed with a promiſe of the Meſſiah, and the proſperity of his kingdom, ỿ. 22, 23, 24.

ỿ. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] After the prophet had been ſent to charge the Jews with breaking the covenant with God, he is ſent to rebuke and threaten them for breaking covenant with men, even with the king of Babylon; by whom they were in part carried into captivity, and another part remained in the land, as will be hereafter ſeen.

ỿ. 2. Son of man, put forth a riddle, &c.] A dark ſaying, but a ſmart one: whet a whetting[k], as in the Hebrew; ſomething at firſt ſight difficult to be underſtood, yet amuſing and entertaining; and when ſolved, very uſeful and inſtructive: and ſpeak a parable unto the houſe of Iſrael, or, concerning the houſe of Iſrael[l]; as the Targum and Syriac

---

[k] חוד חידה, Heb. acue acumen, Piſcator. Polanus.

[l] אל בית ישראל de domo Iſraelis, Junius & Tremellius,

Syriac verſion; ſomething relating to them, and what would aptly deſcribe and repreſent their caſe; for the prophet was bid to take ſuch a method, not to hide things from them, but rather the more ſtrongly to repreſent them to them; ſeeing hereby their attention would be excited, and things would be more fixed in their memories, and they would be put upon ſtudying the meaning of them; and when explained to them, and underſtood, which was quickly done, they might be the more affected with them.

℣. 3. And ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The riddle is not the prophet's, nor the parable his, but the Lord God's; and exceeding beautiful and apt it is, to ſignify the things deſigned by it; the wiſdom of God is greatly diſplayed in it: a great eagle; which is Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, as it is explained, ℣. 12. who is compared to an eagle for his power and authority, that being the king of birds, and for his ſwiftneſs and voracity in conquering and ſubduing kingdoms; ſee Jer. xlviii. 40: with great wings; ſo the Babyloniſh monarchy is ſignified by a lion with eagle's wings, Dan. vii. 4. and the two parts of the Roman empire, into which it was divided at the death of Theodoſius, are called two wings of a great eagle, Rev. xii. 14. and ſo here it may denote, the large kingdoms and provinces which belonged to the Babylonian monarchy; ſee Eſth. i. 1: long winged; or having a long member[m]; meaning the body of the wing, which was long; and ſo as the wings ſpread, may ſignify the breadth of his dominion, this the length of them, and both their extenſiveneſs: full of feathers; of cities, towns, people, armies, wealth, and riches: which had divers colours; or an embroidery[n]; like that of the weaver, only needle-work, conſiſting of various colours; and ſo it alludes to ſuch eagles as are called the golden eagle, and Aſterias, from their golden colour, and their being ſpotted like ſtars, and which are ſaid to be of the largeſt ſize, as Bochart, from Ælianus[o], obſerves; and may ſignify people of divers languages, cuſtoms, manners, and circumſtances, ſubject to the government of the king of Babylon: came unto Lebanon; the northern border of the land of Judea, and invaded it; where were the mountain and foreſt of Lebanon, famous for the cedars that grew there, from whence the whole land may here take its name, as being more apt for the allegory uſed: or the city of Jeruſalem, where were the temple built of the cedars of Lebanon, as many of its palaces and houſes alſo were; whither the king of Babylon came, and took it, and who came northward, as Babylon was: and took the higheſt branch of the cedar; by the cedar is meant, either the nation in general, or the royal family in particular; and by the higheſt branch, the then reigning king Jeconiah, with the princes and nobles of the land, who were taken and carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar; ſee 2 Kings xxiv. 14, 15, 16.

℣. 4. He cropt off the top of his young twigs, &c.] By which are meant the princes of the land, or the ſeveral branches of the royal family; the top of which was king Jeconiah, who was but young and tender, being but eighteen years of age when he began his reign, and this was within three months after; and who was no more able to withſtand the force of the king of Babylon, than a tender twig ſo ravenous a bird as an eagle, 2 Kings xxiv. 8. whoſe ſuperior power and ſtrength is ſignified by the cropping off of a tender twig: and carried it into a land of traffick; not into the land of Canaan, as the Septuagint, and ſome other verſions, literally render it; but into Babylon, which was become a place of great merchandiſe, thro' the great concourſe of people to it, and the large additions made to the empire: he ſet it in a city of merchants; meaning the city of Babylon, perhaps in particular, as diſtinct from the country beforementioned: the word for merchants, ſignifies apothecaries or druggiſts[p]; and may deſign ſuch merchants as traded in ſweet ſpices and aromatic drugs. The words may be rendered, and brought it out of the land of Canaan[q]; out of which Jeconiah and his nobles were carried by the king of Babylon; ſo the particle אל, ſometimes ſignifies from, or out of, as in 1 Kings viii. 30. and others[r], and in a city of merchants he ſet it; in Babylon, famous for merchants; whom the Jews, being captives, were obliged to attend in a ſervile manner.

℣. 5. He took alſo of the ſeed of the land, &c.] Of the land of Judea, a native of it, not a ſtranger; not one of another country, a Babylonian; not one of his own nobles or princes, did Nebuchadnezzar, the eagle, take and ſet upon the throne of Judea, but one of their own, even one of the king's ſeed, of the blood royal, as it is explained, ℣. 13. Mattaniah, the uncle of Jeconiah, whom the king of Babylon called Zedekiah, and made him king in his room: and planted it in a fruitful field; in the land of Judea, and in Jeruſalem the royal city: he placed it by great waters; many people, Rev. xvii. 15. over whom he ruled, and by whom he was ſupported in his royal dignity: and ſet it as a willow-tree; which loves moiſt places, and grows up thick: unleſs it ſhould be rendered, he ſet it with great circumſpection[s]; took a great deal of care and caution in placing him upon the throne; he made a covenant with him, took an oath of him, and hoſtages for the performance of it, ℣. 13. The Targum is, "a planted vine he ſet it," to make it agree with what follows; but the word in the Chaldee and Arabic languages ſignifies a kind of willow, as we render it, as Ben Melech obſerves[t].

℣. 6. And it grew, &c.] King Zedekiah reigned and proſpered, and the kingdom flouriſhed under him: and became a ſpreading vine of low ſtature; not ſo flouriſhing as it had been heretofore, in former reigns; it did not riſe up to a cedar, as it had been, but was like a vine, which tho' flouriſhing, does not riſe up high, but runs upon the ground, and is dependent on ſomething elſe; ſo the king and kingdom of Judah, tho' in tolerable circumſtances, yet were humble and dependent on the king of Babylon: whoſe branches turned towards him;

---

[m] ארך האבר longa corpore, Caſtalio; longa membris, Munſter, Grotius; longo membrorum ductu, Pradus.

[n] אשר לו הרקמה, Heb. opus phrygionicum, Piſcator.

[o] Ælian. Hiſt. Animal. l. 2. c. 39.

[p] רוכלים aromatariorum, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus. So Stockius, p. 1017.

[q] אל ארץ כנען e terra Chanaan, Texelius, Phœnix, l. 3 c. 4. §. 6. p. 205.

[r] Vid. Noldii Concord. Part. Ebr. p. 56.

[s] צפצפה שמו circumſpectiſſime poſuit illud, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; cum magna circumſpectione, Piſcator; circumſpecte, Cocceius, Starckius.

[t] And ſo it does; ſee Caſtel, col. 3220, 3221. and in this way Jarchi and Kimchi interpret the word, in which they are followed by many; ſo R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 73. 1: nevertheleſs, the ſenſe of it here is diſapproved of by Caſtel, who obſerves, what has a willow to do with a vine? col. 3222. and commends the Greek verſion, which renders it, ἐπιβλεπόμενον, conſpicuous, to be ſeen; and ſo others tranſlate it, in ſuperficie, V. L. Grotius; yet the Saſiaf of the Arabs, is a tree, by which they underſtood the Abeile or poplar-tree; ſee Shaw's Travels, p. 423. Ed. II.

him; the eagle, Nebuchadnezzar, to whom the people of the Jews were tributary: and the roots thereof were under him; they were rooted and ſettled in their own land, yet under the power, and at the diſpoſe of the Babyloniſh monarch: ſo it became a vine; a flouriſhing kingdom in ſome meaſure, tho' attended with ſome degree of weakneſs and dependence as a vine: and brought forth branches, and ſhot forth ſprigs; increaſed in people and in riches; particularly the king had many children, ſo that there was a proſpect of a ſucceſſion, and of a more flouriſhing eſtate, and a continuance of it, Jer. lii. 10.

℣. 7. There was alſo another great eagle, &c.] Hophra king of Egypt, a very powerful prince, whom Herodotus [v] calls Apries; and ſays, he was the moſt happy and fortunate after Pſammitichus, of all the kings that were before; though not ſo mighty as the king of Babylon; therefore all the ſame things are not ſaid of the one as of the other: with great wings and many feathers; had large dominions, but not ſo extenſive as the former, and therefore is not ſaid to be long winged as he; and had many feathers, but not full of them, nor had it ſuch a variety; he had many people, and much wealth, and a large army, but not equal to the king of Babylon: and behold, this vine did bend her roots towards him; Zedekiah, and the people of the Jews under him; inclined to an alliance with the king of Egypt, and gave him ſome private intimations of it: and ſhot forth her branches towards him; ſent embaſſadors to acquaint him with it, ℣. 15: that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation; Nebuchadnezzar had planted this vine, and made furrows for the watering of it, and by his means it was become proſperous and flouriſhing; but Zedekiah, not content with the greatneſs and glory he had raiſed him to, ſought to the king of Egypt to help him with horſes and people, in order to free himſelf from ſubjection to the king of Babylon, and to increaſe his luſtre and glory: the alluſion is thought to be to the trenches and canals of the river Nile, by which the land of Egypt was watered: the words may be rendered, out of the rivulets of her plantation [w]; which beſt agrees with watering.

℣. 8. It was planted in a good ſoil, by great waters, &c.] As is expreſſed in ℣. 5. this was done by the king of Babylon, who had raiſed Zedekiah from a low eſtate to a high one, and ſet him on the throne of Judah, over many people; and put him in ſuch a condition, and in ſuch circumſtances, that he and his people might have been very happy, could they have been content: for his view was, that he might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine; that he and his people might grow numerous and rich, and be a proſperous and flouriſhing kingdom; this is mentioned to aggravate the ingratitude of Zedekiah, and the people of the Jews, in rebelling againſt the king of Babylon, who had uſed them well, and of whom they had no reaſon to complain.

℣. 9. Say thou, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Tell Zedekiah and his people, in the name of the Lord, what will be the iſſue of his ingratitude and treachery to the king of Babylon, and his vain confidence in the king of Egypt: ſhall it proſper? the vine, the kingdom of Judah, and Zedekiah the king of it; can it be thought that proſperity will attend ſuch conduct as this? was it ever known that perſons guilty of ſuch vices ever ſucceeded? ſhall he not pull up the roots thereof? the firſt eagle, Nebuchadnezzar, being provoked by the rebellion of the king of Judah and his people, will he not come againſt them, and utterly deſtroy them, and root them up from being a people and a nation? and cut off the fruit thereof that it wither? the ſons of the king, and of the nobles, and people of the land; ſo that the kingdom ſhall be ruined, and no hope left of its ever being reſtored again; which is the caſe of a vine when withered: it ſhall wither in all the leaves of her ſpring; whereas it had been a ſpring-time with this vine, under the influence of the king of Babylon, its leaves were green and flouriſhing; but now ſhould wither, not as leaves do in autumn, which is to be expected, but in ſpring, which muſt be fatal; ſignifying, that in the midſt of their proſperity, and when there was the greateſt hope and expectation of a continuance and increaſe of it, utter ruin ſhould come upon them: even without great power, or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof; ſignifying with what eaſe the king of Babylon would take Jeruſalem, and the land of Judea, its king and its princes, and utterly deſtroy them; he would have no need of a large army, or to employ all his forces, a few were ſufficient to do it; even as it does not require many hands to pluck up a vine by the roots, a ſingle perſon is equal to it.

℣. 10. Yea, behold, being planted, &c.] Suppoſing it ever ſo well planted, as firſt by Nebuchadnezzar; and ſtill put into a better condition by the aſſiſtance of the king of Egypt, as was imagined: ſhall it proſper? it ſhall not; their own ſtrength, with the help of the king of Egypt, will not be able to protect them from the rage of the king of Babylon: ſhall it not utterly wither, when the eaſt wind toucheth it? which is very hurtful to vines, and by which is meant the Chaldean army; for Babylon, as Kimchi obſerves, lay north-eaſt of the land of Iſrael; and it ſignifies how eaſily the deſtruction would be brought about, it would be only a touch of the eaſt wind, and this vine would wither away at once: it ſhall wither in the furrows where it grew; notwithſtanding its being watered by Egypt, or the help and aſſiſtance that could afford it; or amidſt all its proſperity, and the means of it, and the ſpringing growing hope it had; or in the very country itſelf, where it had been planted, and had flouriſhed; Zedekiah and his princes were taken in the plains of Jericho, and his children and princes were put to death in Riblah, Jer. lii. 8, 9, 10.

℣. 11. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying,] Here follows the explanation of the above riddle and parable, which the prophet from the Lord had orders to deliver.

℣. 12. Say now to the rebellious houſe, &c.] It had been a rebellious houſe to God, and to his prophets, before; ſee ch. ii. 5, 6. and the notes there; and now beſides this, was rebellious to the king of Babylon, to whom they were in ſome meaſure ſubject, ℣. 15: know ye not what theſe things mean? the riddle and parable concerning the two eagles and the vine; ſuggeſting that they muſt be very inattentive, and very ſtupid, if they did not know the meaning of them; for tho' the things intended were delivered in an enigmatical and parabolical way, yet they were eaſily to be underſtood, by all that knew the affairs of the Jewiſh nation; being things that were lately tranſacted there, and were obvious to every one's view: but if they were ſo ſtupid and blockiſh as not to underſtand them, the prophet had the following order to explain them to them; tell them, behold the king of Babylon is come to Jeruſalem; ſo that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon is meant by the firſt eagle, and the land of Judea, and particularly Jeruſalem, by Lebanon, it came unto, ℣. 3. The Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic verſions, read this and the following verſes in the future; as if theſe were things that were yet to come to paſs, whereas they are related as things already done; and ſo the Targum renders all in the paſt ſenſe, as the hiſtory of them requires it ſhould: and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon; the king of Judea, and the princes of it; Jeconiah and his nobles, who had been carried captive into Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar; for Ezekiel was among theſe captives, ch. i. 2. ſee 2 Kings xxiv. 12—16. ſo that it appears, that by the twigs of the cedar, the princes of the land are deſigned; and by the top of them, king Jeconiah; and by the land of traffick, the land of Chaldea; and by the city of merchants, the city of Babylon, ℣. 4. whither they were carried.

---

[v] L. 2, ſive Euterpe, c. 161.

[w] מערגות מטעה ex rivulis loci in quo plantata eſt, Guſſetius, p. 642. ſuch as run between beds in gardens, of which this word is ſometimes uſed; hence ſome render it, ex areolis, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, ſo Ben Melech; or ditches and canals, ſuch as were made out of the river Nile to water the land; e foſſa plantarii ſui, Texelius, ut ſupra, p. 209.

℣. 13. And hath taken of the king's ſeed, &c.] One of the royal family, ſignified by the ſeed of the land, ℣. 5. Mattaniah, ſon of king Joſiah, and uncle to king Jeconiah; whom Nebuchadnezzar took and made king of Judea, and called him Zedekiah, which ſignifies the juſtice of the Lord; to put him in mind of doing juſtly, by obſerving the covenant and oath after-mentioned, or that he muſt expect vengeance: and made a covenant with him, and hath taken an oath of him; he gave him the throne and kingdom upon certain conditions to be performed, and for the performance of which he made him ſwear by the God of Iſrael; ſee 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13: he hath alſo taken the mighty of the land; or, the rams of the land [x]; the principal men of it for wiſdom, riches, and valour, the princes and nobles of it; which he did, as to weaken the nation, that it might not be ſo capable of rebelling againſt him, ſo to be hoſtages for the performance of the covenant entered into; and this is meant by planting the ſeed with circumſpection, ℣. 5.

℣. 14. That the kingdom might be baſe, &c.] Low or humble; its king but a viceroy, a tributary to the king of Babylon; and the ſubjects obliged to a tax, payable to him; and this is intended by the vine being of low ſtature, ℣. 6: that it might not lift up itſelf; above other neighbouring kingdoms and ſtates; and particularly that it might not rebel againſt Nebuchadnezzar, but be kept in a dependence on him, and ſubjection to him: but that by keeping of his covenant it might ſtand; continue a kingdom, and Zedekiah king of it; ſo that it was for their good that ſuch a covenant was made, and it was their intereſt to keep it; for had it not been made, it would have ceaſed to have been a kingdom, and would have become a province of the Babylonian monarchy, and have been put under the government of one of Nebuchadnezzar's princes or captains; and ſhould they break it, would endanger the ruin of their ſtate, as the event ſhewed. In the Hebrew text it is, to keep his covenant, to make it ſtand; or, to ſtand to it [y]; that is, as it ſhould ſeem, to make the covenant ſtand firm. The Targum is, "that it might "keep his covenant, and ſerve him;" Nebuchadnezzar.

℣. 15. But he rebelled againſt him, &c.] Zedekiah rebelled againſt the king of Babylon, broke the covenant he entered into, and violated his oath: in ſending his embaſſadors into Egypt; to form an alliance with the king of it, and obtain help from him, to break off the Babylonian yoke; this is ſignified by the vine bending its roots, and ſhooting forth its branches towards another great eagle, the king of Egypt, v. 7: that they might give him horſes and much people; with both which Egypt abounded, 1 Kings x. 28. Iſ. xxxi. 1, 3. but in Judea, there was a ſcarcity, as of horſes, ſo of men, by means of the multitude of captives which the king of Babylon had carried away; wherefore Zedekiah ſent to Egypt for both, for recruits of men, and for horſes to form a cavalry, to free himſelf from the king of Babylon, and defend himſelf and people againſt him: ſhall he proſper? ſhall he eſcape that doth ſuch things? that is guilty of breaking an expreſs law of God, which forbids the kings of Iſrael multiplying horſes, and ſending to Egypt for them, Deut. xvii. 16. and placing confidence in an arm of fleſh, Iſ. xxxi. 1, 3. and xxxvi. 9. and of ſuch baſe ingratitude to the king of Babylon, who had ſet him upon the throne, and put him in a comfortable and flouriſhing condition: or ſhall he break the covenant, and be delivered? ſhall one guilty, as of the other crimes, ſo of breach of covenant, and of perjury, eſcape the vengeance of God and man? he ſhall not.

℣. 16. As I live, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This is the form of an oath, as Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve; the Lord ſwears in his wrath, by himſelf, by his life; this ſhows how much he reſented what Zedekiah had done, and how ſure and certain his ruin was: ſurely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king; in Babylon, where Nebuchadnezzar dwelt, that made Zedekiah king of Judah; which is mentioned, to point out the ingratitude of that prince to the king of Babylon: whoſe oath he deſpiſed, whoſe covenant he broke; the oath of fealty and allegiance, which Zedekiah took to Nebuchadnezzar; and the covenant entered into between them, by which the former held the kingdom of Judea of the latter: the oath he made light of, tho' ſolemn, one made by the God of Iſrael; and the covenant he broke, tho' ratified by an oath; in which things were given to him he could not claim, at leaſt poſſeſs, but by the courteſy of the conqueror; theſe ſins were diſpleaſing to God: oaths and covenants, tho' made with conquerors, and with heathen princes, are to be kept: even with him; that is, with Nebuchadnezzar: in the midſt of Babylon he ſhall die; when firſt taken he was had to Riblah, and there his eyes were put out; and after that he was carried to Babylon, and put in priſon, and there died, Jer. lii. 9, 10, 11.

℣. 17. Neither ſhall Pharaoh with his mighty army, and great company, make for him in the war, &c.] The king of Egypt, to whom Zedekiah applied for horſes and men to help him; though he ſhould come with a great army, and a large multitude of people, yet ſhould be of no uſe to Zedekiah, nor do any hurt to Nebuchadnezzar, or hinder him from taking Jeruſalem: by caſting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many perſons; that is, when Nebuchadnezzar ſhould beſiege Jeruſalem, and raiſe mounts, and build fortifications, in order to take the city, and deſtroy its inhabitants, as he did, Jer. lii. 4. the Egyptian army ſhould not be able to hinder him going on with the ſiege, and taking the city; for tho' the ſiege was broke up for a time, upon the approach of Pharaoh's army, yet Nebuchadnezzar having conquered the Egyptians, returned again to the ſiege of Jeruſalem, and took it; ſee Jer. xxxvii. 5—10.

---

[x] אילי הארץ arietes terræ, Montanus.

[y] לשמר את בריתו לעמדה ad cuſtodiendum pactum ejus, ad aſtandum ei, Montanus; ad ſervandum fœdus ſuum, ad conſiſtendum, Starckius.

℣. 18. Seeing he deſpiſed the oath, by breaking the covenant, &c.] This is repeated again, to ſhow the heinouſneſs of the ſin Zedekiah had been guilty of, and what was the cauſe of his ruin: when lo, he had given his hand; to the king of Babylon, to teſtify his hearty agreement with him, and that he might depend upon the oath and covenant being ſacredly obſerved by him. This was a rite or cuſtom frequently and early uſed in different nations, when covenants and agreements were entered into; we find it uſed in the times of Homer[z]; and among the Romans. When Antoninus, Lepidus and Octavius made peace, the hiſtorian ſays[a], they joined their hands together. Virgil[b] ſpeaks of the ſame ceremony uſed by Anchiſes to Achæmenides, for confirmation of friendſhip. Tho' ſome underſtand this of his giving the hand to Pharaoh king of Egypt, and entering into an alliance with him, and broke the covenant and oath made to the king of Babylon; and ſo the Targum, "and lo, he "ſtretched out his hand to Pharaoh:" and hath done all theſe things; been guilty of ſuch and ſo many crimes, as ingratitude, perjury, covenant-breaking, and vain confidence: he ſhall not eſcape; divine vengeance, juſt and proper puniſhment for his ſins.

℣. 19. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, as I live, &c.] A repetition of the oath of God as before, expreſſing his indignation at the king of Judah, and the certainty of his ruin: ſurely mine oath that he hath deſpiſed, and my covenant that he hath broken; the Lord calls it his oath, becauſe it was made and taken in his name, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13. and his covenant, becauſe it was agreeable to his will, and was made in his ſight, and he was ſolemnly appealed to at the making of it; all which were an aggravation of Zedekiah's ſin in violating them, and made his puniſhment the heavier: even it will I recompence upon his own head; he ſhall perſonally bear the puniſhment due to ſuch crimes. The Targum is, "I will revenge his way upon "his head." Jarchi thinks this refers to the putting out of his eyes; and Kimchi takes notice of the ſame ſenſe.

℣. 20. And I will ſpread my net upon him, and he ſhall be taken in my ſnare, &c.] See the note on ch. xii. 13. where the ſame words are uſed, and of the ſame perſon: and I will bring him to Babylon; though, as it is ſaid in the place referred to, he ſhould not ſee it, his eyes being put out before he was brought thither: and will plead with him there, for his treſpaſs that he hath treſpaſſed againſt me; for tho' it was breaking covenant and oath with an heathen prince, yet it was a treſpaſs againſt God, in whoſe name they were made; and his being laid in priſon at Babylon, and kept there to the time of his death, was the Lord's pleading with him, and judging of him; it was a reproof for his ſins, and a condemnation of him and them.

℣. 21. And all his fugitives, with all his bands ſhall fall by the ſword, &c.] So thoſe of his army that fled, and attempted to make their eſcape when the city of Jeruſalem was taken, as many as fell into the Chaldean army, which was round about the city, at leaſt a great number of them, fell by the ſword of the Chaldeans, Jer. lii. 7, 8: and they that remain ſhall be ſcattered towards all winds; and ſo it was, that ſuch that eſcaped the ſword, were either carried captive into Babylon, or fled ſome one way, and ſome another, even into all parts, eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth: and ye ſhall know that I the Lord have ſpoken it; the Targum adds, by my word, and will do it; who is the Lord God omniſcient and omnipotent, juſt and righteous; faithful and true, as to his word of promiſe, ſo of threatening.

℣. 22. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Leſt it ſhould be thought by the above prophecies, that the tribe of Judah ſhould be utterly loſt, and the family of David extinct, and the promiſe to him void, that he ſhould have one of his ſeed to ſit upon his throne for evermore, Pſ. cxxxii. 11, 12. it is here in a figurative manner ſignified, that of his ſeed, the Meſſiah ſhould be raiſed up, by whom the church and kingdom of God would be brought into a flouriſhing ſtate and condition: I will alſo take of the higheſt branch of the high cedar; Nebuchadnezzar had took one of the family of David, and ſet him upon the throne, ſignified by taking of the ſeed of the land, and planting it, ℣. 5. but without ſucceſs; wherefore the Lord here promiſes that he will alſo take one and plant it, which ſhould thrive and proſper: by the high cedar is meant the Jewiſh nation, which the Lord choſe and ſet on high above all nations of the earth, diſtinguiſhing it with peculiar bleſſings and favours; for which reaſon it may be compared to the high and ſpreading cedar; ſee Numb. xxiv. 5, 6. Deut. vii. 6, 7. and xxviii. 1. and by the higheſt branch of it, the tribe of Judah, who prevailed above his brethren, becauſe from him came the chief ruler, 1 Chron. v. 2. and from whence the Meſſiah was to come, and did, Gen. xlix. 10. Heb. vii. 14. Rev. v. 5: and ſet it; namely, the ſlip taken from the higheſt branch of the high cedar; or one that ſhould deſcend from the Jewiſh nation, and particularly from the tribe of Judah, more fully deſcribed in the next clauſe: I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one; and by the top and young twigs of the higheſt branch of the cedar, or of the chief tribe in Iſrael, are meant the houſe and family of David, the royal family, and the deſcendents of it, the chief of the tribe of Judah; and by the tender one is deſigned the Meſſiah; and ſo Jarchi interprets it; and which interpretation is mentioned by Kimchi, tho' he would have Zorobabel intended; and owns it to be the ſenſe of the Targum, which is this, "I will bring one of the kingdom of the "houſe of David, which is like to a high cedar, "and I will raiſe him up, an infant from his chil-"drens children;" and ſo Abendana obſerves, that from Shealtiel, the ſon of Jeconiah, comes forth the king Meſſiah, who ſhall rule over all the world, and under whom every bird of wing ſhall dwell. The Meſſiah is often called a branch in prophecy, Iſ. iv. 2. and xi. 1. Jer. xxiii. 5. Zech. iii. 8. and vi. 12. and here a tender twig or branch, as in Iſ. liii. 2. a tender plant; which is expreſſive of the meanneſs of his deſcent, David's family being very low at the time of his birth, and of the contemptible appearance he made in the form of a ſervant; having alſo all the ſinleſs infirmities of the human nature on him, as well as was attended with poverty, griefs, and ſorrows of various kinds; and ſo made a very unpromiſing appearance of being the great prophet, prieſt, and king in Iſrael: and now by the cropping off of this tender twig, ſeems to be deſigned not the incarnation of the Meſſiah, but his ſufferings and death; whereby he was cut off, not for himſelf, but for the ſins of his people, and in which his divine Father had a conſiderable hand, Iſ. liii. 8, 10. and to which is owing the great fruitfulneſs of his kingdom and intereſt, John xii. 24. moreover, this may reſpect not only the perſon of the Meſſiah, and his mean appearance in the world; but alſo his church and intereſt, which were at firſt like a little ſtone cut out of the mountain, and like a grain of muſtard-ſeed, the leaſt of all ſeeds, Dan. ii. 34, 35. Matt. xiii. 31, 32. the goſpel, which was the inſtrument of raiſing the church of God, was very contemptible, becauſe of its ſubject, a crucified Chriſt; and the firſt preachers of it were mean and illiterate perſons; thoſe that received it were the poor of this world, and thoſe but a few, and they the offſcouring of all things. And will plant it on a high mountain, and eminent; which may be expreſſive not of the incarnation of Chriſt, but rather of his aſcenſion to heaven after his death, and reſurrection from the dead; and the conſtitution of him upon that as Lord and Chriſt, or the ſetting of him up as king over God's holy hill of Zion, the church of God: and no doubt but there is an alluſion to mount Zion, and to Jeruſalem, from whence the goſpel firſt went forth, and where the firſt goſpel-church was planted; and being ſaid to be on a mountain high and eminent, may denote both the viſibility and ſtability of the church of Chriſt.

---

[z] Χειρας τ' αλληλων λαβετην ϗ πιϛωσαντο. Iliad. 6.

[a] Florus, Hiſt. Rom. Geſt. l. 4. c. 5.

[b] Ipſe pater dextram Anchiſes, haud multa moratur,
Dat juveni atque animum præſenti pignore firmat. Æneid. l. 3. prope finem.

℣. 23. In the mountain of the height of Iſrael will I plant it, &c.] In the higheſt part of the land of Iſrael, as Jeruſalem is ſaid to be by the Jewiſh writers; the land of Iſrael, they ſay, particularly Kimchi upon the place, was higher than all other lands, and Jeruſalem was the higheſt part of that land; here the Meſſiah preached and wrought his miracles, even in the mountain of the Lord's houſe, the temple; and here the firſt chriſtian church was planted and eſtabliſhed: and it ſhall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar; that is, the tender twig or branch cropped off, ſet and planted as before deſcribed; by the boughs or branches it brings forth, may be meant believers, who are as branches in Chriſt; are of the ſame nature with him, united to him; have a communication of life and grace from him; are ſupported and ſtrengthened by him; and ſo abiding in him, perſevere to the end; ſee John xv. 4, 5. and the ſame may be ſaid of particular churches; and by fruit it is ſaid to bear, may be deſigned the perſons of the choſen, redeemed, and called; who are the fruit of Chriſt's death, and of the miniſtration of his goſpel, John xii. 24. and xv. 16. or the bleſſings of grace which are in him, come from him, and are communicated by him; even all ſpiritual bleſſings, as juſtification, pardon, adoption, ſanctification, and eternal life, in ſhort, both grace and glory; and thus he becomes and appears to be a goodly cedar, in his perſon, office, and grace, to his people, to whom he is altogether lovely, being full of grace and truth, Cant. v. 16. John i. 14. and in his kingdom and intereſt, eſpecially in the latter day, when the kingdoms of this world ſhall become his: and under it ſhall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the ſhadow of the branches thereof ſhall they dwell; by whom are deſigned converted ſinners of all ſorts, and of all nations, Jews and Gentiles; compared to birds, becauſe weak, defenceleſs, and timorous; expoſed to danger, and wonderfully delivered; are ſubject to wander and go aſtray; and for their chirping and warbling notes: now theſe may be ſaid to dwell under the ſhadow of the branches of this goodly cedar, Chriſt and his church; that is, under the miniſtration of the word and ordinances, which is a very delightful and refreſhing ſhadow, a very ſafe and fruitful one, Cant. ii. 3. Hoſ. xiv. 7. Iſ. iv. 6. and xxv. 4. and here ſaints chuſe to dwell, and determine to abide and continue, as it is their intereſt and happineſs ſo to do; and what a flocking and tabernacling of theſe birds here, will there be in the latter day, where they will chirp and ſing in the height of Zion? Iſ. lxvi. 4, 8. Jer. xxxi. 12. compare with this Matt. xiii. 31, 32. where our Lord is thought by ſome to allude to this paſſage.

℣. 24. And all the trees of the field ſhall know, &c.] All the nations of the world, and the great ones, and the mighty men of the earth, ſhall know, own, and acknowledge, when the above things are accompliſhed: that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flouriſh; ſome by the high and green tree underſtand Zedekiah, who was brought low; and by the low and dry tree, Jeconiah, who was raiſed by the king of Babylon, Jer. lii. 11, 31, 32. this is Jarchi's ſenſe, and is mentioned by Kimchi: others by the former, think Nebuchadnezzar and the Babyloniſh monarchy are intended, which were brought down; and by the latter, the houſe of David, and kingdom of Judah, which were exalted: tho' rather by the one are meant the people of the Jews, once the people of God, but now caſt off; and by the other the Gentiles, called by the grace of God, and received by him: tho' it ſeems beſt of all to interpret the high and green tree of the mighty kingdoms of this world, which will be put down by Chriſt; and the low and dry tree of his kingdom and intereſt, which ſhall flouriſh and ſpread abundantly, and be an everlaſting kingdom; ſee Dan. ii. 44: I the Lord have ſpoken, and have done it; becauſe the prophecy of it is ſure, and becauſe of the certainty of the fulfilment of it, it is ſaid to be done as ſoon as it was ſpoken of.

CHAP. XVIII.

THIS chapter contains an anſwer to an objection of the Jews to the dealings of God with them in a providential way. The objection is expreſſed in a proverb of common uſe among them, and complained of as being without cauſe, ℣. 1, 2. however, for the future, no occaſion ſhould be given them to uſe it; for tho' God could juſtify his proceedings upon the foot of his ſovereignty, all ſouls being his; yet he was determined none but the ſinner himſelf ſhould ſuffer, ℣. 3, 4. and puts various caſes for the illuſtration and vindication of his proceedings; as that a juſt man, who is deſcribed by his proper characters, as abſtaining from ſeveral ſins ſpecified, and doing what is right and good, ſhould ſurely live, ℣. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. but that the ſon of ſuch a juſt man, being the reverſe of his father's character, ſhould ſurely die, ℣. 10, 11, 12, 13. and again, the ſon of ſuch a wicked man, obſerving the heinouſneſs of his father's ſins, and abſtaining from them, tho' his father ſhould die in his iniquities, he ſhould not die for them, but live, ℣. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. by which it appears, that the dealings of God with the Jews were not according to the proverb uſed by them, but quite agreeable to his reſolution; that the ſinner, be he a father or a ſon, ſhall die for his own ſins; and that the righteous man's righteouſneſs ſhall be upon him, and the wicked man's ſin upon him, and accordingly both ſhall be dealt with, ℣. 19, 20. which is further illuſtrated by a wicked man's turning from his ſinful courſe, and doing righteouſneſs, and living in that righteouſneſs he has done; which is more agreeable to God that he ſhould live, and not die in ſin, ℣. 21, 22, 23. and by a righteous man turning from his righteouſneſs, and living a vicious life, and dying in it, ℣. 24. from both which inſtances this concluſion follows, that God is to be juſtified; and that his ways are equal, and the Jews ways were unequal, and their complaint unjuſt, ℣. 25. and the ſame inſtances are repeated in a different order, and the ſame concluſion formed, ℣. 26, 27, 28, 29. upon which the Lord determines to judge them according to their own ways, their perſonal actions, good or bad; and exhorts them to repentance and reformation; and cloſes with a pathetic expoſtulation with them, ℣. 30, 31, 32.

℣. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me again, ſaying.] The word of prophecy from the Lord, as the Targum; and its being mentioned as coming from the Lord, is to give it weight and authority. This is a diſtinct ſermon or prophecy from the former, and was ſent and delivered out at another time.

℣. 2. What mean ye that ye uſe this proverb concerning the land of Iſrael, &c.] This is ſpoken to the Jews in Babylon, who uſed the following proverb concerning the land of Iſrael; not the ten tribes, but the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, concerning the deſolation of the land, and the hardſhips the Jews laboured under, ſince the captivity of Jechoniah, and they became ſubject to the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar: this expoſtulation with them ſuggeſts, that they had no juſt cauſe, or true reaſon, to make uſe of the proverb; that it was impious, impudent and inſolent in them, and daring and dangerous; and that they did not ſurely well conſider what they ſaid. The proverb follows: ſaying, the fathers have eaten ſour grapes, and the childrens teeth are ſet on edge; that is, as the Targum explains it, "the fathers have ſinned, and "the children are ſmitten," or puniſhed, as the ten tribes for the ſins of Jeroboam, and the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin for the ſins of Manaſſeh; hereby wiping themſelves clean; and, as if they were innocent perſons, and free from ſin, and were only puniſhed for their forefathers ſins, and ſo charging God with injuſtice and cruelty; whereas, tho' the Lord threatened to viſit the iniquity of parents upon their children, and ſometimes did ſo, to deter parents from ſinning, leſt they ſhould entail a curſe, and bring ruin upon their poſterity; yet he never did this, but when children followed their fathers practices, and committed the ſame ſins, or worſe; ſo that this was no act of unrighteouſneſs in God, but rather an inſtance of his patience and long-ſuffering; ſee Jer. xxxi. 29, 30.

℣. 3. As I live, ſaith the Lord, &c.] This is a form of an oath; the Lord here ſwears by his life, by himſelf, becauſe he could ſwear by no greater, Heb. vi. 13. and it expreſſes how diſpleaſed he was with the above proverb, and how much he reſented it, as well as the certainty of what follows; which it might be depended on, would be aſſuredly done, ſince the Lord not only ſaid it, but ſwore unto it: ye ſhall not have occaſion any more to uſe this proverb in Iſrael; ſignifying, that he would no longer defer the execution of his judgments, but immediately bring them upon them; ſo that for the future, there would be no uſe of the proverb; no occaſion to make mention of it in the next generation; and moreover, that he would make it ſo manifeſt to themſelves and others, by his dealings with them, that it ſhould be ſeen, and known, and acknowledged by all, that it was for their own ſins and tranſgreſſions that they were viſited and corrected.

℣. 4. Behold, all ſouls are mine, &c.] By creation; they being the immediate produce of his power; hence he is called the father of ſpirits, or the ſouls of men; theſe he has an apparent right unto; a property in; a dominion over; they are accountable to him, and will be judged impartially by him: as the ſoul of the father, ſo alſo the ſoul of the ſon is mine; and therefore muſt be thought to have as great a reſpect and affection for the one, as for the other; for the ſoul of a ſon, as for the ſoul of a father; and not deal partially in favour of the one, and cruelly and unrighteouſly with the other: the ſoul that ſinneth, it ſhall die; the ſoul that continues in ſin, without repentance towards God, and faith in Chriſt, ſhall die the ſecond death; ſhall be ſeparated from the preſence of God, and endure his wrath to all eternity: or the meaning is, that a perſon that is guilty of groſs ſins, and continues in them, ſhall perſonally ſuffer; he ſhall endure one calamity or another, as the famine, ſword, peſtilence, or be carried into captivity, which is the death all along ſpoken of in this chapter; the Lord will exerciſe no patience towards him, or defer puniſhment to a future generation, his offspring; but ſhall immediately execute it upon himſelf.

℣. 5. But if a man be juſt, &c.] Not legally, as to be wholly free from ſin, for there is no ſuch juſt man, Eccl. vii. 20. but evangelically, thro' the imputation of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt unto him; and who has a principle of grace and holineſs wrought in him; a man of a juſt principle and good conſcience; who is diſpoſed by the grace of God to that which is juſt and right; for this ſeems to refer to the inward frame of the mind, as diſtinct from actions, and as the ſource of them, as follows: and do that which is lawful and right; or judgment [c] and juſtice; true judgment and juſtice, as the Targum; that which is juſt and right by the law of God, and is ſo between man and man; the particulars of which follow:

℣. 6. And hath not eaten upon the mountains, &c.] Where temples and altars were built for idols, and ſacrifices offered up to them; and where feaſts were kept to the honour of them, and the ſacrifices to them eaten; ſee ch. vi. 13. for otherwiſe it was not unlawful to eat common food on mountains, as well as on other places; but here it denotes idolatrous practices; and the Targum is, "and "hath not ſerved idols on the mountains:" neither hath lift up his eyes to the idols of the houſe of Iſrael; their dunghil-gods [d], as the word ſignifies; as not to the idols of the Gentiles, ſo not to thoſe of Iſrael, as the calves at Dan and Bethel; theſe he does not worſhip, nor pray unto, or invoke, nor even give a pleaſant and favourable look unto; but turned from them with abhorrence and contempt: neither hath defiled his neighbour's wife; been guilty of adultery, by lying with another man's wife; or by marrying one divorced, not having committed fornication; which divorces were common among the Jews, and marrying ſuch ſo divorced, Matt. xix. 9: neither hath come near to a menſtruous woman; a woman in her monthly courſes, even his own wife; who, according to the law, was ſet apart for her uncleanneſs for a certain term of time; during which ſhe was not to be touched, nor any thing ſhe ſat or lay upon; and all conjugal acts to be abſtained from, Lev. xv. 19—24. and xviii. 19. and xx. 18.

℣. 7. And hath not oppreſſed any, &c.] By fraud or force, particularly the poor, to the great grief and hurt of them: but hath reſtored to the debtor his pledge; which was pawned; not embezzling it, or keeping it beyond the time fixed by the law of God, Deut. xxiv. 12, 13. Exod. xxii. 26: hath ſpoiled none by violence; has not committed theft and robbery, or done injury to any man's perſon and property: hath given his bread to the hungry; which was his own; what he had laboured for, and come by honeſtly, and ſo had a right to diſpoſe of; and being merciful, as well as juſt, eats not his morſel alone, but diſtributes it to the poor and hungry, Iſ. lviii. 7: and hath covered the naked with a garment; as Job did, as well as the former, and for which Dorcas is commended, Job xxxi. 17—20. Acts ix. 39.

℣. 8. He that hath not given forth upon uſury, &c.] Money, victuals, or any other thing, which was forbidden the Jews to take of their brethren, tho' they might of ſtrangers, Deut. xxiii. 19, 20: neither hath taken any increaſe; or intereſt; or rather ſomething over and above the intereſt-money or uſe, as a gratuity for lending it upon the ſaid intereſt: that hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity; not only that now mentioned, but all others; who, having inadvertently engaged in that which is ſinful, as ſoon as it appears to him to be ſo, gets out of it, and abſtains from it as ſoon as poſſible: hath executed true judgment between man and man; whether in office as a judge, who ſits on the bench for that purpoſe; or as an arbitrator choſen to decide matters in controverſy between one man and another, and that does every thing juſt and right between man and man.

℣. 9. Hath walked in my ſtatutes, &c.] Reſpecting the worſhip of God and true religion; being obſervant of all laws and ordinances relating thereunto: and hath kept my judgments to deal truly; in things moral and civil among men; regarding all ſuch laws of God as oblige to ſuch things: he is juſt; ſuch a man is a juſt man, at leaſt externally; and if he does all theſe things from a right principle, without truſting to them for juſtification before God, and acceptance with him, but looking to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt for theſe things, he is truly, and in the ſight of God, a juſt man: he ſhall ſurely live, ſaith the Lord God; ſpiritually and comfortably here, and an eternal life hereafter; or rather, he ſhall not be diſtreſſed with famine, ſword, or plague, or go into captivity; but ſhall live in his own land, and eat the good things of it; and this ſhall be his caſe, let his father have been what he will, ever ſo great a ſinner.

℣. 10. If he beget a ſon that is a robber, a ſhedder of blood, &c.] But if this juſt man beget a ſon that is a thief and a murderer, as he may; for grace is not conveyed by natural generation, tho' ſin is: a good man has often bad children, even ſuch as are guilty of capital crimes, as a robber, a highwayman, a breaker up, or thro', as the word [e] ſignifies; one that breaks thro' walls, and into houſes, and breaks thro' all the laws of God and man; and ſticks not to ſhed innocent blood in committing his thefts and robberies, as theſe ſins often go together; ſuch an one was Barabbas, whoſe name ſignifies the ſon of a father, and perhaps his father might be a good man: and that doth the like to any one of theſe things; or that does any one of theſe things, whether theft or murder.

℣. 11. And that doth not any of thoſe duties, &c.] Before-mentioned, which his father did, but the reverſe of them; and ſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, and in the way of his righteous father does not walk; does not tread in his ſteps, and work righteouſneſs as he did: but even hath eaten upon the mountains, and defiled his neighbour's wife; has been guilty of idolatry and adultery; ſee the note on ℣. 6.

℣. 12. Hath oppreſſed the poor and needy, &c.] Who are weak, and have none to help them, and ſtand by them, and ſo are oppreſſed by ſuch a man. This ſerves to explain the clauſe in ℣. 7: hath ſpoiled by violence; his neighbour's goods; taken them away from him by force: hath not reſtored the pledge; to the borrower before ſun-ſet, but kept it for his own uſe; taking the advantage of the poverty of him that borrowed of him: and hath liſt up his eyes to the idols; whether of the Gentiles, or of the houſe of Iſrael: hath committed abomination; either idolatry, the ſin juſt before-mentioned, which was an abomination to the Lord; or elſe approaching to a menſtruous woman, ſince this follows the other in ℣. 6. and is not mentioned, unleſs it is deſigned here; and ſo Kimchi interprets it; but Jarchi underſtands it, of the abominable and deteſtable ſin of ſodomy: it may regard any and every ſin that is abominable in the ſight of God.

---

[c] משפט וצדקה judicium & juſtitiam, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Montanus, &c.

[d] אל גלולי ad ſtercoreos deos, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; ad ſtercora, Piſcator, Cocceius.

[e] פריץ effractorem, Montanus, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator, Grotius.

℣. 13. Hath given forth upon uſury, and hath taken increaſe, &c.] Contrary to the law of God; ſee the note on ℣. 8: ſhall he then live? by virtue of his father's righteouſneſs and goodneſs, free from calamities, and in the quiet poſſeſſion of the land of Iſrael, and the good things of it: he ſhall not live; but go into captivity, and be deſtitute of the good things of life he has enjoyed; and, without repentance, ſhall never have eternal life: he hath done all theſe abominations; before-mentioned; theft, murder, idolatry, adultery, oppreſſion of the poor, and uſury, ſins againſt both tables of the law: he ſhall ſurely die, the death of affliction, or undergo temporal puniſhment; and not only die corporally, but eternally too, if grace prevent not: in dying he ſhall die[f]; as in the Hebrew text; he ſhall die, both the firſt and ſecond death; his father's goodneſs ſhall not ſave him from either: his blood ſhall be upon him; or bloods[g]; the innocent blood he has ſhed, which he muſt anſwer for being guilty of, and ſhall not eſcape righteous judgment, and his own blood, the deſtruction of himſelf; he ſhall be the cauſe of his own ruin, and bring juſt puniſhment on his own head.

℣. 14. Now lo, if he beget a ſon, &c.] That is, the wicked man before-mentioned; if he begets a ſon who proves a good man, which ſometimes is the caſe, as Hezekiah the ſon of Ahaz, and Joſiah the ſon of Amon: that ſeeth all his father's ſins which he hath done; not every particular action, but the principal of them; however, the ſeveral ſorts and kinds of ſin he was addicted to, and which were done publickly enough, and obvious to view; and yet does not imitate them, as children are apt to do: and conſidereth; the evil nature and tendency of them; how abominable to God; how contrary to his law; how ſcandalous and reproachful in themſelves, and how pernicious and deſtructive in their effects and conſequences. The Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Arabic verſions read, and feareth: and doth not ſuch like; he fears God; and becauſe the fear of God is before his eyes, and on his heart, which was wanting in his father, therefore he cannot do the things he did; the fear of offending him, the fear of his goodneſs, and of his judgments, both have an influence to reſtrain from ſin.

℣. 15. That hath eaten upon the mountains, &c.] See the note on ℣. 6. where the ſame things are mentioned as here, and in the ſame order; only that clauſe, neither hath come near to a menſtruous woman, is here omitted.

℣. 16. Neither hath oppreſſed any, &c.] See the note on ℣. 7: hath not withholden the pledge; or, hath not pledged the pledge[h]. The meaning is, not that he had not given one, but had not taken one. So the Targum, "the pledge he hath not taken;" or if he did, he did not keep it beyond the time the law directs, but reſtored it to him whoſe it was. The reſt of the verſe is the ſame with ℣. 7.

℣. 17. That hath taken off his hand from the poor, &c.] When he perceived it lay heavy upon him, withdrew it from hurting him, and forbore to do it when it was in his power, and perhaps eaſed him of the hardſhips his father had laid upon him; which was very kind and humane: that hath not received uſury, nor increaſe; ſee the note on ℣. 8: hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my ſtatutes; had not only negative, but poſitive holineſs; not only abſtained from things ſinful, but did that which was juſt and right, both with reſpect to God and man; obſerved the worſhip of God, and did juſtice to mankind: he ſhall not die for the iniquity of his father; or be puniſhed for his father's ſins, with ſword, famine, peſtilence or captivity; ſhall not die a corporal death, and much leſs eternal death on that account: he ſhall ſurely live; in his own land, and in the enjoyment of the good things of life; and having the grace and fear of God, and acting from gracious principles, with a view to the glory of God, he ſhall live eternally, tho' the ſon of a wicked man.

℣. 18. As for his father, &c.] It ſhall be otherwiſe with him: becauſe he cruelly oppreſſed; or, oppreſſed an oppreſſion; or, with an oppreſſion[i]; oppreſſed the poor, and had no mercy on them, but uſed them in the moſt rigorous manner: ſpoiled his brother by violence; took away the ſpoil of his brother; ſpoiled him of his ſubſtance; did injury to his perſon and property, and all the miſchief that lay in his power: and did that which is not good among his people; neighbours, citizens and countrymen; did nothing which was good, as he ought to have done; but every thing that was bad, which he ſhould not have done: lo, even he ſhall die in his iniquity; and for it; it ſhall not be forgiven him; he ſhall be puniſhed for it with death, with the death of affliction; and with corporal death, as a puniſhment for ſin; and with eternal death, dying in his ſins, and in a ſtate of impenitence. Theſe inſtances put every way, moſt clearly ſhew the equity of God; the juſtneſs of his proceedings in providence; and how inapplicable the proverb in ℣. 2. was to them; and that ſuch that ſin, and continue therein, ſhall die for their own iniquities, and not for the ſins of others.

℣. 19. Yet ſay ye, why? &c.] Why do you ſay ſo? why do you go on to aſſert that which is not fact, or which is contrary to fact, contrary to what we feel and experience every day, to ſay that children are not puniſhed for their parents ſins? theſe are the words of the murmuring, complaining and blaſpheming Jews, quarrelling with the prophet, and with the Lord himſelf: doth not the ſon bear the iniquity of the father? han't we proof of it every day we live? are not our preſent caſe and circumſtances a full evidence of it? or the words may be rendered, why does not the ſon bear the iniquity of the father? ſo the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Arabic verſions; or, as the Targum, "why is not the ſon puniſhed for the ſins "of the father?" and ſo they are an objection, which is foreſeen might be made, and is here anticipated,

---

[f] מות יומת moriendo morietur, Pagninus, Montanus.

[g] דמיו ſanguines ejus, Montanus.

[h] חבל לא חבל pignus non pignoravit, Vatablus; pignus non acceperit in pignus, Pagninus; pignori, Montanus.

[i] עשק עשק oppreſſit oppreſſionem, Pagninus, Montanus; oppreſſit oppreſſione, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius.

cipated, to which an anſwer is returned; and ſo the Syriac verſion introduces it, but if they ſay, &c. then adds, tell them, as follows: when, or becauſe the ſon hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my ſtatutes, and hath done them; this is the reaſon why he ſhall not bear his father's ſins, or be puniſhed for them; intimating, that they had not done theſe things that made the complaint, or put the queſtion; but had committed the ſame ſins their fathers had, and ſo were puniſhed, not for their fathers' ſins, but their own: for otherwiſe, the man that does what is juſt and right with God, and between man and man, he ſhall ſurely live; ſee the note on ℣. 17.

℣. 20. The ſoul that ſinneth, it ſhall die, &c.] This is repeated from ℣. 4. for the further confirmation of it: the ſon ſhall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither ſhall the father bear the iniquity of the ſon; that is, as the Targum paraphraſes it, "the ſon ſhall not be puniſhed for the ſins of the "father, nor ſhall the father be puniſhed for the "ſins of the ſon." This is to be underſtood of adult perſons, and of actual ſins; for of ſuch only the prophet ſpeaks throughout the whole chapter, and of temporal, and not of eternal puniſhment: the righteouſneſs of the righteous ſhall be upon him; he ſhall be rewarded with temporal good things in this life, according to his righteouſneſs; which, as the Targum ſays, ſhall remain upon him; ſee Pſ. cxii. 9. he ſhall eat of the fruit of his own doings, Iſ. iii. 10. this is true of a man that is evangelically righteous, or is ſo thro' the imputation of Chriſt's righteouſneſs to him; which is upon him as a robe to clothe him, and will always remain on him, being an everlaſting righteouſneſs, and will anſwer for him in a time to come: and the wickedneſs of the wicked ſhall be upon him; and not another; his ſin ſhall remain on him unatoned for, unexpiated, not taken away or forgiven; the puniſhment of it ſhall be on him, and abide upon him.

℣. 21. But if the wicked, &c.] So far is the Lord from puniſhing the ſins of one man upon another, that he will not puniſh a man for his own ſins: if he will turn from all his ſins that he hath committed; if he truly repents of them, and thoroughly forſakes them; for it muſt not be one ſin only, but all; every ſin is to be loathed and mourned over, and ſorrow expreſſed for it, and to be forſaken; not one ſin is to be cheriſhed and retained, but all to be relinquiſhed; or the repentance and converſion may be juſtly queſtioned whether they be ſincere: and keep all my ſtatutes, and do that which is lawful and right; as the repentance and turning from ſin muſt be general, ſo alſo obedience to the commands of God, both moral and poſitive; reſpect is to be had to all his ordinances, which are all of them to be eſteemed as right and lawful, and to be obſerved: this is bringing forth fruits meet for repentance: he ſhall ſurely live, he ſhall not die; he ſhall live in his own land, and not go into captivity. Kimchi's note is, he ſhall live in this world, and not die in the world to come; ſo Ben Melech.

℣. 22. All his tranſgreſſions that he hath committed, &c.] Before his repentance, converſion and obedience: they ſhall not be mentioned unto him; they ſhall not be charged upon his conſcience, or brought againſt him in providence; he ſhall not be upbraided with them, or puniſhed for them; but they ſhall be forgiven him, at leaſt in ſuch ſenſe, as to prevent temporal calamity and ruin: in his righteouſneſs that he hath done, he ſhall live; he ſhall live in it, tho' not for it; this will be the fruit and conſequence of his obedience and righteouſneſs, that he ſhall live, and not die, in the ſenſe that has been already given, according to the tenor of the law, Lev. xviii. 5.

℣. 23. Have I any pleaſure at all that the wicked ſhould die, ſaith the Lord God? &c.] Periſh by ſword, famine or peſtilence, or go into captivity: this, tho' the Lord's will and work, yet is his ſtrange work; mercy is his delight. This is to be underſtood not abſolutely; for the Lord does take pleaſure in theſe things, as they fulfil his word, ſecure the honour of his truth and holineſs, and glorify his juſtice, and eſpecially when they are the means of reclaiming men from the evil of their ways; but comparatively, as follows: and not that he ſhould return from his ways and live? that is, it is more pleaſing to God that a man ſhould repent of his ſins, and forſake his vicious courſe of life, and enjoy good things, than to go on in his ſins, and bring ruin on himſelf, here and hereafter.

℣. 24. But when the righteous turneth away from his righteouſneſs, &c.] This is to be underſtood, not of a truly righteous man; for no man can be ſo denominated from his own righteouſneſs; but from the righteouſneſs and obedience of Chriſt; and ſuch a man can't turn from his righteouſneſs; for that is the righteouſneſs of God, and can never be loſt; and is an everlaſting one, and will always endure; and with which eternal life is inſeparably connected: but this is to be interpreted of one that is reckoned ſo from his own righteouſneſs, what he himſelf has done, and not from another, from the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which he has wrought out; he is one that is righteous in his own eſteem, and in the account of others; who is outwardly righteous before men; who truſts in himſelf that he is righteous, and truſts to his own righteouſneſs; ſee Ezek. xxxiii. 13. whoſe righteouſneſs is not an evangelical one, but either a ceremonial righteouſneſs, or at moſt a mere moral one, conſiſting of ſome negative holineſs, and a few moral performances, as appears from ℣. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. and from ſuch a righteouſneſs as this, a man may turn, commit iniquity, ſin and die; ſee 2 Pet. ii. 20, 21. and is no proof or inſtance of the apoſtacy of real ſaints, true believers, or truly righteous men; beſides, this man is repreſented as a tranſgreſſor, or prevaricator, as the word ſignifies; a hypocrite, a man deſtitute of the truth of grace, and of true righteouſneſs: and committeth iniquity; makes a trade of ſinning; goes into a vicious courſe of life, and continues in it; which a truly gracious man, one that is born again, and has true faith in Chriſt's righteouſneſs, by which he is juſtified, can never do, 1 John iii. 8, 9: and doth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doth; ſuch as theft, murder, adultery, idolatry, oppreſſion of the poor, and giving upon uſury, ℣. 10, 11, 12, 13: ſhall he live? in his own land, in peace and proſperity, enjoying all manner of good things? he ſhall not; much leſs ſhall he live an eternal life, ſo living and dying: all his righteouſneſs that he hath done ſhall not be mentioned; or, all his righteouſneſſes [k]; all the good works which he has done will never come into any account, or be of any avail; as they merited nothing, they will meet with no reward; they'll not preſerve him from preſent calamity, which his now ſinful life expoſes him to, nor ſecure him from eternal ruin; theſe may be mentioned and pleaded by himſelf, but to no purpoſe; God will not mention them, nor take any notice of them, nor the judge at the great day of account, Matt. vii. 22, 23: in his treſpaſs that he hath treſpaſſed, and in his ſin that he hath ſinned, in them ſhall he die; or, for his hypocriſy, prevarication[l], and vicious courſe of life he now lives in, a death of affliction ſhall come upon him; great calamities and diſtreſſes in this world; and, if grace prevent not, eternal death in the other; if he dies in his treſpaſſes and ſins, he'll die the ſecond death.

---

[k] כל צדקותיו omnes juſtitiæ ejus, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius.

ỷ. 25. Yet ye ſay, &c.] Notwithſtanding theſe plain inſtances, which ſhew the equity of God in his proceedings, and vindicate his juſtice in the diſpenſations of his providence; yet ſuch was the blindneſs and ſtupidity of theſe people, or rather their ſtubbornneſs, obſtinacy and impudence, that they ſtill inſiſted upon it, that the way of the Lord is not equal; juſt and right, is not even, according to the rules of juſtice and equity; or is not ordered aright, is not ſteady, and firm, and conſiſtent with himſelf, and the declaration of his will; a very bold and blaſphemous charge, and yet the Lord condeſcends to reaſon with them about it: hear now, O houſe of Iſrael; the ten tribes that were now in captivity; or the Jews that were carried captive with Jeconiah, with thoſe that were ſtill in Jeruſalem and Judea; theſe are called upon to hear the Lord, what he had to ſay in vindication of himſelf from this charge, as it was but juſt and reaſonable they ſhould: is not my way equal? plain and even, conſtant and uniform, according to the obvious rules of juſtice and truth? can any inſtance be given to the contrary? what is to be ſaid to ſupport the charge againſt me? bring forth your ſtrong reaſons if you can, and prove what is aſſerted: are not your ways unequal? it is plain they are; your actions, your courſe of life are manifeſt deviations from my law, and from all the rules of righteouſneſs and goodneſs; it is you that are in the wrong, and I in the right.

ỷ. 26. When a righteous man turneth away from his righteouſneſs, &c.] This is repeated for the further confirmation of it, and to raiſe their attention to it; to make it more plain and manifeſt to them, and to fix it upon their minds: and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; or, he ſhall die for them[m]; both for his turning away from his righteouſneſs, and for his committing iniquity: for his iniquity that he hath done, ſhall he die; in both reſpects. This is repeated to denote the certainty of it.

ỷ. 27. Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedneſs that he hath committed, &c.] Repents of his ſins, and forſakes the vicious courſe of life he has lived: and doth that which is lawful and right; or judgment and righteouſneſs[n]; that which is agreeable to the law and will of God, and is juſt and right between man and man: he ſhall ſave his ſoul alive; from famine, peſtilence, the ſword or captivity; he ſhall be preſerved, and not be involved in calamities and diſtreſs: or, ſhall quicken his own ſoul[o]; which, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, is only done by the Spirit and grace of God, and not by man himſelf; nor is the enjoyment of eternal life by the works of men, but thro' the grace of God, and righteouſneſs of Chriſt.

ỷ. 28. Becauſe he conſidereth, &c.] Being come to himſelf, and in his right mind, he conſiders the evil of his ways; what they lead to; what they deſerve at the hand of God; and what he may expect, ſhould he continue in them; ſee ỷ. 14: and turneth away from all his tranſgreſſions that he hath committed; not only repents of them, but reforms from them; and that not from one, or a few of them, but from them all; which ſhows the truth, reality and ſincerity of his repentance; there being a change of mind, a change of actions and converſation follows: he ſhall ſurely live, he ſhall not die; ſee the note on ỷ. 21. Jerom interprets the juſt man turning from his righteouſneſs, of the Jews leaving the author of righteouſneſs, denying the Son of God, and ſmiting the heir; and the wicked man turning from his wickedneſs, of the Gentiles, and of their converſion and faith.

ỷ. 29. Yet ſaith the houſe of Iſrael, the way of the Lord is not equal, &c.] Tho' the caſe was put ſo many ways, and the thing was made ſo clear and plain, by the inſtances given; as, if a man was a juſt man, let his father be what he would, he ſhould live; but if his ſon was a wicked man, he ſhould die; yet, if his ſon ſhould do well, he ſhould not die for his father's ſins, his father only ſhould ſuffer for his iniquity; and then again, on the one hand, if a ſeemingly righteous man become an apoſtate, he ſhould be treated as ſuch; but, on the other hand, if a wicked man repented and reformed, things would go well with him; by all which it moſt clearly appeared, that God did not, and would not, puniſh children for the ſins of their fathers, unleſs they themſelves were guilty of the ſame; and that the methods of providence in dealing with men in this world, as they were good or bad, were equal and right, and to be juſtified: O houſe of Iſrael, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal? This is an appeal to their own conſciences, upon the evidence before given.

ỷ. 30. Therefore will I judge you, O houſe of Iſrael, &c.] The caſe being fairly ſtated, the charge removed, inſtances to the contrary given; the Lord, as judge, proceeds to bring the controverſy to an iſſue, and to paſs the definitive ſentence, and to deal with them in the way of his providence, as they deſerved: every one according to his ways, ſaith the Lord God; not according to the ways of their father, but according to their own ways: this refers, not to the laſt and general judgment, but to ſome ſore temporal puniſhment, which God, as the righteous judge, would inflict upon them for their ſins, according to the juſt deſert of them; but whereas, notwithſtanding all their wickedneſs, inſolence and blaſphemy, the Lord was deſirous of ſhewing mercy to them, rather than proceed to ſtrict juſtice; he exhorts and adviſes them to the following things: repent, and turn yourſelves from all your tranſgreſſions; this is to be underſtood of a national repentance for national ſins, to prevent national judgments, being an addreſs to the whole houſe of Iſrael; and not of evangelical repentance, which is the gift of God, and of an external reformation, as the fruit of it; and not of the firſt work of internal converſion,

---

[l] במעלו propter prævaricationem ipſius, vel ſuam, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus.

[m] עליהם propter illa, Pagninus, Piſcator, Grotius, Cocceius; ſo ſome in Vatablus.

[n] משפט וצדקה judicium & juſtitiam, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin, Cocceius.

[o] הוא את נפשו יחיה animam ſuam vivificabit, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus, Calvin; vivificat, Cocceius.

verſion, which is by the powerful and efficacious grace of God; tho' were both exhorted to, it would not prove that theſe are in the power of men, only ſhew the want and neceſſity of them; and ſo be the means of God's bringing his choſen people to them. The phraſe, yourſelves, is not in the original; both words uſed, ſignify to turn; and may be rendered and explained, thus, turn yourſelves, and cauſe others to turn [p]; let every man turn himſelf from his evil courſes, and do all he can to turn his brother, or his neighbour, from the ſame; ſo Jarchi, Kimchi and Ben Melech interpret them. The Targum is, "turn you to my "worſhip, and remove from you the worſhip of "idols:" ſo iniquity ſhall not be your ruin; meaning temporal ruin, as it deſerved, and they were threatened with; and which might be prevented by repentance and reformation: or, ſhall not be a ſtumbling-block to you [q]; an hindrance, an obſtruction in the way of their enjoyment of temporal bleſſings.

ỳ. 31. Caſt away from you all your tranſgreſſions, whereby ye have tranſgreſſed, &c.] As unprofitable and pernicious, to be abhorred and abſtained from, and to be caſt off, as loads and burdens upon them. Kimchi interprets it, of the puniſhment of their ſins, which might be caſt off, or eſcaped by repentance; perhaps it is beſt to interpret it of the caſting away of their idols, by which they tranſgreſſed; ſee ch. xx. 7, 8: and make you a new heart, and a new ſpirit; which the Lord elſewhere promiſes to give, and he does give, to his own elect; ſee the note on ch. xi. 19. and if here to be underſtood of a regenerated heart and ſpirit, in which are new principles of light, life and love, grace and holineſs; it will not prove that it is in the power of man to make himſelf ſuch an heart and ſpirit; ſince from God's command, to man's power, is no argument; and the deſign of the exhortation is to convince men of their want of ſuch an heart; of the importance of it; and which, thro' the efficacious grace of God, may be a means of his people having it, ſeeing he has in covenant promiſed it to them. The Targum renders it, "a fearing "heart, and a ſpirit of fear;" that is, an heart and ſpirit to fear, ſerve and worſhip the Lord, and not idols; and ſo the amount of the exhortation is, yield an hearty, reverential obedience to the living God, and not to dumb idols; or that they would be hearty and ſincere in their national repentance and reformation, they are here preſſed unto: for why will ye die, O houſe of Iſrael? which is to be underſtood, not of an eternal death; ſince the death here ſpoken of was now upon them, what they were complaining of, and from which they might be recovered, ỳ. 2, 23. but temporal calamity and affliction, as in 2 Cor. i. 10. and xi. 23. and ſo in the following words.

ỳ. 32. For I have no pleaſure in the death of him that dieth, &c.] Which is not to be interpreted ſimply and abſolutely, and with reſpect to all perſons afflicted and puniſhed by him; for he does take delight in the exerciſe of judgment and righteouſneſs, and laughs at the calamity of wicked men, Jer. ix. 24. Prov. i. 26. but comparatively, as in Hoſ. v. 6. The ſenſe is, that he takes no pleaſure in the afflictions, calamities and captivity of men, which are meant by death here; but rather, that they would repent and reform, and live in their own land, and enjoy the good things of it; which ſhows the mercy and compaſſion of God to ſinners: wherefore, he renews his exhortation, turn yourſelves, and live ye; or, ye ſhall live [r]; I take no delight in your preſent death, your captivity; it would be more agreeable to me, would you turn from your evil ways to the Lord your God, and behave according to the laws I have given you to walk by, and ſo live in your own land, in the quiet poſſeſſion of your goods and eſtates.

CHAP. XIX.

THE ſubject-matter of this chapter is a lamentation for the princes and people of the Jews, on account of what had already befallen them, and what was yet to come, ỳ. 1. The mother of the princes is compared to a lioneſs, and they to lions; who, one after another, were taken and carried captive, ỳ. 2—9. again, their mother is compared to a vine, and they to branches and rods for ſcepters, deſtroyed by an eaſt-wind, and conſumed by fire, ỳ. 10—14.

ỳ. 1. Moreover, take thou up a lamentation, &c.] Theſe words are directed to the prophet Ezekiel, to compoſe a doleful ditty, a mournful ſong, ſuch as was uſed at funerals; and by it repreſent the lamentable ſtate of the nation of the Jews and their governors, in order to affect them with it, with what was paſt, and preſent, and yet to come: for the princes of Iſrael; or, concerning them [s]; the princes meant are Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah and Zedekiah, who were kings, tho' called princes, theſe words being ſynonymous; or if ſo called by way of diminution, the reaſon might be, becauſe they were tributary, either to the king of Egypt, or king of Babylon.

ỳ. 2. And ſay, what is thy mother? &c.] That is, ſay ſo to the then reigning prince, Zedekiah, what is thy mother like? to what is ſhe to be compared? by whom is meant, not the royal family of David only, or Jeruſalem the metropolis of the nation, but the whole body of the people; and ſo the Targum interprets it, of the congregation of Iſrael. The anſwer to the queſtion is, a lioneſs; ſhe is like to one, not for her ſtrength and glory, but for her cruelty and rapine; for her want of humanity, mercy and juſtice: ſhe lay down among lions; that is, kings, as the Targum interprets it; heathen princes, the kings of the nations about them, as of Egypt and Babylon, Jer. l. 17. ſo called for their deſpotic and arbitrary power, tyranny and cruelty: now this lioneſs, the people of the Jews, lay down among them, joined with them in leagues and marriages, and learned their manners, and became of the ſame temper and diſpoſition: ſhe nouriſheth her whelps among young lions; princes, as the Targum explains it; either the princes of Judah, who were become like young lions, fierce and cruel; or the princes of other nations, among whom the children of the royal family were brought up; or however, they were trained up in the principles of ſuch, even of arbitrary and deſpotic power, and were taught to oppreſs their ſubjects, and not execute juſtice and mercy among them.

---

[p] שובו והשיבו convertimini & facite converti, Pagninus, Montanus, ſub. proximos, ſo ſome in Calvin; quiſque ſuum fratrem, Munſter, Vatablus.

[q] ולא יהיה לכם למכשול & non erit vobis in offendiculum, Pagninus, Montanus, Piſcator.

[r] וחיו & vivetis, Pagninus, Montanus.

[s] אל נשיאי ישראל de principibus Iſrael, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Starckius; ſo Ben Melech.

℣. 3. And ſhe brought up one of her whelps, &c.] Or ſons, as the Targum: or, made him to aſcend [t], as the word ſignifies; to mount the throne; this was Jehoahaz, whom the people of the land took and anointed him, and made him king in the ſtead of Joſiah his father, 2 Kings xxiii. 30: it became a young lion; that is, a king, as the ſame Targum explains it, and a tyrannical and arbitrary one: and it learned to catch the prey; being inſtructed by evil counſellors, he ſoon learned to oppreſs his ſubjects, to get their ſubſtance from them, and do many evil things, as he is ſaid to do, 2 Kings xxiii. 32: it devoured men; or a man, Adam, the people of Iſrael ſo called, Ezek. xxxiv. 31. as the Jews frequently obſerve; it eat up and deſtroyed their liberties, privileges, and property.

℣. 4. The nations alſo heard of him, &c.] The neighbouring nations, particularly the Egyptians; the fame of his behaviour reached them; they were informed how he uſed his own ſubjects, and what deſigns he had formed, and what preparations he was making againſt his neighbours; wherefore they thought it proper to oppoſe his meaſures in time, and to hinder him from proceeding and putting his projects into execution, by coming out againſt him, and fighting with him, as they did: he was taken in their pit; alluding to the manner of hunting and taking lions, and ſuch like beaſts of prey; which was done by digging pits, and covering the mouths of them with ſtraw, as Jarchi obſerves, into which in their flight they fell unawares: ſo Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt came out againſt Jehoahaz, and took him, and put him in bonds at Riblah in the land of Hamath, that he might reign no more in Jeruſalem, after he had been on the throne but three months, 2 Kings xxiii. 31, 33: and they brought him with chains into the land of Egypt; or, with hooks [u]; in his noſe, as in Iſ. xxxvii. 29. or with a bridle, as the Septuagint; or with barnacles, as the Syriac verſion, in his jaws; the Targum renders it in chains, as we do: it is certain that Jehoahaz was put in bonds or fetters, and carried into Egypt, where he died, 2 Kings xxiii. 33, 34.

℣. 5. Now when ſhe ſaw, &c.] That is, his mother, as the Syriac verſion expreſſes it; not his natural mother; as the mother of Siſera looked out and waited for him; but the congregation of Iſrael, as Jarchi interprets it, the body of the Jewiſh people: that ſhe had waited; for the return of Jehoahaz out of Egypt, which was expected for ſome time: or, that ſhe was become ſick; or weak [w], and feeble, and brought to a low eſtate by his captivity, and by the tax the king of Egypt put upon her: and her hope was loſt; of his return to her any more, and ſo of being eaſed of the tribute impoſed, and of being reſtored by him to liberty and glory; for the Lord had declared, that he ſhould return no more to his native country, but die in the place where he was carried captive, Jer. xxii. 10, 11, 12: then ſhe took another of her whelps; or ſons, as the Targum: and made him a young lion; a king, as the ſame Targum paraphraſes it; that is, Jehoiakim, the brother of Jehoahaz, who before was called Eliakim, but his name was changed by Pharaoh Necho; and tho' he is ſaid to make him king, yet it was by the conſent of the people of the Jews.

℣. 6. And he went up and down among the lions, &c.] The kings, as the Targum; kings of neighbouring nations, as Pharaoh king of Egypt, and Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and ſometimes he was ſubject to the one, and ſometimes to the other: and his going up and down among them, may denote his continuance as a king; for whereas his brother reigned but three months, he reigned eleven years: he became a young lion; an oppreſſive prince, a cruel and tyrannical king: and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men; he was notorious for his acts of injuſtice and arbitrary power; for the detaining the wages of workmen, and for his oppreſſion, violence and rapine, and ſhedding of innocent blood, Jer. xxii. 13, 17.

℣. 7. And he knew their deſolate palaces, &c.] He took notice of the palaces or ſeats of the richeſt men of the nation, and pillaged them of their treaſure and wealth, and ſo they became deſolate: it may be rendered, he knew their widows [x]; or, his own widows; whom he made ſo; he ſlew the men to get their ſubſtance into his hands, and then defiled their widows: and he laid waſte their cities; by putting the inhabitants to death; or obliging them to leave them, and retire elſewhere, not being able to pay the taxes he impoſed upon them, partly to ſupport his own grandeur and luxury, and partly to pay the tribute to the king of Egypt: and the land was deſolate, and the fulneſs thereof, by the noiſe of his roaring; by his menaces and threatnings, edicts and exactions, he ſo terrified the inhabitants of the land, that though it was full of men and riches, it became in a great meaſure deſtitute of both; the people left their houſes, both in city and country, and fled elſewhere with the remainder of their ſubſtance, that had not fallen into his hands: his menacing demands being ſignified by roaring, agrees with his character as a lion, to which he is compared, Prov. xix. 12.

℣. 8. Then the nations ſet againſt him, &c.] Or, gave againſt him [y]; that is, their voice, as Kimchi; they called to one another, to gather together againſt him; they gave their counſel againſt him; they joined together, agreed, and combined againſt him, and diſpoſed their armies, and ſet them in array againſt him: on every ſide from the provinces; Nebuchadnezzar and his auxiliaries, which conſiſted of the people of the provinces all around, who were brought together, and placed round about Jeruſalem, at the ſiege of it; particularly the bands of the Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, 2 Kings xxiv. 1, 2: and ſpread their net over him; which may be expreſſive both of the policy, crafty and ſecret contrivances and deſigns of Jehoiakim's enemies; and of their external force, and hoſtile power, againſt him: he was taken in their pit; which they dug for him, or by the means which they contrived for his ruin, and which they put in execution and effected: the metaphor of a lion is carried on, and the manner of taking one is alluded to, which is commonly in pits, as Pliny[z] ſays; and the Arabs now dig a pit, where lions are obſerved to enter, and covering it over ſlightly with reeds, or ſmall branches of trees, they frequently decoy and catch them[a].

---

[t] ותעל et aſcendere fecit, Pagninus, Montanus, Tigurine verſion.

[u] בחחים in, vel cum hamis, Montanus, Tigurine verſion, Cocceius, Starckius.

[w] כי נוחלה quod infirmatus eſſet, Cocceius, Starckius.

[x] וידע אלמנותיו et cognovit viduas ejus, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius; viduas eorum. Vatablus, Starckius; ſo R. Joſeph Kimchi. Which ſenſe is approved by Guſſetius, Ebr. Comment. p. 312. R. Jonah interprets it, he broke their palaces; ſo Calvin, and ſome in Vatablus, and R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 96. 1.

[y] ויתנו עליו et ediderunt vocem, Vatablus.

℣. 9. And they put him in ward in chains, &c.] Or, in an incloſure; or, in a collar with hooks[b]; put a collar of iron, as is ſaid, about his neck, which had hooks in it, and to thoſe hooks chains were put, in which he was led a priſoner; and it is certain that he was bound in fetters, in order to be carried to Babylon; tho' it is thought he never reached thither, but died by the way, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6: and brought him to the king of Babylon; to Nebuchadnezzar, who came up againſt him with his army of many nations, he having rebelled againſt him; and being taken by his ſoldiers, was brought to him in chains, wherever he was, whether without the gates of Jeruſalem, or at any other place; for it is not certain where he was: however, they brought him into holes; places of confinement, one after another, in his way to Babylon; where, it ſeems, before he came thither he died, and was caſt out on a dunghil, and had no burial, as Jeremiah foretold, ch. xxii. 18, 19: that his voice ſhould no more be heard in the mountains of Iſrael; in the kingdom of Iſrael, to the terror of its inhabitants, threatening them with death, if they did not anſwer his exorbitant demands; nor was it ever heard any more: the alluſion ſtill is to a lion traverſing the mountains, and roaring after its prey, to the terror of other creatures.

℣. 10. Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, &c.] Another ſimile is here made uſe of, relating to the ſame perſons; the ſame that were compared to a lioneſs, are here compared to a vine, as the people of the Jews frequently are, Pſ. lxxx. 8. Iſ. v. 1. and xxvii. 3. Jer. ii. 21. Ezek. xv. 2. and xvii. 6. the ſame perſon is here addreſſed, the then reigning prince Zedekiah, whoſe mother, the Jewiſh people, from whence he ſprung, had been in times paſt, and ſtill was, like a vine; and eſpecially with reſpect to his blood, the royal family from whom he deſcended: the alluſion is to the uſe of blood laid to the roots of vines, by which they became more fruitful. It may have regard, as Calvin thinks, to the original of the Jewiſh nation, who when in their blood, or as ſoon as they were born; that is, as ſoon as they became a nation, were at firſt like a flouriſhing vine. Some render the words, in thy likeneſs; ſo Jarchi, Kimchi, and Ben Melech; to which the Targum agrees, "the congregation of Iſrael, when it did according to the "law, was like to a vine, &c:" planted by the waters; for in thoſe hot countries vines required water, and throve the better for being near unto them, or for being in watry places; this may denote the many privileges, bleſſings, laws, and ordinances, which were for the advantage of the Jewiſh people, both in their civil and eccleſiaſtical ſtate: ſhe was fruitful and full of branches, by reaſon of many waters; grew populous, rich, and wealthy.

℣. 11. And ſhe had rods for the ſcepters of them that bear rule, &c.] That is, many ſprung from her, and roſe up in that nation, who were fit to hold ſcepters, to be kings, rulers, and governors, and were ſuch. So the Targum, "and there were "in her ſtrong rulers, kings that were mighty to "ſubdue kingdoms;" ſuch as David, Solomon, and others after them: or this may refer to the times of Joſiah, and at his death, who left behind him ſeveral ſons, who became kings, beſides other princes of the blood; as his brother Mattaniah, who alſo was king: and ſome even carry this to Zedekiah himſelf, who had many children, who ſeemed to be ſtrong rods, fit for ſcepters, or ſcepter-bearers; that is, to be kings. The alluſion ſeems to be to the ſcepters of the ancients, which were no other than walking-ſticks, cut off of the ſtems or branches of trees, and decorated with gold, or ſtudded with golden nails. Thus Achilles is introduced by Homer[c], as ſwearing by a ſcepter; which being cut off of a trunk of a tree left on the mountains, and ſtripped of its bark and leaves, ſhould never more produce leaves and branches, or ſprout again: and ſuch an one, he obſerves, the Grecian judges, εν ϖαλαμης φορεεσι, carry in their hands. Sometimes they were made of the oleaſter[d], or wild olive, the ſame as a ſhepherd's ſtaff; for what ſhepherds were to their flocks, that were kings to men. And her ſtature was exalted among the thick branches; as the body and trunk of a tree riſes up higher than the branches, which are thickeſt about the middle of it, and ſo more eminent and conſpicuous; thus it was with the nation of the Jews, and the royal family in it, that appeared more glorious and excellent among the nobles and princes of it; or as the Targum expreſſes it, "it was lifted up in its ſtrength above "its own kingdom;" or rather the ſenſe is, that in the days of David and Solomon, and ſome others, it greatly exceeded all the kingdoms of the nations round about it: and ſhe appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches; was ſeen and taken notice of for the multitude of her people, and the grandeur of her ſtate.

℣. 12. But ſhe was plucked up in fury, &c.] This vine being turned into a degenerate plant of a ſtrange vine; or the people of the Jews becoming wicked, diſobedient to God, and diſregarding his laws and ordinances, the wrath of God came upon them, and let in the Aſſyrians among them, who carried off ten tribes at once; and the tribes of Judah and Benjamin not taking warning hereby, but continuing and increaſing in ſinful courſes, great part of them were carried captive into Babylon, with their king Jeconiah, who ſucceeded Jehoiakim before-mentioned; when the kingdom ſeemed to be utterly ruined and deſtroyed, and is what is here referred to: ſhe was caſt down to the ground; a phraſe expreſſive of the entire overthrow of the nation; for a vine, tho' plucked up, yet if immediately planted again, might grow; but being plucked up, and left on the ground, and there lie, there is no hope of it; ſo that this denotes the deſperate caſe of this people at this time, being in captivity. So the Targum paraphraſes both clauſes,

---

[z] Capere eos ardui erat quondam operis, foveiſque maxime. Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 8. c. 16.

[a] Dr. Shaw's Travels, p. 172. Ed. 2.

[b] בסוגר בחחים in clauſtro uncis adhibitis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; in clauſtrum in hamis, Montanus; in clauſtro in hamis, Starckius; in cavea hamis, Cocceius.

[c] Iliad. 1. l. 234, &c.

[d] Paſchal. de coronis, l. 6. c. 19. p. 406, 407.

“ and it was rooted up with ſtrength out of the “ land of the houſe of the Shekinah, and tranſlated “ into another land.” And the eaſt wind dried up her fruit; Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and the Chaldean army, compared to an eaſt wind, becauſe hurtful and pernicious, as that is to trees and fruit, and becauſe Babylon lay north-eaſt of Judea; the people of the land are meant by the fruit of the vine, with their wealth and riches, which were ſeized upon and waſted, or carried into Babylon. So the Targum, “ and a king ſtrong as “ the eaſt wind ſlew her people.” Her ſtrong rods were broken and withered; or, ſtrong rod; the ſingular for the plural; which may deſign king Jeconiah particularly, who with his mother, wives, princes, and officers, and the mighty of the land, even all the mighty men of valour, with the craftſmen and ſmiths, were taken and carried captive, 2 Kings xxiv. 14, 15, 16. The fire conſumed them; the wrath of God, which is often compared to fire, the ſame with fury in the beginning of the verſe; which ſhows that it was for ſin, which had provoked the Lord to wrath and anger, that all this ruin came upon the Jewiſh nation. The Targum is, “ her ſtrong governors removed, and were “ carried captive; and the people which are ſtrong, “ as fire conſumed them.”

ỳ. 13. And now ſhe is planted in the wilderneſs, &c.] In the land of Babylon, which tho' a very fruitful country, yet becauſe of the hardſhips and miſeries which the Jews were expoſed unto in it, was a wilderneſs to them: in a dry and thirſty ground; which is a periphraſis or deſcription of a wilderneſs, Pſ. lxiii. 1. and deſigns the ſame place as before; where the Jews were deprived of their liberties, and had not the opportunities of divine worſhip, the word and ordinances; and were deſtitute of the comforts both of civil and religious life, Unleſs this is to be underſtood of the land of Judea, which by the devaſtation made in it by the king of Babylon, and the multitudes that were carried captive by him out of it, it became like a deſert, a dry and thirſty land; and ſo the vine planted in it, ſignifies the remainder of the people left in it, after this great deſtruction; when it looked like a vine plucked up, and thrown down, and left on the ground, dried up with the eaſt wind, and burnt with fire; and thus it fared with the remnant in a little time after, as the next words ſhow.

ỳ. 14. And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, &c.] By her branches are meant, the reſt of the Jews left in the land; and by the rod of them, king Zedekiah now on the throne, when this prophecy was given out; the fire ſaid to go out of him, ſignifies his rebellion againſt the king of Babylon, his breaking covenant and oath with him, which greatly provoked the Lord, and brought down the fire of his wrath upon him, 2 Kings xxiv. 20: which hath devoured her fruit; deſtroyed the people by ſword, famine, peſtilence, and captivity; yea, the city and temple of Jeruſalem, with the palaces and houſes therein, were burnt with material fire; their king was taken, and his eyes put out; his ſons were ſlain, and all the princes of Judah: ſo that ſhe hath no ſtrong rod to be a ſcepter to rule; none to be king, or ſucceed in the kingdom; and there never was a king after of the family of David, or of the tribe of Judah, till Shiloh the Meſſiah came; tho' there were princes and governors, yet no ſcepter-bearer, no king. The Targum of the whole is, “ and there came people “ who were ſtrong as fire, and becauſe of the ſins “ of her pride, ſlew her people; and there were “ not in her ſtrong rulers, kings that are mighty “ to ſubdue kingdoms.” This is a lamentation, and ſhall be for a lamentation; that is, this prophecy, as the Targum, is a lamentation, or matter of lamentation; what of it had been already fulfilled, occaſioned lamentation; and when the reſt ſhould be fulfilled, it would be the cauſe of more. Lamentable was the caſe of the Jews already, but it would be ſtill more ſo, when all that was foretold of them ſhould be accompliſhed. It denotes the continuance of the ſad eſtate of that people; and perhaps may refer to their preſent condition, which will continue till they are turned to the Lord.

CHAP. XX.

THE prophecy in this chapter is occaſioned by ſome of the elders of Iſrael, coming to enquire of the Lord; when the prophet is bid to tell them, that he would not be enquired of by them. The reaſon of which were their abominations he is ordered to make known unto them, ỳ. 1, 2, 3, 4. and then proceeds the narration of them; firſt of what their fathers committed in Egypt; of God's goodneſs to them, and their ingratitude; how that tho' he promiſed and ſwore that he would bring them from thence, when he charged them to abſtain from the idolatry of that people where they were, nevertheleſs they did not, for which he threatened them with his wrath to conſume them; yet ſuch was his goodneſs as to ſpare them, and bring them out of that land, ỳ. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. being brought out of Egypt into the wilderneſs, the Lord gave them ſtatutes and ordinances to obſerve, particularly ſabbaths, as a ſign between him and them, but theſe they deſpiſed and broke; wherefore the Lord threatened to conſume them in the wilderneſs, and not bring them into the land of Canaan; yet ſuch was his kindneſs and mercy to them, that he did not make an utter end of them in the wilderneſs, ỳ. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. and whereas he exhorted their poſterity not to imitate their parents, but to walk in his ſtatutes and judgments, and obſerve his ſabbaths, yet they would not; which drew out his reſentment againſt them, and he threatened to ſcatter them among the heathens; but for his nameſake, that that might not be polluted among the heathen, he ſpared them, and did not cut them off, only gave them up to do things very pernicious to them, ỳ. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26. and even when they were brought into the land of Canaan, they were guilty of blaſphemy againſt God, and of idolatry on every high hill they ſaw, ỳ. 27, 28, 29. but whereas it might be objected, what is all this to the preſent generation? it is obſerved, that they imitated their fathers, and were guilty of the ſame idolatries, and therefore the Lord would not be enquired of by them, ỳ. 30, 31. and threatens to rule them with fury, and plead with them, as he had pleaded with their fathers in the wilderneſs, ỳ. 32, 33, 34, 35, 36.

nevertheleſs, he ſuggeſts, that there would be a remnant among them, when he ſhould have purged the rebels and tranſgreſſors from them, that he would deal graciouſly with in a covenant-way; who ſhould ſerve him in his holy mountain, where he would require and accept their ſacrifices, in whom he would be ſanctified; and who ſhould know him, and loath themſelves, when made ſenſible of the diſtinguiſhing favours beſtowed upon them, ℣. 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44. and the chapter is cloſed with a prophecy dropped againſt Jeruſalem, denouncing utter deſtruction on it, ℣. 45, 46, 47, 48, 49.

℣. 1. And it came to paſs in the ſeventh year, &c.] Of Zedekiah's reign, and of the captivity of Jeconiah; from whence the dates of Ezekiel's viſions and prophecies are taken, ch. i. 2. and viii. 1. two years, one month, and five days, after Ezekiel began to propheſy, and eleven months and five days after the preceding prophecy: in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month; the month Ab, which anſwers to our July and Auguſt; on this day afterwards Jeruſalem was twice deſtroyed, firſt by the Chaldeans, and then by the Romans: that certain of the elders of Iſrael came to enquire of the Lord; by the prophet; theſe were either ſome of the elders that were carried captive, who came to enquire how long they ſhould continue in this ſtate; or what methods they ſhould uſe to free themſelves from it; or what they ſhould do whilſt they were in it; whether it would be adviſeable that they ſhould conform to the cuſtoms of the heathens among whom they were; or what would be the caſe of thoſe that were left in Judea: or elſe theſe were ſent by Zedekiah to pay the king of Babylon his tax, or to negotiate ſome affair with him relating to the captives; and who took this opportunity of conſulting the Lord by the prophet, what methods ſhould be taken to throw off the yoke, and to know what was the mind of God in it; but theſe things are uncertain, as are alſo the perſons the enquirers; though the Jews ſay [e] they were Ananias, Azarias, and Miſael; which is not probable, ſince they were good men, whereas theſe ſeem to be hypocritical perſons: and ſat before me; with great ſeriouſneſs and devotion ſeemingly, waiting for an anſwer.

℣. 2. Then came the word of the Lord unto me, &c.] While the elders were ſitting before him, by an impulſe upon his mind, dictating things unto him: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 3. Son of man, ſpeak unto the elders of Iſrael, and ſay unto them, &c.] Give them this for an anſwer from me: thus ſaith the Lord God, are ye come to enquire of me? no; not ſeriouſly, heartily, and in good earneſt, determining to abide by the advice and counſel that might be given; or how can you have the face to enquire of me, when guilty of ſuch abominations? as I live, ſaith the Lord God, I will not be enquired of by you; knowing their wickedneſs and hypocriſy, which were deteſtable to him, and therefore would not hear what they had to ſay, nor give them any anſwer, or direct them what they ſhould do. Sad is the caſe of perſons, when the Lord will not be enquired of by them! it is plain he has no favours to beſtow upon them; for when he has, he'll put them upon enquiring of him for them, to do them unto them, ch. xxxvi. 37. this was the caſe of Saul, whom God, when he enquired of him, would not anſwer in any of his uſual ways, 1 Sam. xxviii. 6.

℣. 4. Wilt thou judge them, ſon of man? &c.] Excuſe them, patronize them, defend their cauſe, and plead for them? ſurely thou wilt not; or rather, wilt thou not reprove and correct them, judge and condemn them, for their ſins and wickedneſs? this thou oughteſt to do: wilt thou judge them? this is repeated, to ſhow the vehemency of the ſpeaker, and the duty of the prophet: cauſe them to know the abominations of their fathers; the ſins they committed, which were abominable in themſelves, and rendered them abominable unto God, and what came upon them for them; by which they would be led to ſee the abominable evils, which they alſo had been guilty of; in which they had imitated their fathers, and what they had reaſon to expect in conſequence of them.

℣. 5. And ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Here begins the account of their fathers; of God's unmerited goodneſs to them, and of their ſins and tranſgreſſions againſt him, and how it fared with them: in the day when I choſe Iſrael; to be his peculiar people, above all people on the face of the earth; when he declared his choice of them, and made it appear that he had choſen them, and diſtinguiſhed them, by ſpecial bleſſings and favours beſtowed on them: and lifted up mine hand to the ſeed of the houſe of Jacob; the poſterity of Jacob or Iſrael, to whom the Lord ſwore, that he would do ſuch and ſuch things for them; of which the lifting up the hand was a token; it is a geſture uſed in ſwearing, Dan. xii. 7. and ſo the Targum, "and I ſwore unto them by my word:" and made myſelf known unto them in the land of Egypt; by his name Jehovah; by the prophets he ſent unto them, Moſes, Aaron, and Miraim; and by the miracles he wrought among them: when I lifted up mine hand unto them, ſaying, I am the Lord your God; making promiſe of it, declaring it unto them; confirming it with an oath; ſee Heb. vi. 17, 18.

℣. 6. In the day that I lifted up my hand unto them, to bring them forth of the land of Egypt, &c.] Not only promiſed and ſwore to it, but exerted his power in the miracles he wrought, by bringing plagues upon the Egyptians, to oblige them to let them go forth from thence: into a land that I had eſpied for them; which he had in his eye, and in his heart for them; which he had in his mind provided for them, and was determined in his purpoſes to bring them to; and which he, as it were, looked out for them, and ſingled out as the beſt and moſt ſuitable for them: flowing with milk and honey; a phraſe often uſed, to expreſs the fruitfulneſs of the land of Canaan, and the great plenty of proviſions in it: which is the glory of all lands; that is, either which fertility, ſignified by milk and honey, is the glory of all lands, or makes all countries deſirable, where they are found; or elſe, which land of Canaan being ſo fruitful, is more glorious or deſirable than any other country; it greatly ſurpaſſing all others in its ſituation, ſoil, and climate. The Targum is, "which is the praiſe of all provinces;" that is, was praiſed and commended by the inhabitants of all other provinces, for the plenty in it; which muſt needs be very great, to ſupport ſo large a number of inhabitants in it, and yet its compaſs but ſmall.

---

[e] Seder Olam Rabba apud Abarbinel in loc.

℣. 7. Then I ſaid unto them, &c.] Having promiſed and ſwore to do ſuch great and good things for them; which muſt lay them under an obligation to regard what he ſhould command them: promiſes and bleſſings of goodneſs are great incentives to duty, and lay under great obligation to it: caſt ye away every man the abominations of his eyes; which ſhould be ſo, meaning idols; but which his eyes were taken with, and were lifted up unto, as his gods; tho' they ought to have been rejected with the utmoſt abhorrence, as abominable: and defile not yourſelves with the idols of Egypt; their dunghil-gods, as the word [f] ſignifies; which to worſhip, as it was an abomination to God, was defiling to themſelves; yet theſe they were fond of, and prone to worſhip them; their eyes and their hearts were after them; and they needed ſuch cautions and inſtructions as theſe, backed with the following ſtrong reaſon againſt ſuch idolatry: I am the Lord your God; their creator and benefactor, their covenant-God; the only Lord God, and whom only they ought to ſerve and worſhip; to whom they were under ten thouſand obligations; and who was infinitely above all the idols of Egypt.

℣. 8. But they rebelled againſt me, &c.] All ſin is rebellion againſt God, an act of hoſtility, eſpecially idolatry; it is refuſing homage, and caſting off allegiance to him: and would not hearken unto me; to his word by his prophets; ſo the Targum, “they “rebelled againſt my word, and would not receive “my prophets:” they did not every man caſt away the abominations of his eyes, neither did they forſake the idols of the Gentiles; whence it appears, that there were ſome among them that did give in to the idolatry of the Egyptians; and could not be prevailed upon to relinquiſh it, notwithſtanding the favours ſhown them, and the promiſes made unto them. The Jewiſh writers, Jarchi and Kimchi, ſay, that there were many of theſe wicked men among the Iſraelites, when Moſes was ſent to them; and that they died in the time of the three days darkneſs, ſo that the Egyptians did not ſee their fall, and rejoice at it. Then I ſaid, I will pour out my fury upon them; he threatened them by his prophets, that he would bring down deſerved wrath upon them, like a mighty ſhower of rain: to accompliſh mine anger againſt them; to bring it upon them to the utmoſt, and conſume them with it: in the midſt of the land of Egypt; and ſo not bring them forth from thence, as he had promiſed; but cut them off in it, for their ſins and rebellions.

℣. 9. But I wrought for my name's ſake, &c.] In a way of grace and mercy; did well by them, did what he promiſed to do; not for any merits of theirs, but for his own honour, and the glory of his name: that it ſhould not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were; be ſpoken evil of, which is a polluting it; ſaying, either that he was not true to his word, in not doing what he promiſed; or elſe, that it was not in his power to perform; either of which would reflect diſhonour on his name, and ſo defile it: in whoſe ſight I made myſelf known unto them; by the wonders he wrought; and who by one means or another, became acquainted with the promiſes of God to Iſrael, that he would bring them out of Egypt, and ſettle them in the land of Canaan: wherefore for the honour of his name he exerted his power, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt; as he did, as follows:

℣. 10. Wherefore I cauſed them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, &c.] It was the Lord that brought them out from thence with a mighty hand and ſtretched-out arm; that obliged Pharaoh to let them go, and gave them favour in the eyes of the Egyptians, that they went out unmoleſted by them: and brought them into the wilderneſs; before they went into the land of Canaan; here they had freedom from their bondage, and were in a wonderful manner provided for by the Lord, guided, ſupported, preſerved, and at laſt brought to the promiſed land.

℣. 11. And I gave them my ſtatutes, &c.] The precepts of his law, the law on mount Sinai, of which there were not the like among other nations; nor were they given unto them, but were a ſpecial gift unto Iſrael, and greatly to be valued, Deut. iv. 8. Pſ. cxlvii. 19, 20. and xix. 8, 9, 10: and ſhewed them my judgments; the nature, uſe, and excellency of them, the neceſſity and advantage of obſerving them: the ſame as before, called ſtatutes, becauſe appointed, fixed, and certain, being of inviolable and laſting obligation; and judgments, being according to ſtrict juſtice and equity: theſe, tho' they were originally written on man's heart, yet ſo obliterated by ſin, that there was need not only of their being afreſh written and publiſhed, but of their being taught and made known; or of pointing out the uſe of them, and obligation to them: which if a man do, he ſhall live in them; or by them [g]; in the land of Canaan, enjoying all the bleſſings of a long and happy life: reference ſeems to be had to Lev. xviii. 5. The Targum adds, “in eternal life;” but eternal life is not to be obtained by the works of the law; ſince no man can perfectly obey or fulfil it, but is the pure gift of the grace of God.

℣. 12. Moreover, alſo, I gave them my ſabbaths, &c.] The Targum is, “the days of the ſabbaths;” or ſabbath-days, the ſeventh day-ſabbaths, which recurring throughout the year are many; but beſides theſe, there were the year of remiſſion, or the ſeventh year-ſabbath; and the jubilee year, the great ſabbath of all, once in fifty years; yea, Kimchi thinks the feaſts, ſuch as the paſſover, &c. are included: now theſe are diſtinguiſhed from the ſtatutes and judgments, or the precepts of the law, which were of a moral nature; theſe being ritual and ceremonial, and were peculiar to the Jews, and continued but for a while; however, they were gifts, and valuable ones, of conſiderable uſe and ſignificancy: to be a ſign between me and them; of his being their God, and they being his people; of his favour and good will to them, and of the obligations they were under to him; of his having ſeparated and diſtinguiſhed them from all other nations of the world; theſe ſabbaths being only given to them as a memorial of their deliverance out of Egypt, and as a pledge of their entering into the land of reſt; and of the future reſt to be enjoyed by Chriſt, and in heaven, to all eternity; for theſe were ſhadows of things to come, Col. ii. 16, 17: that they might know that I am the Lord that ſanctify them; ſeparate them from other nations, and by ſuch means and opportunities, begin and carry on the work of ſanctification in them; for the ſabbaths, and the ſervices of them, were uſeful to ſuch purpoſes; as Lord's-days, and the work of them, are now.

---

[f] בגלולי ſtercoreis diis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; ſtercoribus, Piſcator, Cocceius.

[g] בהם per ea, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator; propter ea, Pagninus.

℣. 13. But the houſe of Iſrael rebelled againſt me in the wilderneſs, &c.] Where they were wholly at the mercy of God, entirely dependent upon him; and miracles were wrought every day for the ſuſtentation and preſervation of them from famine, wild beaſts and enemies; yet they rebelled againſt the Lord; provoked him bitterly by their manifold tranſgreſſions, their ingratitude, unbelief and idolatry; and this not a few of them only, but the whole body of the people, the houſe of Iſrael, the whole family, and that for the ſpace of forty years, Pſ. xcv. 9, 10: they walked not in my ſtatutes; did not make them the rule of their walk and converſation, and ſteer the courſe of their lives and actions by them, as they ought to have done: and they deſpiſed my judgments; as not worthy their notice and regard, as uſeleſs and unprofitable; nay, had an averſion to them, and a loathing of them, as the word [h] ſignifies; ſuch is the corrupt and wicked heart of man; it is enmity againſt God and his law, and all that is good: which if a man do, he ſhall even live in them; ſee the note on ℣. 11: and my ſabbaths they greatly polluted; or profaned, or made them common [i]; that is, with other days; by going out for manna on them; by gathering ſticks upon them; by doing their own work, ſpeaking their own words, and ſeeking their own pleaſure, and worſhipping falſe deities: then I ſaid, I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderneſs to conſume them; that they ſhould not enter into the land of Canaan; as the generation that came out of Egypt were conſumed in the wilderneſs, excepting two, as the Lord threatened, Numb. xiv. 35.

℣. 14. But I wrought for my name's ſake, that it ſhould not be polluted before the heathen, &c.] See the note on ℣. 9. who would be ready to ſay it was for want of power, or faithfulneſs, or goodneſs, that he did not bring them into the promiſed land; or there was no ſuch land to bring them to. God's own glory was concerned, and that is his ultimate end in all he does; and is of more weight with him than any other argument whatever: in whoſe ſight I brought them out; from Egypt, into the wilderneſs; this was done publickly in the ſight of the Egyptians, they urging them to be gone.

℣. 15. Yet alſo I lifted up mine hand unto them in the wilderneſs, &c.] Swore unto them, as in ℣. 5, 6: that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them; by promiſe to their fathers, and to them. This is to be underſtood of the generation that came out of Egypt, that received the ill report the ſpies made, and murmured againſt the Lord; wherefore he ſwore in his wrath that they ſhould not enter into his reſt; or he would not bring them into the land of Canaan, ſave Caleb and Joſhua; and accordingly none elſe entered but them, tho' their poſterity did; and ſo both his oath to them, that they ſhould not enter; and his oath to Abraham, that he would give to his ſeed the land, had their accompliſhment, Numb. xiv. 23, 24, 30: a land flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands; ſee the note on ℣. 6.

℣. 16. Becauſe they deſpiſed my judgments, and walked not in my ſtatutes, but polluted my ſabbaths, &c.] Which were juſt cauſes of divine reſentment and anger; ſee the note on ℣. 13: for their heart went after their idols; which they had ſerved in Egypt; and that led them off from the true worſhip and ſervice of God; no man can ſerve two maſters; if he holds to the one, and his heart is towards him, he'll deſpiſe the other; and yet theſe idols were no other, as the word ſignifies, than dunghil-gods, as in ℣. 17. and ſuch are all worldly things, in compariſon of God, that the heart of man is going after.

℣. 17. Nevertheleſs, mine eye ſpared them from deſtroying them, &c.] Utterly, ſo as to leave neither root nor branch; for tho' the whole generation died excepting two, either by the immediate hand of God in wrath, or elſe by ordinary deaths; yet there was a generation raiſed up in their ſtead, to whom mercy was ſhewn: neither did I make an end of them in the wilderneſs; that they ſhould be no more a nation and people; tho' the carcaſes of them that believed not fell in the wilderneſs, and never ſaw the good land, yet their poſterity was ſpared to ſee it, and did.

℣. 18. But I ſaid unto their children in the wilderneſs, &c.] Or, then I ſaid [k]; his judgments and ſtatutes being neglected and deſpiſed by them, and good inſtructions and kind providences being of no uſe unto them; the Lord turns to their poſterity whilſt yet in the wilderneſs: what follows ſeems to refer to thoſe directions, inſtructions and exhortations given in the book of Deuteronomy by Moſes in the plains of Moab; a little before the children of Iſrael went over Jordan into the land of Canaan: walk ye not in the ſtatutes of your fathers, neither obſerve their judgments; they were not only not to imitate their parents in their open ſins and tranſgreſſions of God's law; but they were not to follow them in the obſervance of ſuch rules of worſhip, which were of their own deviſing, and they had formed into a law: this makes greatly againſt ſuch who think it a very heinous ſin to relinquiſh the religion of their anceſtors, or that in which they were brought up; but if this does not appear to be according to the word of God, the ſtatutes and judgments of our fathers ſhould ſtand for nothing, yea ſhould be rejected: nor defile yourſelves with their idols; idolatry, as it is abominable to God, is defiling to men, and renders them loathſome to him; and it being what their fathers practiſed, will not excuſe them; for as it was defiling to their fathers, it is no leſs ſo to their children.

℣. 19. I am the Lord your God, &c.] Not only that had made them and preſerved them, but had choſe them above all people to be his people; who had made a covenant with them, and had diſtinguiſhed them by his favours from all others: walk in my ſtatutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; which he had given unto their fathers, and they had neglected and deſpiſed; thoſe contained in the decalogue, and in the whole book of Deuteronomy, and elſewhere.

℣. 20. And hallow my ſabbaths, &c.] Or keep them holy, by abſtaining from worldly buſineſs on them; by obſerving all the duties of religion, private and public, to be performed on ſuch days: and they ſhall be a ſign between me and you; of preſent and future good; ſee the note on ℣. 12: that ye may know that I am the Lord your God; not only acknowledge him to be the Lord their God, by obſerving his laws, and ſanctifying his ſabbaths; but alſo have a larger experience of his grace and goodneſs, as their covenant-God.

---

[h] מאסו abjecerunt, Pagninus; reprobaverunt, Montanus.

[k] ואמר poſtea dixi, Piſcator.

[i] חללו prophanarunt, Vatablus, Piſcator, Cocceius.

℣. 21. Notwithſtanding, the children rebelled againſt me, &c.] After the death of their fathers, when they were come into the plains of Moab, and juſt going to enter the land; they rebelled againſt the Lord, and greatly provoked him, by joining themſelves to Baal-peor, the idol of Moab, they worſhipped, Numb. xxv. 3: they walked not in my ſtatutes, neither kept my judgments to do them; they did as their fathers before them; tho' they ſaw with their eyes the judgments of God upon them, yet this did not deter them from following their evil ways: which if a man do, he ſhall even live in them; ſee the note on ℣. 13: they polluted my ſabbaths; juſt as their fathers had done, taking no warning by them, and what befel them: then I ſaid, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accompliſh mine anger againſt them in the wilderneſs; twenty and four thouſand died on account of the idolatry of Baal-peor, Numb. xxv. 9.

℣. 22. Nevertheleſs, I withdrew mine hand, &c.] When it was ſtretched out againſt them, as in the above inſtance, and did not utterly conſume them. The Targum is, "and I turned away the ſtroke "of my might:" and wrought for my name's ſake, &c. ſee the notes on ℣. 9, 14.

℣. 23. I lifted up mine hand alſo to them in the wilderneſs, &c.] Swore unto them, as in ℣. 5, 6, 15: that I would ſcatter them among the heathen, and diſperſe them thro' the countries; after they came to be ſettled in the land of Canaan, they ſinning againſt the Lord; which was fulfilled in the times of the Babyloniſh captivity, and in their deſtruction by the Romans; but was threatened and foretold whilſt they were in the wilderneſs, Lev. xxvi. 33. Deut. xxxii. 26. with this compare Pſ. cvi. 26—30.

℣. 24. Becauſe they had not executed my judgments, &c.] Had not done that which was right and juſt, as the Lord commanded them: but had deſpiſed my ſtatutes, and had polluted my ſabbaths; as their fathers had done: and their eyes were after their fathers idols; which they had learned to ſerve in Egypt, or brought with them from thence; theſe the eyes and the hearts of their children were after, as theirs had been; and they were more deſirous, encouraged and emboldened to ſerve them, becauſe they were their fathers; but this would not excuſe their ſin; yea, it was rather an aggravation of it, that they ſhould follow them in ſuch practices, for which they had been often reproved and puniſhed.

℣. 25. Wherefore I gave them alſo ſtatutes that were not good, &c.] Yea, were very bad; not the moral law, and the ſtatutes of it; for that is holy, juſt and good, tho' the killing letter and miniſtration of condemnation and death to the tranſgreſſors of it; indeed thoſe laws were both good, and bad to different perſons, as Abendana obſerves; good to thoſe that obſerved them, but not good to thoſe that tranſgreſſed them, the iſſue of which was death: rather theſe were the ſtatutes and rites of the ceremonial law, which were not in their own nature good; nor did they ariſe from the nature and holineſs of God, but from his will; and tho' very good and uſeful under the legal diſpenſation, until the Meſſiah came, eſpecially when attended to by faith, and with a view to him; yet had the ſanction of death to many of them, that a man could not live by them: but it may be, the puniſhments inflicted on them for their ſins, by the plague, by fire, and by ſerpents, are meant; which may be called ſtatutes and judgments, becauſe ordered and appointed by the Lord, and according to juſtice: or, as many, both Jews and Chriſtians, think, the idolatrous laws, uſages and cuſtoms of other nations, the traditions of their fathers, their wicked laws and ſtatutes, and their own; which being left to a reprobate mind, they were ſuffered to walk in, to their hurt and ruin; which is ſometimes the ſenſe of the word give; and ſo here, he gave, that is, he permitted them to obſerve ſuch ſtatutes; and this ſenſe is countenanced and confirmed by the following verſe; to which agrees Jarchi's note, "I delivered them "into the hand of their imagination (or corrupt "nature) to ſtumble at their iniquity;" ſee Rom. i. 28. Kimchi interprets them, of laws, decrees, tribute and taxes impoſed upon them by their enemies that conquered them. The Targum is, "and "I alſo, when they rebelled againſt my word, and "would not obey my prophets, caſt them far "off, and delivered them into the hands of their "enemies; and they went after their fooliſh imagination, and made decrees which were not "right:" and judgments, whereby they ſhould not live; yea, which were deadly and deſtructive to them; which brought ruin, deſtruction, and death upon them; for more is deſigned than is expreſſed: this was the effect of following the cuſtoms of the nations, and of walking in the ſtatutes of their fathers, and of their own; whereas, had they walked according to the judgments and ſtatutes of God, moral and ceremonial, they had lived comfortably and proſperouſly.

℣. 26. And I polluted them in their own gifts, &c.] Suffered them to defile themſelves; or declared them to be, and treated them as, polluted perſons, in the gifts and ſacrifices which they offered to idols, particularly their firſt-born, as the next clauſe explains it: in that they cauſed to paſs thro' the fire, all that openeth the womb; this very likely they did, when they ſacrificed to Baal-peor, the ſame with Molech, Numb. xxv. 3: that I might make them deſolate; their families, by ſtripping them of their children, their firſt-born and ſtrength: to the end that they might know that I am the Lord; a righteous God, in puniſhing men for ſin, in a way it deſerves. Some intepret this, not of cauſing the firſt-born to paſs thro' fire to an idol; but of cauſing them to paſs, or of ſetting them apart, to the Lord, according to the law in Exod. xiii. 12. where the ſame word is uſed as here; and the ſenſe is, that God declared them to be impure in, or with all their gifts, by commanding them to cauſe their firſt-born to paſs to him, which they were obliged to redeem; which ſenſe is approved of by Guſſetius[l]; and ſo Abendana, taking the words to refer to both, gives this ſenſe of them, "I pronounced them impure, and removed them far "from me, inſtead of ſanctifying them; becauſe "they cauſed every one that opens the womb to "paſs from me, whom I commanded to give to "me for holineſs, but they have given them to "idolatry;" rather according to Braunius[m], the words may be underſtood of God's rejecting, and cauſing the firſt-born to paſs from him, and not ſuffering them to offer gifts and ſacrifices unto him; which may be meant by pronouncing them impure, or polluting them in their gifts; this was after the worſhip of the golden calf; when he took Aaron and his ſons in their room.

---

[l] Ebr. Comment. p. 576, 939.

[m] Selecta Sacra, l. 4. c. 11. p. 522.

℣. 27. Therefore, ſon of man, ſpeak unto the houſe of Iſrael, and ſay unto them, &c.] The elders of Iſrael, ℣. 1. who came in the name of the whole body, and repreſented them, and by whom the following meſſage is ſent unto them; or the prophet by them might ſpeak unto them, as he is ordered: thus ſaith the Lord God, yet in this your fathers have blaſphemed me; beſides what they did in Egypt, and in the wilderneſs, when they were come into the land of Canaan, ſuch was their ingratitude, that to all the reſt they added this wickedneſs, to ſacrifice to other gods on every high hill, and in all thick trees; which was a blaſpheming the name of God, and caſting reproach upon him: in that they have committed a treſpaſs againſt me; idolatry is meant, deſcribed in the next verſe; and which they committed, not thro' ignorance and weakneſs, but voluntarily, againſt light and knowledge; and obſtinately, notwithſtanding all the remonſtrances made unto them, and cautions, exhortations and reproofs given them.

℣. 28. For when I had brought them into the land, &c.] Brought them out of Egypt thro' the wilderneſs into the land of Canaan, thro' ſo many difficulties, by ſuch diſplays of power, goodneſs and truth: for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them; which he ſwore he would give unto them, and which he did, and ſo fulfilled his word and oath; and which was an inſtance of his bounty and goodneſs, and not owing to any merits of theirs: then they ſaw every high hill, and all the thick trees; as ſoon as they had got into the land, and took a view of it, they at once fixed their eyes upon the high hills and groves, as proper places to ſet up their idols on, and perform idolatrous worſhip in; in the one place more openly, and in the other more ſecretly, as they might judge proper and neceſſary; in which they imitated the heathens, who had their temples, idols, altars and ſacrifices amidſt groves and thick trees. So Herodotus [n] relates of the temple of Diana at Bubaſtis in Egypt, that at the entrance of it there were rivulets from the Nile which flowed about it here and there, ſhaded with trees;—and within were a vaſt grove of the largeſt trees, planted about the temple; and which he afterwards calls trees reaching to heaven: and they offered there their ſacrifices; either to the God of Iſrael, as ſome of them ſometimes did, and which was ſinful; for tho' they might offer ſacrifices, as were commanded, to a right object, yet not in the proper place: or rather to their idols; and ſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions, to their own gods; which they had made to themſelves, and had choſe and approved of: and there they preſented the provocation of their offering; or their offering which provoked the wrath of God againſt them; being ſuch as either he had not appointed, or was offered in a wrong place, or to a wrong object; than which nothing could be more provoking to him; it was giving his glory to another, and his praiſe to graven images: there alſo they made their ſweet ſavour; incenſe to their deities. The Targum is, the worſhip of their ſacrifices: and poured out there their drink-offerings; libations of wine: all kind of ſacrifices were offered up here by them; which ſhews to what lengths in idolatry they ran, and how dreadfully guilty they were.

℣. 29. Then I ſaid unto them, &c.] By his prophets that he ſent unto them: what is the high place whereunto you go? what is the name of it? what is the uſe of it? to what end do you go there? is there not an altar built by my order and command to ſacrifice upon? is this high place better than that? does it anſwer a better end and purpoſe? and the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day; or an high place. The Septuagint alſo leaves the word untranſlated, and calls it Abama; and the Arabic verſion, Abbana; ſo they called their altars after the Gentiles, by whom they are called βωμοι; nor were they aſhamed of it, but perſiſted in ſo calling them, from the firſt uſe of them to the preſent time. Theſe are often called Bamah and Bamot in the books of Kings. Jarchi ſays it is a term of reproach, as if it was ſaid, Bamah—in what is it to be accounted of?

℣. 30. Wherefore ſay unto the houſe of Iſrael, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] To the elders, as before: are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? they were: and commit ye whoredom after their abominations? ſpiritual adultery; that is, idolatry, in the ſame abominable manner? they did, as appears by what follows:

℣. 31. For when ye offer your gifts, &c.] And ſacrifices to idols. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, the firſt-fruits of your gifts; it may deſign their firſt-born; ſee ℣. 26. as the following clauſe ſeems to explain it: when ye make your ſons to paſs thro' the fire; or between two fires to Moloch, as their fathers had done before them: ye pollute yourſelves with all your idols, even unto this day; by worſhipping idols, or dunghil-gods, as the word ſignifies, as often obſerved; they defiled themſelves with thoſe filthy things, which they continued to do to that very day, and ſo became more and more polluted; and were as their fathers had been, and therefore muſt expect to be uſed in like manner: and ſhall I be inquired of by you, O houſe of Iſrael? can you think that I will ſuffer you to come and inquire of me? or to make your requeſts to me? or can you hope to have an anſwer from me? at leaſt, a favourable one, ſuch as you could wiſh for? as I live, ſaith the Lord God, I will not be inquired of by you; ſo confirming again with an oath, what he had before declared, ℣. 3. wherefore they might aſſure themſelves that they would not be acceptable to him, neither their perſons nor petitions, or be regarded by him.

℣. 32. And that which cometh into your mind, ſhall not be at all, &c.] What they had contrived in their own breaſts, and laid a plan of, and would gladly have brought about, ſhould be fruſtrated, take no effect, and come to nothing: that ye ſay, we will be as the heathen; live without God; not be in ſubjection to him, or under his government, or be called by his name, or attend to his word, worſhip and ordinances; but join ourſelves to them; enter into alliance, and inter-marry with them; carry on trade and commerce with them, and embrace the ſame religion; and then we ſhall proſper as they do, as well as no more incur the reproach of ſingularity or preciſeneſs in religion: as the families of the countries; being incorporated into them, dwelling with them, and joining with them in the ſame exerciſes of religious worſhip: to ſerve wood and ſtone; images made of wood and ſtone: Strange! that a people that had a revelation from God, and ſuch an experience of his power and goodneſs, ſhould ever form ſuch a ſcheme, or once think of entring into ſuch meaſures, ſo groſly abſurd and ſcandalous.

---

[n] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 138.

℣. 33. As I live, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The form of an oath; the Lord ſwears by his own life, uſed more than once before; it ſuppoſes ſomething of moment, and the certain performance of it: ſurely with a mighty hand, and with a ſtretched-out arm; from which none can eſcape, and which none can withſtand: and with fury poured out; like floods of water, in a violent haſty ſhower of rain; it denotes the abundance of divine wrath, and the ſudden and ſure execution of it: will I rule over you; not in a gentle and merciful way, but with great rigour and ſeverity; tho' they had contrived to withdraw themſelves from under his dominion and government, by joining with the Gentiles, and conforming to their laws and cuſtoms, and complying with their religious rites and idolatrous practices; yet they ſhould not be able to accompliſh their deſigns; they ſhould be ſo far from being free men, as they promiſed themſelves; that whereas they did not chuſe to be his voluntary and faithful ſubjects, he would keep a watchful eye and a ſtrict hand over them as rebels, and rule them with a rod of iron, as well as with a ſceptre of righteouſneſs; and would be king over them, and they ſhould be ſubject to his authority, whether they would or no.

℣. 34. I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries, wherein ye are ſcattered, &c.] The Egyptians, Ammonites, and others; where they went for ſafety and protection, and among whom they intended to ſettle, and had formed a ſcheme to caſt off the yoke of God and his worſhip, and be no more a nation or people under his government; but mix themſelves with theſe nations, and become a part of them, and join with them in all matters, civil, commercial and religious; but here the Lord will not ſuffer them to continue, but will bring them out from hence: with a mighty hand, and a ſtretched-out arm, and with fury poured out; as before, ℣. 33. tho' ſome think this is to be underſtood as a favour to the Iſraelites, who ſhould be brought out of the countries of the idolatrous Gentiles by mighty power, and with marks of wrath and diſpleaſure upon the nations; deſigning hereby the good of his people, that they might be reduced to his government, and live happily and comfortably under him, and not be deſtroyed and loſt among the nations.

℣. 35. And I will bring you into the wilderneſs of the people, &c.] Into Babylon, and into captivity there, which they thought to avoid by fleeing to other countries. Some think that thoſe inhoſpitable nations are meant, Syro-media, Caſpia, Hyrcania, Iberia, and others, into which many of the Jews were brought, who ſought to live elſewhere than at Babylon; and others are of opinion, that this reſpects the time of their return from Babylon to their own land, between which lay a wilderneſs, here referred to; but perhaps the prophecy reſpects the preſent ſtate of the Jews, in which they have continued ever ſince their deſtruction by the Romans; thro' whom they have been brought among the ſeveral nations of the world, particularly the Roman empire, compared to a wilderneſs; and repreſented as a populous one, as it is, and in which the beaſt or antichriſt now is; ſee Rev. xvii. 3: and there will I plead with you face to face; judge, condemn, and take vengeance, or inflict puniſhment on them in the moſt public manner, as he now does. The Targum is, "and I will take vengeance on you "face to face."

℣. 36. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderneſs of the land of Egypt, &c.] Which was over-againſt the land of Egypt, near unto it, on the borders of it; and into which the people immediately went, when they came out of Egypt, and paſſed the Red-ſea; and the Arabic verſion is, "when I brought them out of the land of Egypt." This refers to the controverſy the Lord had with the Iſraelites, for murmuring upon the report of the ſpies; and the ſentence he paſſed upon them, that they ſhould not enter into the land of Canaan, but their carcaſes ſhould fall in the wilderneſs, Numb. xiv. 29, 30: ſo will I plead with you, ſaith the Lord God; take vengeance on them, as the Targum; who diſbelieve the Meſſiah, reject him, and will not have him to reign over them; theſe are now puniſhed, by a diſperſion of them in the wilderneſs of the nations, where they die and periſh, and ſee not their own land.

℣. 37. And I will cauſe you to paſs under the rod, &c.] That is, ſuch whom God will not take vengeance on, and ſhall not die in the wilderneſs of the people; but whom he will have mercy on, and ſhew favour to, and bring at length into their own land; theſe he indeed will bring under the rod of correction and chaſtiſement, by which they ſhall be brought to a ſenſe of ſin, a confeſſion of it, humiliation for it, and to ſeek to Chriſt for ſalvation from it; or under the rod of his word, the rod of his ſtrength, he ſends out of Zion the goſpel, the power of God unto ſalvation; by which they ſhall be brought to agree unto, and comply with, the way of ſalvation by Chriſt; to ſubmit to his righteouſneſs; to embrace the doctrines of the goſpel, and be ſubject to the ordinances of it: or the alluſion is to ſhepherds, in taking an account of their flocks, or at the tithing of them, who ſtrike and mark them with their rod, Lev. xxvii. 32. Jer. xxxiii. 13. and thus, as the Lord has in election diſtinguiſhed his ſheep from others, taken an exact account of them, and ſet his ſeal or mark of foreknowledge on them; ſo in effectual vocation he ſeparates them from others, takes ſpecial knowledge of them, and ſets his mark of ſanctification on them. This will be the caſe of the converted Jews in the latter day: and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant; or, the diſcipline of the covenant, as the Syriac verſion; the ſame with the rod of correction, being what is provided in covenant for the good of the covenant-ones. This covenant is the covenant of grace; the bond of which are not faith, repentance and new obedience; for theſe are parts and bleſſings of the covenant; nor any outward ordinance; not circumciſion formerly, nor baptiſm and the Lord's-ſupper now; which perſons may ſubmit to, and yet not be in the covenant: but it deſigns that which makes the covenant firm, ſure and laſting; which are the everlaſting love of God, from whence it ſprings; his unchangeable counſel, according to which it proceeds; his ſolemn oath, that it ſhall never be removed; his faithfulneſs, which will not ſuffer it to be made void; and his power, which will accompliſh every article of it; and the blood of Chriſt, which ratifies and confirms it. So Kimchi interprets it, "I will bind you in a covenant "that ye ſhall not go out of it for ever:" or it is that which binds perſons, or lays them under obligation to love, fear and ſerve the Lord; and that is the love of God and Chriſt, and the exceeding great and precious promiſes of the covenant; and now into this ſure, firm and obliging covenant the Lord has brought all his choſen ones in eternity, when it was firſt made with Chriſt; and into which he may be ſaid to bring them in time, as he will the converted Jews, when he manifeſts it to them, and applies the bleſſings and promiſes of it; ſhews them it, and their intereſt in it.

℣. 38. And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that tranſgreſs againſt me, &c.] All men are enemies, and enmity itſelf againſt God; and every ſin is an act of hoſtility and rebellion againſt him; every tranſgreſſion and violation of his law is a caſting off of allegiance to him, and a trampling upon and deſpiſing his legiſlative power and authority; wherefore rebels and tranſgreſſors of his law are put together; the one being explanative of the other. The people of the Jews were always more or leſs a rebellious people; ſo they were in the times of Moſes, and all the while that he was with them, and were notoriouſly ſo in the times of Ezekiel; and therefore are often ſo deſcribed in this book; but they were not all ſo; ſuch as were, the Lord here declares that he would ſingle them out, as goats from among his ſheep he brought under the rod, and purge them as chaff from the wheat; that ſinners in Zion ſhould be no more in the congregation of the righteous: I will bring them forth out of the country where they ſojourn; or countries; wherever they have been pilgrims and ſojourners, as they now are; wherever they are; it looks as if a little before or when, the remnant of God, according to the election of his grace, ſhall be converted, that the reſt ſhall be collected together into ſome one place, and be deſtroyed as rebels: and they ſhall not enter into the land of Iſrael; when the converted Jews ſhall; an emblem of carnal Iſraelites, wicked profeſſors, being not admitted into the new Jeruſalem, and being excluded the kingdom of heaven: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; that knows all things, can do all things, and will faithfully and punctually perform all that is promiſed, threatened, or predicted.

℣. 39. As for you, O houſe of Iſrael, &c.] The then preſent houſe of Iſrael, and the elders of it, who were upon the ſpot with the prophet: go ye, ſerve ye every one his idols; or dunghil-gods; ſince they liked not to ſerve the true God: this is not giving them leave to ſerve idols, or approving their idolatrous practices; but is ſaid ironically, as Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve, who compare it with Eccl. xi. 9: and hereafter alſo, if ye will not hearken unto me; not only ſerve them now, but for the future; ſeeing ye chuſe not to hearken to my voice, to obey my laws, and to worſhip me, and me only; for it ſuggeſts, that it was better to attend to the ſervice of the one, or of the other, and not halt between two opinions; but either, if the God of Iſrael was the true God, then ſerve him, and him only; but if Baal, or any other heathen deity was ſo, then ſerve them, and keep ſerving them: but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols; to worſhip him along with them, and them along with him; to pretend they worſhipped him in them, and offered their gifts and ſacrifices to him thro' them; and ſo made uſe of his name as a cover to their idolatrous practices: this was a polluting his name, and was abominable to him.

℣. 40. For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Iſrael, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Alluding to mount Zion, or Moriah, on which the temple was built, on the higheſt part of the land of Iſrael, as Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve; here the goſpel-church is meant, comparable to a mountain, for its firmneſs and durableneſs; ſaid to be a holy one, becauſe conſiſting of holy perſons, performing holy worſhip to an holy God; and repreſented as high, being eſtabliſhed, as it will be in the latter day, upon the top of the mountains, and be very viſible and glorious: there ſhall all the houſe of Iſrael, all of them in the land ſerve me; when all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, or converted, and the rebels and tranſgreſſors being purged away from them; they ſhall join themſelves to the goſpel-church, and in it ſerve the Lord, according to the rules of the goſpel, and the ordinances of it; even all of them that ſhall enter into their own land, and dwell in it; the reſt being not admitted to it: there will I accept them; their perſons, and their ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe being offered up, in the name and faith of Chriſt, that altar which ſanctifies every gift; ſee Iſ. lvi. 7: and there will I require your offerings, and the firſt-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things; meaning the offering up of their perſons, bodies and ſouls, as a living, holy and acceptable ſacrifice, which he would require of them as their reaſonable ſervice; together with all holy duties of prayer, praiſe and beneficence; ſacrifices with which God is well pleaſed thro' Chriſt and his ſacrifice; and which are the only ſacrifices he now requires under the goſpel-diſpenſation; for ceremonial ones he does not require, ſeek after, enjoin or accept; theſe are done away, and made void by the ſacrifice of his ſon; only it may be obſerved, as in other places and prophecies of goſpel-times, that New Teſtament-worſhip is expreſſed by the phraſes, forms and uſages ſuited to the Old Teſtament; ſee Pſ. xl. 6.

℣. 41. I will accept you with your ſweet ſavour, &c.] Their ſins being expiated by the ſacrifice of Chriſt, which is unto God for a ſweet ſmelling ſavour; and their perſons being clothed with the robe of his righteouſneſs, and the garments of his ſalvation, all whoſe garments ſmell of myrrh, aloes and caſſia; the goſpel being the ſavour of life unto life unto them; and the ſavour of the knowledge of Chriſt being communicated to them by it; and alſo the ſavour of his good ointments, the graces of the Spirit, being imparted to them: when I bring you out of the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been ſcattered; which will not only be locally and literally true of them, when the Jews are converted, that they ſhall be collected together out of all nations where they now are diſperſed, and return to their land; but ſpiritually alſo, they being effectually called out from among the men of the world, and to leave their former company, cuſtoms and luſts: and I will be ſanctified in you before the heathen; the Gentiles, chriſtian men; who will take notice of the power, and grace, and goodneſs of God, in the converſion and reſtoration of them, and praiſe and glorify him on account of it; and when he will be viſibly feared, ſerved and worſhipped in the midſt of them.

℣. 42. And ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] The one only Jehovah, that keeps covenant; performs promiſes; is faithful to his word; is kind, gracious and merciful, as well as mighty and powerful; and all this they ſhall experimentally know, and publickly own and acknowledge: when I ſhall bring you into the land of Iſrael; which will be the Lord's doing; his hand and his power will be ſignally ſeen in it: this is one of the places in prophecy, which clearly aſſerts, that the Jews, when converted, ſhall be brought into their own land again: into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand, to give it to your fathers; that is, which he ſwore he would give unto them.

℣. 43. And there ye ſhall remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled, &c.] Their rejection of the Meſſiah; their continued diſbelief of him; their obſtinacy, hardneſs, and impenitence; their adherence to the traditions of the elders, to the making void the word of God; together with the moſt flagrant immoralities that ever any people were guilty of, and which are of a very defiling nature, and made them abominable in the ſight of God; theſe now the Spirit of God convincing them of, they'll remember with ſhame and confuſion, and mourn over them in an evangelical way; and the more ſo, when they ſhall find themſelves reinſtated in their own land, enjoying all civil and religious privileges and liberties under Chriſt their king, whom they will now know, own, and ſerve; ſee Zech. xii. 10: and ye ſhall loath yourſelves in your own ſight, for all your evils that ye have committed; againſt God and Chriſt; againſt the law of the one, and the goſpel of the other. Sin is a loathſome thing to God; and it is ſo to his people, when they are thoroughly convinced of it, and they loath themſelves for it; and never more ſo, than when they have the greateſt inſtances and cleareſt diſcoveries of the love and grace of God in Chriſt to them; then they bluſh, are aſhamed of themſelves and their ſins; and are confounded, when they perceive the Lord is pacified towards them, and their ſins are forgiven for Chriſt's ſake: ſin never appears more odious and loathſome, than when viewed in the glaſs of pardoning love; ſee Ezra ix. 6, 8. Ezek. xvi. 63.

℣. 44. And ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] Jehovah their righteouſneſs, their Redeemer and Saviour, Lord and King; they ſhall know Chriſt and him crucified, and God in Chriſt as their covenant-God; ſee the note on ℣. 42: when I have wrought with you for my name's ſake; in the thorough converſion of them; not that there is any co-operation with God in that work; miniſters indeed are co-workers, not as efficients, but inſtruments; perſons converted are wholly paſſive in the firſt work of converſion or regeneration; and in all after-actings move as they are acted, turn being turned, walk and run being drawn, not being able to do any thing as of themſelves: but the phraſe ſignifies a working in favour of them; doing great things for them, and good things in them, well pleaſing in his ſight, and good unto them; plucking them as brands out of the burning; taking them out of the hands of ſatan; calling them out of darkneſs into light, and bringing them out of bondage into liberty; and all this for his own name ſake, of his own will and pleaſure, according to his abundant mercy, and for the glory of his rich grace: not according to your wicked ways, not according to your corrupt doings, O ye houſe of Iſrael, ſaith the Lord God; had he, they muſt have periſhed in their ſins, and been miſerable for ever; but he neither proceeds according to the bad works, nor the good works of men, in calling and converting them, but according to his own purpoſe and grace, 2 Tim. i. 9. their evil works don't hinder his grace when he's reſolved to work, and their good works don't merit it; he acts freely, and in a ſovereign way.

℣. 45. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying,] Or the word of prophecy, as the Targum. Here begins a new prophecy, and moſt properly a new chapter ſhould here begin; for the next chapter is of the ſame argument with this, and an explanation of it, and an enlargement upon it. And here Ben Melech begins one; and ſo Junius and Tremellius, Piſcator, and Caſtalio.

℣. 46. Son of man, ſet thy face toward the ſouth, &c.] The land of Judea, which lay ſouth of Babylon, where the prophet now was, as Babylon lay north of that, Jer. i. 14. and iv. 6. to ſet his face, was to ſpeak freely and boldly, with courage and conſtancy, and without fear and dread, to the inhabitants of it; and as a token of the Lord's face being ſet againſt them for their ſins. The Targum is, "take a prophecy towards the way of the "ſouth." And drop thy word toward the ſouth; or propheſy, as the Targum; doctrine or prophecy being compared to rain, and the delivery of it to the dropping or diſtilling of rain; which falls gently, gradually, ſucceſſively, and oftentimes with weight, and to good purpoſe; ſee Deut. xxxii. 2. which metaphorical phraſe is explained in the next clauſe: and propheſy againſt the foreſt of the ſouth field; the city of Jeruſalem, in the land of Judea, which was very full of people, as a foreſt of trees; but theſe barren and unfruitful, as the trees of the wood generally are; and a rendezvous of wicked perſons, comparable to beaſts of prey, that haunt in woods and foreſts.

℣. 47. And ſay to the foreſt of the ſouth, &c.] To the inhabitants of Jeruſalem and Judea: hear the word of the Lord; attend to it, and receive it, believe it, and take warning from it: thus ſaith the Lord God, behold, I will kindle a fire in thee; in Jeruſalem; meaning that he would ſend great calamities among them, the ſword of the Chaldean army, famine, and peſtilence; and that at laſt it ſhould be burnt with fire, and the remainder of the inhabitants be carried captive: and it ſhall devour every green tree, and every dry tree; all ſorts of perſons ſhould be conſumed by one or other of the above calamities, high and low, rich and poor, good and bad; and if good men ſhould ſuffer, comparable to green trees, which fire will not ſo eaſily burn, not being fit fuel for it; then much more bad men, who were by far the moſt numerous, comparable to dry trees, and ſo fit fuel for the flames, and eaſily conſumed thereby: the flaming flame ſhall not be quenched; or, the flame, flame; or, the flame of flame [o]; ſignifying either the ſucceſſion of theſe calamities one after another; or the force and ſtrength of them, which ſhould not be abated, until the ruin of the city was completed: and all faces from the ſouth to the north, ſhall be burnt therein; which ſome underſtand of an utter deſtruction of the Jews, either by ſword, famine, and peſtilence, or by captivity from Jeruſalem or Judea unto Babylon; but rather the meaning is, that all the inhabitants thereof ſhould ſuffer, from one end of it to the other, from Beer-ſheba to Dan, the country lying in ſuch a poſition.

℣. 48. And all fleſh ſhall ſee, that I the Lord have kindled it, &c.] Not only the inhabitants of Jeruſalem and Judea ſhould ſee the hand of the Lord in their deſtruction; but even all the neighbouring nations, the caſe was ſo clear and plain, the matter ſo viſible: it ſhall not be quenched; no ſtop put to it by all the art and power of man; ſo that it was a clear point, that it was the Lord's doing.

---

[o] להבת שלהבת flamma flamma, pro flamma continua & perpetua, Vatablus; flamma inflammatiſſima, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; flamma flammæ, Montanus, Piſcator.

℣. 49. Then ſaid I, ah, Lord God, &c.] The Septuagint verſion is, by no means, Lord, Lord; that is, let me not be ſent on ſuch an errand; at leaſt, let it not be delivered in ſuch figurative terms; or let not ſuch a general calamity befal the people. The Targum is, "receive my prayer, "O Lord God;" the prophet here either complains of the uſage he had met with after delivering the above prophecy; or rather, of what he had met with before, and which he expected again; and therefore deſired either that he might be excuſed delivering the prophecy; or however, that it might be delivered not in obſcure and enigmatical terms, but in plain and eaſy ones: they ſay of me, doth he not ſpeak parables? as before, of a lion and her whelps; and of a vine, and its rods and branches, ch. xix. and now here again, of a fire, and a foreſt, and trees of it, green and dry; things not eaſily underſtood, and ſo not attended to and regarded; as if they ſhould ſay, this man brings us nothing but parables, riddles, and enigma's, and ſuch ſort of unintelligible ſtuff, not worth minding; and rather appears as a man delirious and mad, than a prophet. Wherefore Ezekiel ſeems to deſire, that he might be ſent to them with a meſſage more plainly expreſſed; and which might excite their attention and regard, and not expoſe him to their ridicule and contempt; and accordingly we find it is explained and expreſſed in clearer terms in the next chapter.

CHAP. XXI.

THIS chapter contains an explanation of a prophecy in the latter part of the preceding chapter; and a new one, concerning the ſword of the Chaldeans, and the deſtruction of the Jews and Ammonites by it. The prophecy of the fire in the foreſt is explained, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. upon which the prophet is directed to ſhow his concern at it by ſighing, in order to awaken the attention of the people to it, ℣. 6, 7. then follows a prophecy of a very ſharp and bright ſword, which ſhould do great execution upon the people and princes of Iſrael; and therefore the prophet, in order to affect them with it, is bid to howl and cry, and ſmite on his thigh, and ſmite his hands together, and the Lord ſays he would do ſo; all which is deſigned to ſet forth the greatneſs of the calamity, and the diſtreſs, ℣. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. next, the prophet is ordered to repreſent the king of Babylon as at a place where two ways met, and as at a loſs which way to take, and as determined by divination to go to Jeruſalem firſt, ℣. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. and then Zedekiah, the then reigning prince of Iſrael, has his doom pronounced on him, and he is ordered to be ſtript of his regalia; and an intimation is given, that there ſhould be no more king over Iſrael of the houſe of David, until the Meſſiah came, ℣. 25, 26, 27. and the chapter is concluded with a prophecy of the deſtruction of the Ammonites in their own land, which ſhould certainly be, tho' their diviners might ſay the contrary, ℣. 28, 29, 30, 31, 32.

℣. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying,] Upon the above excuſe or complaint about ſpeaking in parables; wherefore the prophet is ordered to ſpeak in plainer language to the people. It is very probable, that the prophet delivered the prophecy recorded in the latter part of the preceding chapter, in the figurative terms in which he received it; and he here is bid to explain it to the people, or to repeat it to them in clearer expreſſions.

℣. 2. Son of man, ſet thy face toward Jeruſalem, &c.] Which ſhows that this city was meant by the ſouth, ch. xx. 46: and drop thy word toward the holy places; which alſo are meant by the ſouth in the paſſage referred to, even the holy land, holy city, and holy temple; or the temple itſelf is only meant, with the courts adjoining to it; or as conſiſting of three parts, as Kimchi, the porch, the temple, and the oracle; or the outward court, the holy place, and the holy of holies; and it may reſpect all other places for ſacred worſhip, as their ſynagogues, both in city and country; which were not to be ſpared any more than the temple, nor were they, Pſ. lxxiv. 7, 8. Jarchi thinks, that the deſtruction both of the firſt and ſecond temple is here intended; and which ſenſe Kimchi alſo mentions. And propheſy againſt the land of Iſrael; by which it appears, that this is intended by the foreſt of the ſouth field; even the numerous inhabitants of it in general, as well as the city of Jeruſalem, ch. xx. 46.

℣. 3. And ſay to the land of Iſrael, &c.] The inhabitants of it, ſignified by the foreſt of the ſouth field, ch. xx. 47: thus ſaith the Lord, behold, I am againſt thee; and ſad it is to have the Lord againſt a people, a nation, a city, or a family, or a particular perſon; for there's no contending with him, or ſtanding before him; there is always a reaſon for it, it is for ſin, when God is againſt a people, even his own profeſſing people: and will draw forth my ſword out of his ſheath; bring the Chaldean army out of Babylon; which interprets what is meant by the fire he would kindle in the land of Iſrael, ch. xx. 47. namely, the ſword of the enemy, which he would bring upon it; or war, with all its deſolating train of judgments: and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked; meant by the green and dry tree, ch. xx. 47. who though they ſhall not periſh everlaſtingly together, yet may fall together in temporal calamities; the one may be chaſtized, and the other condemned; or the one be carried captive for their good, as Ezekiel and Daniel, &c. and others be cut off by ſword and famine; and ſuch as were captives, never the better for their captivity. The Targum is, "I "will remove out of thee thy righteous ones, that "I may deſtroy thy wicked ones." Some think that only ſuch who were righteous in appearance, or in their own ſight, are here meant. R. Saadiah Gaon, as Kimchi quotes him, interprets them of ſuch as were righteous to Baal, and ſerved him continually, in diſtinction from ſuch as were wicked to him, and did not ſerve him continually; and both were wicked before the Lord, and therefore juſtly cut off.

℣. 4. Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, &c.] Some by the ſword, ſome by famine, ſome by peſtilence, and others by captivity; and upon the whole, none ſpared, but the land left deſolate: therefore ſhall my ſword go forth out of his ſheath againſt all fleſh, from the ſouth to the north; the Chaldean army ſhall go out of their own land againſt all the inhabitants of Judea, from Beer-ſheba to Dan; this explains what is meant by all faces being burnt from the ſouth to the north, ch. xx. 47. namely, the general deſtruction of the Jews by the Chaldeans.

℣. 5. That all fleſh may know that I the Lord have drawn forth my ſword out of his ſheath, &c.] The ſame with kindling a fire in Judea, ch. xx. 48. ſee the note there: it ſhall not return any more; that is, into its ſheath, until it has done all its work; meaning that the Chaldean army ſhould not return to their own land, until they had executed the whole will of God upon the Jews; this is the fire that ſhould not be quenched, ch. xx. 48. and here ends the explanation of the ſaid prophecy.

℣. 6. Sigh, therefore, thou ſon of man, with the breaking of thy loins, &c.] As if thy loins were broke, and go as if they were, and ſigh as thou goeſt; or as a woman in travail, having her hands upon her loins as ready to break, and in the utmoſt diſtreſs; or heave, and groan, and ſigh, till the girdle of the loins is broke; and by theſe motions and geſture ſhow the miſerable ſtate of this people, and how much thou art affected with it: and with bitterneſs ſigh before their eyes; in the ſight and hearing of the captives at Babylon; who would take care, by ſome means or other, to inform their brethren at Jeruſalem of it, how the prophet ſighed and groaned, under an apprehenſion and aſſurance of a dreadful calamity coming upon them; uſing along with his ſobs and ſighs, and briniſh tears, doleful words, and bitter lamentations.

℣. 7. And it ſhall be, when they ſay unto thee, wherefore ſigheſt thou? &c.] Which he was to do for that purpoſe, that they might be put upon aſking him the reaſon of it; whether it was on his own perſonal account, or on account of his family or particular friends? or whether on a public account, either becauſe of what ſhould befal the captives there, or their countrymen in Judea and Jeruſalem? that thou ſhalt anſwer, for the tidings, or the report[p], becauſe it cometh; the report of the Chaldean army approaching and invading Judea, and beſieging Jeruſalem, which he had from the Lord; and the thing itſelf was juſt at hand, and would ſhortly and certainly be; and that was the thing that affected him, and cauſed ſuch ſorrow and ſighing: and every heart ſhall melt; like wax, for fear of the enemy; even ſuch, who then diſbelieved the report, and laughed at it as an idle ſtory: and all hands ſhall be feeble; and not able to hold a ſword, or ſtrike a ſtroke: and every ſpirit ſhall faint; yea, ſuch who had the greateſt ſpirits, and were the moſt bold and undaunted, ſhall be quite diſpirited, having no heart nor courage to defend themſelves, or their country: and all knees ſhall be weak as water; they ſhall not be able to ſtand upon their legs, and fight like men in their own defence; nor even be able to flee away, and make their eſcape: or, ſhall flow with water[q]; either with ſweat, or with urine, thro' fear of the enemy: behold it cometh, and ſhall be brought to paſs, ſaith the Lord God; let no man therefore put this evil day far from him, or treat this report as an idle tale, or a thing at a diſtance, and which may never come to paſs; for it is now a coming, and in a very little time will be accompliſhed; for the Lord has ſaid it, who cannot lie, whoſe counſel ſhall ſtand, and he will do all his pleaſure.

℣. 8. Again, the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying,] Either this is a new prophecy of another ſword, diſtinct and different from that of the Chaldeans, even of the ſword of the Romans, as Cocceius thinks; or it is a further explanation of the former, and an enlargement upon it.

℣. 9. Son of man, propheſy and ſay, thus ſaith the Lord, &c.] Deliver out the following prophecy in the name of the Lord: ſay, a ſword, a ſword is ſharpened, and alſo furbiſhed; it is not only drawn out of its ſheath, as before, but is made ſharp and bright, and ready for uſe. It is repeated, either to ſhow the certainty of it, or to expreſs the terror and anguiſh of mind on account of it; perſons in diſtreſs generally repeating that which is the occaſion of it. The Targum interprets it of two ſwords, the ſword of the Babylonians, and the ſword of the Ammonites; firſt the one was to be uſed, and then the other: this latter, Jarchi and Kimchi obſerve, was fulfilled by Iſhmael the ſon of Nethaniah ſlaying Gedaliah, ſent for that purpoſe by Baalis king of the Ammonites, Jer. xl. 14. and xli. 2, 10. but if two diſtinct ſwords are meant, I ſhould rather think the ſword of the Chaldeans, and the ſword of the Romans, are intended. Cocceius, as before obſerved, interprets it only of the latter; but Abendana both of the ſword of the king of Babylon, and of the ſword of the Romans.

℣. 10. It is ſharpened to make a ſore ſlaughter, &c.] To cut eaſily, and wound deeply, and make a ſlaughter of men, like beaſts for ſacrifice; a ſacrifice to the juſtice of God for their ſins, and ſo acceptable to him; and it is he indeed that ſharpens it, or prepares the inſtruments of his vengeance, whether Chaldeans, or Romans, or both; and gives them might and courage to execute his will with great keenneſs of wrath and fury: it is furbiſhed that it may glitter; and ſo ſtrike terror on thoſe againſt whom it is drawn, and for whom it is prepared, as glittering armour does: ſhould we then make mirth? ſing, and dance, and feaſt, and indulge ourſelves in all kind of mirth and jollity, when this is the caſe, a drawn, ſharp, glittering ſword hangs over our heads? no, ſurely! there is good reaſon for you to lament and ſigh, as I do; you aſk me the reaſon of it, this is it; is there not a cauſe? there is; it is not a ſeaſon for mirth, but for weeping and lamentation. The words may be rendered, or let us rejoice[r]; that is, if we can, ironically ſpoken. It contemneth the rod of my ſon, as every tree; thus ſays the Lord God, this ſword ſo ſharpened and brightened, deſpiſes the rod or ſcepter (for ſo the word ſignifies) of Iſrael my ſon, my firſt-born, and makes no more of it than a common ſtick, and cuts it to pieces, and deſtroys it; ſignifying hereby, the eaſy deſtruction of the ſcepter and kingdom of Judah, by the ſword of the Chaldeans or Romans. Some underſtand it of Chriſt the Son of God. The words may be rendered,

---

[p] אל שמועה, επι τῃ αγγελια, Sept. propter rumorem, Vatablus, Cocceius; propter, vel ad auditum, Pagninus, Montanus.

[q] הלכנה מים fluent aquis, Munſter, Tigurine verſion, ſo Ben Melech; manabunt ut aqua, Cocceius.

[r] נשיש lætemur, Caſtalio; gaudeamus, Glaſſius.

dered, it is the rod of my Son, it deſpiſeth every tree[s]; this ſword prepared, is no other than the rod of iron, which the Son of God makes uſes of to rule his enemies with, and break them in pieces; and no tree, high and low, can ſtand before it; it cuts down all, and deſtroys them, be they what they will; ſee Pſ. ii. 7, 8, 9. Cocceius interprets the former clauſe, or we ſhall make merry[t], of the Father and of the Son, and of their delight and pleaſure, whilſt wrath was executed on their enemies.

℣. 11. And he hath given it to be furbiſhed, that it might be handled, &c.] Either Nebuchadnezzar, or rather God, or the Son of God, prepared and brightened the ſword, that it might be handled and made uſe of, either by the Chaldeans or Romans, to the deſtruction of the Jews. The Targum is, "he gave their vengeance to be delivered into the "hand of the king of Babylon." The ſword is ſharpened and furbiſhed, to give it into the hand of the ſlayer; either the king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar; or the Roman emperor, Titus Veſpaſian.

℣. 12. Cry, howl, ſon of man, &c.] Not only ſigh, but cry; and not cry only, but howl; ſignifying hereby, that this would be the caſe of the Jews, when theſe calamities ſhould come upon them; and in order to affect them with them before-hand, the prophet is ordered to act ſuch a part, as well as to expreſs his ſympathy with them: for it ſhall be upon my people; that is, the ſword, or the calamity ſignified by it; this ſhould be not upon other nations, but upon the Lord's own people; ſuch who profeſſed themſelves to be his people, and whom he had diſtinguiſhed from all others; this is ſaid to affect the prophet the more, they being both the Lord's people, and his alſo: and it ſhall be upon all the princes of Iſrael; who were ſlain in Riblah by the king of Babylon, Jer. lii. 10. the ſword ſpared neither people nor princes. Terrors by reaſon of the ſword ſhall be upon my people; upon the rumour of the invaſion, and when beſieged in the city, and when attempting to make their eſcape by flight: or, my people are fallen by the ſword[u], as ſome: ſmite therefore upon thy thigh; as one grieved in ſpirit, in great diſtreſs and anguiſh; ſee Jer. xxxi. 19.

℣. 13. Becauſe it is a trial, &c.] As all afflictions and calamities are, eſpecially to the people of God; they try their faith and patience, and every other grace; and alſo to wicked men, they try them, whether they will repent or no: and what if the ſword contemn even the rod? the ſcepter; the king of Judah, and his family; not only come upon, and cut off the people and the princes, but the royal family alſo; and even overturn the tribe of Judah, as the word alſo ſignifies; and ſubvert the government of it, of which the rod or ſcepter is an enſign; this would be a ſore trial indeed, and yet it is intimated that ſo it ſhould be: it ſhall be no more, ſaith the Lord God; the rod or ſcepter ſhall be no more in one of David's line, of the tribe of Judah, until the Meſſiah comes, ℣. 27. I ſhould chuſe to render the words thus, for it is a trial, but what[w]? what an one is it? or for what is it? what will be the fruit, effect, and iſſue of it? if alſo the ſcepter deſpiſes; the king deſpiſes the trial, the affliction, the calamity, and is not brought to repentance by it: it ſhall be no more, or it ſhall not be[x], ſaith the Lord God; it, the ſcepter, ſhall be taken away, and not reſtored to the houſe of David, until the Meſſiah comes.

℣. 14. Thou therefore, ſon of man, propheſy, and ſmite thine hands together, &c.] As being in the greateſt agony for what is coming upon thy people: or, ſtrike hand to hand[y]; clap them together, as encouraging the enemy with his drawn, ſharp, and glittering ſword, to make uſe of it, and do execution with it: and let the ſword be doubled the third time; ſome think this has reference to the three captivities of Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah: others to the threefold calamity in Zedekiah's time; the firſt, the taking of him; the ſecond, the taking of the city; the third, the carrying captive the reſidue along with Gedaliah: or to the three times the Chaldeans came againſt Jeruſalem, after this prophecy; firſt with Nebuchadnezzar, in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, and took him and the city; then with Nebuzaradan, in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, and burnt the city and temple; and again in the twenty-third of Nebuchadnezzar, and carried away the remnant of the people, Jer. lii. 5, 6, 12, 30: the ſword of the ſlain; by which many ſhould be ſlain: it is the ſword of the great men that are ſlain; of the ſons of the kings, and of the princes, and nobles of the land: which entereth into their privy chambers; where they ſhould endeavour to hide themſelves from it, but in vain, none ſhould eſcape; their privy chambers could not ſecrete nor ſecure them: or, which remains with them; as that which is laid up, and reſerved in a privy chamber, as De Dieu, from the uſe of the word in the Ethiopic language, renders it.

℣. 15. I have ſet the point of the ſword againſt all their gates, &c.] The word rendered point, is no where elſe uſed, and is differently tranſlated: by ſome the fear of the ſword[z], as Menachem and Kimchi; by others the cry of the ſword, or of thoſe that are ſlain with it, as Jarchi; and the Targum paraphraſes it, "thoſe that ſlay with the ſword:" ſome, as both Jarchi and Kimchi, obſerve, by an inverſion of the letters of the alphabet, called Athbaſh, render it, the ſlaughter of the ſword; and De Dieu and Dr. Caſtel, from the uſe of the word in the Ethiopic language, the deſtruction of it, or the power of it. The meaning is, that the enemy with their ſwords drawn, ſhould be placed at every gate of the city of Jeruſalem, or of their houſes, pointed towards them; which would be very terrible, and ſure deſtruction to them. That their hearts may faint; ſeeing nothing but death before their eyes, and no way to eſcape it: and their ruins be multiplied; of their families, and of their houſes. Ah, it is made bright; to terrify the more, as in ℣. 10. appearing as a flaming ſword, and ſo cauſing fear; the prophet expreſſes his ſorrow and concern for it. The Targum is, "wo, the ſword is "drawn out to kill." It is wrapt up for ſlaughter; in its ſheath or ſcabbard, that it might not ruſt or be blunted, it being furbiſhed and brightened; but this ſeems contrary to its being drawn out of its ſheath, as in ℣. 3, 5. Kimchi renders it therefore, ſharpened, as in ℣. 10. and ſo the Targum, "it is ſharp"ened to deſtroy;" the more eaſily and ſpeedily.

℣. 16.

---

[s] שבט בני מאסת כל עץ virga eſt filii me illa ſpernit, vel quæ ſpernit omne lignum, Tigurine verſion, Piſcator, the margin of our bibles.

[t] Aut hilarabimur, Cocceius.

[u] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 59. 1.

[w] כי בחן ומה quum fuit probatio, quid tandem fuit? Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[x] לא יהיה non erit, V. L. ſcilicet ſceptrum, Mariana.

[y] והך כף אל כף percute manum ad manum, Pagninus, Polanus; volam ad volam, Montanus; feri manum ad manum, Starckius.

[z] אבחת חרב terrorem gladii, Munſter, Pagninus, Montanus.

℣. 16. Go thee one way or another, &c.] Go to ſome one place: or, unite thyſelf[a]; to other ſwords, or join other ſoldiers holding ſwords; the addreſs is to the ſword, to ſteer its courſe ſome one way and ſlay as it goes along, ſparing none: either on the right, or on the left; or ſouth, or north; ſo the Targum, "unſheath and ſlay on the ſouth, and "deſtroy on the north:" whitherſoever thy face is ſet; or prepared, as the Targum, or appointed for deſtruction; this is the uſual interpretation: but why may not the words be an apoſtrophe to the prophet, to go alone or ſingle, either to the right or left, ſouth or north, as his face was ſet, ℣. 2. ſighing and crying, ſmiting his hands together, in order to affect the minds of the people with the ſenſe of their calamities coming upon them?

℣. 17. I will alſo ſmite my hands together, &c.] As well as the prophet was bid to do, ℣. 14. either expreſſing a concern for the calamity of the people, or indignation at their ſins; or rather, as encouraging their enemies to make uſe of the ſword pointed at them, and as it were rejoicing at their deſtruction for the honour of his juſtice. The Targum is, "and even I will bring vengeance upon "vengeance:" and I will cauſe my fury to reſt; when the ſword has done its buſineſs, and juſt vengeance is taken, the fury of the Lord ſhall ceaſe; it ſhall proceed no further, it ſhall be kept within due bounds, and no more or further rage: I the Lord have ſaid it; who is omnipotent, and can do all things, and will do every thing that he has ſaid, whether in a way of promiſe or threatening.

℣. 18. The word of the Lord came unto me again, &c.] Immediately after the former; for this reſpects the ſame prophecy about the ſword, and the way of its coming, and the cauſe of it: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 19. Alſo thou, ſon of man, appoint thee two ways, that the ſword of the king of Babylon may come, &c.] Deſcribe or draw out upon a table or tile, as in ch. iv. 1. or on the ground, two roads, ſuch as are deſcribed in maps; which it may be ſuppoſed the king of Babylon would take, either the one or the other, in order to make war againſt ſome king or another: both twain ſhall come forth out of one land; both ways muſt be drawn as coming from one country, even Babylon: and chuſe thou a place, chuſe it at the head of the way to the city; fix upon ſome ſpacious place, where Nebuchadnezzar may be ſuppoſed to bring his army, as a proper rendezvous for them to muſter them in; and let it be where two ways meet, that lead to cities, one to one city, and another to another: and it ſeems, that upon the deſert of Arabia, through which the king of Babylon came, there was ſuch a place, where two ways met, and one led to Jeruſalem, and the other to Rabbath; and this is the place the prophet was to deſcribe, and where in fact Nebuchadnezzar came.

℣. 20. Appoint a way, &c.] Mark out a way, deſcribe a road, draw one out upon the ground, or point out one upon a table or tile: that the ſword may come; in which the ſword will come; or thoſe that kill with the ſword, as the Targum, even the Chaldean army under Nebuchadnezzar: to Rabbath of the Ammonites; which was the metropolis of the Ammonites, and is now called Philadelphia, as Jerom writes; it is ſo called, to diſtinguiſh it from others of the ſame name; ſee 2 Sam. xii. 26: and to Judah in Jeruſalem, the defenced city; which was ſo both by nature and art; it had mountains round about it, and had been fortified by ſeveral kings from the time of David, as Solomon, Hezekiah, and Manaſſeh. Judah is ſaid to be in it; tho' it would ſeem more properly, that Jeruſalem was in Judah; becauſe that people from all parts of Judah, upon hearing of the king of Babylon's intention and near approach to invade their land, fled to Jeruſalem, being a fortified place, for ſecurity. Now the prophet is bid to deſcribe a way hither; not that one and the ſame way led to Rabbath and Jeruſalem; but he was to deſcribe a way from the place where Nebuchadnezzar ſtopped, which led to Rabbath, and another which led to Jeruſalem.

℣. 21. For the king of Babylon ſtood at the parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, &c.] That is, he would ſtand there; the prophet knew that it was certain it ſhould be, and therefore repreſents it as if it was; he had, by a ſpirit of prophecy, ſeen, that when the king of Babylon was come to ſuch a place, on the borders of the deſert of Arabia, where the road from Babylon parted, where two ways met, the one leading to Jeruſalem on the right, and the other to Rabbath on the left; he ſhould make a full ſtop with his army, and conſider which way he ſhould take, whether that which led to Jeruſalem, or that which led to Rabbath. It is very probable, when he came out of Babylon, his ſcheme was to make an attempt on both theſe important places, and take them; but he had not determined which to attack firſt, and was ſtill doubtful; and now being come to the two roads, which led to the one and the other, it was neceſſary to make an halt, conſider and conclude, which courſe to ſteer; to determine which, he thought proper to uſe divination, which was performed in the following manner: he made his arrows bright; being made of iron or ſteel; in the brightneſs of which diviners looked, and made their obſervations, and accordingly directed what was to be done; as they did by looking into the brightneſs of a man's nails, as David Kimchi obſerves; tho' his father, Joſeph Kimchi, was of opinion, that the word has the ſignification of caſting of arrows, or cauſing them to fly in the air; and ſuppoſes, that Nebuchadnezzar caſt up arrows into the air, and obſerved on which ſide they fell, and ſo judged which way to take; to this agrees the Targum, "with a bow he caſt out arrows;" ſo the Syriac and Arabic verſions[b]. Jerom ſays, the way of divining by arrows was this: arrows, with the names of the cities inſcribed upon them, were put into a quiver, and mixed together; and the city upon the arrow which came out firſt, was firſt attacked. To this agrees the Vulgate Latin verſion, which renders the words, mingling the arrows: and Dr. Pocock[c] prefers this ſenſe of the word, which he obſerves ſo ſignifies in the Arabic language; and who gives an account of the uſe of divination by arrows among the Arabians, who much uſed it; tho' forbidden by Mahomet, as Schultens[d] obſerves. Their cuſtom was this; when a man was about to marry a wife, or go a journey, or do any buſineſs of importance, he put three arrows into a veſſel; on one was inſcribed, "my lord hath commanded "me;" on another, "my lord hath forbid me;" the third had nothing on it. If the firſt he took out had the command upon it, then he proceeded with great alacrity; but if it had the prohibition, he deſiſted; and if that which had nothing inſcribed on it, he laid it by, till one of the other two was taken out; and there is to this day a ſort of divination by arrows uſed by the Turks; it is commonly for the wars, tho' it is alſo performed for all ſorts of things; as to know whether a man ſhould undertake a voyage, buy ſuch a commodity, or the like. The manner of doing it, as Monſieur Thevenot[e] relates, is this; they take four arrows, and place them with their points againſt one another, giving them to be held by two perſons; then they lay a naked ſword upon a cuſhion before them, and read a certain chapter of the Alcoran; with that the arrows fight together for ſome time, and at length the one fall upon the other: if, for inſtance, the victorious have been named Chriſtians (for two of them they call Turks, and the other two by the name of their enemy) it is a ſign that the Chriſtians will overcome; if otherwiſe, it denotes the contrary. The Jews[f] ſay, that in the preſent caſe of Nebuchadnezzar, that when he or his diviner caſt the arrow for Antioch, or for Tyre, or for Laodicea, it was broke; but when he caſt it for Jeruſalem, it was not broke; by which he knew that he ſhould deſtroy it. This is that ſort of divination which is called Belomancy: he conſulted with images; or Teraphim; images in which, as Kimchi ſays, they ſaw things future; heathen oracles, from whence reſponſes were made; theſe were images for private uſe, ſuch as were the Lares and Penates with the Romans; theſe Laban had in his houſe, which Rachel ſtole from him; and are ſuppoſed to be ſuch as are made under certain conſtellations, and their influences capable of ſpeaking; ſee Zech. x. 2. as Aben Ezra on Gen. xxxi. 34. obſerves, with which men uſed to conſult about things future or unknown; and this is thought to be one reaſon why Rachel took away theſe images from her father, that he might not, by conſulting with them, know which way Jacob fled[g]; with ſuch as theſe the king of Babylon conſulted, that he might know which way he ſhould take: he looked in the liver; of a beaſt ſlain, and made obſervations on that to direct him; as uſed to be done by the Aruſpices among the Romans. This is that ſort of divination which is called Hepatoſcopy, or inſpection into the liver; for tho' the Aruſpices or Extiſpices, ſo called from their looking into the entrails of a beaſt, and making their obſervations on them, uſed to view the ſeveral inward parts, yet chiefly the liver, which they called the head of the inteſtines; and if this was wanting, or the head in it, the chief part of it, it was an ill omen; thus, in the month that Claudius Cæſar was poiſoned, the head of the liver was wanting in the ſacrifice; or if the liver was livid, vicious, had any puſtules upon it, or any purulent matter in it; or was touched, cut and wounded with the knife of the ſacrificer, it foreboded great evils and misfortunes; or if the extreme part of the liver, which is called the fibre, was ſo placed, that from the loweſt fibre the livers were replicated, or there was a double liver, this was a token for good, and portended joy and happineſs[h]: moreover, they uſed to divide the bowels or entrails into two parts, and ſo the liver; the one they called familiaris, by which they judged what would befal themſelves, and their friends; the other hoſtilis, what concerned their enemies; according to the habit, colour and poſition they were in, they concluded what would befal the one, and the other[i]. Lucan[k] and Seneca[l] particularly have reſpect to this: and the king of Babylon here having two people to deal with, the Ammonites and the Jews, he inſpects the liver of a creature ſlain for ſacrifice, that he might judge which was beſt and ſafeſt for him to attack; which was leſs threatning, and more eaſy to be overcome[m]: this divination uſed to be made with calves, kids and lambs[n].

---

[a] התאחדי unito, Montanus, Piſcator, Polanus; unitor te, Starckius; in unum dirigitor, Cocceius. [b] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 25. 2. interprets the word. [c] Specimen Arab. Hiſt. p. 327. [d] Animadv. in Job, p. 169, 170.

℣. 22. At his right-hand was the divination for Jeruſalem, &c.] All his divinations, whether by arrows, or by images, or by liver, all directed him to his right-hand, to turn to that which led to Jeruſalem; and thus, what appeared to him to be the effect of divination, was over-ruled by the providence of God, to direct him to go and do what he deſigned he ſhould: to appoint captains to open the mouth in the ſlaughter; upon which he appointed his ſeveral captains and officers their diſtinct bodies of men they were to lead on to the ſiege of Jeruſalem; and give them the word of command when to inveſt the place, ſcale the walls, or make breaches in it, and fall upon the enemy, and make a ſlaughter of them. The word for captains, ſignifies rams; and Joſeph Kimchi interprets it, of battering-rams, to beat down walls; but theſe are after-mentioned; and is both by Jarchi and David Kimchi explained of general officers of the army; and ſo the Targum, "to appoint generals to open "the gates that the ſlayer may enter by them:" to lift up the voice with ſhouting; which is uſually done in ſieges, when a ſhout is made, and a place is ſtormed; both to animate the beſiegers, and to terrify the beſieged: to appoint battering-rams againſt the gates; to break them down, or break thro' them, and ſo make way for the army to enter in; theſe were engines uſed in ſieges, to beat down walls, and make breaches in them, that the beſiegers might enter; ſo called from the iron heads of them, which reſembled rams; and are thus deſcribed by Joſephus[o], "the ram is a huge beam, "not unlike the maſt of a ſhip; the top of it is "capped with a thick piece of iron, in the form "of a ram's head, from whence it has its name: "this is hung by the middle with ropes to an-"other beam, which lies acroſs, ſupported by a "couple of poſts; and thus hanging equally ba-"lanced, is by a great number of men violently "thruſt backwards and forwards, and ſo beats the "wall with its iron head; nor is there any tower "ſo ſtrong, or wall ſo broad, as to reſiſt its re-"peated ſtrokes." Vitruvius[p] ſays, it was invented by the Carthaginians at the ſiege of Cadiz; but Pliny[q] affirms it was invented by Epeus at the ſiege of Troy; but the firſt mention of them is made by Ezekiel here, and in ch. iv. 2. and Diodorus Siculus[r] affirms, they were not known in the times of Sardanapalus, when Nineveh was taken by Arbaces. The Targum interprets it, of officers ſet at the gates, as before; and ſo Jarchi: to caſt a mount; made up of earth, to raiſe their batteries upon: and to build a fort; to caſt out their arrows from thence, and protect the beſiegers; ſee the note on ch. iv. 1.

---

[e] Travels, Par. 1. B. 1. ch. 26. p. 36.

[f] Midraſh Tillim in Pſ. lxxix. 1.

[g] See Godwin's Moſes and Aaron, l. 4. c. 9.

[h] Vid. Alex. ab Alex. Genial. Dier. l. 5. c. 25. & Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 11. c. 37.

[i] Vid. Valtrinum de re militari Roman. l. 1. c. 6. p. 27. Liv. & Ciceron. in ib.

[k] Cernit tabe jecur madidum, venaſque minaces,
Hoſtili de parte videt, &c. Pharſal. l. 1.

[l] Hoſtile valido robore inſurgit latus. Œdipus, Act. 2.

[m] Vid. Lydium de re militari, l. 1. c. 3. p. 9, 10.

[n] Pauſanias, l. 6. p. 345.

[o] De bello Jud. l. 3. c. 7. §. 19 Vid. Valtrinum de re militari Roman. l. 5. c. 6. p. 526.

[p] De Architectura, l. 10. c. 19.

[q] Nat. Hiſt. l. 7. c. 56.

[r] Bibliothec. l. 2. p. 113.

℣. 23. And it ſhall be unto them as a falſe divination in their ſight, &c.] That is, the Jews ſhall laugh at this divination as a vain thing, as a heatheniſh practice, and of which nothing would come; and even at the prophet's account of it, and his prophecy concerning the king of Babylon coming to invade them; they looked upon them all as of a piece, truſting to their falſe prophets, who aſſured them that they ſhould not be delivered into his hands: to them that have ſworn oaths; a deſcription of the Jews, who had with their king Zedekiah ſworn allegiance to the king of Babylon; which oaths they had violated, taking others to the king of Egypt: or, becauſe they were bound by oaths to them[r]; meaning either the Egyptians, who had bound themſelves by oaths to protect the Jews; and therefore they feared nothing from this pretended divination and prophecy, as they judged them to be, tho' they had not kept faith with the Chaldeans themſelves; or the Jews, becauſe of the Egyptians who had entered into an alliance with them, confirmed by oaths; and this had made them ſecure, on this they depended. The Targum takes the words, as if they ſignified, ſeven times ſeven; and gives this ſtrange paraphraſe of them, accounting for the vain confidence of the Jews; "and their divinations were lies in their "eyes, and the inchantments with which he in"chanted them; for they knew not that he "had obſerved forty-nine times (i. e. his arrows, "images and liver) and an anſwer was returned "upon the word, till the time came to him in "which they ſhould be delivered into his hands:" but he will call to remembrance the iniquity; that is, Nebuchadnezzar would call to mind the perfidy and perjury of the king of Judah, in breaking covenant with him, and violating his oath. Some think that the Chaldeans that were with Nebuchadnezzar were not ſatisfied at firſt that it was a true divination that was made, they being ſet upon the taking of Rabbath firſt; but Nebuchadnezzar remembring and putting them in mind of the treachery of Zedekiah, reconciled them to it, and determined them in the expedition againſt the Jews: that they may be taken; as birds in a ſnare, or beaſts in a net, and be carried captive.

℣. 24. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Becauſe of their vain confidence, added to their perjury and perfidy: becauſe ye have made your iniquity to be remembered; their old ſins, by committing new ones, both againſt the Lord, and againſt the king of Babylon: in that your tranſgreſſions are diſcovered, ſo that in all your doings your ſins do appear; both in their religious and civil actions; in the worſhip of God, and in their covenants and agreements with men; their ſins were expoſed and manifeſt to all, not only to God, who was provoked thereby, but to men, to the nations round about; particularly to Nebuchadnezzar, who was enraged by them: becauſe, I ſay, that they are come to remembrance; both before the Lord, and the king of Babylon: ye ſhall be taken with the hand; as eaſily as a bird is, when in the ſnare. The Targum is, "ye ſhall be delivered into the hand "of the king of Babylon;" which is no doubt the ſenſe of the paſſage.

℣. 25. And thou profane wicked prince of Iſrael, &c.] Meaning Zedekiah, the then reigning prince; who is ſo called, becauſe he had profaned or violated the oath and covenant he made with the king of Babylon, as well as becauſe of other ſins he was guilty of; and his being a prince of Iſrael was an aggravation of his crimes: now, tho' it is not fit in common, or for ordinary perſons, to ſay to a king thou art wicked, and to princes ye are ungodly, Job xxxiv. 18. yet a prophet from the Lord, and in his name may ſay ſo; and he ought, when he has a commiſſion from God for it: whoſe day is come; the time of his downfal and ruin; and ſo the Targum, "whoſe day of deſtruction is come:" when iniquity ſhall have an end; a ſtop put to the torrent of it, both in the king and his ſubjects; they not having the opportunity and means of ſinning in captivity as before; or when the meaſure of iniquity is filled up, then comes puniſhment; or when the puniſhment of iniquity ſhall be completed. So the Targum, "the time of the recompence of his "ſins."

℣. 26. Thus ſaith the Lord God, remove the diadem, and take off the crown, &c.] That is, from Zedekiah; and as theſe are the regalia and enſigns of royal dignity, taking them off ſignifies the depoſition of him as a king, the ſtripping him of his kingly power and authority: an earthly crown is a corruptible and fading one, at moſt it continues but during this life, and ſometimes not ſo long; it does not always ſit firm; ſometimes it is tottering and ſhakes, and ſometimes quite falls off to the ground; it is taken from the head of one, and put upon the head of another, by him who gives the orders in the text, and has the ſovereign diſpoſal of crowns and kingdoms; who ſets up one, and puts down another. The diadem was a royal tire of the head, wore in common; the crown was put on at certain times; both ſignify one and the ſame thing, royal dignity; tho' the former is ſometimes uſed as an ornament of the prieſthood, as the latter of kingly power; hence the Targum, "remove the diadem (or mitre) from Seraiah the "high-prieſt, and I will take away the crown from "Zedekiah the king;" but the latter is only meant; beſides, as Kimchi obſerves, it was not Seraiah, but Jehozedek his ſon that was carried captive with Zedekiah: this ſhall not be the ſame; this royal dignity ſhall not continue the ſame; the kingdom ſhall not be in the ſame luſtre and glory, nor in the ſame hands: exalt him that is low; either Jeconiah now in captivity; and which was fulfilled when Evil-merodach lifted up his head, and ſet his throne above the thrones of the kings in Babylon, Jer. lii. 31, 32. or Zerubbabel of the ſeed of Jeconiah, who was born in the captivity, and became prince of Judah; or rather the Meſſiah, who was of a low extraction; born of mean parents; was as a root out of a dry ground; appeared in the form of a ſervant, poor and lowly; yet when he had done his work, was highly exalted at the right-hand of God; far above angels, principalities and powers; as well as ſet upon the throne of his father David: and abaſe him that is high; the then prince upon the throne, Zedekiah; who was high and lifted up, but ſhould be pulled down and humbled, as he was.

℣. 27. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, &c.] The crown and kingdom of Judah; which being

---

[r] שבעי שבעות להם quia obſtricti juramentis eis ſunt, Piſcator.

expreſſed three times, has not reſpect, as Kimchi thinks, to the three generations, in which the crown ceaſed after the captivity, as thoſe of Aſir, Shaaltiel, Pedaiah; and in the fourth generation was reſtored to Zerubbabel; for he was no king, nor was there any of David's line after; nor were the Maccabees or Haſmoneans properly kings; but the phraſe denotes the utter abolition of the kingly power, and the certainty of it, which could not be reſtored, notwithſtanding the attempts made by Gedaliah and Iſhmael; all their ſchemes were overturned, and ſo in ſucceſſive ages; and may alſo denote and include the troubles that were in the Jewiſh ſtate, not only during the captivity, but from that time unto the Meſſiah's coming; there were nothing but overturnings, overturnings till that time came: and it ſhall be no more; a kingdom governed by one of the ſeed of the then preſent family, or of the ſeed of David; there ſhall be no more a king of his race, as there was not till Shiloh came, intended in the next clauſe: until he come whoſe right it is; the right of the crown and kingdom of Iſrael; which belongs to Jeſus the Meſſiah, being deſcended from a race of kings of the houſe of Judah, and of the ſeed of David: or, to whom the judgment is[s]; to whom the father hath committed all judgment, John v. 22. all power of judging, both his church and people, and the whole world: and I will give it him; the crown and kingdom, which is his right; put him in the poſſeſſion of it, as he was at his reſurrection and aſcenſion; and which will more fully appear in the latter day, when all kingdoms will become his; eſpecially he has, and will appear to have the throne of his father David, and of his kingdom there will be no end, Luke i. 31, 32. This is underſtood and interpreted of the Meſſiah, by R. Abendana[t], a modern Jew.

℣. 28. And thou, ſon of man, propheſy, and ſay, &c.] Here begins a new prophecy, or rather an enlargement on part of the former; two ways being marked out for the ſword of the Chaldeans to come in; the one leading to Jeruſalem, the other to Rabbath of the Ammonites; the prophecy being finiſhed concerning the former, here an account is given of the latter; how the ſword ſhould move that way, and what execution it would do: thus ſaith the Lord God concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; Nebuchadnezzar, agreeable to the above prophecy, having taken his rout to Jeruſalem, as his divination directed him, and deſtroyed that, returned to Babylon, without making any attempt upon the Ammonites; which ſo fluſhed them, that they inſulted the Jews, and laughed at their deſtruction, as if their God whom they ſerved could not ſave them; attributing their ſafety and proſperity to the idols they worſhipped; ſee ch. xxv. 1—7. Zeph. ii. 8—10: even ſay thou; the ſword, the ſword is drawn for the ſlaughter; the ſame ſword of the Chaldeans, which was drawn for the ſlaughter of the Jews, is now drawn for the ſlaughter of the Ammonites; and which is repeated for the certainty of it, and to inject terror; and this, as Joſephus[u] ſays, was accompliſhed five years after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar: it is furbiſhed to conſume, becauſe of the glittering; being brightened and made ſharp, it not only terrified with its glittering, but was more fit and prepared to cut and deſtroy; ſee ℣. 9, 10.

℣. 29. Whiles they ſee vanity unto thee, while they divine a lie unto thee, &c.] The Ammonites had their ſeers, ſoothſayers, diviners, and falſe prophets, which they are bid to be aware of, and are cautioned againſt hearkening to, Jer. xxvii. 3, 9. theſe told them they were in the utmoſt ſafety, and that the king of Babylon would not come againſt them; or if he did, would not ſucceed, when his ſword was drawn and furbiſhed for the deſtruction of them: to bring thee upon the necks of the ſlain, of the wicked; that is, of the Jews who were ſlain by the ſword of the Chaldeans for their wickedneſs; and theſe diviners by their vain divination and lies would bring the Ammonites into the ſame condition, to be ſlain as they were; and as it were to fall upon their necks, as one ſlain perſon upon another; and ſo the Targum, "to deliver thy neck "as the necks of the ſlain, of the wicked:" it may be rendered, to put thee to the necks of the ſlain[w]; or, as Kimchi, with the necks of the ſlain; tho' ſome underſtand it, as if the diviners by their lies, promiſing peace and proſperity, encouraged the Ammonites to inſult the Jews, and as it were to trample upon the necks of the dead: whoſe day is come, when their iniquity ſhall have an end; along with Zedekiah their king; a deſcription of the Jews; ſee the note on ℣. 27.

℣. 30. Shall I cauſe it to return into his ſheath? &c.] The drawn and furbiſhed ſword of the Chaldeans? no, I will not; it ſhall never return or be put up until the Ammonites are utterly conſumed. Some read theſe words in the imperative, as the Targum, "return the ſword to its ſheath;" ſo the Vulgate Latin verſion, return to thy ſheath; and ſo may be conſidered as a direction to the Ammonites to put up their ſwords, and not ſtand in their own defence, ſince it would be to no purpoſe; tho' Jerom, and Grotius after him, take the words to be an apoſtrophe to the drawn ſword of the Chaldeans to ſheath itſelf, having done its work upon the Jews and Ammonites; or to the Chaldeans to return to Babylon, and where they alſo ſhould be puniſhed; and ſo interpret all that follows of the deſtruction of the Babylonians by the Medes and Perſians; but the firſt ſenſe is beſt: I will judge thee in the place where thou waſt created, in the land of thy nativity; not in the place where their father Ammon was born, which was at Zoar; but where they firſt became a kingdom and ſtate, a body politic; or where the preſent generation of them were born; they ſhould not be carried out of their own land, but deſtroyed in it.

℣. 31. And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee, &c.] Like a mighty flood, which ſhould ſweep them away for their ſins and tranſgreſſions; and particularly for their reproaches of God and his people, which cauſed his indignation to riſe, and him to pour it out upon them in ſuch a manner: I will blow againſt thee in the fire of my wrath; as men put metal into a furnace, and then blow upon it, in order to melt it, and conſume the droſs; and which fire ſo blown, is exceeding fierce and very conſuming; who can ſtand againſt ſuch a blaſt as that of the wrath of God, not only kindled, but blown with his breath like a ſtream of brimſtone? and deliver thee into the hand of brutiſh men;

---

[s] אשר לו המשפט cujus eſt judicium, Pagninus, Starckius; vel jus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

[t] Not. in Ben Melech, Miclol Yophi in loc.

[u] Antiq. Jud. l. 10. c. 9. §. 7.

[w] לתת אותך אל צוארי חללי ut ponant te cum cervicibus interfectorum, Munſter, Tigurine verſion; applicando te ad cervices confoſſorum, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

men ; or burners [x] ; that burn with fierce anger, barbarous and inhuman, that would ſhew no mercy nor compaſſion, ſuch were the Chaldeans, Hab. i. 6, 7, 8 : and ſkilful to deſtroy ; tho' like brutes or beaſts of prey for their cruelty ; yet, like men, rational, cunning and artful to deviſe ways and means to deſtroy men ; well verſed in the art of war ; and thoroughly learned in all the leſſons and methods of violence and deſtruction.

℣. 32. Thou ſhalt be for fuel for the fire, &c.] Eaſily conſumed, as briers and thorns caſt into a furnace ; ſuch are wicked men to the fire of God's wrath : thy blood ſhall be in the midſt of the land ; ſuch large numbers ſhall be ſlain every where, that the land ſhall flow with the blood of them ; who ſhall lie unburied, and rot, and putrify upon the ground : thou ſhalt be no more remembered ; but lie in everlaſting oblivion, as they do to this day ; the name of an Ammonite being no where mentioned and heard of : for I the Lord have ſpoken it ; who never alters the thing that is gone out of his lips ; and ſooner ſhall heaven and earth paſs away, than one word of his. The Targum is, "for I "the Lord have decreed by my word ;" and his counſel ſhall ſtand, and every purpoſe and reſolution of his ſhall be accompliſhed.

CHAP. XXII.

IN this chapter a catalogue or liſt of the ſins of the Jews is given ; a compariſon of them to droſs is made, and they are dealt with accordingly ; and a complaint is lodged againſt all ranks and orders of men for their ſins ; on account of which, there being no interceſſor for them, they are threatened with captivity and deſtruction. The prophet is ordered to judge them, and lay before them their abominable ſins, ℣. 1, 2. of which a long liſt is given, as murder, idolatry ; contempt of parents ; oppreſſion of the ſtranger, fatherleſs and widow ; negligence of holy things ; profanation of the ſabbath ; tale-bearing, lewdneſs and uncleanneſs of various ſorts ; bribery, uſury, extortion and diſhoneſt gain, ℣. 3—13. for which the Lord threatens to deal with them in a manner that would be intolerable to them ; that he would carry them captive, and ſcatter them among the heathen, ℣. 14, 15, 16. they are compared to droſs, and as ſuch ſhould be gathered into a furnace, and melted down, ℣. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. all ranks and orders of men are complained of, becauſe of their ſins, and threatened, ℣. 23, 24. the prophets, for their voraciouſneſs, rapine, murder and lies, ℣. 25, 28. the prieſts, for their violation of the law, neglect of holy things, and profanation of the ſabbath, ℣. 26. the princes, for their cruelty, murder, and diſhoneſt gain, ℣. 27. the people of the land, for their oppreſſion and robbery, ℣. 29. and there being none to ſtand in the gap for them, the Lord threatens to pour out his wrath upon them, and conſume them, ℣. 30, 31.

℣. 1. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] The word of prophecy from the Lord, as the Targum ; another prophecy : ſaying, as follows :

℣. 2. Now thou ſon of man, wilt thou judge, wilt thou judge the bloody city? &c.] Or, city of bloods [y]? the city of Jeruſalem, in which was ſhed the blood of the prophets ſent unto her ; the doubling of the word denotes the vehemency with which it was expreſſed : wilt thou plead for and excuſe ſuch a city as this ? ſurely no ; ſo ſome : or wilt thou do thy work and office as a prophet ? haſt thou courage enough to do it ? wilt thou rebuke and reprove ? as the Targum ; wilt thou examine her caſe, judge truly, and condemn her, as thou oughteſt to do ? haſt thou an inclination to take this affair in hand ? then be directed to it, as follows : yea, thou ſhalt ſhew her all her abominations ; lay them before her ; convict her of them ; ſhew her the evil of them, and the puniſhment they deſerve ; every kind of ſin ſhe was guilty of ; for, as for particular acts, it was impoſſible to reckon them ; thoſe ſins that were the moſt flagrant, and moſt frequently committed, and which were abominable to the Lord, and rendered her ſo in his ſight, are intended.

℣. 3. Then ſay thou, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] For tho' the prophet was to ſit as judge, yet in the name of the King of kings, under whoſe authority he acted : the city ſheddeth blood in the midſt of it ; openly and impudently, in the face of all, and in great abundance ; even innocent blood, as the Targum has it : murders were frequent and common, either thro' quarrels, or thro' unrighteous judgments in courts of judicature : that her time may come ; to fill up the meaſure of her iniquity, and to receive the juſt puniſhment of her ſins. So the Targum, "the time of her deſtruc-"tion :" and maketh idols againſt herſelf, to defile herſelf ; being guilty, not only of murder, but of idolatry ; ſhe was an idol-maker and an idol-worſhipper ; and which was againſt herſelf, as well as againſt God ; to her own ruin and deſtruction, as well as to his diſhonour ; and it is no wonder ſhe ſhould be defiled with ſuch dunghil-gods as theſe were, as the word uſed ſignifies. The Targum renders it, in the midſt of her ; and Kimchi interprets it, by her, or above her, upon the mountains and hills.

℣. 4. Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou haſt ſhed, &c.] Not only ſhe contracted guilt by the innocent blood ſhe ſhed, but ſhe was tried and found guilty ; her guilt was notorious, plain and evident, as well as exceeding great, and much aggravated : and haſt defiled thyſelf in thine idols, which thou haſt made ; ſhe not only made them, in doing which ſhe ſinned ; but polluted herſelf with them, by worſhipping them ; her mind and conſcience were defiled with them ; and which brought ſuch a ſtain and pollution, as could not be removed by any thing that ſhe could do : there are both pollution and guilt in ſin, and neither can be removed but by the blood of Chriſt ; and unleſs removed that way, puniſhment muſt follow : and thou haſt cauſed thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years ; to full age, to ripeneſs for judgment ; ſhe had haſtened by her ſins her days of affliction and diſtreſs appointed for her, and was come to years of maturity to ſuffer for her ſins ; the years of her captivity, which would ſoon take place ; years in which ſhe would have no pleaſure : therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and

---

[x] בערים ardentium, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus ; urentium, ſo ſome in Vatablus.

[y] את עיר דמים civitatem ſanguinum, Vulg. Lat. Munſter, Montanus.

and a mocking to all countries; who, inſtead of praiſing them for their idolatry, would deride them for leaving the God of their fathers, which they did not; and inſult over them in their affliction and diſtreſs, tho' they joined with them in idolatrous practices.

℣. 5. Thoſe that be near, and thoſe that be far from thee, ſhall mock thee, &c.] The neighbouring nations, as the Edomites, Philiſtines, Moabites, and Ammonites; and diſtant ones, as the Babylonians, Medes and Perſians; all that either hear of, or ſee their miſery, ſhall rejoice at it, and triumph over them: which art infamous and much vexed; or they ſhall ſay, O thou of an infamous name and character; who haſt defiled thy name, got a blot upon it, and loſt thy credit by thy conduct and behaviour; and now fretting and vexing under the afflictions and calamities that lie upon thee: or whoſe tumults are many, as the Targum; who haſt been full of noiſe, and factions, and tumults; thou art now come to a righteous end.

℣. 6. Behold, the princes of Iſrael, &c.] Thoſe that belonged to the royal family, or the nobles of the land, or the members of the grand Sanhedrim of the nation: every one were in thee to their power to ſhed blood; every one exerted himſelf to the uttermoſt, according to his ability, to ſhed blood, or cauſe it to be ſhed; every one ſtrove, as it were, who ſhould ſhed moſt, to exceed each other in this abominable ſin.

℣. 7. In thee have they ſet light by father and mother, &c.] Thro' whom they received their being from God; by whom they were brought into the world, brought up and educated; and to whom they owed great reſpect, honour and obedience; but, on the contrary, they wanted affection to their perſons, ſhewed great diſreſpect to their commands, and treated them with irreverence and contempt; a ſin of a very heinous nature, of the firſt magnitude; reckoned among the very heathens as next to contempt of God, and diſobedience to him; is directly contrary to a law of God, and threatened with a curſe, and a ſevere puniſhment, Exod. xx. 12. Deut. xxvii. 16. Prov. xxx. 17. by the connexion of the words with the preceding, the princes of Iſrael ſeem intended; the children of the nobles, and the ſons and daughters of the king; who, it might have been thought, by the character they bore, the ſtation they were in, and the politeneſs of their education, would have behaved in another manner; and if this ſin prevailed among them, no doubt it did among thoſe of a lower claſs, who are always influenced by ſuch examples: in the midſt of thee have they dealt by oppreſſion with the ſtranger; the proſelyte, as the Septuagint; him that was converted to me, as the Syriac verſion; which is an aggravation of the ſin, that it was not merely a ſtranger that came about civil buſineſs, but one who came from foreign parts to worſhip the Lord at Jeruſalem, as the Ethiopian eunuch did: now, to oppreſs ſuch an one, either by private frauds, or by injuſtice in a court of judicature; to exact upon him for food or lodging; or circumvent and over-reach him in trade and commerce; or diſtreſs him by vexatious law-ſuits, when ignorant of the laws and cuſtoms of the country; at a diſtance from his friends, and in want of money, muſt be a very great evil; and yet even the princes themſelves in Jeruſalem were guilty of it: in thee have they vexed the fatherleſs and the widow; that were weak and helpleſs, and had none to protect them, father and huſband being dead; when, according to their firſt rank and ſtation as princes, they ought to have been the defenders of them; but inſtead of that, diſtreſſed, afflicted and grieved them.

℣. 8. Thou haſt deſpiſed mine holy things, &c.] The holy place, the temple, and the worſhip of it; holy perſons, the prieſts that officiated there; holy ſacrifices offered up by them; the holy word of God read and explained; and all holy ordinances there adminiſtered. Theſe words are directed to Jeruſalem the holy city, and to the inhabitants of it, who ought to have been holy men: and haſt profaned my ſabbaths; by doing their own work, and neglecting the ſervice of God; and which was an inlet, as it uſually is, to all manner of ſin.

℣. 9. In thee are men that carry tales to ſhed blood, &c.] Innocent blood, as the Targum; ſuch who go from houſe to houſe, as pedlars do with their wares or ſpices, as the word [a] ſignifies; hence the Syriac verſion renders it, merchants; and carry tales and lies of innocent perſons, and ſtir up others againſt them to wrath, and revenge, and ſhed their blood; or that go to the courts of judicature, and there accuſe innocent perſons, and bear falſe witneſs againſt them, to the taking away of their lives. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, thieves; who commonly are murderers: and in thee they eat upon the mountains; that is, there were ſuch in Jeruſalem who uſed to go to the mountains where idols were worſhipped, and eat the things that were ſacrificed to them; or partook of the feaſt made to the honour of them. So the Targum, "in thee they ſerved idols on the "mountains:" in the midſt of thee they commit lewdneſs; a general word for all manner of uncleanneſs, as adultery, fornication, inceſt, &c. of which ſome particulars follow:

℣. 10. In thee have they diſcovered their father's nakedneſs, &c.] Or, he diſcovered [b], or uncovered, it being in the ſingular number; tho' the Targum, Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and all the Oriental verſions read in the plural; this, tho' committed, was done but by a few; it being a ſin not ſo much as named among men, as for a man to lie with his father's wife, 1 Cor. v. 1. as Reuben did, Gen. xxxv. 22. and which is expreſly forbidden; and is mentioned firſt as the capital ſin of uncleanneſs, Lev. xviii. 6: in thee have they humbled her that was ſet apart for pollution; raviſhed and deflowered ſuch women who had their menſtrues; to lie with ſuch was prohibited by the law of God, Lev. xviii. 19. and xx. 18. ſo that here was a double ſin committed; a rape of a woman, whether married or unmarried, at the time of her purgation or ſickneſs; and ſuch a copulation, which at another time would be lawful, ought to be abſtained from at ſuch a time, as prejudicial to themſelves, and to their poſterity, as well as contrary to the divine law.

℣. 11. And one hath committed abomination with his neighbour's wife, &c.] The ſin of adultery, which is an abominable ſin; it is ſo to God, and it ſhould be ſo to man: or, a man hath committed [c]; ſome man of note, a great man; for this ſin prevailed among the princes and nobles: or every one; it being a general vice, which obtained among all ranks, high and low, rich and poor: and another hath lewdly defiled his daughter-in-law; his wife's daughter, or his ſon's wife, contrary to Lev. xviii. 15, 17: and another in thee hath humbled his ſiſter, his father's daughter; his own ſiſter, begotten of the ſame father, tho' it may be not born of the ſame mother; yet the relation is too near for marriage; and beſides, 'tis a rape that is here intended; and the uncovering of the nakedneſs of a ſiſter, whether by father or mother's ſide, whether born at home or abroad, is prohibited, Lev. xviii. 9. and ſome have thought, that all theſe acts of uncleanneſs were committed in honour of their idols, and when they worſhipped them on the mountains, ℣. 9.

---

[a] אנשי רכיל homines mercaturæ, vel aromatis, ſo Ben Melech obſerves.

[b] גלה revelavit, Montanus; diſcooperuit, Vatablus; retegit, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, ſub. filius, Piſcator.

[c] ואיש־עשה & vir fecit, Cocceius.

℣. 12. In thee have they taken gifts to ſhed blood, &c.] Innocent blood, as the Targum; judges upon the bench, whoſe office it is to take the part of the innocent, and clear him from unjuſt charges; and protect him from the violence of wicked and unreaſonable men, that lay things to his charge, which, if true, would require blood; and yet men in ſuch offices took bribes to bring in the innocent guilty, and paſs ſentence of death on him; which is a moſt ſhocking iniquity indeed; to take bribes in pecuniary matters is very wicked; but to do it in caſes which affect life, is moſt dreadfully cruel: or if it is to be underſtood of ſuch perſons who take bribes to bear falſe witneſs againſt a man, to the taking away of his life, it is a very heinous and deteſtable ſin; for, as for a ſett of jury-men bribed to bring in a wrong verdict, which would be equally a moſt enormous crime; ſuch a cuſtom to try cauſes to be determined by a jury, did not obtain among the Jews: thou haſt taken uſury and increaſe, and thou haſt greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion; not content with moderate uſury and increaſe, and even that were forbid the Jews among themſelves; ſo greedy were they of gain at any rate, that they extorted it of their neighbours, in the moſt violent and oppreſſive manner. Kimchi, by her friends or neighbours, underſtands the Aſſyrians and Egyptians; to whom ſhe gave gifts, extorted by oppreſſion from her own people, to get help of them: and haſt forgotten me, ſaith the Lord; to ſeek for help from me; or they had forgotten his law, which forbids the above ſins; they had forgotten the inſtructions, cautions and directions he had given them. The Targum is, "and haſt forſook my worſhip;" forgetfulneſs of God is the cauſe of all ſin.

℣. 13. Behold therefore, I have ſmitten mine hand at thy diſhoneſt gain which thou haſt made, &c.] As one amazed at it; or as filled with indignation againſt it; or as grieved and diſtreſſed at it; ſo Jarchi and Kimchi: or elſe as rejoicing at the puniſhment going to be inflicted on them for it. So the Septuagint renders it, "I will bring my hand upon them;" and the Targum, "behold, I will bring my vengeance upon thee for the ſins of mammon," &c. Jarchi and Kimchi obſerve from their Rabbins, that four and twenty ſins are recited by Ezekiel; but the final ſentence of puniſhment is for rapine or diſhoneſt gain, which is the greateſt evil of all, 1 Tim. vi. 10: and at thy blood which hath been in the midſt of thee; the innocent blood ſhed in the midſt of her; not ſo much by thieves and cut-throats, as under a pretence of juſtice, which was very abominable indeed; againſt which the Lord expreſſes juſt and ſtrong reſentment.

℣. 14. Can thine heart endure, &c.] Or ſtand[d]; ſurely it muſt fall within thee; become like water, and melt as wax, be it ever ſo hard and adamantine: or can thine hands be ſtrong in the days that I ſhall deal with thee? ſurely they muſt become weak, and drop, and not be able to hold a weapon for defence: and, if this would be the caſe, when God ſhould deal with the Jews for their ſins, by ſending the Chaldean army to beſiege their city, and take it; how will it be with ſinners at the day of judgment, and to all eternity, when the awful ſentence ſhall be pronounced, go ye curſed; when the wrath of God ſhall be poured out upon them; when they ſhall be caſt into hell, where the worm dies not, and the fire is not quenched? this will be intolerable by the moſt ſtout hearted ſinner; no heart will be ſtrong enough to ſtand up under it, or hands to keep it off: I the Lord have ſpoken it, and will do it; he who is the mighty God, the eternal and unchangeable Jehovah; he has ſaid it, that he will deal with impenitent ſinners in a way of wrath, and he'll be as good as his word; he will certainly accompliſh it; it is in vain for men to flatter themſelves to the contrary; or to put away the evil day far from them; it ſhall ſurely be. The Targum is, "I have decreed by my word, and I will eſtabliſh it."

℣. 15. And I will ſcatter thee among the heathen, and diſperſe thee in the countries, &c.] Not only cauſe them to be carried captive to ſome one place, as Babylon; but to be ſcattered and diſperſed throughout the ſeveral provinces of it, and in other nations, as chaff is by the wind; ſignifying hereby the power by which it would be done; their weakneſs, who would not be able to hinder it; and the uncomfortable condition they would be in: and will conſume thy filthineſs out of thee; by deſtroying ſome filthy perſons, and reforming others; by bringing them by means of thoſe afflictions to a ſenſe of their ſins, and to forſake them; and ſo would be refined as ſilver from its droſs in a furnace: it may have a particular reference to their idolatry, that filthy ſin, which they were cured of, and purged from, by their captivity, and to which they returned no more.

℣. 16. And thou ſhalt take thine inheritance in thyſelf in the ſight of the heathen, &c.] No longer be the inheritance of God, but their own; and not have God to be their portion and inheritance, but themſelves; and a poor portion and inheritance that muſt be, being in captivity, poverty and diſtreſs; enjoying neither their civil nor religious liberties, as heretofore; it would be now manifeſt to the heathens, that they were forſaken of God, and left to themſelves. Some render it, and thou ſhalt be profaned, or polluted in thyſelf[e]; ſhalt be known to be ſo to thyſelf, as well as appear ſo to others. The Targum is, "I will be ſanctified in thee before the people:" and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord; able to do what I ſay; faithful to my word; omniſcient, omnipreſent and omnipotent; and this thou ſhalt not only know, but own and acknowledge, when theſe calamities take place, and have their effect.

---

[d] היעמד num quid ſtabit cor tuum? Pagninus, Montanus; conſiſtet, Munſter, Vatablus, Piſcator; perſtabit, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; conſtabit, Cocceius, Starckius.

[e] ונחלת בך & prophana effecta in te, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; prophana efficieris, Piſcator; & polluta eris in te, Grotius; & prophanata eris in te, Starckius; & prophanaberis in te, Cocceius.

℣. 17. And the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] The word of prophecy from the Lord, as the Targum: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 18. Son of man, the houſe of Iſrael is to me become droſs, &c.] Vile, deſpicable, uſeleſs and unprofitable; to which the wicked of the earth are compared, Pſ. cxix. 119. and here the Lord's profeſſing people, they differing nothing from them, being ſadly degenerated; formerly they were as ſilver, and ſo they might be reckoned among themſelves; but to God, who is omniſcient, the ſearcher of the hearts and reins, who ſaw all their actions, and knew the ſpring of them, in his ſight they were as droſs: all they are braſs, and tin, and iron, and lead in the midſt of the furnace; or crucible [f]; where they are put together, in order to be ſet in the furnace, and melted down. It is not uſual to put ſo many different metals together for melting, but ſeparately; but here it ſeems to intend a mixture of them all together; and ſo the Targum and Septuagint render it, "all they as braſs, &c. are "mixed;" ſeveral metals of the baſer ſort are here mentioned, by a gradation from the better to the worſe; tin being not ſo good as braſs, and iron of leſs value than either, and lead than any of them. Some think the different characters of the people are here deſcribed; impudent perſons by braſs; hypocrites by tin; cruel and ſavage ones by iron; and ſuch as were ſottiſh and ſtupid by lead; or, as others, covetous ones: they are even the droſs of ſilver; once they were like ſilver, precious and valuable, whilſt they retained the true religion, and the worſhip of God, and behaved agreeable to their character in the performance of all good works, and were in outward flouriſhing circumſtances; but now degenerated from the pure worſhip of God, and ſunk into idolatry and wickedneſs, and become poor and miſerable.

℣. 19. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, becauſe ye are all become droſs, &c.] King, princes, nobles, prophets, prieſts, as well as the common people; the apoſtacy was general, in city and country; ſcarce any exceptions to be made: therefore will I gather you into the midſt of Jeruſalem; from the ſeveral parts of the country, thinking they ſhould be ſafe there, when the deſign of God by this providence was the deſtruction of them in it.

℣. 20. As they gather ſilver and braſs, and iron, and lead, and tin into the midſt of the furnace, &c.] As refiners of metal do; tho' not together, as here, but each metal apart. Silver is here mentioned, to denote that thoſe who were truly good ſhould ſuffer in this calamity, and be tried and purified by it: to blow the fire upon it, and to melt it; the metal being covered with fuel; this is kindled and blowed upon, to cauſe the greater heat, in order to melt it down; expreſſive of the wrath of God, as follows: ſo will I gather you in mine anger, and in my fury; from the ſeveral parts of the land unto the city of Jeruſalem; this they thought was for their good and ſafety, but it was in wrath, and in order to ruin: and I will leave you there, and melt you; that is, I will leave you in the city of Jeruſalem, to the ſword, famine and peſtilence, to be deſtroyed by them; or with fire at the burning of the city: or, I will reſt [g]; as the refiner does; having put his metal into the furnace, and blown the fire, ſits ſtill till all is melted.

℣. 21. Yea, I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, &c.] Not only gather them in wrath, as before; but blow upon them in wrath, which is often compared to fire in ſcripture; and beſides, the city and temple of Jeruſalem were to be burnt, and were burnt with material fire, in conſequence of God's diſpleaſure againſt his people: and ye ſhall be melted in the midſt thereof; of the city of Jeruſalem; be deſtroyed by one judgment or another in it; or periſh in the conflagration of it.

℣. 22. As ſilver is melted in the furnace, ſo ſhall ye be melted in the midſt thereof, &c.] This is repeated for the greater confirmation of it; and the people might aſſure themſelves that it would verily be, as was threatened: and ye ſhall know that I the Lord have poured out my fury upon you; feel it upon them; be ſenſible of it, and acknowledge it; and that it is the Lord's doings, and righteouſly done; theſe are they who are meant by the ſilver, who, tho' caſt into the furnace, were not deſtroyed, only purified, and made the better and brighter for their afflictions.

℣. 23. And the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] The word of prophecy from the Lord, as the Targum: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 24. Son of man, ſay unto her, thou land, &c.] Thou land of Iſrael, as the Targum: thou art not cleanſed; from filthineſs, by the fire of divine judgments; or reformed from ſins, by the inſtructions, cautions and exhortations of the prophets; none of theſe things had any effect upon her to make her wiſer and better. So the Targum, "a land "not cleanſed it is, and good works are not done "in it, to protect it in the day of curſing:" nor rained upon in the day of indignation; no cooling ſhower to quench the fire of divine wrath; nothing to avert or ſtop the judgments of God; no refreſhment and comfort from the doctrines of the prophets, which fell like rain; it is a judgment upon a people to have no rain, either in a temporal or ſpiritual ſenſe; ſee Zech. xiv. 17, 18. In the Talmud [h], this text is brought to prove that the flood did not come upon the land of Iſrael.

℣. 25. There is a conſpiracy of her prophets in the midſt thereof, &c.] Not of the prophets of the Lord, but of her prophets; ſuch as were agreeable to her, the falſe prophets. The Targum renders it, "a company of ſcribes;" the interpreters of the law; theſe entered into a confederacy together againſt the true prophets, and agreed to propheſy the ſame things, to flatter the people with peace and proſperity, when ſudden deſtruction was at hand: like a roaring lion ravening the prey; that roars when hungry, and while it is tearing the prey in pieces; ſo theſe falſe prophets thundered out their menaces againſt the true prophets, and thoſe that adhered to them; clamouring againſt them as enemies to the ſtate; and threatning them with accuſations to it; and carrying on a judicial proceſs againſt them: they have devoured ſouls; perſecuted men to death, that would not give credit to their prophecies; and deſtroyed the ſouls of thoſe that did, with their falſe doctrines and prophecies: they have taken the treaſure and precious things; of thoſe they deſtroyed; or of others, for propheſying ſmooth things to them; filthy lucre being the principal thing they had in view: they have made her many widows in the midſt thereof; by perſecuting their huſbands to death, for not believing their prophecies; or by perſuading to hold out the ſiege, under a notion of deliverance; whereby the lives of many were loſt by the ſword, famine, and peſtilence, to whoſe death they might be ſaid to be acceſſary.

---

[f] כור catinus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Grotius, Cocceius, Starckius.

[g] והנחתי & requieſcam, Mercerus; & requieſcere faciam, Pagninus, Montanus, Vatablus.

[h] T. Bab. Zebachim, fol. 113. 1.

℣. 26. Her prieſts have violated my law, &c.] Or, forced it[i]; they gave a wrong explanation of it, made it ſpeak what it ſhould not; they wreſted the ſenſe and meaning of it, and did and taught things contrary to it; they broke it themſelves, who ſhould have inſtructed others in it, and exhorted them to have kept it, and encouraged them by their own example: and have profaned my holy things; ſacrifices and oblations, which were only to be offered and eaten by holy perſons; they made them common to others, who ſhould not have partook of them: they have put no difference between the holy and the profane; between holy perſons and things, and profane perſons and things; they made no difference in their practice between the one and the other; but promiſcuouſly converſed with holy and profane perſons, and uſed holy and profane things, without diſtinguiſhing one from the other: neither have they ſhewed the difference between the unclean and the clean; they did not ſhew to the people, as was the duty of their office, what was clean or unclean for ſacrifice; what was clean and allowed to be eaten, and what was unclean and forbid to be eaten; nor who were clean, and who were unclean perſons for converſation; who were to be kept company with, and who not: and have hid their eyes from my ſabbaths; were not careful to obſerve them themſelves, and connived at them that broke them; they might have ſeen men carrying burdens, and doing other ſervile works on ſuch days, but they turned their eyes another way, and would not look at them; and when they did ſee them were ſilent, and would not reprove them: and I am profaned among them; for the law of God being profaned, his inſtitutions profaned, and his ſabbaths profaned, he himſelf was profaned; inaſmuch as he was not ſanctified by them, thro' the juſt obſervation of thoſe things. The Targum is, “my will is profaned among them.”

℣. 27. Her princes in the midſt thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, &c.] The king and his nobles, thoſe of the firſt rank and quality, who ought to have protected the perſons and property of the meaner ſort; theſe were like wolves themſelves, ſubtle, voracious and cruel, preying upon harmleſs perſons, as thoſe creatures do upon the ſheep and lambs: to ſhed blood; innocent blood, as the Targum: and to deſtroy ſouls; take away lives, under a pretence of treaſonable practices, and all with a view to get diſhoneſt gain; that their eſtates may be forfeited, their goods confiſcated, and got into their hands.

℣. 28. And her prophets have daubed them with untempered morter, &c.] Palliated their ſins, declared it to be right, to ſhed the blood they did; and ſeize on the eſtates of men; but this, tho' it might for a while ſatisfy the conſciences of theſe princes, and ſtop the clamours of the people againſt them; yet would not laſt long, but be like the building of a wall with bad ſtuff, which will not ſtand; and daubing it with morter, which will ſoon waſh off. So the Targum, “and the falſe prophets which are in the midſt of her, are like to thoſe that build a wall, and daub it with mere clay, without ſtraw;” ſee the note on ch. xiii. 10. Seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them; pretending viſions from God, when what they ſee, or pretend to ſee, is nothing but vanity and emptineſs, mere deluſions; and propheſying good things, peace and proſperity, when they are all lies; giving out they have meſſages from God, and are ordered to foretel that happy times will be, when it is all falſhood: ſaying, thus ſaith the Lord God, when the Lord hath not ſpoken; herein mimicking the true prophets, who came in the name of the Lord, and uſually prefaced their prophecies with a thus ſaith the Lord; and ſo did theſe falſe prophets, when the Lord ſaid nothing to them, and gave them no commiſſion to ſpeak in his name, or ſay the things they did.

℣. 29. The people of the land have uſed oppreſſion, &c.] The common people, the more powerful among them, ſuch as were in greateſt authority in cities and towns, in neighbourhoods and families, the richeſt among them; theſe oppreſſed the poor, and thoſe that were under them, the ſervants of them, and tenants to them, and who were not able to defend themſelves againſt them: the Septuagint and Syriac verſions underſtand this of the prophets uſing the people of the land ill: and exerciſed robbery; ſuch who had not the power as others had, became thieves and robbers, went on the highway, and took mens money from them; broke up houſes, and plundered them, and ſtole away their goods: and have vexed the poor and needy; by their oppreſſions, rapines, and robberies, when they ſhould rather have relieved them: yea, they have oppreſſed the ſtranger wrongfully; or, without right or judgment[k]; in a very unjuſt manner, contrary to the due courſe of law, againſt all equity and juſtice; which the Iſraelites were warned and ordered not to do, in many paſſages of ſcripture, and for this reaſon, becauſe they had been ſtrangers in Egypt.

℣. 30. And I ſought for a man among them, &c.] Among the princes, prieſts, prophets, and people of the land, who acted the part as above deſcribed; for otherwiſe, no doubt, there were good people in the land, as Jeremiah, Baruch, and others, but not among theſe: that ſhould make up the hedge; that was broken down, by the tranſgreſſions of the people, who exceeded all bounds of law and juſtice; one that would reſtrain them from ſinning, and reform them, and ſet them a good example; one, as the Targum has it, “whoſe works were good;” a good man, that would endeavour by his influence to ſtop the breaking in of ſin, and the conſequences of it: and ſtand in the gap before me for the land, that I ſhould not deſtroy it; in the gap that ſin had made, at which the Lord was entering as a man of war to deſtroy the tranſgreſſors; one that ſhould preſent himſelf to the Lord on the behalf of the people; ſeek mercy for them, as the Targum; interpoſe between God and them, and act the part of an interceſſor; pray for them, as Moſes did for the people of Iſrael, that he would not deſtroy them; ſee Pſ. cvi. 23: but I found none; no reformer of them, no repairer of the breach, nor reſtorer of paths, to dwell in; no interceſſor for them, as Abraham for Sodom, Moſes for Iſrael; or any, like Aaron, that ſtood between the living and the dead to ſtay the plague.

℣. 31. Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them, &c.] Like a mighty torrent, carrying all before it: I have conſumed them with the fire fire of my wrath; by the ſword, famine, peſtilence, and captivity: their own way have I recompenced on their heads, ſaith the Lord; brought juſt puniſhment upon them, ſuch as their ways and works deſerved; "the vengeance of their way;" as the Targum.

---

[i] חמסו תורתי vim faciunt legi meæ, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; vim fecerunt, Cocceius, Starckius.

[k] בלא משפט abſque judicio, Pagninus, Montanus, Vatablus; non in judicio, Cocceius.

CHAP. XXIII.

IN this chapter, the idolatries of Iſrael and Judah are repreſented under the metaphor of two harlots, and their lewdneſs. Theſe harlots are deſcribed by their deſcent; by the place and time in which they committed their whoredoms; by their names, and which are explained, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4. the idolatries of Iſrael, or the ten tribes, under the name of Aholah, which they committed with the Aſſyrians, and which they continued from the Egyptians, of whom they had learned them, are expoſed, ℣. 5, 6, 7, 8. and their puniſhment for them is declared, ℣. 9, 10. then the idolatries of Judah, or the two tribes, under the name of Aholibah, are repreſented as greater than thoſe of the ten tribes, ℣. 11. which they committed with the Aſſyrians, ℣. 12. with the Chaldeans and Babylonians, ℣. 13—18. in imitation of the Egyptians, reviving former idolatries learnt of them, ℣. 19, 20, 21. wherefore they are threatened, that the Chaldeans, Babylonians, and Aſſyrians, ſhould come againſt them, and ſpoil them, and carry them captive, v. 22—35. and the prophet is bid to declare the abominable ſin of them both, v. 36—44. and to ſignify that they ſhould be judged after the manner of adultereſſes, ſhould be ſtoned, and diſpatched with ſwords, their ſons and their daughters, and their houſes burnt with fire; by which means, their adulteries or idolatries ſhould be made to ceaſe, ℣. 45—49.

℣. 1. The word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] The word of prophecy, as the Targum; another prophecy, one upon the ſame ſubject, as in ch. xvi. ſaying, as follows:

℣. 2. Son of man, there were two women, &c.] Or two nations and kingdoms, the kingdom of Iſrael or the ten tribes, and the kingdom of Judah or the two tribes. So the Targum, "ſon of man, "propheſy concerning two provinces, which are as "two women:" the daughters of one mother; either Sarah the wife of Abraham, from whom they ſprung; or becauſe they were originally one kingdom and nation; ſo they were when they came out of Egypt, and during the times of the Judges, and in the reigns of David and Solomon; but became two in the days of Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon, from whom ten tribes revolted, and ſet up a ſeparate kingdom, with Jeroboam at the head of it.

℣. 3. And they committed whoredoms in Egypt, &c.] When they were but one body, one nation; and while they ſojourned as ſtrangers in that land, they learned and practiſed the idolatries of it, Joſh. xxiv. 14. and ſo the Targum, "and they erred in "Egypt, after the worſhip of their idols they erred, "and there they corrupted their works:" they committed whoredoms in their youth; as ſoon as they were come out of Egypt, and were formed into a political and eccleſiaſtical ſtate, had the law of God given them, and promiſed obedience to him, and were eſpouſed by him, which times are called the days of their youth and eſpouſal, Jer. ii. 2. Hoſ. ii. 15. and then were they guilty of whoredom, or ſpiritual adultery, which is idolatry, in making and worſhipping the golden calf after the manner of Egypt; and in joining themſelves to Baal-peor, the god of the Moabites, Exod. xxxii. 1—4. Numb. xxv. 2, 3: there were their breaſts preſſed, there they bruiſed the teats of their virginity; that is, the Egyptians, who drew them into idolatry, and with whom they committed it; which is expreſſed by the actions of adulterous perſons; ſuggeſting, that before this, they were as chaſte and pure virgins to God, adhered to his worſhip, and ſerved him only, and were not defiled with the ſuperſtition and idolatry of the heathens: or, they made[l] the teats or paps of their virginity; that is, made them ſwell and increaſe, being impregnated by them, and their idolatry completed; or to move and heave, being preſſed.

℣. 4. And the names of them were Aholah the elder, &c.] Or, the greater[m]; meaning the ten tribes of Iſrael, which were more in number than Judah, and greater in power and riches; their name Aholah, ſignifies her tent or tabernacle, which was entirely their own, and not the Lord's: their worſhip, and places of worſhip, were of their own appointing, namely, their calves at Dan and Bethel; God had nothing to do with them, there he did not dwell; his tabernacle was not there, that was at Salem, Pſ. lxxvi. 1: and Aholibah her ſiſter; which name ſignifies, my tent or tabernacle is in her; this is the name of Judah or the two tribes, in which ſtood the temple of the Lord, where he was worſhipped, and where he dwelt: ſome think theſe were proper names of two Egyptian harlots; others think there is alluſion to the wife of Eſau, Gen. xxxvi. 2: and they were mine; or, I had them[n]; when they were together; they were originally eſpouſed unto him; he avouched them to be his people, and they avouched him to be their God; he choſe them for himſelf above all other people, and they profeſſed themſelves to be his, and promiſed to ſerve and worſhip him; and for a while did continue in his ſervice and worſhip: and they bare ſons and daughters; to the Lord, whom they brought up in the fear of God, and taught them to ſerve him: the phraſe is expreſſive of their increaſe, and of their happineſs and proſperity whilſt they adhered to the pure worſhip of God: thus were their names; this is the application of them: Samaria is Aholah; or Aholah ſignifies Samaria, which was the metropolis of Ephraim, and belonged to the ten tribes, and is put for the whole, Iſ. vii. 9: and Jeruſalem Aholibah; or Aholibah deſigns Jeruſalem, the head-city of Judah, and ſtands for the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin.

℣. 5.

---

[l] עשו דדי fecerunt mammas, Starckius; fecerunt ut earum mammæ agerent, Guſſetius; ſeſe commovendo ſcilicet, in contentione libidinis æſtuantes, & pectoris anheli reciprocationem ſequentes, Ib. p. 652; ibi ſubagitarunt ubera earum virginum, Cocceius.

[m] הגדולה major, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius.

[n] ותהיינה לי & habui eos, V. L. Heb. factæ ſunt mihi, Piſcator; ſub. uxores, Grotius.

℣. 5. And Aholah played the harlot when ſhe was mine, &c.] His married wife, and ſo ought to have cleaved to him alone: or, under me[o]; under his cover, power, and protection, and therefore it was their intereſt to ſerve him only: or, inſtead of me[p]; or as the Syriac verſion, beſides me; they worſhipped other gods in the room of the true God, or other gods beſides him. The Targum is, "and Aholah erred from my worſhip;" the ten tribes fell into idolatry, when they were God's profeſſing people: and ſhe doted on her lovers; whom ſhe loved even to madneſs; ſhe was mad with love, to the idols, temples, altars, and idolatrous worſhip of the heathens; particularly doted on the Aſſyrians her neighbours; who were become ſo by the conqueſt of Syria; and theſe they treated as their neighbours, and ſought to have them to be their allies and confederates; courted their help and aſſiſtance, and gave them much money for that purpoſe; as Menahem gave to Pul king of Aſſyria, a thouſand talents of ſilver, to confirm the kingdom in his hand, 2 Kings xv. 19.

℣. 6. Which were clothed with blue, &c.] A colour the Aſſyrians were fond of, and clothed their ſoldiers in, and was taking to the eye; and is mentioned, becauſe that men, finely clothed and beautifully arrayed, are more engaging to women, who are fond of dreſs: captains and rulers; men of power and authority in military and civil affairs, either in the camp, or in the court; officers either in the army, or in the king's palace; and which was a recommendation of them: deſirable young men; for their youth, ſtrength, beauty, and honourable employments and offices: horſemen riding upon horſes; of which there was a ſcarcity in Judea; wherefore ſuch were the more deſirable to them, as appearing more grand, and being more ſerviceable and helpful to them.

℣. 7. Thus ſhe committed her whoredoms with them, &c.] Entered into alliance with them, and joined them in their idolatrous worſhip: with all them that were the choſen men of Aſſyria; before deſcribed by their habit, office, and age: and with all on whom ſhe doted; had an inſatiable deſire and luſt after: with all their idols ſhe defiled herſelf; worſhipped all thei dols the Aſſyrians did; and which were defiling, as they muſt needs be, ſince, as the word uſed ſignifies, they were dunghil-gods.

℣. 8. Neither left ſhe her idols brought from Egypt, &c.] Tho' the Iſraelites took in the gods of the Aſſyrians into their worſhip, they did not relinquiſh the golden calves ſet up at Dan and Bethel, in imitation of the Egyptian deities; the idolatrous worſhip of which they learnt in Egypt, and brought from thence: for in her youth they lay with her; the Egyptians enticed the Iſraelites to idolatry when among them, as ſoon as they began to be a people; ſee the note on ℣. 3: and they bruiſed the breaſts of her virginity; who before retained the pure worſhip of God, and was like a chaſte virgin: and poured their whoredom upon her; expreſſive of the numerous acts of idolatry committed together by them.

℣. 9. Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, &c.] To deſtruction; their perſons, families, riches, and kingdom itſelf: into the hand of the Aſſyrians on whom ſhe doted; firſt into the hands of Pul, then Tiglath-Pileſer, then Salmaneſer, all kings of Aſſyria, by whom they were ſpoiled or carried captive; by the two firſt in part, by the laſt wholly; ſee 2 Kings xv. 19, 29. and xvii. 5—18.

℣. 10. Theſe diſcovered her wickedneſs, &c.] That is, ſtripped them of all their ſubſtance: they took her ſons and her daughters; and carried them captive: and ſlew her with the ſword; put an end to the kingdom of Iſrael, or the ten tribes, and which was never recovered to this day: and ſhe became famous among women; or among the provinces, as the Targum; ſhe became famous, or rather infamous, among other nations; was talked of for her ſins, her whoredoms and idolatries, and the vengeance of God upon her for them; ſhe became a bye-word and a proverb among the kingdoms of the world, for her wickedneſs and her deſtruction: for they had executed judgment upon her; that is, the Aſſyrians, who were the inſtruments in God's hand, in doing juſtice to her, and inflicting his judgments on her, and for that ſhe became famous.

℣. 11. And when her ſiſter Aholibah ſaw this, &c.] The two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, when they ſaw the idolatries the ten tribes fell into, and the deſtruction which came upon them for the ſame; inſtead of receiving inſtruction, and taking caution by all this, ſhe was more corrupt in her inordinate love than ſhe; in courting the friendſhip, alliance, and help of their heathen neighbours: and in her whoredoms more than her ſiſter in her whoredoms; guilty of more idolatries than the ten tribes, as in the times of Manaſſeh; ſee Jer. ii. 28.

℣. 12. She doted upon the Aſſyrians her neighbours, &c.] As in the times of Ahaz, who ſent to Tiglath-Pileſer king of Aſſyria for help; and from whence he took the pattern of an altar, and had one built like it at Jeruſalem, and offered upon it, 2 Kings xvi. 7—12: captains and rulers clothed moſt gorgeouſly; or perfectly[q]; with all kind of precious garments, and of all manner of colours; not with blue only, but purple, ſcarlet, crimſon, &c: horſemen riding upon horſes, all of them deſirable young men; ſee the note on ℣. 6.

℣. 13. Then I ſaw that ſhe was defiled, &c.] With idols, and the worſhip of them, ℣. 7: that they took both one way; the ſame way of idolatry; worſhipped the ſame idols, lived the ſame courſe of life, were guilty of the ſame ſin, both Iſrael and Judah.

℣. 14. And that ſhe increaſed her whoredoms, &c.] Added to the number of her idols, increaſed her idols, and even was guilty of more than her ſiſter: for when ſhe ſaw men pourtrayed on the wall; of the temple, as idols were, ch. viii. 10. or upon the wall of a private houſe, where they were worſhipped as houſhold-gods: the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion; the images of their heroes, who after death were deified; and theſe, being drawn upon the wall with vermilion; which being mixed with ceruſe, made a fleſh-colour, were worſhipped; as Bel, Nebo, Merodach, which are names of their idols, Iſ. xlvi. 1. Jer. l. 2. or theſe were graven on the walls, or etched out upon them with minium or red-lead; or rather were painted,

---

[o] תחתי ſub me, Pagninus, Montanus, Munſter, Tigurine verſion, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

[p] Exteros excipiens loco meo, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[q] מכלול omni genere pulchrarum veſtium, Pagninus; abſoluto veſtitu, Montanus; perfectione, ſive univerſitate, ſub. veſtium, Vatablus; perfectiſſime, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; perfecto ornatu, Piſcator; veſtitos accurate, Cocceius.

painted[r], as ſome render the word, with minium, vermilion, or cinnabar, which are the ſame; of which ſee the note on Jer. xxii. 14. and it may be obſerved, that it was uſual with the heathens to paint the images and ſtatues of their gods with theſe. Thus Virgil[s] repreſents Pan, the god of Arcadia, coloured red with minium or vermilion; and Pauſanias[t] ſpeaks of the ſtatue of Bacchus being beſmeared with cinnabar: and Pliny[u] ſays, the face of the image of Jupiter uſed to be anointed with minium or vermilion on feſtival days; and obſerves, that the nobles of Æthiopia uſed to colour themſelves all over with it; this being the colour of the images of their gods, which they reckoned more auguſt, majeſtic, and ſacred. Hence the Romans, in their triumphs, uſed to paint themſelves with vermilion; particularly it is ſaid of Auguſtus Cæſar, that he did this to make himſelf the more conſpicuous and reſpectable, after the example of the Aſſyrians and Medes[w]: and the triumphers choſe to be rubbed all over with a red colour, that they might, according to Iſidore[x], reſemble the divine fire.

℣. 15. Girded with girdles upon their loins, &c.] As a token of dignity and authority; ſee Iſ. xi. 5. which was the peculiar cuſtom of the Babylonians, as Kimchi, from the Talmudiſts, obſerves: exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads; having turbants of various colours upon their heads, after the manner of the Perſians: all of them princes to look to; bore the reſemblance of kings, princes, and the great men of the earth, and whoſe images indeed they were; even of ſuch who in their life-time were famous for military exploits, or for ſome excellency or another, either real or pretended, and after death reckoned among the gods, and worſhipped: after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity; either were theſe heroes where born, whoſe images were pourtrayed; or where Abraham, the father of the Jewiſh nation, was born, and ſo called from thence the land of their nativity; putting them in mind of their original, and of the idolatries of their anceſtors, which they were now returning to.

℣. 16. And as ſoon as ſhe ſaw them with her eyes, ſhe doted upon them, &c.] As luſtful women, on the ſight of the pictures of men, fall in love with them, and are mad after them; ſuch a vehement deſire after the idols of the Chaldeans prevailed, upon ſeeing their images: and ſent meſſengers unto them in Chaldea; to make alliances with the Chaldeans, and to have their idols, and worſhip them.

℣. 17. And the Babylonians came to her in the bed of love, &c.] Entered into alliance with the Jews, and worſhipped together in the ſame idols-temple. Jarchi thinks this refers to the meſſengers of the king of Babylon to Hezekiah; who were gladly received by him, and to whom he ſhewed all the treaſures of his houſe: and they defiled her with their whoredom; or with their idols, as the Targum; they drew them into their idolatrous practices; which were a defiling them, and by which they were corrupted from the ſimplicity of the true worſhip of God: and ſhe was polluted with them, and her mind was alienated from them; or plucked, or disjoined from them[y]; the Chaldeans broke league and covenant with them, hating them as much as before they doted upon them; this was done in the times of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah, who rebelled againſt the king of Babylon, 2 Kings xxiv. 1, 20. as it often is the caſe with lewd women, when they have ſatisfied their luſt with their gallants, loath and deſpiſe them, and caſt them off.

℣. 18. So ſhe diſcovered her whoredoms, and diſcovered her nakedneſs, &c.] The Jews did not ceaſe from their idolatries when they broke with the Babylonians; but were rather more frequent and impudent in them, and courted the friendſhip and alliance of other heathen nations, and their worſhip; even as a lewd woman, when ſhe has caſt off her former lovers, does not leave her lewdneſs, but ſeeks after others; and by her impudence, in diſcovering her whoredoms, and her nakedneſs, and by all the ſigns of a proſtitute, draws in others to commit lewdneſs with her: then my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her ſiſter; as a virtuous huſband is alienated from an adulterous wife, and can't admit her to his bed and board, ſo the mind of the Lord was alienated from the Jews, becauſe of their idolatries; nor could he favour them with his preſence, and the bleſſings of his providence and goodneſs, as he had formerly done; even as his mind had been alienated, on the ſame account, from the ten tribes of Iſrael, and which he ſhowed, by ſuffering them to be carried captive.

℣. 19. Yet ſhe multiplied her whoredoms, &c.] Tho' the Lord frowned upon the Jews in the times of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah, yet ſtill they went on, and increaſed their alliances and idolatries with the heathen nations: in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein ſhe had played the harlot in the land of Egypt; they called to mind with pleaſure the idolatries of their fathers in Egypt, and committed the ſame themſelves; they ſent embaſſadors to Egypt, in the times of Zedekiah, for help and aſſiſtance, and to enter into alliance with them, when they renewed among them the idolatries of that nation; ſee ch. xvii. 15.

℣. 20. For ſhe doted upon their paramours, &c.] Or concubines[z]; the neighbouring nations and allies of the Egyptians, whoſe friendſhip the Jews courted, and whoſe idols they ſerved: the Septuagint and Arabic verſions wrongly read, the Chaldeans: whoſe fleſh is as the fleſh of aſſes, and whoſe iſſue is like the iſſue of horſes; by fleſh is meant the membrum virile, which in aſſes is very large, and therefore dedicated to Priapus by the heathens; and vaſt is the profuſion of ſeed in coitus by horſes, to which the fleſh and iſſue of the Egyptian paramours are compared; who were very libidinous, and therefore deſirable to inſatiable women; all which ſerves to expreſs the eagerneſs of the people of the Jews after idolatry.

℣. 21. Thus thou calledſt to remembrance the lewdneſs of thy youth, &c.] By committing the ſame; the ſame idolatries their fathers committed in Egypt, they now committed, being in alliance with the ſame people: or, thou cauſedſt to be viſited the lewdneſs

---

[r] חקקים בששר depictas ſinopide, Pagninus; pictas minio, Piſcator.

[s] Pan deus Arcadiæ venit, quem vidimus ipſi
Sanguineis ebuli baccis, minioque rubentem. Bucolic. Eclog. 10.

[t] Achaica. ſive l. 7. p. 452. & Arcadica, ſive l. 8. p. 520.

[u] Nat. Hiſt. l. 33. c. 7.

[w] Alexander ab Alex. Genial. Dier. l. 6. c. 6. p. 332.

[x] Originum, l. 18. c. 2.

[y] ותקע נפשה מהם avulſa eſt, Munſter; et luxata eſt anima ipſius ab eis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[z] פלגשיהם concubinas eorum, Vatablus, ſo Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; concubitores, Munſter, Tigurine verſion; cinædos, Caſtalio; and as Ben Melech obſerves, theſe were men, and not women.

neſs of thy youth[a]; by the Lord, who remembered their ſins, and puniſhed them for them: in bruiſing thy teats by the Egyptians, for the paps of thy youth; committing ſpiritual fornication, that is, idolatry with them; ſignified by preſſing and bruiſing the breaſts and paps of virgins, by corporal fornication with them.

℣. 22. Therefore, O Aholibah, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Or ye two tribes of Benjamin and Judah, hear what the Lord ſays unto you: behold, I will raiſe up thy lovers againſt thee; the Chaldeans, whom they had formerly loved, and in whoſe alliance they were, and whoſe idols they worſhipped: from whom thy mind is alienated; having broke covenant with them, and caſt off their yoke, and rebelled againſt them: and I will bring them againſt thee on every ſide; to beſiege and encompaſs Jeruſalem on every ſide with their army, as they did, ſo that there was no eſcaping.

℣. 23. The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, &c.] Both the inhabitants of the city of Babylon, called in the Hebrew text the children of Babylon, and all the inhabitants of the ſeveral parts of the country of Chaldea, of which Babylon was the metropolis: Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa; the Vulgate Latin verſion, and ſo Jerom, take theſe words to be appellatives, and render them, noblemen, tyrants, and princes; as ſome mentioned by Jarchi do, governors, princes, and rulers; and Kimchi[b] thinks, they are the titles of the Babylonian princes ſpoken of in Jeremiah, as Nebuzaradan, Nebuſhaſban, Rabſaris, Rab-mag, &c. Jer. xxxix. 3, 13. but with others, they are the proper names of perſons or places: and ſo the Targum calls them, Pekodaites, Shoaites, and Koaites; that is, the inhabitants of places ſo called; and certain it is, that Pekod was a province of Babylon, Jer. l. 21. which, according to Junius, lay between the two rivers Tigris and Lycus, and in which was the famous city of Niniveh; and according to him, Shoa, or the Shoaites, lay between the rivers Lycus and Gorgus, among whom were the Adiabeni, and the town called Siai by Ptolemy; and the Koaites were ſituated in the inward part of Aſſyria by Arbelitis, where formerly was the fortified town of Koah, by hiſtorians called Gauga; and by Strabo, Gaugamela. Grotius thinks that Pekod are the Bactriani; and that Shoa is Siai in Armenia with Ptolemy; and that Koa is Choana of Media, with the ſame Ptolemy; but be they who they will, they were ſuch people as were to come with the Chaldean army againſt the Jews: and all the Aſſyrians with them; which were now one people with the Chaldeans and Babylonians, by whom formerly the ten tribes were carried captive: all of them deſirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horſes; perſons of high rank and dignity, in chief offices at court, or in the camp, all in the bloom and ſtrength of youth; men of name and renown, for their honour and valour; and all well mounted, a famous cavalry of them; and who before were lovely on theſe accounts, when they were their gallants and lovers, their confederates and allies, but now formidable and terrible being their enemies; ſee ℣. 5, 6, 12.

℣. 24. And they ſhall come againſt thee with chariots, waggons, and wheels, &c.] With chariots, in which were their princes and great men, their chief commanders, generals, and captains, and in which they fought, as was uſual in thoſe times; and with waggons, to carry their proviſions and warlike ſtores; and with wheels, that is, either with chariots and waggons that ran upon wheels, or with wheels for them in caſe they ſhould break down: the firſt of theſe words here, according to ſome Jewiſh interpreters, as Doneſh in Jarchi, ſignifies warlike inſtruments in general; and the ſecond word is uſed for chariots: and ſo the whole is paraphraſed by the Targum, "and they ſhall come "againſt thee with inſtruments of war, with cha"riots and wheels;" all which denotes how well prepared they ſhould be, and with what ſwiftneſs they would come: and with an aſſembly of people, which ſhall ſet againſt thee buckler, and ſhield, and helmet round about; a multitude of people, a vaſt army gathered out of all the provinces of Babylon, having bucklers and ſhields about their bodies, and helmets on their heads, to protect and defend them; and theſe ſhould ſurround the city of Jeruſalem. So the Targum, "an army of people, "armed with ſhields and helmets, ſhall ſet them"ſelves againſt thee round about:" and I will ſet judgment before them, and they ſhall judge thee according to their judgments; that is, I will deliver you into their hands, and they ſhall judge and condemn you; not according to my laws and yours, but according to their own laws, according to the cuſtoms and uſages among them, according to the law of nations; they ſhall deal with you as rebels and covenant-breakers, ſuch Zedekiah was; he broke covenant with the king of Babylon, and rebelled againſt him: and this was fulfilled when he fell into his hands, and when he ſlew his children before his face, and then put out his eyes.

℣. 25. And I will ſet my jealouſy againſt thee, and they ſhall deal furiouſly with thee, &c.] As a jealous huſband, enraged againſt his adulterous wife, falls upon her in his fury, and uſes her with great ſeverity; ſo the Jews having committed ſpiritual fornication, that is, idolatry, and departed from the Lord, he threatens to ſtir up the fury of his jealouſy, and puniſh them ſeverely by the Chaldeans, as follows: they ſhall take away thy noſe, and thine ears, and thy remnant ſhall fall by the ſword; as gallants uſe their harlots when they leave them, or jealous huſbands their adulterous wives, disfiguring them, that they may be marked and known what they are, and be deſpiſed by others; and as has been the cuſtom in ſome countries, particularly with the Egyptians, to cut off the noſes of adulterous perſons; here it is to be underſtood figuratively: by the noſe, according to Jarchi, Kimchi, and Ben Melech, is meant the king, who is higher than his people, as the noſe is the higheſt part in a man's face; and by the ears the prieſt, who cauſed a noiſe to be heard when he entered into the temple with his bells; or rather, becauſe it was the prieſt's office to attend to the word of God, and teach it the people; in general, theſe denote every thing that was excellent among the Jews, their city, temple, king, kingdom, princes, prieſts and prophets, which ſhould be demoliſhed and removed; and by the remnant is meant the common people, that ſhould come into the hands of the Chaldeans, and fall by their ſword. So the Targum paraphraſes it, "thy princes and thy nobles "ſhall go into captivity, and thy people ſhall be "killed with the ſword:" they ſhall take thy ſons and thy daughters, and thy reſidue ſhall be devoured by the fire; take and carry their ſons and daughters captive, and burn with fire the city left by them. Thus the Targum, “ they ſhall carry thy ſons and “ daughters captive, and the beauty of thy land “ ſhall be burnt with fire;” that is, the city of Jeruſalem, the temple, the king's palaces, the houſes of the great men, and others in it, which were all burnt with fire, when taken by the Chaldeans, Jer. lii. 13.

---

[a] ותפקדי את זמת נעוריך & viſitaſti ſcelus adoleſcentiæ, vel pueritiæ tuæ, Piſcator, Starckius; i. e. viſitari feciſti a deo, a Lapide.

[b] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 51. 1.

℣. 26. They ſhall alſo ſtrip thee out of thy clothes, &c.] As ſuch who are taken captives are uſually ſerved: and take away thy fair jewels; their ornaments of every kind: or, the veſſels of thy glory [c]; Kimchi obſerves, this may be meant either of the garments of the prieſts, and the veſſels of the ſanctuary; or of the whole ſpoil of the city in general, whether in the temple, or in other houſes.

℣. 27. Thus will I make thy lewdneſs to ceaſe from thee, &c.] That is, their idolatry; for after this captivity, the Jews never were guilty of idolatry any more: and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt; the idolatry which they learned there, and brought from thence; ſo the Targum, “ the “ worſhip of thine idols, which was with thee when “ thou waſt in the land of Egypt:” ſo that thou ſhalt not lift up thine eyes unto them; to the idols of Egypt, to pray unto them, and worſhip them: nor remember Egypt any more; with any delight and pleaſure, and ſo as to deſire an alliance with them, and help from them, or to join with them in their idolatries: ſo the Targum, “ and the idols of “ the Egyptians thou ſhalt remember no more.”

℣. 28. For thus ſaith the Lord God, I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hateſt, &c.] The Chaldeans and Babylonians, before loved by her, and doted upon, but now hated and rebelled againſt; and to fall into ſuch hands muſt be a ſore judgment; and this the Lord threatens to bring upon the Jews for their ſins; and he having ſaid it, it might be depended upon, it would be performed; and for the greater certainty of it, it is repeated in different words: into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated; ſee the note on ℣. 17.

℣. 29. And they ſhall deal with thee hatefully, &c.] The Chaldeans ſhould hate the Jews, as much as before they loved them, when they came into the bed of love to them, ℣. 17. and as much as the Jews hated them; which they ſhewed by their ſevere and rigorous uſage of them, putting ſome to the ſword, carrying the reſt captive, and employing them in hard ſervice and labour; and which is ſtill worſe, and an aggravation of all this, and ſhall take away all thy labour; whatever they got by labour, that they ſhould not enjoy, but ſhould be taken away from them: and ſhall leave thee naked and bare; ſtripped of all the neceſſaries and conveniences of life: and the nakedneſs of thy whoredoms ſhall be diſcovered, both thy lewdneſs and thy whoredoms; it ſhall then be manifeſt to all, that thou haſt been guilty of idolatry, and haſt departed from the Lord thy God, which has cauſed him to bring theſe judgments upon thee for thy ſins. The Targum paraphraſes the latter part of the clauſe thus, “ the ſins of thy wicked counſels, and “ thy pride.” It ſeems to be a heap of words, to expreſs the groſſneſs of their idolatries, which now ſhould be expoſed.

℣. 30. And I will do theſe things unto thee, &c.] What the Chaldeans did, God is ſaid to do, becauſe he ſuffered them to do theſe things, as a puniſhment for their ſins; yea, it was according to his will, and by his orders. The Septuagint and Vulgate Latin verſions render it, they have done theſe things unto thee; that is, the Chaldeans. The Targum is, “ thy ſins are the cauſe of theſe things “ unto thee;” that is, their idolatry and other iniquities. Hence the Syriac verſion is very particular, “ for thy whoredoms theſe things ſhall be “ done unto thee;” and the Arabic verſion, “ thy “ whoredom hath done (or is the cauſe of) theſe “ things unto thee,” as follows: becauſe thou haſt gone a whoring after the heathen, and becauſe thou art polluted with their idols; imitated them in their idolatries; worſhipped the ſame dunghil-gods as they did, as the word ſignifies; with which, it was no wonder, they ſhould be polluted, and become abominable unto God.

℣. 31. Thou haſt walked in the way of thy ſiſter, &c.] Samaria, or the ten tribes of Iſrael; followed them in their idolatrous practices, were guilty of the ſame: therefore will I give her cup into thine hand; the cup of her vengeance, as the Targum; inflict the ſame puniſhment on the two tribes as on the ten, and ſuffer them to be carried captive as they had been.

℣. 32. Thus ſaith the Lord God, thou ſhalt drink of thy ſiſter's cup deep and large, &c.] That is, partake of the ſame puniſhment, which was very great, ſignified by a deep and large cup, which holds much: thou ſhalt be laughed to ſcorn, and had in deriſion; by the nations round about, who inſtead of pitying them under their troubles, will rejoice at them; juſt as drunken men are laughed at, when intoxicated, and reeling about: it containeth much; the cup of wrath and vengeance; as much as will laſt ſeventy years drinking. The Targum connects this with the preceding clauſe, “ and thou ſhalt be for deriſion and for laughter, “ becauſe of the greatneſs of the tribulation that “ ſhall come upon thee.”

℣. 33. Thou ſhalt be filled with drunkenneſs and ſorrow, &c.] Sorrow is the effect of drunkenneſs; theſe two generally go together; when a man is filled with the one, he is with the other; this expreſſes the greatneſs of the ſorrow and diſtreſs of the Jews in captivity: with the cup of aſtoniſhment and deſolation; their puniſhment would be ſo great, and their condition be ſo deſolate, that it ſhould aſtoniſh them, and bereave them of their ſenſes; and they ſhould be like mad men, as their actions in the following verſe ſhew: with the cup of thy ſiſter Samaria; the ſame puniſhment as inflicted on the ten tribes.

℣. 34. Thou ſhalt even drink it, and ſuck it out, &c.] The very dregs of it, that which lies at the bottom, which is the moſt nauſeous, and the moſt pernicious; not thro' love to it, but thro' force, ſhall be obliged to it; ſee Pſ. lxxv. 8: and thou ſhalt break the ſheards thereof; and ſuck them, ſo that not a drop of the liquor ſhould be loſt; even what has penetrated into the earthen veſſel, which this cup is ſuppoſed to be; and therefore it ſhall be broken to pieces, and theſe pieces ſucked, that all may be got out; ſuggeſting, that there will be no abatement of the puniſhment, it ſhall be endured to the utmoſt: or it may be an alluſion to drunkards, who having drunk up their liquor, and become drunk, break their glaſſes, pots, and cups, and to which the next clauſe agrees: and pluck off thine own breaſts; as men in their drunken fits, being like mad men, tear their own fleſh; and ſo the Targum paraphraſes it, "thou ſhalt tear thy "fleſh;" ſo the Jews, under puniſhment for ſin, and preſſed with the guilt of it, thro' indignation at themſelves, ſhould tear their fleſh, and particularly pluck off their breaſts: the alluſion is to fornication, to which idolatry is compared, in which thoſe parts are particularly affected; ſee ℣. 21. the Syriac verſion renders this and the former clauſe thus, thou ſhalt ſhave thine hair, and cut off thy breaſts; Kimchi thinks, by the breaſts are meant the oral and written laws, which ceaſed in the time of the captivity; but without any foundation: for I have ſpoken it, ſaith the Lord; and therefore it ſhall be done.

---

[c] כלי תפארתך vaſa gloriæ tuæ, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus; inſtrumenta ornatus tui, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator; vaſa ornatus tui, Starckius.

℣. 35. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, becauſe thou haſt forgotten me, &c.] His word, worſhip, and ordinances, and did not attend unto them, but worſhipped ſtrange gods: ſo the Targum, "becauſe thou haſt left my worſhip:" and caſt me behind thy back; or as the ſame paraphraſe, "haſt caſt the fear of me from before thine eyes;" or out of thy ſight, his laws and ſtatutes; ſee Neh. ix. 26. Iſ. v. 24. as men caſt behind their backs that which they have no value for and loath, and which they don't care to ſee, and chuſe to forget: therefore bear thou alſo thy lewdneſs, and thy whoredoms; that is, the guilt of their ſins, the puniſhment of their idolatries, and ſhame and confuſion for them.

℣. 36. The Lord ſaid moreover unto me, ſon of man, wilt thou judge Aholah and Aholibah? &c.] Plead the cauſe of Iſrael and Judah? ſay any thing in their defence, and in excuſe of them? or intercede and pray for them, that threatened judgments may not come upon them? no, do nothing of this kind; if thou wilt do any thing, do as follows: yea, declare unto them their abominations; their abominable ſins, their murders, adulteries, and idolatries; ſet them in a true light before them, in all their aggravated circumſtances; that if it can be, they may be brought to a true ſight and ſenſe of them, to repent of them, be aſhamed of them, loath them, confeſs them, and forſake them.

℣. 37. That they have committed adultery, &c.] Either literally, adultery with their neighbours wives, which was a prevailing ſin with this people; or figuratively, ſpiritual adultery, that is, idolatry: and blood is in their hands; the Targum is, "they have ſhed the blood of innocents with their "hands;" the blood of prophets and righteous men, ſent unto them; and the blood of their infants in ſacrificing to idols, as after-mentioned: and with their idols have they committed adultery; by worſhipping them, which is ſpiritual adultery; and this being ſo explicitly mentioned, it ſeems to be diſtinguiſhed from corporal adultery in the firſt clauſe, which may be only there deſigned; and ſo Kimchi thinks: and have alſo cauſed their ſons, whom they bare unto me, to paſs for them thro' the fire to devour them; their children, who were the Lord's by national adoption, and who ought to have been trained up in the worſhip and ſervice of God, were in a moſt barbarous and unnatural manner cauſed to paſs thro' the fire, for or to the idols, Molech and Baal; and that not merely by way of luſtration and dedication, which was ſometimes done by paſſing between two fires, but ſo as to be devoured and deſtroyed by the fire.

℣. 38. Moreover, this they have done unto me, &c.] The following piece of wickedneſs, which was very provoking to the Lord: they have defiled my ſanctuary in the ſame day; as they cauſed their children to paſs thro' the fire to their idols, by entering into the ſanctuary when they had ſo done, and were thus defiled, and by offering ſacrifices to their idols in it; or under pretence of ſerving the Lord, when they had juſt been guilty of murder and idolatry: and have profaned my ſabbaths; not only by doing their own worldly and civil buſineſs, but by ſlaying their infants on thoſe days, and ſacrificing them to idols.

℣. 39. For when they had ſlain their children to their idols, &c.] This explains more clearly what is before ſaid, that by cauſing their children to paſs thro' the fire was a ſlaying them; and that their paſſing thro' it for them, was for their idols, and unto them; ſee ℣. 37. and now when they had been guilty of ſuch ſhocking wickedneſs, then they came the ſame day into my ſanctuary to profane it; not that they came into the temple on purpoſe to profane it; but coming into it, being themſelves defiled with the murder of their infants, and offering ſacrifices to idols, or performing an hypocritical ſervice to the Lord, this was in the event, a profanation of the ſanctuary: and lo, thus they have done in the midſt of mine houſe; ſet up idols there, and worſhipped them; as they did in the temple itſelf, in the times of Ahaz and Manaſſeh; ſee Jer. vii. 30.

℣. 40. And furthermore, that ye have ſent for men to come from far, &c.] From Egypt, Aſſyria, and Chaldea, to treat with them, and enter into alliances and confederacies with them, and to join them in their idolatrous practices; theſe heathen nations did not ſend to the Jews, but the Jews to them; they did not court their friendſhip and alliance, but the Jews courted theirs: unto whom a meſſenger was ſent; to court their favour, and ſolicit a confederacy, and to deſire that embaſſadors might be ſent to reſide among them: and lo they came; theſe heathen courts liſtened to the propoſal, and accordingly ſent their plenipotentiaries and embaſſadors to them, who came in their maſters name, and with their credentials; and for the reception of whom, great preparations were made, as follows: for whom thou didſt waſh thyſelf, paintedſt thy eyes, and deckedſt thyſelf with ornaments; juſt as harlots do to make themſelves agreeable to their lovers; who uſe waſhes and paint, as Jezebel did, and dreſs themſelves in their beſt cloaths, and adorn themſelves in the beſt manner they can. Harlots had their particular attire, by which they were known, Prov. vii. 10. and they not only uſed bagnios or baths, but waſhes for their face, to make them look beautiful, and particularly painted their eyes, to make them look larger; for large eyes in women, in ſome nations, were reckoned very handſome, particularly among the Greeks: hence Juno, in Homer[d], is called βοωπις, the ox-eyed, as ſome tranſlate it; or rather, the large-eyed Juno: and the Grecian women, in order to make their eyes large, made uſe of a powder mixed with their waſhes, which ſhrunk their eye-brows, and cauſed their eyes to ſtand out, and look fuller and larger; and ſuch was the paint which Pliny[e] calls ſtibium, and ſays it was by ſome named platyophthalmon, thalmon, becauſe in the beautiful eye-brows of women it dilated the eyes; and it ſeems that painting with ſomething of this nature was uſed by the Jewiſh women, in imitation of the heathens, for the ſame purpoſe, eſpecially by harlots; hence the phraſe of renting the face, or rather the eyes, with paint, Jer. iv. 30. ſo the Mooriſh women now, as Dr. Shaw [f] relates, to add a gracefulneſs to their complexions, tinge their eye-lids with al-kahol, the powder of lead-ore; and this is performed by firſt dipping into this powder a ſmall wooden bodkin, of the thickneſs of a quill, and then drawing it afterwards thro' the eye-lids, over the ball of the eye; and which is properly a renting the eyes indeed, as the prophet calls it, with powder of pouk, or lead-ore: ſo for the gratifying theſe idolatrous embaſſadors, idols were ſet up, altars built, and ſacrifices prepared; and, in order to their public entry, and to ſhow how acceptable they were, palaces were fitted up for them, and the ſtreets thro' which they paſſed decorated, and all public marks of eſteem and affection given them; to this the Targum ſeems to have reſpect, paraphraſing the words thus, “and lo, they came to the place thou hadſt prepared; thou haſt adorned the ſtreets, and appointed palaces.”

---

[d] Iliad. 1. l. 556.

[e] Nat. Hiſt. l. 33. c. 6.

ℽ. 41. And ſateſt upon a ſtately bed, &c.] Or honourable [g], a bed of ſtate; either a throne, a royal ſeat under a canopy, on which the king of Judah ſat to receive foreign embaſſadors; or a ſtately bed at a feaſt, made for the entertainment of them; it being uſual in the eaſtern nations to ſit on beds at eating, to which the next clauſe agrees. The alluſion is to an harlot ſitting on a bed decked out by her to allure men to lie with her; ſee Prov. vii. 16: and a table prepared before it; before the bed, furniſhed with the richeſt proviſions to treat the embaſſadors with; or this may deſign an altar built for them to offer on it ſacrifices to their idols, according to the cuſtoms of their countries: whereupon thou haſt ſet mine incenſe and mine oil; which were the gifts of God to this people, and which they ſhould have uſed in his ſervice; but with theſe they treated the miniſters of heathen princes; ſcenting the room where they were entertained with incenſe, and anointing their heads and feet with oil, for their pleaſure and refreſhment; or they offered theſe on the altars of the idols to them.

ℽ. 42. And a voice of a multitude being at eaſe was with her, &c.] With Abolibah, with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin: or, in her, in Jeruſalem; or in it, or about it [h]; the bed, or table, or both: theſe were either the people of the many nations that came in great numbers with the embaſſadors, as their retinue, and for the greater ſplendor of them; and who came, not to make war, but in a peaceable way, being invited to come; or theſe were a confluence of the Jewiſh people, who came from all parts to ſee the public entry of theſe embaſſadors; who were quite eaſy with it, ſince they came as the embaſſadors of their allies and friends, in whoſe alliance they thought themſelves ſafe and happy; and therefore welcomed them with their loud huzzas: and with the men of the common ſort were brought Sabeans from the wilderneſs; or, and with men becauſe of a multitude of men [i]; that is, with thoſe men that came from ſeveral parts on this occaſion, for the ſake of a greater number, and of making a greater appearance; the Sabeans that dwelt in the deſert of Arabia were fetched from thence; or their neighbours round about Moab and Ammon, that dwelt in the wilderneſs, were ſent for, and brought to make the ſolemnity the greater; ſo Jarchi; and to this ſenſe the Targum renders it, “becauſe of the multitude of men that came round about on every ſide from the wilderneſs.” Some render it, drunkards from the wilderneſs [k]; a parcel of drunken fellows that lived in the wilderneſs, ruſtic, brutiſh people; theſe were brought as fit perſons to drink healths, and roar on this occaſion: which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads; that is, the Jews put theſe ornaments upon the hands and heads of theſe men of the common ſort, and the Sabeans with them, and theſe poor country drunken fellows too, that they might make the better appearance when they met and huzza'd the embaſſadors at their entry; or which Sabeans and other foreigners put theſe ornaments on Abolah and Abolibah, and enticed them to the worſhip of their idols, and taught them idolatry.

ℽ. 43. Then ſaid I unto her that was old in adulteries, &c.] That had been an old adulterer or idolater; meaning either Abolah the ten tribes, who from Jeroboam's time had been guilty of idolatry; or Abolibah the two tribes, who had remained longer in their own country, and had been long given to idolatry; or both of them, as ſome think, the whole body of the people of Iſrael, who had been addicted to idolatry ever ſince they came out of Egypt, and ſo was like an old harlot indeed: now the Lord ſaid unto her, or concerning her [l]; in his own mind, after the manner of men. So the Targum, “I ſaid concerning the congregation of Iſrael, whoſe people are old in ſins:” will they now commit whoredoms with her, and ſhe with them? will they commit adultery with ſuch an old harlot? are they not weary of her? and will they not rather loath and deſpiſe her? as it is common when ſuch proſtitutes grow old; and what pleaſure can ſhe take thus advanced in years in ſuch impurities? ſuggeſting, that alliances and confederacies between the Jews and the nations of the world could not be agreeable on either ſide, eſpecially to the former; but ſo it was, and ſo were their idolatries likewiſe. The Targum is, “now ſhe will leave her idols, and return to thy worſhip; but ſhe returned not.”

ℽ. 44. Yet they went in unto her, &c.] Made a league with one another, and joined in idolatrous worſhip: as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot; with the ſame heat of luſt, with the ſame greedineſs and eager deſire as young men do, when they go into a brothel-houſe where a beautiful harlot lives: ſo went they in unto Abolah, and unto Abolibah, the lewd women; the ten tribes of Iſrael, and the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, which apoſtatized from God, and committed idolatry; with theſe, the Sabeans before-mentioned, and other nations joined, in idolatrous worſhip.

---

[f] Travels, p. 229. Ed. II.

[g] כבודה honorato, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[h] בה in ea, Pagninus, Montanus, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; in illa, Cocceius, Starckius; in illo, Piſcator; circa eam, A Lapide.

[i] ואל אנשים מרב אדם & cum viris ut multiplicarent homines, Pagninus; ut adeſſent multi homines, Munſter; præ multitudine hominum, Tigurine verſion, Cocceius, Starckius; propter multiplicare homines, Vatablus.

[k] סובאים ממדבר ebrioſi ex deſerto, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; ſo R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 99. 1.

[l] לבלה de inveterata illa, Vatablus.

℣. 45. And the righteous men, &c.] Some underſtand this of the prophets, who were really righteous men; and foretold the righteous judgments of God that ſhould come upon the idolatrous Jews, which was a judging them: others, of righteous men in general, who will one and all agree that perſons guilty of ſuch crimes ought to ſuffer the puniſhment adequate to them, and uſually inflicted on ſuch; but rather the Babylonians are here meant; who, tho' not righteous in themſelves, or truly ſo, yet were ſo in compariſon of the wicked Jews, who had a divine revelation, and knew better than to commit ſuch idolatries; whereas theſe were Gentiles that knew not God, nor his will. So the Targum, "and righteous men in reſpect (or compariſon) of them;" that is, of Iſrael and Judah; and they may be alſo called ſo, becauſe they were the executioners of juſtice, the inſtruments of inflicting God's righteous judgments on the Jews; and, among other things, for their perfidy and treachery to them; ſo that they would appear juſt in the eyes of other nations, for treating them as they did: they ſhall judge them after the manner of adultereſſes, and after the manner of women that ſhed blood; that is, according to the law concerning ſuch perſons; and ſhall condemn them to ſuffer the puniſhment denounced on ſuch, and ſhall execute it on them: becauſe they are adultereſſes, the blood is in their hands; are guilty, not only of corporal uncleanneſs, but of ſpiritual adultery; that is, idolatry; and of the murder of their prophets and righteous men, and even of their own children ſacrificed to idols; than which nothing can be more unnatural and barbarous for women to do.

℣. 46. For thus ſaith the Lord God, I will bring up a company upon them, &c.] Or, do thou bring up a company upon them [m], or againſt them. The Targum repreſents it, as ſpoken to the prophet thus, "propheſy that armies ſhall come up againſt "them." Kimchi interprets it as we do, I will bring up, &c. and ſo others [n]. By this company is to be underſtood the Chaldean army, whom God in his providence, and in righteous judgment, would bring up againſt the Jews; ſtiled a convocation [o], aſſembly or congregation, in alluſion to the Sanhedrim, or court of judicature, that took cognizance of ſuch crimes, and judged, and condemned for them: and will give them to be removed and ſpoiled; or, for a removing, and a ſpoil [p]; that is, he would give the Jews into the hands of the Chaldean army; their perſons to be carried captive into other lands; and their ſubſtance to be ſpoiled and plundered.

℣. 47. And the company ſhall ſtone them with ſtones, &c.] Which was the puniſhment of adulterers and idolaters, Deut. xiii. 10. and xxii. 24. this ſeems to refer to the Chaldean army caſting out ſtones from their ſlings and engines into the city of Jeruſalem, when they beſieged it, by which they killed ſome, and beat down the houſes which fell upon others, and deſtroyed them. So the Targum, "and the army ſhall ſtone them with the "ſtones of a ſling:" and diſpatch them with their ſwords; cut them in pieces with them, ſuch as ſallied out of the city upon them, or they found without, or by any means fell into their hands: they ſhall ſlay their ſons and their daughters; when they broke into the city, and took it; or when they found them making their eſcape, and hiding themſelves in ſecret places: and burn up their houſes with fire; as they did; the temple, the king's palace, the houſes of noblemen, and all the houſes in Jeruſalem; ſee Jer. lii. 13.

℣. 48. Thus will I cauſe to ceaſe lewdneſs out of the land, &c.] There being no opportunity for it, nor any to commit it; what were not deſtroyed by famine, ſword and peſtilence during the ſiege, were carried captive; and when they returned, were never more given to idolatry; ſee ℣. 27: that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdneſs; that is, that all provinces, as the Targum, all kingdoms, ſtates, churches and people, hearing and reading the judgments of God on this people for their idolatry, may learn to ſhun it; it is even an inſtruction to us at this diſtance, not to commit idolatry, as they did, 1 Cor. x. 7, 11. The church of Rome ought to obſerve this.

℣. 49. And they ſhall recompenſe your lewdneſs upon you, &c.] Or, give your lewdneſs [q]; the puniſhment of it; the juſt recompence of reward for their idolatry: and ye ſhall bear the ſins of your idols; the ſhame, and guilt, and puniſhment of their ſins committed in worſhipping idols; and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord God; the only Lord God who is to be worſhipped, and not idols; jealous of my honour and glory, and true to my word; who can and will accompliſh all I have ſaid; this the Jews knew and acknowledged when in captivity, and returned from it, as they will more fully when they ſhall be converted in the latter day.

CHAP. XXIV.

IN this chapter the deſtruction of the city and temple of Jeruſalem is propheſied of; the former under the parable of a boiling pot; the latter is repreſented by the ſudden death of Ezekiel's wife. The time of this prophecy was that very day the king of Babylon began the ſiege of Jeruſalem, ℣. 1, 2. the parable of the boiling pot, ℣. 3, 4, 5. the explanation and application of it to the city of Jeruſalem, ℣. 6—14. the prophet is told of the death of his wife, and bid not to mourn on that account, which accordingly came to paſs, ℣. 15, 16, 17, 18. upon the peoples enquiring what theſe things meant, he informs them, that hereby was ſignified the profanation of the temple; and that their diſtreſs ſhould be ſo great, that they ſhould not uſe any ſet forms of mourning, but pine away and die, ℣. 19—24. and the chapter is cloſed with aſſuring the prophet, that the day theſe things ſhould come to paſs, a meſſenger ſhould be ſent him, to whom he ſhould open his mouth, and be no more dumb, ℣. 25, 26, 27.

---

[m] אעלה עליהם קהל, αναγαγε επ' αυτας οχλον, Sept. adduc ſuper eas cœtum, Vulg. Lat. aſcendere fac contra eas, vel eos, cœtum, Cocceius, Starckius.

[n] Faciam aſcendere, Pagninus; adducam, Munſter, Tigurine verſion; quum adduxero, Piſcator.

[o] קהל congregatio, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; conſeſſus judicum, Grotius, Starckius.

[p] לזעוה ולבז commotioni & direptioni, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator; in commotionem & in prædam, Starckius.

[q] ונתנו זמתכנה & dabunt ſcelus veſtrum, Vulg. Lat. Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 1. Again, in the ninth year, &c.] Of Jehoiachin's captivity, from which the dates of Ezekiel are, and of Zedekiah's reign, which commenced together: in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month; the month Tebet, which anſwers to part of our December, and part of January; ſo that it was at the latter end of December when this prophecy was given out; at which time Jeruſalem was beſieged by the king of Babylon, even in the winter-ſeaſon: the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows:

℣. 2. Son of man, write thee the name of the day, &c.] That is, what day of the week it was, as well as what day of the month; as whether the firſt, or ſecond, or third, &c. for the Jews had no other names for their days, as we have: even of this ſame day; according to biſhop Uſher[r], it was the 30th of January, and the fifth day of the week (Thurſday); in the year of the Julian period 4124, and 590 before Chriſt. Mr. Whiſton[s] places it in the year of the Julian period 4123, and 591 before Chriſt. The prophet is bid to obſerve it punctually, and write it exactly, that there might be no miſtake; to ſet it down in his pocket-book; or it may be in ſome public regiſter, that it might not only be remembered by him, but known by the people; that ſo when they ſhould hear the fact afterwards related, and exactly agreeing with this prediction, they would acknowledge him to be a true prophet; ſince this would be a confirmation of the word of the Lord coming to him: the king of Babylon ſet himſelf againſt Jeruſalem this ſame day; or, drew nigh[t]; brought up his army to it, and laid ſiege againſt it, and prepared every thing to carry it on; which he very probably did in perſon, tho' he afterwards retired, and left the command of his army with his generals; and this was exactly the day before-mentioned; ſee 2 Kings xxv. 1. Jer. xxxix. 1. and lii. 4. The prophet Ezekiel was now in Chaldea, many miles from Judea, and yet had this account the very ſelf-ſame day, even from the Lord himſelf, who is omniſcient and omnipreſent.

℣. 3. And utter a parable to the rebellious houſe, &c.] The people of the Jews ſo called, not ſo much on account of their rebellion againſt the king of Babylon, which cauſed him to come againſt them; as on account of their rebellion againſt God, and the breach of his laws; ſee ch. ii. 3, 5, 6, 7, 8. The prophet is bid to repreſent to them, in a figurative and emblematic way, the miſeries that were coming upon them for their wickedneſs, namely under the parable of a boiling pot: and ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God; ſpeaking in his name, and as coming from him, and clothed with his authority; that the following parable might not be thought to be a fancy and chimera of his own: ſet on a pot, ſet it on; ſet a pot on the fire, and do it quickly. This pot is the city of Jeruſalem, which was to be brought into great diſtreſs and ruin; not a cauldron of braſs, wherein the inhabitants ſhould be as ſafe as if they had walls of braſs about them, as they vainly boaſted, ch. xi. 3. but a ſeething pot, ſuch an one as Jeremiah ſaw, to which it may be, reference is here had, Jer. i. 13. in which the people ſhould be deſtroyed: and alſo pour water into it; which, as it is ſome time a boiling, may denote the length of the ſiege of the city, which held two years; and of the troubles and miſeries attending it; and of the greatneſs of them, which were as intolerable as boiling water. The Targum is, "propheſy that "armies ſhall come againſt this city; and alſo there "ſhall be given unto it length of time to receive "the ſiege."

℣. 4. Gather the pieces thereof into it, &c.] A fire being made, and the pot ſet on, and water poured into it, the next thing is, to put in the pieces that are to be boiled; and theſe are to be gathered; meaning the people of the land, that were to be gathered from the ſeveral parts of it, for their ſecurity, as they thought; but the event proved it was for their ruin: even every good piece, the thigh and the ſhoulder; the princes and gentry, the great and the mighty, the rich and wealthy of the people; who, upon the invaſion, got together in Jeruſalem, to ſecure their perſons and ſubſtance: fill it with the choice bones; or with thoſe pieces that have the choice bones, that are full of marrow; the ſtrongeſt among the people; the ſoldiers, or ſuch as were fit for war; the beſt of their militia, brought hither to defend the city; but, in fact, to be ſlain, as they were. The Targum is, "gather the princes thereof into the midſt of her, "every terrible man and warrior; fill her with the "army of the people."

℣. 5. Take the choice of the flock, &c.] King, princes, nobles, magiſtrates, prieſts and rulers of the people: and burn alſo the bones under it; or, put a pile of bones under it[u]; the bones of them that are ſlain in it; denoting the great ſlaughter of them; or the bones of the innocent that had been murdered in it; which were the cauſe of theſe judgments coming upon them; and cauſed the wrath of God to burn the more hotly againſt them; or the bones of the wicked: and make it boil well; the pot; that the water may be very hot and boiling; denoting the ſeverity of the judgments of God in the city, to the deſtruction of many by ſword, famine and peſtilence: and let him ſeethe the bones of it therein; that the ſtrongeſt among them may be weakened and deſtroyed by the length and ſeverity of the ſiege, and the judgments attending it. The Targum is, "bring near the kings of the "people, and even join auxiliaries with them; "haſten the time of it; yea, let her ſlain be caſt "in the midſt of her."

℣. 6. Wherefore thus ſaith the Lord God, wo to the bloody city, &c.] Here the parable begins to be explained; and ſhews, that by the pot is meant the city of Jeruſalem, called the bloody city, becauſe of the blood of the prophets, and of righteous perſons, and of innocent babes that was ſhed in it; and which was the cauſe of the judgments of God coming upon her, which would iſſue in her deſtruction, and therefore wo unto her; ſee Matt. xxiii. 37: to the pot whoſe ſcum is therein, and whoſe ſcum is not gone out of it; when a pot boils, a ſcum ariſes, and appears upon the top of the water, which the cook uſually takes off: this denotes the filthineſs and wickedneſs of the people of the Jews, which would work up, and be ſeen by the judgments of God upon them; yet ſhould not be removed, but continue on them, unrepented of, and unpardoned. It ſignifies, that they would remain hardened in their ſins; and that the judgments of God would have no effect upon them to bring them to repentance; and that God would have no mercy on them, or pardon their ſins: bring it out piece by piece; the people that were in Jeruſalem, of every claſs and rank, of every age and ſex; ſuggeſting, that they ſhould not be all deſtroyed at once, but ſome at one time, and ſome at another; ſome in one way, and ſome in another; ſome by famine, others by the peſtilence, and others by the ſword; ſome by ſallying out upon the enemy; others by endeavouring to make their eſcape privately, and fall into their hands: let no lot fall upon it; to ſave ſome, and deſtroy others, as is often done in war; ſignifying, that all were deſtined to deſtruction, ſome way or another; and none ſhould be ſpared; they that eſcaped the peſtilence, ſhould die by famine; and they that eſcaped them both, ſhould die by the ſword; and they that eſcaped all three, ſhould be carried into captivity. The Targum is, "captivity upon captivity ſhall "go out with her, becauſe repentance was not in "her."

---

[r] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3414.

[s] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

[t] סמך appropinquavit, Pagninus, Vatablus; ſo R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 84. 2. adjunxit ſe, Montanus.

[u] דור העצמים תחתיה pyram oſſium ſub ipſa, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Starckius. דור rogus, ſtrues materiæ combuſtibilis rotunda, Stockius, p. 223.

℣. 7. For her blood is in the midſt of her, &c.] The blood of innocent perſons ſhed in the midſt of her, openly and publickly, cried for vengeance: ſhe ſet it upon the top of a rock; where it could not ſoak in, as when ſpilled upon ſoft earth: this denotes her openneſs and impudence in ſhedding blood, as not being aſhamed of it, or afraid of puniſhment for it, but as rather glorying in it; perhaps there may be ſome alluſion to the tops of hills and mountains, where idolatry was committed, attended with ſhedding human blood: ſhe poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with duſt; ſhe did not take any methods to hide her ſin; having no ſenſe of the heinouſneſs of it, nor any conſciouſneſs of guilt, or any remorſe or repentance; reſpect is had to a law which obliged to cover blood ſhed with duſt, Lev. xvii. 13. The Targum of the whole is, "becauſe innocent blood which is ſhed "in the midſt of her; with pride, and with an "high arm ſhe ſhed it; ſhe ſhed it not thro' ig"norance, that ſhe might repent of it."

℣. 8. That it might cauſe fury to come up to take vengeance, &c.] Into the heart and mind of God, into his face, ſpeaking after the manner of men; obſerving ſuch groſs and open wickedneſs, he determined within himſelf to ſhew his reſentment, manifeſt his wrath and diſpleaſure, and take vengeance on ſuch capital and impudent offenders: I have ſet her blood upon the top of a rock, that it might not be covered; by way of juſt retaliation; that as her ſin was publickly committed, and no repentance ſhewn for it, ſo her puniſhment ſhould be open and manifeſt to all the world, and no forgiveneſs ſhould be granted her. The Targum is, "I have revealed their ſins, becauſe they have "ſhed innocent blood openly, that it might not "be forgiven."

℣. 9. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, wo to the bloody city, &c.] See the note on ℣. 6: I will even make the pile for fire great; a large pile of wood, a great quantity of fuel to maintain the fire, and keep the pot boiling; meaning the vaſt army of the Chaldeans, which the Lord would bring againſt Jeruſalem, which ſhould cloſely beſiege it, and vigorouſly attack it, until it had executed the fury of the wrath of God, comparable to fire, and of his judgments upon it. The Targum is, "even I will multiply her deſtruction."

℣. 10. Heap on wood, kindle the fire, &c.] This is ſaid either to the prophet, to do this in an emblematic way; or to the Chaldean army, to prepare for the ſiege, encompaſs the city, begin their attacks, and throw in their ſtones out of their ſlings and engines, and arrows from their bows: conſume the fleſh; not entirely, ſince it is afterwards to be ſpiced; but thoroughly boil it; denoting the ſevere ſufferings the inhabitants ſhould undergo before their utter ruin: ſpice it well; pepper them off; batter their walls, beat down their houſes, diſtreſs them by all manner of ways and means; ſignifying, that this would be grateful to the Lord, as his juſtice would be glorified in the deſtruction of this people; and as the plunder of them would be like a ſpiced and ſweet morſel to the enemy; whoſe appetites would hereby be ſharpened and become keen, and to whom the ſacking and plundering the city would be as agreeable as well-ſeaſoned meat to an hungry man: and let the bones be burnt; either under it, or rather in it; even the ſtrongeſt and moſt powerful among the people deſtroyed, who ſhould hold out the longeſt in the ſiege. The Targum of the whole is, "multiply kings; "gather an army; order the auxiliaries, and pre"pare againſt her warriors, and let her mighty "ones be confounded."

℣. 11. Then ſet it empty upon the coals thereof, &c.] The city, when emptied of its inhabitants and ſubſtance, like a pot that is boiled over, and all in it boiled away, or taken out; burn it with fire, as the city of Jeruſalem when taken and plundered was: that the braſs of it may be hot, and burn; as braſs will when ſet on coals: or, the bottom of it[w]; ſo Ben Melech obſerves from the Miſnah, that the lower part or bottom of a pot, cauldron or furnace, is called the braſs of it; and ſo the ſenſe is, make the fire burn ſo fierce, as to burn the bottom of the pot; or the canker and ruſt of it, which the following words explain: and that the filthineſs of it may be molten in it, that the ſcum of it may be conſumed; the abominable wickedneſs of this people; ſince they were not reformed and brought to repentance for it by the admonitions and inſtructions given them, and by the chaſtiſements and corrections laid upon them; they with their ſins ſhould be conſumed in this terrible manner. The Targum is, "I will leave the "land deſolate, that they may become deſolate; "and that the gates of her city may be con"ſumed; and that thoſe that work uncleanneſs in "the midſt of her may melt away, and her ſins "be conſumed."

℣. 12. She hath wearied herſelf with lies, &c.] With ſerving idols, which were lying vanities; by truſting to the alliances of neighbouring nations, which deceived her; or by committing ſin, in which there was no ſatisfaction; or it may be underſtood of wearying of God with her ſins, and particularly with her lying promiſes of repentance and reformation: and her great ſcum went not forth out of her; notwithſtanding her promiſes; or notwithſtanding the admonitions given, and the chaſtiſements inflicted on her, yet ſhe continued hardened in her ſins, impenitent and unreformed: her ſcum ſhall be in the fire; like a pot that boils over, its ſcum falls into the fire, and is conſumed there; and in no other way, but by the fire of divine judgments, or the burning of the city, could the wickedneſs thereof be conſumed. The Targum is, "and they ſhall not go out of her that work iniquity,

---

[w] נחשתה fundum ejus, Pagninus, Vatablus.

"quity; in the fire ſhall ſhe be burnt, becauſe of "the multitude of her ſins."

℣. 13. In thy filthineſs is lewdneſs, &c.] Conſummate wickedneſs joined with impudence, and an obſtinate perſiſting in it; tho' her ſins were ſo abominable and filthy, yet ſhe was not aſhamed of them, nor could be reclaimed from them; but like a lewd woman, or an old harlot, was bold and impudent: becauſe I have purged thee, and thou waſt not purged; made uſe of means for the purgation of them, by his prophets, and by exhortations and inſtructions given by them, and by various corrections and chaſtiſements; but all in vain, and to no purpoſe, they were all without effect: thou ſhalt not be purged from thy filthineſs any more, till I have cauſed my fury to reſt upon thee; there was no other way left to purge her from her ſins, but by the fire of his wrath, and the fury of his anger, in her utter deſtruction.

℣. 14. I the Lord have ſpoken it, it ſhall come to paſs, &c.] What God has ſaid ſhall be accompliſhed; his word ſhall not return void and empty, or be without effect: and I will do it; being God omnipotent and unchangeable: I will not go back; from his word, or the thing threatened and denounced; nothing ſhould prevail upon him to act ſuch a part: neither will I ſpare; ſhew any mercy or compaſſion, or abate of the puniſhment due: neither will I repent; or change the courſe and method of providence; but abide by the decree gone forth, and the ſentence pronounced, and thoroughly execute it; a heap of words aſcertaining the truth of what is predicted: according to thy ways, and according to thy doings ſhall they judge thee, ſaith the Lord God; that is, the Chaldeans, ſhall judge and condemn thee, and execute my judgments on thee, in a juſt and righteous manner, as thy evil ways and works deſerve.

℣. 15. Alſo the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying.] Next follows the other ſign, by which the Lord ſhews the deſtruction of the temple.

℣. 16. Son of man, behold, &c.] This is ſaid to raiſe the attention of the prophet, ſomething ſtrange and unuſual, intereſting and affecting, being about to be delivered: I take away from thee the deſire of thine eyes with a ſtroke; meaning his wife; who very probably was of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to; however, of an amiable diſpoſition, and in her conjugal relation very agreeable to the prophet; and, no doubt, a truly religious woman, and upon all accounts deſirable to him. This lovely object of his affection, the Lord, who is the ſovereign diſpoſer of all perſons, ſignifies he would take away from him by death unto himſelf; that is, ſuddenly and at once; and ſo the Syriac and Arabic verſions render it, with a ſudden ſtroke; as ſometimes perſons are ſtruck with death at once with an apoplexy or palſy. The Targum renders it, with the peſtilence; it was what the Jews call death by the hand of heaven, by the immediate hand of God; and it may be, without any intervening diſeaſe; or, however, without any train of diſorders which lead on to death: yet neither ſhalt thou mourn, nor weep; on account of the dead; neither privately nor publickly, inwardly or outwardly, tho' ſo near and dear a relation; and tho' it would ſeem ſtrange, and be charged with want of natural affection, and with a brutiſh inſenſibility: neither ſhall thy tears run down; his cheeks, by which vent would be given to his grief, and his mind ſomewhat eaſed; but all care was to be taken to prevent any guſhing of them out of his eyes, and eſpecially that they did not run down in any quantity on his cheeks, and to be ſeen; tho' they might ſeem to be but a proper tribute to the dead.

℣. 17. Forbear to cry, &c.] Groan or howl, or make any doleful noiſe: or, be ſilent [x]; which the Talmudiſts [y] interpret, of not greeting any perſon: make no mourning for the dead; uſe none of thoſe rites and ceremonies commonly obſerved for deceaſed relations and friends, particularly and eſpecially for a wife; who is one of the ſeven perſons for whom mourning is to be made, according to the Jewiſh canons [z]; and which the ties of nature, nearneſs of relation, and eſpecially mutual and cordial affection, where that has taken place, require; and tho' a wife is not expreſsly mentioned among thoſe, for whom a prieſt might defile himſelf by attending their funerals, yet muſt be included among thoſe a-kin to him, if not ſolely deſigned, as Jarchi thinks; whoſe note on Lev. xxi. 2. is, there are none his kin but his wife; ſo that Ezekiel, tho' a prieſt, was not exempted from the obſervation of funeral rites, but obliged to them, had he not been forbid by a ſpecial order from the Lord; the particulars of which follow: bind the tire of thine head upon thee; cap or turbant, wore on the head, as a covering of it, and ornament to it, as the word uſed ſignifies; and the prieſts bonnets were for glory and beauty, Exod. xxviii. 40. and ſuch was the tire about the prophet's head, ſince he was a prieſt; and which, in time of mourning was taken off, and it was cuſtomary for mourners to be bare-headed; and tho' the high-prieſt might not uncover his head, and rend his cloaths for the dead, Lev. xxi. 10. yet other prieſts might, unleſs they had a particular and ſpecial prohibition, as Ezekiel here; ſee Lev. x. 6. and yet it ſeems, by ſome inſtances, particularly that of David's mourning for Abſalom, that the head was covered at ſuch a time, 2 Sam. xix. 5. and Kimchi on the place expreſsly ſays, that it was the way and cuſtom of mourners to cover themſelves; and certain it is, that in later times however, it has been the uſage of the Jews to cover their heads in mourning; for this is one of the things expreſsly forbid in the Jewiſh canons, as Maimonides [a] ſays, to be uſed in mourning for the dead, namely making bare the head; and covering the head is what mourners are obliged to [b]; this Gejerus [c] reconciles, by obſerving, that at the firſt of the mourning they uſed to take off of their heads what they wore for the ſake of ornament, ſuch as the tire, or bonnet here; but after a while covered themſelves with veils when they went abroad, or others came to them. Jarchi interprets this, of the Tephillim or phylacteries the Jews wore about their heads; and ſo the Talmud [d], and the Targum is, "let thy Totaphot or frontlets be upon thee;" of which interpretation Jerom makes mention; but theſe things don't appear to be in uſe in Ezekiel's time: and put on thy ſhoes upon thy feet; which uſed to be taken off, and perſons walked barefoot in times of mourning, 2 Sam. xv. 30. and this cuſtom continues with the Jews to this day; and which they ſay is confirmed by this paſſage. One of their canons [e] runs thus, "they don't rend garments, nor pluck off the ſhoe for any, until he is dead;" which ſuppoſes they do, and ſhould do, when he is dead: and this is one of the things, their writers [f] ſay, is forbidden a mourner for the dead, namely, to put on his ſhoes; and they aſk, from whence it appears that a mourner is forbid to put on his ſhoes? the anſwer is, from what is ſaid to Ezekiel, put on thy ſhoes upon thy feet; which ſhows that in common it was not right nor uſual to do it; and it is their cuſtom now for mourners, when they return from the grave, to ſit ſeven days on the ground with their feet naked [g]: and cover not thy lips; as the leper did in the time of his ſeparation and diſtreſs, who put a covering upon his upper lip, Lev. xiii. 45. and as mourners did, who put a vail upon their faces: and eat not the bread of men; of other men; or of mourners [h], as the Targum; ſuch as uſed to be ſent to mourners by their friends, in order to refreſh and revive their ſpirits; and who, they ſuppoſed, thro' their great grief, were not careful to provide food for themſelves; and this they did to comfort them, and let them know, that though they had loſt a relation, there were others left, who had a cordial reſpect for them, and heartily ſympathized with them: and according to the traditions of the Jews [i], a mourner might not eat of his own bread; but was obliged to eat the bread of others, at leaſt his firſt meal, and on the firſt day of his mourning; though he might on the ſecond, and on the following days; and this they endeavour to eſtabliſh from this place of ſcripture. What their friends uſed to ſend them at ſuch a time, were uſually hard eggs and wine. Eggs, becauſe round and ſpherical, and ſo a proper emblem of death, and might ſerve to put in mind of it, which goes round, is with one to-day, and with another to-morrow; and wine, to chear their ſpirits, that they might forget their ſorrow [k]. They alſo uſed to eat at ſuch times a ſort of pulſe, called lentiles, to ſhew by what ſort of food they loſt their birth-right or firſt-born [l]. And ſuch like things were uſed by the Romans in their funeral feaſts, as beans, parſly, lettuce, lentiles, eggs, &c [m]. and as the Romans had their parentalia, and the Greeks their ϖαραδειπνα, ſo the Jews had alſo very ſumptuous feaſts on ſuch occaſions: not only great perſonages, as kings and nobles, made them; ſo Archelaus made a magnificent one for the people, on the death of his father Herod [n], after the cuſtom of the country; but even the common people were very profuſe and laviſh in them; and which, as Joſephus [o] obſerves, was the cauſe of great poverty among them; for ſo prevalent was the cuſtom, that there was a neceſſity of doing it, or otherwiſe a man would not have been reckoned an holy man; ſee Jer. xvi. 7.

---

[x] דם tace, Pagninus, Montanus, Vatablus.

[y] T. Bab. Moed Katon, fol. 15. 1.

[z] Maimon. Hilchot Ebel, c. 2. §. 1. Buxtorf. Jud. Synagog. c. 49. p. 708.

[a] Ib. c. 5. §. 1.

[b] Schulchan Aruch, lib. Jore Dea, c. 380. §. 1. c. 386. §. 1, 2.

[c] De luctu Ebr. c. 11. §. 5. p. 250.

[d] T. Bab. Beracot, fol. 11. 1. Moed Katon, fol. 15. 1. Succa, fol. 25. 2.

℣. 18. So I ſpake unto the people in the morning, &c.] Did the duty of his office as a prophet; exhorted and inſtructed the people, particularly informed them of what had been ſaid to him by the Lord, the evening or night before, concerning the death of his wife, and how he was to behave under ſuch a providence; which he told them of beforehand, that when it came to paſs, they might have a further proof of his being a true prophet of the Lord: and at even my wife died; ſuddenly, as it was ſaid ſhe ſhould; this ſhows who is meant by the deſire of his eyes, and what by the taking it away: and I did in the morning as I was commanded; neither moaned, nor ſighed, nor wept, nor ſhed a tear, nor uſed any of the common ceremonies of mourning, but dreſſed and eat as at other times, as he was ordered to do; this was the next morning after his wife died. So the Syriac verſion, "in the morning of the other day;" and the Arabic verſion, "in the morning of the following day." Thus, whatever the Lord commands, is to be done, though ever ſo contrary to the cuſtoms of men, or to natural inclinations and affections.

℣. 19. And the people ſaid unto me, &c.] Either ſeriouſly, as being deſirous of knowing what was meant by all this; ſince they had reaſon to believe that it was not out of want of affection in Ezekiel to his wife that he ſo behaved; and therefore there muſt be ſome hidden meaning in it, which they ſhould be glad to be informed of: or in a ludicrous manner, deriding the prophet for his conduct, and deſpiſing what he meant to inſtruct them in hereby: wilt thou not tell us what theſe things are to us, that thou doeſt ſo? for they ſuſpected it was not on his own account, but to ſignify ſomething to them, that theſe things were done; and laughing at him, they ſay, to what purpoſe are theſe things done? if you don't tell us for what reaſon they are done, inſtruct us by words, and not by actions; theſe were his fellow captives in Babylon.

℣. 20. Then I anſwered them, &c.] And gave them an account of the deſign of the whole, and what was ſignified hereby: the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; ordering him to do all he did; for he did nothing of himſelf, but all according to the divine will; and who alſo directed him to ſay the following things to the people, by way of explanation.

℣. 21. Speak unto the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] By word of mouth, to thoſe who were upon the ſpot with him in Chaldea; and by a meſſenger, or a letter, to them that were in Judea: thus ſaith the Lord of hoſts, behold, I will profane my ſanctuary; the temple, built for him, and where he dwelt, and was worſhipped; where duties were performed, and holy ſacrifices offered up formerly; this he now ſays he would profane, that is, would bring the Chaldeans againſt Jeruſalem, who ſhould take it, and enter into the temple, and ſo profane it, and make it common, yea utterly deſtroy it: the excellency of your ſtrength, the deſire of your eyes, and that which your ſoul pitieth; all which is ſaid of the temple; it was the pride and glory of the Jews, what they boaſted of, and put their confidence in, and reckoned their ſtrength and ſecurity; it was as dear and as deſirable to them, as Ezekiel's wife was to him, the emblem of it; the deſtruction and deſolation of which would be pitied by them, and would ſenſibly affect them upon hearing of it, even in prophecy: and your ſons, and your daughters, whom ye have left, ſhall fall by the ſword; whom they had left behind them in Judea, when they were carried captive with Jehoiakim, and to whom they hoped to return, as their falſe prophets had aſſured them; but ſo it ſhould not be, for theſe

---

[e] Maſſech. Semachot, c. 1. §. 5.

[f] Maimon. Hilchot Ebel, c. 5. §. 1. Shulchan Aruch, l. Jore Dea, c. 380. §. 1. 382. §. 1, 2.

[g] Buxtorf. Jud. Synagog. c. 49. p. 706.

[h] T. Bab. Beracot, fol. 11. 1. Moed Katon, fol. 15. 1. Succa, fol. 25, 2.

[i] T. Bab. Moed Katon, fol. 27. 2. Maimon. Hilchot Ebel, c. 4. §. 9. Shulchan Aruch, lib. Jore Dea, c. 378. §. 1.

[k] Buxtorf. Jud. Synagog. c. 49. p. 708.

[l] Hieron. ad Paulam ſuper obitu Bleſillæ, tom. I. operum, fol. 54. L.

[m] Vid. Kirchman. de funer. Rom. l. 4. c. 7. p. 591.

[n] Joſeph. Antiqu. l. 17. c. 8. §. 4.

[o] De bello Jud. l. 2. c. 1. §. 1.

ſhould die by the ſword of the Chaldeans, when the city of Jeruſalem ſhould be taken, and the temple profaned; and this ſhould be the caſe of the ſons and daughters of thoſe who then ſhould be carried captive, that ſhould be left in the land; as was the caſe of Gedaliah, and thoſe that were with him.

℣. 22. And ye ſhall do as I have done, &c.] When his wife died, and as he was ordered by the Lord; the meaning of which they were now enquiring: ye ſhall not cover your lips; as a token of mourning; nor uſe any other of their country-rites and ceremonies, for fear of provoking their enemies, in whoſe hands they ſhall be: nor eat the bread of men; or of mourners, as the Targum; there ſhall be none to comfort them, or ſend bread to them; they ſhall all be alike mourners.

℣. 23. And your tires ſhall be upon your heads, and your ſhoes upon your feet, &c.] As will be neceſſary whilſt travelling, and when carrying captive to a foreign country, as now will be their caſe: ye ſhall not mourn nor weep; ſhall not dare to do it, becauſe of their enemies; and moreover, ſo great ſhould be their miſeries and calamities, that they ſhould be ſtruck dumb, and quite aſtoniſhed and ſtupified with them; that they ſhould not be able to vent their ſorrow by an outward act of mourning: but ye ſhall pine away for your iniquities; without any true ſenſe of them, or godly ſorrow for them, but in wretched hardneſs of heart, and black deſpair: and mourn one towards another; not to God, confeſſing their ſins, being contrite and penitent; but to one another, fretting, murmuring, and complaining at the hand of God upon them: this ſeems to denote the private way of mourning they ſhould uſe for fear of the enemy, when they could get together by themſelves, as well as their diſregard to God, againſt whom they had ſinned.

℣. 24. Thus Ezekiel is unto you a ſign, &c.] Theſe are the words of the prophet concerning himſelf; obſerving that in all the above things he was a ſign to the Jews of what ſhould befal them, and what ſhould be their caſe: and according to all that he hath done, ſhall ye do; however it might be then a matter of ſcorn and deriſion: and when this cometh; when this prophecy comes to paſs, and all theſe calamities come upon the city and temple: ye ſhall know that I am the Lord God; omniſcient, omnipotent, true and faithful.

℣. 25. Alſo thou ſon of man, ſhall it not be in the day, &c.] This queſtion is to be anſwered in the affirmative: when I take from them their ſtrength; their king and kingdom, their princes and nobles, their ſoldiers and men of might and war, their wealth and ſubſtance, their city and the inhabitants of it; or rather their temple, in which they placed their ſtrong confidence: ſo the Targum, "in the day when I ſhall take from them the "houſe of their ſanctuary:" and which is called, the joy of their glory; what they rejoiced and gloried in: the deſire of their eyes, and that whereupon they ſet their mind, their ſons and their daughters; for to theſe may thoſe phraſes be applied, as well as to the temple; they being deſirable to them, to be ſpared and continued, and on whom the affections of their hearts were ſet, and for whoſe welfare they were very ſolicitous. So ſome render it, the burden or care of their ſouls [p]; tho' the Targum applies this, as the other, to the temple, paraphraſing it, "and the delight of their eyes ſhall "be taken from them, and the beloved of their "ſouls, which is better to them than their ſons "and their daughters."

℣. 26. That he that eſcapeth in that day ſhall come unto thee, &c.] That is, that one that ſhould eſcape the hands of the Chaldeans when the city ſhould be taken, ſhould directly make the beſt of his way to the prophet: to cauſe thee to hear it with thine ears; all the particulars of the deſtruction of the city and temple, as it had been repreſented to him in viſion; when he would ſee the exact agreement between prophecy and facts; ſee ch. xxxiii. 21.

℣. 27. In that day ſhall thy mouth be opened to him which is eſcaped, &c.] And ſhall freely converſe with him about the ſeveral facts and circumſtances of taking and burning the city and temple, and of the uſage of the inhabitants: and thou ſhalt ſpeak, and be no more dumb; for from this time to the taking of Jeruſalem, which was about eighteen months; the prophet had nothing to ſay to the people of the Jews, and ſo was dumb with reſpect to them; but was employed in propheſying againſt other nations, as the following chapters ſhew, unto the 33d chapter, in which we have an account of the meſſenger that eſcaped to him; but after that his mouth was opened, and he propheſied to them again: and thou ſhalt be a ſign unto them; as they will then own and acknowledge: and they ſhall own that I am the Lord; who have foretold theſe things, and accompliſhed them.

C H A P. XXV.

IN this chapter the prophet foretels the judgments of God upon the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, and Philiſtines, for their ill uſage of the Jews; on the Ammonites, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. on the Moabites, ℣. 8, 9, 10, 11. on the Edomites, ℣. 12, 13, 14. on the Philiſtines, ℣. 15, 16, 17.

℣. 1. The word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] After he had done propheſying to the Jews, he is bid to propheſy againſt the Gentiles, the nations that lay neareſt the Jews: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 2. Son of man, ſet thy face againſt the Ammonites, &c.] Who were of the poſterity of Lot, implacable enemies of the Jews; who hated their religion, and envied their wealth and happineſs; againſt theſe the prophet is bid to ſet his face; to look that way where they lived, and to put on a frowning countenance, and a menacing aſpect: ſtrengthen thy face, as the Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it; look boldly at them: and propheſy againſt them; deliver out the following prophecy concerning them.

℣. 3. And ſay unto the Ammonites, &c.] Either to their embaſſadors at Babylon, or merchants there; or by letters to them, the prophet being in Chaldea, at a diſtance from them: hear the word of the Lord God; not Chemoſh their idol, nor their lying oracles, but the word of the true and living God; which is always accompliſhed, and is never fruſtrated: thus ſaith the Lord God, becauſe thou ſaidſt, Aha, againſt my ſanctuary, when it was profaned; that is, expreſſed joy, as the Targum paraphraſes it, at the deſtruction of the temple, when it was burnt by Nebuchadnezzar; it was foreknown by the Lord that they would do ſo, and are here threatened before-hand; for as yet the temple was not deſtroyed; a proof this of God's preſcience of future contingencies: and againſt the land of Iſrael, when it was deſolate; the country of the ten tribes, which had been deſolate from the ſixth of Hezekiah, when the people of it were carried captive by Salmaneſer king of Aſſyria; this alſo was matter of joy to the Ammonites: and againſt the houſe of Judah, when they went into captivity; the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who were carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar; part of which had already been carried captive under Jeconiah, and the reſt would be, and were, under Zedekiah; which completed the deſtruction of Iſrael and Judah, and gave the utmoſt pleaſure to their enemies the Ammonites; who were ſo impious, as to rejoice at the deſtruction of their temple, the place of their religious worſhip, which they abhorred; and ſo inhuman, as to expreſs the delight and ſatisfaction they had, in the ruin of their fellow-creatures and neighbours, and who were originally related to them; this brutiſh and barbarous behaviour of theirs is reſented by the Lord.

---

[p] את משא נפשם onus animæ eorum, Munſter; curam, vel ſolicitudinem, ſo ſome in Vatablus.

℣. 4. Behold, therefore, I will deliver thee to the men of the eaſt for a poſſeſſion, &c.] The Chaldeans and Syrians, which were on the eaſt ſide, as Jarchi; or the Medes and Perſians, as Kimchi, which lay more eaſtward; or it may be the Arabians, who are commonly called the men of the eaſt; who were a part of Nebuchadnezzar's army, and whom he might reward with this country, when taken by him; for this prophecy, according to Joſephus [q], was fulfilled five years after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem: and they ſhall ſet their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee; or, their camps and their tents [r]; and ſo the Syriac verſion renders it, their armies and their tents; who ſhould ſubdue them, and take poſſeſſion of their cities and fields, and enjoy what they found there: they ſhall eat thy fruit, and drink thy milk; the fruit of their land, their vineyards and fields, and the milk of their flocks and herds, which was commonly drank in thoſe countries; theſe are put for the whole of their ſubſtance. So the Targum, "they ſhall "eat the good of thy land, and ſpoil thy ſub"ſtance."

℣. 5. And I will make Rabbath a ſtable for camels, &c.] Creatures much uſed by the eaſtern nations, eſpecially the Arabians; who pitching their tents about Rabbath, the royal city, the metropolis of the children of Ammon, would convert the houſes, and even palaces in it, into ſtables for their camels. This city, in Jerom's time, as he ſays, was called Philadelphia, from Ptolemy Philadelphus, who rebuilt it. And the Ammonites a couching place for flocks; that is, the land of the Ammonites ſhould be made a place for flocks of ſheep to lie down in, which the Arabians would bring and feed upon it: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; omniſcient, and ſees and obſerves all your inſults upon the children of Iſrael and Judah; and omnipotent, able to perform all that is threatened; and immutable, bringing about all that is here propheſied of.

℣. 6. For thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Their ſin and puniſhment are further enlarged upon: becauſe thou haſt clapped thine hands, and ſtamped with thy feet; geſtures expreſſive of joy and gladneſs, Iſ. lv. 12. Lam. ii. 15. Jer. xlviii. 27. the Ammonites clapped their hands together, and leaped and ſkipped for joy, when they heard of the calamities of the Jews; who yet had more reaſon to be ſorrowful, ſince they might expect their turn would be next; for the king of Babylon had a deſign againſt them, at the ſame time he came againſt Jeruſalem, and was in doubt for a while which he ſhould attack firſt; ſee ch. xxi. 20: and rejoiced in heart with all thy deſpite againſt the land of Iſrael; they had a ſecret joy in their heart, which they expreſſed by geſtures, in the moſt ſpiteful and ſcornful manner they were capable of; which ſhowed the wretched malignity of their diſpoſitions againſt the children of Iſrael; they hated them with a perfect hatred.

℣. 7. Behold, therefore, I will ſtretch out mine hand upon thee, &c.] In juſt retaliation for clapping their hands againſt his people; and which hand of the Lord they would find to be a heavy one, and which they would not be able either to reſiſt or bear. The Targum is, "I will lift up the "ſtroke of my power upon thee:" and will deliver thee for a ſpoil to the heathen; to the Chaldeans firſt, and then to the Arabians, to be ſpoiled and plundered by them of their wealth and ſubſtance: ſome render it, for meat [s] unto them; to be devoured and conſumed by them: and I will cut thee off from the people, and I will cauſe thee to periſh out of the countries; ſo as to be no more a people and a country; or be reckoned among the people and countries; or have any alliance with them, or help from them: I will deſtroy thee, and thou ſhalt know, that I am the Lord; who has ſaid and done all this; ſee the note on ℣. 5.

℣. 8. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] By his ſervant the prophet, to whom the word of the Lord came; as concerning the Ammonites, ſo likewiſe concerning the Moabites, as follows: becauſe that Moab and Seir do ſay; that is, the Moabites, and the Edomites, which latter are meant by Seir, that being the ſeat of them; theſe lived near one another, and bore a like enmity to the Iſraelites and Jews, and had the ſame ſentiments concerning them, and ſaid the ſame things of them: only Moab is mentioned in the Septuagint and Arabic verſions: the Moabites are firſt propheſied of, and then the Edomites, who both joined in ſaying, behold, the houſe of Judah is like unto all the heathen; it fares no better with them, than with the reſt of the nations, who don't profeſs and ſerve the ſame God they do; they are fallen into the hands of the king of Babylon, as well as others; and have no more ſecurity againſt him, nor protection from him, than other people; they pretend to ſerve and worſhip the one only living and true God, and to be his covenant-people, and to be favoured with privileges above all other nations; and yet are brought into the ſame miſerable circumſtances,

---

[q] Antiqu. l. 10. c. 9. §. 7.

[r] טירותיהם arces ſuas, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius. משכניהם tentoria ſua, V. L. tabernacula ſua, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[s] לבג in cibum, Montanus, Guſſetius. This is the Cetib or textual writing; but the Keri or marginal reading is, לבז in direptionem, Pagninus, Cocceius; in prædam, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator. Both come to much one and the ſame ſenſe, as Ben Melech obſerves, for food was of the ſpoil; and one word anſwers to another by Athbaſh, which is a certain form of placing the alphabet; ſee the note on Jer. xxv. 26.

and left in them, as others are; where is the God they boaſt of? and their ſuperior excellence to the reſt of the world? thus blaſphemouſly, as well as wickedly, did they inſult them, which was provoking to the Lord. The Targum renders it interrogatively, "in what do the houſe of Judah "differ from all people?" and ſo the Septuagint, "behold, are not the houſe of Iſrael and Judah "in like manner as all nations?" Jerom, on the place, relates a fable of the Jews, that when the city and temple were opened, the Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites, went into the temple, and ſaw the cherubim over the mercy-ſeat, and ſaid, as all nations worſhip images, ſo Judah hath the idols of their religion. Jarchi makes mention of ſuch a Midraſh, but with ſome difference.

ỿ. 9. Therefore behold, I will open the ſide of Moab from the cities, &c.] Or, the ſhoulder of Moab [t]; that part of their country where their greateſt ſtrength lay. So the Targum renders it, "the ſtrength of Moab;" where their principal cities were, their frontier towns, and fortified places, as appears by what follows: from his cities which are on his frontiers; or, from his Ars [u], from his cities which are at his end; at the extreme part of the land, upon the borders of his countries; the two cities of Ar and Aroer, Numb. xxi. 28. Deut. ii. 36: the glory of the country; as the above cities were, and what follow: Beth-jeſhimoth; this was formerly in the tribe of Reuben, now in the poſſeſſion of the Moabites, and one of their principal cities, Joſh. xiii. 20: Baal-meon; the ſame with Beth-Baal-meon, and which was alſo of the tribe of Reuben, Joſh. xiii. 17. Numb. xxxii. 38. in Jerom's time it was a large village in Moab, about nine miles from Heſhbon: ſome think by Meon is meant Menes, or Oſiris the god of the Egyptians, and ſo this might be a temple of his; or at leaſt he might have a temple in it, from whence it had its name: and Kirjathaim; or the double city, built alſo by the Reubenites, Numb. xxxii. 37. Joſh. xiii. 19. now in the hands of the Moabites, ten miles from Medeba; on this ſide of the country of Moab, and thro' theſe cities, the Lord threatens to open a way for their enemies to enter in and deſtroy them, as follows:

ỿ. 10. Unto the men of the eaſt, with the Ammonites, and I will give them in poſſeſſion, &c.] Or, againſt the Ammonites, as the Targum; that is, way ſhould be made for the ſame people of the eaſt, the Chaldeans or Arabians, that came againſt the Ammonites and deſtroyed them, to enter into the land of Moab and poſſeſs it, as they had done the land of Ammon: that the Ammonites may not be remembred among the nations; the name of that people, which is entirely loſt; and Moab likewiſe, which underwent the ſame fate.

ỿ. 11. I will execute judgments upon Moab, &c.] For tho' the Chaldeans and Arabians were the inſtruments of their ruin, their deſtruction was of the Lord; it was his hand that was upon them, and his vengeance that was executed on them, for their hard ſayings againſt his people; for tho' he had ſpoke againſt them in his providence, and chaſtized them for their ſins, yet he will not ſuffer others to ſpeak againſt them: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; that takes part with Judah, and will avenge himſelf of all their enemies.

ỿ. 12. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Concerning Seir or the Edomites, the prophecy concerning the Moabites being finiſhed: becauſe that Edom hath dealt againſt the houſe of Judah by taking vengeance; or, revenging a revenge [w]; the Edomites bore an old grudge againſt the Jews, not only becauſe their father Jacob had got the birth-right and bleſſing from their father Eſau; but becauſe they were made tributaries to them in David's time, and afterwards ſeverely chaſtized by Amaziah; theſe things they laid up in their minds, and vowed revenge whenever they had an opportunity; and now one offered at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, which they took: and hath greatly offended, and revenged himſelf upon them; not only by rejoicing at the deſtruction of the Jews, but by encouraging the Babylonians in it; aſſiſting them therein, joining with them in plundering the city, and in cutting off thoſe with the ſword who endeavoured to make their eſcape; ſee Pſ. cxxxvii. 7. Obad. ỿ. 12, 13, 14.

ỿ. 13. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Becauſe of ſuch baſe and barbarous uſage, from a people that were originally brethren: I will alſo ſtretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beaſt from it; by the army of Nebuchadnezzar, by the ſword of the Chaldeans, and by famine and peſtilence, and ſuch like ſore judgments; in which the hand of God is manifeſtly ſeen: and I will make it deſolate from Teman; a very principal city of Edom, ſo called from Teman, the ſon of Eliphaz, the ſon of Eſau, Gen. xxxvi. 15. it lay in the ſouth of the land of Idumea; the Targum renders it, "from the ſouth:" and they of Dedan ſhall fall by the ſword; of the Babylonians; this was another city of Edom, it lay in the north of that country; ſo that hereby is ſignified, that deſtruction ſhould go through it from the ſouthern to the northern parts of it.

ỿ. 14. And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom, by the hand of my people Iſrael, &c.] This was fulfilled in the times of the Maccabees, when Judas Maccabæus overthrew and conquered them, 1 Maccab. v. 3. and when Hyrcanus took their cities, and ſubdued them, and they became Jews, as Joſephus [x] relates; tho' Kimchi thinks this refers to future time, and is yet to be accompliſhed; and it is, by the ancient Jews [y], underſtood of the times of the Meſſiah: ſome chuſe to underſtand the phraſe, by the hand of my people Iſrael, the ſame hand by which judgment was inflicted upon Iſrael; ſuggeſting, that by the ſame hand vengeance would be inflicted on the Edomites, namely, by the Babylonians: and they ſhall do in Edom according to mine anger, and according to my fury; that is, ſhall execute all the anger and fury, or all that puniſhment in anger and fury, which the Lord in righteous judgment has appointed them to, and has determined ſhall be performed upon them, by the children of Iſrael, or the Babylonians, as his inſtruments: and they ſhall know my vengeance, ſaith the Lord God; the meaning is, they ſhall feel it, and be ſenſible of it, and know that it comes from the Lord himſelf; full of reſentment againſt them, and highly diſpleaſed at their behaviour towards his people Iſrael.

ỿ. 15. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Once more, and concerning another enemy of the people of Iſrael, and who had been of old an implacable one: becauſe the Philiſtines have dealt by revenge;

---

[t] כתף, τον ωμον, Sept. humerum, V. L. Montanus.

[u] מהערים ab ipſis Haris, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[w] בנקם נקם in ulciſcendo ultionem, Montanus, Starckius.

[x] Antiqu. l. 13. c. 9. §. 1.

[y] In Bemidbar Rabba, §. 2. fol. 179. 3.

for what they ſuffered in the times of Saul, when Goliah was ſlain by David, and their army was diſcomfited; and for the overthrow of them by David, when he came to the throne; and for his burning their images, and ſubduing them, 1 Sam. xvii. 51, 52. 2 Sam. v. 20, 21, 25. and viii. 1. this revenge they took in the time of Ahaz, 2 Chron. xxviii. 18. and very probably alſo ſhewed their ſpite at the time of Jeruſalem's deſtruction: and have taken vengeance with a deſpiteful heart, to deſtroy it for the old hatred; which they bore to the people of Iſrael, from their firſt ſettlement in Canaan; from the times of the Judges, particularly Sampſon; and from the times of Saul and David: it was an old grudge they bore, they had ſpite and malice in their hearts, and wanted an opportunity to vent it; having determined to take vengeance when they could, and utterly deſtroy them from being a people; very likely, through deſpite, they aſſiſted the Chaldean army: or, this they did with a perpetual hatred [z]; they did every thing they could in a ſpiteful and malicious way, to perpetuate the hatred between them and Iſrael.

ỿ. 16. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Becauſe of ſuch wretched malice, and deſpiteful uſage: behold, I will ſtretch out mine hand upon the Philiſtines; as is foretold, Jer. ch. xlvii: and I will cut off the Cherethim; one of the tribes of the Philiſtines, a principal part of their country, which lay to the ſouth, 1 Sam. xxx. 14. ſee Zeph. ii. 5. there is a beautiful paronomaſia [a] in the words: and deſtroy the remnant of the ſea coaſt; as that of Aſhdod, Caphtor, and Aſhkelon, formerly ſpoiled by other perſons; what they left, ſhould now be utterly deſtroyed; ſee Iſ. xx. 1. Jer. xxv. 20. and xlvii. 45.

ỿ. 17. And I will execute great vengeance upon them, with furious rebukes, &c.] By way of retaliation for their vengeance and fury, wrath and malice, againſt his people; ſuggeſting, that the judgments inflicted on them, for quantity and quality, ſhould be very great: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I ſhall lay my vengeance upon them; they ſhall ſee the hand of God in it, acknowledge his juſtice, and confeſs that their gods were idols, and that the God of Iſrael is the only true God.

CHAP. XXVI.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy of the deſtruction of Tyre. The time of the prophecy, ỿ. 1. the cauſe of the deſtruction of it, rejoicing at the ruin of Jeruſalem, ỿ. 2. the inſtruments of it, many nations, particularly the king of Babylon, ỿ. 3—7. the manner in which it ſhall be done, ỿ. 8—14. the lamentation of other iſles, and the princes of them, on account of it, ỿ. 15—18. the utter deſtruction of it, ſo as never to be found any more, ỿ. 19—21.

ỿ. 1. And it came to paſs in the eleventh year, &c.] Of Jehoiachin's captivity, and Zedekiah's reign, the ſame year that Jeruſalem was taken: in the firſt day of the month; but what month is not mentioned; ſome have thought the firſt month, and ſo it was the firſt day of the year; others the fourth, the ſame in which the city of Jeruſalem was taken; but more probably the fifth, the firſt of which was twenty days after the taking it; in which time the news of it might be brought to Tyre, at which ſhe rejoiced; and for which her deſtruction is threatened, and here propheſied of: that the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows,

ỿ. 2. Son of man, becauſe that Tyrus hath ſaid againſt Jeruſalem, Aha, &c.] As rejoicing at her deſtruction, and inſulting over her in it; which was barbarous and inhuman, and reſented by the Lord: ſhe is broken, that was the gates of the people; thro' whoſe gates the people went in and out in great numbers; a city to which there was great reſort, not only for religion, from all parts at their ſolemn feaſts, but for merchandiſe from ſeveral parts of the world; and was now full of people before its deſtruction, the inhabitants of Judea having fled thither for ſafety, upon the invaſion made by the king of Babylon; but now the city was broken up, as it is ſaid it was, by the Chaldean army, Jer. lii. 7. its gates and walls were broken down, and lay in a ruinous condition. The Targum is, "ſhe "is broken down that afforded merchandiſe to "all people." She is turned unto me; either the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, which eſcaped and fled to Tyre for refuge; or the ſpoil taken out of it, which was carried there to be ſold; and even the captives themſelves to be ſold for ſlaves, which was one part of the merchandiſe of Tyre; ſee ch. xxvii. 13. or the buſineſs, trade, and merchandiſe carried on in Jeruſalem, were brought to Tyre upon its deſtruction; ſo Jarchi and Kimchi. The Targum is, "ſhe is turned to come unto me;" which favours the firſt ſenſe; all may be intended. I ſhall be repleniſhed, now ſhe is laid waſte; or, I ſhall be filled [b]; with inhabitants, riches, and wealth, with merchants and merchandiſe, Jeruſalem her rival being deſtroyed; this was what gave her joy; and is a common thing for perſons to rejoice at the fall or death of thoſe of the ſame trade with them; hoping for an increaſe of theirs by means of it, which yet is ſinful.

ỿ. 3. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Who knew the thoughts of the inhabitants of Tyre, and what joy poſſeſſed their hearts, and which their lips expreſſed; and who informs the prophet of it, tho' at a great diſtance, and declares his reſentment at it: behold, I am againſt thee, O Tyrus; and nothing can be more dreadful and formidable than to have God againſt a nation, city, or a particular perſon: Tyre was a type of antichriſt, who will expreſs a like joy at the death of the witneſſes; thinking that the merchandiſe of Rome will be increaſed greatly, and there will be nothing to interrupt it, Rev. xi. 10. but God will ſhew his diſpleaſure, and bring ſudden deſtruction on it: and will cauſe many nations to come up againſt thee, as the ſea cauſeth his waves to come up; the Chaldean army, conſiſting of ſoldiers of many nations; who for their number, noiſe, and fury, are compared to the raging waves of the ſea. So the Targum, "I will bring up againſt thee an army of many "people, as the ſea aſcendeth in the raging of its "waves;"

---

[z] איבת עולם inimicitias perpetuas, Pagninus; inimicitia perpetua, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

[a] הכרתי את כרתים.

[b] אמלאה implebor, Cocceius, Starckius.

"waves;" the ten kings ſhall hate the whore, and deſtroy her, even thoſe very people ſhe reigns over, compared to many waters, Rev. xvii. 15, 16.

℣. 4. And they ſhall deſtroy the walls of Tyrus, &c.] Undermining them, or breaking them down with their battering-rams: and break down her towers; with axes, ℣. 9. built upon the walls; erected for the defence of the city, and for watchmen to ſtand in, to look out from them for the enemy, and obſerve his motions, as well as for ſoldiers to fight from: and I will ſcrape her duſt from her, and make her like the top of a rock; a bare, ſmooth rock, which has not any ſurface of earth upon it. So the Targum, "I will give her "for the ſmoothneſs of an open rock:" Tyre was built upon a rock; and whereas the inhabitants had brought earth thither, and laid it upon it, in order to make gardens and orchards, and plant flowers and trees; this ſhould be all removed, and it ſhould become a bare rock, as it was at firſt. It denotes the utter deſtruction of it. It has its name from a word which ſignifies a rock; ſee the note on Iſ. xxiii. 1.

℣. 5. It ſhall be a place for the ſpreading of nets in the midſt of the ſea, &c.] Where only fiſhermen would be ſeen waſhing their nets, and then ſpreading them upon this rock, where Tyre ſtood, to dry them; and this has been confirmed by travellers, who have ſeen fiſhermen ſpreading and drying their nets, and having no other habitations on it, but the hutts of theſe men. Huetius[c] relates, that he remembered one Hadrian Parvillatius a Jeſuit, a candid and learned man, particularly in the Arabic language, who lived ten years in Syria; and to have heard him ſay, that when he ſaw the ruins of Tyre, its rocks to the ſea, and ſcattered ſtones on the ſhore, and made clean ſmooth by the ſun, waves and wind, and only uſed for drying fiſhermens nets, it brought to his mind this paſſage of the prophet; as it did to Mr. Maundrel[d] when on the ſpot, a few years ago; who ſays, "you ſee nothing here but a mere Babel of "broken walls, pillars, vaults, &c. there being "not ſo much as one entire houſe left; its preſent "inhabitants are only a few poor wretches, harbouring themſelves in the vaults, and ſubſiſting "chiefly upon fiſhing; who ſeem to be preſerved "in this place by divine providence, as a viſible "argument how God has fulfilled his word concerning Tyre, viz. that it ſhould be as the top of "a rock," &c. ſo Dr. Shaw[e] ſays, this port, ſmall as it is at preſent, is choaked up to that degree with ſand and rubbiſh, that the boats of theſe poor fiſhermen, who now and then viſit this once renowned emporium, and dry their nets upon its rocks and ruins, can with great difficulty only be admitted: for I have ſpoken it, ſaith the Lord God; and therefore it ſhould certainly come to paſs, as it has: and it ſhall become a ſpoil to the nations; the army of many nations, that beſieged it for thirteen years under Nebuchadnezzar.

℣. 6. And her daughters which are in the field, ſhall be ſlain by the ſword, &c.] That is, the inhabitants of the cities, towns and villages, on the ſhore near it, and which were ſubject to it; as ſuch cities are frequently in ſcripture called the daughters of the place to which they belong: or their daughters literally, that ſhould get out of the city, and endeavour to make their eſcape; yet ſhould fall into the enemies hands, who would not ſpare them on account of their ſex or age. The Targum favours the former ſenſe; as moſt of the Jewiſh writers do, which is, "and the inhabitants of the villages which are in the field, "ſhall be killed by the ſword:" and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; the true God, and not Hercules or Apollo, or any other idols they worſhipped; when they ſhall ſee all theſe things exactly accompliſhed, now propheſied of; which none but the omniſcient God could foretell.

℣. 7. For thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] What follows; and declares by name the perſon that ſhould be the inſtrument of this ruin, and the manner in which it ſhould be brought about: I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; a prince whoſe name was terrible, having conquered many nations: the Lord is ſaid to bring him againſt Tyre, becauſe he inclined his heart to ſteer his courſe this way; encouraged him to this work; led and protected his army; and, at laſt, gave him ſucceſs: it held out thirteen years againſt him, and then was taken. The ſiege began, according to Mr. Whiſton[f], A. M. 3650, and of the Julian period 4128, and before Chriſt 586; and was taken A. M. 3663, and of the Julian period 4141, and before Chriſt 573; according to biſhop Uſher[g], it began A. M. 3419, and of the Julian period 4129, and before Chriſt 585; and was taken A. M. 3432, and of the Julian period 4142, and before Chriſt 572. The Phœnician hiſtorians make mention of the ſiege of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar; and Beroſus ſpeaks of his ſubduing the whole country of Phœnicia, in which Tyre was; with whom agree Philoſtratus and Megaſthenes[h]: a king of kings from the north; who had many kings tributaries to him; the metropolis of whoſe kingdom lay ſomewhat, tho' not fully north, to Tyre: with horſes, and with chariots, and with horſemen, and companies, and much people; with a very numerous army, conſiſting of a large cavalry; horſes being very numerous in the countries ſubject to him; and which he mounted his men on, both for their more eaſy travelling, and for their better fighting, and for the terror of their enemies.

℣. 8. He ſhall ſlay with the ſword thy daughters in the field, &c.] The firſt thing he would do, would be to deſtroy the cities, towns and villages on the continent, near to Tyre, and dependent on it, as in ℣. 6. and ſo the Targum is here, as there: and he ſhall make a fort againſt thee, and caſt a mount againſt thee; a fort built of wood, and a mount made of earth, from which ſtones might be caſt out of their engines, and arrows ſhot from their bows into the city, to the damaging of the houſes, and the hurt of the inhabitants: and lift up the buckler againſt thee; or ſhield; that is, as the Targum paraphraſes it, "ſet againſt thee ſuch "who are armed with ſhields;" to repel the arrows ſhot out from the city, and ſo defeat the deſign of them.

℣. 9. And he ſhall ſet engines of war againſt thy walls, &c.] Which ſome Jewiſh writers underſtand of croſs-bows, out of which ſtones or arrows were caſt; but rather, according to Kimchi and Jarchi, they were warlike machines, invented to throw large ſtones againſt the walls of a place, to beat them down. Some think they were the ſame with the battering-rams, uſed in ſieges for the demoliſhing of walls; which was a late invention of thoſe times, Ezekiel being the firſt writer, it is ſaid, that makes mention of them: and with his axes he ſhall break down thy towers; the word here uſed ſignifies any thing made of iron, as ſwords, ſpears, hammers and axes; the latter being more proper to demoliſh towers, is here pitched on by our tranſlators. The Targum renders it, with ſtones of iron; that is, with iron-balls caſt out of their engines.

---

[c] Evangel. Demonſtrat. prop. 6. p. 328.

[d] Journey from Aleppo to Jeruſalem, p. 48, 49. Ed. VII.

[e] Travels, p. 273. Ed. II.

[f] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

[g] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3419, 3432.

[h] Apud Joſeph. adv. Apion. l. 1. c. 19, 20, 21.

℣. 10. By reaſon of the abundance of his horſes, their duſt ſhall cover thee, &c.] The duſt raiſed by the feet of the horſes ſo numerous, ſhould riſe in ſuch quantities, and to ſuch an height, as to be like a cloud, which ſhould cover the city; an hyperbolical way of ſpeaking, as Kimchi obſerves; as is alſo the following clauſe: thy walls ſhall ſhake at the noiſe of the horſemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots; at the ſhouts of the horſemen upon every attack, and the rattling of the chariot-wheels running to and fro, in carrying on their deſigns: when he ſhall enter into thy gates; that is, then particularly, ſhall ſuch a ſhout be made by the horſemen, and ſuch rattling of the chariots, as will even make the walls of the city to ſhake; an exceſs of expreſſion, ſignifying the prodigious noiſe made at their entrance into it: as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach; or, according to the entrance of a city broken up [i]; when its walls are broken down, and a gap is made; at which men ruſh in, in great numbers, and with great force and clamour.

℣. 11. With the hoofs of his horſes ſhall he tread down all thy ſtreets, &c.] Such a number of horſes running to and fro in the ſtreets, and pranſing upon the pavements, ſhall break them up, and deſtroy them, ſo that they ſhall be mere mire and dirt: he ſhall ſlay thy people by the ſword; ſuch as would not lay down their arms and ſubmit; or their principal ones, who encouraged the inhabitants to hold out the ſiege to ſuch a length of time as they did; which might provoke Nebuchadnezzar to uſe them with more ſeverity: and thy ſtrong garriſons ſhall go down to the ground; where their ſoldiers were placed for defence; their citadel and other towers: or, the ſtatues of thy ſtrength [k]; their ſtrong ſtatues made of marble, &c. erected as trophies of victories obtained by them; or to the honour of ſome worthy magiſtrates, and principal citizens; or of their confederates and allies; or rather of their deities, ſuch as Hercules and Apollo, their tutelar gods; which, tho' chained as they were, that they might not depart, ſhall now fall to the ground, unable to protect themſelves, or their votaries: all that is here ſaid concerning the deſtruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, ſeems to be underſtood of old Tyre, which was upon the continent; for this account agrees not with the iſle.

℣. 12. And they ſhall make a ſpoil of thy riches, &c.] The Chaldean army, when they entered the city, and got poſſeſſion of it, would plunder it, and divide the riches of it among them: and make a prey of thy merchandiſe; of the merchants goods, laid up in their warehouſes for ſale, which was greatly hindered by this long ſiege; compare with this Rev. xviii. 11, 12: and they ſhall break down thy walls; the walls of their houſes; mention being made before of breaking down the walls of the city, towers and garriſons: and deſtroy thy pleaſant houſes; or, houſes of thy deſire [l]; the moſt deſireable ones in the city; the houſes of their princes and chief magiſtrates; their ſummer-houſes; or which were moſt delightfully ſituated towards the ſea, to have the proſpect and advantage of that: and they ſhall lay thy ſtones, and thy timber, and thy duſt in the midſt of the water; of the ſea, near unto or about it; into which they caſt the rubbiſh of the demoliſhed houſes, ſtones, timber and duſt, and ſo left it bare and naked: or rather this was fulfilled, when Alexander with the ruines of old Tyre, its ſtones, timber and rubbiſh, and trees from Lebanon, made a cauſeway from the continent to the iſland; and by that means took it, after ſeven months toil and labour, of this ſort [m].

℣. 13. And I will cauſe the noiſe of thy ſongs to ceaſe, &c.] As this city abounded with riches, ſo with carnal mirth and pleaſure; it was a joyous city, Iſ. xxiii. 7. the inhabitants lived merrily and jovially; were much given to muſic, which was very diverting and amuſing to foreigners that traded with them; but now it would be all over with them; there would be no more ſongs, nor any to ſing them: and the ſound of thy harps ſhall be no more heard; neither vocal nor inſtrumental muſic; and this will be one day the caſe of Rome, of which Tyre was a type, Rev. xviii. 22.

℣. 14. And I will make thee like the top of a rock, &c.] Smooth and bare; ſee the note on ℣. 4: and thou ſhalt be a place to ſpread nets upon; ſee the note on ℣. 5: thou ſhalt be built no more; this muſt be underſtood with ſome reſtriction and limitation; as that it ſhould not be built any more in the ſame ſtately manner; or be raiſed to royal dignity, and be governed in the grand manner it had been; or be built upon the ſame ſpot; or after its laſt deſtruction, to which the prophecy may have reſpect; it being uſual in ſcripture for prophecies to regard what is more remote, as well as more near; for upon the deſtruction of it by Nebuchadnezzar, it was to be reſtored after ſeventy years, according to Iſaiah's prophecy, ch. xxiii. 15, 17. and many years after this, new Tyre was beſieged, taken and deſtroyed by Alexander; and after this, it was rebuilt; we read of it in the New Teſtament; ſee the note on Acts xxi. 3. and in Jerom's time it was a moſt noble and beautiful city, as he on this paſſage obſerves; indeed, as Kimchi ſays, who lived near a thouſand years after Jerom, the city then built in his time called Tyre, was built upon the continent near the ſea-ſhore; whereas Tyre deſtroyed by Alexander, was built in the midſt of the ſea, and was as the top of a rock. It has ſince been deſtroyed by Saladine, in the year 1291; and now quite uninhabited, unleſs by fiſhermen, who waſh, dry and mend their nets here: for I the Lord have ſpoken it, ſaith the Lord God; and therefore it ſhall be accompliſhed, as it has been; no word of his returning void, and becoming of no effect. The Targum is, "becauſe I the Lord have "decreed by my word, ſaith the Lord God;" it is a determination and reſolution of his, and none can diſanul it. Abendana thinks, that hitherto the prophecy is concerning the firſt deſtruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, and what follows is concerning the deſtruction of it by Alexander.

---

[i] כמבואי עיר מבקעה tanquam introitus civitatis diruptæ, Montanus; diſſipatæ, Pagninus; quemadmodum ingrediuntur urbem diſruptam, Piſcator; quemadmodum intratur urbs prærupta, Cocceius.

[k] מצבות עזך ſtatuæ fortitudinis tuæ, Pagninus, Montanus; columnas tuas robuſtas, Cocceius; columnas roboris tui, Starckius.

[l] בתי חמדתך domos deſiderii tui, Montanus, Vatablus.

[m] Curt. Hiſt. l. 4. c. 2. 4.

℣. 15. Thus ſaith the Lord God to Tyrus, &c.] By his prophet, who very probably delivered this prophecy to the embaſſadors of Tyre at Babylon; or to ſome of their merchants that traded there; or ſent it in a letter to them: ſhall not the iſles ſhake at the ſound of thy fall; when they hear the noiſe of Tyre being taken, it will make them tremble, as fearing their turn will be next; that if a city ſo well fortified by nature and art; ſo well ſupplied with men and money; that had held out the ſiege ſo long, ſhould at laſt ſurrender; what ſhould they, the neighbouring iſles do, if attacked, who were ſo inferior to it; and beſides, they might have much of their goods in it, in which they traded with the inhabitants of it, truſting to its great ſtrength, and which would now give them a ſenſible concern. The Targum renders it, the ſuburbs; and another Jewiſh [n] writer, the villages; thoſe that were near to Tyre: when the wounded cry, when the ſlaughter is made in the midſt of thee? upon the enemy's entrance, putting to the ſword all they meet with; when thoſe that are wounded ſhall cry, either to have their lives ſpared, or thro' the pain and diſtreſs occaſioned by their wounds.

℣. 16. Then all the princes of the ſea ſhall come down from their thrones, &c.] The kings of the iſlands of the ſea, ſhall lay aſide their regalia, all their royal grandeur, and the enſigns of it; leave their thrones of ſtate, and ſit in an humble poſture: and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered garments; their royal robes and raiment of needle-work curiouſly embroidered, and richly wrought, ſuch as princes wear; ſo did the king of Niniveh in token of humiliation, Jon. iii. 6. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions underſtand the firſt clauſe, of their taking their mitres or diadems from their heads: they ſhall clothe themſelves with trembling; they ſhall tremble from head to foot in every joint, as if they were covered with it, as with a garment; or being clothed with ſackcloth, as mourners uſed to be, ſhall ſhake and tremble, being uſed to other and better clothing: they ſhall ſit upon the ground; as Job did, and his friends, with duſt and aſhes on their heads, as perſons in diſtreſs were wont to do, Job ii. 8, 13: and ſhall tremble at every moment; continually, every hour, minute and moment of the day: or, at the breaches [o]; ſo Jarchi; that is, thoſe made upon Tyre; fearing leſt the ſame ſhould be made upon them; ſo the Targum, becauſe of their breaches; or at the ruin and deſtruction, they fear will be their caſe alſo: and be aſtoniſhed at thee; that a city ſo wealthy and mighty, ſhould be brought ſo low; ſee Rev. xviii. 9, 10.

℣. 17. And they ſhall take up a lamentation for thee, and ſay unto thee, &c.] The following mournful ſong: how art thou deſtroyed, that was inhabited of ſea-faring men! or, of the ſeas! by men who uſed the ſeas, and traded by ſea to different parts of the world; and was frequented by perſons that came by ſea thither, by the great ocean, by the Red-ſea, the Mediterranean-ſea, and others; or which was ſurrounded by the ſea. So the Targum, "that dwelleſt in the midſt of the ſea:" the renowned city, which waſt ſtrong in the ſea; fortified by the ſea, and againſt it; ſtrong in ſhipping and naval ſtores; ſo as to be formidable to others, and miſtreſs of the ſea. The Targum is, "which dwell in the ſtrength of the ſea;" and had the ſtrength and riches of it brought unto it; and ſo was famous all the world over for its commerce, wealth and power; but now ruined and undone: ſhe and her inhabitants, which cauſe their terror to be on all that haunt it! the ſea; on all that uſed the ſeas; or on all the inhabitants of the iſlands of the ſea; who all ſtood in fear of Tyre and her inhabitants, and were obliged to ſtrike their ſails to their ſhips.

℣. 18. Now ſhall the iſles tremble in the day of thy fall, &c.] The iſles near unto it, the iſles of the Mediterranean-ſea; the inhabitants of them, the merchants who from thence traded with Tyre, the ſea-faring men of thoſe places; partly on account of loſſes ſuſtained hereby, and partly thro' fear of the ſame calamities coming upon themſelves; ſee Rev. xviii. 11, 15, 17: yea, the iſles that are in the ſea ſhall be troubled at thy departure; as at the cry of the wounded, and the number of the ſlain; ſo on account of thoſe that ſhould be carried away captive by the Babylonians; as well as at the departure of thoſe that ſhould be obliged to fly to other colonies, Iſ. xxiii. 6. ſo that upon one account or another, it ſhall be entirely ſtript of its inhabitants.

℣. 19. For thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Both to the terror of Tyre, and for the comfort of his people: when I ſhall make thee a deſolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; whoſe trade is ruined, whoſe inhabitants are deſtroyed, and whoſe walls are broken down, and become a mere waſte and deſert; where no perſon or any thing of value are to be ſeen: when I ſhall bring up the deep upon thee, and the great waters ſhall cover thee; the waters of the ſea ſhall ruſh in and overflow the city, the walls of it being broken down; juſt as the old world and the cities of it were overflowed with the deluge, to which the alluſion may be; whether this was literally accompliſhed on Tyre, is not certain; perhaps it is to be taken in a figurative ſenſe, and to be underſtood of the large army of the Chaldeans that ſhould come up againſt it, and over-power it. So the Targum, "when I ſhall bring up againſt them an army of people, who are many as the waters of the deep, and many people ſhall cover thee;" ſee Rev. xvii. 15, 16.

℣. 20. When I ſhall bring thee down, with them that deſcend into the pit, &c.] The grave, and make thee like to them: with the people of old time; either the people of the old world, or however who have been dead long ago: and ſhall ſet thee in the low parts of the earth; where the dead are laid: in places deſolate of old; long ago unfrequented by men; as ſuch places be, as are for the burial of the dead: with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; all the inhabitants being free among the dead; a heap of words made uſe of to expreſs the ſame thing, for the confirmation of it; namely, that the condition of Tyre ſhould be like that of dead men, who have been of old dead, and are remembered no more. Jarchi interprets the pit, of hell; as if this reſpected their everlaſting perdition, as well as temporal ruin; it may be applied to the beaſt which goeth into perdition, Rev. xvii. 8: and I ſhall ſet glory in the land of the living; in the land of Iſrael; ſo the Targum; and it is interpreted by the Jewiſh expoſitors and others, the ſame way; and which may be called the land of the living, becauſe the living God was worſhipped in it; living men in a ſpiritual ſenſe dwelt there, who offered up living ſacrifices unto God, and who had the promiſe and pledge of eternal life; and which was the glory of all lands, as it is ſometimes called, where the ſame word is uſed as here, ch. xx. 6. which had its accompliſhment in ſome reſpects at the Jews return from Babylon; but as Tyre here is a type of antichriſt, it may be obſerved, that at the time of his fall and deſtruction, God will put a glory upon his church and people, upon which there ſhall be a defence; ſee Iſ. iv. 5. and lx. 1. This is interpreted by the Talmudiſts [p], of the reſurrection of the dead, when they that die in the land of Iſrael ſhall live.

---

[n] R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 42. 2.

[o] לרגעים super repentino caſu ſuo, Vulg. Lat.

ẏ. 21. I will make thee a terror, &c.] To all the iſles round about, who ſhall ſhake and tremble at the ruin of Tyre, as before obſerved; or to herſelf, being brought into a moſt terrible and diſtreſſed condition: and thou ſhalt be no more; in the ſame place and ſituation, in the ſame happy ſtate and condition: tho' thou be ſought for, yet ſhalt thou never be found again, ſaith the Lord God; this is true of the antitype, Babylon, or antichriſt, Rev. xviii. 21.

C H A P. XXVII.

THIS chapter contains a lamentation on Tyre; ſetting forth her former grandeur, riches and commerce; her ruin and deſtruction; and the concern of others on that account. The prophet is bid to take up his lamentation concerning it, ẏ. 1, 2. obſerving her ſituation and magnificence, of which ſhe boaſted, ẏ. 3, 4. deſcribing the excellency of her ſhipping and naval ſtores, ẏ. 5, 6, 7. declaring who were her mariners, pilots and caulkers, ẏ. 8, 9. her military men, ẏ. 10, 11. her ſeveral merchants, and the things they traded in with her in her fairs and markets, ẏ. 12—25. then follows an account of her deſtruction, ẏ. 26, 27. the lamentation of pilots and mariners becauſe of it, ẏ. 28—32. and of the kings and inhabitants of the iſles, and merchants of the people, ẏ. 33—36.

ẏ. 1. The word of the Lord came again unto me, &c.] Upon the ſame ſubject, the deſtruction of Tyre: ſaying, as follows:

ẏ. 2. Now thou ſon of man, take up a lamentation for Tyrus.] Compoſe an elegy, and ſing it; make a mournful noiſe, and deliver out a funeral ditty; ſuch as the Præficæ, or mournful women made at funerals, in which they ſaid all they could in praiſe of the dead, and made very doleful lamentations for them: this the prophet was to do in a prophetic manner, for the confirmation of what was propheſied of by him; and it may teach us, that even wicked men are to be pitied, when in diſtreſs and calamity.

ẏ. 3. And ſay unto Tyrus, O thou that art ſituate at the entry of the ſea, &c.] Of the Mediterranean-ſea; at the eaſtern part of it, not above half a mile from the continent; and ſo fit for a ſea-port and a harbour for ſhipping; ſo myſtical Tyre ſits on many waters, Rev. xvii. 2: which art a merchant of the people for many iſles; the inhabitants of many iſles brought the produce of them to her; who took them off their hands, or ſold them for them to others; theſe came from ſeveral quarters to trade with her in her markets; and who ſupplied other iſles and countries with all ſorts of commodities, for which they either reſorted to her, or ſhe ſent by ſhips unto them; ſo Rome is repreſented as the ſeat of merchandiſe, Rev. xviii. 7, 11, 12, 13: thus ſaith the Lord God, O Tyrus, thou haſt ſaid; in thine heart, in the pride of it, and with thy mouth, praiſing and commending thyſelf; which is not right: I am of perfect beauty; built on a good foundation, a rock; ſurrounded with walls and towers; the ſtreets arranged in order, and filled with goodly houſes; having a good harbour for ſhipping, and being a mart for all manner of merchandiſe. Jeruſalem being deſtroyed, Tyre aſſumes her character, Pſ. xlviii. 2. and l. 2. Lam. ii. 15.

ẏ. 4. Thy borders are in the midſt of the ſeas, &c.] Fixed by the Lord himſelf, and which could never be removed. Tyre ſtood about four furlongs from the continent, ſurrounded with the waters of the ſea, till it was made a peninſula by Alexander: thy builders have perfected thy beauty. The Sidonians were the firſt builders of the city, as Juſtin [q] ſays; who began and carried on the building of it to the utmoſt of their knowledge and ſkill; and which was afterwards perfected by other builders, who made it the moſt beautiful city in all thoſe parts; unleſs this is to be underſtood of her ſhip-builders, who brought the art of building ſhips in her to ſuch a perfection, as made her famous throughout the world; ſince they are immediately ſpoken of without any other antecedent.

ẏ. 5. They have made all thy ſhip-boards of fir-trees of Senir, &c.] The ſame with Sion and Hermon, which the Sidonians called Sirion, and the Amorites Shenir, Deut. iii. 9. and iv. 48. here it ſeems grew the beſt of fir-trees, of which the Tyrians made boards and planks for ſhipping; of theſe the two ſides of the ſhip, as the word [r] here uſed in the dual number is thought to ſignify, or the fore and hind decks were made. The Targum is, "with "fir-trees of Senir they built for thee all thy "bridges;" the planks from which they went from one ſhip to another; but theſe are of too ſmall conſequence to be mentioned; rather the main of the ſhip is intended, which was built of fir planks; but our oaken ones are much preferable: they have taken cedars from Lebanon, to make maſts for thee; large poles for the yards and ſails to be faſtened to, for receiving the wind neceſſary in navigation; called the main-maſt, the fore-maſt, the mizen-maſt, and the bolt-ſprit; all theſe are only in large veſſels; whether the Tyrians had all of theſe, is not certain; ſome they had, and which were made of the cedars of Lebanon; which being large tall trees, were fit for this purpoſe. The Tyrians [s] are ſaid to be the firſt inventors of navigation.

---

[p] Vid. Kimchi in loc. & T. Bab. Cetubot, fol. 111. 1.

[q] Ex Trogo, l. 18. c. 3.

[r] לחותים tabulata duplicia, Munſter; duas tabulas, Vatablus.

[s] Prima ratem ventis credere docta Tyros. Catullus.

℣. 6. Of the oaks of Baſhan have they made thine oars, &c.] To row the ſhips with; for their ſhips probably were no other than gallies, which were rowed with oars, as were the ſhips of firſt invention. Baſhan was a country in Judea where oaks grew; ſee Iſ. ii. 13. The country of Judea in general was famous for oaks; it abounded with them in the times of Homer [t], who ſpeaks of Typho being buried in a country abounding with oaks, among the rich or fat people of Judea; and he ſeems to deſign Baſhan particularly, of which Og was king, whom he calls Typho, and of whoſe bed he makes mention in the ſame place; hence ſeveral places in Judea had their names from the oaks which grew there, as Elon-moreh, Allon-bachuth, Elon-meonenim, Elon-tabor, and Elon-beth-hanan, Gen. xii. 6. and xxxv. 8. Judg. ix. 37. 1 Sam. x. 3. 1 Kings iv. 9. and which one would have thought were fitter to make their ſhips of; but of theſe only their oars were made: the company of the Aſhurites have made thy benches of ivory, brought out of the iſles of Chittim; the benches for the rowers to ſit on, or for others in the cabbin and decks; but that theſe ſhould be wholly of ivory, is not very probable; nor was ivory brought from the iſles of Chittim, but from other parts; nor is it eaſy to ſay who the company of the Aſhurites were; ſome ſay the Aſſyrians; but why they ſhould be ſo called is not plain. Jarchi makes בת אשרים to be but one word, which ſignifies box-trees, as it is uſed in Iſ. xli. 19. and he ſuppoſes that theſe benches, or be they what they will, were made of box-trees covered or inlaid with ivory. So the Targum, “the lintels of thy gates (the hatches) “were planks of box-tree inlaid with ivory;” which box, and not the ivory, was brought from the iſles of Chittim; either from Cyprus, where was a place called Citium; or from Macedonia, from whence box was fetched; or from the province of Apulia, as the Targum; where there might be plenty of it, as in Corſica, and other places, where particularly the beſt box grows, as Pliny [u] ſays. Jerom interprets Cittim of Italy; and Ben Gorion ſays [w], that Cittim are the Romans.

℣. 7. Fine linen with broidered work from Egypt, &c.] From whence came the fineſt and whiteſt linen; and which they embroidered with needle-work, which looked very beautiful. Pliny [x] ſays, there were four ſorts of linen in Egypt, called Tanitic, Peluſiac, Butic, and Tentyritic, from the names and provinces where they were produced; of the ſecond ſort, the garments of the high-prieſt among the Jews were made; for they ſay [y], on the day of atonement he was in the morning clothed with Peluſiac garments; that is, with garments made of linen, which came from Peluſium, a well known city in Egypt; and which Jarchi [z] ſays, was the beſt, and in the greateſt eſteem; and one of the Miſnic commentators ſays [a], that the linen from Peluſium is fine and beautiful, and comes from the land of Raamſes; and obſerves, that in the Jeruſalem Targum, Raamſes is ſaid to be Peluſium; but tho' they are not one and the ſame place, yet they are both in the ſame country Egypt, and near one another; and with this ſort of linen the prieſts of Hercules were clothed, according to Silius [b]; and ſo the שש Sheſh or linen, of which the garments of the Jewiſh prieſts in common were made, was linen from Egypt; and which their Rabbins [c] ſay, is the beſt, and is only found there. The Phœnicians, of which Tyre was a principal city, took linen of Egypt, and traded with other nations with it, as well as made uſe of it for themſelves; particularly with the Ethiopians, the inhabitants of the iſle of Cernes, now called the Canaries, who took of them Egyptian goods, as linen, &c. in lieu of which they had of them elephants teeth, the ſkins of lions, leopards, deer, and other creatures [d]: now ſuch fine linen as this was that which thou ſpreadeſt forth to be thy ſail; not content with canvaſs or coarſe linen, which would have done as well, they muſt have the fineſt Egyptian linen, and this very curiouſly embroidered, to make their ſails of, they ſpread upon their maſts, to receive the wind; at leaſt this they ſpread for a flag [e], ſtandard or enſign, as the word may be rendered; when they hoiſted up their colours on any occaſion, they were ſuch as theſe: blue and purple, from the iſles of Eliſhah, was that which covered thee; meaning not garments made of cloth of theſe colours, which the maſter of the veſſel or mariners wore; but the tilts, or tents, or canopies erected on the decks, where they ſat ſheltered from the rain, wind or ſun; theſe were made of ſtuff died of a violet and purple colour, the beſt they could get; and which they fetched from the iſles of Eliſhah, or the Egean-ſea, from Coa, Rhodia, Niſyrus, and other places famous for purple, as Tyre itſelf afterwards was. The Targum is, “from the pro“vince of Italy;” or of Apulia, as others [f]; ſee Rev. xviii. 12, 16.

℣. 8. The inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad were thy mariners, &c.] Zidon was a city in Phœnicia, near to Tyre, and older than that, by whoſe inhabitants it was built; ſee the notes on Iſ. xxiii. 2, 4. and Arvad was an iſland in Phœnicia, to the ſouth of Zidon, not far from Tyre. Mr. Maundrel [g] ſays, it is about a league diſtant from the ſhore; and is now called by the Turks Ru-ad. It ſeemed to the eye to be not above two or three furlongs long, and wholly filled up with tall buildings like caſtles: its ancient inhabitants, he obſerves, were famous for navigation, and had a command upon the continent as far as Gabale aftermentioned. Dr. Shaw [h] ſays, it is at preſent called Rou-wadde; and that the proſpect of it from the continent is wonderfully magnificent; promiſing at a diſtance a continued train of fine buildings and impregnable fortifications; but this is entirely owing to the height and rockineſs of its ſituation; for at preſent all the ſtrength and beauty it can boaſt of lies in a weak unfortified caſtle, with a few ſmall cannon to defend it; ſo that the prophecy of Jeremiah appears to be fulfilled, Arpad is confounded, Jer. xlix. 23. This is the Aradus of Strabo, and other writers; and which he ſays is diſtant from the land twenty furlongs, and is about ſeven furlongs in circumference; and is ſaid to be built by the Sidonians [k]; the inhabitants of it are the ſame with the Arvadite, Gen. x. 18. theſe places brought up abundance of ſea-faring men, and which furniſhed Tyre with rowers, as the word [l] ſignifies; which was the moſt ſlaviſh work in navigation: thy wiſe men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots; ſuch as had learnt the art of navigation; were well verſed in geography; underſtood the charts; knew the ſhores of different places; where were creeks and promontories, rocks and ſands; theſe were brought up among themſelves, and made pilots or governors, as the Targum renders it; who have their names here, from the ropes [m] the ſails are faſtened to; and which they looſened or contracted, as they ſaw fit.

---

[t] Χωρω ενιδρυοεντ', Ιυδης εν πιονι δημω. Homer. Iliad. II. Vid. Dickinſon. Delphi Phœniciz. c. 2. p. 13, 16.

[u] Nat. Hiſt. l. 10. c. 16.

[w] Heb. Hiſt. l. 1. c. 1. p. 7.

[x] Nat. Hiſt l. 19. c. 1.

[y] Miſn. Yoma, c. 3. §. 7.

[z] Gloſſ. in T. Bab. Yoma, fol. 34. 2.

[a] Bartenora in Miſn. Yoma, ib.

[b] ——Velantur corpore lino,
Et Peluſiaco præfulget ſtamine vertex. L. 3. de bell. Punic.

[c] Aben Ezra in Exod. xxv. 4.

[d] Vid. Reineſium de lingua Punica, c. 2. § 13.

[e] לנס in ſignum, ſive vexillum, Guſſetius; ſo ſome in Bootius.

[f] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 48. 1.

[g] Journey from Aleppo, &c. p. 19. Ed. VII.

[h] Travels, p. 267. Ed. II.

℣. 9. The ancients of Gebal, &c.] A promontory of the Phœnicians, the ſame with the Gabale of Pliny [n], and with the land of the Gibbites, Joſh. xiii. 5. 1 Kings v. 18. ſee Pſ. lxxxiii. 7. It was by the Greeks called Byblus; and ſo the Septuagint here render the words, the elders of Bybli or Byblus, a place once famous for the birth and temple of Adonis; it is now called Gibyle. Mr. Maundrel [o] ſays, it is pleaſantly ſituated by the ſea-ſide, and that at preſent it contains but a little extent of ground, yet more than enough for the ſmall number of its inhabitants; it is compaſſed with a dry ditch, and a wall with ſquare towers in it, at about every forty yards diſtance; on its ſouth-ſide, it has an old caſtle; within it is a church; beſides which it has nothing remarkable; tho' anciently it was a place of no mean extent, as well as beauty, as may appear from the many heaps of ruins, and the fine pillars that are ſcattered up and down in the gardens near the town. The old experienced workmen of this place were employed by the Tyrians in mending and refitting their ſhips, and in the caulking of them, as follows: the wiſe men thereof were in thee thy caulkers; or, the ſtrengtheners of thy breaches [p], or chinks; the ſeams and commiſſures of the planks; which they ſtopped with tow, oakum, or ſuch like ſtuff; at leaſt this is what is uſed now, whatever might be by thoſe wiſe men; and it ſeems by this, that it was reckoned a very great art and myſtery, and which only wiſe men were maſters of, at leaſt ſuch the Tyrians employed. The Targum renders it, "providing "thy neceſſaries;" as if they were the ſhips huſbands: all the ſhips of the ſea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandiſe; ſhips from all parts were in her harbours, which brought goods into her, and carried goods out of her, by way of merchandiſe. So the Targum, "all that "go down into the ſea, and the ſhips; they were "rowers, and they brought merchandiſe into the "midſt of thee;" the goods of merchants from divers places; and carried back commodities again they traded for at Tyre; ſee Rev. xviii. 19.

℣. 10. They of Perſia, and of Lud, and of Phut, were in thine army, thy men of war, &c.] As the Tyrians were a trading people, they hired foreign troops into their ſervice, to fill their garriſons, defend their city, and fight for them in time of war; and theſe were of various nations, and the moſt famous for military ſkill and valour; as the Perſians, a people well known, and famous for war in the times of Cyrus, and before, and well ſkilled in ſhooting arrows; and they of Lud, or the Lydians, a people in Greece, renowned for war before the times of Crœſus their king, as well as in his time; and they of Phut, the Lybians, a people in Africa, ſkilful in drawing the bow, Iſ. lxvi. 19: they hanged the ſhield and helmet in thee; in their garriſons and towers, or places of armoury; which were defenſive weapons, the one for the body, the other for the head; this they did in times of peace, when there was no occaſion to uſe them, or when they were off their guard, and not on duty; ſee Cant. iv. 4: they ſet forth thy comelineſs; it being an honour to the Tyrians to have ſuch ſoldiers in their ſervice. The Targum is, "they increaſed "thy ſplendor;" added to their glory.

℣. 11. The men of Arvad with thine army were upon thy walls round about, &c.] Placed there for the defence of the city, to watch againſt an enemy, leſt it ſhould be ſurprized; here they were upon the patrole day and night; ſee Iſ. lxii. 6. theſe were the men of the ſame place before mentioned, ℣. 8. which furniſhed Tyre both with mariners and ſoldiers: and the Gammadim were in thy towers; not the Medes, as Symmachus renders it; nor the Cappadocians, as the Targum; much leſs were they images of their tutelar gods, as Spencer thinks, of a cubit long; nor pygmies, as the Vulgate Latin verſion renders it; which to mention, would not be to the honour of their militia; tho' Kimchi and Ben Melech call them dwarfs, men of a ſmall ſtature, of a cubit high, from whence they are ſuppoſed to have their name; ſo Schindler [q]: rather they were the inhabitants of ſome place in Phœnicia; either of Ancon, which in Greek ſignifies a cubit, as Gamad does in Hebrew; or of Gammade, the ſame which Pliny [r] corruptly calls Gamale. Hillerus [s] thinks the word ſignifies ambi-dexters, or left-handed men, ſuch as Ehud: they hanged their ſhields upon thy walls round about. Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve, it was a cuſtom in ſome places to hang ſuch weapons upon the tops of towers, and upon the walls of them; which might be done, either that they might be ready to take up and make uſe of, whenever occaſion required; or to diſmay their enemies, and to ſhew them that they were provided for them: they have made thy beauty perfect; beſides the beauty of her buildings and ſhipping, there was the beauty of her militia; which was increaſed by the ſoldiers from Perſia, Lydia, and Lybia, and added to by the men of Arvad, but completed by the Gammadim; and particularly being gilded, as probably they were, looked very glittering and beautiful in the rays of the ſun.

℣. 12. Tarſhiſh was thy merchant by reaſon of the multitude of all kind of riches, &c.] Some underſtand this of the ſea, which is ſometimes called Tarſhiſh; ſo Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it here: and the Targum, "from the ſea, or they of the "ſea bring merchandiſe into the midſt of thee;" that is, thoſe who lived upon the coaſts, or on the iſles, of the Mediterranean ſea. The Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Arabic verſions, render it the Carthaginians, who were a colony of the Tyrians, and no doubt traded with them; but it ſeems moſt likely, with others, to intend Tarteſſus in Spain, a place not far from that where Cadiz now ſtands; a country which abounded with riches, and with the following things: with ſilver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs; Pliny[t] ſays, that almoſt all Spain abounded in metals of lead, iron, braſs, ſilver and gold; which takes in the ſeveral things here mentioned, excepting tin; and that the Spaniards might have from our Cornwall, which they might import into Tyre; tho' the Phœnicians carried on a commerce with our iſle of Britain themſelves, whither they came for tin, and diſpoſed of other goods they brought with them. Guſſetius[u] obſerves, that the word עזבוניך, does not ſignify the place of trade and traffick, as it is commonly rendered; but reſpects the goods traded in, and the manner of trafficking with them, by way of exchange, as the word ſhould be rendered; and the ſenſe is, that the things before-mentioned, were what they gave in exchange, bartered, and left, with the Tyrians, for other goods they took of them; and ſo it is to be underſtood in all the following places, where the word is uſed. So Ben Melech ſays, it is expreſſive of merchandiſe.

---

[k] Geograph. l. 16. p. 518.

[l] שטים remiges, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[m] חובליך a חבל funis, ita dicuntur a contrahendis aut laxandis funibus veli, Vatablus.

[n] Nat. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 20.

[o] Journey, &c. p. 33, 34.

[p] מחזיקי בדקך roborantes ſciſſuram tuam, Montanus; inſtaurantes fiſſuras tuas, Munſter, Tigurine verſion; rimas tuas, Vatablus; inſtauratores rupturarum tuarum, Piſcator.

[q] Lexic. Pentaglott. col. 319, 320.

[r] Nat. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 91.

[s] Onomaſt. Sacr. p. 159.

℣. 13. Javan, Tubal, and Meſhech, they were thy merchants, &c.] Javan deſigns Greece, as the Septuagint and Vulgate Latin verſions render it; eſpecially that part of it called Ionia, from Javan the ſon of Japhet, Gen. x. 2. and Tubal and Meſhech, were alſo ſons of Japhet; the former are the Iberi and Albanians, as Jerom and others, among whom were a city called Thabilaca by Ptolemy[w]; and the latter the Cappadocians, with whom is a city called Mazaca[x]. They traded the perſons of men, and veſſels of braſs, in thy markets; or, the ſouls of men[y]; they bought up men and women in the ſeveral countries to which they belonged, or where they traded, and brought them to Tyre, and ſold them for ſlaves; and the Ionian and Grecian ſlaves were had in great eſteem: and the beſt braſs, of which veſſels were made, was had from Corinth, Delus, and Æginetus; according to Pliny[z], Cappadocia was famous for it alſo: in the firſt of theſe merchandiſes, Tyrus was remarkably a type of antichriſt, who is ſaid to deal in ſuch wares, the ſouls of men, Rev. xviii. 13. The word here rendered markets, Guſſetius[a] alſo obſerves, does not deſign the place of commerce, but the act of negotiation or trade; and ſo it is rendered by many[b].

℣. 14. They of the houſe of Togarmah, &c.] The Targum is, "they of the province or country of "Germany." Jerom underſtands it of Phrygia, near to which was Cappadocia; and perhaps is here meant, ſince it abounded with what theſe people are ſaid to trade with Tyre in: theſe traded in thy fairs with horſes, horſemen, and mules; for the Cappadocians paid for their yearly tribute to the Perſians, fifteen hundred horſes, and two thouſand mules, as Bochart from Strabo obſerves; and as they ſold horſes and mules to the Tyrians, ſo likewiſe horſemen, men that were ſkilled in riding and taking care of horſes; and theſe were ſold along with the horſes, as ſervants for that purpoſe.

℣. 15. The men of Dedan were thy merchants, &c.] Not Dedan in Idumea or Edom, but in Arabia, from Dedan the ſon of Raamah, Gen. x. 7: many iſles were the merchandiſe of thine hands; that is, many iſles took off their manufactures from them, in lieu of what they brought them, which were as follow: they brought thee for a preſent; that they might have the liberty of trading in their fairs and markets; or rather for a reward, or as a price, for the goods they had of them: horns of ivory and ebony; Kimchi reads them as ſeparate things; and which the Targum confirms, horns, ivory, and ebony: elks horns, or horns of goats, as the Targum; and ivory, or the teeth of elephants; and ebony, which is a wood of a very black colour, hard and heavy, and of which many things are made. The Targum takes it for the name of a fowl, and renders it, peacocks; ſo Jarchi; ſee 2 Chron. ix. 21. but Ben Melech much better interprets it of a tree, called in Arabia, Ebenus. Solinus makes it peculiar to India[d]; and ſo Virgil[e].

℣. 16. Syria was thy merchant by reaſon of the multitude of the wares of thy making, &c.] Which they took off of their hands, and for them brought the following things: they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds; precious ſtones of a green colour: Jarchi renders it carbuncles, other precious ſtones of a different colour; and ſo the word is tranſlated by Pagninus, Montanus, Grotius, the French, and Diodate; ſometimes called Carchedonies, and which the apoſtle John calls the Chalcedony, Rev. xxi. 19. the ſame with rubies; and ſo the word here uſed is rendered by Luther; and by Abarbinel, precious ſtones of great value; ſee Prov. iii. 15. from whence the Syrians had theſe to trade with at Tyre, cannot be eaſily ſaid; the modern rubies, which are thought to be the true and genuine carbuncles of the ancients, ſeldom exceed the weight of twenty carats; yet, ſome ſay, the emperor Rudolphus the ſecond, had a ruby as big as a little hen's egg, bought at ſixty thouſand ducats, and ſuppoſed to be worth more; and that Regulus Decan had one of thirty-four carats, bought at ſix minæ of gold, that is, an hundred and ninety-two pounds of gold; and that the Great Mogul had one, which coſt a million, four hundred and twenty-five thouſand florins; and that there are ſome which exceed the weight of fifty carats[f]; but there were few, if any of theſe, that came to the market of Tyre; however, no doubt ſome valuable ones were here ſold. Purple, and broidered work, and fine linen; cloth of purple colour, raiment of needle-work curiouſly embroidered, and linen of the beſt ſort. So the Targum, "purple clothes, and wrought with a "needle, and linen of different colours;" and of ſuch they made their ſails, tilts, and tents; ſee ℣. 7. And coral, and agate; the firſt is a ſea-plant. "This opinion is now ſo well eſtabliſhed, that all "other ſentiments ſeem almoſt precluded. P. Kircher ſuppoſes entire foreſts of it at the bottom "of the ſea; and M. Tournefort, that able botaniſt, maintains, that it evidently multiplies by "ſeed, tho' neither its flower nor ſeed be known. "However, the count de Marſigli has diſcovered "ſome parts therein, which ſeem to ſerve the purpoſe of ſeeds and flower—it vegetates the contrary way to all other plants; its foot adhering "to the top of the grotto, and its branches ſhooting downwards—there are properly but three "kinds of coral, red, white, and black; the white "is the rareſt and moſt eſteemed; but it is the red "that is ordinarily uſed in medicine—the places

---

[t] Nat. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 3.

[u] Ebr. Comment. p. 594, 595.

[w] Geograph. l. 5. c. 12.

[x] Joſeph. Antiqu. l. 1. c. 6. §. 1.

[y] בנפש אדם animabus hominum, Pagninus, Vatablus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[z] Nat. Hiſt. l. 34. c. 2.

[a] Ebr. Comment. p. 642.

[b] מערבך, τὴν ἐμπορίαν σȣ, Sept. negotiationem tuam, Tigurine verſion, in commercio tuo, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; mercaturam tuam, Cocceius.

[c] Phaleg. c. 11. col. 178.

[d] Polyhiſtor. c. 65.

[e] ——Sola India nigrum fert ebenum.—Virgil Georgic. l. 2.

[f] Vid. Braunium de veſtitu Sacerdot. Hebr. l. 2. c. 11. p. 669.

“ for fiſhing it, are the Perſian gulf, Red-Sea, “ coaſts of Africa towards the baſtion of France, “ the iſles of Majorca and Corſica, and the coaſts “ of Provence and Catalonia[g].” Perhaps the Syrians might have theirs from the Red-Sea, or the Mediterranean. The other, the Agate, is a precious ſtone, the ſame with the Achates, firſt found in Sicily, as Iſidore ſays[h], by a river of the ſame name; is of a black colour, according to him, having in the middle black and white circles joined and variated; but they are of different colours, and of different degrees of tranſparency. The word is variouſly rendered; by ſome the ruby; by others the carbuncle; by others the chalcedony; and by others cryſtal; it is hard to ſay what is meant. Now the Phœnicians or Tyrians were ſo deeply engaged in trade with the Syrians; that it became a common proverb, the Phœnicians againſt the Syrians[i]; when like were ſet againſt like, as the Egyptians againſt the Egyptians, Iſ. xix. 2.

℣. 17. Judah and the land of Iſrael, they were thy merchants, &c.] The inhabitants of Judah and Iſrael; the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and the other ten tribes of Iſrael, they all merchandized with the Tyrians, being near unto them: they traded in thy market wheat of Minnith; the name of a place, Judg. xi. 33. where probably the beſt wheat grew; ſo the Targum renders it; the Tyrians were ſupplied with wheat from the land of Iſrael, in the times of Solomon, long before this, 1 Kings v. 11. as they were in the times of Herod, long after, Acts xii. 20. it was four miles from Eſbus or Heſhbon, in the way to Philadelphia, according to Euſebius: and Pannag; which ſome take to be the name of a place, where the beſt wheat alſo was; which ſome ſay was Phœnicia, or the land of Canaan. The Septuagint render it, ointments; and the Latin interpreter of the Targum, balſam; with which agrees Joſephus ben Gorion[k], who ſays, that at Jericho grew the balſam tree, from whence came a precious oil, which oil is Pannag; and Hillerus[l] tranſlates it balſam: it follows, and honey, and oil; with which the land of Canaan abounded; for it was a land of oil-olive and honey, a land that flowed with milk and honey, Deut. viii. 8. ſo that they had enough for themſelves, and to ſpare for their neighbours, and which they carried to the market of Tyre: and balm; or balſam, of which there was plenty at Gilead, and near Jericho, however at the latter; we read of the balm of Gilead, Jer. viii. 22. and xlvi. 11. The Septuagint and Vulgate Latin verſions render it, roſin; and ſo the Targum; and this the Tyrians might make uſe of in their ſhips[m]. The balm, or balſam-plant, was peculiar to Judea, as Pliny[n]; at leaſt it was the place of it until tranſplanted into other countries; and ſo ſays Solinus[o].

℣. 18. Damaſcus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of thy making, &c.] Of the many things manufactured at Tyre, the inhabitants of Damaſcus, once the chief city of Syria, took ſome: for the multitude of all riches; in lieu of the vaſt quantity of rich things there made, they traded with them for them: in the wine of Helbon, and white wool; Helbon very probably is the ſame with the Chalybon of Ptolemy[p], which he places in Syria; a place famous for wine, as Strabo[q] reports; the kings of Perſia, he ſays, thro' riches fell into luxury, ſo that they would have wheat brought from Aſſos in Æolia, and Chalybonian wine out of Syria, and water from Eulæus (the river Ulai in Dan. viii. 2.) which was lighteſt of all; and ſo Athenæus[r] ſays, the kings of the Perſians drink only Chalybonian wine; which, ſays Poſidonius, was made at Damaſcus in Syria, from whence the Perſians tranſplant vines: Helbon is thought to be the ſame with Aleppo; the grapes there are all white, and make a ſtrong wine, as Monſieur Thevenot[s] relates; and who alſo obſerves, that the wines of Damaſcus are treacherous and ſtrong: and the wool they bought, was ſuch as it came off of the backs of the ſheep, and the purer and whiter ſort of it; which was brought to Tyre, and by them bought, and dyed purple, for which dye the Tyrians were famous.

℣. 19. Dan alſo and Javan going to and fro, occupied in thy fairs, &c.] Either the inhabitants of the tribe of Dan in general; or of Laiſh, ſometime called Dan, and in after-times Cæſarea Philippi, which was in that tribe: tho' Grotius thinks, that Taprobane, or the iſle of Zeilan, is meant, where, and not in Dan, were the things aftermentioned, in plenty; and where alſo, according to Ptolemy[t], was a city called Dana or Dagana: and Bochart takes Javan not to be Greece, but a people of a country in Arabia, the metropolis of which was Uzal; and ſo he renders it, as ſome of the Greek verſions do, Javan of Uzal, or Aſel, to diſtinguiſh it from the other Javan, ℣. 13. where alſo, and not in Greece, the ſweet ſpices grew, which theſe are ſaid to trade in: bright iron, caſſia, and calamus were in thy market; brought from the above places; poliſhed iron or ſteel, and the ſweet ſpices of caſſia and calamus, or the aromatic cane or reed, which came from afar, Jer. vi. 20.

℣. 20. Dedan was thy merchant in precious cloths for chariots.] Or, cloths of freedom[u]; ſuch as freemen, and even nobles wore; and yet ſo extravagant were the Tyrians, that they bought theſe to line or cover their chariots with; this is different from the Dedan in ℣. 15. and is either Dedan in Edom or Idumea, Jer. xlix. 8. or in Arabia, the inhabitants of which deſcended from Dedan, a grandſon of Abraham, Gen. xxv. 3. which agrees with the following.

℣. 21. Arabia, and all the princes of Kedar, &c.] Arabia was a large country, divided into three parts; Arabia Deſerta, or the deſert; Arabia Petræa, or the rocky; and Arabia Felix, or the happy. Kedar was in Arabia Petræa; its inhabitants were called Kedarenes, deſcended from Kedar, a ſon of Iſhmael, Gen. xxv. 13. they were chiefly ſhepherds, and dwelt in tents, to which the alluſion is in Cant. i. 5. theſe princes were the rich and wealthy among them, who bought up the cattel of the meaner ſort, and brought them to Tyre. In Jerom's time, Kedar was the country of the Saracens. The Targum calls them the princes of Nebat, the ſame with Nebaioth, the firſt-born of Iſhmael, and brother of Kedar, Gen. xxv. 13. They occupied with thee;

---

[g] Chambers's Cyclopædia in the word Coral.
[h] Origin. l. 16. c. 11.
[i] Vid. Reineſium de lingua Punic. c. 2. §. 13.
[k] Hiſt. l. 4. c. 22. p. 329.
[l] Onomaſtic. Sacr. p. 903.
[m] Vid. Scheffer. de militia navali, p. 43, 319.
[n] Nat. Hiſt. l. 12. c. 25.
[o] Polyhiſtor. c. 48.
[p] Geograph. l. 5. c. 15.
[q] Geograph. l. 15. p. 505.
[r] L. 1. c. 22.
[s] Travels, part 2. B. 1. ch. 5. p. 25. and ch. 7. p. 33.
[t] Geograph. l. 7 c. 4.
[u] בבגדי חפש pannis libertatis, Vatablus, Piſcator; ingenuorum, Junius & Tremellius. So Ben Melech, and R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 30. 2.

thee; or, they were the merchants of thine hand [w]; that took off her manufactures from her, in lieu of the lambs, and rams, and goats, they brought to market, for her food and ſacrifices; keeping of ſheep being their chief employment: in theſe were they thy merchants; they ſupplied them with their cattel, and took their wares of them for them.

℣. 22. The merchants of Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants, &c.] This Sheba was the ſon of Raamah, Gen. x. 7. who ſettled in Arabia Felix; where, according to Ptolemy [x], is a city called Rhegma; and ſo Raamah is pronounced in the Septuagint verſion of Gen. x. 7: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all ſpices; as with myrrh and frankincenſe, with which they abounded: Pliny [y] ſays, that the Arabians paid annually to the kings of Perſia a thouſand talents of frankincenſe; and that the Sabæans [z] boiled their food, ſome with wood of frankincenſe, and others with wood of myrrh: and with all precious ſtones, and gold; as jaſpers, emeralds, carbuncles, and others, which Pliny [a] ſays are found in Arabia; and mention is made of the gold of Sheba, Pſ. lxxii. 15. and Bochart thinks that Ophir, from whence the famous gold of that name was fetched, was in Arabia Felix; and it may be obſerved, that the queen of Sheba gave great quantities of gold, of ſpices, and of precious ſtones, to Solomon; and that he had much of theſe kinds yearly from the ſpice-merchants, and kings of Arabia, 1 Kings x. 10, 14, 15. ſee the note on Iſ. lx. 6.

℣. 23. Haran, and Canneh, and Eden, &c.] Haran was a city of Meſopotamia, the ſame with Charran, where Abraham dwelt awhile, Acts vii. 2. the Charræ of the Parthians, famous for the defeat of Craſſus. Canneh is thought to be the ſame with Calneh, Gen. x. 10. afterwards called Cteſiphon; and here, by the Targum, Netzibin, a place not far from Tigris: and Eden was alſo between Tigris and Euphrates. All three places ſeem to be in Meſopotamia, and not far from each other; the latter is thought by ſome to be the place where the garden of Eden was. The merchants of Sheba; this was another Sheba, diſtinct from that in ℣. 22. this Sheba was the ſon of Jokſhan, a ſon of Abraham by Keturah, Gen. xxv. 3. theſe were the Sabeans, who were not far from the former, and dwelt near the Perſian ſea. Aſhur, and Chilmad were thy merchants; or dealt in thy merchandiſe; took goods of them. Aſhur deſigns the Aſſyrians, who had their name from Aſhur, the builder of Niniveh, Gen. x. 11. and Chilmad is by the Targum rendered Media; and by Grotius thought to be the Gaula of Media in Ptolemy [b]; and ſo Hillerus [c] takes it to be a city of Media.

℣. 24. Theſe were thy merchants in all ſorts of things, &c.] Either all before-mentioned throughout the chapter, or rather thoſe only in the preceding verſe; alſo theſe were merchants in various things after-mentioned, and which were the beſt and moſt perfect of the kind, as the word [d] uſed ſignifies: in blue cloths, and broidered work; theſe the Aſſyrians took of them, a colour in which they much delighted; ſee ch. xxiii. 6: and in cheſts of rich apparel bound with cords, and made of cedar among thy merchandiſe; rich apparel, ſuch as ſcarlet cloaks, as the Targum, and blue cloths as before; theſe were well packed up in cheſts made of cedar, which they had from Lebanon, and ſo fit to be put on board a ſhip, and carried into any part of the world. The Targum adds, "and ſealed "with a ſignet;" as things well packed up and bound ſometimes are, being of worth and value. Some render it, in chains; or, chains were among thy merchandiſe [e]; ſuch as chains of gold, wore about the neck; and take the word to be of the ſame ſignification with that in Cant. i. 10.

℣. 25. The ſhips of Tarſhiſh did ſing of thee in thy market, &c.] The ſhips of the ſea in general; for Tarſhiſh is uſed for the ſea; theſe from all parts came to Tyre with their ſeveral wares, the product of their country from whence they came, and finding a good market for them at Tyre, ſpoke greatly in her praiſe: or, were thy princes, or thy chief ones, in thy market [f]; theſe brought the principal things into it, and took off the chief that were in it, which were of the produce of Tyre: and thou waſt repleniſhed; with goods from all parts, with every thing for their neceſſity, convenience, pleaſure, and delight, and to carry on a traffick with all nations: and made very glorious in the midſt of the ſeas; with great riches, ſtately towers and buildings. Here ends the account of Tyre's greatneſs; next follows her ruin and deſtruction.

℣. 26. Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters, &c.] Here the city of Tyre is compared to a veſſel at ſea, with great propriety, it being built in the ſea, and its trade chiefly there; and its rulers and governors, or the inhabitants of it, to rowers; literally the men of Zidon and Arvad were her rowers, ℣. 8. the ſtraits, difficulties, and diſtreſſes theſe brought Tyre into, are compared to great waters; who by ſome unadviſed ſtep or another, provoked the king of Babylon to come againſt them with his army, and lay ſiege unto them: the eaſt wind hath broken thee in the midſt of the ſeas; a wind very fatal to ſhips and mariners; ſee Pſ. xlviii. 7. by it are meant Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldean army; ſo called, becauſe of their great force and fury; and becauſe Babylon, from whence they came, lay ſomewhat to the eaſt of Tyre. So the Targum, "a king who is ſtrong as the eaſt "wind, hath broken thee in the midſt of the "ſeas."

℣. 27. Thy riches, &c.] That vaſt maſs of wealth Tyre had got by her trade and merchandiſe, were all loſt at once, and came to nought, which had been many years gathering; ſee Rev. xviii. 17: and thy fairs; to which there were ſuch great reſorts from all parts, and where ſuch a prodigious traffick was carried on, were now interrupted by the ſiege, and put to an end upon the ruin of the city: thy merchandiſe; the goods both imported and exported; the wares that were brought in from foreign parts, and ſold in her, and what was taken from her in lieu of them; now nothing more of this kind; and what goods were in her, whether her own or others, were all loſt and deſtroyed: thy mariners; who were the inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad, ℣. 8. theſe periſhed with her: and thy pilots;

---

[w] סחרי ידך negotiatores manus tuæ, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus; mercatores manus tuæ, Cocceius, Starckius.

[x] Geograph. l. 6. c. 7.

[y] Nat. Hiſt. l. 12. c. 17.

[z] ——Solis eſt thurea virga Sabæis. Virgil. Georgic. l. 2.

[a] Nat. Hiſt. l. 37.

[b] Geograph. l. 6. c. 2.

[c] Onomaſtic. Sacr. p. 108.

[d] במכללים rebus perfectiſſimis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[e] וארזים במרכלתך & torquibus in negotiatione tua, Pagninus; & torques fuerunt in nundinis tuis, Vatablus. So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 71. 2.

[f] שרותיך principes, V. L. Montanus, Caſtalio, Starckius; præcipuæ, Tigurine verſion, Grotius. So ſome in Vatablus.

pilots; who were the wiſeſt, moſt ſkilful, and beſt learned in the art of navigation, and who were of the city itſelf, theſe were no more, ℣. 8: thy calkers; the wiſe and ancient men of Gebal, ℣. 9: and the occupiers of thy merchandiſe; that traded in her markets and fairs, mentioned from ℣. 12. to 25: and all thy men of war that are in thee; to fight for her, and defend her; the Perſians, Lydians, and Lybians, the men of Arvad, and the Gammadim, ℣. 10, 11: and in all thy company, which is in the midſt of thee; the great concourſe of people, whether natives or foreigners: theſe all ſhall fall into the midſt of the ſeas, in the day of thy ruin; the walls and banks being demoliſhed, the ſea broke in upon it, and waſhed all away in it, and left it a bare rock; ſee ch. xxvi. 4, 12, 14.

℣. 28. The ſuburbs ſhall ſhake at the ſound of the cry of thy pilots.] Or governors, as the Targum; and ſo the Vulgate Latin, and all the Oriental verſions: the allegory of a ſhip wrecked is ſtill continued: the ſenſe is, that ſuch ſhould be the cry of the principal men of the city when it ſhould be taken, that the noiſe of it would be heard upon the continent, and in the towns and villages belonging to Tyre, which would make the inhabitants of them tremble: or, at the ſound of the cry of thy pilots, the waves are moved, or tremble [z]; which beat very ſtrong at the time of her fall into the ſea.

℣. 29. And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the ſea, &c.] Inferior officers, and the common people; tho' this may be literally underſtood of all ſorts of ſea-faring people, differently employed in ſhips; ſome at the oar; ſome at the ſails; and others at the helm; but all ſhall quit their poſts, and ſhall come down from their ſhips; either there being no farther buſineſs for them, an entire ſtop being put to trade, thro' the fall of Tyre; or becauſe of danger, and to ſave themſelves, would leave the ſhip, and betake to their boats, and make for land: hence it follows, they ſhall ſtand upon the land; upon the continent, being ſafely arrived; looking upon the ſhip-wrecks, and bewailing the loſs of Tyre, as in the next verſe.

℣. 30. And ſhall cauſe their voice to be heard againſt thee, &c.] The rulers and governors of the city, for having taken a falſe ſtep in provoking the enemy, and then holding out the ſiege no longer, as it was thought they might and would: or rather, over thee, or for thee [a]; mourning over the city, and lamenting its ſad caſe; ſee Rev. xviii. 9, 11: and ſhall cry bitterly; with great weeping, howling, and ſhrieking: and they ſhall caſt duſt upon their heads; a cuſtom uſed in the eaſtern countries, in times of mourning and ſorrow; ſee Rev. xviii. 19: and they ſhall wallow themſelves in aſhes; or roll themſelves in them, another cuſtom uſed in mourning; ſee Jer. vi. 26. Mic. i. 10.

℣. 31. And they ſhall make themſelves utterly bald for thee, &c.] Either by ſhaving their heads, or tearing off their hair, as mourners in diſtreſs have been uſed to do: and gird them with ſackcloth; about their loins, as was very cuſtomary in ſuch diſtreſſed caſes: and they ſhall weep for thee with bitterneſs of heart, and bitter wailing; not in ſhew only, but in reality; not like the preficæ or mourning women, though the alluſion may be to them, who only mourned outwardly; but theſe from the very heart, and in great bitterneſs of ſpirit; this is expreſſive of the inward grief of their minds on this melancholy occaſion, as what follows declares the lamentation they expreſſed vocally; ſee Rev. xviii. 19.

℣. 32. And in their wailing they ſhall take up a lamentation for thee, &c.] A mournful ſong, ſuch as was uſed at funerals, or in times of calamity; and ſo the Vulgate Latin verſion renders it: and lament over thee, ſaying the following ditty: what city is like Tyrus, like the deſtroyed in the midſt of the ſea? as there was none like it a few years ago for riches, ſplendor, and glory, ſo now there's none like it for miſery and ruin; ſee Rev. xviii. 18. The Targum is, "who is as Tyre? there is "none like unto her in the midſt of the ſea;" ſhe is not now Tyre the renowned, but Tyre the deſtroyed; deſtroyed in the midſt of the ſea, from whence ſhe had her riches and her glory: or, as one dumb or ſilent in the midſt of the ſea; ſhe, in whom was heard the voice of joy and ſinging, is now mute, and nothing more of that kind is heard in her; ſee Rev. xviii. 22.

℣. 33. When thy wares went forth out of the ſeas, &c.] When they were took out of ſhips, which came to Tyre from all parts, and were landed on the ſhore, and put up in warehouſes, and expoſed in markets and fairs. The Targum is, "when "thy merchandiſe went out from among the na"tions;" being brought from all parts thither: thou filledſt many people; by ſelling them in their markets commodities they wanted, for which they came from all quarters; and by ſending them to others in ſhips, where they knew they ſtood in need of them, and would fetch them a good price; and they had enough to anſwer the demands of all, and to ſupply them to the full: thou didſt enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches, and of thy merchandiſe; by taking off the goods of their ſubjects, whereby they were able the better to pay their taxes, and ſupport them in their grandeur and dignity; as well as by furniſhing them with gold and ſilver, and precious ſtones, which they gave for the produce of their country; or by the toll and cuſtom of the goods imported or exported.

℣. 34. In the time when thou ſhalt be broken by the ſeas, in the depths of the waters, &c.] By the Chaldean army, which came upon them like the waves of the ſea, ch. xxvi. 3. by which they were overpowered and deſtroyed; juſt as a ſhip on the mighty waters is daſhed and broke to pieces by the waves thereof: thy merchandiſe, and all thy company in the midſt of thee ſhall fall; trade ſhall ceaſe, and the mixt multitude of traders from all parts ſhall be ſeen no more; the natives of the place ſhall periſh, mariners and ſoldiers, and perſons of every rank and degree, age and ſex. The Targum renders it, "all thine armies." Abendana ſuggeſts, that this reſpects the deſtruction of Tyre by Alexander the Great.

℣. 35. All the inhabitants of the iſles ſhall be aſtoniſhed at thee, &c.] Both near and afar off; and not only the inhabitants of the iſles, properly ſo called, but all that dwelt on the continent by the ſea-ſide; who would all be amazed, when they heard of the ruin of Tyre, which they thought inexpugnable, by reaſon of its natural and artificial ſtrength: and their kings ſhall be ſore afraid; that it will be their turn next; and as well knowing that they were leſs able to contend with ſo mighty a monarch as the king of Babylon, or Alexander the Great, than Tyre was; ſee Rev. xviii. 9, 10: they ſhall be troubled in their countenance; their inward paſſions of grief and fear, ſhall be ſeen in their countenances; which will wax pale, be dejected, diſtorted, and furrowed.

---

[z] ירעשו מגרשות commoti ſunt fluctus jactati, Junius & Tremellius; contremiſcent fluctus, Piſcator.

[a] עליך de te, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; ſuper te, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 36. The merchants among the people ſhall hiſs at thee, &c.] As Tyre had done at Jeruſalem, ch. xxvi. 2. as ſhe hoped to make better markets upon the fall of Jeruſalem, and therefore rejoiced at it; ſo theſe merchants upon her fall will hope that her trade will come into their hands, and therefore deſpiſe her, hiſs and laugh at her in her abject ſtate. The Targum is, "ſhall be aſtoniſhed at "thee;" ſtruck with wonder, and even with a ſtupor at her fall: and thou ſhalt be a terror; not only to thyſelf, but to kings and merchants, and to all the inhabitants of the iſles, and to all that trade by ſea; who will be ſtruck with ſurprize and dread, when they hear of thy deſtruction; ſee Rev. xviii. 9, 10, 11, 15, 17: and never ſhall be any more; upon the ſame ſpot, and in the ſame grandeur and glory: ſome underſtand this only of a long time, as 70 years, when it was rebuilt; ſee Iſ. xxiii. 15, 17. it may reſpect its laſt deſtruction, ſince which it has not been, nor now is, or ever will be: this will be true of myſtical Babylon, the antitype of Tyre, Rev. xviii. 21.

CHAP. XXVIII.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy of the deſtruction of the prince of Tyre; a lamentation for the king of Tyre; a denunciation of judgments on Zidon, and a promiſe of peace and ſafety to Iſrael. The order given the prophet to propheſy of the ruin of the prince of Tyre, ℣. 1, 2. the cauſe of his ruin, his pride on account of his wiſdom and riches, which roſe to ſuch a pitch, as to make himſelf God, ℣. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. the manner in which his deſtruction ſhall be accompliſhed, ℣. 7, 8, 9, 10. the lamentation for the king of Tyre begins, ℣. 11, 12. ſetting forth his former grandeur and dignity, ℣. 13, 14, 15. his fall, and the cauſe of it, injuſtice and violence in merchandiſe, pride becauſe of beauty and wiſdom, and profanation of ſanctuaries, ℣. 16, 17, 18, 19. next follow the judgments on Zidon, ℣. 20, 21, 22, 23. and the chapter is concluded with a promiſe of the reſtoration of the Jews to their own land, and of great tranquillity and ſafety in it, ℣. 24, 25, 26.

℣. 1. The word of the Lord came again unto me, &c.] With another prophecy; as before againſt the city of Tyre, now againſt the king of Tyre: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 2. Son of man, ſay unto the prince of Tyre, &c.] Whoſe name was Ethbaal, or Ithobalus, as he is called in Joſephus; for that this was Hiram that was in the days of Solomon, and lived a thouſand years, is a fable of the Jewiſh Rabbins, as Jerom relates: this prince of Tyre is thought by ſome, to be an emblem of the devil; but rather of antichriſt; and between them there is a great agreement, and it ſeems to have a prophetic reſpect to him: thus ſaith the Lord God, becauſe thine heart is lifted up; with pride, on account of his wiſdom and knowledge, wealth and riches, as aftermentioned: and thou haſt ſaid, I am a god; this he ſaid in his heart, in the pride of it, and perhaps expreſſed it with his lips, and required divine homage to be given him by his ſubjects, as ſome inſolent, proud, and haughty monarchs have done; in which he was a lively type of antichriſt, who ſhews himſelf, and behaves as if he was God, taking upon him what belongs to God; pardoning the ſins of men; opening and ſhutting the gates of heaven; binding mens conſciences with laws of his own making, and diſpenſing with the laws of God and man; and calling himſelf, or ſuffering himſelf to be called God, and to be worſhipped as ſuch; ſee the note on 2 Theſſ. ii. 4: I ſit in the ſeat of God; in a place as delightful, ſafe and happy, as heaven itſelf; where the throne of God is; ſo antichriſt is ſaid to ſit in the temple of God, in the houſe and church of God; where he aſſumes a power that don't belong to him, calling himſelf God's vicegerent, and Chriſt's vicar; ſee 2 Theſſ. ii. 4. and the Arabic verſion here renders it, in the houſe of God: it follows, in the midſt of the ſeas; ſurrounded with them as Tyre was, and lord of them as its king was; ſending his ſhips into all parts, and to whom all brought their wares; thus the whore of Rome is ſaid to ſit upon many waters, Rev. xvii. 2: yet thou art a man, and not God; a frail, weak, mortal man, and not the mighty God, as his after-deſtruction ſhews; and as the popes of Rome appear to be, by their dying as other men; and as antichriſt will plainly be ſeen to be, when he ſhall be deſtroyed with the breath of Chriſt's mouth, and the brightneſs of his coming: though thou ſet thine heart as the heart of God; as if it was as full of wiſdom and knowledge as his; and thinkeſt as well of thyſelf, that thou art a ſovereign as he, and to be feared, obeyed, and ſubmitted to by all.

℣. 3. Behold, thou art wiſer than Daniel, &c.] That is, in his own opinion; or it is ironically ſaid. The Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic verſions render it by way of interrogation, art thou not wiſer than Daniel? who was now at the court of Babylon, and was famous throughout all Chaldea for his knowledge in politicks, his wiſdom and prudence in government, as well as his ſkill in interpreting dreams. The Jews have a ſaying, that "if all the wiſe men of the nations were in one "ſcale, and Daniel in the other, he would weigh "them all down." And perhaps the fame of him had reached the king of Tyre, and yet he thought himſelf wiſer than he; ſee Zech. ix. 2. antichriſt thinks himſelf wiſer than Daniel, or any of the prophets and apoſtles; he is wiſe above that which is written, and takes upon him the ſole interpretation of the ſcriptures, and to fix the ſenſe of them: there is no ſecret, that they can hide from thee; as he fanſied; he had ſagacity to penetrate into the councils of neighbouring princes, and diſcover all plots and intrigues againſt him; he underſtood all the arcana and ſecrets of government, and could counter-work the deſigns of his enemies. Antichriſt pretends to know all myſteries, and ſolve all difficulties, and paſs an infallible judgment on things; as if he was of the privy-council of heaven, and nothing was tranſacted there but he was acquainted with it, and had full knowledge of the mind of God in all things.

℣. 4. With thy wiſdom, and with thy underſtanding, thou haſt gotten thee riches, &c.] Thro' ſkill in navigation and trade, for which the Tyrians and their princes were famous, they acquired great wealth: ſo antichriſt, by carnal policy, and helliſh ſubtlety, has amaſſed vaſt treaſures together; the ſale of pardons and indulgences has brought immenſe riches into the pope's coffers: and haſt gotten gold and ſilver into thy treaſures; in great quantities; ſee Rev. xviii. 3, 17.

℣. 5. By thy great wiſdom, and by thy traffick, &c.] Or, by thy great wiſdom, in thy traffick [i]; thro' great ſkill in trade and commerce: haſt thou increaſed thy riches; to a very great degree, a prodigious bulk; ſo antichriſt has done, eſpecially thro' trafficking with the ſouls of men, which is one part of his merchandiſe, as it was of Tyre, Rev. xviii. 13. Ezek. xxvii. 13: and thine heart is lifted up becauſe of thy riches; which are apt to puff up and make men high-minded, and ſwell them with a vain opinion of themſelves, and to make haughty, inſolent, and ſcornful in their behaviour to others; thus elated with worldly grandeur and riches, the whore of Rome is repreſented as proud, vain, and haughty, Rev. xviii. 7.

℣. 6. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Now follows the puniſhment threatened, becauſe of all this pride, haughtineſs, and blaſphemy: becauſe thou haſt ſet thine heart as the heart of God; ſeeking thine own glory; ſetting up thyſelf above all others; aſſuming that to thyſelf which belongs to God; and making thyſelf equal to him, or ſhewing thyſelf as if thou waſt God; ſee the note on ℣. 2.

℣. 7. Behold, therefore, I will bring ſtrangers upon thee, &c.] The Chaldean army, who not only lived at a diſtance from Tyre, but were unknown to them, not trading with them; nor are they mentioned among the merchants of Tyre: theſe, in the myſtical ſenſe, may deſign the angels that ſhall pour out the vials on the antichriſtian ſtates, the kings of Proteſtant nations: the terrible of the nations; as the Babylonians were, very formidable to the world, having conquered many countries, and their armies conſiſting of men of all nations, mighty, courageous, and expert in war; and alike formidable will the Proteſtant princes be to the antichriſtian powers, when they ſhall with their united ſtrength attack them; and they ſhall draw their ſwords againſt the beauty of thy wiſdom; their beautiful city and ſpacious buildings, the palaces of their king and nobles, their walls and towers erected with ſo much art and ſkill; or their forces, the men of war within their city, which made their beauty complete, ſo well ſkilled in military affairs, ch. xxvii. 10, 11. or their ſhips, and the merchandiſe of them, and the curious things brought in them; even every thing that was rich and valuable, the effect of their art and wiſdom: all which may be applied to the city of Rome, when it will be taken, ranſacked, and burnt, Rev. xviii. 8—19: and they ſhall defile thy brightneſs; profane thy crown, caſt down thy throne, deſtroy thy kingdom, and all that is great and glorious in thee; thus the whore of Rome ſhall be made bare and deſolate, Rev. xvii. 16. The Targum renders it, "the brightneſs of thy terror;" which ſhall no more ſtrike the nations, or affect them.

℣. 8. They ſhall bring thee down to the pit, &c.] Or, to corruption [k]; to the grave, the pit of corruption and deſtruction; ſo antichriſt ſhall go into perdition, into the bottomleſs pit from whence he came, Rev. xvii. 8: and thou ſhalt die the deaths of them that are ſlain in the midſt of the ſeas; that die in a ſea-fight, whoſe carcaſes are thrown overboard, and devoured by fiſhes.

℣. 9. Wilt thou yet ſay before him that ſlayeth thee, I am God? &c.] When thou art in the enemies hands, and juſt going to be put to death, wilt thou then confidently aſſert thy deity, and to his face tell him that thou art God? ſurely thy courage and thy confidence, thy blaſphemy and impiety, will leave thee then; a bitter ſarcaſm this! and ſo the pope of Rome, the antichriſtian beaſt, when taken, and juſt going to be caſt into the lake of fire along with the falſe prophet, will not have the impudence to ſtile himſelf God, or to call himſelf Chriſt's vicar on earth: but thou ſhalt be a man, and no god, in the hand of him that ſlayeth thee; that is, thou ſhalt appear to be a poor, weak, frail, mortal, trembling, dying man, when got into the hand of the enemy, and he is juſt going to put an end to thy life; where will be then thy boaſted deity?

℣. 10. Thou ſhall die the deaths of the uncircumciſed, &c.] Or the death of the wicked, as the Targum; the firſt and ſecond death, temporal and eternal: the former by the hand of ſtrangers, the Chaldeans, in various ſhapes; and the latter will follow upon it: it may denote the various kinds of death which the inhabitants of Rome will die when deſtroyed, ſome by famine, ſome by peſtilence, and others by fire; when theſe plagues ſhall come upon her in one day, Rev. xviii. 8: for I have ſpoken it, ſaith the Lord God; and therefore it ſhall ſurely come to paſs; ſtrong is the Lord that will judge, condemn, and deſtroy myſtical Babylon, or Tyre.

℣. 11. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] After the prophecy concerning the ruin of the prince of Tyre, the word of the Lord came to the prophet, ordering him to take up a lamentation on the king of Tyre: ſaying, as follows, ℣. 12. Take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, &c.] Who is before called the prince of Tyre; and who he was, ſee the note on ℣. 2. the biſhop of Rome was firſt only a Nagid, a prince, ruler, governor, and leader in the church; afterwards he became a king, an head, even over other kings, princes, and ſtates; perhaps this may alſo point to his twofold power, ſecular and eccleſiaſtical, and ſo he is repreſented by two beaſts, Rev. xiii. 1, 11. here a lamentation or funeral ditty is ordered to be taken up and ſaid for him, to denote his certain deſtruction and ruin; tho' ſome have thought the fall of the angels, and others, the fall of Adam, is referred to; ſeveral paſſages are interpreted of Adam in the Talmud [l]: and ſay unto him, thus ſaith the Lord God; thou ſealeſt up the ſum; or pattern [m]; of every thing that is excellent; thou art in all things, conſummately ſo, as that nothing could be added; that is, in his own eſteem and account. Junius thinks it refers to the ſealing of goods exported, for which a duty was to be paid, without doing which merchandiſe was not allowed.

---

[i] ברכלתך in negotiatione tua, V. L. Pagninus, Starckius; in mercatura tua, Junius & Tremellius.

[k] לשחת ad corruptionem. Caſtalio.

[l] T. Bab. Bava Bathra, fol. 75. 1.

[m] תבנית exemplar, ſive ſpecimen, Tigurine verſion,

Antichriſt would not ſuffer any to buy or ſell, but ſuch as receive his mark or ſeal on their right-hand, or in their forehead, Rev. xiii. 16, 17. Cocceius renders it, the ſealer of the meaſure[n]; and takes it to be an alluſion to the cuſtom of ſealing meaſures, uſed in buying and ſelling; and that it reſpects the man of ſin, who takes upon him the power of making rules and canons for faith and practice: full of wiſdom, and perfect in beauty; a moſt accompliſhed man for parts and perſon in his own conceit: antichriſt aſſumes to himſelf a perfect knowledge of the ſcriptures, and ſets up himſelf as an infallible judge of controverſies; and glories in the ſplendor and order of his church, and the government of it.

℣. 13. Thou haſt been in Eden the garden of God, &c.] Not only in Eden, but in the garden which was in Eden, and was of the Lord's immediate planting; and therefore called the garden of God, as well as becauſe of its excellency, fragrancy and delight; not that the king of Tyre was literally there, or ever dwelt in it; but his ſituation in Tyre was as ſafe, and as pleaſant and delightful as Adam's was in the garden of Eden, at leaſt in his own imagination. So the Targum, "thou delightedſt thyſelf with plenty of all good things and delectable ones, as if thou dwelledſt in the garden of God;" in the myſtical ſenſe, this deſigns the church of God, which is an Eden, a garden, a paradiſe; ſee Cant. iv. 12, 13. and where antichriſt firſt appeared, and took his ſeat, and ſeated himſelf as if he was God, 2 Theſſ. ii. 4: every precious ſtone was thy covering; not only the covering of his head, his crown, was decked with jewels and precious ſtones of all ſorts; but his cloaths, the covering of his body, were adorned with them. So the Targum, "all precious ſtones were ſet in order upon thy garments." Kimchi renders it, thine hedge, or fence[o]; and takes it to be an hyperbole, as if his houſe, or garden, or vineyard were fenced with precious ſtones. This fitly deſcribes the whore of Rome arrayed in purple and ſcarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious ſtones, Rev. xvii. 4. The pope's triple crown is ſtuck with them, and a croſs of precious ſtones is upon his ſlipper, when he holds out his toe to be kiſſed: the ſardius, topaz, and the diamond, the beryl, the onyx, and the jaſper, the ſapphire, the emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold. Writers differ very much about theſe ſtones; and it is difficult to ſay what anſwer to the Hebrew words here uſed. The ſtone ſardius, or the ſardine ſtone, is of a blood colour, commonly called a cornelian, and is found in Sardis and Sardinia, from whence ſome ſay it has its name. The topaz is a hard tranſparent ſtone, ſaid to be of a beautiful yellow or gold colour, by thoſe who confound it with the chryſolite; otherwiſe the true topaz is of a fine green colour, as Pliny[p] and Iſidore[q]; the beſt is what is found in Ethiopia, Job xxviii. 19. The diamond is a precious ſtone, the firſt in rank, value, hardneſs and luſtre; the moſt perfect colour is the white. The beryl is a ſtone of a pale green colour, thought to be the diamond of the ancients: the word is Tarſhiſh, and thought by ſome the chryſolite. The onyx reſembles a man's nail, from whence it has its name: the word ſhoham here uſed is ſuppoſed to mean the ſardonyx, a compound of the ſardian and onyx ſtones. The jaſper is a ſtone of various colours and ſpots, variegated like a panther; hence the Targum here renders it, pantherin; the moſt valuable is the green ſpotted with red or purple. The ſapphire is a ſtone of an azure colour or ſky blue, exceeding hard and tranſparent. The emerald is of an exceeding fine green colour, very bright, and clear, and delightful to the eye; but is rather intended by the next word, as the carbuncle by this, which is a ſtone of the ruby kind, and very rare; ſee Iſ. liv. 12. Gold is mentioned along with them, and laſt of all, as being leſs valuable; but chiefly becauſe theſe ſtones were ſet in gold; as the Targum paraphraſes it; theſe are nine of the ſtones which were in the breaſt-plate of the Jewiſh high-prieſt[r], whom the king of Tyre might have knowledge of and imitate, as it is certain the pope of Rome does in ſome things: the workmanſhip of thy tabrets, and of thy pipes was prepared in thee, in the day that thou waſt created; either born into the world; or made a crowned king; againſt which time, drums, and pipes, and ſuch like inſtruments of muſic were prepared in Tyre, and at them made uſe of by way of rejoicing: and as this was literally true of the king of Tyre at his coronation, ſo of the biſhop of Rome at his creation and inauguration, which is attended with bells ringing, drums beating, trumpets ſounding; and ſo in myſtical Babylon is heard, tho' the time is coming when it will not be heard, the voice of harpers, muſicians, pipers and trumpeters, Rev. xviii. 22.

℣. 14. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth, &c.] In alluſion to the cherubim over the mercy-ſeat, which covered it with their wings; and which, as the ark of the teſtimony, and all the veſſels of the tabernacle were anointed, were ſo likewiſe; in all probability, the king of Tyre is called a cherub, becauſe of his wiſdom and power; anointed, becauſe of his royal dignity; and that covereth, becauſe of his office, which was to protect his people; all which he either was, or ought to be, or was in his own opinion ſo: antichriſt makes great boaſts of his wiſdom, power and authority as a teacher, paſtor or biſhop, the cherubim being ſymbolical of the miniſters of the word; and of his being anointed by men, that he may be the cover and ſhield of the church; and of his being the Lord's anointed, and the vicar of Chriſt, and head and protector of the church, as he calls himſelf[s]. The Targum underſtands all this of regal power, and renders it, "thou art a king anointed for a kingdom:" and I have ſet thee ſo; from whom all kings have their ſceptres, crowns and kingdoms; and by whom they reign; and who can put them down, as well as ſet them up at his pleaſure. It may be rendered, I have given thee[t]; or ſuffered thee to be ſo, as the word give is often uſed; it is by divine permiſſion that antichriſt has taken ſuch power to himſelf, and in judgment to them over whom he rules, who are given up to believe a lie; yea, God put, or as it is in the original text gave, it into the hearts of the kings to agree and give their kingdom to the beaſt, Rev. xvii. 17: thou waſt upon the holy mountain of God; not on Sinai, nor on Zion; on neither of which was the king of Tyre; nor was this literally true of him; for to ſay, as Kimchi does to illuſtrate it, that Hiram king of Tyre aſſiſted Solomon with materials to build the temple, is very foreign; but this is true of the antitype of the king of Tyre, antichriſt; who has ſet his foot on God's holy mountain the church; here he firſt appeared and ſtood, as before obſerved on the preceding verſe: thou haſt walked up and down in the midſt of the ſtones of fire; which ſome underſtand of the precious ſtones with which the king of Tyre was adorned, which glittered like fire; tho' rather they deſign the people of God, thoſe living and lively ſtones of which the ſpiritual houſe is built; who, for their clear light, and burning zeal and love, may be ſaid to be as ſtones of fire; and among theſe the biſhop of Rome, or the antichriſtian king of Tyre firſt walked: ſo Kimchi interprets them of the Iſraelites, who were a holy people; and Jarchi of the kings of Iſrael, who were as the miniſtring angels; the ſeraphim perhaps he means, ſo called from their burning and flaming love. The Targum is, "and over the holy people thou haſt thought to rule."

---

[n] Signator menſuræ, Cocceius, Starckius.

[o] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 14. 2.

[p] Nat. Hiſt. l. 38. c. 8.

[q] Origin. l. 16. c. 7.

[r] Vid. Braunium de veſtitu ſacerdot. Heb. l. 2. c. 12—19.

[s] Vid. Gurtler. Voc. Typic. Prophet. Explicat. p. 238.

[t] נתתיך & dedi te, Montanus.

℣. 15. Thou waſt perfect in thy ways from the day that thou waſt created, &c.] From the time that Tyre became a kingdom, or this king was ſet over it, every thing was wiſely conducted, and all things happily ſucceeded; ſo when the church of Rome was firſt formed in the times of the apoſtles, it was laid on a good foundation; it was ſet up according to the rule of the word; its biſhop or paſtor was one of a ſound judgment, a good life and converſation, and ſo continued in ſucceſſion for a conſiderable time; theſe held the true faith and doctrine of Chriſt, and kept it incorrupt, and lived holy lives: till iniquity was found in thee; pride, blaſphemy againſt God, and contempt of his people, as well as violence and deceit; all this was found in the king of Tyre in later times: ſo in the church of Rome, when the man of ſin was revealed, there were pride, haughtineſs and ambition found in it; blaſphemy againſt God and Chriſt, and the ſaints; falſe doctrine, falſe worſhip, ſuperſtition and idolatry.

℣. 16. By the multitude of thy merchandiſe, &c.] With the ſeveral nations of the earth, who came to the markets and fairs of Tyre, and to whom ſhe ſent her goods: they have filled the midſt of thee with violence; or as the Targum, "thy treaſures are filled with rapine;" with ill gotten goods, as the pope's coffers are thro' his merchandiſe of the ſouls of men, and the great trade that is driven in pardons and indulgences: and thou haſt ſinned; by this unjuſt and ungodly way of dealing: therefore I will caſt thee as profane out of the mountain of God; mount Zion, the church of the living God, where he dwells, and is worſhipped, and on which the Lamb ſtands with his hundred and forty and four thouſand, having his name and his Father's on their foreheads, Rev. xiv. 1. theſe will have no communion with the church and pope of Rome; will not receive his mark, nor worſhip his image; from this mountain, and the inhabitants of it, he ſtands excluded as a profane perſon, with whom they will have nothing to do; and hence he perſecutes them to the utmoſt of his power: and I will deſtroy thee, O covering cherub, from the midſt of the ſtones of fire; from among the people of God, who have the clear light of the goſpel, and a ſincere love for Chriſt; theſe withdrew themſelves from his juriſdiction and government; and with whom his name, power and authority periſh, eſpecially when they ſhall have got the victory over him, Rev. xv. 1. Kimchi paraphraſes it, "from the midſt of the ſaints who are the Iſraelites, comparable to ſtones of fire;" and Jarchi's note is, "that thou mayeſt not take a portion with the righteous;" have no part, lot or fellowſhip with them. The Targum is, "I will deſtroy thee, O king that art anointed, becauſe thou thoughteſt to rule over the holy people."

℣. 17. Thine heart was lifted up, becauſe of thy beauty, &c.] Riches, wealth, power, and authority; ſee ℣. 5. as the pope of Rome is, becauſe of his dignity, the pomp and ſplendor of the Roman church, and the gaudy appearance it makes: thou haſt corrupted thy wiſdom by reaſon of thy brightneſs; outward luſtre and glory, which dazzled his eyes ſo that he could not ſee things in a true light; but neglecting the word of God, and ſetting up his own infallibility, corrupted his doctrine and worſhip, and became fooliſh, ſtupid and ſottiſh: I will caſt thee to the ground; from the throne and pinnacle of honour, to the loweſt ſtate and condition: and I will lay thee before kings; proſtrate at the feet of them, who heretofore has ſet his feet on the necks of them; or he ſhall fall before them, and be deſtroyed by them, when they ſhall hate the whore, and make her deſolate, and burn her fleſh with fire, Rev. xvii. 16: that they may behold thee; with contempt and diſdain, and as an inſtance and example of divine vengeance.

℣. 18. Thou haſt defiled thy ſanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, &c.] Or, thy palaces, as Kimchi; the palace of the king, and the palaces of the nobles, where much iniquity was committed, and which was the cauſe of their being defiled or deſtroyed by the Chaldeans; or it may deſign their ſacred places, their temples, where their gods were worſhipped, and idolatry committed. This may be applied to the places of religious worſhip among the papiſts, their churches; which, inſtead of being adorned, are defiled with their images and image-worſhip, and other acts of ſuperſtition and will-worſhip: by the iniquity of thy traffic; as by bringing in ill-gotten goods into the ſacred places of Tyre, as they were accounted; ſo, by ſelling pardons; praying ſouls out of purgatory for money; by ſimony, or buying and ſelling eccleſiaſtical benefices; and ſuch like ſpiritual merchandiſe in Roman churches: therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midſt of thee, it ſhall devour thee; ſin, and the puniſhment of it, as Kimchi; which, for ſin committed in the midſt of them, ſhould conſume as fire; or ſome from among themſelves, that ſhould ſtir up and cauſe inteſtine diviſions, which ſhould iſſue in their ruin; as the unclean ſpirit that ſhall go out of the mouth of the beaſt, dragon and falſe prophet, to gather the antichriſtian kings to battel, will end in their ruin, Rev. xvi. 14, 16. The Targum is, "I will bring people who are ſtrong as fire, becauſe of the ſins of thy pride they ſhall deſtroy thee." Alexander when he took Tyre, ordered all the inhabitants to be ſlain, excepting thoſe that fled to the temples, and the houſes to be ſet on fire[n]; which literally fulfilled this prophecy; and which may alſo have reſpect to the deſtruction of Rome by fire, becauſe of the ſins committed in it, Rev. xviii. 8: and I will bring thee to aſhes upon the earth, in the ſight of all them that behold thee; the kings and merchants of the earth, who ſhall ſtand and look on the city as it is burning, and when reduced to aſhes; which denotes the utter deſtruction of it,

---

[n] Curtius, Hiſt. l. 4. c. 4. p. 75.

Rev. xviii. 9, 10, 11, 18. The Targum is, "I will give thee as aſhes on the earth," &c. and ſhall be no more accounted of.

℣. 19. All they that know thee among the people, ſhall be aſtoniſhed at thee, &c.] At thy fall; that ſuch a mighty city, and powerful prince, ſhould be deſtroyed at once; that from ſuch an height of proſperity, they ſhould be brought to ſo low an eſtate of adverſity; this will be the aſtoniſhment of kings, merchants, and others, that knew the riches, power and flouriſhing eſtate of Rome, as before obſerved: thou ſhalt be a terror; to the ſaid perſons, who will be afraid to come nigh for fear of the ſame torments and puniſhment, Rev. xviii. 10, 15. or, tho' thou haſt been a terror, or terrors; exceeding terrible to others in time paſt, yet now, as the Targum, "I will give thee (or make thee) as if thou waſt not:" and never ſhalt thou be any more; as thou haſt been, or after thy laſt deſtruction; ſo myſtical Tyre or Babylon ſhall be no more, when once deſtroyed, Rev. xviii. 21.

℣. 20. Again, the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] After the prophecy of the deſtruction of the prince and king of Tyre, concerning a neighbouring city: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 21. Son of man, ſet thy face againſt Zidon, &c.] An ancient city, near to Tyre, and in confederacy with it, greatly given to idolatry and ſuperſtition; and may deſign all the antichriſtian ſtates in the communion of the church of Rome: and propheſy againſt it; the prophet is bid to look towards this place with a ſtern countenance, as before againſt Tyre; threatning it with ruin, and propheſying of it, in the following manner.

℣. 22. And ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The eternal Jehovah, the only true God, the maker of heaven and earth; this is ſaid by way of preface to the prophecy, and to aſſure of the fulfilment of it, as well as in oppoſition to the gods of the Zidonians: behold, I am againſt thee, O Zidon; angry with thee, and will come out againſt thee in my wrath, becauſe of thine idolatries and impieties. The Targum is, "behold, I ſend my fury upon thee, O Zidon:" I will be glorified in the midſt of thee; not by the converſion of them; nor by acts of religious worſhip truly performed by them; by prayer, confeſſion of ſin, or thankſgiving; but by his judgments executed in the midſt of them; by pouring out the vials of his wrath on them, as it follows: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I ſhall have executed judgments in her; for the Lord is known by the judgments he executes, to be that pure, holy, juſt and ſin-avenging God he is, as well as omniſcient and omnipotent; and this even heathens and antichriſtian perſons are obliged to acknowledge, Pſ. ix. 15, 16: and ſhall be ſanctified in her; that is, ſhall appear, be declared and owned to be a God, juſt and holy, in all his ways and works.

℣. 23. And I will ſend into her peſtilence, and blood into her ſtreets, &c.] The plague and the ſword, which are two of God's ſore judgments, and often go together; the peſtilence ſlays them that are within, and the ſword thoſe the enemy meets with in the ſtreets: and the wounded ſhall be judged; that is, puniſhed; or ſhall fall[w], die and periſh: in the midſt of her by the ſword upon her on every ſide; this was literally fulfilled in Zidon, either by Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldean army, which beſieged it on every ſide; or by Artaxerxes Ochus the Perſian, who took it, and deſtroyed it; and will have its accompliſhment on the antichriſtian ſtates, eaſtern and weſtern, when the vials ſhall be poured out upon them, Rev. xvi: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord God; who am able to foretell things to come, and to accompliſh them.

℣. 24. And there ſhall be no more a pricking brier to the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] To the church of God, Jews or Gentiles, particularly to the Jews, who will now be converted; all the enemies of Chriſt and his people will now be deſtroyed, who have been very grievous and diſtreſſing to them by their furious perſecutions; the pope and Turk will be no more, nor any of the antichriſtian powers; the beaſt and falſe prophet will be taken and caſt into the lake of fire; and there will be none to hurt and deſtroy in all the holy mountain, Rev. xix. 20. Iſ. xi. 9: nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them that deſpiſed them; the ſame thing in other words as before; wicked men, eſpecially tyrannical princes, furious perſecutors of the ſaints, are like thorns and briers, not only unfruitful, uſeleſs and unprofitable, but pricking, grieving and hurtful to good men, by their perſecutions, revilings and reproaches, and whoſe end is to be burned. The Targum of the whole is, "and there ſhall be no more to the houſe of Iſrael, a king that doth evil (or hurt), or a governor that oppreſſes all round about them that ſpoil them:" and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; the houſe of Iſrael, the Jews now converted, they ſhall know the Lord Chriſt, and acknowledge him to be their Lord and king.

℣. 25. Thus ſaith the Lord God, when I ſhall have gathered the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] Not at the return of them from captivity in Babylon; for the ten tribes or houſe of Iſrael did not then return; tho' there might ſome few of thoſe tribes, as a pledge of what would be hereafter; but in the latter day, upon the deſtruction of antichriſt, when all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved: and when they will be collected from the people among whom they are ſcattered; in the ſeveral nations of the world, in Aſia, Africa, and Europe: and ſhall be ſanctified in them in the ſight of the heathen; being believed in by them; prayed unto and worſhipped in a ſpiritual manner by them; profeſſed and owned to be their Saviour and Redeemer in the face of the whole world, chriſtians and even heathens, whom before they rejected: then ſhall they dwell in their land that I have given to my ſervant Jacob; the land of Canaan, given by promiſe to Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob; which laſt is only here mentioned, becauſe it was his poſterity that was to poſſeſs it; not all Abraham's, only thoſe in the line of Iſaac; nor all Iſaac's, only thoſe in the line of Jacob; but all his; and this they will do, when they are converted in the latter day, and be no more a vagabond people, as they now are.

℣. 26. And they ſhall dwell ſafely therein, &c.] There being none to make them afraid, all their enemies being deſtroyed, and they alſo under the protection of chriſtian princes: and they ſhall build houſes, and plant vineyards; ſignifying their continuance in their land, and their enjoyment of the bleſſings of it. Cocceius underſtands this of churches gathered in the name of Chriſt; of which no doubt there will be many in Judea, as in the firſt times of the goſpel, and more abundantly: yea, they ſhall dwell with confidence; in the utmoſt ſafety and ſecurity, having nothing to fear from any quarter: when I have executed judgment upon all thoſe that deſpiſe them, round about them; took vengeance on them, and utterly deſtroyed them that deſpiſed or ſpoiled them, even all around them; they'll all be cut off, ſo that there will be none to give them the leaſt diſturbance: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord their God; not only God, as before, ℣. 24. but their God, their Lord and their God, their Redeemer and Saviour, whom they formerly denied, perſecuted and pierced.

---

[w] נפלל, πεσοῦνται, Sept. corruent, Pagninus, Vatablus; cadet, Montanus; ſo Kimchi and Ben Melech; and which is approved of by Guſſetius.

CHAP. XXIX.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy againſt Pharaoh king of Egypt; and of the deſtruction of the land of Egypt; and of the reſtoration of it after a certain time. The time of prophecy is noted, ℣. 1. the order to propheſy againſt Pharaoh, who is deſcribed as a large fiſh lying in his rivers, and boaſting of them, ℣. 2, 3. his deſtruction, and the manner of it, ℣. 4, 5. the reaſon of it, his treachery to the Jews, ℣. 6, 7. hence the whole land of Egypt is threatened with deſolation from one end to the other, ſo as to be uninhabited by man or beaſt for the ſpace of forty years, ℣. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. but ſhall not arrive to their former glory as a kingdom, nor be any more the confidence of the houſe of Iſrael, ℣. 15, 16. then follows a prophecy ſeventeen years after this, ſhewing the reaſon why Egypt was given to the king of Babylon, ℣. 17, 18, 19, 20. and the chapter is cloſed with a promiſe of happineſs to Iſrael, ℣. 21.

℣. 1. In the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, &c.] In the tenth year of Jeconiah's captivity, and Zedekiah's reign. The Septuagint verſion has it, the twelfth year; and the Arabic verſion, the twelfth month; and the Septuagint verſion again, the firſt day of the month; and the Vulgate Latin, the eleventh day of it. This month was the month Tebet, and anſwers to part of December, and part of January. This prophecy was delivered before that concerning Tyre, tho' placed after it, becauſe fulfilled after it, which gave Nebuchadnezzar Egypt as a reward for beſieging and taking Tyre: the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows:

℣. 2. Son of man, ſet thy face againſt Pharaoh king of Egypt, &c.] Pharaoh was a name common to all the kings of Egypt; the name of this king was Pharaoh-hophra, Jer. xliv. 30. and who, by Herodotus [x], is called Apries: and propheſy againſt him, and againſt all Egypt; propheſy of his deſtruction, and of the deſtruction of the whole land that is under his dominion.

℣. 3. Speak and ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The one, only, living and true God, the almighty, eternal and unchangeable Jehovah, which the gods of Egypt were not: behold, I am againſt thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt; who, tho' ſo great a king, was not a match for God, yea nothing in his hands; nor could he ſtand before him, or contend with him: or, I am above thee [y]; tho' the king of Egypt was ſo high above others, and thought ſo highly of himſelf, as if he was a god; yet the Lord was higher than he: the great dragon that lieth in the midſt of his rivers; the chief river of Egypt was the Nile, which opened in ſeven mouths or gates into the ſea, and out of which canals were made to water the whole land; and which abounding with rivers and watry places, hence the king of it is compared to a great fiſh, a dragon or whale, or rather a crocodile, which was a fiſh very common, and almoſt peculiar to Egypt; and with which the deſcription here agrees, as Bochart obſerves; and who alſo remarks, that Pharaoh in the Arabic language ſignifies a crocodile; and to which he may be compared for his cruel, voracious and miſchievous nature; and is here repreſented as lying at eaſe, and rolling himſelf in the enjoyment of his power, riches and pleaſures: which hath ſaid, my river is mine own, and I have made it for myſelf; alluding to the river Nile, which his predeceſſors had by their wiſdom cut out into canals, for the better watering of the land; and which he might have improved, ſo that it ſtood in no need of rain, nor of the ſupplies of other countries, having a ſufficiency from its own product; tho' he chiefly deſigns his kingdom, which was his own, and he had eſtabliſhed it, and made himſelf great in it; for the laſt clauſe may be rendered, either, I have made it, as the Syriac verſion, the river Nile, aſcribing that to himſelf which belonged to God; or, I have made them, the rivers among whom he lay, as the Septuagint and Arabic verſions; or, I have made myſelf, as the Vulgate Latin verſion; that is, a great king. So the Targum, "the kingdom is mine, and I have ſubdued it." Herodotus ſays of this king, that he was ſo lifted up with pride, and ſo ſecure of his happy ſtate, that he ſaid there was no God could deprive him of his kingdom [z]. This proud tyrannical monarch was an emblem of that beaſt that received his power from the dragon, and who himſelf ſpake like one; of the whore of Babylon that ſits upon many waters, and boaſts of her ſovereignty and power, of her wealth and riches, of her eaſe, peace, pleaſure, proſperity and ſettled eſtate, Rev. xiii. 2, 11. and xvii. 1. and xviii. 7.

℣. 4. But I will put hooks in thy jaws, &c.] The alluſion is to fiſh-hooks, which are taken by fiſhes with the bait into their mouths, and ſtick in their jaws, by which they are drawn out of the river and taken. The king of Egypt being before compared to a fiſh, theſe hooks deſign ſome powerful princes and armies, which ſhould be the ruin of Pharaoh; one of them, according to Junius and Grotius, was Amaſis at the head of the Cyreneans and Greeks; and another was Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; ſee Job xli. 1, 2. Iſ. xxxvii. 29: and I will cauſe the fiſh of thy rivers to ſtick unto thy ſcales; the people of his kingdom, eſpecially his ſoldiers, generals, princes and great men, to cleave to him, follow him, and go out with him in his expedition againſt Amaſis. The Targum is, "I will kill the "princes of thy ſtrength with thy mighty ones:" and I will bring thee up out of the midſt of thy rivers; alluding to the crocodile, to which he is compared, which ſometimes comes out of the river, and goes on dry land. The king of Egypt was brought out of his kingdom by the following means: Amaſis with the Cyreneans and Greeks, having ſeized upon Lybia, and drove the king of it from thence; he applied to Pharaoh for help, who gathered a large army of Egyptians, and led them out into the fields of Cyrene, where they were defeated by Amaſis, and almoſt all periſhed, and the king ſaved himſelf by flight; upon which the Egyptians mutinied and rebelled againſt him, and Amaſis became their king: and all the fiſh of thy rivers ſhall ſtick unto thy ſcales; the common people of Egypt; for the above numerous army conſiſted only of Egyptians, whom he gathered from all parts, drained his rivers of them, and almoſt exhauſted his country hereby; he had indeed in an army after this battel with Amaſis, thirty thouſand auxiliaries, Carians and Ionians; but theſe were not the fiſh of his rivers. The Targum is, "I will make thy kingdom to "ceaſe from thee, and all the princes of thy "ſtrength with thy mighty ones ſhall be killed;" with which the hiſtory agrees. The alluſion to the crocodile is here very juſt and pertinent, which is a fiſh full of ſcales. Monſieur Thevenot[a], who ſaw many of them, ſays, that "the body of this "fiſh is large, and all of a bigneſs; the back is "covered with high ſcales, like the heads of nails "in a court-gate, of a greeniſh colour, and ſo "hard that they are proof againſt a halberd; and "it has a long tail covered with ſcales like the "body;" and another traveller ſays[b], they have ſcales on their back muſket proof, and therefore muſt be wounded in the belly; but another traveller[c] ſays, this is a vulgar report that a muſket-ſhot will not pierce the ſkins of the crocodiles, for upon trial it is found falſe; yet all writers, ancient and modern, allow it to have very firm ſcales on its back, which render it capable of bearing the heavieſt ſtrokes, and to be in a meaſure impenetrable and invincible; ſo Herodotus[d] ſays, it has a ſkin full of ſcales, on the back infrangible; or, as Pliny[e] expreſſes it, invincible againſt all blows and ſtrokes it may be ſtricken with; and ſo ſays Ariſtotle[f], with which Ælian[g] agrees, who ſays that the crocodile has by nature a back and tail impenetrable; for it is covered with ſcales, as if it was armed as one might ſay, not unlike to hard ſhells.

---

[x] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 161.

[y] עליך ſuper te, Montanus.

[z] Herodot. Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 169. & l. 11. c. 163.

℣. 5. And I will leave thee thrown into the wilderneſs, thee, and all the fiſh of thy rivers, &c.] Where fiſh in common cannot live, but die as ſoon almoſt as out of the water, and on dry land, excepting thoſe that are of the amphibious kind. This wilderneſs deſigns the deſerts of Lybia and Cyrene, where the battel was fought between Hophra and Amaſis; and where the Egyptian army periſhed, only their king, before compared to a crocodile, which lives on land, as well as in water, eſcaped. The Targum is, "I will caſt thee into a wilder"neſs, and all the princes of thy ſtrength:" thou ſhalt fall upon the open fields, thou ſhalt not be brought together, nor gathered; this is to be underſtood of his army; for what is proper to an army, is ſometimes aſcribed to the head or general of it; which fell by the ſword in the fields of Lybia and Cyrene, and was ſo diſcomfited, that the remains of it could not be brought and gathered together again: or the ſenſe is, that thoſe that were ſlain were left in the open fields, and had no burial; they were not gathered to the grave, as Kimchi interprets it; and ſo the Targum, "upon the face of the field "thy carcaſe ſhall be caſt, it ſhall not be gathered, "nor ſhall it be buried:" this was only true of the carcaſes of the ſoldiers ſlain in battel, not of the king who fled, and afterwards in another battel was taken by Amaſis, and ſtrangled in the city of Sais, where he was buried among his anceſtors, as Herodotus[h] relates: I have given thee for meat to the beaſts of the field, and to the fowls of the heaven; that is, his army; as the armies of the kings, beaſt and falſe prophet will be at the battel of Armageddon, when the two latter will be taken and caſt alive into the burning lake, of which this monarch was an emblem, Rev. xix. 17—20.

℣. 6. And all the inhabitants of Egypt ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] Who could eject their king from his kingdom, and deliver him into the hands of his enemy; tho' he thought no God could, as he boaſtingly ſaid, before obſerved: becauſe they have been a ſtaff of reed to the houſe of Iſrael; alluding to the country of Egypt, which abounded with reeds that grew upon the banks of the river Nile, and other rivers. This ſignifies that either the Egyptians were weak, and could not help the people of Iſrael when they applied to them; or rather that they were treacherous and deceitful, and would not aſſiſt them, according to agreement; and were even pernicious and hurtful to them, as a broken reed; ſee Iſ. xxxvi. 6. The Targum renders it, "the ſtaff of a reed broken."

℣. 7. When they took hold of thee by thy hand, &c.] When the Iſraelites entered into an alliance and confederacy with the Egyptians, called for their aſſiſtance according to treaty, and put their confidence in them: thou didſt break and rent all their ſhoulder; as a reed which a man puts under his arm-hole, and leans upon, and it breaks under him, the ſplinters run into the fleſh up to the very ſhoulder, and tear the fleſh to pieces; ſo thro' Zedekiah's truſting to the king of Egypt, he rebelled againſt the king of Babylon, which brought on his ruin, and the deſtruction of his kingdom: and when they leaned upon thee, thou brakeſt, and madeſt all their loins to be at a ſtand; when they put their confidence in the king of Egypt, and ſent to him for ſuccour when beſieged by the king of Babylon, and he failed them; they were obliged to raiſe up themſelves, as a man is forced to do when his ſtaff breaks under him, whoſe loins before were bowed, but now erects himſelf, and ſtands and walks as well as he can without it; ſo the Jews were forced to ſtand upon their own legs, and exert all the force they had, and make all the efforts they could againſt the king of Babylon, being left in the lurch by the king of Egypt; in which, tho' they were rightly ſerved for their vain confidence and not truſting in the Lord, yet the treachery of the Egyptians was reſented by him, as follows:

℣. 8. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Becauſe of the pride of the king of Egypt, aſſerting the river to be his own, and made by him for himſelf; and becauſe of his perfidy to the houſe of Iſrael: behold, I will bring a ſword upon thee; or thoſe that kill with the ſword, as the Targum; firſt an inteſtine war, occaſioned by the murmurs of the people, on account of the defeat of their army at Cyrene; which iſſued in the dethroning and ſtrangling of this king, as before obſerved, and ſetting up another; which inteſtine commotions Nebuchadnezzar took the advantage of, and came againſt Egypt with a large army: and cut off man and beaſt out off thee; for what with the civil wars among themſelves, and what with the devaſtions of the king of Babylon's army, putting men to the ſword, and ſeizing upon the beaſts for their food, to ſupport ſuch an army in a foreign land, it was pretty well ſtripped of both.

---

[a] Travels, Par. 1. B. 2. ch. 72. p. 245.
[b] Mandelſloe in Harris's Voyages, &c. Vol. I. p. 759.
[c] Tavernier in ib. p. 835.
[d] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 68.
[e] Nat. Hiſt. l. 8. c. 25.
[f] Hiſt. Animal. l. 2. c. 10.
[g] De Animal. l. 10. c. 24.
[h] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 169.

℣. 9. And the land of Egypt ſhall be deſolate and waſte, &c.] Men few or none being left in it, to till it, nor cattel found upon it: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; by theſe judgments executed upon them, now foretold; and which when come to paſs, they will be obliged to acknowledge the omniſcience and omnipotence of Jehovah: becauſe thou haſt ſaid, the river is mine, and I have made it; ſee the note on ℣. 3. this inſolent expreſſion was highly reſented by the Lord, as appears by the repetition of it. The Targum is here as before, "the kingdom is mine, and I have ſubdued "it;" but notwithſtanding this vaunt, he could not keep it.

℣. 10. Behold therefore, I am againſt thee, and againſt thy rivers, &c.] Againſt the king of Egypt, and againſt his ſubjects, the many people he ruled over; as the Lord is againſt ſpiritual Egypt, and the head of it, and the antichriſtian ſtates, ſignified by many waters, rivers, and fountains; ſee Rev. xi. 8. and xvii. 1, 15. and xvi. 4: and I will make the land of Egypt utterly waſte and deſolate; partly by a civil war, and partly by a foreign enemy; eſpecially thoſe parts of it which were the ſeat of war: from the tower of Syene, even unto the border of Ethiopia; or the tower of Seveneh; according to Herodotus[i], Syene was a city of Thebais, where he was told were two mountains, which gave riſe to the Nile. Pliny[k] ſays, it was five thouſand furlongs from Alexandria; and it is by him, as well as Strabo[l], placed under the tropic of Cancer; who both ſay, in the ſummer ſolſtice, at noon, no ſhadow is caſt there; to which the poet Lucan[m] refers. It is now called Eſſuaen; which city, as Mr. Norden[n] ſays, who lately travelled in thoſe parts, is ſituated on the eaſtern ſhore of the Nile; and he relates, that there remain ſtill ſome marks of the place, where the ancient city ſtood; as to the reſt, it is ſo covered with earth, that there is nothing but rubbiſh, from which, in ſome places, one would judge that there were formerly magnificent buildings here. The utter deſtruction of which, with the reſt of Egypt propheſied of, appears to have been fulfilled. This place is famous for being the place of the baniſhment of Juvenal the poet, where he died, being eighty years of age. The tower of Syene, Jerom ſays, remained to his days, and was ſubject to the Roman government, where are the cataracts of the Nile; and to which place from our ſea, he ſays, the Nile is navigable: but according to Pliny[o], Syene itſelf was on the border of Ethiopia; and ſo ſay Pauſanias[p] and Solinus[q]: and according to Seneca[r], it was the extreme part of Egypt. So Joſephus[s] ſays, the ſouth border of Egypt is Syene, which ſeparates it from Ethiopia; and that between Peluſium (the entrance of Egypt) and Syene, are two thouſand furlongs. It lay between Egypt and Ethiopia, ſo that it might ſeem doubtful to which it belonged. It ſeems better therefore to take Migdol, rendered a tower, for the proper name of a place, as the Septuagint do; and ſuch a place there was in Egypt, Jer. xliv. 1. and xlvi. 4. a town on the Red-Sea, Exod. xiv. 2. ſo that the one was on the border of Egypt on one ſide, and the other on the other: and the words may be rendered[t], from Migdol to Syene, even to the border of Ethiopia; from one end of it to the other: it denotes the utter deſolation of the country, from one end to the other. Unleſs by Cuſh, rendered Ethiopia, is meant Arabia, as it often is, and is thought by ſome to be intended here; which was on the northern border of Egypt, as Syene was, a city in Thebais, near to Ethiopia, on the ſouthern border of it; ſo that this deſcribes Egypt from ſouth to north; but the former account ſeems beſt.

℣. 11. No foot of man ſhall paſs through it, &c.] This muſt be underſtood not ſtrictly, but with ſome limitation; it cannot be thought that Egypt was ſo depopulated, as that there ſhould not be a ſingle paſſenger in it; but that there ſhould be few inhabitants in it, or that there ſhould be ſcarce any that ſhould come into it for traffick; it ſhould not be frequented as it had been, at leaſt there ſhould be very few that travelled in it, in compariſon of what had: no foot of beaſt ſhall paſs thro' it; no droves of ſheep and oxen, and ſuch like uſeful cattel, only beaſts of prey ſhould dwell in it: neither ſhall it be inhabited forty years; afterwards, ℣. 17. a prophecy is given out concerning the deſtruction of it by Nebuchadnezzar, which was in the twenty-ſeventh year, that is, of Jeconiah's captivity; now allowing three years for the fulfilment of that prophecy, or forty years, a round number put for forty-three years, they will end about the time that Cyrus conquered Babylon, at which time the ſeventy years captivity of the Jews ended; and very likely the captivity of the Egyptians alſo. The Jews pretend to give a reaſon why Egypt lay waſte juſt forty years, becauſe the famine, ſignified in Pharaoh's dream, was to have laſted, as they make it out, forty-two years; whereas, according to them, it continued only two years; and inſtead of the other forty years of famine, Egypt muſt be forty years uninhabited: this is mentioned both by Jarchi and Kimchi.

℣. 12. And I will make the land of Egypt deſolate in the midſt of the countries that are deſolate, &c.] As Judea and others, made deſolate by the king of Babylon: and her cities among the cities that are laid waſte ſhall be deſolate forty years; ſuch as Thebes, Sais, Memphis, and others; which ſhould ſhare the ſame fate as Jeruſalem and other principal cities in other countries, which fell into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar: and I will ſcatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will diſperſe them through the countries; ſuch as were not carried captive into Babylon, fled into other countries, as Arabia, Ethiopia, and other places. Beroſus[u] makes mention of this captivity of the Egyptians under Nebuchadnezzar the ſon, which no other writer does.

℣. 13. Yet, thus ſaith the Lord God, at the end of forty years, &c.] Reckoning from its devaſtation

---

[i] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 28. [k] Nat. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 73. [l] Geograph. l. 2. p. 65, 78.
[m] Umbras nuſquam flectente Syene. Pharſal. l. 2. v. 587. [n] Travels in Egypt and Nubia, vol. i. p. 143. vol. ii. p. 97, 103. [o] Nat. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 9. [p] Arcadica, ſive l. 8. p. 518. [q] Polyhiſtor. c. 45.
[r] Apud Servium in Virgil. Æneid. l. 6. p. 1011. [s] De bello Jud. l. 5. c. 10. §. 5. [t] See Prideaux's Connection, part 1. book 2. p. 93. So the words are rendered by Hillerus, Onomaſt. Sacr. p. 672. who obſerves, that Syene is now called by the Arabs Aſuan, from the Ethiopic word Waſu, which ſignifies to terminate or finiſh, this being the border of Ethiopia. [u] Apud Joſeph. Antiqu. l. 10. c. 11. §. 1.

tion by Nebuchadnezzar, to the taking of Babylon by Cyrus: will I gather the Egyptians, from the people whither they were ſcattered; from Babylon and other places; Cyrus very probably being ſtirred up by the Lord to proclaim liberty to the Egyptians, as he did to the Jews, to return to their own land; and at the ſame time reſtored Amaſis to the quiet poſſeſſion of his kingdom, who muſt be ſtill alive; ſince, according to Diodorus Siculus [w], he reigned fifty-five years; tho', according to Herodotus [x], he reigned but forty-four years.

℣. 14. And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, &c.] For what is done by men, under the direction and influence of divine providence, is ſaid to be done by the Lord, as this was, tho' by the means of Cyrus: and will cauſe them to return into the land of Pathros; which was a part of the land of Egypt; perhaps ſo called from Pathruſim the ſon of Mizraim, from whom Egypt had its name, Gen. x. 14. Bochart takes it to be Thebais, a principal country in Egypt: into the land of their habitation; or nativity, where they were born, and where they before dwelt: and they ſhall be there a baſe kingdom; as it is at this day more eſpecially, to which it has been gradually reduced, having paſſed into various hands, and come under the power and dominion of different ſtates: whatever might be the caſe and circumſtances of it under Cyrus, Cambyſes his ſon entered into it, made ſad devaſtion in it, and an entire conqueſt of it; and tho' it revolted under Darius Hyſtaſpes, it was ſubdued again, and brought into a worſe ſtate than before by Xerxes: it revolted again in the reign of Darius Nothus, and was at laſt by Ochus totally ſubdued; and from that time the Egyptians never had a king of their own nation to reign over them. Along with the Perſian empire it came into the hands of Alexander without any oppoſition; and after his death fell to the ſhare of Ptolemy, one of his captains; and tho' ſome of the firſt kings of that name were of conſiderable note and power, yet Egypt made a poor figure under the reigns of ſeveral of them. When the Roman empire obtained, it became a province of that, and continued ſo for ſix or ſeven hundred years; and then it fell into the hands of the Saracens, when it ſunk into ignorance and ſuperſtition, the Mahometan religion being eſtabliſhed in it, with whom it continued until about the year of Chriſt 1250; when the Mamalucks, or Turkiſh and Circaſſian ſlaves, roſe up againſt their ſovereigns, the ſultans of Egypt, and uſurped the government, in whoſe hands it was until the year 1517; when Selim the ninth emperor of the Turks, conquered the Mamalucks, and put an end to their government, and annexed it to the Ottoman empire; of which it is a province to this day, being governed by a Turkiſh Baſha, with twenty-four Begs or princes under him, who are raiſed, from being ſervants, to the adminiſtration of public affairs; and ſo it is become a baſe kingdom indeed, if to be called one [y].

℣. 15. And it ſhall be the baſeſt of the kingdoms, &c.] That belonged to the Perſian monarchy, or to the Macedonian empire, being more kept under than the reſt, leſt it ſhould regain its former ſtrength and glory; tho' it became more famous in the times of ſome of the Ptolemies, yet never recovered its former greatneſs; and is now exceeding baſe indeed, as appears from the preceding note: neither ſhall it exalt itſelf any more above the nations; ſo as to conquer them, and make them tributary to it, as it had done: for I will demoliſh them, that they ſhall no more rule over the nations; for tho' they made war upon other nations in the time of the Lagidæ; yet they did not ſubdue them, and annex them to their kingdom, being much weakened both as to men and money.

℣. 16. And it ſhall be no more the confidence of the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] It having been treacherous to them, and moreover ſubdued by the Chaldeans, the Jews, even after their return from captivity, put no more confidence in them; it being now become, as it is here propheſied it would, the baſeſt of the kingdoms, more weak, and in a more abject ſtate, than the reſt, and ſo deſpiſed by its neighbours, as it was by the Jews: which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they ſhall look after them; as they had done in time paſt, when they looked after them for help, and expected it from them, and truſted in them, and ſerved their idols; which brought to the Lord's remembrance former iniquities and idolatries, for which he puniſhed them; but now they ſhould do ſo no more: but they ſhall know that I am the Lord God; not the Egyptians, but the Iſraelites; who being returned from captivity, ſhall acknowledge and ſerve the only true God, and no more worſhip the idols of the nations.

℣. 17. And it came to paſs in the ſeven and twentieth year, &c.] Of Jeconiah's captivity; or of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, as Jarchi, Kimchi, and Abendana, from Seder Olam Rabba [z], obſerve; tho' it was in the 35th year of his reign that Tyre was taken by him, and after that Egypt was given him: in the firſt month, in the firſt day of the month; the month Niſan, which anſwers to part of March, and part of April. According to Biſhop Uſher [a], it was on the 20th of April, on the third day of the week (Tueſday) in the year of the Julian period 4142, and before Chriſt 572. Mr. Whiſton [b] makes it to be a year ſooner. This prophecy is not put in its proper place, as to order of time, ſince it was ſixteen or ſeventeen years after the preceding, and the laſt of Ezekiel's prophecies; but is here placed, becauſe it relates to the ſame ſubject as the former, the deſtruction of Egypt. The word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows, ℣. 18. Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, &c.] The ſame with Nebuchadnezzar; he goes by both names in ſcripture, nor is the difference very great: cauſed his army to ſerve a great ſervice againſt Tyrus; in beſieging it thirteen years [c], before he was able to take it; during which time, his army ſuffered much hardſhip, was greatly fatigued and wearied, by the various military works they were engaged in, to carry on the ſiege ſo long a time: every head was made bald, and every ſhoulder was peeled; the heads of the ſoldiers became bald with wearing their helmets ſo long, or carrying baſkets of earth and timber upon them, to make mounts with; and the ſkin of their ſhoulders was peeled off, either with their armour, or by carrying burdens on them for the above purpoſe; or as Jerom ſays, from the Aſſyrian annals, to make a cauſeway to join the iſland to the continent, that ſo they might come at it with their battering-rams, and demoliſh it: yet hath he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus; for beſieging it; for as the ſame Jerom obſerves, when the Tyrians found that the city was like to be taken by him, their gold and ſilver, and whatſoever that was valuable that was with them, they put on ſhip-board, and ſent it to other iſlands; or as others ſay, that when Tyre on the continent, which was what Nebuchadnezzar beſieged, was about to be taken, the inhabitants tranſplanted their riches to the iſland at ſome diſtance, where new Tyre was afterwards built; however, what with the conſumption of their riches during this thirteen years ſiege, and the removing their effects to other places before the taking of the city, there was ſcarce any thing left for the plunder of the king of Babylon's army, ſo that he and that had nothing to requite them: for the ſervice that he had ſerved againſt it; it muſt have coſt him a great deal of money to ſupport ſuch a numerous army for ſo long a time, as well as the ſiege was very toilſome and laborious; and yet when the city was taken, there was nothing found in it to anſwer this expence and labour.

---

[w] Bibliothec. l. 1. p. 62. Ed. Rhodoman.

[x] Thalia, ſive l. 3. c. 10.

[y] See all this at large, with the proofs of it, in Dr. Newton's Diſſertations on prophecies, from p. 382. to 394.

[z] C. 26. p. 77.

[a] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3432.

[b] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

[c] Hiſt. Phænic. apud Joſeph. adv. Apion, l. 1. c. 21.

℣. 19. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Since this was the caſe, that the king of Babylon had been working for nothing, and had ſpent much blood and treaſure, as well as time, to little purpoſe and advantage to himſelf: behold, I will give the land of Egypt to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; which will make him a ſufficient recompence for his loſs of time, men, and money, before Tyre; and tho' the conqueſt of Egypt was made eaſy to him, by the inteſtine diviſions and wars which were among the Egyptians; yet theſe were ſuffered and ordered by the providence of God, to bring about this his will, by way of righteous puniſhment of the Egyptians, for their treachery to his people, and other ſins: and he ſhall take her multitude; of ſoldiers, and of inhabitants, and carry them captive: and take her ſpoil, and take her prey; that which the Egyptians had ſpoiled other nations of, and made a prey of, that ſhould now become the ſpoil and prey of the Chaldeans: and it ſhall be the wages for his army; with this the king of Babylon would be able to pay off the arrears of his army, which had lain ſo long againſt Tyre; or this would be a recompence to them, for all the hardſhips they there ſuſtained.

℣. 20. I have given him the land of Egypt for his labour, wherewith he ſerved againſt it, &c.] That is, againſt Tyre; meaning not Nebuchadnezzar merely or only, but his army alſo, who did the main of the ſervice and labour, and had the plunder of the country for it; tho' the kingdom itſelf was given to their king, and annexed to his monarchy: becauſe they wrought for me, ſaith the Lord God; not intentionally, but eventually; they did not deſign to do any ſervice for God; they only ſought to ſerve themſelves with the riches and wealth of thoſe they ſubdued; and yet whilſt they beſieged Tyre, and when they took it, and while they were ravaging, plundering, and ſubduing Egypt, they were doing the Lord's will and work, and executing his righteous judgments on theſe enemies of his for their ſins; wherefore he rewarded them ſufficiently: none ever are employed by him, but he gives them their wages; even tho' they are wicked and ungodly men, verily they have their reward.

℣. 21. In that day will I cauſe the horn of the houſe of Iſrael to bud forth, &c.] Not at the time of Egypt's deſtruction, unleſs it can be thought that this refers to the advancement of Daniel in the court of Babylon; or to the taking of Jehoiachin out of priſon, and ſetting his throne above the reſt of the kings; which events came to paſs a little after this: but rather this reſpects the time of Egypt's reſtoration forty years after, when Cyrus came to the throne, and proclaimed liberty to the Jews, to return to their own land, and build their city and temple, under the government of Zorobabel their prince: beſides, it may not be limited to either of theſe times, but may regard the famous day, when the kingdom of Iſrael, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, ſhould flouriſh under the Meſſiah, the horn of ſalvation, and branch of David, often promiſed to bud forth, and was fulfilled in Jeſus, Pſ. cxxxii. 17. Jer. xxiii. 5. Luke i. 68, 69. The Targum is, "in that day will I bring redemption "to the houſe of Iſrael." And I will give thee the opening of the mouth in the midſt of them; in prophecy among them, as the Targum; who after this might deliver other prophecies, tho' we have no account of them; or he ſhould have boldneſs and courage, when he and they ſhould ſee his prophecies fulfilled, by which it would appear that he was a true prophet of the Lord: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; who ſent the prophet, and from whom he had theſe prophecies, and by whom they were fulfilled.

CHAP. XXX.

THIS chapter is a continuation of the prophecy againſt Egypt, both againſt the country, and the king of it. It is introduced with expreſſions of lamentation, becauſe of the deſtruction coming on, ℣. 1, 2, 3. and not only Egypt, and the cities thereof, ſhould be deſtroyed, but all her friends, aſſociates, and allies; the Ethiopians, Lydians, Lybians, and others, ℣. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Nebuchadnezzar and his army were to be the inſtruments of her ruin, ℣. 10, 11, 12. particular cities are mentioned by name, which ſhould ſuffer much, and become deſolate, ℣. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19. and then Pharaoh king of Egypt himſelf is threatened with broken arms, and his people to be ſcattered among the nations, ℣. 20, 21, 22, 23. and the king of Babylon is again mentioned, whoſe arms ſhould be ſtrengthened to do all this, ℣. 24, 25, 26.

℣. 1. The word of the Lord came again unto me, &c.] Whether this prophecy was delivered about the time of that in the former part of the preceding chapter, namely, in the tenth year, tenth month, and twelfth day of it; or whether about the time that was, which is recorded in the latter part of the chapter, in the ſeven and twentieth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, is not eaſy to ſay; I am inclined to think it was about the time of the latter, ſince the time of the fulfilment of it is ſaid to be near, ℣. 3: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 2. Son of man, propheſy and ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Propheſy againſt Egypt's king and inhabitants, and in the name of the Lord thus beſpeak them: howl ye; ye Egyptians, and alſo ye Ethiopians, and all others after-named, which ſhould ſhare in the deſtruction of Egypt; this is ſaid to give them notice of it, and prepare them for it: wo worth the day; or, alas for the day[d]; O the unhappy day! what a ſad diſmal day is this! O that we ſhould ever live to ſee ſuch wretched times!

℣. 3. For the day is near, &c.] The day of Egypt's deſtruction, the time fixed for it: even the day of the Lord is near; the day appointed by him, and in which he would make himſelf known by the judgments he executed: Kimchi obſerves, that the ſame year this prophecy was delivered, Egypt was given into the hands of the king of Babylon: a cloudy day; or, a day of cloud[e]; which was ſeldom ſeen in Egypt in a literal ſenſe, rarely having any rain, their country being watered by the Nile; but now, in a figurative ſenſe, the clouds would gather thick and black, and threaten with a horrible tempeſt of divine wrath, and of ruin and deſtruction: it ſhall be the time of the heathen; both when the heathen nation of the Chaldeans ſhould diſtreſs and conquer others; and when heathen nations, as the Egyptians, Ethiopians, and others, ſhould be deſtroyed by them. The Targum is, "it ſhall be "the time of the breaking or deſtruction of the "people."

℣. 4. And the ſword ſhall come upon Egypt, &c.] The ſword of the Chaldeans ſhall come upon the Egyptians, by which they ſhould be cut off; it having a commiſſion from the Lord for that purpoſe: and great pain ſhall be in Ethiopia, when the ſlain ſhall fall in Egypt; Ethiopia being a neighbouring nation to Egypt, ſhall be in a pannic, when it ſhall hear of the ſword of the Chaldeans being in Egypt, and of the ravages made by it, of the multitudes ſlain with it; fearing it will be their turn next to fall into the ſame hands, and in the ſame manner; and the rather, not only as they were neighbours, but allies: and they ſhall take away her multitude; that is, the Chaldeans ſhall carry captive vaſt numbers of the Egyptians; ſuch as fell not by the ſword, ſhould not eſcape the hand of the enemy, but be taken and carried into other lands. Egypt was a very populous country; according to Agrippa's ſpeech in Joſephus[f], there were in it 7,500,000 perſons from Ethiopia to Alexandria, beſides the inhabitants of the latter, as might be gathered from the tribute each perſon paid, hence they are compared to the trees of a foreſt that can't be ſearched, and to graſhoppers innumerable, Jer. xlvi. 23. but now their numbers ſhould be leſſer: and her foundations ſhall be broken down; either in a literal ſenſe, the foundations of the cities, towers, and fortified places in Egypt, ſhould be undermined and deſtroyed, and conſequently the buildings on them muſt ſink and fall; or in a figurative ſenſe, her king, princes, magiſtrates, laws and government, which are the ſupport of a ſtate, ſhould be removed, and be of no more ſervice.

℣. 5. Ethiopia, Lybia, and Lydia, &c.] Or, Cuſh, Phut, and Lud. Cuſh and Phut were both ſons of Ham, from whom Egypt is ſometimes called the land of Ham; and Lud or Ludim was the ſon of Mizraim, the ſon of Ham, the common name of Egypt in ſcripture, Gen. x. 6, 13. Cuſh is by us rendered Ethiopia; and is thought by ſome to be a part of Arabia, which lay near to Egypt. Phut and Lud are properly enough rendered Lybia and Lydia; and both theſe, with Ethiopia, are repreſented as the allies and confederates of Egypt, Jer. xlvi. 9. And all the mingled people; the Syriac verſion renders it, all Arabia; and ſo Symmachus, according to Jerom; tho' others think they are the Carians, Ionians, and other Greeks, which Pharaoh Apries got together to fight with Amaſis[g]: and Chub; or Cub; the inhabitants of this place are thought to be the Cobii of Ptolemy[h], who dwelt in Mareotis, a country of Egypt; though ſome, by a change of a letter, would have them to be the Nubians, a people in Africa; and ſo the Arabic verſion here reads it. Of theſe Strabo[i] ſays, on the left of the ſtream of the Nile dwell the Nubians, a large nation in Lybia; and which he afterwards mentions along with the Troglodytes, Blemmyes, Megabarians, and Ethiopians, that dwell above Syene: and ſo Ptolemy[k] ſpeaks of them along with the Megabardians, and as inhabiting to the weſt of the Avalites: and Pliny[l] calls them Nubian Ethiopians, whom he places near the Nile: and a late traveller[m] in thoſe parts informs us, that the confines of Egypt and Nubia are about eight leagues above the firſt cataract (of the Nile); Nubia begins at the villages of Ell-Kalabſche, and of Teffa; the firſt is to the eaſt of the Nile, and the ſecond to the weſt. And the men of the land that is in league ſhall fall with them by the ſword; all the nations abovementioned, with whomſoever ſhould be found that were confederates with Egypt, ſhould ſhare the ſame fate with them. The Septuagint render it, and thoſe of the children of my covenant; as if the Jews were meant that were in Egypt, who are ſometimes called the children of the covenant, and of the promiſe, Acts iii. 25. Rom. ix. 8. and ſo ſome interpret the place; but it takes in all the allies of Egypt, and does not deſign the Jews, at leaſt not them only.

℣. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord, they alſo that uphold Egypt ſhall fall, &c.] That is, by the ſword; either their allies and auxiliaries without, that ſupported the Egyptians with men and money; or their principal people within, their nobles that ſupported their ſtate with their eſtates, their counſellors with their wiſdom, their ſoldiers with their valour and courage: and the pride of her power ſhall come down; or the power they were proud of, the dominion and grandeur they boaſted of; the greatneſs of their king, and the largeneſs of their empire, with the wealth and riches of it: from the tower of Syene ſhall they fall in it by the ſword, ſaith the Lord God; or rather, from Migdol to Syene; ſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions, from one end of Egypt to the other; the ſword would ravage, and multitudes fall by it, in all cities and towns, between the one and the other; which denotes the general ſlaughter that ſhould be made; ſee the note on ch. xxix. 10.

℣. 7. And they ſhall be deſolate in the midſt of the countries that are deſolate, &c.] Or among them, ſhall be ranked with them, and be as deſolate as they are; as Judea and other countries, ravaged by the ſame enemy: and her cities ſhall be in the midſt of

---

[d] הה ליום hah diei, Munſter, Vatablus; heu diei, Cocceius, Starckius.

[e] יום ענן dies nubis, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[f] De bello Jud. l. 2. c. 16. §. 4.

[g] See Prideaux's Connection, part 1. p. 93.

[h] Geograph. l. 4. c. 5.

[i] Geograph. l. 17. p. 541, 563.

[k] Geograph. l. 5. c. 8.

[l] Nat. Hiſt. l. 6. c. 30.

[m] Norden's Travels in Egypt and Nubia, vol. ii. p. 131, 132.

of the cities that are waſted; undergo the ſame fate as they have done, as Jeruſalem and others. The cities of Egypt were very numerous; Diodorus Siculus[n] ſays, that in ancient times Egypt had cities and villages of note, more than 18,000. Herodotus[o] writes, that it was ſaid, that under king Amaſis there were 20,000 cities in it; and the firſt mentioned writer[p] ſays, under Ptolemy Lagus they were reckoned more than 30,000; and according to Theocritus[q], under Ptolemy Philadelphus they were 33,339.

℣. 8. And they ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] The Egyptians ſhall know the Lord to be the true God, and acknowledge him to be omniſcient and omnipotent, that ſhould ſo exactly foretel their deſtruction, and accompliſh it: when I have ſet a fire in Egypt; a war there; the heat of battel, very devouring and conſuming, as well as very grievous and terrible, as fire is. The Targum is, "when "I ſhall give (or ſet) people that are ſtrong as "fire againſt Egypt;" the army of the Chaldeans: and when all her helpers ſhall be deſtroyed; her auxiliaries, the neighbouring nations in alliance with them, before-mentioned.

℣. 9. In that day ſhall meſſengers go forth from me in ſhips, &c.] Either by the river Nile, or by the Red-Sea, to Arabia Felix, which ſome think is meant by Ethiopia. Cuſh or Ethiopia was encompaſſed about with water, ſo that there was no coming to it but by ſhips; ſee Gen. ii. 13. compare with this Iſ. xviii. 1, 2. the meſſengers here were either ſuch who under a divine impulſe, or however by the providence of God, were directed to go to Ethiopia, and tell them the news of the deſtruction of Egypt; or theſe were meſſengers ſent by the king of Babylon, to demand a ſurrender of their country to him; or it may deſign him himſelf, and his army, who marched thither to ſubdue that country alſo, after the conqueſt of Egypt. So the Targum, "at that time meſſengers ſhall go "forth from before me with legions;" and becauſe all this was by the appointment and providence of God, they are repreſented as meſſengers ſent by him: to make the careleſs Ethiopians afraid; with the news of the fall of Egypt their confederate, and of a mighty army coming againſt them; who had dwelt ſecurely and confidently, at eaſe and unconcerned, without any ſenſe of danger, or fear of any enemy: and great pain ſhall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt; either as of old, when the plagues were on Egypt, and eſpecially when they were drowning in the Red-Sea; or as of late, when the ſword was in Egypt, and ravaging there: for lo it cometh; the ſame day was coming on them, as came on Egypt, the day of the Lord, a cloudy one, and the time of the heathen; it was certain, juſt at hand, and there was no eſcaping it; ſee ℣. 3, 4.

℣. 10. Thus ſaith the Lord God, I will make the multitude of Egypt to ceaſe, &c.] The vaſt numbers of people that inhabited Egypt; ſome of its cities were very populous, eſpecially the city No after-mentioned; but now the numbers ſhould be greatly leſſened, and the whole land ſadly depopulated: or the noiſe[r], tumult, and hurry of it; which is very great where there are large numbers of people, and which ceaſes when they are cut off. The Syriac verſion renders it, the riches of Egypt. Now the inſtrument God would make uſe of to do all this, is mentioned by name, as follows, by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; the then greateſt monarch in the world.

℣. 11. He and his people with him, &c.] He and his army, conſiſting chiefly of Chaldeans; tho' there were of other nations among them, as were in his army when he beſieged Jeruſalem, as ſeems to be ſuggeſted in the next clauſe: the terrible of the nations ſhall be brought to deſtroy the land; the Chaldeans, the moſt fierce, cruel and terrible of all people, and others the moſt terrible that could be collected out of all nations under the yoke of the king of Babylon; and all of them terrible to the nations againſt whom they came, as now againſt Egypt, to deſtroy it; ſee Hab. i. 6, 7: and they ſhall draw their ſwords againſt Egypt, and fill the land with the ſlain; go thro' the land with their drawn ſwords, and kill all they meet; and not put them up, till they have quite depopulated the land, and filled it with dead carcaſes.

℣. 12. And I will make the rivers dry, &c.] Egypt was a country that abounded with rivers, however with canals cut from the river Nile; its wealth and riches very much depended hereon, partly on account of the multitude of fiſhes taken out of them, and the paper-reeds that grew upon their banks; but chiefly becauſe the whole land was watered by them, and made exceeding fruitful, rain being not ſo common in it; ſo that to dry up the rivers, was in effect to take away their ſubſtance and dependence; beſides, hereby the way was made eaſy and paſſable for the enemy; there was nothing to obſtruct him, he could over-run and ravage the land at pleaſure: and ſell the land into the hand of the wicked; the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, who were wicked idolaters, men of flagitious lives, and of mercileſs and cruel diſpoſitions; who would ſhew no favour to the inhabitants of the land, when delivered up to them, which is called a ſelling it; for as things ſold are delivered to the buyer, ſo ſhould this land be to them; which tho' they had no right to it before, yet by the event of war, and diſpoſal of divine providence, came to have a property in it, given them by him who is the proprietor of all lands; and after them into the hands of the Perſians, under Cambyſes and Ochus; who were very wicked and cruel princes, and may be reckoned among the terrible or violent ones of the nations, in the preceding verſe; and then into the hands of the Grecians, Romans, Saracens, Mamalucks, and now the Turks, all very wicked people: and I will make the land waſte, and all that is therein by the hand of ſtrangers; the Babylonians, people of another country and diſtant, of another language, and with whom they had no commerce, alliance, and friendſhip, and ſo would not ſpare them, and their land, when in their poſſeſſion; and ſo all the reſt abovementioned, into whoſe hands they ſucceſſively fell: I the Lord have ſpoken it; determined it, propheſied of it; and it ſhall come to paſs, as it did accordingly.

℣. 13. Thus ſaith the Lord God, I will alſo deſtroy the idols, &c.] With which Egypt abounded, making an idol of all ſorts of creatures, rational and irrational, animate and inanimate, and in which they truſted; wherefore theſe being deſtroyed, they had nothing to put their confidence in: I will cauſe their images to ceaſe out of Noph; called Moph, Hoſ. ix. 6. and which we there rightly render Memphis, as many verſions do here, and was very famous for idolatry: here ſtood the temple of Serapis, and the temple of other idols; here Iſis and Oſiris were worſhipped; and it was in Jerom's time, as he ſays, the metropolis of the Egyptian ſuperſtition. It was built by Menes[s], the Mizraim of the ſcriptures, the firſt king of Egypt; tho' Diodorus Siculus[t] makes Uchoreus to be the founder of it. Some interpreters take this city to be the ſame with what is now called Alkair or Grand Cairo; or however, that this is built upon the ſame ſpot, or near the ſame place that was, in which I have followed them on Iſ. xix. 13. Jer. ii. 16. whereas Cairo ſtands right over-againſt old Memphis, the Nile being between them, on the eaſt-ſide of it, and Memphis on the weſt; as is clear from Herodotus[u], and from the charts of Dr. Shaw, and Mr. Norden; and who obſerve, that ſome take the place of it to have been where a village now ſtands, Dr. Shaw calls Geeza, and Mr. Norden, Gize: and there ſhall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt; that is, a nation of that country; or that ſhould rule over the whole of it, and in that grandeur the kings of Egypt had before; or however, not dwell in Memphis, which was the ſeat of the kings of Egypt, but now ſhould be ſo no more: when Egypt was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, it was under the Babylonians; and then under the Perſians; and then under the Greeks; and afterwards under the Romans; ſince under the Saracens and Mamalucks; and now in the hands of the Turks; ſo that it never recovered its former glory; and indeed after Nectanebus was driven out of it by Ochus king of Perſia, it never after had a king: and I will put a fear in all the land of Egypt; a pannic in all the inhabitants of it; as ſoon as they ſhall hear of the king of Babylon entering into it; their courage, bravery and fortitude ſhall at once leave them, and they ſhall be diſpirited, and have no heart to defend themſelves, and oppoſe the enemy.

---

[n] Bibl. l. 1. p. 19.
[o] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 177.
[p] Ibid.
[q] Idyll. 17. v. 82.
[r] את המון ſtrepitum, Vatablus, Cocceius.

ỳ. 14. And I will make Pathros deſolate, &c.] A country in Egypt; ſee the note on ch. xxix. 14. perhaps it was the firſt place that Nebuchadnezzar entered, and ſo went from place to place in the order hereafter mentioned: and I will ſet fire in Zoan; or Tanis, a famous city in Egypt in the times of Moſes, Numb. xiii. 22. Pſ. lxxviii. 12, 43. The Targum and Septuagint verſion call it Tanis here; and from hence a nome in Egypt was called the Tanitic nome. This city was burnt down by the king of Babylon: the place now built on the ſpot is called Manſourah, as Dr. Shaw[w] ſays: and I will execute judgment in No. The Vulgate Latin verſion renders it, Alexandria; and ſo does the Targum; of which place Jarchi, Kimchi and Ben Melech interpret it; and ſo does Jerom; which, tho' built after theſe times by Alexander, and called ſo after his name, yet is ſuppoſed to be built on or near the place where ancient No ſtood. The city is now called Scanderoon, or Scanderca; the Turks calling Alexander, Scander: here the judgments of God were executed in the deſtruction of it by the Chaldean army; and great devaſtations have been made in it ſince it was rebuilt by Alexander, by the Saracens, who deſtroyed all places where they came; ſo that, as Dr. Shaw[x] obſerves, it is ſomewhat extraordinary that the greateſt part of the ancient walls, together with their reſpective turrets, ſhould have continued entire quite down to this time. The Septuagint verſion calls it, Dioſpolis, or the city of Jupiter, as does the Arabic verſion, that is, of Jupiter Hammon; the city of Thebes where he was worſhipped; as it is in a following verſe called Hammon No; tho' Hillerus[y] thinks neither of theſe places are meant, neither Alexandria nor Dioſpolis; but Memphis, as it is rendered by the Septuagint in the next verſe; ſee the note on Nahum iii. 8.

ỳ. 15. And I will pour out my fury upon Sin, the ſtrength of Egypt, &c.] Either the city Sais, as the Septuagint and Arabic verſions; or rather Peluſium, as the Vulgate Latin verſion, ſo called from Pelos, which ſignifies clay in the Greek language; and the ſame Sin ſignifies in the Chaldee, Pſ. xviii. 43. and is now called Tineh, from טין clay: it had a very fine haven, and may be called the ſtrength of Egypt, it lying at the entrance of it; and having a ſtrong fortified tower, it was difficult to enter into it; but could not ſtand before the wrath and fury of the Lord of hoſts, when he ſent the Chaldeans to it. It is thought by ſome to be the ſame with Pithom, built by the firſt of the paſtor-kings of Egypt, and fortified by him, Exod. i. 11. according to Manetho[z]; he put into it a garriſon of two hundred and forty thouſand men; and the ſame writer ſays, it contained ten thouſand acres of land; according to Adrichomius[a], it was twenty furlongs in compaſs, and near it was a vaſt hollow, which extended to mount Caſſius, and which made the way into Egypt on that ſide difficult; and is now, as he ſays, called campus de Gallo; in which he is miſtaken, as well as Thevenot, and others, who take it to be the ſame with Damieta: and I will cut off the multitude of No; the numerous inhabitants of it; hence called Populous No, Nah. iii. 8. or Hamon No; ſee the note on ỳ. 14. here, as before obſerved, the Septuagint verſion renders it, Memphis; as does alſo the Arabic verſion. Some take it, as before, to be the Egyptian Thebes, where was a temple dedicated to Jupiter Hammon; and which city, Pauſanias[b] ſays, was reduced to nothing in his time.

ỳ. 16. And I will ſet fire in Egypt, &c.] Kindle a war there, which ſhall conſume it; ſee ỳ. 8: Sin ſhall have great pain; as a woman in travail, ſeeing its deſtruction is juſt at hand; the ſame with Peluſium, as before: and No ſhall be rent aſunder; the walls of it ſhall be broken down by the enemy, or a breach ſhall be made in it, like the breach of waters which were about it; ſee Nahum, iii. 8: and Noph ſhall have diſtreſſes daily; that is, Memphis, as before; enemies ſhall ſurround it daily, as the Targum; ſhall beſiege and diſtreſs it, until it is taken: or, in the day time; their enemies ſhould not come as thieves in the night, but openly in the day. Abendana interprets it, of their unfortunate day, their ſtar being unlucky.

ỳ. 17. The young men of Aven, and of Phi-beſeth ſhall fall by the ſword, &c.] Aven is the ſame with On, of which Potipherah was prieſt in Joſeph's time, and whoſe daughter he married, Gen. xli. 45. the ſame with Heliopolis or Beth-ſhemeſh, the city of the ſun, Jer. xliii. 13. ſee the note there; where was the temple of the ſun, and where it was worſhipped; and ſo it is rendered by the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin and Arabic verſions. It is called here Aven or vanity, becauſe of the vain and idolatrous worſhip here performed. Phi-beſeth is the Bubaſtis of Herodotus, and called by other writers Bubaſtus; hence there was a nome or province in Egypt called the Bubaſtice nome, mentioned by Ptolemy [c]; and others. In this city was a temple built to the honour of Diana, where ſhe was worſhipped; and Herodotus [d] ſays, that Bubaſtis in the Greek tongue is Diana; here ſhe was worſhipped in the form of a cat; and Stephanus [e] obſerves, that the Egyptians call a cat Bubaſtus; and it is alſo ſaid that dead cats ſalted were buried in this city, as being ſacred: according to Diodorus Siculus [f], it was built for the ſake of Iſis; and Hillerus [g] ſays, that in the Abyſſine language it was called Phy' mly' ſith; that is, the portion of the wife, namely of Iſis married to Oſiris, by whom this city was built to the honour of her; as appears by the pillar of Iſis, on which theſe words are inſcribed, "for me the city of "Bubaſtia is built; be glad, be glad, O Egypt, "which brought me up." This place is now called Biſhbeſh, according to Dr. Shaw [h]: now the young men of both theſe places, tho' they might exert themſelves in the defence of them, yet ſhould fail therein, and fall by the ſword of the Chaldeans: and theſe cities ſhall go into captivity; the reſt of the inhabitants of the cities of Aven and Phi-beſeth, that ſhall not fall by the ſword, ſhall be carried captive into other lands. Joſeph Kimchi ſupplies women inſtead of cities; and thinks, that as the males are mentioned before, the females are underſtood here. The Targum is, "they that ſerved "them ſhall go into captivity;" that ſerved the idols worſhipped in theſe cities.

---

[s] Herodot. Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 99.

[t] Bibliothec. l. 1. p. 46.

[u] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 99.

[w] Travels, p. 304. Ed. II.

[x] Idem, p. 292.

[y] Onomaſtic. Sacr. p. 571, &c.

[z] Apud Joſeph. contr. Apion. l. 1. c. 14.

[a] Theatrum Terræ Sanctæ, p. 122, 123.

[b] Arcadica, ſive l. 8. p. 509. Vid. Juvenal. Satyr. 15. ỳ. 6.

℣. 18. At Tehaphnehes alſo the day ſhall be darkened, &c.] The ſame with Hanes in Iſ. xxx. 4. and Tahapanes in Jer. ii. 16. and Tahpanhes, Jer. xliii. 7, 8, 9. it was a royal ſeat of the kings of Egypt: there was in Solomon's time a queen of Egypt of this name, and perhaps it might be ſo called from her, 1 Kings xi. 19, 20. It is generally thought to be the Daphne of Peluſium, it being near that city; tho' Junius takes it to be a place in another part of Egypt, at a great diſtance, which Herodotus [i] calls Tahcompſo, an iſland encompaſſed by the Nile; and by Ptolemy [k] called Metacompſo: now at this place the day ſhould be darkened; or ſhould reſtrain [l], as it may be rendered; that is, its light; it ſhould be a calamitous and mournful time with the inhabitants of it: when I ſhall break there the yokes of Egypt; the yokes they put upon the necks of others, who now ſhould be freed from them: or, the ſceptres of Egypt, as the Vulgate Latin verſion renders it; the regalia of their kings, which might lie in this place; it being a royal ſeat where Pharaoh had a houſe, as appears from Jer. xliii. 9: and the pomp of her ſtrength ſhall ceaſe in her; all that grandeur and magnificence which appeared in the courts of the kings of Egypt in this place: as for her, a cloud ſhall cover her; as for this city, a cloud of calamity ſhall cover it, ſo as its glory ſhall not be ſeen. The Targum is, "a king with "his army ſhall cover her as a cloud aſcends and "covers the earth:" and her daughters ſhall go into captivity; which may be taken either in a literal ſenſe for the daughters of the inhabitants of this place, which muſt be a great affliction to their tender parents, to have them forced away by rude ſoldiers, and carried captive into diſtant lands; or in a figurative ſenſe, for the villages and the inhabitants of them round about this city; it being uſual to repreſent a city as a mother, and its villages as daughters; and ſo the Targum, Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it.

℣. 19. Thus will I execute judgments in Egypt, &c.] In the ſeveral provinces, and in the ſeveral cities of it before-mentioned, and in all other places; even the judgments of fire, famine, ſword and captivity: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; God omniſcient and omnipotent, by the judgments executed; and own the ſame: this more eſpecially they did, when the goſpel was preached among them, and many were converted by it in the times of the apoſtles.

℣. 20. And it came to paſs in the eleventh year, &c.] Of Zedekiah's reign, and Jehoiachin's captivity; ſome little time after the prophecy in ch. xxix. 1. here the prophecies come into their order again, being interrupted by thoſe of a much later date, at the end of the preceding chapter, and the former part of this: in the firſt month, in the ſeventh day of the month; the month Niſan, which anſwers to part of March, and part of April; the ſeventh day muſt be about the twenty-ninth of March; but according to biſhop Uſher [m], it was on the twenty-ſixth of April, on the third day of the week (Tueſday), in the year of the Julian period 4126, and before Chriſt 588: this was given out three months and two days before Jeruſalem was taken: that the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows:

℣. 21. Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt, &c.] Not Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, whoſe army was overthrown at Carchemiſh by the king of Babylon, in the fourth year of Jehoiakin; when the latter took from the former all that belonged to him between the river of Egypt and the river Euphrates; by which he was ſo weakened and diſpirited, that he could not ſtir any more out of his own land, Jer. xlvi. 2. 2 Kings xxiv. 7. and of him Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it; but Pharaoh-hophra or Apries, who was defeated by the Cyreneans, and ſaved himſelf by flight; ſee the note on ch. xxix. 4: and lo, it ſhall not be bound up to be healed, to put a roller to bind it; a metaphor taken from chirurgeons, who having ſet broken bones, put on a bandage or rollers of linen, or ſuch like ſtuff, to keep them tight; but nothing of this kind ſhould be done; hereby ſuggeſting, that Egypt ſhould receive ſuch a blow or wound, as would be incurable; ſee Jer. xlvi. 11: to make it ſtrong to hold the ſword; which it ſhould not be able to do, or to make war any more, at leaſt with ſucceſs, or to defend itſelf.

℣. 22. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, behold, I am againſt Pharaoh king of Egypt, &c.] The then preſent king of Egypt, whoſe name was Hophra or Apries, Jer. xliv. 30: and I will break his arms, the ſtrong, and that which was broken; both his arms, the ſound and the broken one, his whole power, ſtrength and dominion; meaning that that part of his kingdom which lay between the two rivers of Egypt and Euphrates, that had been taken away by the king of Babylon, ſhould remain ſo; and the other part of his kingdom ſhould fall a prey to him alſo: and I will cauſe the ſword to fall out of his hand; ſo that he ſhould be ſo far from being able to make uſe of the ſword, that he ſhould not be able to hold it; it ſhould drop out of his hand; nor ſhould he be able to take it up again, and make war, either offenſive or defenſive.

---

[c] Geograph. l. 4. c. 5.

[d] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 59, 138, 156.

[e] De Urbibus.

[f] Bibliothec. l. 1. p. 24.

[g] Onomaſtic. Sacr. p. 672.

[h] Travels, p. 306. Ed. II.

[i] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 29.

[k] Geograph. l. 4. c. 5.

[l] חשך prohibuit, Montanus; vitavit, Munſter; cohibuit, Cocceius; prohibebit, arcebit, Vatablus; ſo Ben Melech.

[m] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3416.

℣. 23. And I will ſcatter the Egyptians among the nations, &c.] Among the ſeveral provinces of Babylon, and other places, where the Chaldeans ſhould carry or ſend them: and will diſperſe them thro' the countries; the ſame thing repeated in different words for the confirmation of it.

℣. 24. And I will ſtrengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, &c.] Give him a commiſſion to make war; direct his councils; ſupply him with all neceſſaries; animate and encourage his ſoldiers; and give him ſucceſs in all his enterprizes: and put my ſword in his hand; which confirms the above ſenſe, that he ſhould have power and authority from the Lord to attack the king of Egypt, and ſhould gain a victory over him; ſince it was not his own ſword he drew, but the ſword of the Lord of hoſts; which coming from him, and having his commiſſion, cannot fail of doing execution: but will break Pharaoh's arms; as before in ℣. 21, 22: and he ſhall groan before him, with the groanings of a deadly wounded man; that is, before the king of Babylon; by whom, as an inſtrument, his arms ſhall be broken, and his power deſtroyed; and he be like a man in the agonies of death, juſt expiring, not able to ſpeak, but groaning out his life under the inexpreſſible anguiſh of broken bones; and none to ſet them.

℣. 25. But I will ſtrengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, &c.] Which is repeated for the ſake of confirmation: and the arms of Pharaoh ſhall fall down; as when a man's arms are broken; and he ſhall not be able to lift them up and defend himſelf: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; namely, the Egyptians, as in ℣. 19: when I ſhall have put my ſword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he ſhall ſtretch it out on the land of Egypt; that is, when he ſhall have a commiſſion to carry the war into Egypt; and he ſhall ſpread deſolation over all the land, cutting off the inhabitants of it every where, as before deſcribed in this chapter.

℣. 26. And I will ſcatter the Egyptians among the nations, and diſperſe them among the countries, &c.] Of which they might aſſure themſelves, ſince the Lord had before ſpoken it, and here again repeats it: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; whoſe name alone is Jehovah, and does whatſoever he pleaſes; ſets up kings, and puts them down; ſtrengthens and weakens kingdoms juſt as ſeems good in his ſight; none having any power but what is given by him, and which he can take away when he thinks fit.

CHAP. XXXI.

THIS chapter contains a confirmation of the preceding prophecy, of the ruin of the king of Egypt, by the example of the king of Aſſyria, to whom he was like in grandeur and pride, and would be in his fall. The time of the prophecy is obſerved, ℣. 1. the prophet is ordered to give the following relation to the king of Egypt, ℣. 2. in which the king of Aſſyria is compared to a large and flouriſhing cedar, for the extent of his dominions, the proſperous ſtate of his empire, and his exaltation above all other princes, which drew upon him their envy, ℣. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. wherefore becauſe of his pride, his heart being lifted up with theſe things, ℣. 10. ruin came upon him; which is deſcribed by the inſtruments and manner of it, and the effects following it; mourning and fear in ſome, ſolace and comfort to others, and deſtruction to his aſſociates, ℣. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. wherefore Pharaoh is called upon to conſider all this, who was like to him in greatneſs and pride, and ſhould have the like fate with him; nor could his greatneſs any more ſecure him, than it did the Aſſyrian monarch, ℣. 18.

℣. 1. And it came to paſs in the eleventh year, &c.] Of Zedekiah's reign, and Jeconiah's captivity: in the third month, in the firſt day of the month; the month Sivan, which began on the twentieth of our May, and anſwers to part of May, and part of June; this was about ſeven weeks after the former prophecy, and about five weeks before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; according to biſhop Uſher *, this was on the nineteenth of June, on the firſt day of the week, in the year of the Julian period 4126, and before Chriſt 588: that the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows:

℣. 2. Son of man, ſpeak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, &c.] To Pharaoh-hophra, the then reigning king; not to him perſonally, by word of mouth, for the prophet was now in Chaldea; but by delivering out a prophecy concerning him, and which he might have an opportunity of ſending to him: and to his multitude; the multitude of his ſubjects, of which he boaſted, and in whom he truſted: whom art thou like in thy greatneſs? look over all the records of time, and into all the empires, kingdoms and ſtates that have been; draw a compariſon between thyſelf and the greateſt potentate that ever was; fanſy thyſelf to be equal to him; this will not ſecure thee from ruin and deſtruction; for as they have been humbled, and are fallen, ſo wilt thou be: pitch for inſtance on the Aſſyrian monarch, whoſe empire has been the moſt ancient, extenſive and flouriſhing, and yet now cruſhed; and as thou art like him in greatneſs, at leaſt thou thinkeſt ſo, ſo thou art in pride, and wilt be in thine end; to aſſure of which is the drift of the following account of the king of Aſſyria.

℣. 3. Behold, the Aſſyrian was a cedar in Lebanon, &c.] Here grew the talleſt, moſt ſtately, broad and flouriſhing ones. The ſenſe is, that he was as one of them; comparable to one, for his exaltation and dignity; for the largeneſs of his dominion, the flouriſhing circumſtances of it, and its long duration; that empire having laſted from the times of Nimrod, unto a few years of the preſent time; for this is to be underſtood, either of the monarchy itſelf, or of Eſar-haddon; or rather of Chynilidanus, or Saracus the laſt king of it. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, the cypariſs in Lebanon; but not that, but the cedar grew there, and which beſt ſuits the compariſon: with fair branches; meaning not children, nor nobles, bles, nor ſubjects; but provinces, many and large, which were ſubject to this monarch: and with a ſhadowing ſhrowd; power, dominion, authority, a mighty army ſufficient to protect all that were under his government, and ſubject to it: and of an high ſtature; exalted above all the kings and kingdoms of the earth: and his top was among the thick boughs; his kingly power, headſhip and dominion was over a multitude of petty princes and ſtates, comparable to the thick boughs and branches of a tree: or, among the clouds; as the Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it; above the heights of which the Aſſyrian monarch attempted to aſcend, Iſ. xiv. 14. ſee Dan. iv. 10, 11, 12.

---

* Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3416.

℣. 4. The waters made him great, &c.] The waters of the river Tigris, near to which ſtood the city of Niniveh, the metropolis of the Aſſyrian monarchy; the traffic brought by which river made it rich and great, and the whole empire, and the king of it: the deep ſet him up on high, with her rivers running round about his plants; the vaſt trade by ſea, the profits and commodities of which were conveyed thro' various rivers, which ran about the provinces of the empire, which were as plants in a field; and by which they were enriched, and the whole empire, and the king of it were raiſed to a prodigious pitch of wealth and power: and ſent out little rivers to all the trees of the field; ſo that the common people, comparable to the trees of the field for their number and uſefulneſs, all received profit and advantage hereby: or elſe by waters and the deep, may be meant the multitude of people, as in Rev. xvii. 15. which increaſed his kingdom; filled his provinces; ſupplied his colonies, and enlarged his power and riches. The Targum is, "by the people he was multiplied; by his auxiliaries he became ſtrong; he ſubjected kings under his government; and his governors he appointed over all the provinces of the earth."

℣. 5. Therefore his hight was exalted above all the trees of the field, &c.] His majeſty, grandeur and glory were advanced above all princes, nobles and people; all ranks and degrees of men, let them be compared to trees taller or lower: and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long; the provinces of his empire became more numerous, and were ſpread far and near, and reached to diſtant countries: becauſe of the multitude of waters, when he ſhot forth; either the vaſt number of people, which were daily increaſing, and were ſent out to people diſtant colonies, newly ſubdued or planted; or becauſe of the great traffic which was carried on in different parts, and the advantages ariſing from it. The Targum is, "therefore he was lifted up in his ſtrength above all the kings of the earth, and his army was multiplied, and his auxiliaries prevailed over many people thro' his victories."

℣. 6. All the fowls of the heavens made their neſts in his boughs, &c.] People from all parts of the world, under the whole heavens, flocked to his dominions, and ſettled themſelves in one province or another; promiſing themſelves protection, proſperity and peace under his government: and under his branches did all the beaſts of the field bring forth their young; even people of a more ſavage diſpoſition, being either conquered by him, and placed in his provinces; or coming thither of their own accord, took up their reſidence there, built houſes, planted vineyards, married wives, begat children, and ſettled their families there: and under his ſhadow dwelt all great nations; under his protection, care and government many large kingdoms and ſtates were; yea all were either ſubject to him, or ſought to be his friends and allies: this explains the above figurative expreſſions. The Targum is, "by his army he ſubdued all the ſtrong towers; and under his governors he ſubjected all the provinces of the earth; and in the ſhadow of his kingdom dwelt all the numerous people."

℣. 7. Thus was he fair in his greatneſs, &c.] Amiable, lovely, delightful to look upon in the greatneſs of his majeſty, in his royal glory and dignity: in the length of his branches; in the extent of his empire, and the provinces of it: for his root was by great waters; his kingdom was well eſtabliſhed, firmly rooted among a multitude of people; from whom he had a large revenue to ſupport his throne and government, and the dignity of it; by tribute, taxes, cuſtoms and preſents; and thro' the large trade and traffic of his ſubjects in different parts, from whence he received great profit and advantage. The Targum is, "and he became victorious by his auxiliaries, by the multitude of his mighty ones, ſo that his terror was upon many people."

℣. 8. The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him, &c.] That is, could not riſe ſo high as this cedar, and over-top him, and obſcure his glory; even thoſe that were moſt excellent, which grew in Eden, near to which Babylon ſtood, and where a mighty king dwelt. The ſenſe is, that the greateſt kings and potentates in the whole world, which is like a garden planted by the Lord, were not equal to the king of Aſſyria, and much leſs exceeded him in grandeur, wealth and power: the fir-trees were not like his boughs; leſſer kings and princes, comparable to fir-trees for the beauty, regularity, order and flouriſhing condition of their kingdoms; yet theſe were but petty ſtates, and not to be compared even with the provinces of the king of Aſſyria: and the cheſnut-trees were not like his branches; leſſer ſtates ſtill; which, tho' well ſet, and well ſpread, and full of people, yet not anſwerable to ſome countries that were in the provinces that belonged to the Aſſyrian empire: not any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty; no king, prince or potentate whatever in the whole world was to be compared to him for royal majeſty and greatneſs. The Targum is, "mighty kings could not prevail againſt him, becauſe of the ſtrength of his power, which he had from the Lord; rulers could not ſtand before his army, and mighty men could not prevail againſt his auxiliaries, becauſe of the ſtrength of power he had from the Lord; there is none like to him in his ſtrength."

℣. 9. I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches, &c.] Or provinces, the extenſiveneſs of his dominions: all his power and ſtrength, riches and wealth, grandeur and glory, and the vaſt dominions he was poſſeſſed of, were all from the Lord; as whatever kings have are, tho' they are too apt to aſcribe it to themſelves; but all are from him, by whom kings reign: ſo that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him; all the kings of the earth, tho' they dared not openly ſpeak againſt him, or oppoſe him; yet they inwardly grieved at, and ſecretly grudged his grandeur and majeſty, ſuperior to theirs, and wiſhed themſelves in his ſtead; and could gladly have done any thing, were it in their power, to eclipſe his glory, and bring him lower. This is the caſe of all that are in any eminence, or are conſpicuous to others, or in any exalted ſtation above others, be it what it will; whether they have ſuperior gifts and endowments of mind; or greater riches, and larger poſſeſſions; or are in high places of honour, truſt and profit. The Targum is, “ I have made “ him beautiful by the multitude of his mighty “ ones; and all the kings of the eaſt trembled “ before him, becauſe of the ſtrength of his power, “ which he had from the Lord.”

℣. 10. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Having deſcribed the greatneſs of the Aſſyrian monarch; now follows the account of his fall, and the cauſe of it, pride: becauſe thou haſt lifted up thyſelf in height; this is either an addreſs to Pharaoh king of Egypt, who tho' he did not riſe up ſo high as the Aſſyrian monarch in glory and grandeur; yet he lifted up himſelf, and thought himſelf ſuperior to any; for which reaſon he muſt be brought down: or the words are directed to the Aſſyrian monarch, by a change of perſon frequent in ſcripture; who, tho' he was raiſed by the Lord to the height of honour and dignity he was, yet aſcribed it to himſelf: and he hath ſhot up his top among the thick boughs; the multitude of provinces, over which he became head and governor; ſee the note on ℣. 3: and his heart is lifted up in his height; with pride, inſolence and contempt of God and men; of which ſee the inſtances in Iſ. x. 8—15. and xxxvi. 18, 19, 20. and xxxvii. 10, 11, 12, 13.

℣. 11. I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen, &c.] Or, into the hand of the mightieſt of the nations [o]; the mightieſt prince among them. Some underſtand this of Arbaces the Mede, by whom Sardanapalus had been defeated long before this time: others of Merodach-baladan king of Babylon, by whom Eſarhaddon the Aſſyrian monarch was vanquiſhed; or rather Nebuchadnezzar, who was called Nabopolaſſar; who, in the firſt year [p] of his reign, in conjunction with Cyaxares king of Media, took Nineveh the metropolis of the Aſſyrian monarchy; and this was by the appointment of God, and under the direction of his providence, and thro' the ſucceſs he gave to the arms of theſe princes, according to his own decrees and prophecies. Some render it, into the hand of the god of the nations [q]; yet meaning either Cyaxares or Nebuchadnezzar; ſo called becauſe of their great power and might, and which they had from the Lord: he ſhall ſurely deal with him; or, in doing he ſhall do to him [r]; he ſhall do with him as he pleaſes; he ſhall eaſily manage him, tho' ſo powerful; and deal with him according to his deſerts; or, as the Targum, he ſhall take vengeance on him, as he did: I have driven him out for his wickedneſs; out of his court and palace; out of his royal city Niniveh; out of his kingdom and dominions; and he ſhall reſide and reign no more there; and all this for his wickedneſs, pride and oppreſſion, and other ſins: when God ſtrips men of their honour, riches, power and dominion, it is becauſe of their abuſe of them; for ſome ſin, or ſins, or wickedneſs they have been guilty of, both againſt him and men; and therefore it is but juſt and righteous in him to dethrone ſuch princes, and drive them from their ſeats.

℣. 12. And ſtrangers, the terrible of the nations have cut him off, &c.] Cut off the boughs and branches of this cedar, and cut him down to the ground; that is, utterly deſtroyed him, his empire and monarchy: theſe ſtrangers were the Medes, who lived in a country diſtant from Aſſyria; and the terrible of the nations, the cruel and mercileſs Chaldeans, the ſoldiers of the king of Babylon's army; ſee ch. xxx. 11: and have left him upon the mountains; like a tree cut down there, and its boughs and branches lopped off, which roll down from thence into the vallies, and by the rivers of water; ſignifying his depreſſion from an high and exalted ſtate, to a very low one, as follows: and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; ſignifying, that many provinces and countries under his dominion were broken off, and by force taken away from him; or they broke off and revolted of themſelves, and either ſet up for themſelves, and recovered their former power and authority; or gave up themſelves to the conqueror. The Targum is, “ and in all vallies his army fell, and “ his auxiliaries were ſcattered by all the rivers of “ the land:” and all the people of the earth are gone down from his ſhadow, and have left him; thoſe that joined themſelves to his empire, put themſelves under his protection, or ſought his friendſhip and alliance, now withdrew themſelves from him, and left him alone to ſhift for himſelf; as frightened birds and beaſts will do, when a tree is cut down and fallen, in the boughs, or under the ſhadow of which they dwelt. The Targum paraphraſes it, “ from the ſhadow of his kingdom.”

℣. 13. Upon his ruin ſhall all the fowls of the heaven remain, &c.] Or, on his fall [s]; the fall of this tree: and all the beaſts of the field ſhall be upon his branches; as when a tree is cut down, and its lopped-off branches and boughs lie here and there, either the birds and beaſts that before dwelt in it, or under it, tho' for a while frightened away, return unto it; or others come: the birds come and ſit upon the boughs, and pick up what they can find on them; and the beaſts brouſe upon the branches: this may ſignify, that even thoſe people who before put themſelves under the protection of this monarch, or ſought alliance with him, now preyed upon his dominions; or the Medes and Babylonians the conquerors, ſeized on the provinces of the empire, and plundered them of their riches. The Targum underſtands it literally of the fowls of the heaven, and the beaſts of the field, feeding upon the carcaſes of the ſlain; which is no bad ſenſe of the paſſage; thus, “ upon the fall of his “ ſlain all the fowls of heaven have dwelt, and “ upon the carcaſes of his army all the beaſts of “ the field have reſted.”

℣. 14. To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themſelves for their height, &c.] The end propoſed by the Lord in the deſtruction of the king of Aſſyria, and the uſe to be made of it is this; that the kings of the earth take warning hereby, who rule over a multitude of people, comparable to waters, and who abound in riches and wealth; that they are not elated with pride and vanity, becauſe of their exalted eſtate, their grandeur and dignity; and do not behave inſolently againſt God, on whom they depend; nor haughtily and in an oppreſſive manner towards their own ſubjects,

---

[o] ביד אל גוים in manum fortiſſimi gentium, Pagninus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; potentiſſimi, Piſcator.

[p] Seder Olam Rabba, p. 69.

[q] In manum dei gentium, Montanus, Starckius; deo gentium, Caſtalio.

[r] עשו יעשה לו faciendo faciet ei, Pagninus, Montanus; faciendo faciebat ipſi, Starckius.

[s] על מפלתו ſuper prolapſo ejus, Cocceius; ſuper cadivum truncum ejus, Junius & Tremellius.

jects, over whom they rule: neither ſhoot up their top among the thick boughs; affect univerſal monarchy, as he did; and ſet up themſelves over all kingdoms and ſtates, as he had over them, and make all ſubject to them: neither their trees ſtand up in their height, that drink water; that is, kings and potentates, who rule over the people, and are ſupplied and ſupported by them in their exalted ſtations, by the tribute and taxes they pay them, and ſo abound in riches and power, ſhould not truſt in the height of honour and power they are raiſed to, and treat contemptuouſly God and man; but conſider what they are, that they are but men, and are in ſlippery places, where there is no ſtanding long, and eſpecially when death comes, as follows: for they are delivered unto death, in the nether parts of the earth; they are mortal by nature, as other men; they are appointed to die, and will be delivered into the hands of death, when the time is come, who will not ſpare them, becauſe of their crowns and ſcepters; and when they will be laid in the grave, in the loweſt parts of the earth, who uſed to ſit upon elevated thrones of ſtate: in the midſt of the children of men, with thoſe that go down to the pit; the grave, where they are upon a level with the pooreſt and meaneſt of their ſubjects. The Targum is, "that all the kings of the eaſt "might not be lifted up with their ſtrength, nor "exerciſe tyranny over the kingdoms; nor all "that hold a kingdom lift up themſelves in their "own ſtrength, for all are delivered unto death, "&c."

℣. 15. Thus ſaith the Lord God, in the day when he went down to the grave, &c.] The Aſſyrian monarch; when his monarchy was deſtroyed, and he ceaſed to be king, and was ſtripped of all his majeſty, power, and authority, and was as one dead, and laid in the grave, and buried: I cauſed a mourning; that is, for him, in the waters and among the trees, among the people and the kings of the earth, as follows: I covered the deep for him; with mourning, with thick darkneſs, which ſet him up on high, ℣. 4: and I reſtrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were ſtayed; which made him great, ℣. 4. ſignifying by all this, that the kingdoms of the world, comparable to the ſea, of which his monarchy conſiſted, and all the inhabitants and people of them, comparable to floods and great waters, were affected with the fall of this great monarch, and thrown into conſternation by it; not knowing what the event of things would be, ſtood ſtill, and knew not what courſe to take; all buſineſs was ſtopped, eſpecially all traffick by ſea, and all trade and commerce every where, a ſtagnation of every thing for a while: and I cauſed Lebanon to mourn for him; where he was a cedar, ℣. 3. this may reſpect the whole empire he was head of, particularly the kingdom of Syria, on the borders of which Lebanon was; and was a part of the Aſſyrian empire, which muſt mourn and be concerned at the fall of it: and all the trees of the field fainted for him; all the kings of the earth that were in alliance with him, or ſubject to him, trembled for fear that their deſtruction would be next; or as doubtful and concerned what would be their condition, under the yoke of another. The Targum is, "tribulation covered the world, and the "provinces were forſaken, and many people trembled, and all the kings of the people ſmote the "ſhoulder becauſe of him."

℣. 16. I made the nations to ſhake at the ſound of his fall, &c.] As when a large cedar was cut down and fell in Lebanon, the noiſe of it was heard at a diſtance; ſo when this mighty monarch, and monarchy fell, the nations of the world, and the kings of them, heard of it far and near, and ſhook thro' fear of what would be the conſequence, leſt they ſhould fall alſo in like manner: when I caſt him down to hell, or the grave, with them that deſcend into the pit; in common with other men that die, and are buried: it may refer to his ſubjects and ſoldiers that periſhed with him, who were ſlain by the ſword, and were buried with him, and he with them; no diſtinction being made between them: and all the trees of Eden, the choice and beſt of Lebanon, all that drink water; the greateſt kings and potentates of the world, the chief and principal of the Aſſyrian empire; all that ruled over multitudes of people, and partook of their wealth and riches, and were ſupported in grandeur and dignity; who had been in the ſtate of the dead before this time, ſhall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth; when they ſee ſo mighty a monarch depreſſed, and brought as low as they, into the ſame ſtate of meanneſs and contempt; as it is ſome kind of ſolace for perſons in diſtreſs, to have partners with them: this is a poetical expreſſion, repreſenting the dead as rejoicing to ſee others in the ſame condition with themſelves. The Targum is, "all the kings of the eaſt, the governors, and "thoſe that are rich in ſubſtance, all that hold a "kingdom, are comforted in the lower part of "the earth."

℣. 17. They alſo went down to hell with him, &c.] To the grave with him; many of his nobles, princes, generals, ſoldiers, and ſubjects: unto them that be ſlain with the ſword; to be buried and lie with them who had fallen by the ſword, as a juſt puniſhment for their iniquities: and they that were his arm; either that leaned on his arm, were dependents upon him; or his miniſters, his inſtruments, whom he employed under him as his deputies, to govern the ſeveral provinces that belonged to him; or rather his allies and auxiliaries, who helped and aſſiſted him on occaſion: that dwelt under his ſhadow in the midſt of the heathen; in the midſt of the nations ſubject to the Aſſyrian empire; ſuch who put themſelves under the protection of it, lived comfortably under it, and continued with it to the laſt; theſe ſhared the ſame fate as that did. The Targum is, "his governors "are broken, whom he ſtrengthened in the midſt "of the kingdom."

℣. 18. To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatneſs among the trees of Eden? &c.] Among all the kings and potentates of the earth; pitch on whom you will, ſay which of them all, even the greateſt of them for majeſty and glory, for wealth and riches, power and authority, and extent of dominion, you are equal to; name the king of Aſſyria, if you pleaſe, before deſcribed, tho' you are not equal to him; and if you were, this would not ſecure you from ruin; ſince as great as he was he fell, and ſo will you: this is ſaid to Pharaoh king of Egypt, and is an application of the preceding parable to him; ſuggeſting, that let him be as high as any ever was, or he could imagine himſelf to be; yet ſhalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden, unto the nether parts of the earth; the grave, and lie in the ſame depreſſed and humble ſtate, as the greateſt monarchs that ever were on earth do: thou ſhalt lie in the midſt of the uncircumciſed; the wicked, as the Targum; the uncircumciſed in heart, who belong not to God, or his people, and have no communion with either, but are ſhut out of the kingdom of heaven, and have their portion with devils and damned ſpirits: with them that be ſlain by the ſword; in a way of judgment for their ſins: this is Pharaoh, and all his multitude, ſaith the Lord God; this account repreſents Pharaoh, his grandeur, his pride, and his ruin; this ſhews what will be the end of him, and of his numerous ſubjects. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, ſo will be Pharaoh, &c. in like manner will he fall, and all his people with him; for the Lord God has ſaid it, and it ſhall aſſuredly come to paſs. The Targum is, "to whom "art thou like now in glory and greatneſs among "the kings of the eaſt? and thou ſhalt be brought "down with the kings of the eaſt into the lower "part of the earth; in the midſt of ſinners thou "ſhalt ſleep, with thoſe that are ſlain by the ſword; "this is Pharaoh, and all his multitude, ſaith the "Lord God."

CHAP. XXXII.

THIS chapter contains two more prophecies concerning the deſtruction of Egypt. The date of the firſt is given, ℣. 1. in which the king of Egypt is compared to a large fiſh taken in a net, and brought to land, and left on it, to be the prey of the fowls of the air, and beaſts of the field, ℣. 2, 3, 4. and the ruin of that kingdom is further amplified, by the caſting of it on the mountains and vallies; by the land flowing with its blood; by the darkneſs of the heavens; by the vexation in the hearts of many people; and by the amazement of kings and nations, ℣. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. the means and inſtruments of all which, will be the king of Babylon and his army, ℣. 11, 12. the devaſtation made by him, which would be ſuch, as would cauſe lamentation in other nations, is deſcribed, ℣. 13, 14, 15, 16. then follows the other prophecy, whoſe date is given, ℣. 17. the prophet is bid to lament the fall of Egypt, which is repreſented under the funeral of a corpſe, ℣. 18, 19, 20. ſaluted by thoſe gone down to the grave before, or were become deſolate; which are mentioned, to aſſure Egypt of its deſtruction, ℣. 21. as the Aſſyrian empire, and all its provinces, ℣. 22, 23. the Perſians and Medes, with all their dominions, ℣. 24, 25. the poſterity of Meſhech and Tubal, or the Scythians, thoſe warlike people, ℣. 26, 27, 28. the Edomites, the princes of the north, and all the Zidonians, ℣. 29, 30. which would be a comfort, though a poor one, to the king of Egypt and his ſubjects, to have ſuch company with them, ℣. 31, 32.

℣. 1. And it came to paſs in the twelfth year, &c.] Of Jeconiah's captivity, above a year and a half after the taking of Jeruſalem; the Syriac verſion reads in the eleventh year: in the twelfth month, in the firſt day of the month; the month Adar, which anſwers to part of our February, and part of March; the Septuagint verſion reads it the tenth month: according to biſhop Uſher [t], this was on the 22d of March, on the fourth day of the week (Wedneſday), in the year of the Julian period 4127, and 587 years before Chriſt: that the word of the Lord came unto me, ſaying; as follows,

℣. 2. Son of man, take up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, &c.] Pharaoh Hophra, or Apries; ſay a funeral dirge for him; this is ordered, not out of honour and reſpect to him, or in compaſſion for his miſery and ruin, but to aſſure him of it: and ſay unto him, thou art like a young lion of the nations; for ſtrength and fierceneſs, for cruelty and tyranny, which he exerciſed, not in one nation only, but in many; a lively emblem of the beaſt of Rome, ſpiritually called Egypt and Sodom, compared to a leopard, bear, and lion, Rev. xi. 8. and xiii. 2: and thou art as a whale in the ſeas; or rather, like a crocodile [u], which was common in the rivers of Egypt, but not the whale; which alſo has not ſcales, nor does it go upon land, nor is it taken in a net; all which is ſaid of this creature here, and in ch. xxix. 3, 4. and to the crocodile there is an alluſion in the name of Pharaoh, in the Arabic language, as Noldius from Camius obſerves [w]; ſee ch. xxix. 3: and thou cameſt forth with thy rivers; or, by thy rivers [x]; as the crocodile in the river Nile, by the arms of it, or canals made out of it, ſometimes went out from thence to other parts: or, out of thy rivers [y]; upon the land, as the crocodile does; ſo the king of Egypt went forth with his armies out of his own land, into other countries to diſturb them, as follows: or rather, cameſt forth in thy rivers [z]; as the crocodile puts forth its head out of the water for reſpiration: and thou troubleſt the waters with thy feet, and fouleſt their rivers; juſt as the feet of men or beaſts in ſhallow waters, raiſe up the mud or clay at the bottom, and ſo foul them; this beſt agrees with the crocodile, which has feet; Grotius thinks for this reaſon, the ſea-horſe is intended; the meaning is, that Pharaoh with his ſoldiers entered other nations, made war upon them, and diſturbed their peace and tranquillity. The Targum is, "thou haſt been ſtrong among the people, as "a whale in the ſeas, thou haſt fought with thine "army; and thou haſt moved the people with "thine auxiliaries, and thou haſt waſted their pro"vinces."

℣. 3. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The Lord God almighty, who is able to manage this fierce and turbulent creature, this mighty monarch and diſturber of the nations: I will therefore ſpread out my net over thee with a company of many people; meaning the Chaldean army, which the Lord would inſtigate, and by his providence bring againſt the king of Egypt, and ſurround him as fiſhes in a net, and take him and his people; ſee ch. xii. 13. and xvii. 20: and they ſhall bring thee up in my net; out of his rivers, out of his fortreſſes, out of his own land, and carry him captive, or deſtroy him.

℣. 4. Then will I leave thee upon the land, &c.] Like a fiſh that is drawn out of the waters with a net or hook, and laid on dry land, and left gaſping and expiring, where it can't long live: I will caſt thee forth on the open field; the ſame in different words, ſignifying that his army ſhould fall in battel by the ſword of the Cyreneans, or Chaldeans, or both, and be left on the ſurface of the earth unburied: and will cauſe all the fowls of the heavens to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beaſts of the whole earth with thee; which may be underſtood either literally of the fowls of the air, that ſhould light upon the ſlain carcaſes, and reſt on them till they had ſatisfied themſelves with their fleſh; and of the beaſts of the field that ſhould gather about them from all parts, and fill themſelves with them; ſee Rev. xix. 17, 18. or figuratively of the ſoldiers of the enemies army, that ſhould plunder them, and enrich themſelves with the ſpoil.

---

[t] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3417.

[u] כתנים ſimilis es crocodilo, Noldius, Ebr. Concord. Part. p. 375.

[w] Ibid. N°. 1306.

[x] בנהרותיך per flumina tua, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[y] Ex fluminibus tuis, Starckius.

[z] In fluviis tuis, V. L. Piſcator; in fluminibus tuis, Cocceius.

℣. 5. And I will lay thy fleſh upon the mountains, &c.] The remainder of it, left by the birds and beaſts of prey, and who might carry it thither; or it intends ſuch of the Egyptians who ſhould flee to the mountains for ſafety, but ſhould fall by the hands of the enemy there. So the Targum, "and "I will give the fleſh of thy ſlain upon the mountains." And fill the vallies with thy height; his huge army, and with which he prided and lifted up himſelf, and thought himſelf ſafe in; which ſhould fall in ſuch great numbers, as to cover the plains and vallies where the battel was fought. Jarchi obſerves, that the word for height, has with ſome the ſignification of worms: and ſo the Syriac verſion renders it, and the vallies ſhall be filled with thy worms; bred in the carcaſes of the ſlain: and ſo the Vulgate Latin verſion, with corrupt matter; ſuch as iſſues out of putrified wounds. The Targum very rightly paraphraſes it, "the vallies ſhall "be filled with the carcaſes of thine army."

℣. 6. And I will alſo water with thy blood the land wherewith thou ſwimmeſt, &c.] Where he reſided, over which he ruled; alluding to his being compared to a fiſh, a whale, or a crocodile; and which land abounded with all good things, and he with them; inſtead of being watered with the waters of the Nile, by which it became fruitful, it ſhould now be flooded with the blood of his army: even to the mountains; an hyperbolical expreſſion, ſignifying the vaſt quantity of blood that ſhould be ſhed; ſee the like in Rev. xiv. 20: and the rivers ſhall be full of them; of the carcaſes of his army, and of the blood of them; they ſhould lie about every where, on mountains and vallies, on the land and in the rivers; and which ſhould now be turned into blood, as the rivers of Egypt of old were; and which figure is uſed to expreſs the deſtruction of the antichriſtian ſtates; ſee Exod. vii. 20. Rev. xvi. 3, 4.

℣. 7. And when I ſhall put thee out, &c.] As a candle is put out, or ſome great light or blazing torch is extinguiſhed; ſuch was the king of Egypt in his ſplendor and glory; but now ſhould be like a lamp put out in obſcure darkneſs, and all his brightneſs and glory removed from him, Job xviii. 5. and xx. 17. Prov. xiii. 9. and xx. 20: I will cover the heaven, and make the ſtars thereof dark; with the ſmoke that ſhould ariſe at the extinguiſhing of this lamp; or they ſhould be covered with mourning, or clad in black, at the deſtruction of this monarch, and his monarchy: I will cover the ſun with a cloud, and the moon ſhall not give her light; all which figures are ſometimes made uſe of to denote the diſſolution of kingdoms and ſtates: the heaven being an emblem of a kingdom itſelf; the ſun of an emperor or king, or kingly power; the moon of the queen, or of the prieſthood; the ſtars of nobles, princes, counſellors, and ſuch like eminent perſons, uſeful in government; who being deſtroyed or removed, the light and glory, the proſperity and happineſs of a kingdom, are gone; ſee Iſ. xiii. 10. Rev. vi. 12, 13. The Targum is, "tribulation ſhall cover thee, when I ſhall extinguiſh the ſplendor of the glory of thy kingdom from heaven; and the people of thine army ſhall be leſſened, who are many as the ſtars; a king with his army ſhall cover thee as a cloud, that aſcends and covers the ſun, and as the moon, whoſe light does not ſhine in the day."

℣. 8. All the bright lights of heaven will I make dark over thee, &c.] Or, all the lights of the light[a]; the reſt of the luminaries of heaven; the other five planets, as Kimchi, beſides the ſun and moon: and ſet darkneſs upon thy land, ſaith the Lord God; as there muſt needs be, the ſun, moon, and ſtars, and all the lights of heaven, being darkened above: there ſeems to be an alluſion to the thick darkneſs that was formerly over the land of Egypt; and this is a figure and repreſentation of that darkneſs that ſhall be in the kingdom of the beaſt, or ſpiritual Egypt, yet to come; ſee Exod. x. 21. Rev. xvi. 10. The Targum is, "tribulation as darkneſs ſhall "cover thy land."

℣. 9. I will alſo vex the hearts of many people, &c.] With anger and grief, with fear and dread, with conſternation and amazement: when I ſhall bring thy deſtruction among the nations; or, thy breach[b]; the news of it, the tidings of their deſtruction; which by one means or another ſhould come to their ears, and fill them with concern and great anxiety of mind; ſo rich and powerful a kingdom being ſubdued, and the king of Babylon made ſo great thereby, and fearing they ſhould fall a prey unto him alſo. The Targum renders it, "when "I ſhall bring the broken of thy war;" that is, the ſoldiers that ſhould be wounded in battel, their limbs broke, and they taken captive, and brought among the nations, diſmal ſpectacles to look at; and which ſhould be brought into countries which thou haſt not known; at a diſtance from Egypt, and which had no commerce nor communication with them, nor were their friends and allies; yet as their deſtruction would reach their ears, ſo it would affect their hearts, and fill them with vexation and grief; not ſo much on account of Egypt, as the growing power of Nebuchadnezzar, and the danger they were in of falling into his hands.

℣. 10. Yea, I will make many people amazed at thee, &c.] That ſo potent a ſtate, and ſuch a flouriſhing kingdom, ſhould at once be ſo eaſily ſubdued and conquered: and their kings ſhall be horribly afraid for thee; becauſe of her deſtruction, leſt their turn ſhould be next; ſo the kings of the earth will be afraid, when God's judgments are executed on myſtical Egypt; ſee Rev. xviii. 9, 10: when I ſhall brandiſh my ſword before them; the ſword of the king of Babylon after-mentioned, called the Lord's, becauſe it was by his appointment and permiſſion, and came by the direction of his providence, and was ſucceeded by his power: this glittering ſword being brandiſhed over Egypt, in the ſight of the nations round about, was terrible to them; dreading that it would not be put up until it was ſheathed in them, or they felt the effects of it: or, when I ſhall cauſe it to fly before them; them [e]; in their ſight, and upon the borders of their countries; expreſſive of the ſwiftneſs of its motion, the ſudden deſtruction it brought on Egypt, and its nearneſs to them. The Targum is, "when I ſhall bring upon thee thoſe that kill with the ſword." And they ſhall tremble at every moment; from moment to moment, or continually; they ſhall never be free from fear: every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall; not kings for their ſubjects, or ſubjects for their kings, but every man for himſelf; expecting every moment that the ſword which ſlew and ravaged through Egypt, and now hovered over them, would be inſtantly plunged in them.

---

[a] כל מאורי אור omnia luminaria lucis, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius.

[b] שברך fractionem tuam, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 11. For thus ſaith the Lord God, the ſword of the king of Babylon ſhall come upon thee.] Upon Pharaoh and his kingdom; having a commiſſion and a direction from the Lord, and which would be the inſtrument of the deſtruction before threatned. The Targum is, "thoſe that ſlay with the ſword of the king of Babylon, ſhall come upon or againſt thee;" his army ſword in hand.

℣. 12. By the ſwords of the mighty will I cauſe thy multitude to fall, &c.] Pharaoh's numerous ſubjects; or his army, as the Targum; the vaſt number of ſoldiers in it, whoſe carcaſes ſhould fall in battel by the ſword of the Chaldeans, the mighty men of Nebuchadnezzar's army: the terrible of the nations all of them; which army conſiſted of men of ſeveral nations, and thoſe the moſt terrible, fierce, and cruel, by whoſe ſwords this ſlaughter ſhould be made: and they ſhall ſpoil the pomp of Egypt; cut off the king, the princes of the blood, the nobility and gentry, the prime of the nation; plunder the king's palace of all the wealth and riches in it, the treaſury of the kingdom; deſtroy the metropolis of it; demoliſh its cities and fortified places, and take away all its ſtrength and glory: and all the multitude thereof ſhall be deſtroyed; all the people of the land, high and low, rich and poor; the deſtruction ſhall be general, all ranks and degrees of men ſhall ſhare in it.

℣. 13. I will deſtroy alſo all the beaſts thereof from beſides the great waters, &c.] Which uſed to graze beſides the river Nile, and the canals of it, in the plains and meadows, vallies and hills, which theſe ran by; meaning both horſes, which Egypt abounded with, and would be good booty for the Chaldeans, and oxen and ſheep, which they would kill for preſent uſe, or drive away for future ſervice: neither ſhall the foot of man trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beaſts trouble them; there ſhould ſo few remain of men and beaſts, that the waters of the rivers would not be diſturbed, either by men paſſing over them, and doing any buſineſs upon them, or by beaſts drinking at them.

℣. 14. Then will I make their waters deep, &c.] Either the waters of Egypt literally, the waters of the Nile; no canals being cut from it, to carry the water to the ſeveral parts of the land, the land being depopulated, and no buſineſs done: or figuratively, other nations compared to waters for their numbers, who before had been diſturbed by the Egyptians; but now they being deſtroyed, theſe would be at eaſe, like troubled waters, which ſubſide, and become deep and clear, when there is none to trouble them: and cauſe their rivers to run like oil, ſaith the Lord God; very ſlowly, as if they were mourning the unhappy condition of the land; or ſmoothly, clearly, undiſturbed as before. The Targum is, "there will I cauſe the people to reſt, and I will lead their kings quietly, ſaith the Lord God."

℣. 15. When I ſhall make the land of Egypt deſolate, &c.] The cities being demoliſhed, the inhabitants deſtroyed with the ſword, or carried captive: and the country ſhall be deſtitute of that whereof it was full; men and cattel, corn and other fruits of the earth, wealth and riches, pomp and grandeur: when I ſhall ſmite all them that dwell therein; with the ſword of the Chaldeans: then ſhall they know that I am the Lord; for God is known in the perfections of his nature, omnipotence, omniſcience, holineſs, juſtice, &c. by the judgments he executes; for this is not to be underſtood of a ſpiritual knowledge of him, but of a terrible conviction of the truth of his being and attributes, by the awful diſpenſations of his providence.

℣. 16. This is the lamentation, with which they ſhall lament her, &c.] The Egyptians themſelves, or rather they that are after-mentioned. The Targum is, "the prophet ſaid, a lamentation is this prophecy, and it ſhall be for a lamentation;" he was bid at the beginning of it to take up a lamentation, and now at the end of it he pronounces it to be one, and that it ſhould be ſung as ſuch: the daughters of the nations ſhall lament for her; either literally underſtood, it being the buſineſs and cuſtom of women to ſay or ſing the funeral dirge, or the lamentation at the interment of the deceaſed; or figuratively, the inhabitants of other nations. So Ben Melech and the Targum, "the villages of the people ſhall lament her;" that is, the inhabitants of them, who were in alliance with Egypt, and under its protection: they ſhall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude; for the deſolation of the land, and for the vaſt numbers of people that ſhould be ſlain with the ſword, or carried captive: ſaith the Lord God; which is added for the confirmation of it; for what he has ſpoken ſhall be done.

℣. 17. It came to paſs alſo the twelfth year, &c.] Another prophecy of the like kind was delivered out the ſame year as before: in the fifteenth day of the month; of the twelfth month, the month Adar, which is not here expreſſed, becauſe mentioned before, ℣. 1. it was about a fortnight after the other prophecy. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions read it, "it came to paſs in the twelfth year, the firſt month, the fifteenth day of the month;" according to which, this prophecy was before the other, which is not to be ſuppoſed.

℣. 18. Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, &c.] Sing a funeral ſong or dirge, or compoſe one, to be ſung by the mourning women, on account of the vaſt numbers of the inhabitants of Egypt that ſhall be ſlain; for the prophet himſelf would not mourn, but rejoice, on this occaſion; but this is ſaid to ſhew the certainty of the deſtruction, and the lamentation that would be made on that account: and caſt them down, even her and the daughters of the famous nations; Egypt, and all thoſe countries, and the inhabitants of them, that were in alliance and friendſhip with her; that is, declare by prophecy, that they ſhall be caſt down and deſtroyed, or be brought down from the height of grandeur and proſperity in which they now were, unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down to the pit; not unto ſtately ſepulchres built on high, ſuch as were made for the kings of Egypt; but unto common pits or graves, dug in the lower parts of the earth, where the meaner and common ſort of people were buried; there ſhould be no diſtinction between them and others, they ſhould have one common burial. The Targum is, "ſon of man, propheſy concerning the multitude of Egypt, and break her, even her, and the villages of the mighty people; propheſy that they ſhall be delivered unto the loweſt earth, with thoſe that go down to the pit of the houſe of perdition."

---

[e] בעופפי cum volare fecero, Munſter, Tigurine verſion. Abendana mentions ſuch a ſenſe of the word.

℣. 19. Whom doſt thou paſs in beauty, &c.] This queſtion the prophet is bid to put to Egypt; what nation is there, or has been, that thou excelleſt in wiſdom, in riches, or in ſtrength, in the multitude of ſubjects, or extent of dominions, that thou thinkeſt thyſelf ſecure from deſtruction? look over other kingdoms and ſtates mightier than thou, or at leaſt equal to thee, and ſee how they are brought to ruin, and expect that this will quickly be thy caſe: go down, and be thou laid with the uncircumciſed; go down to the grave, and take thy place, and lie there among the wicked and moſt profligate of mankind, and ſuch as might be moſt deſpiſed by the Egyptians, ſince they uſed circumciſion. The Targum is, "go down and ſleep with ſinners."

℣. 20. They ſhall fall in the midſt of them that are ſlain by the ſword, &c.] The Egyptians ſhall fall in battel by the ſword of the Chaldeans: ſhe is delivered to the ſword; Egypt is given to the ſword, to periſh by it, for her ſins, according to the juſt appointment of God: draw her and all her multitudes; to the place of burial; not in pomp and ſplendor, as great perſons are drawn in hearſes; but in great diſgrace, as carcaſes are dragged unto a common pit or grave, and caſt into it: this is ſaid to the Chaldeans, who had a commiſſion from the Lord to ſlay Egypt, and to bury her, and all her people.

℣. 21. The ſtrong among the mighty ſhall ſpeak to him, &c.] The ſtrongeſt of them, ſuch who have excelled others in ſtrength and courage, famous for military exploits, who have been generals of armies, great warriors, and conquerors; and yet with all their might and ſtrength could not withſtand death, but were ſubdued by it, and brought down to the grave; theſe are, by a poetical figure, repreſented as meeting Pharaoh king of Egypt, when he came to his grave, ſaluting and welcoming him to the ſtate of the dead in which they were; taking a ſort of comfort in it, and inſulting him as being as weak as they; ſee Iſ. xiv. 9, 10, 16. which they ſhould do out of the midſt of hell; or the grave, Hades, the ſtate of the dead: with them that help him; the aſſociates, allies, and friends of Pharaoh, his auxiliaries that fell with him, and were brought to the grave at the ſame time with him; theſe ſhould be beſpoke, ſaluted, and welcomed in like manner: they are gone down; to the grave; thoſe mighty ones that are repreſented as ſpeaking, and the Egyptians and their helpers who are ſpoken to: they lie uncircumciſed; among them that are ſo, ℣. 19: ſlain by the ſword; of their enemies, who got the victory over them.

℣. 22. Aſhur is there, and all her company, &c.] In the ſtate of the dead, or in a moſt deſolate and ruinous condition; the great Aſſyrian monarchy, the kings of it, the princes, nobles, generals, ſoldiers, and the vaſt number of ſubjects in all the dominions of it; all his army, as the Targum; this, with what follows, ſhews who the mighty are, that ſhould meet and addreſs the king of Egypt at his funeral: his graves are about him; either the graves of Pharaoh and his multitude are round about the graves of the Aſſyrian monarch and his ſubjects, as Kimchi; or rather the graves of his ſubjects and ſoldiers are round about him: it ſeems to repreſent the king of Aſſyria as having a more ſtately monument, and the graves of his people as leſſer ones round about him, but all in the ſame condition: all of them ſlain, fallen by the ſword; of their enemies, the Medes and the Babylonians, by whom the Aſſyrian monarchy was deſtroyed.

℣. 23. Whoſe graves are ſet in the ſides of the pit, &c.] Or vault, where lay the king of Aſſyria, and thoſe who fell by the ſword with him, who are repreſented as lying in graves all around him; the neareſt to him thoſe who were in the higheſt poſts and moſt valiant and courageous, and next the common ſoldiers, as follows: and her company is round about her grave; not Pharaoh's company round about the grave of the Aſſyrian monarch; but the company of the king of Aſſyria, or his army, as the Targum, round about his grave, or lying about in the ruins of his kingdom: all of them ſlain, fallen by the ſword, which cauſed terror in the land of the living; even they who now are in the ſtate of the dead, and can no more diſturb and diſtreſs any, while they were alive, or in the world, ſtruck terror in all neighbouring ſtates and kingdoms; threatening deſtruction to them, and obliging them to ſubmit to their tyranny and exactions. Jarchi interprets this of the land of Iſrael; and the Jewiſh writers commonly underſtand by the land of the living the land of Canaan, wherever they meet with it; becauſe here men worſhipped the living God, and lived before him; and the inhabitants of this land were often terrified by the king of Aſſyria. So the Targum, "becauſe they ruled in the land of Iſrael."

℣. 24. There is Elam, and all her multitude round about her grave, &c.] The kingdom of the Medes and Perſians lying in ruin, and the potent kings thereof in the ſtate of the dead; with their army, as the Arabic verſion, ſlain and deſtroyed, and placed round about the grave of the king of Perſia; for of him rather it is to be underſtood, than of the king of Aſſyria, or of Egypt, as ſome: all of them ſlain, fallen by the ſword; either of the Scythians in the reign of Cyaxares; or of Nebuchadnezzar a few years before this, in the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah; ſee Jer. xlix. 34—39: which are gone down uncircumciſed, into the nether parts of the earth; unholy perſons, profane ſinners, deſtitute of the grace of God; who were gone down into the grave, and even into hell and everlaſting deſtruction, as their ſins deſerved: which cauſed their terror in the land of the living; made a great noiſe in the world, and ſtruck a pannic in neighbouring nations, invaded and conquered by them; this they did whilſt living, but now being in the ſtate of the dead, nothing was to be feared from them: yet have they borne their ſhame with them that go down to the pit; were obliged to ſubmit to death, and a ſhameful one, by the hands of their conquerors, and to be laid with ignominy in the grave with others, without any mark of diſtinction; all being upon a level, caſt into the ſame pit of deſtruction, and into the lower parts of it; tho' their king might have a magnificent ſepulchre erected for him, as follows, ℣. 25. They have ſet her bed in the midſt of the ſlain, with all her multitude, &c.] The grave is called a bed, Iſ. lvii. 2. whereon is put the ſepulchral cheſt or coffin, in which the body is laid, and reſts as on a bed. It may here deſign a ſtately ſepulchre or coffin in it, with a magnificent monument over it for the king of Elam, with his army, and the generals of it ſlain in battel, placed all around him, in leſs ſtately beds, coffins and graves, as explained in the next clauſe: her graves are round about him; the king of Perſia and his grave, ſurrounded with the graves of his ſoldiers and officers: all of them uncircumciſed, ſlain by the ſword: tho' their terror was cauſed in the land of the living, yet have they borne their ſhame with them that go down to the pit; which is repeated for the confirmation of it: he is put in the midſt of them that be ſlain; the king of Elam or Perſia; he is laid among the ſlain, having fallen with them, and his grave is placed in the midſt of them.

℣. 26. There is Meſhech, Tubal, and all her multitude, &c.] The Scythians, a powerful and warlike people; and all their armies, as the Targum; with their leaders, generals and commanders, as lying in their graves next to the Aſſyrians and Elamites, or Perſians: her graves are round about him; not the king of Egypt, nor the king of Aſſyria, nor the king of Perſia; but the chief commander of the Scythians, called the chief prince of Meſhech and Tubal, ch. xxxviii. 2: all of them ſlain by the ſword; of Halyattes king of Lydia, and Cyaxares king of Media, who was aſſiſted by the former in ſubduing the Scythians: tho' they cauſed their terror in the land of the living; as they did in Media, and other countries, and eſpecially in ſome parts of Aſia.

℣. 27. And they ſhall not lie with the mighty, that are fallen of the uncircumciſed, &c.] That is, ſhall not lie in ſuch ſtate, or be buried with ſuch pomp and magnificence, and have ſuch ſepulchral monuments erected to their memory, as other heroes among the heathens have had; ſuch as the mighty kings of Aſſyria and Perſia before-mentioned: which are gone down to hell, or the grave, with their weapons of war; which were never taken from them, and which they held in their hands to the laſt, being never conquered, and died at laſt a natural death, and not by the ſword; or which were carried in ſtate before their hearſe at the time of interment, as is the cuſtom to this day ſo to do at the funeral of great warriors, generals and officers: and they have laid their ſwords under their heads; as a ſign and token, as Jarchi ſays, that the ſword did not rule over them, that they did not fall by it; either their ſtatues and ſepulchral monuments were adorned with theſe, and other inſtruments of war, as was the grave of Miſenus by Æneas[d]; and as is ſtill the cuſtom where the heads of ſuch mighty ones are laid, to engrave them on them: or literally, their ſwords and other weapons of war were put in their graves under their heads; as it was uſual in former times, in ſome places to put ſwords, ſhields and other armour in the graves of military men, as were in the grave of Theſeus, on the bier of Alexander the Great, and others, as reported by Plutarch, Diodorus Siculus, and Sophocles[e]: now the Scythians were not buried after this grand and pompous manner: but their iniquities ſhall be upon their bones; or the puniſhment of their ſin ſhould be, that their bones ſhould lie unburied and ſcattered about, or be dug up and broke to pieces, and treated with inhumanity and contempt, as a juſt reward for their ſavageneſs and cruelty: tho' they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living; not only the terror of the common people, but even of the moſt powerful kings and mighty warriors.

℣. 28. Yea, thou ſhalt be broken in the midſt of the uncircumciſed, &c.] Kimchi, and ſo others, think this is ſaid to Pharaoh king of Egypt; but rather it reſpects the prince of the Scythians, who ſhould fall into the hands of heathens, and be deſtroyed by them: and ſhalt lie with them that are ſlain with the ſword; be buried with them, or in like manner as they are; and not as mighty warriors, who die a natural death in their own country, and are buried in a ſtately and magnificent manner; but like thoſe that fall by the ſword of the enemy, and are thrown into one common pit.

℣. 29. There is Edom, her kings, and all her princes, &c.] In the next place, near the graves of the above-mentioned, and in the ſame ruinous and deſolate condition lie the famous kingdom of Idumea, and the ſeveral kings and dukes of it, from the firſt ſetting of it up, to its laſt deſtruction propheſied of, ch. xxv. 12, 13, 14. of many of which mention is made, Gen. xxxvi. 15—43: which with their might are laid by them that are ſlain with the ſword; who, notwithſtanding their powerful armies, and proweſs and ſkill in war, yet are conquered, and deſtroyed, and laid in graves in like manner as all others ſlain by the ſword of the enemy are: they ſhall lie with the uncircumciſed; for tho' they themſelves were circumciſed, being the deſcendents of Eſau the ſon of Iſaac, the ſon of Abraham, on whoſe ſeed circumciſion was enjoined; yet this did not ſecure them from a violent death, and an ignominious burial; they being uncircumciſed in heart, wicked and ungodly men, and ſo ſhould be joined in their death and burial with ſuch: and with them that go down to the pit; the common receptacle of the ſlain.

℣. 30. There be the princes of the north, &c.] The kings of Babylon, according to Kimchi, which lay north of Judea; or the princes of Syria, Damaſcus and Tyre, eſpecially the latter, which commonly goes along with Zidon, being near it, as follows: and all the Zidonians. The Vulgate Latin verſion renders it, and all the hunters; but wrongly; as alſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions, which read the princes or ſoldiers of Aſſyria. The Zidonians or inhabitants of Zidon are meant, as the Targum; a famous maritime city, as Tyre alſo was, in Phœnicia: which are gone down with the ſlain; into the grave, being conquered and deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar; ſee ch. xxviii. 21—23: with their terror they are aſhamed of their might; the number and ſtrength of their armies, the valour and courage of their ſoldiers, and the fortifications of their cities, in which they truſted, and of which they boaſted; but yet could not preſerve them from ruin: and they lie uncircumciſed with them that be ſlain by the ſword; in common with other profane and wicked perſons that have fallen by the ſword as they have done: and bear their ſhame with them that go down to the pit; ſee the note on ℣. 24.

℣. 31. Pharaoh ſhall ſee them, and ſhall be comforted over his multitude, &c.] That is, when Pharaoh is brought to the grave, and into the ſtate of the dead, he ſhall look about him, and ſee who lie by him; and he ſhall behold the above mentioned kings of Aſſyria, Perſia, Idumea, and the princes of Tyre and Zidon, and all their mighty armies, generals and ſoldiers in the ſame condition with himſelf; and this ſhall be ſome ſolace to him in his own death, and at the loſs of ſo great a kingdom, ſuch numerous ſubjects, and a vaſt army, that others as rich, as powerful as himſelf, lie in the ſame low and miſerable condition; tho' ſuch comfort as this muſt be poor comfort indeed! and yet this is all the comfort wicked men have in hell, that they have company with them there: even Pharaoh and all his army ſlain by the ſword. Pharaoh-hophra and his numerous army ſlain by the ſword of the king of Babylon. This explains who is meant by Pharaoh and his multitude: and that this would certainly be his caſe, it is added, ſaith the Lord God; he hath ſpoken it, and it ſhall be done; whoſe words are continued in the next verſe.

---

[d] Vid. Virgil. Æneid. l. 6. & Seneca, l. 4. controverſ. 4. & Kirchman. de funer. Roman. l. 3. c. 18.

[e] Vid. Lydium de re militare, l. 6. c. 7. p. 250, 251.

℣. 32. For I have cauſed my terror in the land of the living, &c.] Or, his terror [f]; there is a double reading. The Keri or marginal reading, which we follow, has it, my terror [g]; but the Cetib or writing is, his terror; and ſo read the Septuagint, Syriac and Arabic verſions; both may be taken, and the ſenſe be, I have cauſed or ſuffered him Pharaoh king of Egypt to be a terror to the nations about him, particularly to the land of Iſrael, which the Targum expreſsly mentions, as the land of the living; and now I'll terrify him who has terrified others: and he ſhall be laid in the midſt of the uncircumciſed, with thoſe that are ſlain with the ſword; ſhall have a common burial with other heathen nations; even with ſuch, who, in a way of judgment, have periſhed by the ſword of their victorious enemies, as he will: even Pharaoh and all his multitude, ſaith the Lord God; the king of Egypt, his ſubjects, and his ſoldiers, as numerous as they are; and thus ends this doleful ditty, and funeral dirge or lamentation, compoſed, taken up, and ſung for Pharaoh as ordered, thereby to aſſure him of his certain deſtruction.

CHAP. XXXIII

THIS chapter treats of the prophet's duty, and the peoples ſins; contains a vindication of the juſtice of God; a threatning of deſtruction to thoſe who remained in the land after the taking of the city; and a detection of the hypocriſy of the prophet's hearers. The duty of a watchman in general is declared, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, an application of this to the prophet, ℣. 7. the ſum of whoſe buſineſs is to warn the wicked man of his wickedneſs; and the conſequence of doing, or not doing it, is expreſſed, ℣. 8, 9. an objection of the people, and the prophet's anſwer to it, ℣. 10, 11. who is bid to acquaint them, that a righteous man truſting to his righteouſneſs, and ſinning, ſhould not live; and that a ſinner repenting of his ſins, ſhould not die, ℣. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. the peoples charge of inequality in the ways of God is retorted upon them, and removed from the Lord, and proved againſt them, ℣. 17, 18, 19, 20. then follows a prophecy, delivered out after the news was brought of the taking of the city, threatning with ruin thoſe that remained in the land, confident of ſafety, and that for their ſins, which are particularly enumerated, ℣. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29. and the chapter is cloſed with a diſcovery of the hypocriſy of thoſe that attended the prophet's miniſtry, ℣. 30, 31, 32, 33.

℣. 1. Again, the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] After the delivery of various prophecies concerning the ruin of other nations, the Ammonites, Tyrians and Egyptians; a freſh prophecy comes from the Lord concerning the Jews: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 2. Son of man, ſpeak to the children of thy people, &c.] The Jews, of whom the prophet was; and deſigns thoſe who were with him in the captivity; and who, having behaved ſo ill, the Lord will not own them for his people, but calls them the prophet's people, and the children of them: and ſay unto them, when I bring the ſword upon a land; a foreign enemy with an army to invade it, or any other judgment; for there is no public calamity whatever that comes upon a people, but what is by the order, direction or permiſſion of the Lord. The Targum is, "thoſe that kill with the ſword;" an army of men that enter into a land ſword in hand, with an intent to conquer and deſtroy: if the people of the land take a man of their coaſts; that lives upon their borders, and ſo is acquainted with all the places where it is moſt likely an enemy ſhould enter; or a man out of the midſt of them, as the Targum; ſo this phraſe ſometimes ſignifies, Gen. xlvii. 2. one of their own people, who might be thought to have their good and ſafety at heart, and might be truſted: and ſet him for their watchman; on ſome place of eminence; on the walls, or in a tower of a frontier town, from whence he might deſcry the enemy coming at a diſtance.

℣. 3. If when he ſeeth the ſword come upon the land, &c.] Or thoſe that kill with the ſword, as the Targum; as ſoon as he obſerves a body of armed men, more or leſs, marching towards the borders of the land with a manifeſt intention to enter and invade it: he blow the trumpet, and warn the people; warn the people by blowing the trumpet, the ſignal agreed on; by which they would underſtand that an enemy was at hand, or danger near; or warn them by word of mouth, as well as by the trumpet, where he could do it, and when it was neceſſary.

℣. 4. Then whoſoever heareth the ſound of the trumpet, and taketh no warning, &c.] Does not mind the notice given him; is incredulous of the danger he is in, or negligent of providing for his ſafety; fanſies 'tis an alarm, and nothing elſe; and imagines there's no real danger, or what is a mere trifle; or that the enemy is at a great diſtance, and it is time enough to provide for his defence: if the ſword come and take him away; thoſe that kill with the ſword, as the Targum, come ſuddenly on him, and take away his life, or carry him captive: his blood ſhall be upon his own head; the guilt of his ſlaughter, as the Targum; the ſin will be his own; it muſt be brought in wilful murder; no blame can be laid upon any, but himſelf; the watchman will be clear.

℣. 5.

---

[f] חתיתו terrorem ejus, Grotius; conſternationem ejus, Starckius. Munſter, Tigurine verſion, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[g] חתיתי terrorem meum, Pagninus,

℣. 5. He heard the ſound of the trumpet, &c.] The alarm of the enemy being at hand, and ſo was inexcuſable: and took not warning; which that gave him: his blood ſhall be upon him; the fault ſhall be imputed to himſelf, and not another; and he muſt bear it himſelf, and anſwer for it, and not the watchman: but he that taketh warning, ſhall deliver his ſoul; who, hearing the ſound of the trumpet, prepares for his own defence, and provides for his ſafety, he ſhall ſave his life, and not fall into the enemies hands.

℣. 6. But if the watchman ſee the ſword come, &c.] Or thoſe that kill with the ſword, as the Targum is; ſo far doing the duty of his office, as to be in the watch-tower, and not aſleep: and yet blow not the trumpet; to give the people notice of the enemy, and of their danger: and the people be not warned; but in the utmoſt ſecurity, not apprehending themſelves to be in any danger at all: if the ſword come and take any perſon from among them; even tho' but a ſingle perſon: he is taken away in his iniquity; having had no time to have it ſet before him, and to be convinced, and to repent of it, and ſeek for pardoning mercy for it; it is a dreadful thing thus to be taken out of the world, and ſnatched into hell at once: but his blood will I require at the watchman's hands; he ſhall be puniſhed for not doing his duty, for not giving the due warning of danger, on which account the man was ſurpriſed with the enemy, and taken away unawares; and therefore his death ſhall be laid to the watchman, and he muſt be anſwerable for it.

℣. 7. So thou, O ſon of man, &c.] Here begins the application of the parable to the prophet himſelf, deſcribing his office and his duty: I have ſet thee a watchman unto the houſe of Iſrael; which is repeated from ch. iii. 17. ſee the note there. The Targum is, "I have appointed thee a teacher;" a ſpiritual watchman; ſo paſtors, teachers, miniſters of the goſpel, are watchmen, 2 Tim. iv. 5. Heb. xiii. 17: therefore thou ſhalt hear the word from my mouth, and warn them from me. The Targum is, "thou ſhalt receive the word from my Word, and "warn them from ſinning before me."

℣. 8. When I ſay unto the wicked, O wicked man, &c.] Order the prophet to ſay ſo to him, and as follows; ſee the note on ch. iii. 18.

℣. 9. Nevertheleſs, if thou warn the wicked of his way, &c.] See the note on ch. iii. 19.

℣. 10. Therefore, O thou ſon of man, ſpeak unto the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] Such of them as were with him in the captivity: thus ye ſpeak, ſaying; reaſoning and arguing within and among themſelves; which the Lord heard, and made known to the prophet, who is bid to repeat it to them in order to give an anſwer: if our tranſgreſſions and our ſins be upon us, and we pine away in them; as the prophet ſaid they ſhould, ch. xxiv. 23. with which he had concluded his prophecies to them; and now they take it up, and argue againſt themſelves, and againſt him; if our ſins and tranſgreſſions are laid upon us, and we muſt anſwer for them; if the guilt of them is charged on us, and they are un-expiated and un-atoned for; and the puniſhment of them is, or will be inflicted on us, and we do, and muſt pine away, and be conſumed in them, and by them: how ſhould we then live? as thou promiſeſt us upon repentance; it is all over with us; there is no hope for us; what ſignify our repentance, or thy promiſes of life unto us; theſe things can never hang together, that we ſhould live, and yet pine away in our ſins; ſo that theſe are the words of perſons both deſpairing, and making the prophet to ſay things oppoſite and contradictory, and which would not admit of a reconciliation; ſee ch. xxxvii. 11.

℣. 11. Say unto them, as I live, ſaith the Lord, &c.] The following is the anſwer returned from the Lord by the prophet to their above complaint and reaſoning; to which is premiſed the oath of God, ſhewing the certainty, reality and ſincerity of what is ſaid, which might be depended on as true: I have no pleaſure in the death of the wicked, &c. ſee the notes on ch. xviii. 23, 31, 32.

℣. 12. Therefore thou ſon of man, ſay unto the children of thy people, &c.] See the note on ℣. 2. The purport of what the prophet is bid to ſay in this and ſome following verſes is, that the righteouſneſs of a man that truſts in it, he ſinning and not repenting, ſhall not ſave him; and that the wickedneſs of a repenting ſinner ſhall not damn him: the righteouſneſs of the righteous ſhall not deliver him in the day of his tranſgreſſion; this muſt be underſtood, not of a truly righteous man, or of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, by which ſuch a one is made ſo; for that righteouſneſs does deliver thoſe to whom it is imputed, from ſin, and the condemnation of it, even in the day of his tranſgreſſion, which is every day of his life; for there is not a juſt man that does good, and ſinneth not; and in the day when his ſin is ſhown him, and he is convinced of it, this removes the guilt of it; and in the day it will be ſought for, or he may be charged with it, and when the ſins of others will be brought to an account, the righteouſneſs by which he is juſtified will deliver him from avenging juſtice; from the curſe of the law; from the wrath of God; from eternal death, and everlaſting damnation: but this is to be interpreted of one that is not truly righteous, and of a man's own righteouſneſs; and which he truſts to, as is afterwards expreſſed, and may and does turn from: this can never deliver a man in the day of his tranſgreſſion from the guilt and condemnation of it; for a man's own righteouſneſs is but what he ought to do; and was it ever ſo perfect, yet ſhould he commit one ſingle ſin, it would not juſtify him from it, or deliver him from the curſe of the law, and wrath of God due unto it: as for the wickedneſs of the wicked, he ſhall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedneſs; when he is truly convinced of his ſin, and the evil of it; is heartily ſorry for it, after a godly ſort; ingenuouſly confeſſes it, and departs from it; applies to Chriſt, to his blood and righteouſneſs, for pardon and acceptance; tho' his wickedneſs has been ever ſo great, or attended with ever ſuch aggravating circumſtances, yet it ſhall not damn him; or he ſhall not fall by it into hell and everlaſting perdition; but ſhall be ſaved in the Lord with an everlaſting ſalvation: neither ſhall the righteous be able to live for his righteouſneſs, in the day that he ſinneth; he can't live by it, nor for it; as it can't juſtify him, it can't ſave him, or bring him to heaven, or entitle him to eternal life; he is not able to live comfortably now; when his ſin is charged upon him, his righteouſneſs will not relieve him; and much leſs will he be able to live happily hereafter; he muſt and will die in his ſins, being found in them, for any thing his own righteouſneſs can do for him: this is the ſame with the former clauſe, and is repeated in different words for the confirmation of it; ſelf-righteous perſons not being eaſily convinced of the truth of theſe things.

ỿ. 13. When I ſhall ſay to the righteous, that he ſhall ſurely live, &c.] A happy life, here and hereafter; an eternal life, and not die the ſecond death: this muſt be underſtood, ſhould he appear a truly righteous perſon; one that does not truſt to his own righteouſneſs, but to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and lives by faith on that; looking for the hope of righteouſneſs thro' it, and behaving agreeable to his character: but if he truſt to his own righteouſneſs, and commit iniquity; as he will by truſting to it; if he truſts to it for acceptance with God, and juſtification in his ſight, and thinks himſelf proof againſt all temptation to ſin on account of it; and that he has righteouſneſs enough to make amends for ſins committed, or for other ſins he may commit; and which he may venture upon thro' this falſe notion, and ſo be led on to an open courſe of ſinning, and ſeries of committing iniquity: all his righteouſneſs ſhall not be remembered; God will take no notice of it; it ſhall be of no avail to juſtify him from ſin, and ſecure him from wrath; it will be as if it never had been: but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he ſhall die for it; an eternal death, which is the juſt wages of ſin; from which a man's own righteouſneſs can never deliver him, tho' the righteouſneſs of Chriſt does deliver from it; ſee Prov. x. 2. and xi. 4.

ỿ. 14. Again, when I ſay unto the wicked, thou ſhalt ſurely die, &c.] That is, provided he continues in the ſame courſe of life, impenitent and unbelieving: but if he turn from his ſin; repent of it, and forſake it: and do that which is lawful and right; or judgment and juſtice; do that which is agreeable to the law of God, and what is right between man and man; lives ſoberly, righteouſly and godly, as well as denies ungodlineſs and worldly luſts; whereby it appears that his repentance is genuine and true.

ỿ. 15. If the wicked reſtore the pledge, &c.] His neighbours raiment, which he has taken as a pledge for money lent him; and which, according to the law, was to be reſtored before ſun-ſet, Exod. xxii. 25, 26, 27. which wicked men did not attend unto; but when ſuch a man is brought to a ſenſe of his wickedneſs, and repentance for it, as an evidence of it he would reſtore the pledge: and give again that he had robbed; to him whom he had robbed; as a thief was obliged to do, four or five-fold, according to the law, Exod. xxii. 1. and which, when a man did voluntarily, from the convictions of his own mind, and not by force of the civil magiſtrate, it was a ſign of true repentance; ſee Luke xix. 8: and walk in the ſtatutes of life; the rule of life and converſation, and to the keeping of which the promiſe of long life is annexed; and which preſerve perſons from dying a ſhameful death by the hand of the civil magiſtrate; ſtatutes, which, if a man do, he ſhall live in them; ſee ch. xx. 11: without committing iniquity; not living entirely without ſin, which the beſt of men do not; but without committing groſſer ſins, as before; and without making a trade of ſinning, and living in it: he ſhall ſurely live, he ſhall not die; he ſhall live comfortably now, and happily hereafter; he ſhall live a ſpiritual life, and not die the ſecond death.

ỿ. 16. None of his ſins that he hath committed ſhall be mentioned unto him, &c.] Imputed to him; placed to his account; charged upon him, or ever be ſpoke of to him, either now, or at the day of judgment, by way of accuſation and complaint, or to his condemnation: he hath done that which is lawful and right; has repented of his ſin; looked to Chriſt by faith for the pardon of it; and laid hold on his righteouſneſs for his juſtification; and being influenced and aſſiſted by the grace of God, has done that which is right and good in the ſight of God and man: he ſhall ſurely live; he now lives a life of faith and holineſs; he ſhall continue to live, and perſevere to the end, and inherit eternal life; ſee ch. xviii. 21, 22.

ỿ. 17. Yet the children of thy people ſay, &c.] Not my people; for ſurely the children of God could never ſay what follows; and one would think, that even no man could ſay it, after ſo much had been ſaid by the Lord concerning the righteous and the wicked, and his dealings with them, which muſt appear to be juſt and right, good and gracious; and yet ſuch were the atheiſm, the perverſeneſs and peeviſhneſs of theſe people, they went on to ſay as they had done before: the way of the Lord is not equal; is not according to the rules of juſtice and equity. The Targum is, "the ways of the "goodneſs of the Lord are not made plain (or "expoſed) unto us." The anſwer to which is, but as for them, their way is not equal; according to the rule of the divine word; as for God, his way and methods, both of providence and grace, were right and good; ſee the note on ch. xviii. 25.

ỿ. 18. When the righteous turneth from his righteouſneſs, &c.] This and what is ſaid in the following verſe are clear inſtances of the equality, juſtneſs and goodneſs of the ways of God; and are again repeated, if poſſible, to make it clear and plain to them, that their charge and complaint were groundleſs; ſee the notes on ch. xviii. 24, 26.

ỿ. 19. But if the wicked turn from his wickedneſs, &c.] See the note on ch. xviii. 27.

ỿ. 20. Yet ye ſay, the way of the Lord is not equal, &c.] Still obſtinately perſiſting in their falſe charges, notwithſtanding plain proofs to the contrary: O ye houſe of Iſrael, I will judge you every one after his ways; ſee the note on ch. xviii. 30.

ỿ. 21. And it came to paſs in the twelfth year of our captivity, &c.] Of Jeconiah's captivity, when Ezekiel with others were carried into Babylon; ſee ch. i. 2: in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month; which was a year, four months, and ſome days after the city of Jeruſalem was taken; for that was deſtroyed in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, and ſo of the captivity, and in the fifth month and tenth day of the month, 2 Kings xxv. 2. Jer. lii. 12. It is much it was not known at Babylon before; tho' ſo it might, and yet not one that eſcaped came to Ezekiel ſooner to give him an account of it, which he had ſeen with his eyes. The Syriac verſion reads it, in the eleventh year; and ſo makes it but a few months after the deſtruction; and it may be obſerved, that it is promiſed by the Lord, ch. xxiv. 26. that on the day the city was taken, one ſhould eſcape, and bring the prophet the news; that is, directly, immediately, in a very ſhort time, as ſoon as it was poſſible that he could arrive to him; and yet, as taken notice, here were a year and almoſt five months before he reached him, which ſeems pretty ſtrange. The difficulty may be ſolved in this manner: Ezekiel reckons from the captivity of Jeconiah, which began in the month Ciſleu; and the computation in 2 Kings xxv. 2. Jer. lii. 12. is from Zede- diah's reign, which is to be reckoned from the month Niſan, and from the firſt Niſan of his reign; for it is a rule with the Jews [h], that the beginning of the year for kings is the firſt of Niſan; ſo that the tenth month from the captivity is the ſixth from Niſan; whence it appears, there was not a full month from the city being burnt, to the news being brought to Ezekiel; which was time ſhort enough in ſuch a troubleſome ſeaſon, to take a journey from Jeruſalem to Babylon; for Zedekiah not being crowned before the Niſan following the captivity, the computation of his reign did not begin till that Niſan, which makes this difference in the chronology. According to biſhop Uſher [i], this meſſenger came to Ezekiel the 25th of January, the fourth day of the week (Wedneſday), in the year of the Julian period 4127, and before Chriſt 587: that one that had eſcaped out of Jeruſalem, came unto me; as it was foretold and promiſed he ſhould, ch. xxiv. 26: ſaying, the city is ſmitten; the city of Jeruſalem; the walls were broken down, the houſes burnt, and the whole deſtroyed.

kiah's

℣. 22. Now the hand of the Lord was upon me in the evening, afore he that was eſcaped came, &c.] The prophet felt a divine impulſe on his mind; he was under the influence of a ſpirit of prophecy, and knew before the meſſenger came to him what his meſſage was, and was prepared to receive it, and to propheſy upon it; for this is to be underſtood of prophecy, as the Targum, "prophecy "from before the Lord was with me in the even"ing[k];" ſee Iſ. viii. 11: and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; the hand of the Lord, or the power of the Lord had done it, as he promiſed he would, ch. iii. 27. ſo that he ſpoke freely and boldly, and continued to do ſo from the evening to the time the meſſenger came to him in the morning, to all thoſe that were with him: and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb; as he had been for three years paſt; for tho' he had been propheſying againſt ſeveral nations, yet theſe prophecies were not delivered, 'tis very likely, by word of mouth, but by writing, and ſent into thoſe countries by proper meſſengers; but now the prophet's mouth is opened by the Spirit of God, as it was ſaid it ſhould, when this meſſenger ſhould come to him, ch. xxiv. 27. and from this time he was not ſilent, but propheſied to his people, the Jews, verbally, as he was bid to do by the Lord.

℣. 23. Then the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] After the meſſenger had delivered his meſſage, and he had received it, and converſed with him about it: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 24. Son of man, they that inhabit thoſe waſtes of the land of Iſrael, &c.] The places which were laid waſte by Nebuchadnezzar's army, going and returning, in and about Jeruſalem, and in ſeveral parts of Judea; theſe were they that were left in the land after the deſtruction, to people and plant it; or who, having fled to diſtant parts, were now returned, and took poſſeſſion of it, tho' it was in a wretched condition, a mere waſte or deſert; and yet they were lifted up with it, and proud and haughty, as their language ſhews: for thus they ſpeak, ſaying, Abraham was one, and he inherited the land; he was but one, and had no child, when the promiſe of inheriting the land was made unto him; and he was but a ſingle worſhipper of God, and yet he had this favour and privilege: but we are many, the land is given us for inheritance; ſo they oppoſe themſelves to Abraham, and argue from the leſſer to the greater; that if a ſingle perſon was vouchſafed to inherit it, then much more many, and thoſe of his ſeed; and to whom the land was particularly given for an inheritance, and who were now in the poſſeſſion of it, as Abraham never was; and being many, were able to defend their right, and ſecure themſelves in the enjoyment of it; all which reaſoning ſhows their pride and vanity, tho' they were under ſuch humbling circumſtances; their land being waſte, their numbers leſſened, and the enemy had but juſt quitted it, having made dreadful devaſtations in it; and which had had no influence upon them to reform them, or bring them to repentance, as the following verſes ſhew.

℣. 25. Wherefore ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Send them this meſſage in writing as from the Lord; for the prophet was now in Chaldea, and could not deliver it by word of mouth to thoſe that inhabited the waſtes of Iſrael; but he could tell it to the meſſenger that came to him, who had eſcaped from Jeruſalem; or ſend it by him, or ſome other: ye eat with the blood; or rather upon, or by the blood [l]; contrary to the law in Lev. xix. 26. which is a different law from that in Gen. ix. 4. and from that in Lev. iii. 17. and vii. 26, 27. and refers to an idolatrous practice of the heathens, which theſe Jews imitated; who, having ſlain and offered their ſacrifices to devils, ſat down round about the blood of them, and ate their food, or part of their ſacrifice by it, as Kimchi on the text obſerves. The account Maimonides [m] gives of the Zabians is this, "you muſt know "(ſays he) that the blood is reckoned very unclean "and impure by the Zabians, yet is ate by them, "becauſe they think it is the food of devils; and "that he that eats it by this means, obtains ſome "communications with them; ſo that they con"verſe familiarly with him, and reveal things fu"ture to him, which the vulgar commonly attri"bute to devils: notwithſtanding there were ſome "among them, with whom it ſeemed very griev"ous and difficult to eat blood (for it is a thing "which the nature of man abhors); theſe uſed "to ſlay ſome beaſt, and take its blood, and put "it in a veſſel, or in a hole dug in the earth, and "eat the ſlain beaſt, ſitting in a circle about the "blood; imagining to themſelves in ſo doing, "whilſt they ate the fleſh, the devils ate the blood, "and that this is their food; and by this means, "friendſhip, fraternity and familiarity were con"tracted between them, becauſe they all ate at "one table, and ſat on one ſeat; beſides, they "were of opinion, that the devils appeared to "them in dreams, and told them things to come, "and were of much advantage to them;" and accordingly it follows: and lift up your eyes towards your idols; make your devotion, and pray unto them, and worſhip them, and expect help and aſſiſtance from them: and ſhed blood; innocent blood, as the Targum; they were guilty of murder, as well as of idolatry, or ſhedding of blood, in ſacrifice to idols: and ſhall ye poſſeſs the land? can ſuch wretches as you, ſuch groſs idolaters and murderers, ever think that you are the children of Abraham, and have a right to the inheritance of this land, or ſhall long continue in the poſſeſſion of it, living in ſuch abominable iniquities as theſe?

---

[h] Miſn. Roſh-haſhanah, c. 1. §. 1.

[i] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3417.

[k] So R. Sol. Urbin, Ohel Moed, fol. 54. 2.

[l] על הדם ſuper ſanguinem, Munſter, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius; juxta ſanguinem, ſo ſome in Vatablus.

[m] More Nevochim, Par. 3. c. 46. p. 484.

℣. 26. Ye ſtand upon your ſword, &c.] You truſt in it, and think to ſupport yourſelves by it, and ſecure your poſſeſſion and right of it by that means. So the Targum, "you ſtand in your "ſtrength:" ye work abomination; that which is abominable to God, and not fit to be named among men; Jarchi interprets it of ſodomy: the word is in the feminine gender, and may be rendered, ye women work abomination; referring to that unnatural luſt the apoſtle ſpeaks of, Rom. i. 26. ſo Ben Melech: and ye defile every one his neighbour's wife; were guilty of adultery; and which was ſo common, that ſcarce any were free from it, and therefore is charged upon the whole body of them: and ſhall ye poſſeſs the land? ſuch vile creatures as theſe, guilty of the abominations for which the land formerly ſpewed out its ancient inhabitants, the Canaanites; and the preſent poſſeſſors might expect the ſame, as being very unworthy inheritors of it, whatever high thoughts they might have of themſelves.

℣. 27. Say thou thus unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Send or write unto them in the name of the Lord, after this manner, as I live, which is the form of an oath; the Lord ſwears by himſelf, his life, becauſe he could ſwear by no greater, and for the confirmation of what follows: ſurely they that are in the waſtes ſhall fall by the ſword; by their own ſword, falling out one with another; or by the ſword of Iſhmael, Jer. xli. 2, 3. or by the ſword of the Chaldeans, who revenged the death of Gedaliah and others; even ſuch who dwelt amidſt the ruins of the city of Jeruſalem, and other places, that were become deſolate thro' the ravages of the enemy: and him that is in the open field will I give to the beaſts to be devoured; of which it may be ſuppoſed there were the greater numbers, ſince the land was ſo depopulated: and they that be in the forts, and in the caves, ſhall die of the peſtilence; ſuch as were in fortified cities, or in caverns of the earth, dug in rocks and mountains, where, in neither of them, men and beaſts could eaſily come at them; here the Lord would ſend his arrow, the plague, that flies by day, and reach them, and deſtroy them; none can eſcape his hands; theſe are three of the Lord's ſore judgments, the ſword, peſtilence, and noiſome beaſts.

℣. 28. For I will lay the land moſt deſolate, &c.] Or, deſolation and deſolation[n]; one deſolating judgment ſhall follow upon another, until it is completely deſolate; it was very deſolate already, thro' the ravages of the Chaldean army; but it ſhould become more ſo, thro' other judgments here threatned them: and the pomp of her ſtrength ſhall ceaſe; ſome underſtand this of the temple, which was the moſt pompous building in the land, and in which they placed their ſtrength and confidence; but this was deſtroyed already: it is rather to be interpreted of whatſoever riches, power, and glory were yet remaining, which ſhould be removed: and the mountains of Iſrael ſhall be deſolate; which uſed to abound with vines and olives, with flocks and paſtures: that none ſhall paſs through; not only there ſhould be no inhabitant, but no traveller in it, or very few, becauſe of the ſword in one part, the peſtilence in another, and wild beaſts in other places, and a general barrenneſs and unfruitfulneſs; ſo that a traveller would be both in great danger, and in want of proviſions to ſupply himſelf and cattel.

℣. 29. Then ſhall they know that I am the Lord, &c.] An omniſcient being, that could foreſee and foretel what would come to paſs; and omnipotent, able to do whatever he pleaſed, and true and faithful to his word; and a ſovereign Lord, whoſe will cannot be reſiſted; this they ſhould ſee, own, and acknowledge: when I have laid the land moſt deſolate, becauſe of all their abominations which they have committed; for though he is a ſovereign Lord, yet he does not execute his judgments in an arbitrary way, merely becauſe it is his will, but becauſe of the abominable ſins committed by men, which provoke the eyes of his glory.

℣. 30. Alſo thou ſon of man, &c.] I have ſomething to ſay to thee, and inform thee of, not only concerning the Jews in Judea, what they ſay, and what will befal them; but concerning thoſe that are with thee, and what they ſay of thee, and what will be the iſſue of it: the children of thy people ſtill are talking againſt thee; not the Lord's people, but his own people, which was the more cutting to him to hear of, and the more ungrateful in them; tho' indeed they were but children, who acted a weak part, and the leſs to be regarded; theſe ſpake againſt the prophet: they could not ſay he was no prophet, he had his credentials and commiſſion from the Lord, which were well known, and many of his prophecies had been fulfilled; they could not ſpeak againſt his doctrine, which was of God; nor againſt his converſation, which was agreeable to his character and office; but they ſaid ſome things in a ludicrous and jocoſe manner, in a ſlighting and contemptuous way, as ſhewed they had little reverence and reſpect for him, and were careleſs and indifferent about hearing him; at leaſt had little regard to his matter, or the ſubject of his miniſtry, which they had no great value for: and this they did ſtill; they had been long at it; it was their common talk and conſtant buſineſs, tho' the prophet knew nothing of it, and thought they had the greateſt reſpect for him, ſpeaking fair to his face, and behaving with decency towards him; but the Lord knew it, and reſented it, and informs him of it: and this they did continually, from time to time, by the walls, and in the doors of the houſes; privately and ſecretly; by the walls, where they uſed to get together and ſun themſelves, and paſs away their time, by talking againſt the prophet; and when they did, would place themſelves againſt the walls, that no body might over-hear them; and they would ſometimes ſtand in the porches of their houſes, and as their neighbours and acquaintance paſſed by, would call them in, and hold a chat about the prophet; and jeer and laugh at him, and what he had ſaid: and ſpeak one to another, every man to his brother, ſaying, come, I pray you, and hear, what is the word that cometh forth from the Lord; let us go and amuſe ourſelves for an hour or two, with what the prophet ſays; perhaps we ſhall hear ſome new thing, which may be pleaſing and diverting: for, not their ſpiritual profit did they ſeek, but to have their ears tickled, and their fancies pleaſed.

℣. 31. And they come unto thee as the people cometh, &c.] As the people of God, who came to the prophet's houſe to hear him preach the word, and explain it for their ſpiritual profit and edification; theſe came when they did, and as early and conſtantly, and with ſeeming pleaſure: and they ſit before thee as my people; with great decency and reverence, and very gravely and demurely, and with ſeeming devotion, and ſtay the time out till the whole ſervice is over; as ſcholars ſit at the feet of their maſters, to hear and learn their doctrines. So the Targum, “and they come unto thee as the men “the diſciples come:” and they hear thy words, but they will not do them; they gave him the hearing, and ſeemed attentive, but did not underſtand what they heard, at leaſt did not put it in practice; they were only hearers, and not doers of the word, and like to the fooliſh man in Matt. vii. 26, 27: for with their mouth they ſhew much love; by the motions of their lips whilſt hearing, and other geſtures, as well as by what they ſaid afterwards, they ſeemed pleaſed and delighted with what they heard; made large encomiums upon it, and ſpoke much in the praiſe of the preacher. The Targum is the reverſe, “they made game with their mouth.” But their heart goeth after their covetouſneſs; “after “the money they had taken away by force,” as the Targum; after the world, and the things of it; after their ſecular affairs, ſo that they wiſhed the ſermon over, that they might be at them; or however, did not ſo diligently attend to what was ſaid, but the cares of the world choked the word, and made it unfruitful to them; theſe were like the ſeed that fell among thorns, the thorny ground-hearers, Matt. xiii. 22. ſee Amos viii. 5.

---

[n] שממה ומשמה deſolationem & ſolitudinem, Montanus; vaſtitatem & ſolitudinem, Starckius.

℣. 32. And lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely ſong of one that hath a pleaſant voice, &c.] Whoſe voice, and the muſic of it, are regarded, and not the matter of the ſong, but the manner in which it is ſung; ſo theſe people did not ſo much attend to what the prophet ſaid, as the manner of his delivery; they were delighted with the harmony of his voice, the eloquence of his ſpeech, the propriety of his expreſſions, the eloquence and aptneſs of his diction, and the cadency of his words, and not with the excellent doctrines he delivered; they were affected and pleaſed no otherwiſe, than if they had been at a conſort of muſic; or had been entertained by one that underſtood not only vocal muſic, but could play well on an inſtrument at the ſame time, and make both agree together; which yields much pleaſure to lovers of muſic. The goſpel is a lovely ſong indeed; a ſong of loves[o], as it may be rendered; of the love of God, and of the love of Chriſt; and the voice of a goſpel-miniſter is a pleaſant charming voice to thoſe that underſtand it, but to others it is a voice, and nothing elſe; they may be delighted with his accents, but not with his matter: for they hear thy words, but they do them not; which is repeated, that it might be obſerved.

℣. 33. And when this cometh to paſs, &c.] The prophecy before delivered out, concerning the deſolations in the land of Iſrael, by the ſword, peſtilence, and wild beaſts: lo it will come; whatever is predicted by the Lord, in the mouth of his prophets, certainly comes to paſs: then ſhall they know, that a prophet hath been among them; and acknowledge it; and particularly that Ezekiel was one, a true prophet of the Lord, by the exact accompliſhment of his predictions.

CHAP. XXXIV.

IN the former chapter the prophet propheſies againſt the people of the Jews, both thoſe of the captivity, and thoſe who were not; and here againſt the ſhepherds of Iſrael. This he is bid to do, ℣. 1, 2. whoſe cruelty to the flock, negligence and unfaithfulneſs, are expoſed, ℣. 3, 4, 5, 6. for which reaſons they are threatened to be deprived of their office, ℣. 7, 8, 9, 10. and the Lord promiſes to take the care of the flock upon himſelf, to ſeek out his ſheep, and feed them, and do every kind office to them, ℣. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. and then the ſtrong of the flock, that oppreſſed the weak, are threatened with puniſhment, ℣. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. and the promiſe of the Meſſiah, as the ſhepherd of the flock, is made, under whom all proſperity and happineſs might be expected, ℣. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31.

℣. 1. The word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] The date of this prophecy is not given, however, it ſeems to have been delivered after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; the cauſes of which are mentioned, the ſins of the people and their governors, which the prophet is directed to expoſe: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 2. Son of man, propheſy againſt the ſhepherds of Iſrael, &c.] Or, concerning[p] them; the governors of them, as the Targum and Jarchi; their political governors, their kings, princes, and civil magiſtrates of every order and degree; ſo Kimchi interprets it of kings; and it was common with the eaſtern nations, and with the Greeks, to call kings ſhepherds; and one and the ſame word, in the Greek language, ſignifies to feed ſheep, and to govern people; ſee Pſ. lxxviii. 72. Iſ. xliv. 28. alſo their eccleſiaſtical governors are intended, prophets, prieſts, Levites, ſcribes and phariſees; theſe were bad ſhepherds, or they would not have been propheſied againſt; and tho' they were ſhepherds of Iſrael, this muſt be done: propheſy, and ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God unto the ſhepherds; that the meſſage to them might be the more regarded, it is ordered to be delivered in the name of the Lord; otherwiſe they would have been apt to have deſpiſed it, and charged the prophet with impertinence and rudeneſs: wo be to the ſhepherds of Iſrael, that do feed themſelves; that is, themſelves only, and not the flock: had they fed the flock, as well as themſelves, they would not have been blamed; but they took no care of the people over whom they were ſet; only minded their own affairs, to get riches and honour, but neglected the good of the people, yea cruelly oppreſſed them: ſhould not the ſhepherds feed the flocks? undoubtedly they ſhould; it is their duty, the buſineſs of their office ſo to do; kings to rule over their ſubjects, defend their perſons and property, and ſecure their privileges and liberties to them; and eccleſiaſtical rulers, miniſters of the word, ſhould feed the flock or church of God committed to them, with knowledge and underſtanding; ſee Jer. iii. 15. John xxi. 15, 16. Acts xx. 28.

℣. 3. Ye eat the fat, &c.] The Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Arabic verſions render it, the milk;

---

[o] כשיר עגבים ſicut canticum amorum, Vatablus. Pagninus, Montanus.

[p] על רועי de paſtoribus, V. L. Grotius; ſuper paſtores, the words for fat and milk differ only in the points; and this was not unlawful, for who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? 1 Cor. ix. 7. provided it was done with moderation, that they eat ſome, but not all; but theſe rulers milked their ſubjects too much, oppreſſed them with heavy taxes, and got their ſubſtance into their own hands. The Targum is, "ye eat the good;" they got poſſeſſed of the beſt of their ſubſtance; as did alſo their eccleſiaſtical rulers, who were greedy ſhepherds, that could never have enough; they looked for their gain from their quarter, and even devoured widows houſes, Iſ. lvi. 11. Matt. xxiii. 14: ye clothe you with the wool; the pure wool, as the Targum, the fineſt of it; they fleeced the flock, and ſtripped the people of their riches, and minded nothing but their own backs and bellies: ye kill them that are fed; or, that are fat [q]; the richeſt of the people they brought accuſations and charges againſt for capital crimes; and ſo put them to death under a colour of juſtice, that they might get their eſtates into their hands: but ye feed not the flock; did not govern the people well, by doing juſtice and judgment among men, as became civil magiſtrates; did not deliver out the words of faith and ſound doctrine, to feed the ſouls of men with, which is the duty of thoſe that preſide in the church of God.

℣. 4. The diſeaſed have ye not ſtrengthened, &c.] Such in the civil polity, who were poor, and in neceſſitous circumſtances, were not relieved; ſuch who were injured and oppreſſed by others, were not vindicated; and ſuch as were forced to flee to other countries, or were carried captive, no care was taken, or methods uſed, to ranſom them, and bring them back; all which may be meant by this and the following metaphors, taken from the evil things that befal a flock of ſheep: and ſuch who were weak thro' ſpiritual diſeaſes, their prophets and teachers took no care to cure them of their diſeaſes, and to ſtrengthen theſe feeble-minded ones with divine cordials and ſpiritual food, and confirm them in the faith: neither have ye healed that which was ſick; by directing them to the great phyſician of ſouls, and to his precious blood for healing and pardon of ſin: neither have ye bound up that which was broken; whoſe conſciences were wounded, and hearts broken, with a ſenſe of ſin; or who had fallen to the breaking of their bones, and ſhould be reſtored in a ſpirit of meekneſs, and dealt gently with, as ſurgeons do in ſetting and binding up broken bones: neither have ye brought again that which was driven away; or, was gone aſtray [r]; being ſeduced by falſe teachers; and yet, though it was known they were, no care nor pains were taken to reclaim and reſtore them: neither have ye ſought that which was loſt; that wandered of their own accord, and periſhed for want of knowledge, and were loſt for lack of a guide to direct them, and no one would do this good office to them: but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them; in an arbitrary and tyrannical way, lording it over God's heritage, 1 Pet. v. 3.

℣. 5. And they were ſcattered becauſe there is no ſhepherd, &c.] No good one; there were ſhepherds, but they were idol-ſhepherds, good for nothing, and it was all one as if there were none: ſo in Chriſt's time, there were the ſcribes and phariſees; yet, ſince theſe did not feed the people with wholeſome doctrine, they are ſaid to be as ſheep without a ſhepherd, and ſcattered abroad, as here, from the fold, and from one another; diſperſed here and there, ſeeking food, and finding none, which moved his compaſſion, Matt. ix. 36. in the political ſenſe it may refer to their captivity, and their diſperſion among the nations, having no king. So the Targum, "and they were ſcattered without a governor." And they became meat to all beaſts of the field, when they were ſcattered; the Targum is, "and they were delivered to all the kingdoms of the people to be conſumed;" ſuch as the Aſſyrians, Babylonians, Ammonites, Moabites, and others; and may be applied to falſe teachers, thoſe grievous wolves, which ſpare not the flock, into whoſe hands members of churches, profeſſors of religion, fall, when neglected by their ſhepherds.

℣. 6. My ſheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill, &c.] As ſheep do, when gone aſtray, go from mountain to hill; ſo the people of Iſrael fled from place to place, thro' the cruelty of their rulers, or thro' the force of the enemy, being carried captive into many kingdoms and nations, ſignified by mountains; and perhaps there is ſome alluſion to their worſhipping of idols on hills and mountains, being drawn into it by the falſe prophets: yea, my flock was ſcattered upon all the face of the earth; ſo great and general was the diſperſion by the ſeveral captivities: the Lord has ſheep, or ſome of his elect, ſome that belong to his flock, in all parts of the world: and none did ſearch, or ſeek after them; but he will himſelf, as in ℣. 11. for he'll loſe none of them; but this does not excuſe the ſhepherds.

℣. 7. Therefore, ye ſhepherds, hear the word of the Lord.] Or, ye governors, as the Targum, both civil and eccleſiaſtical; ye kings, princes, and magiſtrates; ye prophets and teachers of the people, who ought to have attended to the word of grace, to the doctrines of the ſcriptures, and fed the people with them; but ſince you have not, hear the word of threatening from the Lord, and the juſt puniſhment that ſhall be inflicted on you.

℣. 8. As I live, ſaith the Lord, &c.] It is an oath, and which he ſwore in his wrath, being provoked with the ſhepherds for their male-adminiſtration: ſurely, becauſe my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beaſt of the field, becauſe there were no ſhepherd; a prey to all the kingdoms of the people, being without a governor, as the Targum; or to falſe teachers, there being no ſpiritual paſtors to take care of them: neither did my ſhepherds ſearch for my flock; that was ſcattered and carried captive, and became a prey to others; even thoſe that were of God's appointing, as the kings of Iſrael, their prieſts and prophets; for both their civil polity, and eccleſiaſtical hierarchy, were of God, tho' the ends thereof were not anſwered, or the perſons put into office did not do their duty: but the ſhepherds fed themſelves, and fed not my flock; ſee the notes on ℣. 2, 3.

℣. 9. Therefore, O ye ſhepherds, hear the word of the Lord.] This is repeated, that it might be obſerved, and for the confirmation of it; it might be depended upon, that what follows would be accompliſhed, unleſs they changed their conduct and behaviour; and to leave them inexcuſable, they are again called upon to hear what the Lord ſhould ſay unto them. The Targum is, "therefore, O ye wicked governors, return to the law, and I will have mercy on you, hearken to the doctrine

---

[q] הבריאה quod pingue eſt, Vatablus, Bochartus; pinguem, Cocceius, Starckius. So Ben Melech.

[r] הנדחת vagam aut errantem, Bochartus, and ſome in Vatablus.

“ trine of the law, and receive the word of the “ Lord.”

℣. 10. Thus ſaith the Lord God, behold, I am againſt the ſhepherds, &c.] His heart was againſt them; his hand was againſt them; his face was againſt them, to cut them off. The Targum is, “behold, I will ſend my fury upon the governors;” and there was good reaſon for it, they were againſt him and his glory, againſt his flock, his people, his cauſe and intereſt; ſad it is for any to have God againſt them, and to be againſt God; for none ever hardened themſelves againſt him and proſpered, Job ix. 4: and I will require my flock at their hand; the full tale of them that have been committed to their care, and will puniſh them for the neglect of them; their blood, their life, and the loſs of them, I'll require at their hands; thus he puniſhed Zedekiah and his princes, and the prieſts and prophets: and cauſe them to ceaſe from feeding the flock; take the kingdom from them, as he did from Zedekiah; aboliſh the eccleſiaſtical hierarchy among the Jews; cut off three ſhepherds in one month, the prieſts, prophets, and ſcribes of the people; and put the flock into other hands, the apoſtles and miniſters of the goſpel: neither ſhall the ſhepherds feed themſelves any more; enrich themſelves with the ſubſtance of the people: for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them; who inſtead of being ſhepherds to feed the flock, were no other than wolves in ſheeps clothing, and ravenous lions and bears, which devoured the flock; but this they ſhould do no longer.

℣. 11. For thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Since the ſhepherds are ſo negligent, careleſs, and cruel: behold, I, even I will both ſearch my ſheep, and ſeek them out; as he did the Jews, in all countries where they were, ſo his elect in all places where they are: he is the omniſcient God, and knows them that are his, and can call his own ſheep by name; he knows the places where they are; for he has fixed the bounds of their habitation, and was delighting himſelf in the habitable parts of the earth, where he knew they would be, even before the world was; he knows the time of finding them, which he himſelf has fixed, and which is a time of love, and a time of life; and he can diſtinguiſh them, notwithſtanding the filth they have contracted by their ſins and tranſgreſſions, and from the croud they are among: and he is the omnipotent God, that can take them out of what hands ſoever they may be, or in whatſoever ſtate and condition they are; tho' in the hands of ſatan, in the paws of that devouring lion, and in a pit wherein is no water, in an horrible pit, the mire and clay: he that ſays this, is the owner and proprietor of them; and that is the reaſon why he ſearches and ſeeks them out; and which he repeats for the confirmation of it, and to ſhow the vehemence of his affection towards them, and how bent he is upon it, and how eager and reſolute in his purſuit after them: he ſearches for his choſen people among the ruins of Adam's fall, in whom they fell as others; among the men of the world, where they are; among the duſt of the earth, where his loſt piece of ſilver, and thoſe pearls lie; among the mountains of ſin or ſelf-righteouſneſs, where theſe ſheep are wandering; and he never leaves off ſeeking and ſearching till he has found them: and what moves him to it, is not their nature, for they are no better than others; nor their numbers, for they are few; but his love to them, the relation he ſtands in to them as their ſhepherd, his intereſt and property in them, his covenant on their account, and alſo his own glory.

℣. 12. As a ſhepherd ſeeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his ſheep that are ſcattered, &c.] That is, when they have been ſcattered, and are got together again; then he goes among them, to ſee if there are any miſſing, and in what condition they are, and what they want: ſo will I ſeek out my ſheep, and deliver them out of all places where they have been ſcattered in the cloudy and dark day; ſuch, as in a literal ſenſe, the time of the captivity was, when the Jews were diſperſed in the ſeveral provinces of Babylon, and other countries; and which was a time of darkneſs and affliction to them. The time of Adam's fall was a dark and 1 cloudy day; when all ſinned in him, and were made ſinners by his diſobedience; when the ſentence of condemnation and death paſſed upon all, and they became liable to utter ruin and deſtruction; when darkneſs and ignorance ſeized all human nature; when all mankind were ſeparated from God, and ſet at a diſtance from him; in conſequence of which the children of God, his ſheep, were ſcattered abroad. A time of unregeneracy is 2 a cloudy and dark day with God's elect; they are in darkneſs, and walk in darkneſs, and are darkneſs itſelf, till made light in the Lord: and ſo is 3 a time of deſertion; when the Lord's people are laid in darkneſs, and the deeps, and both ſit and walk therein, and ſee no light; when they can neither ſee the Lord, nor hear from him, nor have any communion with him; when the ſun of righteouſneſs is withdrawn or eclipſed; and they can't ſee their intereſt clear in ſpiritual and eternal things: as is alſo a time of perſecution with the churches Lv of Chriſt; when both miniſters and people are ſcattered abroad, and their eyes cannot behold their teachers; and moon and ſtars are not ſeen for many days, goſpel-miniſters and goſpel-ordinances: and the ſame is a time of blaſphemy and error; and when it is neither day nor night, as is the preſent Lv. ſeaſon; but there is no day ſo cloudy and dark, but the ſhepherd can ſee his ſheep, and will look them out, tho' they cannot ſee him.

℣. 13. And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, &c.] Which was in part fulfilled, when the Jews were delivered from the Babyloniſh captivity; and which may well be aſcribed to the Lord, ſince it was he that ſtirred up Cyrus king of Perſia to proclaim their liberty; and which raiſed the ſpirit of the people to go up upon it, and build the temple in Jeruſalem, Ezra i. 1, 5. tho' it will have a more full accompliſhment in the latter day; when theſe people ſhall be gathered out of all countries where they are diſperſed, and return to their own land, and embrace the true Meſſiah, and be all ſaved; of which there was a pledge and preſage in the apoſtles time, on the day of Pentecoſt; when ſome out of all nations were collected together at Jeruſalem, and heard the wonderful things of God in their own language, and were converted; and afterwards, wherever the goſpel came in the Gentile world, it was firſt preached to the Jews, and was the power of God to ſalvation firſt to them; by which means the ſheep of Chriſt, the elect of God among them, in the ſeveral parts of the world, were gathered in: but this need not be confined to the Jews only; ſince the Lord had other ſheep beſide them, even among the Gentiles, in all parts of the world; whom he ſearches for, and effectually calls by his grace, and ſeparates them from the reſt of the world, and brings them into his chutches, and among his people: and feed them upon the mountains of Iſrael by the rivers; not upon the barren mountains of Sinai and Horeb, or with the works of the law; for there is no righteouſneſs, life, and ſalvation by them, and ſo no peace and comfort, or food for faith; but upon the mountains of Iſrael, the churches of Chriſt, comparable to mountains for their height, viſibility, immoveableneſs, and for their paſturage: here the great ſhepherd, the lamb Chriſt Jeſus is, even on mount Zion; here his under-ſhepherds are, who feed the flock with knowledge and underſtanding; here the word of God is preached, the wholeſome words of our Lord Jeſus, by which ſouls are nouriſhed up to everlaſting life; in theſe mountains the feaſt of fat things is made; here the green paſtures are, the ſheep are made to lie down in; and here the lilies grow, among whom Chriſt feeds; and by theſe mountains run the rivers of everlaſting love and covenant-grace, the ſtreams of goſpel-doctrines, and the waters of goſpel-ordinances, to the great refreſhment of the ſaints; here the Lord feeds his people: and in all the inhabited places of the country; in the private dwellings of the ſaints, as well as in public aſſemblies.

℣. 14. I will feed them in a good paſture, &c.] Or with good food, as the Targum; ſuch as the fulneſs of grace in Chriſt, where believers go in and out, and find paſture; and where they may feed to the full, have bread enough, and to ſpare; and may draw water with joy out of the full wells of ſalvation: this is good food, food indeed, in oppoſition to that which was typical, or is imaginary; this is ſpiritual food, ſuitable to the ſpirits of men, brought by the Spirit of God, and reliſhed by a ſpiritual man; this is ſavoury food, ſoul-ſatisfying and ſoul-ſtrengthening food; this is nouriſhing food, and what will endure to everlaſting life: and ſuch is the goſpel, the promiſes and doctrines of it, in which there is a variety of food; milk for babes, and meat for ſtrong men; ſweet to the taſte, and health to the bones; ſalutary and nouriſhing, and which makes glad the heart; and of the ſame kind are the ordinances of the goſpel, the breaſts of conſolation, the goodneſs and fatneſs of the Lord's houſe; which he makes his people partakers of, and ſatisfies them with. And upon the high mountains of Iſrael ſhall their fold be, there ſhall they lie in a good fold; of the ſame nature and uſe are the churches of Chriſt, as a fold is to the ſheep; as that they are ſeparated, divided, and diſtinguiſhed from others; as into a fold, the ſheep of Chriſt are gathered into churches; where they lie together, are united and knit together in love, and where they have communion with one another, and keep each other warm, and ſtir up one another to love and good works; whereby the vitals of religion are preſerved; here they are kept in the night-ſeaſon, and fed in the winter; theſe like a fold are a ſort of fence unto them, and a preſervation of them from wolves and bears; and here they lie down, and have ſpiritual reſt, eaſe, and ſafety: and as in a fold there are lambs, and ſheep, and goats, ſo in churches there are different ſorts folded together, weaker and ſtronger chriſtians; and ſome only nominal ones, who will be ſeparated at the laſt day. A fold may be taken down, and removed from place to place, and ſo may viſible congregated churches; the candleſtick may be removed out of its place, the word and ordinances; and ſo a goſpel-church-ſtate may be carried from place to place; and there is but one fold for Jews and Gentiles, and this is a good one; ſee John x. 16. And in a fat paſture ſhall they feed on the mountains of Iſrael; on the feaſt of fat things there, and ſo become fat and flouriſhing; ſee the note on ℣. 13.

℣. 15. I will feed my flock, &c.] This is repeated for the further confirmation of it, that it might be depended upon, that the Lord would feed his people in the manner before promiſed; and it gives a reaſon why he would do it, becauſe they were his flock; he had a right unto them, a property in them; they were ſeparated and diſtinguiſhed from others by him, as the church of God is; and which is alſo purchaſed by Chriſt, and gathered out of the world by his Spirit and grace; and therefore he will feed them, or take care that they ſhall be fed, Acts xx. 28: and I will cauſe them to lie down, ſaith the Lord; in the good fold provided for them; where they have both reſt and ſafety, and alſo plenty of ſuitable food; ſee the note on ℣. 14. The Targum is, "I will govern my people, and will cauſe them to dwell ſafely, ſaith the Lord God;" the Septuagint and Arabic verſions add, and they ſhall know that I am the Lord.

℣. 16. And I will ſeek that which was loſt, &c.] As all men are in Adam, and thro' his fall, and by their own actual tranſgreſſions; and ſo the elect of God among the reſt; who are loſt not with reſpect to God's knowledge of them, love to them, and care for them; but with reſpect to their knowledge of him, affection for him, and regard to his will, ſervice, and glory; they are loſt to themſelves, they know not where they are, what is their ſtate and condition, and how to get out of it; they can't help themſelves, nor can any other creature help them; and they ſee themſelves to be in this loſt and undone condition, when they are enlightned by the Spirit of God: but they are not irretrievably loſt, for they are preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus; and he has been ſent to ſeek and to ſave them; which he has done by redeeming them from ſin, ſatan, and the law; and in effectual vocation, he goes after them, he ſends his goſpel to them, and his Spirit into them, and returns them to himſelf, the ſhepherd and biſhop of ſouls; and whereas after this they go aſtray like loſt ſheep, he ſeeks and looks them up, and reſtores their ſouls, Pſ. cxix. 176. and xxiii. 3. ſee Luke xix. 10. and xv. 3, 4: and bring again that which was driven away; thro' the power and prevalence of unbelief, from holding faſt to the head Chriſt, departing at leaſt partially from the living God; from dealing by faith with his precious perſon, blood, and righteouſneſs; and from the precious promiſes, as not belonging to them, and refuſing to be comforted by them; but the Lord brings back ſuch again, and cauſes them to believe: Thomas is a notorious inſtance of this, John xx. 24—28. ſuch alſo who are driven away thro' the force of ſatan's temptations from the throne of grace; from the word and ordinances; and from private converſation with the ſaints, being hypocrites, as he ſuggeſts unto them; theſe the Lord brings back, by rebuking the tempter, and delivering out of his temptations: likewiſe ſuch as are driven out of the right way of truth, and carried away with the error of the wicked, through the influence of bad paſtors or falſe teachers, Jer. xxiii. 1, 2. and l. 6. theſe will he reſtore again; for it is impoſſible the elect of God ſhould be finally deceived: moreover, ſuch as are driven away by the force of perſecution, and ſcattered abroad, in God's due time have reſt, and return to their folds again; ſee Jer. l. 17. Acts viii. 1, 2. and ix. 31: and will bind up that which was broken; ſuch who have broken hearts, broken with a ſenſe of ſin; made truly contrite by the Spirit and grace of God, thro' the word; which is an hammer to them, that breaks the rocky heart in pieces; to theſe the Lord has reſpect; their broken hearts are acceptable to him; he dwells with them, to revive them; he ſpeaks and reſtores comforts to them; pours in oil and wine into their wounds, like the good Samaritan, and binds them up; ſee Pſ. cxlvii. 3. and li. 17. Iſ. lxi. 1. and ſuch who have broken bones, who have fallen into ſin to the breaking of their bones, to the deſtroying of their peace, joy and comfort, as David, Peter, and others have done; he ſets their broken bones, and reſtores the joys of his ſalvation; and cauſes the bones which were broken to rejoice at the diſcoveries of his pardoning grace and mercy, Pſ. li. 8, 12: and will ſtrengthen that which was ſick; ſick thro ſin, as all men are; ſick of ſin, as ſenſible ſinners be; ſickly and weak, and ready to die, as fallen profeſſors, backſliders are; ſick of love, thro' want of the diſcoveries of it; long after them; can't be eaſy without them, as Chriſt's ſpouſe ſometimes is; and ſick for want of food, faint and languid for want of ſpiritual refreſhment; as the perſons were Chriſt had compaſſion on, being as ſheep without a ſhepherd, Matt. ix. 36. ſee Matt. ix. 12. 1 Cor. xi. 30. Cant. ii. 5. and v. 8. each of theſe the Lord ſtrengthens with the diſcoveries and applications of pardoning grace; with the flagons of his love, and apples of his promiſes; with the food of the goſpel, which ſtrengthens mens hearts; and with grace out of his fulneſs, whereby they are ſtrengthened againſt ſin, ſnares and temptations, and to exerciſe grace, and do the will of God: but I will deſtroy the fat and the ſtrong; that are full of themſelves, lifted up with pride, conceited with their riches or righteouſneſs, and deſpiſe others, whom they thruſt with ſide and ſhoulder, and puſh with their horns, ℣. 21. So the Targum interprets it of wicked men, "and I "will conſume the ungodly and ſinners;" but the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, Syriac and Arabic verſions render it, I will keep the fat and the ſtrong; in the plight and condition in which they are, and make them ſtill ſtronger, and more fat and flouriſhing; ſo Jerom interprets it, of ſaints and godly perſons; and this agrees with the preceding clauſes; only the original Hebrew text is, againſt it, which does not admit of a various reading; and this rendring ſeems to ariſe in the Septuagint, the others follow, from the miſtake of a ſimilar letter: I will feed them with judgment; meaning either the whole flock, conſiſting of fat and lean cattel, making a diſtinction between them, ℣. 17, 20. feeding them with diſcretion, and judging them according to their deſerts; or elſe the fat and the ſtrong ones, by inflicting righteous vengeance on them, feeding them with wormwood and gall; or his own people and ſheep only. So the Targum, I will govern my people with judgment; in righteouſneſs, goodneſs, truth and faithfulneſs.

℣. 17. And as for you, O my flock, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Having done with the ſhepherds, and the complaint againſt them, the Lord proceeds to take notice of the flock, or the people themſelves, and the evils that were among them; for in the Lord's own flock, in the nation and church of Iſrael, as now in the viſible congregated churches of Chriſt, there were two ſorts of perſons, ſome good, others bad; ſome that behaved well, and others ill; ſome were ſheep, and others goats: behold, I judge between cattel and cattel, between the rams and the he-goats; between the ſmaller and weaker cattel, the ſheep and lambs; and the larger and ſtronger cattel, the rams and he-goats; by which latter may be meant, perſons of ſuperior power and authority, of greater wealth and riches, and of more wiſdom and knowledge, at leaſt in their own conceits; and who were oppreſſive and injurious to the poor and common people, and leſs knowing, at leaſt as they thought; who may be intended by the former: now, the Lord, as he obſerved a difference between them, he would make this manifeſt, and take the part of the one againſt the other; even the part of the weaker againſt the ſtronger. The Targum is, "behold, I judge be- "tween man and man, ſinners and the ungodly."

℣. 18. Seemeth it a ſmall thing unto you to have eaten up the good paſture, &c.] This is directed to the rams and he-goats, to the people of power and wealth, or who had the key of knowledge and inſtruction; who, by their conduct, ſhewed as if it was not enough for them to eat and drink the beſt of things themſelves, to enjoy their wealth and riches, and keep their poſts of honour and profit, and the revenues of them, in church and ſtate: but ye muſt tread down with your feet the reſidue of your paſtures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye muſt foul the reſidue with your feet? but they muſt oppreſs the poor, by taking away from them that little they have; or by making their lives uncomfortable to them, by their ſeverities and exactions; ſo that that ſmall pittance they had, they cannot enjoy with any pleaſure. The alluſion is to beaſts in paſture, which tread down and be-dung what they do not eat, which makes what is left unfit for others; and to cattel, at ponds of water, which having drank, foul the reſt with their feet; as camels particularly are ſaid to do; ſo that others can't drink after them, at leaſt not ſo agreeably: this may be applied to the Scribes and Phariſees, and ſuch as they were, who devoured widows houſes, and made void the word and commandments of God by their traditions; teaching for doctrines the commandments of men; and ſo polluted the pure waters of the ſanctuary; defiled the ſcriptures of truth, and delivered out ſuch doctrines as were not food and drink to the ſouls of men, and yet were obliged to receive them; and ſuch are heretical perſons, who ſometimes ariſe out of the churches, are a part of the flock, that corrupt the word of God, pervert the ſcriptures, and handle them deceitfully; and may be ſaid to tread down and trample upon the wholeſome truths of the goſpel, and to be-mud the clear doctrines of grace; ſo that the children of God cannot, as they deſire, have the pure, unmixed, ſincere milk of the word.

℣. 19. And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet, &c.] They are forced to do it, not being able to come at any thing elſe; being as ſheep without a ſhepherd, or worſe: and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet; which, as it can't be agreeable and reliſhing, ſo neither wholeſome; as the leaven of the Scribes and Phariſees; the traditions of the elders; the falſe doctrines of falſe teachers, whoſe words eat as do a canker. The Targum of the whole verſe is, "and my people eat the reſidue "of the food of your miniſters, and drink the "reſidue of the drink of your miniſters."

℣. 20. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God unto them, &c.] To the rams and he-goats of the flock, that uſe the paſtures, and defile the waters after this manner, and make them unfit for the leſſer cattel; or that uſe the poor people of God after this ſort: behold, I, even I will judge between the fat cattel, and between the lean cattel. The Targum is, "between the rich man, and the poor man;" this is repeated, and in very ſtrong terms, for the confirmation of it: this the Lord promiſed to do, and he has done it by his Son, to whom he committed all judgment; and who, in the days of his fleſh, made a difference between thoſe who were full of themſelves, ſelf-righteous perſons; who were ſelf-ſufficient, and needed not repentance, nor any other righteouſneſs but their own; who truſted in themſelves, and deſpiſed others; and may be meant by the fat cattel; and between thoſe who were low and mean in their own eyes, humble and meek, weary and heavy laden, hungring and thirſting after the righteouſneſs of another: now for judgment did Chriſt come, that they which ſee not might ſee, and thoſe who ſaw might be made blind; he called the one, and not the other to repentance; made known the things of the goſpel to babes, and hid them from the wiſe and prudent; rejected the one, and had compaſſion on the other; ſee John v. 22. and ix. 39. Matt. ix. 13, 36. and xi. 25, 26. and when he comes a ſecond time, he'll judge between theſe, and ſeparate them; and ſet the ſheep on his right-hand, and the goats on the left, Matt. xxv. 31, 32, 33.

℣. 21. Becauſe ye have thruſt with ſide and with ſhoulder, &c.] As the ſtronger cattel do the leſſer: and puſhed all the diſeaſed with your horns; as horned cattel do thoſe they diſlike, and bear an antipathy to; which to do to the diſeaſed is great cruelty: ſheep, it is ſaid, will take ſome care of thoſe that are diſeaſed among them, and bring them to places of ſun-ſhine and ſhelter; but here the horned part of the flock, and in health, are repreſented as acting a barbarous part to the weak and diſeaſed: this may denote ſuch as are in power and authority, uſing it to the hurt and detriment of thoſe that are under them, and whom they ſhould relieve and protect: it may be applied to the anathema's and excommunications of the Jews, who pronounced thoſe an accurſed and ignorant people that believed in Chriſt, and expelled ſuch out of their ſynagogues that profeſſed his name; and to their perſecutions of the apoſtles and firſt chriſtians: till he have ſcattered them abroad; or without [*]; that is, without the land. The Targum is, "thro' the provinces;" obliged them to quit their country, and go unto other parts, as the firſt preachers of the word did; who, upon the perſecution at the death of Stephen, were ſcattered abroad every where, Acts viii. 1, 4.

℣. 22. Therefore will I ſave my flock, &c.] Or redeem my people, as the Targum; that is, by his ſon, after deſcribed, as his ſhepherd and ſervant: and they ſhall no more be a prey; to ſatan the roaring lion; nor to ſuch horned cattel, their perſecutors; nor to falſe teachers, who lie in wait to deceive; nor ſhall they ever periſh, being the ſheep of Chriſt's hand, and under the care of him the ſhepherd, ſpoken of in the next verſe: and I will judge between cattel, and cattel; between man and man, as the Targum; that is, between good and bad men, the perſecutors and the perſecuted; ſee the notes on ℣. 17, 20.

℣. 23. And I will ſet up one ſhepherd over them, &c.] Or governor, as the Targum; an excellent one, one of a thouſand, the only one; in compariſon of whom others are not to be named; for tho' there are under-ſhepherds, as magiſtrates and miniſters of the word, he is the principal one; that is, Chriſt, called the good ſhepherd, the great ſhepherd, and the chief ſhepherd, and the only one; and who became ſo by the conſtitution and appointment of Jehovah the Father; who choſe him, called him, and entruſted him with all his ſheep; who ſent him to ſeek and ſave his loſt ſheep; for whom he died, roſe again, and is accountable: he is more particularly called the one ſhepherd, with reſpect to Jew and Gentile; ſee John x. 16: and he ſhall feed them; the flock, even the poor of the flock, thruſt at and puſhed by others: he ſhall feed them by his miniſters, as under-ſhepherds in his churches, where his word is preached, and his ordinances are adminiſtered; he ſhall feed them with himſelf, the bread of life; with his fleſh and blood, which are meat and drink indeed; with covenant-grace, bleſſings and promiſes; with the goſpel, and the doctrines of it; he feeds his babes with milk, his ſtrong men with meat, and all with the wholeſome words of faith and good doctrine, whereby he nouriſhes them up to everlaſting life; and this he ſhall do, not by force, but willingly: it denotes the certainty of it; it may be depended on: even my ſervant David; not David himſelf literally; who, tho' a ſhepherd, and the ſervant of the Lord, yet had been dead many years before this prophecy was delivered; nor Zorobabel, who was of his ſeed; for tho' a ſervant of the Lord, and a prince or govenor of Judah, yet not a king, and much leſs a king or prince for ever; as this perſon is ſaid to be, ch. xxxvii. 24, 25. but the Meſſiah, as is expreſly owned by Kimchi; who ſays, this is the Meſſiah that ſhall ariſe from his ſeed in the time of ſalvation: he is called David, becauſe his name agrees with him, which ſignifies beloved, he being beloved of God and man; and becauſe the ſon of David, of his ſeed according to the fleſh; and becauſe David was an eminent type of him, in his perſon, offices, afflictions, wars, victories, and exaltation; and becauſe he was David's Lord and repreſentative, and in whom his everlaſting kingdom is eſtabliſhed. The ſame is called the ſervant of the Lord, as he often is in ſcripture, being ſo in his office-capacity as Mediator; and becauſe he took upon him the form of a ſervant; did the work of one; and was of the Lord's chuſing, calling, ſupporting and glorifying: he ſhall feed them, and he ſhall be their ſhepherd; which is repeated for the greater confirmation of it.

℣. 24. And I the Lord will be their God, &c.] The God of them Chriſt is the ſhepherd of, and whom he feeds; the ſheep and poor of the flock: this is the great bleſſing of the everlaſting covenant, and than which there cannot be a greater, to have the Lord, the everlaſting and unchangeable Jehovah, to be a covenant-God and Father: and my ſervant David a prince among them; who ſhould reſide among them, dwell with them, by granting them his ſpiritual preſence, and ſo rule over them, protect and defend them; even he who is the prince of the kings of the earth, and is exalted, a prince and a Saviour of his people Iſrael; he is ſuch a ſhepherd, as that he is a prince; and ſuch a prince, as that he is a Saviour; and under whoſe princely government is the greateſt ſafety: I the Lord have ſpoken it; and therefore it ſhall aſſuredly be. The Targum is, "I the Lord have decreed it in my word;" he had determined it within himſelf, and promiſed it in covenant, and ſpoke of it in prophecy, and it ſhould be fulfilled.

---

[*] אל החוצה foras, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 25. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, &c.] Such the covenant of grace is, made with Chriſt from everlaſting; in which Jehovah propoſed terms of peace, and which Chriſt undertook to anſwer, and became the peace-maker; and from this article concerning the peace and reconciliation of men, the covenant is ſo called; ſee Iſ. liv. 10. this the Lord promiſes to make known to his people his flock, to ſhew them their intereſt in it, and to make it good unto them; for otherwiſe it was made with Chriſt, and with them in Chriſt from all eternity. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions read, "I will make with David a covenant of peace:" and will cauſe the evil beaſts to ceaſe out of the land; which was literally fulfilled when the Jews returned from Babylon; during their captivity the land being uninhabited, evil beaſts increaſed in it, and poſſeſſed it; but upon their return theſe ceaſed, being either deſtroyed, or driven away: but figuratively theſe deſign wicked men, who, for the malignity of their nature, manners and converſation, are called evil beaſts, as the Cretians were, Tit. i. 12. particularly falſe teachers may be deſigned; thoſe grievous wolves that ſpare not, but wrong the flock; but now ſhall be no more, being either forced to quit their place, or truly converted; ſo that the wolf ſhall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard lie down with the kid; which will be the peaceable and comfortable ſtate of the church in the latter day; when there will be none to hurt and deſtroy in the Lord's holy mountain, Iſ. xi. 6—9: and they ſhall dwell ſafely in the wilderneſs, and ſleep in the woods; not only in their houſes, but in the fields, and even in the wilderneſs, and in the woods, where wild beaſts uſed to reſort; but now being clear of all, and under the protection of ſuch a ſhepherd and prince, as David the ſervant of the Lord, they ſhall have no dread upon their mind, no fear of any danger; but dwell in the utmoſt ſecurity, lie down and ſleep in peace and ſafety, the Lord ſuſtaining them; and whom they ſhall ſerve without fear of any enemy all their days in righteouſneſs and holineſs, being delivered out of the hands of them all.

℣. 26. And I will make them, and the places round about my hill, a bleſſing, &c.] Alluding either to the city of Jeruſalem, and the places adjacent; or to the temple, and the houſes about it. So the Targum, "I will cauſe them to dwell round about the houſe of my ſanctuary;" and ſo Kimchi interprets it of the temple. Some chriſtian interpreters, by the hill or mountain, underſtand Chriſt; and not amiſs; who may be compared to one for height; he being higher than the kings of the earth, or than the heavens and angels there, as man and Mediator; as well as is God over all, bleſſed for ever; and for fruitfulneſs, from whom the ſaints have all theirs, either in grace, or good works; and for ſhade, he being the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land; which yields delight and refreſhment, and is a protection from the heat of a fiery law, flaming juſtice, the wrath of God and man, and the fiery darts of ſatan; and for ſhelter and ſecurity, there being ſalvation in him, when none in other hills and mountains; and for duration and immoveableneſs, being the ſame to-day, yeſterday, and for ever: and now the perſons about him are ſuch who are made nigh by his blood; brought to him by his powerful and efficacious grace; are worſhippers about the throne where he ſits; ſuch as cleave to him, and follow him wherever he goes, and ſhall be with him to all eternity; theſe he makes a bleſſing, or moſt bleſſed. So the Targum renders it, "and they ſhall be bleſſed;" they are bleſſed in Chriſt their head; they are bleſſed thro' him as their Redeemer and Saviour, who was made a curſe for them; they are bleſſed, thro' being in him, and by the imputation of bleſſings to them from him, and thro' the application of them by his Spirit; their perſons are bleſſed, and ſo are the places or habitations where they dwell: or rather this may be underſtood of the church of God, often compared to a hill for its height and eminence; for its fertility and fruitfulneſs; for its ſtability and firmneſs; and in alluſion to the hill of Zion for its holineſs, and being the place of the divine reſidence; ſee Pſ. xv. 1. and xxiv. 4. and lxviii. 15, 16. now, the perſons about this hill, are thoſe who are come to mount Zion the church of God; being brought there by the Lord himſelf, and who take up their abode there; who lie about this hill, as flocks of ſheep, in their ſeveral folds or congregated churches; ſee Jer. xxiii. 3. and xxxiii. 13. and theſe the Lord makes a bleſſing to one another, by their ſpiritual converſation, prayers and ſervices of love; and to the world, to kingdoms and ſtates, to cities, towns and neighbourhoods, and to particular families, where they are placed; and even to the world in general; for they are the light, ſtay and ſtability of it; and without which it would be in darkneſs, corrupt and putrify, and not continue long: and I will cauſe the ſhower to come down in his ſeaſon; which, in the ſpiritual ſenſe, may deſign the goſpel; which, like a ſhower of rain, comes from God; deſcends from heaven; is a gift of God; which falls according to divine direction; refreſhes, revives, and makes fruitful; brings a plenty of divine bleſſings with it; and comes in ſeaſon, at its proper time; and, is a word, in ſeaſon to weary ſouls: there ſhall be ſhowers of bleſſings; which the goſpel brings with it; ſpiritual bleſſings, bleſſings of grace; ſuch as peace, pardon, righteouſneſs and eternal life: theſe, like ſhowers, come from God; are free grace-gifts of his, of which there is a large abundance; and which deſcend on mount Zion the church of God; which is another Gerizzim, on which the bleſſings are pronounced, Pſ. cxxxiii. 3. ſee Iſ. lv. 10, 11. Zech. x. 1.

℣. 27. And the tree of the field ſhall yield her fruit, &c.] Such as are trees of righteouſneſs, rooted in Chriſt, and planted in his church, and watered with his grace; theſe bring forth, bear, and are filled with the fruits of righteouſneſs by him: and the earth ſhall yield her increaſe; the fallow ground of mens hearts being broke up, and the ſeed of the word, and of divine grace being ſown in them, they bring forth fruit, ſome thirty, ſome ſixty, and ſome an hundred-fold; ſee Pſ. lxvii. 1, 2, 6, 7. this, and what goes before, may be literally underſtood of the land of Canaan, and the fruitfulneſs of it, when the Jews ſhall again poſſeſs it; to which the next clauſe ſeems to have ſome reſpect: and they ſhall be ſafe in their land; no enemy to diſturb them, to invade or do any acts of violence to them: this will be when the Jews are converted, and become chriſtians; and antichriſt deſtroyed; they will have none but chriſtian powers about them, who will be their protection. This is true, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, of all the ſaints, who are under the care and government of Chriſt their ſhepherd and prince: and ſhall know that I am the Lord; Jehovah their righteouſneſs, Saviour and Redeemer: when I have broken the bands of their yoke; of ſin, ſatan, and the law, and of all enemies: and delivered them out of the hand of thoſe that ſerved themſelves of them; or made them their ſervants, to whom they were ſubject; literally, the nations of the world, among whom they are diſperſed; and figuratively, ſin, whoſe ſervants men in a ſtate of nature are; and ſatan, by whom they are led captive; and the law, under which they are held as tranſgreſſors; and all other ſpiritual enemies; ſee Luke i. 74, 75.

℣. 28. And they ſhall no more be a prey to the heathen, &c.] To the Papiſts, who ſhall now be periſhed out of the land, Pſ. x. 16: neither ſhall the beaſts of the land devour them; neither that beaſt which roſe up out of the ſea, nor that which came up out of the earth, Rev. xiii. 1, 11. the pope both in his ſecular and eccleſiaſtic power being deſtroyed. So the Targum, "and the kingdoms of the earth "ſhall not conſume them;" the antichriſtian kingdoms: but they ſhall dwell ſafely, and none ſhall make them afraid; ſee the notes on ℣. 25, 27.

℣. 29. And I will raiſe up for them a plant of renown, &c.] Or, for a name; or, of a name[t]; a famous one: this is to be underſtood, not of the Jewiſh nation itſelf, as the Targum, "and I will "raiſe up for them a plantation for ſtanding;" or which ſhall continue; but of the Meſſiah, and not of his incarnation, when he ſprung up as a tender plant out of the dry ground, and as a branch out of the roots of Jeſſe, being on that account often ſpoken of as a branch; ſee Iſ. xi. 1. and liii. 2. Zech. iii. 8. and vi. 12. but of him in a more raiſed and exalted ſtate, as grown up to a ſtately tree, a goodly cedar, as in ch. xvii. 23. when his intereſt and kingdom ſhould be great and glorious in the world, as it will be at the time of the converſion of the Jews; and it is ſpoken of his manifeſtation to them as a plant of renown, or as a renowned plant, the true vine and tree of life; or as a famous renowned perſon, one of name; whoſe glorious names and titles are, Shiloh, the Meſſiah, Immanuel, Jehovah our righteouſneſs, Jeſus the Saviour, the Word of God, the King of kings, and Lord of lords: and they ſhall be no more conſumed with hunger in the land; the Targum is, "they "ſhall no more move from place to place thro' "famine in the land;" and which is to be underſtood, not of hunger thro' a famine of bread and water, but of hearing the word of the Lord; which they ſhall now have, and hear, and believe, and ſo have food for their ſouls, and hunger no more; as thoſe do not who believe in Chriſt, John vi. 35. for this plant raiſed up for them, and pointed out to them, the tree of life, Chriſt Jeſus, bears all manner of precious fruit, ſweet to the taſte, and nouriſhing to the ſouls of his people; under his ſhadow they ſit, and his fruit is ſweet to them; and with him is bread enough, and to ſpare; ſo that there is no want, nor fear of conſumption with hunger, where he is: neither bear the ſhame of the heathen any more; being called by them Jews, in a way of taunt, a proverb, and a curſe; and outcaſts, whom none ſeeek after; but now they ſhall no more be termed forſaken, or called deſolate, but inſtead thereof Hephzibah and Beulah; ſee Jer. xxx. 17. Iſ. lxii. 4, 12.

℣. 30. Thus ſhall they know that I the Lord their God am with them, &c.] Granting them his gracious and powerful preſence, by all the above inſtances of his goodneſs and favour to them: and that they, even the houſe of Iſrael, are my people, ſaith the Lord God; and not utterly caſt off, as they ſeemed to be; the divine Shekinah now being returned to them, which had departed from them; the Loammi that was written on them, being now wiped off from them.

℣. 31. And ye my flock, the flock of my paſture, are men, &c.] This is obſerved, to ſhew that all that had been ſaid in this chapter concerning ſheep, and a flock of ſheep, was to be underſtood, not in a literal ſenſe, but in a figurative one, of ſuch as were rational and ſpiritual perſons; a ſet of men, whom the Lord had choſen and ſeparated from others, as his peculiar flock; and whom he took a ſpecial care of, and led them to, and fed them in, green paſtures of his own providing; they are the ſouls of men, that Chriſt is the ſhepherd and biſhop of, 1 Pet. ii. 25. The Talmudiſts[u] frequently make uſe of this text, to prove that Iſraelites are only called men, and not the Gentiles; ſee Matt. xv. 26: and I am your God, ſaith the Lord God; which is often repeated for the certainty of it, becauſe a bleſſing of the greateſt importance, and which includes all others in it; ſee ℣. 24, 30.

CHAP. XXXV.

THIS chapter is a prophecy of the deſtruction of Edom, which is threatened, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4. the cauſe of it, their hatred and ſlaughter of the Iſraelites, ℣. 5—9. their claim of the lands of Iſrael and Judah for poſſeſſion, ℣. 10, 11. their blaſphemies againſt the people of God, and the Lord himſelf, ℣. 12, 13. the aggravation of their ruin, which was irretrievable; that when it was well with others, it ſhould go ill with them, by way of juſt retaliation, ℣. 14, 15.

℣. 1. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] After the prophecy concerning the ſhepherds of Iſrael, and the goats of the flock, and of their oppreſſions of the ſheep and lambs, the weak of the flock; and concerning the Meſſiah, and the bleſſings of grace promiſed the church in the latter day; came another concerning the deſtruction of her enemies, under the name of Seir or Edom: ſaying, as follows:

℣. 2. Son of man, ſet thy face againſt mount Seir, &c.] Which had its name from Seir the Horite, who firſt poſſeſſed it; and was ſucceeded in it by Eſau and his poſterity, the Edomites; ſee Gen. xxxvi. 8, 9, 20. and xiv. 6. Deut. ii. 12. ſo that the country of Edom or Idumea is here intended, and the inhabitants of it; who are put for the enemies of the church and people of God in general, as theſe were the enemies of Iſrael and Judah; and particularly for Rome, which, as it was ſpiritually called Egypt and Sodom, ſo it may be called Edom, as it often is by the Jews: now the prophet is bid to turn his face towards this mountain or country, and look ſternly at it, and ſeverely threaten it. The Targum is, “take up a prophecy againſt it;” which is expreſſed in the next clauſe: and propheſy againſt it; foretel things contrary to it, which relate to its deſtruction, as follows:

---

[t] מטע לשם plantato in nomen, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius; plantam celebri nomine, Tigurine verſion; plantam in nomen, Vatablus.

[u] T. Bab. Yebamot, fol. 61. 1. Bava Metzia, fol. 114. 2. & Ceritot, fol. 6. 2.

℣. 3. And ſay unto it, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The prophet was not upon the ſpot, and could not direct his ſpeech immediately to the Edomites; but he might ſend this prophecy to their embaſſadors at Babylon; or in a letter to them in their own land, in the name of the Lord: behold, O mount Seir, I am againſt thee; not the face of the prophet only, but the face of God himſelf was againſt them; and a terrible thing it is for any to have God to be againſt them, whether a nation, or a particular perſon. The Targum is, “behold, I “ſend my fury upon thee:” and I will ſtretch out mine hand againſt thee; which was able to reach them wherever they were; and which, being ſtretched out, cannot be turned back; and where it lights, falls heavy indeed; namely, his mighty hand of power and wrath. The Targum is, “and “I will lift up the ſtroke of my power upon “thee;” that is, lift up his hand, and ſtrike powerfully; the conſequence of which muſt be, as follows: and I will make thee moſt deſolate; their land, cities, towns and villages all ſhould be utterly laid waſte; ſee Rev. xvii. 16. and xviii. 8. ſo it follows:

℣. 4. I will lay thy cities waſte, &c.] Such as Dedan, Teman, Bozrah, and other cities of Idumea mentioned in ſcripture; and figuratively may deſign all within the juriſdiction of Rome, the ſeveral cities of the antichriſtian ſtates, called the cities of the nations; which will fall at the pouring out of the vials, Rev. xvi. 19: and thou ſhalt be deſolate; thoroughly and entirely, and remain ſo: and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord; that has done all this; that the hand of God was in it; and that this is a puniſhment inflicted by him, for their ſins after-mentioned; but not that they ſhould know the Lord ſpiritually and ſavingly, and ſo as to yield obedience to him, and own and acknowledge him to be their God; tho' this may be the caſe of a remnant among them; ſee Rev. xi. 13. and xviii. 4.

℣. 5. Becauſe thou haſt had a perpetual hatred, &c.] There was an old grudge and enmity ſubſiſting in the poſterity of Eſau againſt the poſterity of Jacob, becauſe the latter ſupplanted the former, and got the birth-right and bleſſing from him; and which was diſcovered in all ages, and at all opportunities, and on all occaſions which offered; and ſuch has been the hatred of the church of Rome againſt the true profeſſors and followers of Chriſt, as their bloody perſecution of them in all ages have ſhewn: and haſt ſhed the blood of the children of Iſrael by the force of the ſword, in the time of their calamity; when Jeruſalem was taken by the Chaldeans, the Edomites not only rejoiced at it, and took part of the ſpoil, but ſtood in the croſs-ways, and ſlew thoſe that made their eſcape; or drove them back upon the ſword of the enemy; or delivered them into their hands; which was barbarous and inhuman uſage of their neighbours and brethren; ſee Obad. ℣. 10, 11. The Targum is, “and thou didſt deliver the children of Iſrael into “the hands of thoſe that ſlay with the ſword, in “the time of their deſtruction:” in the time that their iniquity had an end; when either the meaſure of that was full; or when they received for it full correction and chaſtiſement; at the conſummation of that.

℣. 6. Therefore, as I live, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] The form of an oath; the Lord ſwears by himſelf, becauſe he could ſwear by no greater; and which he never does, but in matters of importance, and for the confirmation of them, as the following is: I will prepare thee unto blood; prepare them for war, which will iſſue in ſlaughter and blood, ſuch as the battel at Armageddon, Rev. xvi. 14, 16. and xix. 18, 19: or, I will make thee blood [w]; nothing elſe but blood; a mere Aceldama, a field of blood; turn thee into blood, as the ſea, rivers and fountains will be at the pouring out the ſecond and third vials, Rev. xvi. 3, 4: and blood ſhall purſue thee; the guilt and vengeance of blood; or the avengers of the blood of the ſaints; the angels that ſhall pour out the vials of wrath on Rome; the ten kings that ſhall hate the whore. So the Targum, “they that ſlay with the ſword “ſhall purſue thee;” or the ſhedders of blood, as Ben Melech: ſith thou haſt not hated blood; Jarchi reads it, haſt hated blood; which he interprets of the blood of the ſacrifices; as others, mentioned by him, of the blood of circumciſion; and others, of his brother, who was his fleſh and blood, and hated by him; but it is a figurative phraſe, by which leſs is expreſſed, than is intended. The ſenſe is, thou haſt loved blood; thou haſt delighted in ſhedding blood; haſt thirſted after it, and drank plentifully of it, and even been drunk with it, as the whore of Rome is ſaid to be, Rev. xvii. 5: even blood ſhall purſue thee; this is repeated for the confirmation of it; and this was meaſure for meaſure; a juſt retaliation; having ſhed blood, it was but right that blood ſhould purſue, and be given, Rev. xvi. 5, 6.

℣. 7. Thus will I make mount Seir moſt deſolate, &c.] By ſhedding the blood of the inhabitants of it; and as Rome will be, when it will be utterly burnt with fire, as that city will, and the fleſh of the whore alſo, and made deſolate; and when all the vials ſhall be poured out on the antichriſtian ſtates under her juriſdiction, Rev. xvi. 1. and xvii. 16. and xviii. 8: and cut off from it him that paſſeth out, and him that returneth; every traveller that paſſeth to and fro; it ſhall no more be frequented by merchants; nor will there be any merchandiſe any more in it, Rev. xviii. 11.

℣. 8. And I will fill his mountains with his ſlain men, &c.] Not only mount Seir, but all the reſt of the mountains in Idumea; where they ſhall flee for refuge, and the enemy ſhall purſue them, and ſlay them; and where their carcaſes will fall in ſuch numbers, as to cover the mountains with them; compare with this Rev. xix. 18, 19: in thy hills, and in thy vallies, and in all thy rivers ſhall they fall that are ſlain with the ſword; expreſſive of the greatneſs and univerſality of the ſlaughter, that it ſhould be a general one every where; hence rivers and fountains are ſaid to become blood, thro' the number of the ſlain, Rev. xvi. 3, 4.

℣. 9. I will make thee perpetual deſolations, and thy cities ſhall not return, &c.] To their former dignity and glory; ſhould not be built and inhabited again, but lie waſte for ever: this agrees with what is propheſied of Edom, Mal. i. 4. and will be true of Rome or Babylon when deſtroyed; it will never riſe more, but be like a mill-ſtone in the midſt of the ſea, Rev. xviii. 21: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; ſee the note on ℣. 4.

---

[w] לדם אעשך in ſanguinem redigam te, Munſter; in ſanguinem faciam te, Grotius; ſanguinem faciam te, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 10. Becauſe thou haſt ſaid, theſe two nations, and theſe two countries ſhall be mine, and we will poſſeſs it, &c.] Meaning either Idumea he was now poſſeſſed of, and Iſrael he hoped to be, upon the people of it being carried captive; or rather the two nations of Iſrael and Judah, and their countries; which he pleaſed himſelf with would fall into his hands, as next heir to them; the poſterity of his brother being diſpoſſeſſed of them. This may denote the claim that Rome makes upon the ſeveral Proteſtant nations and countries; and which ſhe will think all her own, and that ſhe is in the poſſeſſion of them, upon the ſlaying of the witneſſes; and when ſhe will ſay, I ſit a queen, and am no widow, Rev. xviii. 7. Whereas the Lord was there; and heard their words, as Kimchi; and knew their thoughts, as Jarchi; ſo the Targum, "and before "the Lord the thoughts of the heart were mani-"feſt." The land of Judea was Immanuel's land; and as the Lord had been in it, and granted his gracious preſence in the tabernacle and temple, ſo he ſtill continued his powerful preſence in it, to protect and keep it for his people; who ſhould return to it after their captivity, and inhabit it until the Meſſiah came, who was to be born in it. Or it may be rendered, though the Lord was or dwelt there [x]; denoting the great impiety and daring wickedneſs of the Edomites, to think and talk of poſſeſſing a country that was the Lord's, and where he was: and this holds good of the true reformed churches of Chriſt; the Lord is there, and therefore tho' they may be brought very low, and antichriſt may triumph over them, and imagine he has got them under his power again, where they ſhall continue; yet on a ſudden his deſtruction will come, and their deliverance. Or, where the Lord was [y]; but he has now departed, and will never return more, the temple being deſtroyed; ſo they ſaid, encouraging themſelves.

℣. 11. Therefore as I live, ſaith the Lord, &c.] An oath as before in ℣. 6: I will do according to thine anger, and according to thine envy, which thou haſt uſed out of thy hatred againſt them; as thou haſt been angry with them, and hated them, and done miſchief to them, ſo will I be angry with thee, and hate thee, and inflict puniſhment on thee; I'll retaliate all the anger, envy, and hatred ſhewed unto my people, and puniſh thee according to thy juſt demerits. So the Romiſh antichriſt ſhall be dealt with; he who has led into captivity ſhall go into it, and he that has killed with the ſword ſhall be killed by it. Babylon ſhall be rewarded double, as ſhe has rewarded others, Rev. xiii. 10. and xviii. 6. And I will make myſelf known among them, when I have judged thee; the Targum is, "and I will "reveal myſelf to do good unto them, when I "ſhall have taken vengeance on thee:" after the deſtruction of antichriſt, the knowledge of God, and of Chriſt, will be ſpread among Jews and Gentiles, even all the world over, ſo univerſally, ſo clearly and diſtinctly, as never was before, Dan. xii. 4. Iſ. xi. 9.

℣. 12. And thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord, &c.] By the judgments executed upon Edom, and ſo upon antichriſt; for God is known by the judgments he executes, both by good and bad men, Pſ. ix. 16: and that I have heard all thy blaſphemies which thou haſt ſpoken againſt the mountains of Iſrael; the people of Iſrael and Judah literally, and the churches and people of God figuratively: ſo antichriſt is ſaid to open his mouth in blaſphemies, and to blaſpheme the tabernacle of God, and them that dwell in heaven; that is, the church of God, and the ſaints of the Moſt High; which are heard and obſerved by the Lord, and reſented by him, and for which he will puniſh, Rev. xiii. 6: ſaying, they are laid deſolate, they are given up to conſume; or, for food [z]; to poſſeſs and live upon; the inhabitants of them being carried captive or ſlain, ſo that there were none to enjoy the fruits of them; and therefore the Edomites concluded that the Iſraelites were forſaken of God, and that he would no more regard them, and that their land was theirs; which gave them great joy; ſee Rev. xi. 10.

℣. 13. Thus with your mouth ye have boaſted againſt me, &c.] Or, magnified againſt me [a]; ſpoke great ſwelling words of vanity, or had a mouth opened to ſpeak great things and blaſphemy againſt God, as antichriſt is ſaid to do, Rev. xiii. 5, 6. what is ſpoken againſt the Lord's people, is taken by him as ſpoken againſt himſelf: and have multiplied your words againſt me; not in prayer, by deprecations or ſupplications, as the word [b] uſed ſometimes ſignifies; but in reproaches and calumnies, vilifying expreſſions and hard ſpeeches, againſt his people, in great numbers; which is all one, as if they were directed againſt him: I have heard them; theſe the Lord takes notice of, and will call to an account for, either here or hereafter; ſee Jud. ℣. 15.

℣. 14. Thus ſaith the Lord God, when the whole earth rejoiceth, &c.] When it ſhall go well with the world in general, and the inhabitants of it; when they ſhall enjoy great peace and proſperity. Jarchi has a very good note upon this clauſe, "when I ſhall take my kingdom; for then the "earth will rejoice, as it is ſaid, the Lord reigns, "let the earth rejoice;" ſo when Chriſt takes to himſelf his great power, and reigns, his church and people will rejoice, Rev. xi. 16, 17. as well as at the deſtruction of antichriſt, as follows: I will make thee deſolate; for ſo ſome render it, the whole earth rejoiceth when I make thee deſolate; or, ſo ſhall all the earth rejoice in the deſolation which I ſhall make for thee [c]; ſee Rev. xviii. 20. and xix. 1, 2. and which agrees with what follows,

℣. 15. As thou didſt rejoice at the inheritance of the houſe of Iſrael, becauſe it was deſolate, &c.] So Edom rejoiced at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Obad. ℣. 12. and ſo the followers of the man of ſin will rejoice at the ſlaying of the witneſſes, Rev. xi. 10. which is reſented by the Lord, and therefore adds, ſo will I do unto thee; make thee deſolate, as is explained in the next clauſe: thou ſhalt be deſolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, even all of it; not that mount only, but all the land of Edom, called Idumea;

---

[x] ויהוה שם היה licet Dominus ibi habitaverit, Piſcator. So Syr.

[y] Ubi Jehovah fuit, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; et Jehovah ibi fuit, Starckius.

[z] לאכלה, εις καταβρωμα, Sept. in cibum, Vatablus, Cocceius, Starckius, So Syr.

[a] תגדילו עלי magnificaſtis contra me, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[b] העתרתם ab עתר orare ſuppliciter.

[c] Sic lætabitur omnis terra in deſolatione quam faciam tibi, Vatablus.

Idumea; the deſtruction ſhall be general, as it was, and irretrievable; and ſo not Rome only, but all the antichriſtian ſtates will be deſtroyed, when God comes forth in his wrath againſt them: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; the Lord God omniſcient and omnipotent; who having foretold all this, ſhall accompliſh it.

CHAP. XXXVI.

THIS chapter is a prophecy concerning the deſolations of the land of Iſrael, and the cauſes of them; of the return of the people to it, and the fruitfulneſs of it; and of ſpiritual bleſſings beſtowed upon them in the latter day. And firſt, for the comfort of the people of Iſrael, it is obſerved, that their enemies that inſulted them will ſuffer the vengeance of God's wrath, particularly the Edomites, ℣. 1—7. that the land of Iſrael ſhould again become fruitful, its cities rebuilt, men and beaſts be multiplied upon it, and be no more liable to deſtruction, nor bear any more the reproach of the heathen, ℣. 8—15. the cauſes of its deſolation and deſtruction, the ſins of its inhabitants, eſpecially blood-ſhed, idolatry, and profanation of the name of God, ℣. 16—20. nevertheleſs the Lord promiſes to have mercy on them, and return them to their own land, not for their ſakes, but for his own name-ſake, ℣. 21—24. then follow promiſes of ſpiritual bleſſings to them; as purification from all ſin by the blood of Chriſt; regeneration by his Spirit and grace; and evangelical obedience as the fruit of that, ℣. 25, 26, 27. and others of a mixed kind, reſpecting partly temporal, and partly ſpiritual bleſſings, ℣. 28—36. for all which it is expected of the Lord, that he ſhould be prayed unto for them; particularly their inhabitation in their own land, and the multiplication of them in it, with which the chapter concludes, ℣. 37, 38.

℣. 1. Alſo thou ſon of man, propheſy unto the mountains of Iſrael, &c.] The land of Judah, which was very mountainous, at leaſt one part of it, called the hill-country, Luke i. 39, 65. and now the country being cleared of men thro' the captivity, and other deſolating judgments, there were none but bare mountains to ſpeak unto: or, propheſy concerning the mountains of Iſrael [d]; the inhabitants of them, or thoſe that ſhould be reſtored to them, concerning their future happineſs and comfort: ſome render it, againſt the mountains of Iſrael [e]; but the after-prophecies of them are in their favour, and not againſt them: and ſay, ye mountains of Iſrael, hear the word of the Lord; concerning the deſtruction of their enemies, and concerning the temporal bleſſings that ſhould be beſtowed on them.

℣. 2. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] By the mouth of the prophet, who was bid to propheſy: becauſe the enemy had ſaid againſt you, Aha; rejoicing at the calamity of God's people, particularly the Edomites or Idumeans, as in the preceding chapter, and who are chiefly meant; and alſo the Ammonites and Tyrians, ch. xxv. 3. and xxvi. 2: even the ancient high places are ours in poſſeſſion; or, the high places of the world ſhall be unto us for a poſſeſſion [f]; the land of Iſrael, according to Kimchi and others, was the higheſt part of the world, Jeruſalem the higheſt part of that land, and the temple was built on the higheſt part of the city; and all theſe the Edomites claimed as their own, the land, city, and temple, and thought themſelves ſure of the ſame, as if they had them in actual poſſeſſion; even the hilly part of the country, which had been ſo from the creation, and where ſtood many of the fortified and frontier towns and cities; which as ſtrong as they were, or had been, they fanſied would eaſily fall into their hands, now ſuch deſolations were made in the land.

℣. 3. Therefore propheſy and ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Who heard all the enemy ſaid, and knew all their deſigns and purpoſes, their ſchemes and devices: becauſe they have made you deſolate; ravaged their country, deſtroyed their cities, burnt their temple, and carried them captive, and left the land without men or cattel: and ſwallowed you up on every ſide; all their neighbours being their enemies, were like ravenous beaſts of prey, gaping upon them with their mouths; and obſerving the low condition into which they were brought by the king of Babylon, helped forward the deſtruction; and every one ſhared in the ſpoil and plunder neareſt to them, they could conveniently come at: that ye might be a poſſeſſion to the reſidue of the heathen; either to thoſe that were left in the land by the king of Babylon, or to the reſt of the heathen nations round about them: ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and are an infamy of the people; reproached, defamed, and made a proverb and bye-word, by every foul mouthed prating fellow.

℣. 4. Therefore ye mountains of Iſrael, hear the word of the Lord, &c.] As in ℣. 1. here repeated to raiſe and quicken their attention, to what was about to be ſaid to them: thus ſaith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the vallies, to the deſolate waſtes, and to the cities that are forſaken; before, only the mountains are ſpoken to, tho' the whole land was included; here the ſeveral particulars are given, which deſcribe the whole, and which ſuffered in the calamity, and the inhabitants that dwelt in them, or near them; who only can be ſuppoſed to hear the word of the Lord, tho' places are only mentioned, becauſe of the great depopulation of them: which became a prey and deriſion to the reſidue of the heathen that are round about; to the Tyrians, Philiſtines, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites; who mocked the Jews, rejoicing at their deſtruction by the king of Babylon, and ſeized upon as a prey to themſelves what he left: or theſe are the reſidue of the heathens round about Judea; who remained after the judgments threatened were executed on the above nations, foretold in chapters xxv. and xxvi. ſee ℣. 36.

℣. 5. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Becauſe theſe heathens have acted ſuch an unkind and cruel part to Iſrael: ſurely in the fire of my jealouſy

---

[d] אל הרי ישראל de montibus Iſraelis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[e] Contra montes Iſrael, Vatablus.

[f] במות עולם למורשה היתה לנו excelſa ſeculi hæreditario jure futura ſunt nobis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; celſa ſeculi hæreditas evenit nobis, Cocceius, Starckius.

louſy have I ſpoken; in his fierce wrath and hot diſpleaſure, reſenting the ill uſage of his people; hot with indignation againſt their enemies, having a fervent zeal for his own glory, and an affectionate concern for the good of his people. It is in the original text in the form of an oath, if I have not ſpoken, &c [g]. let me be reckoned a liar, or not God; believe me that I have ſpoken, and in this warm manner; and have not only foretold in prophecy, and threatened the deſtruction of theſe nations, but have reſolved and determined upon it in my own mind. So the Targum, "if I have not "in the fire of my vengeance decreed in my "word:" againſt the reſidue of the heathen, and againſt all Idumea; or Edom; the Edomites, even all of them, who of all the heathen were the moſt inveterate and implacable enemies of the Jews, tho' related to them, and are therefore particularly mentioned as the objects of the divine vengeance: the reaſon follows, which have appointed my land into their poſſeſſion; the land where his choſen people dwelt, and which he choſe for them, and gave unto them; the land where he himſelf dwelt, and granted his preſence; where his temple was, and he was worſhipped. So the Targum, "the land "of the houſe of my majeſty." Now this the Lord took ill at their hands, and reſented, that they ſhould lay out this land for themſelves, and determine upon it as a poſſeſſion and inheritance of theirs. With the joy of all their heart, with deſpightful minds to caſt it out for a prey; with the utmoſt joy they joined Nebuchadnezzar's army, when he invaded the land of Judea, and beſieged Jeruſalem, out of pure malice and ſpight to the people of the Jews, in order to eject them from the poſſeſſion of their land, that it might become a prey to them; ſee Pſ. cxxxvii. 7. Obad. ℣. 12, 13, 14.

℣. 6. Propheſy therefore concerning the land of Iſrael, &c.] And the inhabitants of it, for their comfort, in this their time of diſtreſs: and ſay unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the vallies, thus ſaith the Lord God, I have ſpoken in my jealouſy, and in my fury; with great zeal for his honour, and the intereſt of his people; and with indignation at his and their enemies: becauſe ye have borne the ſhame of the heathen; their calumnies and lies, their reproaches and ſcoffs, their injuries and abuſes; all which were reſented by the Lord, and therefore he determines to puniſh for them.

℣. 7. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This being the caſe, the people of God being in diſtreſs, and under ſhame and diſgrace, and the enemy inſulting them, and triumphing over them: I have lifted up mine hand; ſolemnly ſwore; lifting up of the hand being a rite uſed by men when they ſwore, Gen. xiv. 22: ſurely the heathen that are about you, they ſhall bear their ſhame; the puniſhment of their ſhame; that which is juſtly due to them for reproaching and putting to ſhame the people of God: or they ſhall be a laughing-ſtock to others, and be reproached and derided themſelves, and ſo be paid in their own coin; a juſt retaliation this for their treatment of the Jews.

℣. 8. But ye, O mountains of Iſrael, &c.] Literally underſtood, as appears by what follows; for tho' they could not hear what was ſaid, the proprietors of them could, now in captivity; and the efficacy of the word ſhould be ſeen on them, producing the following effects: ye ſhall ſhoot forth your branches; that is, the trees that grew upon them ſhould; the vines, and the olives trees, planted on hills and mountains, as was uſual, as appears from the mount of olives, and other places: and yield your fruit to my people of Iſrael; not only put forth branches, but bear fruit; and which ſhould be given to the right owners, the people of Iſrael, and not to the heathens, who had claimed the ancient mountains for their poſſeſſion: for they are at hand to come; the Iſraelites; either by repentance, as Kimchi; or by a return from the Babyloniſh captivity, which was about forty or fifty years after this prophecy; and which was but a ſhadow and figure of their reſtoration in the latter day, yet to come; which might be ſaid to be at hand, or near, with reſpect to God, with whom two or three thouſand years are as nothing. The Targum is, "for the day of my redemption is near "to come."

℣. 9. For behold, I am for you, &c.] For the mountains, that they might be cultivated and become fruitful, and be of advantage to their proprietors, and appear beautiful and lovely to behold, as well as to be uſeful: and I will turn unto you; the Lord had turned from them, and left them a prey to the enemy, whereby they were become deſolate; but now he would turn unto them, and bleſs them, and make them fruitful, and return the right owners of them to them, who ſhould greatly improve them: and ye ſhall be tilled and ſown; manured and cultivated, and ſown with wheat and barley, as in former times.

℣. 10. And I will multiply men upon you, &c.] Who ſhould inhabit the cities on the mountains, and increaſe very much: all the houſe of Iſrael, even all of it; not the heathens ſhould be multiplied on them, but the Iſraelites, all of them, and them only; all the tribes of Iſrael, the ten tribes as well as the other; and which is repeated for the confirmation of it: by this it appears, that the prophecy has a further view than to the return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity; for all did not return, many remained in the provinces of Babylon; and thoſe that returned were chiefly of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin; but few of the reſt came with them. Kimchi thinks the words have reſpect to the ten tribes, which he ſays are hid to this day; ſo Ben Melech. And the cities ſhall be inhabited, and the waſtes ſhall be builded; in a literal ſenſe; as well as the church of God, and inheritance of Chriſt, ſhall then be in a flouriſhing condition.

℣. 11. And I will multiply upon you men and beaſt, &c.] Not only men, but beaſts alſo, of which the mountains had been deprived, being killed by the enemy for preſent uſe, or drove off for future ſubſiſtence; but now there ſhould be an increaſe of them, which ſhould feed upon the herbage of the mountains, and the rich paſtures on them, to the great advantage of the proprietors: and they ſhall increaſe and bring forth; or, multiply and increaſe [h]; both men and beaſts: and I will ſettle you after your old eſtates; that is, you mountains ſhall be inhabited by thoſe that formerly dwelt in you, and you ſhall be enjoyed by your right owners; by thoſe who had you in poſſeſſion from the beginning, from the times of Joſhua; by whom you were ſettled on them by lot, according to their ſeveral tribes: and will do better unto you than at your beginnings; not that the land ſhould be better or more fruitful than in the times of Joſhua, who led the people into it, and found it a land flowing with milk and honey, and abounding with all kind of fruit; or that the people ſhould be more flouriſhing in temporal things, than in the times of David and Solomon; for no ſuch fruitfulneſs and proſperity took place upon the return from the Babyloniſh captivity: but rather this is to be underſtood of ſpiritual bleſſings and privileges in the times of the Meſſiah; and particularly when the Jews will be converted in the latter day: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; that is, the inhabitants of the mountains of Iſrael, the converted Jews, ſhall know and own the Meſſiah, and that he is Jehovah, the eternal God, and not a mere man.

---

[g] אם לא ſi non, Cocceius, Starckius; ſub. mentiar, Junius & Tremellius; non ero Deus, Piſcator.

[h] ורבו ופרו multiplicabuntur & creſcent, Pagninus, Montanus; multiplicabuntur & fructificabunt, Cocceius.

℣. 12. Yea, I will cauſe men to walk upon you, &c.] And not beaſts, as during the captivity; and that without fear of wild beaſts, or any enemy; and not as travellers upon them, but as inhabitants of them; who ſhall walk to and fro upon them, as the owners of them, and doing their proper buſineſs there: even my people Iſrael; and them only: ſome read it, with my people Iſrael [i]; as if other men, Gentiles called by grace, ſhould dwell with the Jews at this time, particularly at their reſtoration in the latter day; which may be true, and which ſeems to be the ſenſe of the whole 60th chapter of Iſaiah's prophecy: and they ſhall poſſeſs thee, and thou ſhalt be their inheritance; that is, thou mountain; a change of number, meaning every one of the mountains, even the whole land of Canaan, which was given to the Iſraelites for an inheritance; and was typical of the eternal inheritance in heaven: and thou ſhalt no more henceforth bereave them; of men, or of children; or be no more the cauſe of their being childleſs, or of bereaving them of men; ſins committed on the mountains being the cauſe of provoking the Lord to bereave them; or men ſhould be no more killed upon them, as they had been.

℣. 13. Thus ſaith the Lord God, becauſe they ſay unto you, &c.] The heathens that dwelt round about the land of Judea, said to the mountains, or to the whole land, thou land devoureſt up men; eats up the inhabitants of it; which is part of the ill report the ſpies, in the times of Moſes, brought on it, Numb. xiii. 32. to which the alluſion is here; ſuggeſting, that either the air was unwholeſome; or that the land did not produce a ſufficiency of food to ſupport the inhabitants of it; or that the curſe of God was upon it; and that one judgment or another was ever on it; either famine, or peſtilence, or the ſword of the enemy, or inteſtine broils among themſelves, or wild beaſts, whereby the inhabitants of the land were waſted and conſumed: and haſt bereaved thy nations; the ſeveral tribes, of men and children; ſo that they were diminiſhed and depopulated: the alluſion ſeems to be to miſcarrying women, or ſuch who kill their children in the womb, and become abortive.

℣. 14. Therefore thou ſhalt devour men no more, &c.] Or they ſhall be no more deſtroyed in thee by peſtilence, famine, ſword, or other means: neither bereave thy nations any more, ſaith the Lord; or, thou ſhalt not cauſe them to fall any more [k], for ſo it is written, as in ℣. 15. tho' the marginal reading is, thou ſhalt not bereave, which we follow; and both are to be received, ſince miſcarriages often come by falls.

℣. 15. Neither will I cauſe men to hear in thee the ſhame of the heathen any more, &c.] Their calumnies and revilings, their ſcoffs and jeers: neither ſhalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more; or be any more a taunt and a curſe, a proverb and a bye-word of the people; or be their laughing-ſtock, and the object of their deriſion: neither ſhalt thou cauſe thy nations to fall any more, ſaith the Lord God; by famine, ſword, or peſtilence, or any other judgment cauſed by ſin: or, thou ſhalt not bereave [l], as the marginal reading is; and which the Targum and many verſions follow: now what is here promiſed in this and the preceding verſe, had not its full accompliſhment upon the Jews return from the Babyloniſh captivity; for ſince that time their men have been devoured, and their tribes have been bereaved of them by famine, ſword, and peſtilence; and they have heard and bore the ſhame and reproach of the nations where they have been diſperſed, and do to this day; wherefore theſe prophecies muſt refer to a future reſtoration of that people.

℣. 16. Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] Here begins another prophecy, which was delivered about the ſame time with the former: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 17. Son of man, when the houſe of Iſrael dwelt in their own land, &c.] The land of Canaan, which the Lord their God gave unto them; a land abounding with all good things, where they dwelt in great eaſe, plenty, and proſperity; and which alſo was a holy land, peculiarly choſen of God for his worſhip and ſervice: they defiled it by their own way, and by their doings; by their ſinful ways and evil works: ſin is of a defiling nature; it defiles the bodies and ſouls of men; it defiles their own, and it defiles others; it defiles a land, and the inhabitants of it, and makes them loathſome and abominable to a pure and holy God: their way was before me, as the uncleanneſs of a removed woman; of a menſtruous woman in the time of her ſeparation; when ſhe was debarred the company of her huſband, and might not enter into the ſanctuary of the Lord: this ſhows what an evil thing ſin is, what an uncleanneſs it is in the ſight of God, how abhorrent ſinful ways are to him; and tho' he was the huſband of theſe people, yet becauſe of their ſins, he ſeparated from them, and removed them from, and out of their land, as not fit to be in his preſence, nor to live there.

℣. 18. Wherefore I poured my fury on them, &c.] Like a mighty flood that carries all before it, in juſt retaliation for the blood they had ſhed upon the land; the innocent blood, as the Targum; the blood of righteous men, that oppoſed and reproved them for their ſinful ways; the blood of the prophets, that were ſent to warn them of them; and eſpecially the blood of the Son of God; for this prophecy reaches further than to the times of the Babyloniſh captivity: and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it; or, for their dung [m]; their dunghil-gods; not only for their idols, and their idolatry, before the Babyloniſh captivity, which they after that were free from; but for the traditions of their elders, they ſet up againſt and above the word of God; and their own legal righteouſneſs,

---

[i] את עמי ישראל cum populo meo Iſraele, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[k] לא תכשלי non impingere facies, Montanus, Vatablus; non offendere facies, Starckius.

[l] Non orbabis, Piſcator.

[m] בגלוליהם ſtercoreis diis ſuis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; ſtercoribus ſuis, Cocceius, Starckius.

neſs, their idols, the works of their hands, which were as dung; and through their attachment to which, they rejected Chriſt and his righteouſneſs; and which brought wrath upon them, and them into their preſent captivity.

℣. 19. And I ſcattered them among the heathen, &c.] Firſt by the Chaldeans, in the ſeveral provinces of Babylon; and next by the Romans, in the ſeveral parts of the world; and in this condition they now are: and they were diſperſed through the countries; or blown about as chaff, ſtubble, or any ſuch like thing, is by the wind: according to their way, and according to their doings I judged them; condemned and puniſhed them, as their evil ways and wicked works deſerved, according to the rules of juſtice and equity; ſo that no injuſtice was done them, nor could any fault be juſtly found in the proceedings of God towards them.

℣. 20. And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, &c.] When the Jews went into the heathen countries, whither they were carried captive, either by the Chaldeans, or by the Romans: they profaned my holy name; by their irreligion and immorality; by their violation of both tables of the law; by their wicked lives and converſations, whereby they gave the enemy an occaſion to reproach them, their religion, and their God, Rom. ii. 24: when they ſaid to them, theſe are the people of the Lord, and are gone forth out of his land; theſe are the men that boaſt they are the people of the Lord, whom he has choſen above all people, and ſee what a wicked people they are; for their ſins they are driven out of the land, and become our captives: or tho' they were the Lord's people, as they pretend, and were under his care and protection; yet he was not able to keep them in their own land, and deliver them out of our hands, but they are carried captive by us; and thus the name of God, his being and perfections, were blaſphemed, and his word, worſhip, and worſhippers, were ridiculed by them. The Targum is, “if theſe are the people of the Lord, how is “it that they are gone out of the land of the “houſe of his majeſty?”

℣. 21. But I had pity for my holy name, &c.] Had pity on the Jews for his name-ſake, and not theirs; or he had a tender concern for his own honour and glory: which the houſe of Iſrael had profaned among the heathen, whither they went; and therefore was reſolved to take a method for the glorifying of it, and that in a way of ſpecial grace and mercy to his people; ſee the note on ℣. 20.

℣. 22. Therefore ſay unto the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] This is an order to the prophet, the ſon of man, ℣. 17: thus ſaith the Lord God, I do not this for your ſakes, O houſe of Iſrael; what he hereafter promiſes to do for them, both with reſpect to things temporal and ſpiritual; which he did, not on account of any deſerts or worthineſs in them; for they had none, having done nothing to merit his favour, but, on the contrary, every thing to provoke the eyes of his glory: but for my holy names ſake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went; for the honour of his holy name, for the glory of his holy word, holy worſhip, and holy religion; all which were traduced and reproached among the heathen, by reaſon of the ungodly behaviour of the Jews.

℣. 23. And I will ſanctify my great name, &c.] The ſame with his holy name; for his greatneſs lies in his holineſs; which name he ſanctifies when he clears it from all charges and imputations; when he makes it appear to be holy, and himſelf to be glorious in holineſs; when he vindicates the honour of his name, not in a way of puniſhment, as he juſtly might, but in a way of grace and mercy; he ſanctifies his name when he proclaims it, a God gracious and merciful; for it was in this way and manner he determined to make himſelf illuſtrious and glorious, and do honour to his name: which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midſt of them; this is repeated again and again, to ſhow the heinouſneſs of this ſin, how ill he took it at their hands, and what a concern it gave him: and the heathen ſhall know that I am the Lord, ſaith the Lord God, when I ſhall be ſanctified in you before their eyes; when the Lord ſhall fulfil his promiſes, and deliver his people; when he ſhall ſanctify, juſtify, and ſave them; and he ſhall be ſanctified, ſerved, and worſhipped by them, and among them: it will be taken notice of by infidels themſelves; and they ſhall hereby know, and be obliged to acknowledge, that the God of Iſrael is the only Lord God; that he is true and faithful to his word, righteous and holy in his ways, the Lord God omniſcient and omnipotent.

℣. 24. For I will take you from among the heathen, &c.] The Chaldeans and other nations, among whom they were carried captive; and the Papiſts, among whom many of them now are, often called heathens and Gentiles in ſcripture: this will be fully completed, at the time of the Jews converſion in the latter day: the phraſe fitly expreſſes the act of divine grace, in taking his people from among the world by effectual vocation: and gather you out of all countries; to himſelf, and to his Son, and to his church, and to ſome certain place, from whence they will go up in a body to their own land, as follows; ſee Hoſ. i. 11: and will bring you into your own land; into the land of Canaan literally underſtood, as well as into the church of God here, and into the heavenly country hereafter, of which Canaan was a type.

℣. 25. Then will I ſprinkle clean water upon you, &c.] Not baptiſmal water, as Jerom; an ordinance indeed of the goſpel, and to which the Jews will ſubmit when converted; and which is performed by water, but not by ſprinkling, nor does it cleanſe from ſin; and is adminiſtered by men, and is not an operation of God, as this is: rather the regenerating grace of the Spirit; tho' this does not purify from all ſin, and beſides is intended in the next verſe: it ſeems beſt to underſtand it of the blood of Chriſt, the blood of ſprinkling, and of juſtification from ſin, and pardon of it by it; ſo Kimchi and Jarchi interpret it of purification by atonement; and the Targum is, “I will forgive “your ſins, as one is cleanſed by the water of “ſprinkling, and the aſhes of an heifer, which is “for a ſin-offering:” and ye ſhall be clean from all your filthineſs, and from all your idols will I cleanſe you; the blood of Chriſt cleanſes from all ſin; by it men are juſtified from all things, and are made perfectly pure and ſpotleſs in the ſight of God; they are cleanſed from original ſin, the pollution of their nature; from all actual ſins and tranſgreſſions, which are very defiling; from ſins of heart, lip, and life; even from ſuch as are idols, ſet up in the heart, and ſerved.

℣. 26. A new heart alſo will I give you, and a new ſpirit will I put within you, &c.] A new heart, and a new ſpirit, are one and the ſame; that is, a renewed one; renewed by the Spirit and grace of God; in which a new principle of life is put; new light is infuſed; a new will, filled with new purpoſes and reſolutions; where new affections are placed, and new deſires are formed; and where there are new delights and joys, as well as new ſorrows and troubles; the ſame which in the New Teſtament is called the new man, and the new creature, Eph. iv. 24. 2 Cor. v. 17. The Targum paraphraſes it, "a heart fearing, and a ſpirit fearing;" where the true fear of God is, a truly gracious heart; and which is purely the gift of God, and is the fruit of his rich grace, abundant mercy, and great love: and I will take away the ſtony heart out of your fleſh; the Targum is, "and I will break the "heart of the wicked which is hard as a ſtone;" this is a heart hardened by ſin, and confirmed in it; deſtitute of ſpiritual life and motion; ſenſeleſs and ſtupid, ſtubborn and inflexible; on which no impreſſions are made; and which remains hard and impenitent: now this is in the fleſh, in corrupt nature; and this hardneſs of heart is natural to men; and all who have it, are after the fleſh, or are carnal; and it requires omnipotence to remove it; it cannot be taken out by men of themſelves; nor by miniſters of the word; nor by the bare mercies and judgments of God; but by the powerful and efficacious grace of God; giving repentance unto life; working faith in the ſoul, to look to a crucified Chriſt; and ſhedding abroad the love of God in the heart, which ſoftens and melts it; all which is done by the Spirit, and frequently by means of the word. This is interpreted in the Talmud [n], of the evil imagination, or corruption of nature; and is one of the names of it, a ſtone; and it refers, it is ſaid [o], to the time or world to come, the days of the Meſſiah: and I will give you an heart of fleſh; an heart ſenſible of ſin and danger; a penitent one, ſoft and tender, thro' the love and fear of God; a ſpiritual and ſanctified heart; ſubmiſſive to the will of God; flexible and obſequious to the commands of Chriſt; on which impreſſions are made by the grace of God; where the laws of God are written, the goſpel of Chriſt is put; where Chriſt himſelf is formed; where are the fear of God, faith, hope, and love, and every other grace.

ỷ. 27. And I will put my Spirit within you, &c.] My holy Spirit, as the Targum; the Spirit of holineſs; the author of internal ſanctification, of the new heart and ſpirit, and of the fleſhy one beforementioned; and thro' whoſe grace and ſtrength the ſaints do what is after ſaid they ſhall do: and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes; men are firſt made alive by the Spirit of God, and have ſpiritual ſtrength put into them, who of themſelves can do nothing; by means of which they are enabled to walk in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, and to continue in the obſervation of them; which walking in them ſuppoſes: and ye ſhall keep my judgments, and do them; being conſtrained by the love of God; influenced by the grace of Chriſt; and ſtrengthened by the bleſſed Spirit: and ſuch perſons obſerve, and do them willingly and chearfully; from a principle of love; in faith, and to the glory of God; without any mercenary and ſelfiſh views; without truſting to, and depending upon, what is done for ſalvation.

ỷ. 28. And ye ſhall dwell in the land which I gave to your fathers, &c.] Not only ſhall be brought into it, but ſhall inhabit it, and continue there, and that in great ſafety and plenty; and which will be the more valued and eſteemed, and reckoned a great bleſſing to enjoy; becauſe this land is the gift of God, and what he gave to their fathers, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob by promiſe ſo long ago, and to their ſeed; of which promiſe it appears he is not unmindful: and ye ſhall be my people, and I will be your God; which is the ſum and ſubſtance of the covenant of grace; which will now be renewed, and the bleſſings of it applied. The Jews will appear to be the people of God by their effectual calling and converſion; and God will ſhew himſelf to be their God, by his preſence with them, his protection of them, and that communion with himſelf he will admit them to; ſee Jer. xxxi. 1. and xxxii. 38. the Loammi will be taken off, and they will be again declared to be the covenant-people of God, Hoſ. i. 9, 10.

ỷ. 29. And I will alſo ſave you from all your uncleanneſſes, &c.] From all their filthy luſts of pride, envy, malice, covetouſneſs, whoredom, blaſphemy and infidelity, to which the Jews are now addicted; but at this time ſhall be ſaved from the power and dominion of them, by the ſanctifying grace of the Spirit; and from the guilt and pollution of them, by the blood of Chriſt ſprinkled on them; and this, not from one, or ſome of them only, but from all of them; all Iſrael will be ſaved, and they will be ſaved from all their ſins, Rom. xi. 25, 26: and I will call for the corn, and will increaſe it; which ſhall anſwer to the call of God, as a ſervant to his maſter; and ſhall ſpring up out of the earth in great abundance; and which ſhall grow, and increaſe, and bring forth much fruit; and yield bread to the eater, and ſeed to the ſower: and which is to be underſtood, not of corn in a literal ſenſe only, but of corn in a ſpiritual ſenſe; of all ſpiritual proviſions, the word and ordinances, and eſpecially the corn of wheat, Chriſt Jeſus; who is the ſum and ſubſtance of the goſpel and his ordinances, and is in them food for the faith of his people; ſee Zech. ix. 17: and lay no famine upon you; neither a famine of bread, or of water; nor of hearing the word of the Lord; but ſhall have plenty of proviſions, both for ſoul and body; ſee Amos viii. 11.

ỷ. 30. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increaſe of the field, &c.] The fruit of trees that grow in gardens, and orchards, and vineyards, as pomegranates, apples, olives, grapes, &c. and the corn and graſs of the field; ſo that there ſhall be great plenty of each of theſe, and no want of any thing for man or beaſt: and by theſe are myſtically deſigned ſpiritual bleſſings; the fruits of righteouſneſs, with which the ſaints, who are trees of righteouſneſs, ſhall be laden; and an increaſe of gifts and grace in the churches of Chriſt, and the members of them: that ye ſhall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen; who upbraided them with it, that they were forced to go to other nations for food, as in the times of their fathers Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob; and that their land wanted rain, and waited for it; which, if it had not, became barren; whereas the Egyptians particularly needed it not, their land being watered yearly with the overflowings of the Nile: or the ſenſe is, they ſhould not be reproached with their penury and want of the things of life; and ſpiritually, that they ſhould not be upbraided by the Gentiles with their want of the goſpel, and their contempt of it, their blaſphemy and their unbelief; ſince they ſhould now have it, receive, embrace and love it, and feed upon it.

---

[n] T. Bab. Succah, fol. 52. 1.

[o] Debarim Rabba, fol. 242. 2. & Shir-haſhirim Rabba, fol. 3. 2.

℣. 31. Then ſhall ye remember your own evil ways, &c.] That were of their own chuſing; in which they walked, and delighted to walk: and very evil ones they were; oppoſite to the ways of God; ſuch as open violation of the law of God; neglect of his worſhip; idolatry, and many other ſins before the captivity; adhering to the traditions of their elders; and ſetting up their own righteouſneſs as a juſtifying one afterwards; alſo their diſbelief and rejection of the Meſſiah; their blaſphemy againſt him, and perſecution of his intereſt and people: now theſe will all be remembered with ſhame and confuſion, when the Lord ſhall beſtow upon them the above bleſſings, ſpiritual and temporal; eſpecially when a new heart and ſpirit ſhall be given them; the goodneſs of God will have ſuch an influence upon them, as to refreſh their memories with former ſins, and bring them to repentance for them; as well as to affect their minds, and make them thankful for preſent mercies: ſins, which were before forgotten, or were not thought to be ſins, ſhall now come freſh in their minds, with all their aggravated guilt: and your doings that were not good; far from being ſo; they were very evil, contrary to the law of God, and goſpel of Chriſt; as they will at this time appear to themſelves to be: and ſhall loath yourſelves in your own ſight for your iniquities, and for your abominations; their ſins will be abominable to them, as they are in themſelves, and to the Lord; and they'll not only loath them, but themſelves for them; when they ſhall come to have a true ſight of them in their own colours, and a true ſenſe of the evil nature of them; and this ſhall not be expreſſed only in the ſight of men, and ſo as to be obſerved by them; but in their own ſight, ſecretly and within themſelves, under a clear and full conviction of their ſins. The Syriac verſion is, your faces ſhall be wrinkled; as mens are when they are diſpleaſed with themſelves for what they have done. The Targum is, "and ye ſhall groan when ye ſhall ſee, "becauſe of your ſins, and becauſe of your abo-"minations;" which is the caſe of ſenſible ſinners, 2 Cor. v. 4. ſee ch. xx. 43.

℣. 32. Not for your ſakes do I this, ſaith the Lord, &c.] Not for any worth or worthineſs in them; for any merit or deſert of theirs; for any goodneſs in them, or works of righteouſneſs done by them; no, it purely flowed from his own unmerited grace and goodneſs; for his own ſake, and for his own glory, will he do it; ſee Deut. ix. 4, 5, 6: be it known unto you; this the Lord would have this people take notice of, who were very fond of their own righteouſneſs and merits, and to truſt therein, and aſcribe much thereunto, as moſt men are too apt to do; and therefore to take down their pride, and take them off of their boaſtings and vain opinions of themſelves, he would have them know and acknowledge this; and be ſo far from placing any of the favours beſtowed on them to the account of the merit of their good works, that they ought to take ſhame for their evil ones, as follows: be aſhamed and confounded for your own ways, O houſe of Iſrael; as men are, when they are brought to a true ſight and ſenſe of them, and reflect upon the evil of them, and are brought to true repentance for them; ſee ch. xvi. 61, 63.

℣. 33. Thus ſaith the Lord God, in the day that I ſhall have cleanſed you from all your iniquities, &c.] By the free and full pardon of them; by ſprinkling clean water on them, the blood of Chriſt on their conſciences; and by applying the righteouſneſs of Chriſt to them for their juſtification; as well as by creating clean hearts in them, for their ſanctification; and enabling them by grace to eſcape and abſtain from the pollutions of the world: I will alſo cauſe you to dwell in the cities; that is, of Judea, which, as well as Jeruſalem, ſhall be rebuilt and inhabited, as follows: and the waſtes ſhall be builded; ſuch cities and towns as lay in ruins: temporal proſperity ſhall go along with or follow ſpiritual bleſſings to the people of the Jews at their converſion; or they ſhall dwell in the churches of Chriſt, which are as cities compact together, well regulated, and where Jews and Gentiles at this time will be fellow-citizens.

℣. 34. And the deſolate land ſhall be tilled, &c.] The land of Judea, which lay deſolate during the captivity; and which now is under the dominion of the Turks, and in a ruinous ſtate, ſhall be manured and cultivated, and become fruitful, as it formerly was: or the people of the Jews, who, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, are like barren and uncultivated ground; theſe ſhall have the fallow ground of their hearts plowed up, and the ſeeds of grace, truth and righteouſneſs ſhall be ſown in them, and they ſhall bring forth the fruit of good works: whereas it lay deſolate in the eyes of all that paſſed by; as the land of Canaan now does to every traveller in it, that obſerves it, and compares it with what it once was; and as the preſent ſtate of the Jews is, in the eyes of every chriſtian pilgrim and traveller, that takes notice of their blindneſs and ignorance, their unbelief and hardneſs of heart.

℣. 35. And they ſhall ſay, &c.] Either the neighbouring nations that lived round about the land of Iſrael, ℣. 36. or rather the travellers as before, who having as they paſſed by obſerved what it had been, and now ſee what it is; theſe ſhall ſay to one another: this land that was deſolate, is become like the garden of Eden; for delight and fruitfulneſs: this may well be applied to the flouriſhing and fruitful ſtate of the church of God, conſiſting of converted Jews, in the latter day: and the waſte, and deſolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited; which, as it will be true of cities in a literal ſenſe, ſo of the churches of Chriſt in Judea in a ſpiritual ſenſe; which will be rebuilt by the grace of God, fenced and fortified by his almighty power, and inhabited by true believers.

℣. 36. Then the heathen that are left round about you, &c.] Not cut off by the judgments which came upon them, according to the prophecies in ch. xxv. and xxvi. the reſidue of the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites and Tyrians; and in the myſtical ſenſe, this may deſign the reſidue of the antichriſtian ſtates not deſtroyed by the vials of God's wrath; ſee Rev. xi. 2, 13: ſhall know that I the Lord build the ruined places, and plant that that was deſolate; this work of rebuilding Jeruſalem, and other cities of Judea, and planting deſolate places with trees, and all manner of corn and herbage for man and beaſt; as well as of building up and planting churches, will appear ſo manifeſtly the work of God, and not of men; which is brought about by his wonderful providence, or more ſurprizing grace; that even the heathen round about will take notice of it, and own and acknowledge it to be the Lord's work: I the Lord have ſpoken it, and I will do it; he has ſpoken of it by his prophets; phets; he has promiſed it in his word, and he will ſurely do it; for he is true and faithful to his promiſes, and able to perform.

℣. 37. Thus ſaith the Lord God, I will yet for this be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] Be ſought and prayed unto, for the accompliſhment of the above promiſes, as well as what follows; for tho' God has promiſed and will perform, yet he expects that his people will apply to him for it; it is our duty to put the Lord in mind of his promiſes, to plead them with him, and pray unto him for the fulfilment of them. The Syriac verſion is, even for this I ſeek Iſrael; and ſo the Arabic verſion; as if the ſenſe was, that the Lord will ſeek the people of Iſrael wherever they are, and find them out, and call them by his grace, and gather them out of all countries, and bring them into their own land: to do it for them; every thing before promiſed, and what next follows: I will increaſe them with men like a flock; as a flock of ſheep is increaſed, which is a very increaſing creature: or, as a flock of men[p]; it ſignifies that the people of the Jews will be very numerous at their converſion; ſee Hoſ. i. 10.

℣. 38. As the holy flock, as the flock of Jeruſalem in her ſolemn feaſts, &c.] Like flocks of ſheep, which were conſecrated and ſet apart for holy uſes, for ſacrifices; even like the flocks of ſheep, which were brought to Jeruſalem to be offered in ſacrifice at the three ſolemn feſtivals in the year; eſpecially at the paſſover, when the Jews came from all parts of the country to ſlay and eat their paſſover; and every family had a lamb, which in all muſt be a great number: we read of thirty thouſand lambs, and three thouſand bullocks given at one time for this ſervice by king Joſiah, beſides what was given by the princes, 2 Chron. xxxv. 7, 8, 9. The Targum is, "as the holy people, as a people that is "cleanſed, and comes to Jeruſalem at the feaſts of "the paſſover:" or, as the flock of the holy ones[q]; either of the holy God, Father, Son and Spirit; or of holy men, who are made holy or ſanctified by the Spirit of God: ſo ſhall the waſte cities be filled with flocks of men; or with men that are like ſheep for meekneſs, harmleſſneſs, patience, cleanneſs, ſociety and uſefulneſs; and not with ſuch as are comparable to unclean beaſts, or beaſts of prey; ſo it denotes both the quantity of perſons that ſhall inhabit Judea, and dwell both in the cities and churches there, and the quality of them.

CHAP. XXXVII.

THIS chapter contains a prophecy of the Jews return from captivity to their own land; of the union of the ſeveral tribes with one another; and of the glorious kingdom of Chriſt among them. Their reſtoration is repreſented by a viſion of dry bones made alive; the place in which they were; the condition they were in; and the manner in which they were made to live, are deſcribed, ℣. 1—10. the explication and application of this viſion to the Jews, ℣. 11—14. their union is ſignified by a ſign or emblem of two ſticks, which became one in the hand of the prophet, ℣. 15, 16, 17. the meaning of this is ſhewn, ℣. 18, 19, 20. then follow promiſes of their return to their own land, in expreſs words; of their being one kingdom, under one king, Chriſt, the antitype of David; of their ſanctification; of their covenant-intereſt in God, made manifeſt to them; and of his preſence, and dwelling among them, ℣. 21—28.

℣. 1. The hand of the Lord was upon me, &c.] The Spirit of the Lord, a powerful impulſe of his upon the prophet: the Targum interprets it, a ſpirit of prophecy; ſee the note on ch. i. 3: and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord; out of the place where he was to another; not really, but viſionally, as things appeared to him, and as they were repreſented to his mind by the Spirit of God: and ſet me down in the midſt of the valley which was full of bones; of men, as the Targum adds: this valley, Kimchi thinks, was the ſame by the river Chebar, where the prophet had his viſions at firſt. R. Jochanan ſays, it was the valley of Dura, and theſe the bones of them that were ſlain by Nebuchadnezzar there, Dan. iii. 1. Rab ſays, theſe were the children of Ephraim, ſlain by the men of Gath, 1 Chron. vii. 20, 21, 22. Some of the Jewiſh Rabbins think there was a real reſurrection at this time. R. Eliezer ſays, the dead Ezekiel quickened ſtood upon their feet, ſung a ſong, and died. R. Eliezer the ſon of R. Joſe the Galilean, ſays, they went up into the land of Iſrael, married wives, and begat ſons and daughters. R. Judah ben Bethira ſtood upon his feet, and ſaid, I am of their childrens children, and theſe are the Tephillim my father's father left me[r]; but theſe are all fabulous and romantic: others of them underſtand the whole in a parabolical way: theſe bones and the quickening of them were an emblem of the reſtoration of the Jews from their captivity, who were in a helpleſs and hopeleſs condition, as appears from ℣. 11—14. and of the converſion of that people in the latter day, which will be as life from the dead; and of the revival of the intereſt and church of Chriſt, when the ſlain witneſſes ſhall riſe and aſcend to heaven; and of the reſurrection of the dead at the laſt day; and may be applied unto, and be uſed to illuſtrate the quickening of dead ſinners, by the efficacious grace of the Spirit of God.

℣. 2. And cauſed me to paſs by them round about, &c.] Round, round[s]; ſeveral times round, that he might take exact notice of them, of their number, ſituation and condition: and behold, there were very many in the open valley; as the Jews were in captivity; and as they will be when they ſhall be converted; and as the number of chriſtians will be in the ſpiritual reign of Chriſt; and as the dead will be at the time of their reſurrection, both of the juſt and unjuſt: and lo they were very dry; thro' length of time they had lain there, expoſed to wind and weather; the fleſh being wholly conſumed from off of them, and the marrow within quite dried up; ſo that there was no probability or hope, humanly ſpeaking, of their being quickened: theſe are a fit emblem of men in a ſtate of nature and unregeneracy, who have no ſpiritual life, but are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; have no ſenſe of ſin or danger; no ſtrength to redeem and regenerate themſelves, or do any thing that is ſpiritually good; have no ſpiritual motion; no inward deſires after God, or affection to him; no lifting up of the heart to him, or going out of the ſoul in faith and love to Chriſt; but in themſelves entirely lifeleſs, helpleſs and hopeleſs.

---

[p] כצאן אדם ſicut gregem hominum, Vulg. Lat. Syr. ſicut pecus hominis, Montanus; pecudes hominum, Pagninus.

[q] כצאן קדשים ſicut oves ſanctorum, Vatablus, Guſſetius, Starckius.

[r] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 92. 2. Vid. Kimchi & Abendana in loc.

[s] סביב סביב circum circa, Pagninus; undique undique, Montanus.

℣. 3. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, can theſe bones live? &c.] Is there any probability of it? is there any reaſon to believe they ſhall live? can any ways and means be deviſed, or any methods taken, to cauſe them to live? and I anſwered, O Lord God, thou knoweſt; the prophet does not pronounce at once that it was improbable and impoſſible; he knew indeed it was not probable, or poſſible, that theſe bones ſhould revive of themſelves; and he knew, that neither he, nor any creature could quicken them; but he wiſely refers it to an omniſcient and omnipotent God, who knew what he could, and what he would do: the converſion of ſinners is not of themſelves, nor of miniſters, but of God; it is wholly owing to his will and power, John i. 13. nothing elſe can make it probable or poſſible.

℣. 4. Again he ſaid unto me, propheſy upon theſe bones, &c.] Or, over theſe bones [t]; or, concerning theſe bones [u]; foretell that they ſhall live; tell others of it, and them alſo: and ſay unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord; the word of prophecy concerning you, as the Jews did in Babylon: ſo unconverted ſinners may be preached unto, and their loſt and miſerable eſtate in which they are, like dry bones, may be ſet before them; they may be called upon to attend the external miniſtry of the word; and they are capable of hearing it, with their bodily ears; tho' it is not profitable to them, for want of faith, yet faith comes hereby; and therefore it is right to attend upon the means, and hear the word.

℣. 5. Thus ſaith the Lord God unto theſe bones, &c.] By the prophet, who was ſent to propheſy over them: behold, I will cauſe breath to enter into you, and ye ſhall live; and none could do this but the living God, who breathed the breath of life into Adam at firſt, and he became a living ſoul; to which there ſeems to be an alluſion here; and when the Lord puts his Spirit into men, or beſtows his grace on them, then they ſhall live, and not till then.

℣. 6. And I will lay ſinews upon you, and I will bring up fleſh upon you, &c.] That is, before he ſhould cauſe breath to enter into them; for tho' it is firſt mentioned, it is the laſt done: this is the orderly proceſs; firſt ſinews are laid to join the bones together; then fleſh is laid to cover them, and fill up all vacancies, and form muſcles to make the bones capable of motion: and cover you with ſkin; both bones, ſinews and fleſh; for this is uppermoſt of all, and which makes the whole ſmooth and beautiful. Job expreſſes his formation in much ſuch language, thou haſt clothed me with ſkin and fleſh, and haſt fenced me with bones and ſinews, Job x. 11: and put breath in you, and ye ſhall live; which is repeated for the confirmation of it: and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord; the Lord God omnipotent, the Lord gracious and merciful, and your Lord and God: ſo men, when they are called by grace, know the Lord, they did not before; having an experience of his powerful and efficacious grace upon their hearts, they know him to be theirs, and own and acknowledge him, and profeſs him before men.

℣. 7. So I propheſied, as I was commanded, &c.] The prophet was not diſobedient to the heavenly viſion; he was right to obſerve the orders and inſtructions given, whatever were the iſſue and ſucceſs of them; that he was to leave with the Lord, and did. So goſpel-miniſters propheſy or preach according to the commiſſion given them, and leave their work with the Lord: this was the firſt propheſying; for there is another after-mentioned: theſe two are carefully to be obſerved and diſtinguiſhed, different effects following the one, and the other: this was a propheſying to the dry bones, upon them, over them, and concerning them; and what is next related, was the conſequence of it: and as I propheſied, there was a noiſe; or, a voice [w]; this, in the literal ſenſe, was the proclamation by Cyrus, giving the Jews leave to return to their own land, Ezra i. 1, 2, 3. at the revival of the intereſt of Chriſt, a great voice will be heard from heaven, ſaying to the witneſſes, come up hither, Rev. xi. 12. and at the deſcent of Chriſt to raiſe his dead firſt, there will be the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, 1 Theſſ. iv. 16. and, as while the prophet was propheſying, there was not only his voice heard, but the voice of God, perhaps a thunder-clap; ſo in the miniſtry of the goſpel there is a voice heard, which at firſt is only externally heard; men hear a noiſe, a voice, but it is a confuſed one; they don't know what to make of it, and yet it has ſome effect upon them; it cauſes a noiſe in them, an out-cry about ſin, and hell, and damnation; and yet at preſent no ſpiritual life or breath is in them: and behold a ſhaking; of the bones; a rattling among them, as may be conceived muſt be where there is, as here, a tumbling of dry bones one over another to get to their proper bone: ſo in the firſt effect of the word upon the conſcience of a ſinner, which works wrath there, there's a ſhaking and trembling thro' fear of damnation; which in ſome iſſues in real converſion, as in Saul and the jailor, Acts ix. 6. and xvi. 29. but in others it goes off again, and comes to nothing, as in Felix, Acts xxiv. 25: and the bones came together, bone to his bone; ſo the Jews ſcattered up and down in the provinces of Babylon gathered together upon the proclamation of Cyrus, and went up in a body to their own land; as they will do alſo at the time of their converſion, Hoſ. i. 11. thus, when perſons are only under ſlight convictions, they may gather together, and have their religious meetings and ſocieties, and yet be only a parcel of dry bones, without any ſpiritual life and breath in them.

℣. 8. And when I beheld, lo the ſinews and the fleſh came up upon them, &c.] And they began to look like men, in the ſhape of men, and were a body of them, as the Jews did when gathered together: and the ſkin covered them above; and ſo looked comely and beautiful, as in the proper form of men; as did the Jews enriched and protected by Cyrus: and this may be an image of ſuch perſons ſo far wrought upon under the word, as to look like chriſtians; to have the form of godlineſs, and appear outwardly righteous before men, ſubmitting to ordinances, and performing the duties of religion; and yet no principle of ſpiritual life in them; but like Adam's body of the earth, earthly and breathleſs, before the breath of life was breathed into it; ſo here, but there was no breath in them; no ſpirit in the Jews to return to their land, tho' they had liberty, till the Lord ſtirred up their ſpirits, Ezra i. 5. all this, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, ſhews how far perſons may go under temporary convictions by the word, and yet not be living chriſtians.

---

[t] על העצמות האלה super oſſa hæc, Starckius.

[u] De oſſibus iſtis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

[w] ויהי קול & extitit vox, Cocceius, Starckius; & fuit vox, Montanus.

ỷ. 9. Then ſaid he unto me, propheſy unto the wind, &c.] Before he had been propheſying to the bones, and over them; and ſomething was done, but not to purpoſe, breath being wanting; wherefore he is bid to propheſy a ſecond time, and that not to bones, but to the wind, afterwards rendered breath; and may allude to the ſoul or breath of man re-entering the body, as at a reſurrection, which cauſes it to live: it ſignifies the ſpirit [a], for the ſame word is uſed for the wind, for breath, and for the ſpirit; and in the myſtical ſenſe may be applied to the Spirit of God: and if ever miniſters propheſy or preach to purpoſe, it muſt be with a view to the Spirit of God, both to aſſiſt them in their work, and to make their miniſtrations effectual; without which, how many formal profeſſors ſoever may be made, not one dead ſinner will be quickened. The Syriac and Arabic verſions render it, concerning the ſpirit; and to diſcourſe concerning the perſon, operations, and grace of the Spirit, is one part of the goſpel-miniſtry, and a means of the converſion of ſinners. Propheſy, ſon of man, and ſay to the wind; miniſters muſt not only preach, but they muſt pray for the Spirit to accompany the word with his power, and make it the ſavour of life unto life: thus ſaith the Lord, come from the four winds, O breath; or ſpirit; becauſe the Jews were to be brought from ſeveral parts where they were, as they will be at their converſion in the latter day; and ſo the Lord has a people in the ſeveral parts of the world, that lie dead in ſin, and muſt be quickened by the Spirit: and breathe upon theſe ſlain that they may live; tho' not ſlain with the ſword, yet being as dead men, who are ſlain by death, are ſo called: ſo in a ſpiritual ſenſe men are ſlain by ſin, and are ſlain by the words of the Lord's mouth; killed with the law, the killing letter; and it is only the Spirit of God that can give them life; and the breath or ſpirit here, is applied to the Spirit of the Meſſiah by the ancient Jews [y].

ỷ. 10. So I propheſied as he commanded me, &c.] The ſecond time he propheſied to the wind, as he had done to the bones, as he was ordered: and the iſſue of it was, and breath came into them; or, the ſpirit; a ſpirit of courage in the Jews, to go up to their own land; the Spirit of life from Chriſt, which will enter into the witneſſes ſlain, and revive them; and into the Jews in the latter day, and convert them; and which enters into dead ſinners, and quickens them; and this he does whilſt miniſters are preaching the goſpel to them; ſee Rev. xi. 11. Acts x. 44: and they lived; as men do ſpiritually, when the Spirit of God has produced a principle of ſpiritual life in them; they live by faith on Chriſt, in union and fellowſhip with him; they live in newneſs of life, and a holy life and converſation; and ſhall live and reign with Chriſt upon the firſt reſurrection, and for evermore: and ſtood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army; as the Jews did when they returned from the Babyloniſh captivity, they were many, and in a poſture of defence; and as they will be in the latter day, when converted, Hoſ. i. 10. and as the number of the ſaints will be upon the firſt reſurrection, Rev. vii. 9. ſo when men are quickened by the Spirit of God, they ſtand upon their feet; they ſtand in the grace of God, and on the foundation Chriſt; they ſtand by faith in him, and in the doctrine of faith, and in the houſe of God; and they ſtand firm againſt all their enemies: they are an army; they are in a military ſtate, fighting againſt ſin, ſatan, and the world; and tho' few in compariſon of others, yet conſidered by themſelves are very numerous; and as they will appear, when the Jews will be converted, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles brought in; and eſpecially when they will be all gathered together at the coming of Chriſt.

ỷ. 11. Then he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] Here follow the explication and application of the above viſion: theſe bones are the whole houſe of Iſrael; an emblem of them, of their ſtate and condition in the Babyloniſh captivity, and of them in their preſent ſtate; and of the whole Iſrael of God, whilſt in a ſtate of unregeneracy: this phraſe takes in the ten tribes, as well as the two tribes of Benjamin and Judah, which returned from Babylon; and ſhows, that reſpect is had to ſomething more than that reſtoration barely: behold, they ſay, our bones are dried; the houſe of Iſrael ſay, we are like dry bones indeed; we have no ſpirit, nor ſtrength, nor courage, nor life in us: and our hope is loſt; of being delivered from the preſent captivity; or of the Meſſiah's coming; or of ever enjoying their own land, and of the promiſes of thoſe things made unto them: we are cut off for our parts; from the land of Iſrael, and have no hope of poſſeſſing it again, whatever others have; indeed they are cut off from the olive-tree, and are cut down like a tree, both as to their civil and church-ſtate. The Targum is, "and we are periſhed;" it is all over with us; we are loſt and undone; all the expreſſions ſhew the deſperate and deſpairing condition they were in.

ỷ. 12. Therefore propheſy, and ſay unto them, &c.] For their comfort, in order to revive their hope, and encourage their faith, in theſe diſtreſſed circumſtances: thus ſaith the Lord, behold, O my people; they were his people ſtill, and he had a covenant-intereſt in them, and they in him, though in ſuch a low eſtate; and which was the ground of his care of them, and concern for them, and of doing all the good things to them after-mentioned; all proceeded from his covenant, and the grace of it, and their relation to him: I will open your graves, and cauſe you to come out of your graves; the cities and priſons in Chaldea and other places; where they were confined and held captives, and out of which they could no more deliver themſelves, than a dead man of himſelf can riſe up out of his grave: this is both an emblem of the reſurrection of the dead at the laſt day [z], when they ſhall come forth out of their graves at the voice of Chriſt, ſome to the reſurrection of life, and others to the reſurrection of damnation; and of dead ſinners, raiſed out of the graves of ſin by the power and efficacy of the grace of God; ſee John v. 25, 28, 29: and bring you into the land of Iſrael; to dwell in it, and abide there, and be no more diſpoſſeſſed of it; as they will not, any more, when once ſettled in it, upon their converſion in the latter day.

---

[a] הרוח ad ſpiritum, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius; alloquens ſpiritum, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus.

[y] Zohar in Numb. fol. 92. 1.

[z] To which it is applied in T. Bab. Sabbat, fol. 152. 2. & Taanith, fol. 2. 2.

℣. 13. And ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, &c.] See the note on ℣. 6: when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves; which is doing that for them, which none but the omnipotent God could do; and they ſeeing his hand and power, his grace and mercy in it, will know, own, and acknowledge him.

℣. 14. And ſhall put my Spirit in you, and ye ſhall live, &c.] Not only a ſpirit of courage to go up into their own land, and live a civil and comfortable life there; but the Spirit of God, as a Spirit of grace and ſupplication, of truth and holineſs, of faith and adoption; and as a Spirit of life, having produced a principle of life in them, and ſo ſhould live ſpiritually and ſoberly, righteouſly and godly; ſee ch. xxxvi. 27: and I ſhall place you in your own land; ſettle them there in peace and quietneſs, in ſafety and ſecurity, and in enjoyment of all mercies and privileges temporal and ſpiritual: then ſhall ye know that I the Lord have ſpoken it, and performed it, ſaith the Lord; that all this was a promiſe of his, foretold by him, notified to them by his prophets, and now fully accompliſhed exactly; which they would obſerve with wonder and thankfulneſs, and give him the glory of it.

℣. 15. The word of the Lord came unto me again, &c.] Immediately or quickly after he had the above viſion of the dry bones, and the explanation of it: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 16. Moreover, thou ſon of man, take thee one ſtick, &c.] Or wood[a]; a ſtick of wood; or table, as the Targum; a board or plank. The Septuagint verſion renders it, a rod; and ſo the Arabic; an emblem of a kingdom or government, as this was: and write upon it; the following words: for Judah, and the children of Iſrael his companions; for the tribe of Judah, and the tribe of Benjamin, which adhered together, and as many of the other tribes which joined them; the godly and religious of the reſt of the tribes, who could not give into the idolatry of Jeroboam: then take another ſtick; like the former: and write upon it; theſe words: for Joſeph the ſtick of Ephraim, and for all the houſe of Iſrael his companions; for the tribe of Ephraim, and the other nine tribes, which together made up one kingdom. It ſhould be obſerved, that in the times of Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon, there was a diviſion in the kingdom of Iſrael; ten tribes revolted from him, and only the two whole tribes of Judah and Benjamin continued with him; and from that time to the captivity, and even during that, as it ſeems, there were continual animoſities and bickerings between the two kingdoms, on account both of their political and religious affairs, eſpecially the latter; and an union between them, this emblem is deſigned to ſignify, as will hereafter appear. Jeroboam, the firſt king of the ten tribes, was of the tribe of Ephraim; and Samaria, the metropolis of the kingdom, was in that tribe; hence Ephraim often ſtands for all the ten tribes, for the kingdom of Iſrael, as diſtinct from that of Judah. Writing words on ſticks or rods, ſeems to be in alluſion to what was done, Numb. xvii. 2.

℣. 17. And join them one to another into one ſtick, &c.] Clap the ſticks, planks, boards or tables, to one another; glue them together, or ſet them ſo cloſe to one another, that they may ſeem as one ſtick, plank, board, or table: and they ſhall become one in thine hand; they ſhall look as if they were one. R. Joſeph Kimchi, the father of David, thinks, they really became one, by means of a miracle wrought; but there is no need to ſuppoſe this; it is enough that they appeared to be ſo.

℣. 18. And when the children of thy people ſhall ſpeak unto thee, ſaying, &c.] The children of Iſrael and Judah in captivity, of which people Ezekiel was, and to whom he was ſent as a prophet; who ſeeing him take two ſticks, and write on them, and then join them together, would naturally put ſuch a queſtion to him, wilt thou not ſhew us what thou meaneſt by theſe? for they concluded he had ſome meaning in it, and that it was not a mere childiſh diverſion and amuſement; and therefore would deſire that he would let them know what it was: whether they would aſk this ſeriouſly or in banter, out of curioſity or in contempt, as they ſometimes did; it matters not, he was to give them an anſwer, as follows; tho' by the manner of their putting the queſtion, it looks as if they were doubtful whether he would or no; ſince they had treated him in a ſneering way on ſuch like occaſions before.

℣. 19. Say unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Here follows the explanation of the ſign or emblem: behold, I will take the ſtick of Joſeph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Iſrael his fellows; that is, the kingdom of Iſrael, conſiſting of the ten tribes, of which Ephraim was the chief: and will put them with him, even with the ſtick of Judah; with the kingdom of Judah: and make them one ſtick; theſe two kingdoms one kingdom: and they ſhall be one in my hand; in Chriſt, the hand and arm of the Lord; one under his care, government, and protection, as after explained: this had in part, and as a ſhadow of what was to come, its fulfilment upon the Jews return from Babylon; when many of the ten tribes, as well as the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, came from thence, and became one nation and kingdom under one prince, until the coming of Chriſt; and it had a further accompliſhment, in the union of converted Jews and Gentiles in one body: but this is chiefly deſigned as an emblem of the union of the Jews one to another, when they ſhall be converted in the latter day; when they ſhall join together in ſeeking the Lord, and David their king, the Meſſiah; who ſhall be the one king over them, as is afterwards ſaid; and when all animoſities ſhall ceaſe, both among them, and among all the ſpiritual Iſrael of God in general; ſee Iſ. xi. 13. Jer. l. 4. Hoſ. i. 11. and iii. 5. Zeph. iii. 9.

℣. 20. And the ſticks whereon thou writeſt, &c.] Or art about to write the above things, according to order and direction: ſhall be in thine hand before their eyes; ſhall be held up to them to look at for ſome time, and obſerve the cement of the two ſticks; and learn and lay up in their minds what is meant by this emblem; and be aſſured, that what is hereafter ſaid as a further explication of it, ſhall certainly be fulfilled.

℣. 21. And ſay unto them, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Or as the Targum, "thou ſhalt propheſy to "them;" for what follows is a prophecy of what ſhall be in the latter day: behold, I will take the children of Iſrael from among the heathen, whither they be gone; or, from among the Gentiles[b]; not only the Chaldeans, where they were carried captives; but from among the nations where they are now diſperſed, and among whom they go freely of their own accord from place to place, for the ſake of traffick: and this phraſe, whither they be gone, or are going [c], travelling about from one country to another, better deſcribes the preſent Jews, and their ſtate, than thoſe in the Babyloniſh captivity: and will gather them on every ſide; or, round about [d]; from the ſeveral parts of the world where they are: and bring them into their own land; the land of Canaan, given by the Lord to their fathers, and to them their poſterity, for an inheritance; tho' now in the poſſeſſion of others, who, it ſeems, are not the right owners.

---

[a] עץ אחד lignum unum, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus, &c.

[b] מבין הגוים e medio ipſarum gentium, Junius & Tremellius; ex gentibus, Starckius; e vel ex medio gentium, Piſcator, Cocceius.

℣. 22. And I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Iſrael, &c.] As they were in the times of David and Solomon, who were both types of the Meſſiah; and to whoſe times is referred this prophecy by the ancient Jews [e], as then to have its accompliſhment: and one king ſhall be king to them all; not Zorobabel, nor Nehemiah, nor Judas Maccabæus; for theſe were neither of them kings; and much leſs ſuch as reigned for ever, as 'tis ſaid this king ſhall, ℣. 25. beſides, he is expreſly ſaid to be David, that is, the Meſſiah the ſon of David; and this clauſe is by a modern Jewiſh [f] writer applied to him: and they ſhall be no more two nations, neither ſhall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all; which is the very thing the two ſticks made one were an emblem of.

℣. 23. Neither ſhall they defile themſelves any more with their idols, &c.] With their dung, or dunghil-gods [g]; either with the idols of the Gentiles, or their own: after their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, the Jews were no more addicted to idolatry; and the image-worſhip of the papiſts is an abhorrence to them at this day, and a ſtumbling-block to them in their embracing chriſtianity: and when they are effectually called and converted to Chriſt, they'll no more have reſpect to the idols, the works of their own hands; or to the idol of their own righteouſneſs, which they have ſet up, and have gone about to eſtabliſh, and to make to ſtand; they'll then ſee it to be as filthy rags, defiling to them, inſtead of juſtifying of them; and therefore ſhall reject it, and no more defile themſelves with it; but ſeek the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which juſtifies from all ſin, and renders pure and ſpotleſs in the ſight of God: nor with their deteſtable things; or abominations [h]; the traditions of the elders, which they have preferred to the word of God, and made the rule of their faith, worſhip, and converſation; which has made them deteſtable unto God: nor with any of their tranſgreſſions; particularly their diſbelief of Chriſt, and their blaſphemy againſt him; nor ſhall they indulge themſelves in thoſe ſins which now prevail among them, as pride, covetouſneſs, uncleanneſs, fraud and tricking in their trade and commerce: but I will ſave them out of all their dwelling-places, wherein they have ſinned; as wherever they dwell they do; they are notorious for their wickedneſs; but God will bring them out of all theſe places, where they have lived in ſin, and been the occaſion of it to ſome, as well as followed the example of others: and will cleanſe them; by ſprinkling clean water upon them; by applying the blood of Chriſt to them, which cleanſes from all ſin; ſee ch. xxxvi. 25: ſo they ſhall be my people, and I will be their God; the Lo-ammi will be taken off, and the covenant of grace ſhall be renewed with them, and made manifeſt to them; and the bleſſings and promiſes ſhall be applied to them, and particularly this; ſee Jer. xxxi. 1. Rom. xi. 25, 26.

℣. 24. And David my ſervant ſhall be king over them, &c.] The king Meſſiah, as Kimchi interprets it; and ſo Abarbinel [i] and others; being of the ſeed of David, and of whom David was an eminent type; and who, as Mediator, is the Lord's ſervant, and as man appeared in the form of one: this ſhows that this prophecy looks further than the times of deliverance from the Babyloniſh captivity: and they all ſhall have one ſhepherd; or king, the ſame as before: kings are called ſhepherds; ſee ch. xxxiv. 23. John x. 16: and they ſhall alſo walk in my judgments, and keep my ſtatutes, and do them; not the ſtatutes and ordinances of the ceremonial law, which are aboliſhed; and which the Jews, when converted, ſhall have no regard unto: but rather the precepts of the moral law, and chiefly the evangelic ordinances of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper; which ordinances they ſhall walk in, and attend unto with conſtancy and pleaſure; and which ſtatutes they ſhall keep, as they have been delivered, impartially, without delay, in faith and love, and with a view to the glory of God; ſee ch. xxxvi. 27.

℣. 25. And they ſhall dwell in the land which I have given to Jacob my ſervant, &c.] Abraham and Iſaac are not mentioned, as Kimchi obſerves, becauſe they had other children, who did not inherit the land; only Jacob, becauſe the land was given to him, and his ſeed after him: wherein your fathers have dwelt; and ſo the more deſirable to them; and whoſe inhabitation and poſſeſſion of it were a pledge of theirs: and they ſhall dwell therein, even they and their children, and their childrens children for ever; unto the end of the world, or perſonal coming of Chriſt; and ſo every thing after promiſed them is ſaid to be for ever: this ſhows that this prophecy had not its accompliſhment in the return of the Jews from Babylon to their own land; ſince they have been diſpoſſeſſed of that again, in which ſtate they now are; but that it refers to time to come, when being converted to Chriſt, they ſhall poſſeſs their land again, and dwell in it, as long as the ſun and moon endure: and my ſervant David ſhall be their prince for ever; or their king, as the Targum; and which cannot be underſtood of any temporal prince, but of the king Meſſiah, whoſe throne is for ever and ever; whoſe kingdom is an everlaſting kingdom; and who ſhall reign over the houſe of Jacob for ever and ever, Pſ. xlv. 6. Dan. ii. 44. Luke ii. 32, 33. and to whom it is applied by ſeveral Jewiſh writers [k].

℣. 26. Moreover, I will make a covenant of peace with them, &c.] So the covenant of grace is called, Iſ. liv. 10. one principal article of which is peace and reconciliation made between God and his people by the blood of Chriſt, agreed on in that covenant, from whence it has its name: now here it ſignifies, that this covenant ſhould be made known to the converted Jews, and their intereſt in it; in virtue of which they ſhall ſee that peace is made for them by the blood of Chriſt; and ſhall have a true conſcience-peace in themſelves, through that blood of the covenant being ſprinkled on them; and be at peace with converted Gentiles, and even with their worſt enemies, enjoying all kind of proſperity, temporal and ſpiritual: it ſhall be an everlaſting covenant with them; it ſhall not wax old, and vaniſh away, as the former covenant did; under which they were before the coming of Chriſt, which was exhibited in types and ſhadows, legal ſacrifices and carnal ordinances; and beſides, God will always have a covenant-people among them from this time to the end of the world; ſo that a Loammi ſhall no more be written upon them: and I will place them, and multiply them; that is, place them in their own land, and increaſe their number there: or, I will give them [l]; a place in their land, and every bleſſing temporal and ſpiritual: ſo the Targum, "I will bleſs them, and multiply them:" and will ſet my ſanctuary in the midſt of them for evermore; not any material temple, but his word and ordinances; in which he will grant his ſpiritual preſence with them, and which ſhall continue to the end of the world.

---

[c] הלכו ambulant, vel ambulantes ſunt.

[d] מסביב circumquaque, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius.

[e] Zohar in Gen. fol. 85. 4.

[f] R. Abendana, not. in Miclol Yophi in 1 King. xi. 39.

[g] בגלוליהם diis ſtercoreis ſuis, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; ſtercoribus ſuis, Cocceius, Starckius.

[h] בשקוציהם abominandis ſuis, Starckius; abominationibus, Pagninus, Cocceius.

[i] Maſhmiah Jeſhuah, fol. 47. 4. Vid. Sepher Ikkarim, l. 2. c. 28.

[k] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 98. 2. Ben Melech in Pſ. cxliv. 14. Abendana, not. in Miclol Yophi in Hagg. ii. 23. Abarbinel, Maſhmiah Jeſhuah, fol. 8. 4. & 26. 1.

℣. 27. My tabernacle alſo ſhall be with them, &c.] The ſymbol of his preſence: the meaning is, that he ſhall dwell in them by his Spirit and grace; and every one of them ſhall be the temple of the living God, in whom he will walk and dwell: yea, I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people; which is repeated for the confirmation of it; ſee ℣. 23.

℣. 28. And the heathen ſhall know that I the Lord do ſanctify Iſrael, &c.] Or the Gentiles, the converted Gentiles, ſhall obſerve and take notice of the gracious dealings of God with his people the Jews; that he calls them with an holy calling; implants principles of grace and holineſs in them; ſeparates and conſecrates them for his ſervice, and enables them to walk holily, ſoberly, and righteouſly: when my ſanctuary ſhall be in the midſt of them for evermore; when his worſhip ſhall be ſet up among them; his goſpel ſhall be preached unto them, and received by them; and his ordinances adminiſtered unto them; and which ſhall continue till the ſecond coming of Chriſt.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

THIS chapter gives an account of an enemy of the Jews, under the name of Gog, that ſhall invade their land, and diſturb their peace, after they are ſettled in it; who is deſcribed by the countries over which he rules; and againſt whom the prophet is bid to ſet his face, and propheſy of him, the Lord being againſt him; and who would cauſe him to return from Judea unſucceſsful, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4. the number of his confederates, their warlike accoutrements and preparations for the invaſion of the land of Iſrael, are foretold, ℣. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. his wicked deſigns and intentions to ſpoil and plunder the inhabitants of it, ℣. 10, 11, 12. the notice taken of his projects by the merchants of Tarſhiſh and others, ℣. 13, 14. his coming up to invade the land is again obſerved for the certainty of it; and the place from whence, and the time when he ſhould come, are mentioned, as well as God's deſign in it, and which had been before predicted by his prophets, ℣. 14, 15, 16, 17. and the chapter is concluded with a denunciation of divine wrath, which ſhall be terrible to all the inhabitants of the earth, and to all creatures in heaven, earth, and ſea; when he and his forces ſhall be deſtroyed by the ſword, by peſtilence, and by dreadful ſtorms and tempeſts, ℣. 18—23. of which deſtruction a fuller account is given in the next chapter.

℣. 1. And the word of the Lord came unto me, &c.] At the ſame time as the preceding prophecy did, as the copulative and ſhews; which predicts the reſtoration and converſion of the Jews; the union of their tribes under the king Meſſiah; and their ſettlement in their own land: and this reſpects ſome diſturbance they ſhould meet with upon it, for a ſhort time, by a powerful enemy hereafter deſcribed: ſaying, as follows,

℣. 2. Son of man, ſet thy face againſt Gog, &c.] Of the phraſe, ſetting the face towards, or againſt, ſee the notes on ch. vi. 2. and xxi. 2. and xxv. 2. but who this Gog is, the prophet is bid boldly to face, and intrepidly declare the wrath of God againſt, interpreters are divided about. Calmet [m] thinks, that Cambyſes and his army are meant by Gog and Magog, which to mention is enough; and it is the opinion of St. Ambroſe [n], that the Goths who ravaged the Roman empire in the fifth and ſixth ages, are meant: others, who ſuppoſe this prophecy was fulfilled after the Jews return from the Babyloniſh captivity, and before the coming of Chriſt, take Gog to be a common name of the kings of the leſſer Aſia and Syria, or the Seleucidæ, who diſtreſſed the Jews in the times of the Maccabees; the chief of whom was Antiochus Epiphanes, who is ſuppoſed to be more eſpecially deſigned, and was a type of antichriſt; and they are the more ſtrengthened in this opinion, becauſe they find in Pliny [o], that the city of Hierapolis in Syria was called by the Syrians Magog; and they fanſy, the name of Gog is the ſame with Gyges a king of Lydia, whoſe country was called from him Gygea, or Gog's land, who was grandfather to Cræſus; and which country came into the hands of Cyrus, and from the Perſians into the hands of the Greeks, and ſo to the Seleucidæ; for which reaſon they may bear this name in this prophecy; but it is certain, that the prophecy refers to what ſhould be in latter years, and in the latter days, ℣. 8, 16. phraſes which reſpect the times of the Meſſiah, the goſpel-diſpenſation, and oftentimes the latter part of that; and even thoſe times when the Jews ſhall return to their own land, and continue in it for ever, as the preceding prophecy, with which this is connected, ſhews; and ſo the Jews always underſtand it of an enemy of theirs yet to come. Cocceius is of opinion, that the Romiſh antichriſt is meant; and that Gog ſignifying the covering or roof of an houſe, fitly points him out; who puts himſelf between God and man, as the roof is between heaven and earth; and who keeps out the light of divine things, the heat of love, and rain of ſpiritual bleſſings from the church; and compares with this the veil over all nations, Iſ. xxv. 7. and the covering cherub, Ezek. xxviii. 14, 16. but I rather think the Turk is here meant, the eaſtern antichriſt, in whoſe poſſeſſion the land of Judea now is; and which, when recovered by the Jews, will greatly exaſperate him, and he will gather all his forces together to regain it, but in vain. The learned Vitringa [p], tho' he is of opinion, that this prophecy, according to its firſt and proper ſenſe, reſpects the kings of Syria, the perſecutors of the church, that ſhould bring large and well-diſciplined armies into the land of the people of God, gathered out of the northern nations, and Scythians, and would be defeated in the land of Canaan; yet myſtically intends the Turks, the Scythian nation and northern people, who, by a like attempt, will infeſt the church of the people of God, and invade their country; and this he makes no doubt of is the proper aſpect of Gog and Magog: and Samuel Dauderſtat a Lutheran divine, has wrote a diſſertation De Antichriſto Orientali, concerning the eaſtern antichriſt, which he explains of Gog and Magog: and Michael Buckenroder, another Lutheran, has written upon the irruption to be made by Gog and Magog into the mountains of Iſrael [q]. Oſiander thus explains the ſeveral names mentioned; by Gog, I think the Turk is meant, by Magog the Tartarian, by Meſhec the Muſcovites, and by Tubal the Wallachians; and Starckius on the place obſerves, that if this prophecy is yet to be fulfilled, we ſhall eaſily find our Gog, and point out his metropolis Conſtantinople; ſo that I am not ſingular in my opinion. Gog ſignifies high [r] and eminent, one in a very exalted ſtation: it comes from the ſame root, and has the ſame ſignification as Agag, to whoſe height and exaltation there is an alluſion in Numb. xxiv. 7. where the Samaritan and Septuagint verſions read, Gog: it is the ſame with ياجوج Jagog, by which name the Arabians called the Scythians that lived far eaſt, particularly thoſe that were ſituated to the north of China beyond Imaus, as Golius [s] obſerves; and Joſephus [t] ſays, that the poſterity of Magog are called Scythians, and theſe inhabited Tartary; and there, as Paulus Venetus [u] affirms, are the countries of Gog and Magog, which they call Gug and Mungug now; from hence came the Turks, even from Tartary, which is called by the eaſtern writers Turcheſtan, whence they had their name; and ſo may with great propriety be called by the name of Gog; their emperor alſo being a high and mighty one, whoſe empire muſt be deſtroyed; and which is ſignified by the paſſing away of the ſecond wo, and the drying up of the river Euphrates, Rev. xi. 14. and xvi. 12. upon which paſſages, this and the following chapter may be thought a good commentary: and ſo the Jews [w] make Gog to be the general of the Iſhmaelites or Turks, as Armillus of the Chriſtians, and who ſhall reign in the kingdom of Magog or Scythia. Gog is the name of a man, 1 Chron. v. 4. as it is here, and not of a country. The country of Gog is called, as follows, the land of Magog, of which Gog is king, as Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it: it may be ſupplied in connexion with the former clauſe, ſet thy face againſt Gog, in the land of Magog; or, againſt Gog, againſt the land of Magog, ſo Kimchi. The countries of Jagog and Magog, according to the Arabic geographer [x], are ſurrounded by mount Caucaſus, which Bochart [y] conjectures has its name from thence; it being in the Semichaldee language, the language of the Colchi and Armenians, גוגחסן Gog-haſan, or Gog's fortreſs. This land of Magog is the ſame with Cathaia or Scythia, that part of Tartary from whence the Turks came; and which perhaps may come into their hands again before this prophecy is fulfilled; and even now the Turk calls himſelf king of Tartary; and the Magog of Pliny in Syria, the ſame with Aleppo, is in his dominions; which Maimonides [z] alſo takes notice of, as in Syria, tho' he ſeems to diſtinguiſh it from Haleb or Aleppo; however, according to him, they were near to one another; tho' ſome [a] think, the place in Pliny is corrupted, and that it ought to be read, Mabog, as it is by Maimonides, Magbab. Gog is further deſcribed, as the chief prince of Meſhec and Tubal: ſome render it, prince of Roſh, Meſhec and Tubal; taking Roſh, as the reſt, for the name of a place, a part of Scythia, from whence the Ruſſians came, and had their name. So it is rendered by the Septuagint, Symmachus, and Theodotion; and ſome later Greek writers [b] make mention of a country called Ros, which, they ſay, is a Scythian nation, ſituated between the Euxine Pontus, and the whole maritime coaſt to the north of Taurus, a people fierce and wild. Meſhec and Tubal were the brethren of Magog, and ſons of Japhet, Gen. x. 2. whoſe poſterity inhabited thoſe countries called after their name; who, according to Joſephus [c], are the Cappadocians and Iberians; and among the former is a place called Mazaca, which has ſome affinity with Meſhec; and there was a country called Gogarene [d], a part of Iberia. According to Bochart [e], theſe are the Moſchi and Tybarenes, people that dwell near the Euxine-ſea, and under the dominion of the Turk; wherefore the Grand Turk may be called the chief prince of them: and propheſy againſt him; foretell his ruin and deſtruction, which is hinted before. Mention is made of his invaſion of the land of Judea, and that for the comfort of the Jews, that they might have nothing to fear from this formidable army.

---

[l] ונתתים dabo eos, Montanus, Piſcator; dabo ipſos, Cocceius, Starckius.

[m] Dictionary in the words Gog and Magog.

[n] De fide ad Gratianum, l. 2. ſ. 4. col. 144. tom. 4.

[o] Nat. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 23.

℣. 3. And ſay, thus ſaith the Lord God, behold, I am againſt thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meſhec and Tubal.] Which is repeated for the confirmation of it, that ſo it would certainly be; that the Lord, the mighty God, and King of kings, would in his providence frown upon him, and appear againſt him; and his titles are repeated alſo, to ſhew that all his greatneſs, grandeur and power, would not protect him from the vengeance of God.

℣. 4. And I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy chaws, &c.] Or, I will put hooks in thy jaws, and with them turn thee back; or rather,

---

[p] Comment. in Jeſaiam, Vol. I. p. 954

[q] Vid. Calmet. Bibliotheca Sacra, art. 67. p. 422.

[r] Hiller. Onomaſtic. Sacr. p. 67, 406, 477.

[s] Lexic. Arabic. in Rad. اج, col. 26.

[t] Antiq. l. 1. c. 6. §. 1.

[u] Apud Schindler. Lex. Polyglott. col. 288. And Harris's Voyages and Travels, Vol. I. p. 604.

[w] Vid. Hulſ. Theolog. Jud. Par. 2. p. 511.

[x] Geograph. Arab. Par. 9. clim. 5. lin. 22, 23.

[y] Phaleg. l. 3. c. 13. col. 187.

[z] Hilchot Terumot, c. 1. §. 9.

[a] See Hyde Not. in Peritſol. Itinera Mundi, p. 42.

[b] Zonaras, Cedrenus, & Joan. Curopalates apud Selden. de Synedriis, l. 2. c. 3. §. 6.

[c] Antiq. l. 1. c. 6. §. 1.

[d] Strabo. Geograph. l. 11. p. 364.

[e] Phaleg. l. 3. c. 13. col. 188.

turn thee about[f]; and lead thee where, and as I pleaſe; for this is not to be underſtood of God's putting hooks into his jaws, and leading him back from his enterpriſe of invading the land of Judea; as he put a hook in the noſe, and a bridle in the lips of the king of Aſſyria, and brought him back from Jeruſalem, Iſ. xxxvii. 29. but of his uſing him thus in his providence to draw him to the land of Iſrael, out of his own land, as fiſhes are drawn with the hook out of the water. The ſenſe is, that he would ſo work upon and influence the heart of Gog, that he ſhould be inclined to come out of his own land and invade Judea; juſt as the Lord is ſaid to draw Siſera and his army, Judg. iv. 7. as Kimchi and Ben Melech obſerve. So the Targum, "I will perſuade thee, and put hooks in "thy jaws;" that is, incline his heart to take ſuch a ſtep, which ſhould be to his deſtruction: and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army; all his Janizaries, and large army out of Turky, and other parts of his dominions: horſes and horſemen; the Turkiſh armies, chiefly conſiſting of cavalry; ſee the note on Rev. ix. 16: all of them clothed with all ſorts of armour; or completely clothed, as the Targum; for the word armour, is not in the text; and beſides, their armour is particularly mentioned afterwards; and ſo Kimchi has it, with all kind of ornaments, richly clothed and decorated, eſpecially the principal officers, and ſo made a fine ſhew: even a great company with bucklers and ſhields, all of them handling ſwords; or large armies, as the Targum; the Turks have always been uſed to bring prodigious large armies into the field; ſee the note on Rev. ix. 16.

℣. 5. Perſia, Ethiopia, and Lybia with them, &c.] Theſe are the confederates or auxiliaries of the Turks, which ſhall join with them in this expedition. Perſia is a neighbouring kingdom to the Turks, and may fall into their hands before this comes to paſs; and is in a fair way for it at this time, thro' the inteſtine diviſions in it; however it will be confederate with them. Ethiopia or Cuſh does not deſign the country of the Abyſſines in the dominions of the Great Mogul, but Arabia Chuſea, which lay between Judea and Egypt, and is now in the hands of the Turks; and Lybia or Phut, is the name of one of the ſons of Ham, Gen. x. 6. who, according to Joſephus[g], founded Lybia; and from him the inhabitants of it were called Phuteans (as they are here by the Targum); and he obſerves, that there is a river of his name in Mauritania. Lybia is a country in Africa, to the weſt of Egypt, and ſubject to the Turks: all of them with ſhield and helmet; the Lybians are deſcribed by Jeremiah, ch. xlvi. 9. as thoſe that handle the ſhield; and the Egyptians, to whom the Lybians were near neighbours, and whom they might imitate in their warlike arms, as in other things, wore ſhields down to the feet, as Xenophon[h] relates.

℣. 6. Gomer and all his bands, &c.] Or all his army, as the Targum. Gomer was the eldeſt ſon of Japhet, Gen. x. 2. from whom deſcended the people called by the Greeks Galatians, or Gallo-Grecians, as Joſephus[i] ſays, who before were from him called Gomarians: others think that Phrygia, and the inhabitants of it, are meant; but whether one or the other, they were both people of the leſſer Aſia, which is now in the hands of the Turks: the houſe of Togarmah of the north quarters, and all his bands; Togarmah was one of the ſons of Gomer, Gen. x. 3. whoſe poſterity, according to the Greeks, as Joſephus[k] ſays, were the Phrygians; but others rather think the Cappadocians deſcended from him; and that Togarmah deſigns their country, which alſo is a part of the Turkiſh dominions; ſee the note on ch. xxvii. 14. Several moderns, as Calmet[l] obſerves, believe that the children of Togarmah peopled Turcomania in Tartary, and Scythia, and which he approves of; and the Turks are mentioned by Ben Gorion[m], as one of the ten families of Togarmah. The Targum renders it here, the province of Germany; as it is alſo interpreted in the Talmud[n], but wrongly: and many people with thee; from other places and nations, beſides thoſe named; eſpecially out of the leſſer Aſia, as Pamphilia, Cilicia, and other places; and perhaps from Tartary, and elſewhere.

℣. 7. Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyſelf, &c.] All warlike ſtores and proviſions: this is ironically ſaid; and ſuggeſts, that he would do ſo, and yet all would be in vain, and to no purpoſe: thou and all thy company, that are aſſembled unto thee; or all thine armies, as the Targum, gathered out of his dominions, and made up of his auxiliaries and allies; let them all be furniſhed with arms, and every thing proper for the expedition deſigned: and be thou a guard unto them; the general of them; let them obſerve and obey thy word of command; guide and direct, guard and protect them in their march; and take care of them when entered the land of Judea, that they are not expoſed to any unneceſſary danger, or cut off by any ſtratagem or ambuſcade: this is alſo ſarcaſtically ſaid; ſignifying that let him uſe all the care and caution that a wiſe and prudent general can do, yet he and his army ſhould periſh.

℣. 8. After many days thou ſhalt be viſited, &c.] After the Ottoman empire has ſtood a long time, as it has already; when the many days will be ended that Iſrael ſhould be without a king and a prince, &c. Hoſ. iii. 4. then ſhall Gog or the Turk be viſited of God, not in a way of grace, but vengeance; he ſhall be puniſhed for all his iniquities, and his puniſhment or deſtruction will be brought about in the following manner: in the latter years thou ſhalt come into the land that is brought back from the ſword; that is, into the land of Judea, the right owners of which ſhall now be returned unto it; who have been for many years drove and kept out of it by the ſword of their enemies; ſee Jer. xxxi. 2. and theſe latter years are the ſame with the latter days, in which theſe people ſhall ſeek the Lord and the Meſſiah, and fear him and his goodneſs, and return to their own land, Hoſ. iii. 5. and i. 11. when the Turks, enraged at it, will raiſe a numerous army, and enter it, in order to re-poſſeſs it. The deſcription of the Jews, who are moſt manifeſtly pointed at, is continued: and is gathered out of many people againſt the mountains of Iſrael; or rather, to the mountains of Iſrael[o]; for it ſeems to deſign the land of Judea, that is, the people of it; who ſhall be gathered out of the ſeveral nations where they are now diſperſed, and brought into their own land; deſcribed by the mountains of Iſrael, becauſe a mountainous country, and a very fruitful one; ſee ch. xxxiv. 13, 14. and not the army of Gog gathered out of many nations, as before obſerved, to march againſt the people of the Jews; tho' this ſeems to be the ſenſe of the Targum, "in the end of years thou ſhalt come into the land, againſt which are turned thoſe that ſlay with the ſword, who are gathered out of many people againſt the mountains of the land of Iſrael:" which have been always waſte; of a longer time than the ſeventy years captivity, even ever ſince the deſtruction of it by the Romans; and if the time of the carrying captive of the ten tribes by Salmaneſer is reſpected, it is longer ſtill: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they ſhall dwell ſafely all of them; that is, the people of the Jews, the proprietors of the land of Iſrael ſhall now be brought forth out of the ſeveral nations where they are ſcattered, and ſhall inhabit their own land, and dwell in the utmoſt ſecurity, having nothing to fear from their moſt potent enemies, even Gog himſelf; and tho' he ſhall come againſt them in the following manner.

---

[f] שובבתיך circumducam te, Piſcator; circumagam te, Grotius.

[g] Antiq. l. 1. c. 6. §. 2.

[h] Cyropædia, l. 6. c. 14. & l. 7. c. 11.

[i] Antiq. l. 1. c. 6. §. 1.

[k] Ibid.

[l] Dictionary in the word Togarmah.

[m] Heb. Hiſt. l. 1. c. 1. p. 3.

[n] T. Bab. Yoma, fol. 10. 1.

[o] על הרי ישראל ad montes Iſrael, Pagninus, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 9. Thou ſhalt aſcend and come like a ſtorm, &c.] That comes ſuddenly, looks black and terrible, and cauſes darkneſs and horror; makes a great noiſe, and is very threatning of danger; ſignifying, that the Turks will come into the land of Judea ſuddenly to ſurpriſe it, and with great wrath and fury, and threaten them with utter deſtruction; ſo the king of the north is ſaid to come like a whirlwind, which many interpret of the Turk alſo, Dan. xi. 40: thou ſhalt be like a cloud to cover the land; with darkneſs and diſtreſs; ſuggeſting the vaſt number of his army, which ſhould over-ſpread the land of Judea, as it follows: thou and all thy bands, and many people with thee; his own army ſhould be very numerous, and this increaſed by his confederates, or ſuch who will voluntarily join him in this expedition.

℣. 10. Thus ſaith the Lord, it ſhall alſo come to paſs, &c.] Who is the Lord God omniſcient, and knows the thoughts of mens hearts afar off; which, tho' they are contingent and voluntary, yet certain to the foreknowledge of God; who knows them before they are conceived, and can foretell what they will be, and which come to paſs accordingly: it is now above two thouſand years ago ſince this was ſaid, and as yet is not fulfilled, but certainly will be: that at the ſame time ſhall things come into thy mind; when the Jews ſhall be in their own land, dwelling in great ſecurity; and when Gog or the Turk ſhall make preparation to diſturb them, and ſhall enter into their land ſuddenly and furiouſly; many thoughts ſhall come into his mind, many ſchemes and devices, but not good ones: and thou ſhalt think an evil thought; to do miſchief to the Jews; to diſturb their peace, to diſpoſſeſs them of their land, and plunder their ſubſtance.

℣. 11. And thou ſhalt ſay, &c.] What came into his mind, and what he thought of; this he ſhall ſay to his privy-counſellors and miniſters of ſtate; or to the generals and officers of his army; or to his confederates and allies, and even to them all, to have their opinion and approbation of it; and to encourage them to join him, and go with him: I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; a land which has nothing but villages in it, and thoſe no walls about them to protect them: this he ſaid by way of contempt; and the Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, the abject land; and to obſerve how eaſily he could conquer it, there being nothing in his way to hinder him, or give him trouble: I will go to them that are at reſt, and dwell ſafely; as the Jews will do in the latter day, when they ſhall own and acknowledge the Meſſiah, Jer. xxiii. 5, 6. and dwell in their own land, where they will be quiet and peaceable, and think and do no harm to any, nor miſtruſt their neighbours doing any harm to them; but ſhall live in the utmoſt tranquillity and ſecurity; and which Gog or the Turks will take the advantage of, and from hence promiſe themſelves an eaſy conqueſt of them; all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates; no walls to their cities; no gates to walls; nor bars to gates, but without either; being under the protection of God, and putting their truſt in him, who is a wall of fire round about his people; and is better to them than gates with bars.

℣. 12. To take a ſpoil, and to take a prey, &c.] Theſe are the words of Gog continued; ſuggeſting, that he ſhould have no occaſion to fight; ſhould have nothing elſe to do, but to ſeize upon the goods, and plunder the ſubſtance of theſe people: to turn thine hand upon the deſolate places that are now inhabited; ſuch as were before deſolate, and had lain long ſo, but now peopled and cultivated; theſe he would attack and demoliſh, and make a ſpoil and prey of: and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations; a deſcription of the Jews, as before, ℣. 8: which have gotten cattel and goods; ſo that it ſhould ſeem, that Gog or the Turks will not immediately attack the Jews upon their poſſeſſion of the land of Judea; but ſome time after, when they have ſettled in it, and have acquired much wealth and riches in cattel and goods, and then think to have a fine booty of them: that dwell in the midſt of the land; or, the navel of the land [p], which may deſign Jeruſalem, ſituated in the midſt of the land of Iſrael, and ſo called the navel of it, as that is in the midſt of the body; as Enna is ſaid by Cicero to be the navel of Sicily: or, as Kimchi thinks, the land of Iſrael itſelf is meant; which is in the midſt of the world, and ſo the navel of it; tho' the former ſeems beſt.

℣. 13. Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarſhiſh, &c.] Theſe are not any of the people that ſhall come along with Gog on his expedition; but ſome neighbouring nations bordering on Judea, who will addreſs him in the following manner, as he paſſes thro' them, or by them. Sheba and Dedan deſign the Arabians inhabiting that part of Arabia which lay near to Judea, even Arabia Petræa and Felix; and the merchants of Tarſhiſh are the Tyrians and Zidonians that traded by ſea, as Tarſhiſh ſometimes ſignifies; or to Tarteſſus in Spain, where they had much traffic; and may deſign the people of thoſe places that will at this time be living in Paleſtine, that trade by ſea to foreign parts. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, the Carthaginian merchants, or the merchants of Carthage: with all the young lions thereof; which ſome interpret of ſea-pirates, for their cruelty and voraciouſneſs. The Targum paraphraſes it, all the kings thereof; and ſo Kimchi thinks kings and princes are meant; but the Septuagint verſion renders it, all their villages; and ſo the Syriac verſion, all the cities: ſhall ſay unto thee, art thou come to take a ſpoil? either out of compaſſion to the people of the Jews; or rather by way of congragratulation, and as expreſſive of joy at it; or elſe out of envy, that they have no ſhare in it; ſuggeſting, that they would gladly join with him, and partake of the booty: haſt thou gathered thy company together to take a prey? to carry away ſilver and gold, to take away cattel and goods, to take a great ſpoil? all which 'tis ſuppoſed might eaſily be done; only they might wonder that ſo rich a potentate as the Turk ſhould give himſelf the trouble to raiſe ſuch an army, and come ſo far for cattel and goods, and ſilver and gold, of which he had ſuch plenty. Gog gives no anſwer, but God does.

---

[p] על טבור הארץ, επι τον ομφαλον της γης, Sept. in, vel ſuper umbilico terræ, Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

ỷ. 14. Therefore ſon of man, propheſy, and ſay unto Gog, &c.] Since theſe are his thoughts and deſigns, and thoſe his big words, and which he'll endeavour to put in practice, and be applauded for it by others; deliver this prophecy to him, or concerning him: thus ſaith the Lord God, in that day, when my people of Iſrael dwelleth ſafely, ſhalt thou not know it? that Iſrael are returned to their own land? that they dwell in it ſafely? that they have abundance of cattel, gold and ſilver? that they have no walls, gates and bars to protect them? that they live without fear or ſuſpicion of any enemy to annoy them, and therefore may be eaſily ſurpriſed and taken? this, when it comes to paſs, will ſoon be known by the Turks thro' their ſpies and informers: or, ſhalt thou not know [d]; or experience the divine vengeance for thy wicked thoughts, intentions and attempts againſt Iſrael? he ſhould. So the Targum, "ſhalt thou not know the vengeance of my power?" or ſhall thou not know that all attempts to make them uneaſy and uncomfortable, will be in vain?

ỷ. 15. And thou ſhalt come from thy place out of the north parts, &c.] Whoſe original was from Scythia, or Cathaia in Tartary, that lies to the north of China; and who will bring him with many people from the Euxine and Caſpian ſeas, and from the northern parts of leſſer Aſia; and the Turk is by many interpreters thought to be the king of the north in Dan. xi. 44. as before obſerved: thou and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horſes; the Turkiſh armies, conſiſting chiefly of horſe, as has been obſerved on ỷ. 4: a great company, and a mighty army; for quantity many, for quality ſtrong and mighty. The Targum is, "many armies, and much people;" the Turks uſually have large armies; ſee the note on ỷ. 4.

ỷ. 16. And thou ſhalt come up againſt my people of Iſrael, &c.] Which is repeated for the certainty of it; and not for his comfort, but his ruin; not to the terror of Iſrael, but for the glory of God: as a cloud to cover the land; the land of Iſrael, ſo great ſhould be his army; ſee the note on ỷ. 9: it ſhall be in the latter days; of the goſpel-ſtate, or kingdom of the Meſſiah, when the Jews ſhall be converted, and are returned to their own land, Hoſ. iii. 5: and I will bring thee againſt my land; not to poſſeſs it, nor to hurt it, or do any injury to the people of it: but that the heathen may know me; the pagan kingdoms of China, and others; who by God's judgments on the Turks will come to the knowledge of the true God, and acknowledge him, and will become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Chriſt, Rev. xi. 15. and xvi. 12: when I ſhall be ſanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes; that is, when God ſhall appear to be a holy and juſt God, in inflicting deſerved puniſhment on the enemies of his people; when his omniſcience and omnipotence, his power and faithfulneſs, and other perfections of his will be diſplayed, in fulfilling thoſe prophecies concerning Gog or the Turks; infidels will be convinced of the truth of divine revelation; of the God of Iſrael being the true God; of Jeſus being the Meſſiah; and of the chriſtian religion being of God, and ſhall profeſs the ſame. The Targum is, "that the people may know the vengeance of my power, when I ſhall be ſanctified in thee, who ſhall ſee thy vengeance, O Gog."

ỷ. 17. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Putting the queſtion that follows: art thou he of whom I have ſpoken of old time by my ſervants the prophets of Iſrael, which propheſied in thoſe days many years, that I will bring thee againſt them? certainly thou art he: but who were the prophets that propheſied of Gog before Ezekiel, ſince he is the firſt that makes mention of him? to this it may be replied, that tho' he is not mentioned by name, yet he might be propheſied of under other names, as by Iſaiah under the name of Leviathan, ch. xxvii. 1. and by Micah under the name of the Aſſyrian, ch. v. 5. The Jews [e] ſay, that Eldad and Medad propheſied of him, which Jarchi, Kimchi and Abendana remark; who all obſerve, agreeable to the Talmudiſts in the place referred to, that theſe two are the prophets meant; and therefore 'tis directed to be read not Shanim years, but Shenaim two; namely, thoſe two prophets propheſied one prophecy at one time, or together; but this is not to be depended upon: it ſhould be obſerved, that this muſt be conſidered as ſpoken at the time of the accompliſhment of this prophecy, and ſo may have reſpect to the prophet Ezekiel himſelf, or to Joel, ch. iii. 1, 2. and to Zechariah, ch. xiv. 1, 2. and even to the book of the Revelation, ch. xvi. 14, 16. and xix. 19.

ỷ. 18. And it ſhall come to paſs at the ſame time, when Gog ſhall come againſt the land of Iſrael, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] As before propheſied of and deſcribed: that my fury ſhall come up in my face; as a man's blood riſes up in his face, and his colour appears, when he is wroth and angry: or, in my noſe [f]; as men when they are angry puff and blow, expand their noſe, breathe thro' it; but againſt whom is all this wrath and fury? Starckius, a modern interpreter, thinks it is againſt the land of Iſrael, againſt the church; but it rather ſeems to be againſt Gog himſelf; the Lord being provoked at his attempt againſt the land of Iſrael, and the wicked deſigns he had to ſpoil and plunder it.

ỷ. 19. For in my jealouſy, and in the fire of my wrath have I ſpoken, &c.] Not againſt his people Iſrael, but againſt Gog, who had thought evil againſt them, and now was about to put it in practice; and therefore in zeal for his own glory, and for the good of his people, and in indignation againſt his, and their enemies, he declares, reſolves, and determines: ſurely in that day there ſhall be a great ſhaking in the land of Iſrael; not a conſternation among the people of Iſrael, affrighted at the armies of Gog, and the terrible appearance they ſhall make, and the devaſtations they threaten; but in Gog himſelf, and his army, thro' the wrath of God upon them, and the vengeance he will take of them in the land of Iſrael, they will enter upon to deſtroy; not but that there may be ſome dread in the minds of the Jews upon the appearance of ſo formidable an army in their land: this ſhaking, according to Jarchi, will be by thunder and lightning. Kimchi underſtands it, of an earthquake, in a literal ſenſe, and compares with it Zech. xiv. 4, 5. ſee alſo Rev. xvi. 18. which ſpeaks of an earthquake that will be about this time.

---

[d] תדע experturus eſſes, Junius & Tremellius; experieris, ſcil. pœnam meam, Piſcator.

[e] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 17. 1. & Gloſſ. in ib.

[f] באפי in naſum meum, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 20. So that the fiſhes of the ſea ſhall ſhake at my preſence, &c.] From whence it appears, that this great ſhaking ſhall not be on account of the army of Gog, and the devaſtations that ſhall make; but on account of the powerful preſence of God, which will be manifeſt in the deſtruction of his army: and what is here ſaid of the ſhaking of the fiſhes of the ſea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beaſt of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the earth, muſt be underſtood figuratively and hyperbolically, as Kimchi obſerves, and in alluſion to earthquakes, which both ſhake and terrify all kind of creatures; the blow given to Gog will be ſo terrible, that all nature will ſeem to be thrown into a convulſion and agitation by it; ſee Jer. iv. 24, 25: and the mountains ſhall be thrown down; as they are ſometimes by earthquakes; and as the mount of Olives will at this time cleave aſunder; and perhaps other mountains will, as Kimchi obſerves; ſee Zech. xiv. 2, 3, 4. Iſ. ii. 12—15. and xxx. 25: and the ſteep places ſhall fall; the Targum renders the word, towers; and ſo the Syriac verſion, and Piſcator: the word ſignifies ſtairs or ſteps [t], ſuch as in a ladder; and is tranſlated ſtairs, Cant. ii. 14. it ſeems to me to deſign ſuch mounts as are raiſed by beſiegers of a city, by means of which they may be able to ſcale the walls of it, which Jarchi ſuggeſts; tho' he ſays, he had heard it ſaid, that theſe are rocks bending over and hanging, and appear as if they were falling; which agrees with our verſion; and it may be obſerved in ſome of thoſe precipices, there are like ſtairs or ſteps to go up them: and every wall ſhall fall to the ground; this ſhows that the words are not to be taken literally, but figuratively; only to expreſs how ſenſibly the power of God ſhould be felt and perceived by all creatures, and in all parts of the land; ſince now the Jews will dwell in a land of unwalled villages, and in cities without walls, bars and gates; ſee ℣. 11.

℣. 21. And I will call for a ſword againſt him, &c.] That is, againſt Gog; or, as I would chooſe to render the words, for I will call for a ſword; ſo the particle is rendered ℣. 19. and which Noldius [u] agrees to; and this gives a reaſon why there ſhould be ſuch a commotion in the land of Iſrael; becauſe the Lord who has the ſwords of princes at his command, will call for the chriſtian kings to come to the aſſiſtance of the Jews, and fight againſt the Turk; who will purſue him throughout all my mountains, ſaith the Lord God; throughout the land of Iſrael, which is mountainous; and is called the Lord's, becauſe he had choſen it for his people, given it to them, and now dwelt among them; and in all parts of it, where the enemy is, the ſword of the Jews, and of thoſe princes that ſhould come in to their aſſiſtance at the call of God, ſhall be ſent againſt them, and cut them off: and not only ſo, but every man's ſword ſhall be againſt his brother; as the ſwords of the Midianites were, Judg. vii. 22. and of the enemies of Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. xx. 22, 23. The Turkiſh army will conſiſt of a mixed people, of many nations, who will quarrel among themſelves, and deſtroy one another.

℣. 22. And I will plead againſt him with peſtilence, and with blood, &c.] Not only the ſword of the Jews, and the ſword of Chriſtian princes ſhall be drawn againſt him, and the ſword of Gog's ſoldiers againſt one another; but the Lord himſelf would plead with him by his judgments, or take vengeance on him, as the Targum; and ſend a peſtilence in his army, which ſhould deſtroy vaſt numbers of it; as the army of Sennacherib was deſtroyed by one when before Jeruſalem; and make a great ſlaughter among them by that and other judgments: and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain; an horrible tempeſt of divine wrath, Pſ. xi. 6. as he came into the land of Iſrael like a ſtorm, ſo he ſhall be deſtroyed by one much more terrible: and great hail-ſtones; ſuch as were caſt upon the Canaanites, Joſh. x. 11. and as there will be on men, the enemies of the church of God, at the pouring out of the ſeventh vial, Rev. xvi. 21: fire and brimſtone; as God rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. xix. 24. ſignifying, that in like manner will God deal with thoſe enemies of his people; ſo at the battel of Armageddon, which ſeems to be the ſame with this here; the beaſt and the falſe prophet will be taken alive, and caſt into a lake of fire burning with brimſtone, Rev. xix. 20. and to this rain or tempeſt of fire and brimſtone upon Gog there is an alluſion in Rev. xx. 9.

℣. 23. Thus will I magnify myſelf, and ſanctify myſelf, &c.] Shew the greatneſs of his power, and the ſtrictneſs of his juſtice and holineſs, and glorify theſe, and all other his perfections, in the deſtruction of the enemies of his people: and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; heathen nations ſhall now come to the knowledge of the true God, and his ſon Jeſus Chriſt, and of the chriſtian religion, and ſhall embrace and profeſs it; ſee the note on ℣. 16. the kingdoms of the world will now become the Lord's, Rev. xi. 15.

CHAP. XXXIX.

THIS chapter is a continuation of the prophecy of the deſtruction of Gog, which is both repeated, and more largely deſcribed, ℣. 1—8. then follows an account of the burning of his weapons of war, which will laſt ſeven years in burning, during which time there will be no need of the uſe of wood, ℣. 9, 10. and of the burial of him, and many of his army; the place where, and the time that will be taken up in doing this, even ſeven months, are obſerved, ℣. 11—16. and every feathered fowl and beaſt of the field are called upon to feed on the fleſh of thoſe that are left unburied, ℣. 17—20. and by all this, the glory of the Lord will be ſeen, known and acknowledged, both by the heathens, and by the houſe of Iſrael, ℣. 21, 22. and the former will alſo be informed, that the preſent captivity of the Jews has been for their ſins and tranſgreſſions, ℣. 23, 24. and the chapter is concluded with a promiſe of their return from captivity, when they ſhall know the Lord, and their intereſt in him; who will after this no more hide his face from them, but pour out his Spirit upon them, under whoſe influence they ſhall ever continue, ℣. 25—29.

---

[t] המדרגות gradus, Munſter, Pagninus, Montanus.

[u] Concordant. Ebr. Partic. p. 285, 286.

℣. 1. Therefore thou ſon of man, propheſy againſt Gog, &c.] As he had been ordered to do before, and muſt ſtill continue to do it: behold, I am againſt thee, O Gog; which is repeated for the confirmation of it, and to inject terror into him; for terrible it is to have God againſt any: the chief prince of Meſhech and Tubal; ſee the note on ch. xxxviii. 2. the Septuagint verſion adds Ros here as there.

℣. 2. And I will turn thee back, &c.] Not from the land of Iſrael; for thither it is ſaid in the latter part of the text he would bring him; but the meaning is, that he would turn him about, as the word [w] ſignifies, in his own land, and lead him about at his pleaſure, and bring him out of it, unto the land of Iſrael; ſignifying hereby, that the providence of God would be greatly concerned in this affair; and in which much glory would be brought unto him by the deſtruction of ſuch a potent enemy of his people; which is the deſign of bringing him out; ſee the note on ch. xxxviii. 4: and leave but a ſixth part of thee; meaning not that a ſixth part only ſhould eſcape the vengeance of God, and all but a ſixth part be deſtroyed in the land of Iſrael; for it looks as if the whole army would be utterly deſtroyed, and none left; but that when he ſhould come out of his own country upon this expedition, a ſixth part of his ſubjects only ſhould be left behind; five out of ſix ſhould accompany him; ſo numerous ſhould his army be, and ſo drained his country by this enterpriſe of his. Some render the words, will draw thee out with an hook of ſix teeth [x]; that is, out of his own land; and this clauſe ſtands in the ſame place and order, as the phraſe, and put hooks into thy jaws, does in ch. xxxviii. 4. and ſo may be thought to explain one another, and agrees with what follows: for as for the ſenſe of it given by Joſeph Kimchi and others, "I will judge thee with ſix judgments [y], ℣. 12. "peſtilence, blood, an overflowing rain, hail-"ſtones, fire, and brimſtone," it muſt be rejected; ſeeing as yet the account of his puniſhment is not come to; only an account is giving, how and by what means he ſhall be drawn out of his own land; wherefore much better is the Targum, "I will perſuade thee, and I will ſeduce "thee;" ſo Jarchi ſeems to underſtand it: and the Septuagint and Arabic verſions render it, I will lead thee, agreeable to what follows: and will cauſe thee to come up from the north parts; ſee the note on ch. xxxviii. 15: and will bring thee upon the mountains of Iſrael; not to inherit them, but to fall upon them, as in ℣. 4.

℣. 3. And I will ſmite thy bow out of thy left hand, &c.] In which it is uſually held, to have the arrow fitted to it: and I will cauſe thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand; where they are commonly held when put into the bow, and then the bow is drawn with it; ſignifying hereby, that tho' he ſhould come into the land of Iſrael, he ſhould not ſucceed; he would be ſtripped of his armour, and it would be uſeleſs to him: bows and arrows are put for all kind of warlike inſtruments; and are particularly mentioned, becauſe they were chiefly uſed in war, when this prophecy was delivered.

℣. 4. Thou ſhalt fall upon the mountains of Iſrael, &c.] Be ſlain, and his carcaſe lie there; ſo the Targum, "upon the mountains of the land of Iſ-"rael thy carcaſe ſhall be caſt:" thou and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee; Gog and his army, auxiliaries and allies: I will give thee to the ravenous birds of every ſort, and to the beaſts of the field to be devoured; great part of his army being ſlain, ſhould not be buried, but be devoured by birds of prey, and ſavage beaſts; ſuch as eagles and vultures of the former ſort, and lions, bears, wolves, &c. of the latter. This was always reckoned a very ſore judgment and dreadful calamity, not to have a burial, but to be expoſed to birds and beaſts of prey; this was threatened to the Iſraelites, in caſe of diſobedience to the law of God, Deut. xxviii. 26. and to the wicked Jews in the times of Jeremiah; and to that evil king of Judah, Jehoiakim, Jer. xvi. 4. and xxii. 18, 19. and is lamented as one of the greateſt evils that could befal good men, Pſ. lxxix. 2. and nothing was more dreadful among the heathens themſelves; hence Homer [z], among the many calamities Achilles was the cauſe of to the Grecians, mentions this as one, that he was the means of giving the bodies of a great number of their heroes to the dogs, and to the fowls of the air; ſo Virgil [a] repreſents the want of a burial, and being left to be fed upon by birds of prey, as ſevere a puniſhment of a wicked man, as can be wiſhed for.

℣. 5. Thou ſhalt fall upon the open field, &c.] Some part of his army ſhould fall upon the mountains, and others upon the plain; wherever they will be found, they'll be deſtroyed, either by the ſword of the Jews and chriſtian princes, or by God's judgments from heaven: for I have ſpoken it, ſaith the Lord God; and therefore it ſhould ſurely come to paſs, ſince no word of his ever fails; this is added to aſſure of the truth of it, ſince it might be thought incredible, that ſo large an army ſhould be deſtroyed.

℣. 6. And I will ſend a fire on Magog, &c.] On the land of Magog; ſee ch. xxxviii. 2. whilſt Gog is in the land of Iſrael, and he and his army periſh there; his country ſhall be deſtroyed by fire, or by ſome judgment or judgments of God, which ſhall conſume like fire. The Septuagint verſion renders it, I will ſend a fire on Gog; but he before is ſaid to fall upon the mountains of Iſrael; his country is meant; it deſigns the deſtruction of the Ottoman empire: and among them that dwell careleſsly in the iſles; that belong to the Turkiſh dominions; not only the inhabitants of the continent ſhall be conſumed, but thoſe that dwell in iſlands, and think themſelves ſafe and ſecure, and ſo live careleſsly; or ſuch who live on the ſea-coaſts, it being uſual in ſcripture to call ſuch places, iſles; and may intend thoſe who dwell near the Euxine and Caſpian ſeas: and they ſhall know that I am the Lord; by his judgments executed upon them.

---

[w] שובבתיך circumducam te, Piſcator; circumagam, Grotius.

[x] ששאתיך harpagone ſextuplici extraham te, Vinarienſes apud Starckium. So Buxtorf.

[y] Sex pœnis, ſive plagis afficiam te, Munſter, Tigurine verſion.

[z] Iliad, 1. l. 4, 5.

[a] —— non te optima mater
Condet humi, patriove onerrabit membra ſepulchro
Alitibus linquere feris. Æneid. l. 10.

℣. 7. So will I make my holy name known in the midſt of my people Iſrael, &c.] That is, his perfections; his holineſs and juſtice in puniſhing their enemies; his truth and faithfulneſs in fulfilling his promiſes to them; his power in inflicting judgments on Gog and his army; and his goodneſs in their preſervation and protection: and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more; either the heathens round about, who before blaſphemed it, ſaying that God was not able to deliver his people from ſuch a potent enemy; but now their mouths will be ſtopped, and they'll not dare to ſpeak any more after this manner: or elſe the Iſraelites, who ſhall be ſo influenced by the grace and goodneſs of God unto them, as to fear the Lord and his goodneſs, and not dare to commit the ſins they formerly did, whereby his name was polluted and blaſphemed among the heathens: and the heathen ſhall know that I am the Lord, the holy one in Iſrael; they ſhall know by theſe judgments and providences that he is the true God, and they ſhall acknowledge and confeſs it; and that he is a holy and juſt God, and dwells in Iſrael, and grants his gracious as well as powerful preſence to his people; nor ſhall they dare to moleſt them any more.

℣. 8. Behold it is come, and it is done, ſaith the Lord God, &c.] That is, the ſalvation of his people, and the deſtruction of their enemies; the prophecy concerning all this is come to paſs, and the whole is accompliſhed; thus becauſe of the certainty thereof, it is repreſented as if the time was actually come, and the thing was really done; for the event is as ſure as if it was now fulfilled: this is the day whereof I have ſpoken; by the prophet Ezekiel and others; ſee the note on ch. xxxviii. 17.

℣. 9. And they that dwell in the cities of Iſrael ſhall go forth, &c.] Out of their houſes into the ſtreets, where Gog's ſoldiers will lie dead, and their armour by them; or rather out of their cities, where they dwelt ſafely, and where they kept themſelves, and were ſecure from the enemy: theſe ſeem to be diſtinct from the militia of Iſrael, engaged in battel with Gog; theſe were the inhabitants that will ſtay at home, and yet ſhare in the ſpoil and plunder; ſee Pſ. lxviii. 12. theſe, after the battel is over, and the victory obtained, of which they will have information, will then march out without fear into the open fields and mountains, where the army of Gog will fall, ℣. 4, 5: and ſhall ſet on fire and burn the weapons; the armour of Gog's army, which they ſhall find lie by the dead, or upon them; or which they that flee will caſt away; theſe they ſhall gather together, and lay on an heap, and burn, as ſometimes has been the practice of conquerors; or rather they ſhall take them to their own houſes, and make fuel of them, and burn them, inſtead of wood out of the fields and foreſts, as the following verſe ſhews: both the ſhields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows; which were the weapons that Gog and his aſſociates uſed; ſee ch. xxxviii. 4. and xxxix. 3: and the hand-ſtaves, and the ſpears; the hand-ſtaves were either half-pikes or truncheons, as ſome think; or javelins, as others: and they ſhall burn them with fire ſeven years; which ſome take to be a certain number for an uncertain, and others an hyperbolical expreſſion; but when it is conſidered what a vaſt army this of Gog's will be, and what prodigious numbers of weapons of all ſorts muſt be carried by them, and the little uſe of fire in thoſe hot countries; it may be very well taken in a literal ſenſe, and the meaning be, that ſo great will be the quantity of warlike weapons, that will be found and gathered, that they will ſerve for fuel for the ſpace of ſeven years.

℣. 10. So that they ſhall take no wood out of the field, &c.] During that ſeven years; or they ſhall have no need to do ſo, as the Syriac verſion; having a ſufficiency of armour: neither cut down any out of the foreſt; out of the foreſt of Lebanon, or any other, where they uſed to fetch wood for their neceſſary uſes; but ſo great a quantity of armour ſhall now be brought home by them to their houſes, that they ſhould have no need to be at the trouble and expence of fetching wood from the foreſts: for they ſhall burn the weapons with fire; the reaſon of which will be, becauſe they will have no occaſion for them hereafter; for when this battel is over, which ſeems to be the ſame with that at Armageddon, there will be an entire deſtruction of all the enemies of Chriſt and his church; the world will be cleared of them, and there will be war no more, and ſo no more uſe of weapons; this will be the laſt battel that will be fought; ſee Iſ. ii. 4. Mic. iv. 3: and they ſhall ſpoil thoſe that ſpoil them, and rob thoſe that robbed them, ſaith the Lord God; not only take their weapons and burn them, but ſtrip them of their garments, and take away their gold, and ſilver, and jewels, and every thing of value they ſhall find about them.

℣. 11. And it came to paſs at that day, &c.] When this deſtruction of the army of Gog ſhall be made: that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Iſrael; or, a place there, a grave in Iſrael[b]; he that thought to have ſubdued the whole land, and taken poſſeſſion of it, ſhall have no more of it than juſt a place for a grave to be buried in; a place fit for a grave, as the Targum; and where that will be is next obſerved: the valley of the paſſengers on the eaſt of the ſea; a valley thro' which travellers uſed to paſs from Syria, Babylon, and other places, to Egypt and Arabia Felix, which lay eaſt of the ſea; not the Mediterranean ſea, which lies weſt of Judea; but either the dead ſea, the ſea of Sodom, a ſulphureous lake, to which there may be an alluſion, Rev. xix. 20. or the ſea of Cinnereth, or Geneſareth, as the Targum, Jarchi and Kimchi; the ſame with the ſea or lake of Tiberias and Galilee, mentioned in the New Teſtament; which ſenſe is approved of by Guſſetius[c]; where was a paſſage from the land of Canaan, to the eaſt of the ſame ſea. Calmet[d] thinks it ſtands for the great road at the foot of mount Carmel, to go from Judea, Egypt, and the country of the Philiſtines, into Phœnicia; which road was to the eaſt of the Mediterranean ſea. And it ſhall ſtop the noſes of the paſſengers; or the paſſengers ſhall ſtop their noſes, becauſe of the ill ſmell of the carcaſes[e]; or their mouths, the mouths of blaſphemers, who ſhall no more blaſpheme the God of Iſrael, when they ſhall obſerve this monument of his power, in the deſtruction of his and his people's enemies. It may be rendered, it ſhall ſtop the paſſengers[f]; from paſſing that way, becauſe of the multitude of the carcaſes that ſhall fall there, and which is the reaſon of their being buried out of the way; this ſenſe Jarchi takes notice of. The [b] מקום שם קבר locum ibi ſepulchrum, Starckius; locum ubi ſit ſepulchrum, Cocceius.

---

[c] Ebr. Comment. p. 585.

[d] Dictionary in the word vale.

[e] So R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 66. 2.

[f] וחסמת היא את העברים et erit illa obturans tranſeuntes, Starckius; et erit illa frenans tranſeuntes, Cocceius.

Targum is, “ and it is near to two mountains;” as if this clauſe deſcribed the ſituation of the valley. And there ſhall they bury Gog, and all his multitude; all his army, ſuch of it as the fowls and beaſts had not devoured, and the bones they had left; not his army only, but himſelf alſo, the Sultan or Grand Seignior of the Turks, the general of this mighty army: this was not true of Antiochus; he died not, nor was he buried in the land of Iſrael. And they ſhall call it the valley of Hamon-Gog; Hamon ſignifies a multitude; and this name will be impoſed upon the place of Gog's ſepulchre, becauſe of the multitude ſlain and buried here, and to perpetuate the memory of it: there never was yet a place of this name in the land of Iſrael; which ſhows that this event is yet future. Calmet takes it to be the valley of Jezreel, in which he thinks the army of Cambyſes was defeated, after the death of that prince; wrongly taking Cambyſes and his army for Gog and Magog.

℣. 12. And ſeven months ſhall the houſe of Iſrael be burying of them, &c.] So long time will the burial of Gog's army take up, becauſe of the multitude of it, and by reaſon their bones will be ſcattered here and there; which will require time to gather them together, and bring them to one place: the reaſon of the burial of them will be, partly out of humanity, which the chriſtian religion, which will then be embraced by the Jews, teaches and encourages; and partly becauſe of the diſagreeable ſight, and ill ſmell of the carcaſes of the ſlain, and to prevent the air being infected therewith, which might cauſe noxious diſeaſes. Jarchi gives the reaſon of it, becauſe Gog is of the ſeed of Japhet, who covered his father's nakedneſs, and therefore worthy of a funeral: but a better reaſon follows, that they may cleanſe the land; not from ceremonial uncleanneſs, a place being unclean by the ceremonial law, where dead carcaſes, or the bones of dead men, lay; for the ceremonial law, as it is abrogated, will now be diſuſed by the Jews themſelves, when converted; but from natural pollution before-mentioned.

℣. 13. Yea, all the people of the land ſhall bury them, &c.] That is, a great number of the common people of the land of Iſrael, eſpecially of thoſe that dwell near the field of battel, ſhall be employed in burying the ſlain; and which they will be very ready to do, for the reaſons above-mentioned: and it ſhall be to them a renown; or, for a name [g]; they ſhall be commended for their humanity to their enemies, and ſhall be ſpoken of with honour, as being the peculiar people of God, whom he has ſo remarkably appeared for, protected, and defended: the day that I ſhall be glorified, ſaith the Lord God; the day that will be a renown to them, will be to the glory of God; whoſe greatneſs, goodneſs, power, and wiſdom, will be ſeen in ſaving his people, and deſtroying their enemies.

℣. 14. And they ſhall ſever out men of continual employment, &c.] That is, the principal of the houſe of Iſrael, their magiſtrates and governors, ſhall ſelect certain perſons, to be daily employed in the following work, till ended: paſſing through the land to bury with the paſſengers thoſe that remain upon the face of the earth, to cleanſe it; theſe men will be appointed to go thro' the land of Iſrael, to gather up ſuch carcaſes and bones of dead men as remain any where after the ſeven months burial before obſerved; and all paſſengers or travellers ſhall be aſſiſting to them in it, both in directing where any ſuch carcaſes and bones may lie, and in bringing them to the common place of burial; that ſo the land may be thoroughly cleanſed from ſuch diſagreeable objects: after the end of ſeven months ſhall they ſearch; or begin to ſearch, as the Targum; when ſeven months are ended, in which the people in general will be employed in burying the dead; theſe men before-mentioned will be ſent out into the ſeveral parts of the land, to ſearch in caves, and dens, and ditches; among thickets, thorns, and briers, where the ſlain may fall; or where ſoldiers, being wounded, might betake themſelves and die; or their carcaſes or bones be dragged and left by beaſts and fowls; to find them out, and bring them to the place of interment.

℣. 15. And the paſſengers that paſs thro' the land, &c.] Not along with the ſearchers, but that travel thro' it upon buſineſs in it, or in other lands: when any ſeeth a man's bone, then ſhall he ſet up a ſign by it; as he paſſes along, if he happens to ſee an human bone in the way, or hard by, he ſhall ſtop and lay a ſtone, or an heap of ſtones by it, or ſome ſuch mark or token, ſignifying that a man's bone lies there: till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-Gog; that is, which ſign ſhall continue till the ſearchers come that way and take up the bone, and carry it to be buried in the valley of Hamon-Gog; for carcaſes and bones were not to be buried in the place where they were found, but to be brought and interred in this common place of ſepulture.

℣. 16. And alſo the name of the city ſhall be Hamonah, &c.] The name of the city neareſt to this place where Gog and his multitude ſhall be buried, ſhall be called Hamonah from thence, which ſignifies a multitude; or Polyandrion, as the Septuagint verſion, a place where many graves are; or perhaps a new city will be built near this place, and ſo called, to perpetuate the memory of it; or elſe, as Kimchi obſerves, Jeruſalem will be ſo called, from the multitude of thoſe that will be ſlain near it; but however, neither that nor any other city in the land of Iſrael have ever bore any ſuch name; from whence it may be concluded, that this prophecy does not refer to the times of Antiochus, or any yet paſt, but to time to come: thus ſhall they cleanſe the land; thoroughly and completely, ſo that not a bone ſhall be left unburied.

℣. 17. And thou ſon of man, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] What the prophet is ordered by the Lord to ſay, is to creatures not then in being, nor yet; and were they, they could not underſtand his words; but however, when the time comes, partly by an inſtinct in nature, and partly by a particular direction of providence, they will be gathered together upon ſo great a ſlaughter of men; for what follows, tho' mentioned in this place, will be between the ſlaughter of Gog's army, and the burial of it, as Kimchi well obſerves; for after the burial, ſuch an invitation would be impertinent; and which is made not for the ſake of creatures, but of men, to denote the certainty of this great carnage that ſhall be made: ſpeak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beaſt of the field; this muſt be underſtood of ſuch fowls, and ſuch beaſts, as devour dead carcaſes, for all will not feed on them; a like invitation is given after the battel at Armageddon, the ſame with this here, Rev. xix. 17. only with this difference, there an angel is ſaid to cry, here the prophet; there to the fowls only, here to the beaſts of the field alſo; no doubt reſpect there is had to this paſſage: aſſemble yourſelves and come, gather yourſelves on every ſide to my ſacrifices that I do ſacrifice for you; ſuch a ſlaughter of men is called a ſacrifice, becauſe there is a likeneſs between that and the killing of beaſts for ſacrifice; beſides, theſe enemies of God and his people will fall a victim to his juſtice, as well as be a repaſt for fowls and beaſts, who are invited as to a feaſt, to feed upon them; and there being ſo much of the power and providence of God in all this, it is aſcribed to him, and ſo is called, the ſupper of the great God, Rev. xix. 17: even a great ſacrifice upon the mountains of Iſrael; where Gog's army will fall, ℣. 4. and in ſuch vaſt numbers, that it may well be called a great ſacrifice; the ſacrifice of a great army by the great God, and for ſuch a great number of creatures: that ye may eat fleſh, and drink blood; the fleſh and blood of the ſacrifices, even of ſlain men, which carnivorous creatures delight in. The Targum is, "draw near every where round about to the ſlain, which I ſlay for you with a great ſlaughter upon the mountains of Iſrael, and ye ſhall eat the fleſh, and drink the blood."

---

[g] לשם in nomen, Pagninus, Montanus, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 18. Ye ſhall eat the fleſh of the mighty, &c.] Of the ſoldiers, men of ſtrength and courage, and fit for war, with which the army of Gog will abound: and drink the blood of the princes of the earth; both the princes of his own family and court, and thoſe of his allies and auxiliaries that will come along with him: of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bullocks; which the Targum, Jarchi, and Kimchi, interpret of kings, princes, dukes, rulers, and governors; and ſo does John in the Revelation, of kings, captains, and mighty men, ch. xix. 18: all of them fatlings of Baſhan; which was a country in Iſrael, very fruitful, and full of paſtures, where much fat cattel were bred; and to which theſe great perſonages in Gog's army are compared, for their bulk, ſtrength, and wealth. So the Targum, "all of them rich in ſubſtance." It may be rendred, all of them the merie of Baſhan; for meri is the name of an ox or buffle; and Jarchi ſays, that a fat ox is called in the Arabic language الماري, almari [h].

℣. 19. And ye ſhall eat fat till ye be full, &c.] The fat of men; and ſuch as before deſcribed generally are fat, and of which they ſhall have enough; and tho' voracious creatures, ſhall eat to ſatiety: and drink blood till ye be drunken; as men are with wine, who become mad with it; and ſo birds and beaſts of prey grow fiercer by drinking blood: the meaning is, they ſhould have their fill of the fleſh, fat, and blood, of ſlain men: of my ſacrifice, which I have ſacrificed for you; the Targum is, "of the fleſh of the ſlain, which I have ſlain for you;" ſee the note on ℣. 17.

℣. 20. Thus ſhall ye be filled at my table with horſes and chariots, &c.] With the fleſh of horſes, and of them that ſit on them, as John interprets it, Rev. xix. 18. and ſo the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic verſions: and with the fleſh of men that ride in chariots uſed in war; for chariots themſelves cannot be eaten; and with theſe the birds and beaſts of prey will be filled at the Lord's table, which he will furniſh for them on the mountains of Iſrael, on the field of battel, where Gog and his army will fall: and thus as the Lord's ſupper is called the table of the Lord, 1 Cor. x. 21. ſo this table of the Lord is called the ſupper of the great God, Rev. xix. 17. this is further explained, with mighty men, and with all men of war, ſaith the Lord God; that is, with the fleſh of valiant men, generals, captains, officers of all ſorts, and common ſoldiers, even of all men, great and ſmall, bond and free, Rev. xix. 18.

℣. 21. And I will ſet my glory among the heathen, &c.] The glory of his divine perfections, particularly his power and his goodneſs, in deſtroying the enemies of his people, and ſaving them; which will be ſet in a clear point of view to the heathen, that they cannot but obſerve it; and this is the ultimate end of this ſtrange event, as it is of all that the Lord does, even his own glory, ſubordinate to which is his people's good: and all the heathen ſhall ſee my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them; his vengeance and power, as the Targum; the puniſhment inflicted by his mighty hand on Gog and his army: theſe heathens are the pagan kingdoms of China, &c. and of Tartary, Perſia, and the whole Turkiſh dominions, being Mahometan, which are no better than heathen; theſe will be converted to the chriſtian religion, in conſequence of this event; for this will be the paſſing away of the Turkiſh wo, which will make way for the ſounding of the ſeventh trumpet; and when theſe kingdoms will become Chriſt's, and way be made for the kings of the eaſt to come over to him, Rev. xi. 14, 15. and xvi. 12.

℣. 22. So the houſe of Iſrael ſhall know that I am the Lord their God, &c.] That has choſen them, redeemed them, called them, manifeſted his covenant-love and grace to them, and protected and defended them; this deſtruction of their enemies will be a proof of it; and they'll hereby be led into a clearer knowledge of him, and of his goodneſs to them; and make a more firm and conſtant profeſſion of him, even from that day and forward, to the end of time; for after this, the Jews will no more apoſtatize, but will for ever remain the people of God and Chriſt.

℣. 23. And the heathen ſhall know that the houſe of Iſrael went into captivity for their iniquity, &c.] Before this they thought the captivity of the Jews, and all their diſtreſſes, were owing to their own weakneſs, and the weakneſs of the God they ſerved, and to the ſuperior ſtrength of their enemies, and the power of their gods; but now, by this ſtrange and amazing deſtruction of Gog and his army, they'll ſee that it was not owing to thoſe things, but to the ſins and tranſgreſſions of the people of the Jews: becauſe they tranſgreſſed againſt me; prevaricated with him, acted a perfidious and treacherous part to him, as the word [l] ſignifies; which they did, when they delivered Jeſus of Nazareth, the true Meſſiah, into the hands of the Gentiles, to be crucified; it is their diſbelief of Chriſt, and rejection of him, and male-treatment of him, that is here more eſpecially pointed at; and which is the cauſe of their preſent long captivity and exile, and of all the afflictions and troubles they have ſince met with: ſo the Targum renders it, "they dealt falſly with my word;" the word made fleſh, the incarnate Saviour: therefore hid I my face from them; took no notice of them, ſhewed them no favour, took no care of them; diſregarded their prayers and cries, and removed his preſence from them, and all the tokens of it. So the Targum, "I cauſed my Shekinah (or majeſty) to remove from them;" and thus it has been ever ſince, and now is: and gave them into the hand of their enemies; the Romans, who took away their place and nation; which they feared would be the caſe, ſhould many believe in Chriſt; but the true reaſon of it was, becauſe they did not believe in him, John xi. 48: ſo fell they all by the ſword; that is, thro' the ſword of the conquering Romans; they fell into their hands; ſome periſhed by the ſword, and others were carried into captivity; and all were puniſhed for their iniquity, treſpaſs, and perfidy.

---

[h] Vid. Bochart. de Script. Animal. par. 1. lib. 2. c. 28. col. 284.

[l] מעלו בי prævaricati eſſent contra me, Pagninus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 24. According to their uncleanneſs, &c.] Not ceremonial, but moral; they were an impure and adulterous generation, as our Lord calls them, Matt. xii. 39. and xvi. 4: and according to their tranſgreſſions have I done unto them; or rebellions, as the Targum renders it; or defections, as the word[k] ſignifies; their rebellions againſt the king Meſſiah; their defections from him; their contempt of him, and rejection of his yoke, and non-ſubmiſſion to his ordinances; according to the deſert of ſuch crimes, the Lord dealt with them; "took vengeance on them," as the Targum is; in the deſtruction of their nation, city, and temple: and hid my face from them; or cauſed his Shekinah to remove from them, as the ſame paraphraſe; ſee the note on ℣. 23.

℣. 25. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord, &c.] The Jews having been long puniſhed for their ſins; and being brought to repentance for them, and to faith in Chriſt, as they will be in the latter day: hence it follows, now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob; or the captives of Jacob, the people of Iſrael, that have been carried captive into all lands; theſe ſhall be gathered from thence, and brought into their own land: and have mercy upon the whole houſe of Iſrael; all the twelve tribes; which ſhows that this has not reſpect to the return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity; for then the Lord had mercy on the houſe of Judah only, or the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin; but their return from their preſent captivity, and future converſion, when all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved; as the fruit and effect of the rich ſovereign grace and mercy of God unto them, Rom. xi. 25, 26: and will be jealous for my holy name; or, zealous[l] for it; for the glory of it, that it be no more blaſphemed among the heathen; and that it be glorified among his own people.

℣. 26. After that they have borne their ſhame, &c.] And diſgrace, among the nations where they are ſcattered; being captives, exiles, in diſtreſs and affliction, and under the manifeſt tokens of the divine wrath and vengeance: it may be rendered, and they ſhall bear their ſhame[m]; that is, as Jarchi gloſſes it, "when I ſhall do good to them, and not render to them according to their wickedneſs, then they ſhall bear their ſhame, and be confounded, and not able to lift up their face;" as penitent perſons, under a ſenſe of divine wrath, bluſh, and are aſhamed to look up to God; ſee Ezra ix. 6—10. Menachem interprets the word in the ſenſe of atonement and forgiveneſs, as it is uſed in Pſ. xxxii. 1. as if the meaning was, then they ſhall have their ſins, which cauſed ſhame, forgiven them. Kimchi's gloſs is, "they ſhall carry in their mouths, and make mention of their ſhame they had in captivity." And all their tranſgreſſions, whereby they have tranſgreſſed againſt me; that is, the puniſhment of all their treſpaſſes in their captivity, or the ſhame of them, being now brought to repentance; and which will be aggravated to them, when they remember that theſe were committed by their forefathers, and ſince approved of by them. When they dwelt ſafely in their land, and none made them afraid; as they did in the times of Chriſt; they were in entire peace, and no enemy diſturbed them; and were in the poſſeſſion of their own land, and enjoyed the bleſſings of it, and had their religious, as well as civil liberties; and yet rejected the Meſſiah, his doctrine, ordinances, and ſalvation by him.

℣. 27. When I have brought them again from the people, &c.] That is, then ſhall they be aſhamed, and repent of all their treſpaſſes and ſins: and gathered them out of their enemies lands; from the provinces of their enemies, as the Targum; when they are collected together in a body out of the ſeveral nations where they are now diſperſed, and brought to their own land: and am ſanctified in them in the ſight of many nations; when they ſhall publickly repent of their ſins, and forſake them, and ſeek the Lord their God, and the king Meſſiah, and embrace and profeſs him, and acknowledge that God has been righteous and holy in all his diſpenſations towards them.

℣. 28. Then ſhall they know that I am the Lord their God, &c.] See the note on ℣. 22: which cauſed them to be led into captivity among the heathen; for their ſins and tranſgreſſions: and ſo the Targum adds, "becauſe they ſinned before me:" but I have gathered them into their own land; being now penitent for their ſins, and believing in the Meſſiah: and ſo the Targum, "and now becauſe they are converted, I have gathered them, &c:" and have left none of them any more there; among the heathen, or in the land of their enemies; every one ſhall be returned to the land of Canaan, be they where they will, as when they came out of Egypt: and this is typical of the ſalvation of God's elect, or myſtical Iſrael; not one of them ſhall be loſt or periſh, but all ſhall be brought to repentance: this again ſhows, that this prophecy did not reſpect the return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity; ſince then many were left behind.

℣. 29. Neither will I hide my face any more from them, &c.] The Jews, upon their future converſion, will always have the worſhip of God among them, and his preſence with them; he will always take notice of them; they will ever be under his protection and care; he will never remove his Shekinah from them any more, as the Targum: a further proof that this refers to future times; for after their return from Babylon, God did hide his face, and remove his preſence from them, and left them to ruin and deſtruction by the Romans: for I have poured out my Spirit upon the houſe of Iſrael, ſaith the Lord God; this refers not to the effuſion of the Spirit on the day of Pentecoſt, but to one that is yet to come, when the Jews will be converted in the latter day; after which God will no more depart from them, nor ſhall they depart from him; ſee Zech. xii. 10. Iſ. lix. 19, 20, 21.

CHAP.

---

[k] כפשעיהם ſecundum defectiones eorum, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Starckius; pro defectionibus ipſorum, Cocceius.

[l] קנאתי aſſumam zelum, V. L zelabo, Pagninus, Montanus, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

[m] ונשו את כלמתם et portabunt, Pagninus, Montanus, V. L. Grotius; et ferent ignominiam ſuam, Starckius.

CHAP. XL.

THIS and the eight following chapters contain a viſion of a city and temple herein deſcribed, and are thought to be the moſt difficult part of the whole bible. The Jews forbid the reading of it, till a man is arrived to thirty years of age; and then he muſt expect to meet with things in it he does not underſtand, and which muſt be left until Elias comes to explain them. Many chriſtian commentators have omitted the expoſition of theſe chapters; and all acknowledge the difficulties in them. Something however may be got out of them, relating to the goſpel, and goſpel-church-ſtate, which I am fully perſuaded is intended by the city and temple; for that no material building can be deſigned, is clear from this one obſervation; that not only the whole land of Iſrael would not be capable of having ſuch a city as is here deſcribed built upon it, but even all Europe would not be ſufficient; nor the whole world, according to the account of the dimenſions which ſome give of it. The circumference of the city is ſaid to be about eighteen thouſand meaſures, ch. xlviii. 35. but what they are is not certain. Luther makes them to be thirty-ſix thouſand German miles; and a German mile being three of ours, the circuit of this city muſt be above a hundred thouſand Engliſh miles; and this is ſufficient to ſet aſide all hypotheſes of a material building, either of city or temple, the one being in proportion to the other. The Jews dream of a third temple to be built, by their vainly-expected Meſſiah; but nothing is more clear, than that the true Meſſiah was to come into the ſecond temple, and by that give it a greater glory than the former ever had; as is evident from Hagg. ii. 6—9. and according to Malachi, he was to come ſuddenly into his temple, which could be no other than the then preſent one, Mal. iii. 1. and into which Jeſus came, and where he often appeared and taught, as well as entered into it with power and authority, as the Lord and proprietor of it; by which he appeared to be the true Meſſiah, as by many other characters; ſee Luke ii. 22, 46. and xxi. 37. Matt. xxi. 12, 13. There are ſome who think that Solomon's temple, as it was before it was deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, and as it was rebuilt by Zorobabel, is here deſcribed; and that partly to let the Jews know what a glory to their nation they loſt by their ſins; and partly that they might have a complete pattern for the rebuilding of it, as well as to comfort them under its preſent ruins; but there is no agreement between them. This temple was to be built at a diſtance from the city, ſeveral miles; according to ſome ten, others twenty, and by the beſt account twenty-ſeven miles; ſee ch. xlv. 1—5. whereas Solomon's temple, and that built by Zorobabel, were in the city of Jeruſalem: nor from either of theſe flowed waters, which roſe up to a river, on the bank of which were many trees for food and medicine, and whoſe waters were healing and quickened wherever they came, as from this, ch. xlvii. 1—12. nor do we ever read of the eaſt-gate of theſe temples always ſhut, as this, ch. xliv. 2. and beſides, both theſe temples were profaned and deſtroyed; whereas this ſhall never be, but God will dwell in it for ever, ch. xliii. 7. neither place, ſtructure, nor worſhip agree. Nor is this city here the ſame with the new Jeruſalem, John had a viſion of; for tho' he borrows ſome of his expreſſions to deſcribe it from hence; and in ſome things there is an appearance of agreement, as of the river of water of life, and the tree of life on both ſides of the river, Rev. xxii. 1, 2. yet the deſcription agrees not, either with reſpect to its gates, or its compaſs; and tho' there was no temple in that John ſaw, as there was none in this, it being without the city; yet here is a temple in this viſion, and the greateſt part of it is taken up in the deſcription of it. It remains, that this muſt be underſtood myſtically and figuratively of the goſpel-church, which is often ſpoken of as a city and temple, Heb. xii. 22. Rev. iii. 12. and which began to have its accompliſhment in the firſt times of the goſpel, immediately after the death and reſurrection of Chriſt; when his diſciples had a commiſſion to preach the goſpel to all nations; and who accordingly did, even before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and of the material temple, ſo that goſpel-churches were planted in all parts of the world; and eſpecially this was the caſe, when the Roman empire, called the whole world, became chriſtian: tho' the further and greater accompliſhment of this viſion will be in the latter day; when the earth ſhall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the ſea; when Jews and Gentiles will be converted, and goſpel-churches be ſet up every where; ſo that the goſpel-church-ſtate, or kingdom of Chriſt, ſignified by the great mountain in Dan. ii. 35. and by this large city here, will fill the whole earth: and the rather this may be thought to be the deſign of this viſion to repreſent it, as it follows the prophecies of the Jews ſettlement in their own land; and of the deſtruction of Gog, or the Turk, attempting to diſpoſſeſs them; of which in ch. xxxvii. xxxviii. xxxix. In this chapter are firſt an account of the viſion in general, the time, manner, and place of it, ỳ. 1, 2. a deſcription of the perſon, the builder and owner of the houſe; and by whom the prophet is ſhewn the ſeveral parts and dimenſions of it, whom he calls to him for that purpoſe, ỳ. 3, 4. and then a particular account is given, which begins with the outward wall around the houſe, ỳ. 5. then the eaſt-gate, with its poſts, porch, and chambers, and the outward court with its chambers, ỳ. 6—19. then the gate of the outward court to the north, with its chambers, and the gate of the inner court over-againſt that, ỳ. 20—23. then the gate to the ſouth, with its poſts, arches, and chambers, ỳ. 24—31. then the inner court to the eaſt, its gate, chambers, and arches, ỳ. 32—34. then the north-gate, with its poſts, chambers, and arches, ỳ. 35—38. in the porch of which are the tables, on which the ſacrifices are ſlain, ỳ. 39—43. after which are deſcribed the chambers for the ſingers and the prieſts, ỳ. 44, 45, 46. then the inner court and altar in it; and the chapter is concluded with the dimenſions of the porch of the houſe, ỳ. 48, 49.

ỳ. 1. In the five and twentieth year of our captivity, &c.] That is, from Jeconiah's captivity, from whence this prophet begins his dates: he calls it our captivity, becauſe he himſelf was then carried captive; and this was twenty years after his firſt viſion; ſee ch. i. 1, 2: in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month; the Jews had two beginnings of their year, the one on civil accounts, which was in the autumnal equinox, in the month Tiſri, which anſwers to part of our September; and if this is meant here, the tenth day of it was the day of atonement, in which the Jews were to afflict their ſouls; but on this day the prophet has a view of the goſpel-church, which receives the atonement by the ſacrifice of Chriſt: the other beginning of the year, which was on eccleſiaſtic accounts, was in the vernal equinox, the month Niſan, which anſwers to part of our March; and the tenth day of it was the day that the paſſover-lamb was ſeparated from the flock, and kept up till the fourteenth; the time between Chriſt's public entry into Jeruſalem, and his being ſacrificed as the paſſover for us. Some interpreters go one way, ſome the other; it is not eaſy to determine which is meant; tho' I think more probably the latter, ſince church-affairs are chiefly here repreſented. This, according to the Talmudiſts [n], was the year of the jubilee: biſhop Uſher [o] places it in the year of the Julian period 4140, and before Chriſt 574; and makes the day to be the 30th of April, and the third day of the week (Tueſday); and as to the year Mr. Whiſton [p] agrees with him: in the fourteenth year after that the city was ſmitten; taken, broken up, and deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar; its walls demoliſhed; its houſes burnt, and inhabitants put to the ſword, or carried captive. This was in the eleventh year of Zedekiah's reign, to which add the fourteen years from hence, and they make twenty-five, as reckoned from Jeconiah's captivity: in the ſelf-ſame day the hand of the Lord was upon me, and brought me hither; that is, on the tenth day of the month, of the new year, begin when it will. The Spirit of the Lord, which is ſometimes called the finger of God, and the power of God, this fell upon him, or was laid on him, and impreſſed his mind and ſoul; and he in a viſionary way, as appears by what follows, was brought into the land of Iſrael, and to Jeruſalem, according as things were repreſented to his mind; tho' as to his body, he was ſtill in the land of Chaldea. The Targum interprets the hand of the Lord, the ſpirit of prophecy; ſee ch. i. 2.

℣. 2. In the viſions of God brought he me into the land of Iſrael, &c.] Or by the ſpirit of prophecy, as the Targum again; that is, being under the impreſſions of the Spirit of God, it appeared to him, in a viſionary way, as if he was really brought out of Chaldea, and ſet in the land of Iſrael; ſee ch. viii. 3. as John was carried away in the Spirit to ſee the new Jeruſalem, Rev. xxi. 10: and ſet me upon a very high mountain; as John alſo was, that he might have a view of this large city and temple, which were to fill the whole world: thus Chriſt was taken up to an exceeding high mountain, to be ſhown the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, Matt. iv. 8. it is needleſs to enquire what this mountain was, whether Moriah on which the temple was formerly built, or any other mountain near Jeruſalem, ſince no material temple is exhibited to be built upon it; nor would ſuch a mountain, eſpecially Zion or Moriah, have been a proper place, if a material temple at Jeruſalem was here deſigned, which muſt have ſtood upon it; but this is viſionary, as well as the city and temple; if it reſpects any thing, it may the ſtrength, the viſibility and exalted ſtate of the church of Chriſt in the latter day; ſee Iſ. ii. 2: by which was as the frame of a city on the ſouth; the prophet in the viſion, and as to his view of things coming from Babylon, which lay north of Judea, has a proſpect of the ſouth of the city and temple; and firſt, there appeared to him to the ſouth of the mountain on which he ſtood, the plan of a city; or which was as one, for the city itſelf is not deſcribed till laſt; the deſcription is of the temple firſt; and which for its wall, gates, courts and towers, looked more like a city than a temple; nothing is more common than for the church of Chriſt to be compared to a city, eſpecially as in the latter day; ſee Pſ. lxxxvii. 3.

℣. 3. And he brought me thither, &c.] Being brought into the land of Iſrael in viſion, and to an high mountain in it, by which were as the frame of a city; he was from thence brought to the city or temple itſelf, which looked like one: and behold! a note of attention and admiration: there was a man; one in human form; not a created angel, but the Meſſiah, the builder and owner of the city and temple, whom it was proper the prophet ſhould firſt have a view of; and by whom he was to be made acquainted with the ſeveral parts and dimenſions of thoſe buildings: he is called a man, not that he was a mere man, but the eternal God; or otherwiſe he would not have been fit to be the architect or builder of ſuch a fabric; nor as yet was he really man, but is ſo called, becauſe it was determined he ſhould, and it was agreed by him that he would become man, and it was foretold as a certain thing; and beſides, he often appeared in an human form before his incarnation, as he now did, being moſt ſuitable to the prophet, and making himſelf more familiar to him; as well as it was a preludium of his future incarnation, and of what he ſhould be when this viſion would be fulfilled: whoſe appearance was like the appearance of braſs; denoting the glory and ſplendor of his divine perſon, being the brightneſs of his Father's glory; alſo the glory of his human nature, in his ſtate of exaltation, and the glory of his office, as Mediator; and eſpecially the glory and brightneſs he'll appear in when this viſion will take place, with which he ſhall enlighten the whole earth, and ſlay antichriſt; ſee Rev. xviii. 1. 2 Theſſ. ii. 8. alſo it may denote his purity and holineſs in both his natures, divine and human; not only in the former, but in the latter, in which he is free from ſin, original and actual; and even now from ſin imputed, having made full ſatisfaction for it, without which he'll appear when he comes a ſecond time, Heb. ix. 28. this may likewiſe point at his great ſtrength, as God, and man, and Mediator; who has made the world, and holds all creatures in being; who is the mighty Redeemer of his people; has bore their ſins, and conquered their enemies; ſupports their perſons; bears their burdens, and ſupplies them with ſtrength: once more it may intend his duration; who, tho' he was once dead, is alive, and lives for ever; his prieſthood is unchangeable; his kingdom an everlaſting one; and he the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever, and his years fail not: with a line of flax in his hand, and a meaſuring reed; one in one hand, and the other in the other hand; the one to meaſure greater, the other leſſer matters; and both ſignify the ſacred ſcriptures, the rule and meaſure of faith and practice; and to which, in the latter day, all will be reduced; the doctrines then preached will be quite agreeable to them; the ordinances will be adminiſtered as they were firſt delivered; the form, order and diſcipline of churches will be according to the primitive pattern; there will be no deviation from it; ſee Zech. ii. 1, 2. Rev. xi. 1. and xxi. 15: and he ſtood in the gate; of the houſe or temple, as being lord and proprietor of it; having the keys of it, to open and ſhut, let in and keep out, at his pleaſure; ſee Heb. iii. 6. Rev. iii. 7. and as the guide of the prophet, to lead him into the ſeveral courts and apartments, and give him the dimenſions of them, that he might ſhew them to the houſe of Iſrael, to be obſerved by them; and here, as Cocceius obſerves, he ſtands, invites and calls perſons to come into his houſe, and partake of all the privileges and entertainments of it; ſee Prov. i. 20. and viii. 1, 2, 9. and ix. 1—5. yea here he ſtands, as being not ſo much the door-keeper, as the door and gate itſelf; as he is the way to his Father, the gate that leads to eternal life, ſo the door into a goſpel-church; ſee John xiv. 6. and x. 1, 9.

---

[n] T. Bab. Eracin, fol. 12 1.

[o] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3430.

[p] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

℣. 4. And the man ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] The glorious and illuſtrious perſon before-deſcribed, who appeared in an human form, ſpoke to the prophet, calling him the ſon of man, a title often beſtowed upon him in this prophecy; and here uſed to put him in mind of his original and deſcent, and of his meanneſs and unworthineſs; thereby teaching him humility, which is neceſſary in order to receive inſtruction, and learn the knowledge of divine things: and alſo he might uſe this free and familiar way of ſpeaking, both to expreſs his philanthropy or good will to men, and to take off all terror from the mind of the prophet at his appearance; that he might more diligently attend to what he ſhould ſee and hear, which he next adviſes him to: behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears; look with both eyes, and hear with both ears; that is, look wiſtly, and hear attentively; for if perſons only have a glance or ſuperficial view of any thing, or hear in a careleſs and indifferent manner, what they ſee and hear will make little impreſſion upon them; nor will they retain, but ſoon forget it, and be incapable of relating it unto others: and ſet thy heart upon all that I ſhall ſhew thee; let thy mind be intent upon it; thoroughly conſider it, and ponder it within thy heart; let it engroſs all thy thoughts and affections; ſo it will be imprinted upon thy mind, and be remembered by thee; for unleſs a man's heart is taken with what he ſees and hears, it will ſoon be gone from him; and beſides, theſe were things of great moment and importance, which were about to be ſhewn the prophet: as Moſes had the pattern of the tabernacle ſhewn him in the mount; and as David had the pattern of the temple given him by the Spirit, and in writing, which were both typical of the church; and as John had a view of the new Jeruſalem; ſo the prophet here is ſhown the form and order of the goſpel-church in the latter day: for to the intent that I might ſhew them unto thee, art thou brought hither; this was the deſign of his being brought in a viſionary way out of Chaldea into the land of Iſrael, that he might have a view of the fabric after deſcribed; and therefore it was highly proper that he ſhould diligently view it, and liſten attentively to every thing that was ſaid to him about it; and the rather, as he was to relate the whole to others, as follows: declare all that thou ſeeſt to the houſe of Iſrael; to the people of Iſrael then in captivity; and to the church of God in every age, to whom this prophecy ſhould come, and by whom it ſhould be read; that the people of God in all ſucceeding times might know what will be the ſtate and condition of the church of Chriſt in the latter day; and how far they now come ſhort of goſpel-order and diſcipline; ſee ch. xliii. 10, 11. It becomes the miniſters of the word faithfully to declare what has been ſhown them, whether reſpecting doctrine or practice, even all things, and keep back nothing that may be profitable and uſeful.

℣. 5. And behold, a wall on the outſide of the houſe round about, &c.] The firſt thing that preſents itſelf to the view of the prophet, after the ſight of the architect or chief builder, is a wall encompaſſing this ſtrange and wondrous building; which was like the frame of a city, as before obſerved: this wall was five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad; ſee ch. xlii. 20. now this wall was both for ſeparation and protection; that it was for ſeparation, is certain from ch. xlii. 20. it was to ſeparate between the ſanctuary and the profane place; that is, between the church and the world: the people of God were always a diſtinct and ſeparate people; they were ſo from eternity, are ſo in time, and will be ſo to all eternity; they were diſtinguiſhed from others by the everlaſting love of God; by his eternal choice of them, and taking them into the covenant of his grace, in conſequence of it; and by the redeeming grace of Chriſt, who has redeemed them out of every kindred, people and nation; and by the efficacious grace of God, in effectual vocation, by which they are ſeparated from the world, and become a diſtinct people from them; and ſo they will be in the reſurrection-morn, and in the day of judgment, and in heaven for evermore: and what ſeparates and diſtinguiſhes them is not any native goodneſs in them, nor any good thing done by them; but the purpoſe and grace of God, which is like a wall built firm and ſure; not upon the works of men, but the will of God; and is unalterable and eternal; a wall that can never be battered down: it is this by which the church is incloſed as a vineyard and garden, to which it is ſometimes compared, becauſe ſeparate and diſtinct from the waſte, common, and field of the world; as here to a building encompaſſed by a wall, and divided from it: the church of Chriſt in all ages does, or ſhould conſiſt of perſons gathered out of the world, ſeparated from it by the grace of God; but in the latter day it will more viſibly appear to conſiſt of ſuch: it will be openly diſtinguiſhed from the world, by the purity of its doctrines; by the faithful adminiſtration of ordinances; by the ſtrictneſs of its diſcipline, and by the holy lives of the members of it; theſe, by the grace of God, will be a wall of ſeparation round about it, to keep out profane perſons and things: moreover, a wall is for protection, preſervation and ſafety; and ſuch a wall the Lord himſelf will be to his people; he will be round about them, on their ſide, and on every ſide of them; yea, a wall of fire to enlighten, warm and comfort them, and to conſume their enemies, Zech. ii. 5. he'll be a wall about his church in his love to them, with which he encompaſſes them; and which is built, not on their lovelineſs, love or obedience, but upon his ſovereign will and pleaſure; and the dimenſions of which, its length, breadth, height and depth, are unmeaſurable: it is a wall impregnable;

it can never be broken down, and ſecures from all enemies whatever; and ſo he'll be in his power, by which his ſaints are kept as perſons in a garriſon, or any fortified place well walled about, and which is invincible; to which may be added ſalvation by Jeſus Chriſt, which will be for the walls and bulwarks of the city and church of God in the latter day, to which belong the prophecies in Iſ. xxvi. 1. and lx. 18. which ſalvation flows from the love of God; is ſecured by his purpoſe; eſtabliſhed in his covenant; wrought out by Chriſt, and is an everlaſting one; and is the firm ſecurity and ſafety of his church and people now, hereafter, and to all eternity: and in the man's hand a meaſuring reed of ſix cubits long, by the cubit; and an hand breadth; as in ℣. 3. and this being the meaſure uſed in taking the dimenſions of the whole building; it was proper it ſhould be explained what it was, before they are taken, and the account given: it conſiſted of ſix cubits; but then as theſe differ, there being a common cubit, and a ſacred or royal one; it was neceſſary it ſhould be clearly pointed at, as it is, by obſerving that theſe cubits were to be underſtood of a cubit and an hand's breadth; the common cubit were eighteen inches, a foot and a half, or half a yard; and an hand's breadth were three inches; ſo that this meaſure conſiſted of three yards and an half. Some indeed are of opinion, that the hand's breadth is to be added only to the ſix cubits, and not to each of them; but the text is clear and expreſs, that theſe cubits were by or according to a cubit and an hand's breadth. So the Targum paraphraſes it, "and in the man's hand meaſuring reeds, one " of which was ſix cubits by a cubit, which is a " cubit and an hand's breadth;" and this is confirmed by what is ſaid in ch. xliii. 13. the cubit is a cubit and an hand's breadth; to which may be added, that ſuch was the royal cubit at Babylon, where Ezekiel now was, according to Herodotus[q]; who ſays, "the royal cubit is larger by three " fingers than that which was uſually meaſured " with, or the common cubit;" in this way Jarchi and Kimchi underſtand it; tho' they make the common cubit to be but five hands breadth, or fifteen inches, and this ſix hands breadth, or eighteen inches: what this myſtically ſignifies, ſee the note on ℣. 3: ſo he meaſured the breadth of the building one reed, and the height one reed; not of the whole building of the houſe or temple, but of the wall before-mentioned; the breadth or thickneſs of which was one reed, or three yards and a half; and the height of it was the ſame; denoting the great ſecurity, ſafe protection, and ſtrong defence of the church of God.

℣. 6. Then came he unto the gate which looketh toward the eaſt, &c.] Or, whoſe face is the way to the eaſt[r]; to the eaſt of the houſe or temple; not to the eaſtern-gate of the wall about the houſe; but to the eaſtern-gate of the outward court; ſee ℣. 20. for the man came from the wall he had meaſured unto this gate; which, with the other gates after-mentioned, ſpiritually deſign Chriſt himſelf, who is the way, door and gate, John xiv. 6. and x. 7, 9. Matt. vii. 13, 14. and this eaſtern-gate more eſpecially, where the prince ſat, ch. xliv. 3. and which led into the outward court; and over-againſt which was another that led into the inner court, and ſo ſtraight on to the holy of holies, at the weſt end of the houſe. Chriſt and faith in him, and a profeſſion of him, are the way into the outward viſible church, and to the external ordinances of it, baptiſm and the Lord's-ſupper; he is alſo the way or gate that leads into the inner-court, or into ſpiritual communion and fellowſhip with God; he is the way of acceſs to the Father, and thro' whom ſaints have communion with him; for there is no coming to him, nor enjoyment of him, but thro' a Mediator; and Chriſt is he, and he only, by whom we can draw nigh to God, have audience of him, and acceptance with him: he is the gate alſo that leads to eternal life; the way to heaven and happineſs lies thro' his perſon, blood and righteouſneſs; he is the only way, the new and the living way; the plain way, and open gate, yet ſtrait and narrow: and went up the ſtairs thereof; or the ſteps unto it, which were ſeven; ſee ℣. 22, 26. and ſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions expreſs it here, and read, ſeven ſteps; according to Jarchi, there were twelve ſteps, which he takes from the Miſnah[s]; that there was a Chel of ten cubits, and there were there twelve ſteps. It is certain, that to the north and ſouth-gates there were but ſeven ſteps; tho' Lipman[t] obſerves, that it is poſſible there might be a greater declivity on the eaſt-ſide, which required ſo many ſteps. Some of the Jewiſh writers think this is to be underſtood of the height of the court of Iſrael above this court; as if it was ſaid, from this court they went up ſeven ſteps to the court of Iſrael; but the plain meaning, as Lipman[u] obſerves is, that theſe ſteps were without the gate, and are the height of the court from the mountain of the houſe to it: theſe Cocceius very ingeniouſly illuſtrates by the ſeven trumpets in the Revelation; which indeed are ſo many ſteps or gradual advances towards the kingdom of Chriſt, and the glorious and ſpiritual ſtate of his church in the latter day; which will be introduced by the blowing of the ſeventh trumpet, when the myſtery of God will be finiſhed, and the kingdoms of this world become Chriſt's, Rev. x. 7. and xi. 14, 15. perhaps the man leading the prophet up theſe ſteps or ſtairs to the gate, may ſignify the gradual increaſe of ſpiritual light and knowledge of the ſaints, in the perſon, offices, and grace of Chriſt, the way, the truth, and the life; indeed the whole work of grace on the heart is gradual; it is carried on by degrees; it is but begun, not yet finiſhed, particularly the work of faith; believers proceed from one ſtep to another; firſt ſee Chriſt by faith, then go to him, then lay hold on him, and retain him; their faith increaſes, and they go from ſtrength to ſtrength; and ſometimes it grows exceedingly; the advances in it are many and manifeſt: and meaſured the threſhold of the gate, which was one reed broad; of the ſame meaſure. The Hebrew word[w] ſignifies, both a threſhold, and the upper lintel; and the one may intend the one, and the other the other, and both theſe: ſome think they point at the two Teſtaments; or, as others, the two natures in Chriſt, and the ſtrength of them, who is the gate, the way to God, the Mediator between him and man, and the mighty Redeemer. Cocceius, becauſe mention is made of a third threſhold, ℣. 7. fanſies that theſe three threſholds deſign the three witneſſes, Father, Word and Spirit; which three are one, and found in one gate, which is Chriſt; ſo that he that believes in him, believes in all three; and he that has the one, has the other: but it is a miſtake of this learned man, that theſe three threſholds belong to one gate; for that after-mentioned is the threſhold of the inner, and not the outer gate. Jarchi and Kimchi underſtand not the threſholds of the gate, but the poſts of it.

---

[q] Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 178.

[r] אשר פניו דרך הקדימה facies ejus via ad orientem, Montanus; cujus facies ejus, Vatablus.

[s] Middot, c. 2. §. 3.

[t] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 9. fol. 2. 2.

[u] Ibid.

[w] סף ſumitur pro inferiore limine, & pro ſuperliminari, ſive ſuperiore limine, Capellus, Sanctius.

℣. 7. And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad, &c.] The length and breadth were equal, three yards and a half long and broad; a perfect ſquare. There were ſeveral of theſe little chambers or apartments in this building, at the ſeveral gates, and in other places after-mentioned; of theſe chambers which were in the gates of the courts; as there were alſo others, according to Kimchi, on the wall of the mountain of the houſe; Lipman[x] ſays there is no mention made of them in the building of the ſecond temple: theſe deſign not the hearts of particular believers, where Chriſt has a place, takes up his reſidence, and takes his reſt; nor the many manſions in Chriſt's Father's houſe in heaven, where the ſaints ſhall dwell with him to all eternity; but the ſeveral congregated churches of Chriſt. The fabric deſcribed in this and the following chapters intends the goſpel-church-ſtate in general; and theſe little chambers the ſeveral particular churches which will be ſet up in all parts of the world, eaſt, weſt, north and ſouth. Theſe may be called chambers, partly for their ſecreſy, 2 Kings vi. 12. Eccl. x. 20. here the Lord's hidden ones are, who, tho' well known to him, are unknown to the world; here the ſecrets of God's heart, of his love, grace and covenant, are made known to his people; here Chriſt, whoſe name is ſecret, and the myſteries of his grace, are revealed to babes, whilſt they are hid from the wiſe and prudent; and beſides, the affairs of Chriſt's churches ſhould be kept ſecret, and not publiſhed to the world: and partly for ſafety; ſee 1 Kings xx. 30. and xxii. 25. 2 Kings xi. 2. Iſ. xxvi. 20. church-fellowſhip, the word and ordinances being the means of ſtrengthening faith, and preſerving from apoſtacy; ſalvation is as walls and bulwarks to them; and the roof of them, which is Chriſt, ſee ℣. 13. ſecures from all inclemencies, from the wind, ſtorms and tempeſts of divine wrath; he having bore it, and delivered from it; and from the ſcorching heat of perſecution, and from all afflictions, as well as from the temptations of ſatan, ſo as to be hurt and deſtroyed by either of them: likewiſe they may be called chambers, becauſe quiet reſting places, as well as ſecret, ſafe and ſure ones, Iſ. xxxii. 18. theſe are the reſting places of God, who has deſired them, and dwells in them; and of Jeſus Chriſt, where his reſt is glorious, and where he gives ſpiritual reſt to his people; and eſpecially theſe will be ſuch to the ſaints in the latter day, and great ſhall be the abundance of it: as alſo becauſe of that communion and fellowſhip herein enjoyed, both among themſelves, and with Father, Son and Spirit; ſee Cant. i. 4. to which may be added, that here ſouls are begotten and born again to Chriſt; theſe are the chambers in which they are conceived and brought forth, Cant. iii. 4. and theſe may be ſaid to be little chambers, in compariſon of the general aſſembly and church of the firſt-born, which includes all the elect of God, and redeemed of the Lamb, a number which no man can number; as that is called little in compariſon of the whole world, that lies in wickedneſs; and beſides, thoſe that dwell in theſe chambers are little and contemptible in the eyes of the world, as they are low and mean in their own eyes; even each leſs than the leaſt of all ſaints: now theſe little chambers or churches are repreſented of an equal meaſure, denoting that they will be exactly according to the pattern of God's word; will have the ſame officers, the ſame doctrines and ordinances, and the ſame laws and rules; and will be of equal authority, not having one more power than another, or one over another; but entirely independent of each other: and being four-ſquare, as the new Jeruſalem is ſaid to be, Rev. xxi. 16. may denote the perfection of them; that they will now be brought entirely to anſwer the rule of the word; and alſo the firmneſs and ſtability of them: and between the little chambers were five cubits; not a wall five cubits thick, as the Targum; and ſo Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it[y]; but a ſpace of five cubits, or of two yards and a half, one foot and three inches; ſo that theſe chambers were not contiguous; but a ſpace was left between, which made them more airy; and by which means they had more of the benefit of the light, and heat of the ſun, and afforded commodious places to walk in: all which ſhews the churches of Chriſt to be ſeparate, diſtinct and independent communities; and yet may have a communication with each other; as well as they all ſhare the advantage of the light and heat of Chriſt the ſun of righteouſneſs riſing on them: and the threſhold of the gate by the porch of the gate within was one reed; or three yards and a half: this gate within was that which lay weſtward, and was nearer the temple; between which and the outer-gate before-mentioned was a porch, on both ſides of which were little chambers; and the threſhold or threſholds (one being put for both) were of the ſame dimenſions with thoſe of the threſholds of the other; and ſo point to the ſame things.

℣. 8. He meaſured alſo the porch of the gate within, one reed.] This was either the meaſure of the breadth of the porch between the oppoſite chambers on both ſides; or rather of the length of that ſpace, which was between the third little chamber and the laſt-gate; and ſuch a ſpace muſt be ſuppoſed to be between the firſt gate and the firſt little chamber, which ſpace were three yards and a half; which ſhows how ſpacious the churches of Chriſt will be, and how exactly meaſured.

℣. 9. Then meaſured he the porch of the gate eight cubits, &c.] This could not be the length of the porch from gate to gate, or from eaſt to weſt, as Lipman[z]; ſince there were five cubits between every little chamber; but the breadth of it from north to ſouth, and was four yards and two feet over: and the poſts thereof two cubits; theſe were columns or pillars placed on each ſide of the porch, or at the portal of the gate, of two cubits, or a yard and half a foot thick; which added to the other eight cubits, made the entrance ten cubits, as in ℣. 11. what theſe poſts, pillars or columns ſignify, ſee on ℣. 14, 16: and the porch of the gate was inward; this was the porch of the inward-gate; or this was the meaſure of the porch within the gate.

℣. 10. And the little chambers of the gate eaſtward, &c.] Where the man now was, and was meaſuring; and the like chambers there were in the other gates, and of the ſame meaſure; of which chambers ſee the note on ℣. 7: were three on this ſide, and three on that ſide; three on the right-ſide of the porch to the north, and three on the left-ſide of it to the ſouth: they three were of one meaſure; one reed, or three yards and a half ſquare, as in ℣. 7. ſee the note there: and the poſts had one meaſure on this ſide, and on that ſide; on the right and left, north and ſouth of the inward gate of the porch, which meaſure was two cubits, ℣. 9.

---

[x] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 4. fol. 2. 1.

[y] So Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 4. fol 2. 1.

[z] Ibid. §. 6.

℣. 11. And he meaſured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits, &c.] Five yards, two feet and a half: this was the meaſure of the eaſtern-gate, whether outward or inward; for they were both of a meaſure, as appears from the threſholds being alike: and the length of the gate, thirteen cubits; that is, the height of it; it was ſeven yards and three inches high; a prodigious gate this! a fit emblem of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as the open door, the gate of life, thro' which whoever enters ſhall be ſaved; and there's room for multitudes to enter.

℣. 12. The ſpace alſo before the little chambers was one cubit on this ſide, &c.] Or, a border [a] of half a yard and three inches to the front of the chambers; where thoſe that belonged to them might walk, or have ſeats to ſit on; ſuch a ſpace there was before the three little chambers on the north ſide of the porch: and the ſpace was one cubit on that ſide; a ſpace or border of the ſame meaſure was to the front of the three little chambers on the ſouth-ſide of the porch: this may denote the chriſtian liberty of the members of goſpel-churches; which they may uſe without any breach of piety towards God, or of charity one to another: and the little chambers were ſix cubits on this ſide, and ſix cubits on that ſide; they were of the ſame meaſure, thoſe on one ſide, as thoſe of the other, even ſix cubits ſquare; or one reed, which is the ſame; ſee ℣. 7. and the note there.

℣. 13. He meaſured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber, to the roof of another, &c.] That is, the whole porch, from the extreme part of the roof of one of the little chambers on the north-ſide, to the extreme part of the roof of another of the little chambers on the ſouth: of the roof of theſe chambers, and the ſpiritual meaning of it, ſee the note on ℣. 7: the breadth was five and twenty cubits; reckoning ſix cubits to one chamber on one ſide, and ſix to one chamber on the other ſide, which make twelve; and a cubit and a half to each back-wall of the chambers on the north and ſouth; or two cubits to the ſpaces before the chambers, and a cubit and a half to each of the eaves of the chambers, which either way make fifteen cubits; and ten cubits the breadth of the gate; in all five and twenty cubits; or fourteen yards and three inches: door againſt door; not the door of the outward gate againſt the door of the inward gate; nor the door of one of the little chambers at the eaſt, to the door of another at the weſt, running length-ways, and ſo affording a ſight quite thro' the temple; but the door of one of them on the north-ſide, over-againſt the door of another on the ſouth, they anſwering exactly to each other; which ſtill more confirms the ſimilarity and equality of goſpel-churches; ſee the note on ℣. 7.

℣. 14. He made alſo poſts of threeſcore cubits, &c.] Jerom thinks, that between the outward wall which ſurrounded this building, and the building itſelf, theſe poſts or pillars were placed for ornament, which took up the ſpace of ſixty cubits; but rather theſe deſign the poſts or columns of the gate, which ſupported the arch over it, on which were rooms or ſtories, and theſe were ſixty cubits high; for of their height is this meaſure to be underſtood. So the Targum, "and he made poſts, "ſixty cubits was their height;" in the Targum, in the Polyglott Bible by Montanus, it is, "and "he made ſixty poſts, their height a cubit;" and to this agree Jarchi and Kimchi; theſe were thirty-five yards high, the height of the temple ordered to be built by Cyrus, Ezra vi. 3. The man that meaſured is ſaid to make theſe poſts, he being the builder, as well as the meaſurer of this edifice; and might be ſaid to make theſe, as by meaſuring he pointed out the ſize and proportion of them: theſe poſts may deſign the true members of goſpel-churches, ſuch who are pillars in the houſe of God; of which ſee more on ℣. 16. compare the phraſe of making theſe poſts or pillars with Rev. iii. 12: even unto the poſt of the court round about the gate; that is, there was the ſame meaſure to every poſt or pillar in every court, at every gate round about; at the ſouthern and northern gates, as at this eaſtern one; they were all exactly of the ſame meaſure as the poſts in this; ſo Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it.

℣. 15. And from the face of the gate of the entrance, &c.] That is, from the outward-gate as you went into the porch, and was to the eaſt, ſo called from peoples paſſing and repaſſing [b] in it; ſo Jarchi takes it to be the eaſtern-gate; the Targum calls it the middle-gate: unto the face of the porch of the inner-gate; which opened at the other end of the porch, into the outward court, and was to the weſt: from gate to gate were fifty cubits; as he meaſured the breadth of the porch before, ℣. 13. here the length; there were three chambers ſix cubits long, which made eighteen; and between each chamber were five cubits, which were ten cubits; and the ſpace between the chambers and the gates at each end were ſix cubits each; ſee ℣. 8. which make twelve more; and then allow ten cubits for the thickneſs of both walls of each gate, and there will be fifty cubits, or twenty-nine yards, and half a foot.

℣. 16. And there were narrow windows to the little chambers, &c.] The walls being ſloped both within and without, that the light let in might be ſpread the more: as thoſe little chambers ſignify the ſeveral congregated churches of Chriſt in the goſpel-diſpenſation; ſee the note on ℣. 7. ſo theſe windows deſign the word and ordinances therein adminiſtered, which are the means of letting light into them; ſee Cant. ii. 9. Iſ. liv. 12. and lx. 8. in attending on theſe, the light of God's countenance is enjoyed, which lies in the diſcoveries of his love; in the manifeſtations of himſelf; in his gracious preſence, and in communion with him; than which nothing is more deſireable or delightful: thro' theſe ordinances Chriſt the ſun of righteouſneſs ſhines in upon his people; he looks in at theſe windows, and ſhews himſelf thro' theſe lattices; he is ſeen thro' the glaſs of the goſpel; he is held forth in the ordinance of the ſupper; and by means thereof the ſouls of God's people are enlightened, comforted and warmed: alſo in this way are communicated the illuminations of the Spirit, both at firſt converſion, and in after-diſcoveries of the things freely given of God; of the doctrines of the goſpel; of the bleſſings of grace, and of the glories of heaven. The goſpel itſelf is a great and glorious light; and the miniſters of it are the light of the world, and of the churches; and by the light being diffuſed thro' theſe little chambers, the churches, thoſe who are in them ſee to walk on in Chriſt, as they have received him, and becoming his goſpel, and their profeſſion of it; and alſo ſee to work, not for life, juſtification and ſalvation, but to evidence their faith, and adorn their profeſſion; to glorify God by their ſhining lights, and to cauſe others to glorify him; and by the whole, the light of joy, peace, and comfort, is tranſmitted to all the inhabitants of Zion. Theſe windows are ſaid to be narrow, or ſhut, or cloſed [c]; that is, comparatively, not abſolutely, for then they would be of no uſe. The ordinances of the goſpel-diſpenſation are no doubt clearer, and the light of it larger, than of the legal diſpenſation, but this light has been darkened by the papacy; and tho' it increaſed at the Reformation, yet before the latter day-glory will break forth, it will be as a twilight, neither clear nor dark, day nor night, Zech. xiv. 6, 7. and tho' the light that then will break out, will be exceeding great, as the light of the ſun, and that as the light of ſeven days, Iſ. xxx. 26. yet in compariſon of the light of the new Jeruſalem-ſtate, when there will be no need of the ſun or moon, but the Lord will be the everlaſting light of his people; and in compariſon of the ultimate glory, when the ſaints ſhall ſee face to face; the light even of this diſpenſation, will be like what is let in at narrow windows; ſee Rev. xxi. 23, 24, 25. 1 Cor. xiii. 12. And to their poſts within the gate round about; that is, to the poſts of the doors that led into theſe chambers, over the lintel of them, were windows to let in light to thoſe that were entering them, as well as were in them; and ſo there were to all the chambers round about the porch on one ſide, and the other, between the two gates: and likewiſe to the arches; or porches [d]; to theſe doors, to which there were windows giving light to thoſe that paſſed thro': and the windows were round about inward; in all the chambers within the grand porch, on the north and ſouth: and upon each poſt were palm-trees; that is, on every poſt, column, or pillar, belonging to the chambers; and very probably on all the other before-mentioned, ℣. 9, 10, 14. theſe poſts or pillars ſignify, either the miniſters of the goſpel; ſo called for their ſtrength, being mighty in the ſcriptures, able miniſters of the New-Teſtament, capable of retaining, and defending the truths of the goſpel, and of bearing reproach and perſecution for them, and alſo the infirmities of weak believers; and for their ſtability, being ſtedfaſt and immoveable in the work and cauſe of Chriſt, and not to be taken off from it, either by the frowns or flatteries of men; and for their uſefulneſs, in ſupporting the cauſe and intereſt of the Redeemer, and the minds of weak chriſtians, as well as the glorious truths of the goſpel; and may with great propriety be called the pillar and ground of truth; ſee Prov. ix. 1. 1 Tim. iii. 15. yea, all true believers, and proper members of the churches of Chriſt, are pillars there, and ſuch as ſhall never go out, Rev. iii. 12. the word [e] uſed has the ſignification of ſtrength, as pillars ſhould be ſtrong; and ſuch believers are, not in themſelves, but in Chriſt, in his power and grace, and thro' his Spirit; whereby they can do all things, perform all duties, exerciſe all grace, and engage with all enemies. They are like pillars that ſtand firm and ſtable; grounded in the love of God; ſecured in election-grace; ſettled in the everlaſting covenant; laid on the ſure foundation Chriſt, and eſtabliſhed in the truths of the goſpel; ſo that they never go out of the heart of God, the hands of Chriſt, the family of the ſaints, or church of God. They are as pillars; ſome more uſeful to ſupport in an external way the intereſt of religion, giving liberally to the maintenance of miniſters, the relief of the poor, and the defraying of all neceſſary charges; and others to ſtrive and contend for, and ſo maintain and preſerve the truths and ordinances of the goſpel; and others to comfort and confirm weak believers. Now on theſe poſts or pillars were palm-trees painted, two on each, one on one ſide, and one on the other, as appears from ℣. 26. which are alſo an emblem of true believers in Chriſt; ſee Pſ. xcii. 12. Cant. vii. 7, 8. comparable to them for their uprightneſs, Jer. x. 5. theſe looking upwards to Chriſt by faith, and moving heaven-wards in their affections and deſires, and being upright in heart and life; and for their bearing preſſures, and growing the more under them, as the palm-tree does. Saints have many weights on them, a body of ſin and death, reproaches, afflictions, and perſecution; but they bear up under all, and are not left to deſert the cauſe they are engaged in; yea, grow the more hereby, in numbers and grace, like the children of Iſrael, Exod. i. 12. the force of the palm-tree is in its top or head, if that is taken away it dies: Chriſt is the believers head, from him they have their life, grace, ſtrength, nouriſhment, and fruitfulneſs; could they be ſeparated from him, all would be gone. The palm-tree grows beſt in ſunny places, is fruitful, an ever-green, and laſts long: and ſuch are the people of God; they grow moſt under the warm beams of divine love, and rays of the ſun of righteouſneſs; in the churches of Chriſt, where the goſpel is preached, and ordinances adminiſtred, which make their hearts burn within them; they are fruitful in grace and good works, retain their leaf of profeſſion, and never periſh. Once more, the palm-tree is a token of joy and victory, and has been uſed on ſuch occaſions, Lev. xxiii. 40. John xii. 12, 13. Rev. vii. 9. and may denote the victory and joy upon it, which ſaints have thro' Chriſt, over ſin, ſatan, the world, and death.

---

[a] גבול terminus, Munſter, Pagninus, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

[b] Vid. R. Sol. Urbin. Ohel Moed, fol. 9. 1.

℣. 17. Then brought he me into the outward court, &c.] The divine and glorious perſon in human form, having brought the prophet up to the eaſtern gate, and thro' it, and the porch that belonged to it, to the inner gate of it, which lay weſtward; and having meaſured that gate, its threſhold, the porch, the poſts or pillars, and little chambers in it; introduced him into a ſpacious piece of ground, that lay open to the air, and ſurrounded the whole building; and anſwers to the court of the Iſraelites in the temple, where they worſhipped promiſcuouſly, good and bad: and ſo may deſign the outward viſible ſtate of the goſpel-church, conſiſting of good and bad, of wiſe and fooliſh virgins; like a field that has both wheat and tares in it; or a corn-floor that has wheat and chaff upon it; which in the latter day will grow worſe and worſe, and be given to the Gentiles, Rev. xi. 2. but ſhall be recovered again, and make a conſiderable part of this fabrick; which repreſents the ſtate of the church, and the outward adminiſtration of the word and ordinances in it, and the viſible fellowſhip of the ſaints together in them. And lo there were chambers; in the outward court, in various parts of it; which ſignify, as before, viſible congregated churches, formed according to the order of the goſpel; in which the word is preached, ordinances adminiſtered, and ſaints have fellowſhip one with another. It is a different word here uſed from that in ỹ. 7, 10, 12, 16. and is by ſome rendered, cells, ſtorehouſes, treaſuries [f]; and here the unſearchable riches of Chriſt are preached, and the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge hid in him are brought forth, and preſented to the view of the ſaints. And a pavement made for the court round about; as this court went round about the whole building, ſo there was a pavement upon it all around. The word [g] uſed has the ſignification of a burning coal. Probably this pavement appeared as made of ſtones of various colours, of black, white, and red, like a chequered work of black and white marble; or as made of the porphyry-ſtone, which is variegated with divers colours. This pavement was for thoſe that dwelt in the chambers, to walk in, and converſe together: and it may denote the walk of the ſaints, both in the ordinances of the goſpel, and in their outward converſation, as becoming it; in love to them that are within, and in wiſdom towards thoſe that are without: and this is walking as on a pavement, on firm ground, in a plain and even way, where there is no occaſion of ſtumbling; it is walking clean, in righteouſneſs and holineſs, and not in the mire and dirt of ſin; and it is pleaſant walking in the courts of the Lord, and in the ways and paths of wiſdom; and beautiful it is to ſee the ſaints walk harmoniouſly and comfortably together here, converſing with each other, and building up one another upon their moſt holy faith. Thirty chambers were upon a pavement; according to ſome, fifteen on each ſide of the eaſtern gate, as you came out of it into the court; or rather, according to Cocceius's tables, theſe were all around the court, eight to the eaſt, eight to the north, eight to the ſouth, and ſix to the weſt; or as Villalpandus, ſeven to the eaſt and weſt each, and eight to the north and ſouth a piece. This ſuggeſts, that there will be viſible congregated churches in the latter day in all parts of the world, eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth; ſee Iſ. xliii. 5, 6.

---

[c] אטמות clauſæ, Montanus, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

[d] לאלמות in veſtibulis, Vatablus, Montanus, Piſcator; porticibus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[e] איל fortitudo, hinc אל fortis.

ỹ. 18. And the pavement by the ſides of the gates over-againſt the length of the gates, was the lower pavement.] That is, this pavement, which went along by every gate, and anſwered the length of them, and what appertained to them, eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth, was either lower than the pavement in the inward court, adjoining to this, to which there was an aſcent by ſteps; or the middle part of this pavement roſe up in a convex form, and on all ſides there was a declivity; by which means all filth was waſhed away, and it was kept clean, and always fit to walk on. This diſtinction of a higher and lower pavement, whether on one account or another, may point out; the one, the believers walk by faith on Chriſt; and the other, his walk in the ordinances of Chriſt, and in all becoming converſation.

ỹ. 19. Then he meaſured the breadth from the fore front of the lower gate, &c.] That is, from the front of the inner eaſtern gate before-mentioned, ỹ. 7. called the lower gate, in reſpect of the gate oppoſite to it, which led into the inner court, to which there was an aſcent of eight ſteps; and which the Targum calls the middle gate, becauſe it lay between the eaſtern outward gate, and the gate of the inward court. Now there were from hence, unto the fore front of the inner court without, an hundred cubits; to the outſide of the gate was ſuch a length, or fifty-eight yards and one foot: eaſtward and northward; as ſo it was from eaſt to weſt, ſo from north to ſouth, and from ſouth to north; there was juſt the ſame diſtance from the gate that led into the outward court, to that which led into the inward court, on all ſides; ſee ỹ. 23, 27. a man may be a long while an outward court-worſhipper, before he is an inward court-worſhipper; the paſſage thro' the one to the other is long.

ỹ. 20. And the gate of the outward court that looked toward the north, &c.] Or the north gate of this building: having finiſhed the dimenſions of the eaſtern gate, thoſe of the north gate are taken: he meaſured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof; as he had the eaſtern gate, and which were the ſame; and ſo of the ſouth gate, ỹ. 24. which denotes the uniformity in religion in the latter day, in the way of entrance into the churches, and in doctrine, diſcipline, worſhip and ordinances.

ỹ. 21. And the little chambers thereof were three on this ſide, and three on that ſide, &c.] As in the eaſtern gate, and the meaſures the ſame, ỹ. 7. goſpel-churches in the latter day will be all on the ſame plan, and modelled according to the ſame pattern, and be in juſt the ſame order, one as another: and the poſts thereof, and the arches thereof were after the ſame meaſure of the firſt gate; the eaſtern gate: believers will be all pillars in the church of God, and partakers of the ſame like precious faith: the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits; ſee ỹ. 13, 15.

ỹ. 22. And their windows, and their arches, and their palm-trees, were after the meaſure of the gate that looked towards the eaſt, &c.] ỹ. 14, 16. ſignifying, that the light of the churches, their privileges, and flouriſhing condition, will be alike every where, as in one part of the world, ſo in another; ſee Iſ. lii. 8. and xi. 9. Dan. xii. 4: and they went up unto it by ſeven ſteps; or ſtairs, ỹ. 6. the number of them is not there mentioned as here, but the ſame in both; ſee the note there: and the arches thereof were before them; the ſteps; or within them, as the Septuagint; the ſteps led to the arches of the gate, or to the porch of it, which were more inward.

ỹ. 23. And the gate of the inward court was over-againſt the gate toward the north, and toward the eaſt, &c.] Or, and as to the eaſt [h]; that is, the north gate of the inner court, was directly oppoſite to the north gate of the outward court; juſt as the eaſtern gate of the inward court, was in a ſtrait line oppoſite to the eaſtern gate of the outward court: and he meaſured from gate to gate, an hundred cubits; from the north gate of the outward court, to the north gate of the inward court; and it was exactly of the ſame diſtance from one another, as on the left ſide; ſee ỹ. 19.

ỹ. 24. After that he brought me toward the ſouth, &c.] Having taken the dimenſions of the eaſt and north gates, the prophet was had on the ſouth ſide of the building: and behold, a gate toward the ſouth; that led to the ſouthern part of this fabrick, and to the outward court there, exactly like the other two; there was no difference in them, which raiſed the prophet's wonder and attention; for, as Lipman[k] ſays, there was no outward court in the ſecond temple, but to the eaſt of the inward; and it did not encompaſs the other ſides; and ſo the more wonderful: and he meaſured the poſts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to theſe meaſures; the meaſures of the eaſt and north gates, which were juſt alike; for theſe all ſignified but one gateway or door into the church below, into heaven above, or into the preſence of God here and hereafter, which is Chriſt, John xiv. 6. and x. 1, 7, 9.

---

[f] לשכות cellæ, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus, Cocceius, Starckius; παστοφορια, Sept. gazophylacia, V. L.

[g] רצפה, pruna ardens, Iſ. vi. 6.

[h] ולקדים

℣. 25. And there were windows in it, and in the arches thereof round about, &c.] That is, in the little chambers, tho' not expreſſed; and in the porches of them on each ſide, as you paſſed from the outer to the inner gate: like thoſe windows; that were in the chambers, that were in the eaſt and north gates, ℣. 7, 16, 22: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits; ſee ℣. 13, 15.

℣. 26. And there were ſeven ſteps to go up to it, &c.] To the ſouth gate, as there were to the eaſt and north gates, ℣. 6, 22: and the arches thereof were before them; ſee the note on ℣. 22: and it had palm-trees, one on this ſide, and another on that ſide, upon the poſts thereof; that is, on the poſts of this gate were palm-trees, two on each poſt, one on one ſide, and the other on the other: this verſe ſhews us, how many palm-trees were painted on the poſts, and how they were diſpoſed of; ſee the note on ℣. 16.

℣. 27. And there was a gate in the inner court toward the ſouth, &c.] Which anſwered to the gate of the outward court before-mentioned: and he meaſured from gate to gate toward the ſouth, an hundred cubits; from the gate of the inward court, to the gate of the outward court ſouthward, were juſt the ſame dimenſions as in the eaſt and north gates, and between their reſpective ones, ℣. 19, 23.

℣. 28. And he brought me to the inner court by the ſouth gate, &c.] Having done with the outer court, eaſt, north, and ſouth, the prophet is brought into the inner court by the ſouth gate, which was neareſt to enter by. No mention is made of a weſtern gate, yet there was one in Solomon's temple; for there were porters appointed weſtward by David, and fixed by Solomon, 1 Chron. ix. 24. 1 Chron. xxvi. 16, 18. but Joſephus[l] ſays, in the ſecond temple the weſtern part had no gate, but a continued wall; for thoſe that came out of the captivity, as Kimchi on ℣. 5. obſerves, built it (as much as they could) according to the form of what they ſaw in Ezekiel's temple, which ſhall be in time to come. And he meaſured the ſouth gate according to theſe meaſures; the gate which led into the inner court; for the ſouth gate, which led to the outward court, he had meaſured before, ℣. 24.

℣. 29. And the little chambers thereof, and the poſts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to theſe meaſures, &c.] Theſe were at the gate of the inner court; and ſo they ſtand in Cocceius's tables; and were of the ſame meaſure with the little chambers, poſts, and arches, that were at the ſeveral outward gates before deſcribed; and deſign the churches and members of them as ſpiritual worſhippers, who beſides the outward form, have the power of godlineſs: and there were windows in it, and in the arches thereof round about; theſe are not ſaid to be narrow, as the other; which perhaps may denote the greater and more increaſing light of the churches, miniſters, and members: it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad; that is, the ſpace or portico where theſe chambers were; and this was the ſame meaſure with that where the other chambers were, ℣. 13, 15.

℣. 30. And the arches round about were five and twenty cubits long, &c.] That is, high; this was the height of them; theſe were the frontiſpiece of the gate to the inner court without, and faced the outward court, as appears by the following verſe; theſe were a kind of portico over the eight ſteps to this gate after-mentioned; they were fourteen yards and three inches high, from the bottom to the top of them: and five cubits broad; two yards and a half, one foot and threes inches; and which very probably were the breadth of the ſteps that came up to them: none of theſe arches were in the ſecond temple, as Lipman[m] obſerves.

℣. 31. And the arches thereof were toward the outward court, &c.] And ſo not within the gate of the inward court, but on the outſide of it, towards the outward court, at the front of the gate as you went in: and palm-trees were upon the poſts thereof; of the gate, or of theſe arches or portico's; ſignifying, that none ſhould enter here but righteous perſons; this is the gate of the righteous, Pſ. cxviii. 19, 20. Iſ. xxvi. 2. ſee the note on ℣. 16: and the going up to it had eight ſteps; one more than the aſcent to the outward gates; ſome ſay eight more, and make theſe to be fifteen, anſwerable to the fifteen ſteps by which the Levites went up from the court of the women, to the court of Iſrael[n], and ſung upon them the fifteen ſongs of degrees, mentioned in the Pſalms: but here are only eight; and denote the gradual progreſs of believers in faith and holineſs; and that the nearer they come to the holy of holies, the greater their proficiency ſhould be, and more advances made in the knowledge of divine things.

℣. 32. And he brought me into the inner court toward the eaſt, &c.] Into that part of it which lay to the eaſt, having gone thro' that which lay to the ſouth: and he meaſured the gate according to theſe meaſures; that is, the eaſtern gate of the inner court; for the eaſtern gate that led to the outward court, he meaſured firſt, ℣. 6. and this was according to the meaſure of that, and of the reſt.

℣. 33. And the little chambers thereof, &c.] Theſe, and what follow in this verſe, are exactly the ſame with thoſe of the ſouth gate of the inner court, ℣. 29.

℣. 34. And the arches thereof were toward the outward court, &c.] As thoſe of the ſouth gate, ℣. 31. and the palm-trees on the poſts, and the ſteps up to it, the ſame as there.

℣. 35, 36, 37. And he brought me to the north gate, &c.] That is, of the inner court, for he had meaſured before the north gate that led to the outward court, ℣. 20. and here the little chambers, poſts, arches and ſteps, in all things agree with thoſe of the other gates: what were obſerved in it different from the reſt, an account is given of it in the following verſe.

---

[k] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 17.

[l] De bello Jud. l. 5. c. 5. §. 2. Vid. Lipman Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 12.

[m] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 22.

[n] Miſna Succa, c. 5. §. 4. Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 24.

℣. 38. And the chambers, and the entries thereof, were by the poſts of the gates, &c.] Of the north gate; the plural for the ſingular; for not at the other gates, only at the north gate were the ſacrifices ſlain and waſhed; as under the law, only on the north ſide of the altar, Lev. i. 11. now, by the poſts of this gate, or at the entrance of it on one ſide, ſtood a cell or chamber, and a door into it [o], as the words may be rendered; for they are ſingular in the text: where they waſhed the burnt-offering; its legs and inwards, Lev. i. 9. according to the law, there were lavers in Solomon's temple, to waſh the ſacrifices in, 2 Chron. iv. 6. but there was no ſuch cell or chamber there, for ſuch a purpoſe as here: and as this refers to goſpel-times, and to the church in the latter day, no legal ſacrifice can be intended here, which are all aboliſhed; but this muſt be myſtically and ſpiritually underſtood, and deſigns no other than the ſacrifice of Chriſt, a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour to God: that this kind of offering was typical of the ſacrifice of Chriſt, is clear from Heb. xiii. 11, 12, 13. which whether of the herd, a bullock, repreſented Chriſt in his ſtrength and laboriouſneſs; or of the flock, and was either a ſheep, an emblem of the innocence and patience of Chriſt; or a goat, which pointed him out as in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, traduced as a ſinner, and made ſo by imputation; or of fowls, turtle-doves, denoting his meekneſs and modeſty; and all without ſpot or blemiſh, ſignified the purity of his nature and life; and theſe being burnt with fire, were expreſſive of the pain and ſhame he endured, when he bore our ſins, and the wrath of God was poured on him as fire; the waſhing of the burnt-offering denotes the purity of Chriſt's ſacrifice, being offered up without ſpot. Some, as Polanus, have thought the ordinance of baptiſm is here deſigned, as the Lord's ſupper is by the tables next mentioned; and it is a note of Starckius upon the paſſage, that, "he "who is waſhed in the divine laver, may be re-"galed with the heavenly feaſt."

℣. 39. And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this ſide, and two tables on that ſide, &c.] This is ſtill the north-gate of the inward court, which had a porch that reached from the outward to the inner gate of it, in which were three little chambers on each ſide, ℣. 36. between each of which were a ſpace of five cubits, ℣. 7. ſo that there were two ſuch ſpaces on each ſide; and in theſe ſpaces, as Starckius well conjectures, theſe tables were placed, two on one ſide, and two on the other: the uſe of them was, to ſlay thereon the burnt-offering, and the ſin-offering, and the treſpaſs-offering; all typical of the ſacrifice of Chriſt: concerning the burnt-offering, as ſuch, ſee the note on the preceding verſe; and as for the ſin offering and treſpaſs-offering, which in the Hebrew language ſignify ſin and guilt itſelf; they repreſented Chriſt, who had no ſin in his nature, nor ever did any in his life, yet was made ſin for his people; having all their ſins laid upon him, with all that belong unto them, or are deſerved by them: theſe were, the one for errors, ſtrayings, and ſins of ignorance; the other for known and wilful ſins; and both ſhew, that Chriſt is a ſacrifice for all ſorts of ſin, even for the moſt vile and enormous: now theſe tables were for thoſe ſacrifices to be ſlain upon them, or to be laid upon them being ſlain; and ſignify in goſpel-times the table of the Lord, 1 Cor. x. 21. or the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper; in which there is not a reiteration, but a commemoration of the ſacrifice of Chriſt; here he is evidently ſet forth as crucified and ſlain; his death as a ſacrifice is ſhewn, and held forth to the faith of the Lord's people, for their joy and comfort, Gal. iii. 1. 1 Cor. xi. 26.

℣. 40. And at the ſide without, as one goeth up to the entry of the north-gate, were two tables, &c.] Or, the door of the north-gate [p]; not the firſt, upon coming up the eight ſteps; but paſſing thro' that gate, and along the porch where the three little chambers, and the two tables on each ſide were, before-mentioned; and coming to the inmoſt gate, which opens directly into the inward court, on the outſide of that towards the altar, were two other tables, for the ſame uſe as before: and on the other ſide, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables; there were two on one ſide of the gate, and two on the other, that is, the laſt gate of the porch, in all eight tables; four within the ſpaces between the little chambers in the porch, and four as you come out of it, on each ſide of the laſt gate.

℣. 41. Four tables were on this ſide, and four tables were on that ſide, by the ſide of the gate, &c.] Theſe are the ſame tables repeated, to obſerve more diligently the ſituation and uſe of them; there were four on the right hand, two between the little chambers in the porch, and two on the outſide of the inmoſt gate; and there were four on the left hand, two between the little chambers there, and two on the other ſide of the ſaid gate: eight tables whereupon they ſlew their ſacrifices; the four tables laſt mentioned, were for the ſame uſe as the four firſt; ſee the note on ℣. 39.

℣. 42. And the four tables were of hewn ſtone, &c.] Theſe are either the ſame tables as before, the four that were on one ſide, and the four that were on the other; they were all made of hewn ſtone: in the ſecond temple they were made of marble; ſo it is ſaid in the Miſnah [q], "the marble "tables were between the pillars;" and they were made of marble, as the commentators [r] ſay, becauſe that cools the fleſh, and preſerves it from corruption: they were both decent and durable; and may denote the continuance of the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper till his ſecond coming; and which is a decent and becoming ordinance, as well as perpetual: or theſe were other four tables, as Cocceius thinks; and which he places without the porch, near the cell or chamber, where the burnt-offering was waſhed, ℣. 38. and theſe are ſaid to be for that, as follows, for the burnt-offering; and alſo for the ſin-offering, and for the treſpaſs-offering, tho' they are not mentioned: of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad; juſt a four-ſquare: and one cubit high; theſe were the dimenſions of each table: whereupon alſo they laid the inſtruments, wherewith they ſlew the burnt-offering and the ſacrifice; the knives with which they ſlew the creatures offered, and cut them to pieces, and the bowls and baſons in which they received their blood; theſe were laid upon the tables, as the ſacrifices were: and may ſignify, that in the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper, are not only repreſented the ſacrifice of Chriſt, but the means, inſtruments, cauſes, and occaſion of it; the ſins of his people, for which he was wounded and bruiſed in his body, and with which he was pierced in his ſoul; and here we may look on him whom we have thus pierced, and mourn; and yet rejoice, that there is healing by his ſtripes, pardon by his blood, and atonement by his ſacrifice.

---

[o] ולשכה ופתחה et cubiculum, et oſtium ejus, Pagninus, Montanus; cæterum fuit cella, et oſtium ejus, Tigurine verſion.

[p] לפתח השער הצפונה ad oſtium portæ aquilonaris, Junius & Tremellius. So Cocceius and Starckius.

[q] Tamid, c. 3. §. 5 & Middot, c. 3. §. 5.

[r] Maimon. & Bartenora in ib.

℣. 43. And within were hooks, an hand broad, faſtened round about, &c.] Theſe very probably were faſtened on the poſts of the gate, near which were the waſhing-room for the ſacrifices, ℣. 38. on which they were hung, when they were flead, or the ſkin took off: in the ſlaughter-houſe in the ſecond temple, to the north of the altar, there were eight low ſtone pillars, upon which were boards of cedar four-ſquare, and iron hooks were fixed in them; and there were three rows of them in each, on which they hung the ſacrifices[r], which were one above another; on the loweſt they hung a lamb, on the middlemoſt a ram, and on the higheſt a bullock; theſe hooks ſtood out an hand's breadth from the pillars[s]: ſuch-like iron hooks were fixed on the walls and pillars in the court, where they ſlew the paſſover-lamb, on which they hung it, and ſkinned it[t]: this may denote either, as Cocceius ſuggeſts, the exaltation of Chriſt, who ſuffered and was raiſed for our juſtification; or rather the lifting of him up, and holding him forth to view, as a ſuffering Saviour, in the miniſtry of the word, and in the ordinance of the ſupper. And upon the tables was the fleſh of the offering; here another word is uſed, and may deſign that part of the fleſh of the ſin-offering, that was eaten by the prieſt, Lev. vi. 25, 26. ſo that theſe tables were feaſting tables alſo; as the table of the Lord, or the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper is, a feaſt of fat things, a feaſt of love; a table where the fleſh of Chriſt is laid, which is meat indeed, and only to be fed upon by thoſe that are made kings and prieſts unto God. Now theſe tables being many, ſhew that there will be a large number of goſpel-churches every where; and wherever they are, there will be tables: the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper will be celebrated in the four parts of the world; at preſent it is chiefly in the northern part, and where theſe tables were ſeen in this viſion.

℣. 44. And without the inner gate were the chambers of the ſingers, &c.] Theſe ſingers are true believers in Chriſt, members of goſpel-churches; whoſe duty and privilege it is to ſing pſalms, hymns, and ſpiritual ſongs; which is a part of internal, ſpiritual, and evangelical worſhip, Eph. v. 19. Col. iii. 16. theſe are the ſpiritual harpers, that have harps in their hands, and make melody in their hearts, and are able to ſing the ſongs of electing, redeeming, calling, pardoning, juſtifying, and adopting grace; theſe deſervedly have a place in the churches of Chriſt, in the inward court, being inward court-worſhippers, even all ſuch who ſing with the ſpirit and the underſtanding; for theſe chambers were in the inward court: the prophet being brought thro' the inner northern gate, into the open ſpace between the inward court, ſaw theſe chambers; for it follows, in the inner court which was at the ſide of the north gate; in that part of the court which lay near the north gate, where now the prophet and his guide were: and their proſpect was toward the ſouth; that is, ſome of theſe chambers, one row of them, were by the ſide of the north gate, and theſe faced the ſouth; north and ſouth being oppoſite to each other: one at the ſide of the eaſt gate, having the proſpect toward the north; another row of chambers for the ſingers, was in that part of the inner court which was on the ſide of the eaſt gate, on the north ſide of it, and ſo faced the north part of the court. The Septuagint verſion, if admitted, makes the ſenſe of it more clear, but different, "and he brought me into the inner court, and behold two chambers in the inner court; one at the back of the gate that looks to the north, bearing to the ſouth; and one at the back of the gate to the ſouth, looking to the north."

℣. 45. And he ſaid unto me, &c.] The illuſtrious perſon that appeared in an human form, meaſuring the ſeveral parts of the temple, ſaid to the prophet, as follows: this chamber, whoſe proſpect is toward the ſouth; the row of chambers that were on the ſide of the north gate, facing the ſouth: is for the prieſts, the keepers of the charge of the houſe; that obſerve the keeping of it; obſerve all the laws and ordinances of God's houſe, and are careful that the worſhip of God may be maintained and preſerved, to his glory, and their mutual edification: and which is, or ſhould be, the concern, not of miniſters only, but of all true believers, who are prieſts unto God; that preſent their bodies and ſouls before him, as a holy, living, and acceptable ſacrifice, which is their reaſonable ſervice; and offer up the ſpiritual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe to him, thro' Chriſt, Rev. i. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 5. Rom. xii. 1.

℣. 46. And the chamber, whoſe proſpect is towards the north, &c.] The row of chambers on the ſide of the eaſt gate; that ſide of it that was towards the north, and which the chambers in it faced: is for the prieſts, the keepers of the charge of the altar; the miniſters of the goſpel, that take care of the altar, of public worſhip; that preach the goſpel, and adminiſter ordinances; and who are to be taken care of themſelves, and live of the goſpel, and have every thing provided for them that is neceſſary, 1 Cor. ix. 13, 14: theſe are the ſons of Zadok, among the ſons of Levi; theſe Levites or prieſts were of the family of Zadok; who deſcended from Aaron, and was the eldeſt houſe of Aaron, to whom the prieſthood belonged; tho' it had been uſurped a long time by the family of Ithamar; but in Solomon's time, Abiathar of that family was diſpoſſeſſed of it, and Zadok was placed in his ſtead, whoſe name ſignifies juſt or righteous; and was a type of Chriſt, the holy and juſt one, whoſe ſpiritual children and offspring are here meant: which come near to the Lord to miniſter unto him; both preachers and people, who have near acceſs to God thro' Chriſt, and miniſter before him in holy things, in praying, preaching, adminiſtring ordinances, and attending on the ſame.

℣. 47. So he meaſured the court, &c.] The inward court, where the prophet and his guide now were; and the gates leading to which he had been meaſuring, with the chambers, arches, and tables belonging thereunto: an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, four-ſquare; the floor or area of this court, which was an hundred cubits in length and breadth; ſo that it was a perfect ſquare, equilateral, eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth, and above fifty yards each way; ſuch a court as never was in any temple whatever: hence Kimchi obſerves, there was no ſuch court in the ſecond temple; no, nor in the firſt neither: in the ſecond temple, the length of the court of Iſrael, according to Abarbinel, was a hundred and thirty-five cubits, and the breadth eleven, but this was a hundred by an hundred; theſe things, ſays Lipman[u], are wonderful in my eyes: this denotes the large increaſe of the church, and of ſpiritual worſhippers, in the latter day; and the four-ſquare of it, ſignifies the order, perfection, and ſtability of it; ſee Rev. xxi. 16: and the altar that was before the houſe; the altar of burnt-offering, which ſtood before the houſe or temple, in the midſt of the inward court; ſo that it might be ſeen by all in the inward court and chambers; and even by all in the outward court, thro' the ſeveral gates, which directly opened and led to it. This was typical of Chriſt, the altar, we chriſtians have a right to eat of; which ſanctifies every gift offered upon it, and which every worſhipper ſhould by faith look unto for the expiation of their ſins. The dimenſions of this altar were now taken, and are given in ch. xliii. 13—17.

---

[r] Miſn. Tamid, c. 3. §. 5. & Middot, c. 3. §. 5.

[t] Miſn. Peſachim, c. 5. §. 9.

[s] Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 34.

℣. 48. And he brought me to the porch of the houſe, &c.] Having paſſed thro' the inner court, and meaſured that; he came to the body of the fabrick, the principal part of it, the houſe or temple; to the porch that led into it. Here of right a new chapter ſhould begin, for this and the next verſe more properly belong to the following chapter. This porch was a large roof, and was a covering both from cold winds and ſtorms, and from the ſcorching heat of the ſun; and was an emblem of Chriſt, the hiding place from the wind, and the covert from the tempeſt of divine juſtice and vengeance, and the wrath of God; and from the heat of a fiery law, of ſatan's fiery darts or temptations, and of the perſecutions of men: it was alſo, as is thought, a place for the prieſts to pray in, before they went into the temple; as Chriſt is the way in which the prieſts of the Lord go unto him, and pray before him; in whoſe name, and for whoſe righteouſneſs-ſake, they preſent their ſupplications to him. And meaſured each poſt of the porch, five cubits on this ſide, and five cubits on that ſide; theſe poſts ſtood, one on the north ſide of the porch, and the other on the ſouth, and were each five cubits thick: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this ſide, and three cubits on that ſide; this gate ſignifies Chriſt, the door, or gate, or way of entrance into the ſpiritual temple, the church, John x. 1, 7, 9. and it had two leaves, that on the north was three cubits broad, and that on the ſouth was of the ſame meaſure: this two-leaved gate may ſhew, that both Jews and Gentiles being converted, may enter into the goſpel-church; as they will in the latter day, when the Jews ſhall be called, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles brought in; here will be an open door ſet; the gate will be wide enough to let them all in, Rev. iii. 8, 9.

℣. 49. The length of the porch was twenty cubits, &c.] From eaſt to weſt; from the firſt gate of it, to the laſt, which led directly into the houſe or temple: and the breadth eleven cubits; which may be thus accounted for; two cubits a-piece being allowed for each poſt, and three for each leaf of the door that were hung upon them, and one for the upright poſt in the middle on which they ſhut; in all eleven: and he brought me by the ſteps, whereby they went up to it; as there was an aſcent of ſeven ſteps to the ſeveral gates that led into the outward court; and another of eight ſteps, which led from that to the gates of the inner court; ſo there was an aſcent from the inner court, to the porch of the houſe or temple; but how many ſteps there were, is not ſaid. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions read ten ſteps; and the Vulgate Latin verſion eight ſteps. According to the Miſnah[w], there were twelve in the ſecond temple; ſo ſay Jarchi and Kimchi, with whom Joſephus[x] agrees. Cocceius thinks there could not be more than two, ſince the ground of the inward court and temple were continued; but as their number is not given, a determination cannot be made; only it may be obſerved, that the ſaints progreſs in the knowledge of Chriſt, and of divine things, and in faith and holineſs, is gradual. And there were pillars by the poſts, one on this ſide, and another on that ſide; one on the north ſide, and the other on the ſouth, ſomewhat like the two pillars of Jachin and Boaz in Solomon's temple; which ſome apply to the ordinances of the goſpel, ſaints partake of at their entrance into the goſpel-church; but rather they are an emblem of Chriſt, the ſupporter of his church, and of all thoſe that aright enter into it; and who, through his grace and ſtrength, become pillars there alſo, Rev. iii. 12. he is their Jachin, who eſtabliſhes them on himſelf, the ſure foundation; and their Boaz, in whom their ſtrength is, and from whom they have it to exerciſe grace, diſcharge duty, and perſevere to the end.

CHAP. XLI.

IN this chapter, the divine and illuſtrious perſon, the prophet's guide, brings him to the temple itſelf, and gives the dimenſions of the poſts and doors, both of the holy, and the moſt holy place, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4. then of the wall of the houſe, its ſide-chambers, the winding about to them, and the doors of them, ℣. 5—11. next of a building before the ſeparate place, its door-poſts, narrow windows, and galleries, ℣. 12—17. after that the ſeveral ornaments of the houſe are deſcribed, ℣. 18—21. then the altar of incenſe, ℣. 22. and the chapter is concluded, with obſerving the decorations and lights on the doors, porch, and ſide-chambers of the temple and ſanctuary, ℣. 23—26.

℣. 1. Afterward he brought me to the temple, &c.] Having meaſured the porch into it, its poſts and gate. This is the body of the building, which was the frame of a city firſt ſhewn, the principal fabrick; for hitherto he had been only meaſuring the outward and inner courts, and their gates, and what were in them; but now he is come to the houſe itſelf, called a temple; by which, not only particular goſpel-churches are called, 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17. 2 Cor. vi. 16. Eph. ii. 21. but the goſpel church-ſtate in general, Zech. vi. 12, 13. and eſpecially as in the latter day; ſo the Philadelphian church-ſtate, which repreſents the ſpiritual reign of Chriſt, or the glory of the latter day, is called the temple of my God, Rev. iii. 12. which will be an holy temple to the Lord; where he will dwell in a gracious manner, and be worſhipped in ſpirit and in truth; and here his glory will be ſeen; it will be built up of precious and coſtly ſtones, even living and lively ones; a ſpiritual houſe to offer up the ſpiritual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe: and, as in the material temple or holy place ſtood the candleſtick and table of ſhew-bread; here the light of the goſpel will burn clearly; and Chriſt the bread of life be held forth in the ordinance of the ſupper; where, as at a table, ſaints ſhall have intimate fellowſhip with him: and meaſured the poſts, ſix cubits broad on the one ſide, and ſix cubits broad on the other ſide; theſe were the poſts of the door of the temple, and ſtood on each ſide of it, on the north and ſouth; and this was the thickneſs, ſix cubits or a reed each, three yards and a half; this was the frontiſpiece of the door of the palace of the King of kings: which was the breadth of the tabernacle; the tabernacle of Moſes; that is, theſe poſts, or this frontiſpiece were as broad as the whole tabernacle of Moſes was; which had eight boards in the breadth, each board being a cubit and a half, made twelve cubits, juſt the breadth of theſe two poſts, Exod. xxvi. 16, 25. this ſhows how far ſuperior the goſpel-church is to the old ſynagogue; how larger is the one, and the entrance into it wider, than the other. Some underſtand by the tabernacle the upper lintel, of the ſame breadth with the poſts; and was in a recurve, and as a covering to the door; ſo the Jewiſh commentators, and others that follow them.

---

[u] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 27.

[w] Middot, c. 2, §. 3.

[x] De bello Jud. l. 5. c. 5. §. 4.

℣. 2. And the breadth of the door was ten cubits, &c.] The temple-door: great care is taken to obſerve and give the dimenſions of the doors and gates of various places; to put us in mind of Chriſt the door and gate into the church, and into fellowſhip with God: this was as broad again as the door of Solomon's temple; for that was but the fourth part of the wall of it, five cubits, 1 Kings vi. 1, 33: and the ſides of the door were five cubits on the one ſide, and five cubits on the other ſide; the ſide-walls of the door, both on the north and ſouth, were five cubits each; which, with the ten, the breadth of the door, made twenty; and is juſt the breadth of the temple or holy place afterwards given: and he meaſured the length thereof forty cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits; that is, the length of the temple from eaſt to weſt, and the breadth of it from north to ſouth, were of this meaſure; which exactly anſwers to the dimenſions of Solomon's temple, a figure of the goſpel-church, as this; ſee 1 Kings vi. 2, 17.

℣. 3. Then went he inward, &c.] Thro' the temple or holy place he had meaſured, to the holy of holies: and meaſured the poſt of the door two cubits; this was the door into the moſt holy place; there was one in Solomon's temple; but in the ſecond temple there was none; but two veils inſtead of it, which were rent at the death of Chriſt; and two cubits was the thickneſs of the poſt, on which this door was ſhut: and the door ſix cubits, and the breadth of the door ſeven cubits; this door was a two-leaved one; each leaf conſiſted of three cubits broad, and the poſt in the middle on which they ſhut one cubit broad, which made ſeven: tho' ſome think that the ſide-walls of the door are meant, as in ℣. 2. which were each ſeven cubits; and the breadth of the door ſix cubits, made twenty cubits; which was the breadth of the moſt holy place, as anſwering to the breadth of the holy place, as in the next verſe.

℣. 4. So he meaſured the length thereof twenty cubits, &c.] That is, of the moſt holy place from eaſt to weſt; which was the meaſure of it in Solomon's temple, 1 Kings vi. 20: and the breadth twenty cubits before the temple; that is anſwerable or according to the breadth of the temple or holy place; which was alſo twenty cubits in breadth: this ſtood at the weſt-end of it, and was equal in breadth to it; ſee 1 Kings vi. 2, 20: and he ſaid unto me, this is the moſt holy place; the divine perſon in human form ſaid to the prophet, take notice of this building; this anſwers to the moſt holy place in the temple. This was an emblem of the moſt holy and perfect ſtate of the church on earth; it repreſents the new Jeruſalem church-ſtate, that holy city, and into which nothing ſhall enter that defiles; and, as in the moſt holy place, the divine Shekinah or majeſty of God dwelt; ſo here will dwell in perſon the God-man and Mediator, the head of the church, our Lord Jeſus; whoſe tabernacle will now be with men, in this perfect ſtate, raiſed from the dead, and he will dwell among them: and as this moſt holy place in its dimenſions is a four-ſquare, ſo is the holy city deſcribed; denoting its ſtability and perfection; ſee Rev. xxi. 2, 3, 16, 27.

℣. 5. After he meaſured the wall of the houſe ſix cubits, &c.] Or a reed, three yards and a half thick: this was the wall of the holy of holies, or which divided that from the holy place, and was not in the ſecond temple; or rather the wall of the temple, the whole houſe or building, both of the holy place, and of the moſt holy, which were contiguous: ſuch a ſtrong wall is the Lord to his church, and eſpecially will be in the latter day, when ſalvation will be for walls and bulwarks againſt all enemies, and to preſerve from all hurt and danger, Iſ. xxvi. 1. and lx. 18. Zech. ii. 5. the new Jeruſalem alſo will have a wall great and high, and made of a precious ſtone, Rev. xxi. 12, 18: and the breadth of every ſide-chamber four cubits round about the houſe on every ſide; or, of every rib[y]; as ribs are to the body, ſo were theſe ſide-chambers or buildings to the fabrick, as Ben Melech obſerves, who interprets them of beams: adjoining to the above wall were chambers all around the holy place and the moſt holy on each ſide, north and ſouth; for there could be none on the eaſt, that being the entrance into the holy, and ſo into the moſt holy place; and the floor of theſe chambers were four cubits, or two yards and a foot broad; that is, thoſe of the lower ſtory: theſe were for the prieſts, where they lodged, and laid up, and ate their moſt holy things, and put their garments in which they miniſtred; ſee ch. xlii. 13, 14. and deſign, as the chambers every where do, particular congregated churches; where ſuch as are made prieſts to God by Chriſt have a place, and communion with God in holy things; and appear in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and in the beauties of holineſs.

℣. 6. And the ſide-chambers were three, one over another, and thirty in order, &c.] There were three ſtories of them, and thirty in every ſtory, in all ninety; there were ſuch chambers round about about Solomon's temple, and ſo many ſtories of them, tho' their number is not expreſſed, 1 Kings vi. 5, 6. but Joſephus [z] ſays, they were thirty, and one above another, three ſtories of them, as here. Some think twelve were on the north-ſide, twelve on the ſouth, and ſix on the weſt; or fifteen on the north, and fifteen on the ſouth. The Miſnic doctors [a] ſay, there were thirty-eight in the ſecond temple, fifteen on the north-ſide, fifteen on the ſouth, and eight on the weſt. The Targum is, "the chambers were chamber over chamber thirty-"three, eleven in a row;" and ſo ſome [b] underſtand it, that they were in all but thirty-three, eleven in the firſt ſtory, as many in the ſecond, and the ſame number in the third; and place them four in the north, four in the ſouth, and three in the weſt, ſo Starckius; but the firſt account ſeems beſt. This denotes the number of churches in goſpel-times, eſpecially in the latter day; when there will be large converſions, and room enough for all the converts: and as there are many manſions in heaven for all the ſaints; ſo there will be room enough in the new Jeruſalem, the more perfect ſtate of the church on earth, to hold the whole palm-bearing company, whoſe number no man can number; and all the nations of them that are ſaved, who will walk in the light of it, Rev. vii. 9. and xxi. 24: and they entered into the wall which was of the houſe for the ſide-chambers, round about, that they might have hold, but they had not hold in the wall of the houſe; the beams of the floors of thoſe ſide-chambers reſted indeed upon the wall of the houſe which was built for them; but were not inſerted into it, or laid in it, as we ſee in ſome buildings; but there were projections or buttreſſes in the wall, or what are called narrowed reſts, 1 Kings vi. 6. or rebatements of the breadth of a cubit, on which they were laid and reſted; and ſo it was in the upper ſtories, as in the lowermoſt; there being an abatement of a cubit in the thickneſs of the wall in each ſtory, as in the following verſe. This ſhows the firmneſs of this ſpiritual building reſting upon ſuch a wall and ſuch buttreſſes as God himſelf is to it; ſee the note on ℣. 5.

---

[y] הצלע coſtæ, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

[z] Antiq. l. 8. c. 3. §. 2.

℣. 7. And there was an enlarging, and a winding about ſtill upward to the ſide-chambers, &c.] Theſe chambers, as they roſe up in ſtories one above another, were larger and larger; thoſe in the middlemoſt ſtory were larger than thoſe in the lower ſtory by a cubit; ſo much being taken out of the thickneſs of the wall, to make the reſts or rebatements for the beams of the floor to reſt upon, by which ſo much was gained in breadth for the chambers; and thoſe in the upper ſtory, for the ſame reaſon, were a cubit broader than thoſe in the middle, and two cubits broader than the lowermoſt; the floor of the firſt and lower ſtory was four cubits broad, ℣. 5. the floor of the ſecond five cubits; and the floor of the third or uppermoſt ſix cubits. The wall of the temple at the bottom was ſix cubits thick, ℣. 5. at the middlemoſt ſtory five cubits; and at the uppermoſt four: and all this may denote the enlargement of the church of Chriſt, as it comes nearer the heavenly ſtate; the preſent ſtate of the church may be ſignified by the lower ſtory, where the chambers are narroweſt; the ſtate of the church in the latter day-glory, or ſpiritual reign of Chriſt, by the middlemoſt, when it will be enlarged; its converts being very numerous, Iſ. xlix. 19, 20. and lx. 4, 5. and the new Jeruſalem church-ſtate by the uppermoſt ſtory; which city or ſtate will be very large, and next to heaven, or the ultimate glory; ſee Rev. xxi. 16. The winding that went upwards to the ſide-chambers, were winding-ſtairs, which went up from one ſtory to another, higher and higher; ſee 1 Kings vi. 8. The Miſnic doctors ſay [c], that in the ſecond temple theſe winding-ſtairs went from one ſide of the temple to the other, from the north-eaſt to the north-weſt; by which they went up to the roofs of theſe chambers, and to the upper-room over the ſanctuary. Theſe may ſignify the various afflictions and tribulations, trials and exerciſes, in which the Lord leads his people, and by which the churches of Chriſt paſs from one ſtate to another: for the winding about of the houſe went ſtill upward round about the houſe; not on the outſide, but within; properly round about the chambers, which are here called the houſe: therefore the breadth of the houſe was ſtill upward; became broader and broader, as it roſe up higher and higher: and ſo increaſed from the loweſt chamber to the higheſt by the midſt; from being only four cubits broad in the loweſt ſtory, it became five cubits in the middlemoſt, and from thence ſix cubits in the higheſt.

℣. 8. I ſaw alſo the height of the houſe round about, &c.] Not of the temple itſelf, but of the chambers, and the three ſtories of them, which went round about it; and particularly the height of the higheſt ſtory, which yet is not given: it could not be ſo high as the temple itſelf; for then there would have been no room for windows to let in light into it: the foundations of the ſide-chambers were a full reed of ſix great cubits; not of the loweſt ſtory of them, for that was but four cubits broad, ℣. 5. nor of the middlemoſt, which was five; but of the uppermoſt, which was ſix; and theſe were cubits of the largeſt ſize, an hand's breadth larger than the common cubit, and made one full reed, or three yards and a half; ſee ch. xl. 5. theſe foundations ſignify the ſame as the twelve foundations of the wall of the new Jeruſalem; and which are no other than the one foundation Chriſt, miniſterially laid by his twelve apoſtles; and who is the only foundation of his church and people, and is a ſure one, Rev. xxi. 14, 19. Eph. ii. 20. 1 Cor. iii. 11. Iſ. xxviii. 16.

℣. 9. The thickneſs of the wall which was for the ſide-chambers without, was five cubits, &c.] This is the outward wall of the chambers, north and ſouth, which was five cubits thick, made of ſtone; ſee the note on ℣. 5: and that which was left, was the place of the ſide-chambers that were within; this was a void ſpace, not built upon, which was before the chambers that ſtood within it; and was a ſpace to walk in for thoſe that dwelt in the chambers, or to go in from chamber to chamber; which alſo was five cubits in breadth, as appears from the next verſe. This may denote the communion of churches, and the members of them one with another.

℣. 10. And betweeen the chambers was the wideneſs of twenty cubits, &c.] Not the ſide-chambers before-mentioned, as if there was the ſpace of twenty cubits between each chamber; for another word is uſed; more probably the meaning is, that between the ſide-chambers, or the void ſpace before them of five cubits, and the chambers which were in the court facing them, was ſuch a wideneſs of twenty cubits: round about the houſe on every ſide; on all ſides of the temple, where the above chambers were, weſt, north and ſouth.

---

[a] Miſn. Middot, c. 4. §. 3.

[b] Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 69. fol. 10. 1.

[c] Miſn. Middot, c. 4. §. 5.

ỳ. 11. And the doors of the ſide-chambers were towards the place that was left, &c.] Theſe opened to the void ſpace before them; that is, thoſe of the lower ſtory; the others muſt open to the winding ſtair-caſe that led down to it: one door toward the north, and another door toward the ſouth; which is not to be underſtood, as if each chamber had two doors; but either of the two doors, which opened at the top of the ſtair-caſe to the north and ſouth; or of the doors of thoſe chambers, which were on the north, and opened towards it; and of thoſe that were on the ſouth, that opened to that: indeed the Miſnic doctors ſay [d], that each chamber had three doors; one to the chamber on the right; another to the chamber on the left; and a third to the upper chamber: and in the north-eaſt corner were five doors; one to the chamber on the right; and one to the upper chamber; a third to the winding-ſtairs; a fourth to the little gate; and the fifth to the temple: theſe ſignify the free entrance of men into the churches of Chriſt in the latter day, whoſe gates ſhall be opened to let in the righteous nation; and ſhall ſtand open continually, that the forces of the Gentiles, and their kings may be brought, Iſ. xxvi. 2. and lx. 11, 18. and in the new Jeruſalem there are gates, eaſt, weſt, north and ſouth, even twelve of them, and at them twelve angels; and which gates ſhall not be ſhut day nor night, Rev. xxi. 12, 13, 25: and the breadth of the place that was left, was five cubits round about; the void ſpace that was left before the ſide-chambers; ſee ỳ. 9.

ỳ. 12. Now the building that was before the ſeparate place, &c.] The ſeparate place is the holy of holies, which was ſeparated by a veil under the ſecond temple, and by a wall as in this, and the firſt from the holy place; before or over-againſt which was a building, as it is rendered, ỳ. 15. a new building, not before taken notice of: and it was ſituated at the end toward the weſt; or ſea [e], the Mediterranean-ſea, which lay weſt to the land of Canaan. The meaning is, that this building was to the weſt of the temple, at which end ſtood the holy of holies, and this near to that: what building is here meant is not eaſy to ſay, there being nothing in the firſt or ſecond temple which anſwered to it: it ſeems to be a new building; and what the myſtical ſenſe of it is, cannot be eaſily gueſſed at. Cocceius thinks, that as the holy of holies ſignifies the heavenly or more perfect ſtate of the church on earth, this being over-againſt it, or behind it, as in ỳ. 15. may deſign heaven itſelf, the happineſs and glory of the ſaints treaſured up and reſerved there: it was ſeventy cubits broad; Jerom ſeems to have the ſame myſtical ſenſe in view; ſince he obſerves, that after labours and perils, and the floods and ſhipwrecks of this world for ſeventy years, we come to enjoy the eternal reſt: and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about; which may anſwer to the vaſt gulph fixed between the godly in heaven, and the wicked in hell; ſo that there is no going the one to the other, Luke xvi. 26: and the length thereof ninety cubits; there are no out-goings to this building, as Haſenrefferus [f] a German divine obſerves; ſo that thoſe that are brought into it ſhall ever remain in it; which is the caſe of the ſaints in heaven.

ỳ. 13. So he meaſured the houſe, an hundred cubits long, &c.] The whole temple, the parts of which he had meaſured; and this is the ſum total: and the ſeparate place, and the building with the walls thereof, an hundred cubits long; theſe are the ſeveral parts of the houſe or temple: the ſeparate place, the holy of holies, the building, the ſanctuary or holy place; which, with the walls thereof, made a hundred cubits in length from eaſt to weſt, thus; the thickneſs of the wall of the eaſt porch, ſix cubits; the paſſage thro' the porch, eleven cubits; the wall between the porch and the temple, ſix cubits; the temple or holy place, forty cubits; the wall between that and the moſt holy place, two cubits; the holieſt of all, twenty cubits; the thickneſs of the weſt wall, ſix cubits; the chambers at the end of it, four cubits; and the outer wall of them, five cubits; in all a hundred cubits: for this cannot be underſtood of the ſeparate place, and the building before it, or rather behind it; ſince the ſeparate place, or holieſt of all was twenty cubits, and the building ninety cubits; beſides the thickneſs of each wall, five cubits a piece; in all a hundred and twenty.

ỳ. 14. Alſo the breadth of the face of the houſe, and the ſeparate place toward the eaſt, &c.] The whole front of the temple, the holy and moſt holy place, which looked to the eaſt: and was meaſured from north to ſouth, an hundred cubits; which ſome reckon thus; the breadth of the temple, twenty cubits; the thickneſs of the outward walls, twelve cubits; the ſide-chambers, eight cubits; the walls of theſe chambers, five cubits on each ſide; the breadth of the void ſpace, five cubits on each ſide; and twenty cubits round about the houſe; ſo that the length and breadth of this ſtructure was the ſame, and made a perfect four-ſquare, as the city of the new Jeruſalem is ſaid to be, Rev. xxi. 16.

ỳ. 15. And he meaſured the length of the building over-againſt the ſeparate place, &c.] Which was ninety cubits, as appears from ỳ. 12. when meaſured by itſelf: which was behind it; that is, behind the ſeparate place, or holieſt of all, at the back of it, at the weſt end. Noldius [g] renders the words, he meaſured the length of the building before the ſeparate place, and behind it; or its back part, as the Syriac, and interprets it thus; that he meaſured the building or the porch which was before the temple, that is to the north; and the porch oppoſite to it, that is to the ſouth: this building behind it, with the Jews [h], is the ſame with Beth-Chaliphoth [i], or the houſe of knives, which the prieſts uſed in ſacrificing: and the galleries thereof on the one ſide, and on the other ſide, an hundred cubits; as the above is the length of this building from eaſt to weſt, this is the breadth of it from north to ſouth; the breadth of the building itſelf was ſeventy cubits, ỳ. 12. and the galleries on the north and ſouth ſides of it, and the thickneſs of the walls, which were five cubits each, made thirty more; in all an hundred cubits; which is equal to the breadth of the temple, as in the preceding verſe: theſe galleries, or balconies, or porticoes, ſupported by pilaſters, deſign places for the ſaints to walk in, converſe and commune with one another; and where Chriſt the king of ſaints is held forth, and ſeen in his beauty and glory; ſee Zach. iii. 7. Cant. vii. 5. John xvii. 24: with the inner temple, and the porches of the court; or, and the inner temple[k], &c. that is, and he alſo meaſured the inner temple or holy of holies, with all the porches, chambers and their walls, and with all the ſpaces and appendages to it, which were of the ſame meaſure; ſee the preceding verſe.

---

[d] Miſn. Middot, c. 4. §. 3.

[e] הים ad mare, Piſcator; obverſa mari, Cocceius, Starckius.

[f] Apud Starckium in loc.

[g] Concord. Ebr. Part. p. 104. N°. 521.

[h] Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 50.

[i] Miſn. Middot, c. 4. §. 7.

℣. 16. The door-poſts, and the narrow windows, &c.] Of the inner temple or holy of holies; for this is what is laſt mentioned; of the door-poſts of it, ſee ℣. 3. in the holy of holies, both in Moſes's tabernacle, and Solomon's temple, were no windows; Jehovah dwelt in thick darkneſs, 1 Kings viii. 12. but in this inner temple, or the more perfect ſtate of the church on earth, there will be much light: theſe windows are ſaid to be narrow, that is, without, but broad within; and let in a great deal of light, which, tho' not diſcerned by thoſe without, yet comfortably enjoyed by thoſe within; and will be ſo great, that there will be no need of the ſun or moon; Chriſt the Lamb will be the light of this ſtate; and the nations of the ſaved and their kings will walk in the light of it, Rev. xxi. 23, 24, 25: and the galleries round about on their three ſtories; theſe ſeem to be the ſame with the ſide-chambers, which were three ſtory high, and were on the three ſides of the houſe, weſt, north and ſouth; ſee ℣. 6: over-againſt the door cieled with wood round about; with cedar wood, as the Targum: or, anſwerable were the doors cieled with wood[l]; door, for doors; that is, the doors of theſe ſide-chambers, which anſwered to one another, were lined with cedar wood; all which doors, doors-poſts, windows and galleries were ſeverally meaſured: and from the ground up to the windows; from the bottom of the floor of the moſt holy place up to the windows, which were above the third ſtory of the ſide-chambers, he meaſured alſo: and the windows were covered; either by the jetting out of the ſide-chambers, ſo that they could not well be ſeen in the courts below; or they were lattice-windows with ſuch ſmall holes, as at a diſtance were ſcarce diſcernible; or were covered with curtains within; or being very narrow on the outſide, tho' broad within, looked as if they were covered; denoting how impenetrable the glories of this ſtate are to thoſe that are without, Rev. xxii. 15.

℣. 17. To that above the door, even unto the inner houſe, &c.] The meaning is, either there were ſuch windows as before-deſcribed, above the door of the eaſtern-gate, that led into the holieſt of all, and even unto the inner houſe or holy of holies: and without; and to all the ſide-chambers that were built without it: and by all the wall round about within and without; both within the holy place, and without, in the places adjoining to it, on all ſides, weſt, north and ſouth; or all were cieled with cedar wood, that it might be more capable of being ornamented, either with gold, or with the decorations mentioned in the following verſes: or the ſenſe is, that all theſe were meaſured exactly: for it follows, by meaſure; or to all theſe were meaſures[m]; the dimenſions were taken; every thing in the goſpel-church-ſtate, whether in its leſs or more perfect ſtate, will be all according to rule and meaſure.

℣. 18. And it was made with cherubim, and palm-trees, &c.] That is, all the wall of the houſe round about was ornamented with theſe, even both of the holy and of the moſt holy place; with theſe the curtains of Moſes's tabernacle, and the veil that divided between the holy and the moſt holy place, were decorated; as alſo the walls, both of the ſanctuary and oracle, in Solomon's temple, Exod. xxvi. 1, 31. 1 Kings viii. 23—32. The former, according to the commonly received notion, were an emblem of angels; the latter, of true believers, or holy upright men: why theſe are called palm-trees, ſee the note on ch. xl. 16: ſo that a palm-tree was between a cherub and a cherub; theſe were ſo placed all around, that there was firſt a cherub, next a palm-tree, and then a cherub again, and ſo on; and if angels and ſaints are meant, and that notion could be ſupported, which ſome have given into, that the number of men redeemed by Chriſt, is the ſame with that of the angels that fell, and their places are filled up by them; this would ſerve to illuſtrate it, particularly as theſe were all around the walls of the moſt holy place; a type of heaven, as here of the new Jeruſalem-ſtate; that as there was a cherub and a palm-tree, a cherub and a palm-tree throughout all the houſe, ſo an angel and a ſaint, an angel and a ſaint throughout all the manſions in the holy city, and in the heavenly glory: and every cherub had two faces; which, by what follows, were the faces of a man, and of a lion. The cherubim Ezekiel ſaw in his firſt viſion had four faces, Ezek. i. 10. and ſo theſe muſt be ſuppoſed to have, tho' only two were ſeen; becauſe theſe were carved or painted on the walls, ſo that the hindmoſt faces, thoſe of the ox and eagle, could not be perceived.

℣. 19. So that the face of a man was toward the palm-tree on the one ſide, &c.] The cherubim in this verſe are the ſame with the living creatures this prophet ſaw by the river Chebar, and which he knew to be the cherubim, Ezek. x. 20. and the ſame with John's four beaſts or living creatures in Rev. iv. 7, 8. and he being the laſt that wrote concerning them, gives the cleareſt account of them; and by which the beſt judgment may be formed about them; and from which it appears, that they are men redeemed by the blood of Chriſt; and as they are on the one hand diſtinguiſhed from angels, ſo on the other from the four and twenty elders, or common chriſtians, Rev. iv. 8, 9. and v. 8—12. and plainly deſign the miniſters of the word, and who are every where to be underſtood by them: their having the face of a man, ſhews they are men, and have to do with men, and ſhould be humane, kind and tender, knowing and underſtanding as men; ſee the note on ch. i. 10. and their face being towards the palm-tree, ſhews that they ſhould be upright and ſincere in their doctrine, miniſtry and converſation; that they ſhould bear all weights and preſſures laid upon them patiently; and riſe up heaven-wards in their affections and deſires, and in their expectation of help and aſſiſtance in their work, and triumph in Chriſt, thro' whom they are conquerors; the palm-tree being an emblem of theſe things: and the face of a young lion toward the palm-tree on the other ſide; this face of the cherubim denotes the ſtrength of goſpel-miniſters they have from Chriſt to do their work, defend the goſpel, withſtand gain-ſayers, and ſupport the weak; and bear with their infirmities;

---

[k] וההיכל הפנימי & templum interius, Vulg. Lat. Pagninus, Montanus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[l] נגד הסף שחיף עץ סביב contra uniuſcujuſque limen, ſtratumque ligno per gyrum in circuitu, V. L. Capellus.

[m] מדות menſuras accepit, Munſter; in omnibus menſuræ monſtratæ ſunt, Tigurine verſion.

as alſo their boldneſs, courage and intrepidity in preaching the goſpel of Chriſt, without fear of men; of this their face, and the other two not mentioned here, ſee the note on ch. i. 10: it was made thro' all the houſe round about; that is, the cherubim and palm-trees were carved or pourtrayed in the form and order here deſcribed throughout the holy of holies, as Jarchi interprets the houſe; and ſignifies that goſpel-miniſters ſhall have a place, and peculiar honour done them in the new Jeruſalem-ſtate, who will be particularly rewarded then, Rev. xi. 18.

℣. 20. From the ground unto above the door, &c.] From the floor of the holy of holies, to above the door of it to the eaſt, where was the entrance into it; or from thence to the cieling, as the Septuagint verſion: were cherubim, and palm-trees made; either in rows one above another, quite up to the place mentioned; or they were made ſo large, that each cherub and palm-tree reached from the ground to above the door, or to the cieling: and on the wall of the temple; that is, they were not only thus placed in the holieſt of all; but in the temple, or holy place on the wall of it all around; and ſhews, that in the ſtate of the church in the latter day, which this part of the building repreſents more eſpecially, will be great numbers of goſpel-miniſters, who will faithfully and uprightly preach it to men; ſee Dan. xii. 4. Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8.

℣. 21. The poſts of the temple were ſquared, &c.] Or, were four-ſquare [n]; the two poſts on each ſide the door, the lintel and the threſhold, made a ſquare; the poſts themſelves were not round as pillars, but flat and ſquare; and the upper part was not arched, as in ſome buildings, but ſquare. Jarchi ſays he had heard that the poſts of Solomon's temple were four-ſquare; but that is not certain; however theſe were. The Vulgate Latin verſion renders it, four-cornered; as doors formerly were: this was the ancient way of building, as Philander [o] obſerves; almoſt every thing in this wonderful building was four-ſquare; denoting the firmneſs, ſtability and perfection of all things in it: and the face of the ſanctuary, the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other; that is, the front of the holy of holies was like that of the temple; they both had the ſame appearance, tho' one was larger than another. The poſts of the one were ſquared, even as the poſts of the other; ſhewing, that the ſame is the way of entrance into the goſpel-church, and into the new Jeruſalem-church-ſtate, and even into the heavenly glory, which is Chriſt; and whether in the leſs or more perfect ſtate of the church on earth, there are the ſame precious faith, and love, and communion, tho' different degrees. The Targum is, "and the face "of the houſe of the propitiatory, and its ap"pearance as the appearance of its glory;" which Jarchi interprets, as the appearance of the throne of glory, ſeen by the prophet at the river Chebar, ch. i. 26—28.

℣. 22. The altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits, &c.] This was the altar of incenſe, and was typical of Chriſt in his interceſſion and mediation. It was made of wood; that in the tabernacle of Moſes was of ſhittim-wood, a kind of cedar; and that in Solomon's temple was of cedar, Exod. xxx. 1. 1 Kings vi. 20. and may ſignify the human nature of Chriſt, in which he mediates and intercedes; which is excellent as the cedars; fair and beautiful; ſtrong, durable and incorruptible; tho' its original is of the earth, as wood: or was made of a woman; of the earth, earthly; but produced without ſin. This altar, both in the tabernacle and temple, was covered with gold; as it was fit it ſhould be with ſome hard ſubſtance that would bear incenſe to be burned on it; and therefore was called the golden altar, Exod. xxx. 3. Numb. iv. 11. 1 Kings vi. 20, 22. and ſo the altar at which our Lord officiates as Mediator and Interceſſor is called a golden one, Rev. viii. 3. which may denote the deity of Chriſt, that gives virtue to his mediation; or the glorification of his human nature in heaven, in which he miniſters; and alſo the preciouſneſs of his interceſſion, and the duration of it. The incenſe burnt on this altar may ſignify both the mediation of Chriſt, which is pure and holy, tho' for ſinners; large and frequent, continually made, and very fragrant and acceptable; and the prayers of the ſaints which are offered up on this altar, which ſanctifies them; and thro' the much incenſe, which perfumes them, whereby they aſcend up to God, and are ſweet odours to him, being fragrant and fervent, pure and holy. This altar in the tabernacle of Moſes, and probably in the temple of Solomon, tho' its dimenſions there are not given, was four-ſquare, Exod. xxx. 2. very likely ſo was this; and indeed the Septuagint verſion adds, and the breadth two cubits; which being the ſame with its length, made it four-ſquare; and ſo may point at the firmneſs, unchangeableneſs and perfection of this part of Chriſt's prieſthood, his interceſſion, which is true of the whole of it, Heb. vii. 19, 24, 25. and it may be obſerved, that the altar here was a cubit longer, and a cubit broader, as well as a cubit higher than the Moſaic one, Exod. xxx. 2. Kimchi ſays, this altar was not like to that which Moſes or Solomon, or the children of the captivity made; it was larger than any of them; which ſhews that the interceſſion of Chriſt our high-prieſt is larger and more extenſive than that of the prieſts under the law; they offered incenſe only for the people of Iſrael; but Chriſt, as he is the propitiation, ſo the advocate for Gentiles, as well as Jews; tho' not for the whole world of men, yet for the world of the elect; and for all bleſſings of grace and glory for them, 1 John ii. 1, 2. John xvii. 9, 20. and moreover, that under the goſpel-diſpenſation there would be more praying ſouls, and more uſe made of the Mediator, of his name, blood, righteouſneſs, ſacrifice and interceſſion; and a greater ſpirit of grace and ſupplication poured out, eſpecially in the latter day; hence we read of Chriſt's much incenſe, John xvi. 23, 24. Zech. xii. 10. Rev. viii. 3: and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof were of wood; that is, the horns that were at the four corners of it; and the top of it, which was its length and breadth; and the ſides of it, called it walls, were all of wood, tho' covered with gold. The myſtical ſenſe of which has been given; only it may be obſerved, that the four corners or horns of it may denote the ſtrength of Chriſt's interceſſion; and to which men have recourſe, and lay hold on, for their relief, even from all parts of the world, eaſt, weſt, north and ſouth: and he ſaid unto me, this is the table that is before the Lord; that is, either the altar before deſcribed is the table before the Lord, which he has ſpread, and where his people feed in his preſence; the interceſſion of Chriſt being a feaſt to the faith of ſaints: or it may be, that the divine guide of the prophet turning himſelf to the right-hand of the altar, pointed to the table of ſhew-bread, which ſtood in the ſame place; and ſaid this or that which ſtands yonder is the table before the Lord; and which alſo was typical of Chriſt, the true bread that comes down from heaven, who is the food of his people; for quality, the fineſt of the wheat; for quantity, enough and to ſpare; for ſavour, ſuch as gracious ſouls deſire always to have; for duration, continual bread, ſet forth by prieſts, and only eat by them; and like that bread of faces, as the ſhew-bread is called [p]; denoting the interceſſion of Chriſt, the angel of God's preſence; and who always appears in the preſence of God for his people, bearing on him the names of the children of Iſrael, to which the twelve ſhew-bread loaves anſwered. The table on which they were ſet, ſignifies the communion ſaints have with Chriſt in his word and ordinances; which are called a feaſt, of which Chriſt is the ſum and ſubſtance; and where, as at a table, he ſits and favours them with fellowſhip with himſelf; ſee Prov. ix. 2. Cant. i. 12. and v. 1. Rev. iii. 20. The Jews [q] have an obſervation upon this text, that it begins with an altar, and ends with a table; and further obſerve, that while the temple ſtood, the altar atoned for a man, but now a man's table atones for him: but this is not a man's table, but the Lord's table; and Chriſt the ſacrifice held forth on this table does indeed atone for a man.

---

[n] רבעה quadratus, Montanus, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

[o] Not. in Vitruvium de Architect. l. 4. c. 6 p. 153.

℣. 23. And the temple and the ſanctuary had two doors.] Or the houſe of propitiatory, as the Targum; that is, the moſt holy place; not two doors a piece, but each had one door, which made two; the door of the temple was ten cubits broad, and the door of the moſt holy place ſix cubits, ℣. 2, 3. ſhewing the door is wider, and more enter into the outward viſible church, or leſs perfect ſtate, even ſome bad, as well as good, than the door of the Jeruſalem-church-ſtate, or heavenly glory, into which fewer enter.

℣. 24. And the doors had two leaves a piece, two turning leaves, &c.] Each of theſe doors had two leaves, which met in a middle poſt, and might be opened either ſingly or together, as occaſion required; ſee the note on ch. xl. 48: two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for the other door; two for the door of the temple, and two for the door of the moſt holy place; or each leaf of both doors had two foldings; as there were two leaves in a door, there were two foldings in every leaf; ſo that the door might be opened wider or narrower as was thought fit; denoting the greater number of perſons let in, and the greater light and knowledge had, at one time than at another; ſee 1 Kings vi. 31, 34.

℣. 25. And there were made on them, on the doors of the temple, &c.] Both of the holy, and the moſt holy place: cherubim and palm-trees, like as were made on the walls; the doors of both places had the ſame decorations as the walls of each; ſee the notes on ℣. 18, 19, 20. and ſo it was in Solomon's temple, 1 Kings vi. 32, 35. a cherub and a palm-tree on each leaf, or on each folding of a leaf, according as it would admit of: and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without; on the outward front of the porch, were ſome thick wainſcot boards, which projected as a cover to the entrance into it; or as it may be rendered, alſo on the thick piece of wood in the front of the porch without [r]; which, as Starckius thinks, was a large wooden bar, which ſhut and held in the folding leaves of the door; and on this, or theſe thick planks, were cherubim and palm-trees.

℣. 26. And there were narrow windows, &c.] See ℣. 16. and ch. xl. 16: and palm-trees on the one ſide, and on the other ſide, on the ſides of the porch; upon the poſts that were on each ſide the porch, north and ſouth; ſee ch. xl. 16, 26: and upon the ſide-chambers of the houſe, and thick planks; that is, there were palm-trees upon the ſide-chambers, which were in number thirty, ℣. 6. and upon the planks alſo; every part of this fabric within and without were ornamented.

C H A P. XLII.

IN this chapter are a deſcription of ſome chambers in the northern part of the outward court, ℣. 1—12. an account of the uſe made of them by the prieſts, ℣. 13, 14. the meaſuring of the area or whole compaſs of ground, on which the whole building before meaſured ſtood, with the wall that ſurrounded it, ℣. 15—20.

℣. 1. Then he brought me forth into the utter court, the way toward the north, &c.] After the dimenſions of the gates and courts of this building had been ſhewn, and that of itſelf, the holy and moſt holy place, with the ornaments thereof; the prophet is brought by his guide into the outward court, which encompaſſed the building to the north part of it; probably he came out of the north-gate of the houſe into it. So the Targum renders it, "by the way of the gate which is "open to the way of the north:" and he brought me into the chamber that was over-againſt the ſeparate place; or holy of holies; ſee ch. xli. 12. over-againſt or before this, to the north of it, were a chamber or chambers; the ſingular being put for the plural; whither the prophet was brought to take a view of, being a new and diſtinct building from all others he had ſeen before; unto one of them, or to the place of them, as Jarchi, where they ſtood: there were two rows of them oppoſite to each other, and a walk between them; they are afterwards called the north and ſouth chambers, ℣. 13: and which was before the building toward the north; this chamber or chambers were over-againſt or before the whole fabric, to the north of it. The Jews here confeſs their ignorance, there being nothing in the firſt or ſecond temple anſwerable to theſe. Lipman [s] expreſsly ſays, theſe chambers were not in the ſecond temple; perhaps they may deſign the proteſtant reformed churches in the northern parts of the world; the religion of proteſtants is by the papiſts called the northern hereſy: and if our northern churches are here pointed at and deſcribed, it is a great honour that is done them, to have a particular apartment allotted them in this wonderful building; compare Pſ. xlviii. 2.

---

[p] לחם פנים panis facierum, Exod. xxv. 30.

[q] T. Bab. Beracot, fol. 55. 1. Chagiga, fol. 26. 1. Menachot, fol. 97. 1.

[r] ועב עץ אל פני האולם מחוץ etiam denſo ligno in fronte veſtibuli extrinſecus, Junius & Tremellius; & trabs lignea ante veſtibulum erat foris, Starckius.

[s] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 71.

ẏ. 2. Before the length of an hundred cubits was the north door, &c.] That is, the north door of the houſe opened to a ſpace that lay between that and the chambers, which was an hundred cubits long: and the breadth was fifty cubits; or the ſenſe is, that the prophet was brought, as Noldius renders the words [t], to a place whoſe length was an hundred cubits towards the north door; ſo that they deſcribe the length and breadth of theſe chambers, the whole of them; and to this agrees the Arabic verſion: this account of them makes them larger than Solomon's temple, 1 Kings vi. 2. which may ſignify the largeneſs of theſe churches; the number of men in them; and the abundance of ſpiritual bleſſings and privileges, of light and knowledge, peace and joy, poſſeſſed by them: but the meaſure being oblong, and not four-ſquare, as the city of the new Jeruſalem, Rev. xxi. 16. ſhews they are not yet come to ſtability and perfection.

ẏ. 3. Over-againſt the twenty cubits which were for the inner court, &c.] Starckius thinks that the breadth of the chambers being fifty cubits, is here parted, and diſpoſed of, and accounted for. The chambers were in two rows over-againſt each other; that row which looked to the ſouth, and ſo to the temple, was twenty cubits broad; and becauſe it led to the temple, its court is called the inner court: and over-againſt the pavement which was for the utter court; or that row which was over-againſt the pavement of the outward court to the north, was alſo twenty cubits broad, which make forty; and the walk of ten cubits between them, ẏ. 4. account for the breadth of the fifty cubits: was gallery againſt gallery in three ſtories; or, there was poſt before poſt in three ſtories [u]; each chamber had a poſt or pillar, ſo Jarchi; which diſtinguiſhed or divided one from another, and ran up with the chambers three ſtory high; and as the chambers, ſo theſe poſts in both rows anſwered to one another. Theſe may denote the miniſters of the goſpel, who are as pillars in the houſe of God, and churches of Chriſt; and every diſtinct church has its pillar or paſtor, Prov. ix. 1.

ẏ. 4. And before the chambers was a walk of ten cubits breadth inward, &c.] That is, withinſide, or between the two rows of chambers, there was a walk of this breadth, for thoſe that lodged in the chambers to walk in for their pleaſure and profit, and to converſe with one another. Such who by theſe chambers underſtand places of retirement for private devotion, or the duties of the cloſet, which fit and prepare for public worſhip; as theſe chambers were near and in ſight of the temple, ſo by this walk think chriſtian conference and converſation is intended; and ſhews, that the whole of religious time is not to be ſpent between the church and the chamber; but ſome part of it ſhould be allotted for ſpiritual diſcourſe, about gracious experiences, the truths of the goſpel, and the duties of religion: but as chambers deſign churches, this walk denotes the outward walk and converſation of the ſaints, which ſhould be according to the rule of God's word, as becomes the goſpel, and worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called. Starckius applies this to the decalogue or ten commandments, which is a broad way, Pſ. cxix. 32, 96. and the moral law, as in the hands of Chriſt, is a rule of walk and converſation to believers under the goſpel: and beſides, there was a way of one cubit; which led into the chambers, and out of them into the broad walk: this is a narrow way, as Chriſt is ſaid to be, Matt. vii. 14. and whoever profeſs faith in him, and in this way enter into a goſpel-church-ſtate, and into the kingdom of heaven, muſt be attended with much affliction and perſecution, and paſs thro' many tribulations; and there being both a broad walk, and a narrow way, and theſe lying near one another, and a paſſage from the one to the other, may denote that the churches and people of God are ſometimes in proſperity, and ſometimes in adverſity; one while they walk at liberty, as in a large place; and at other times in great ſtraits and difficulties: and their doors toward the north; that is, the doors of that row of chambers neareſt the temple; theſe opened to the north into the walk of ten cubits; tho' one would think, that the row oppoſite to them, their doors muſt be to the ſouth, into the broad walk between them; unleſs this is to be underſtood of the doors that opened into the way of one cubit, and were to the north in both rows; but then the way of one cubit could not in both lead into the broad walk.

ẏ. 5. Now the upper chambers were ſhorter, &c.] The chambers were in three ſtories, as in the following verſe, one above another; the middlemoſt were ſhorter than the lowermoſt, and the upper ſhorter than either; juſt the reverſe of the chambers in ch. xli. 7. they were not ſo high from the floor to the cieling, nor ſo broad from ſide to ſide. The reaſon follows: for the galleries were higher than theſe; or, ate out of theſe [w], than the lower, and than the middlemoſt of the building; the meaning is, that the galleries or balconies in the middlemoſt and upper chambers were taken out of them, and ſo made them leſſer than the lower ones, and the upper ones leſſer than either; or the poſts or pillars, as the word may be rendered; ſee ẏ. 3. which ſupported the chambers, took more out of the uppermoſt than the others, and ſo made them ſhorter. This may ſignify the diverſity of gifts and grace, of light and knowledge, and of liberty and comfort in the churches; and that, as thoſe that are uppermoſt have moſt light, they are uſually the leaſt, and feweſt members in them; who are the few names in Sardis, Rev. iii. 4. and are generally more ſtraitned, afflicted, reproached and perſecuted.

ẏ. 6. For they were in three ſtories, &c.] Not only the galleries or poſts, but the chambers; they were one over another; there were the lowermoſt, middlemoſt and uppermoſt; which, as before, may denote the difference in churches, and the different ſtates, conditions and characters of thoſe that are in them; ſome being fathers, others young men, and others little children: or their different offices and relations; ſome being paſtors, others deacons, and others private members: or their knowledge of, and profeſſion of faith in the doctrine of the Trinity, the myſtery of God, and of the Father, and of Chriſt; and their being baptized in the name of the three divine perſons; and their being built on Chriſt the foundation, an habitation for God thro' the Spirit: but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts; thoſe which ſupported the porticoes and galleries in the courts of the temple, not pillars ſo thick and ſtrong as they: ſo the churches repreſented by theſe chambers, tho' they have goſpel-miniſters, which are as pillars, and valuable members, which are as ſuch, that ſhall not go out; yet they have not thoſe external ſupports from great and rich men, but conſiſt generally of the poor of this world, as churches on a civil eſtabliſhment have, who are ſupported by the ſtate: therefore the building was ſtraitened more than the loweſt, and the middlemoſt from the ground; the upper part of it, or the uppermoſt chambers were more ſtraitned, and had leſs room in them than the middlemoſt, and the middlemoſt than the loweſt; ſuggeſting, that the more heavenly and ſpiritual men are, the further they depart from the men of the world and their converſation, from the ſentiments and practices of natural men; the more they are expoſed to their ſcorn and contempt, and are the more afflicted and ſtraitened by them.

---

[t] Concord. Ebr. Partic. p. 82.

[u] אתיק אל פני אתיק בשלשים poſtis ante poſtem in triplici, Starckius.

[w] יוכלו מהנה Keri, יאכלו comedebant ex ipſis, Mariana; demordebant ab illis, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 7. And the wall that was without over-againſt the chambers, &c.] This wall ſeparated and diſtinguiſhed the chambers from the outward court, as well as was a protection of them; and ſignifies the grace and power of God, which ſeparates his true churches from the world, and is the ſecurity of them; ſee the note on ch. xl. 5. this was towards the utter court, on the fore-part of the chambers; or front of them, which ſeems to be to the north of them; ſince their doors were towards the north, ℣. 4. tho' Cocceius makes it to be to the weſt, which better agrees with what follows: the length thereof was fifty cubits; which anſwers to the breadth of the chambers, ℣. 2. and what is called length here, with reſpect to the wall, is called the breadth with reſpect to the chambers. The wall of divine protection is equal to the length and breadth, and even the whole compaſs of the churches of Chriſt.

℣. 8. For the length of the chambers that were in the utter court was fifty cubits, &c.] Which was the reaſon why the wall was of the ſame length, that it might be anſwerable to them; here length is put for breadth; ſee ℣. 2. this meaſure was from the north to ſouth, as Lipman[x] obſerves: and lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits; as the breadth of the wall and chambers was fifty, ſo in length, as they were over-againſt the temple, they were an hundred cubits, as in ℣. 2. unleſs the account is to be taken thus; that the row of chambers towards the north were fifty cubits long, and the row towards the ſouth over-againſt the other was fifty cubits, and ſo both made an hundred; to which ſenſe is the Septuagint verſion, "for the "length of the chambers that look to the out"ward court was fifty cubits, and thoſe (that is, "thoſe that looked to the temple, or were before "that) anſwered to them, the whole an hundred "cubits;" that is, both rows made an hundred cubits; but rather, as Lipman[y] ſays, the chambers contained from eaſt to weſt an hundred cubits.

℣. 9. And from under theſe chambers, &c.] Or, from the lower part of theſe chambers[z]; or, from the loweſt of them there was a ſpace, as may be ſupplied, and as is by Cocceius and Starckius; and as there was a wall to the weſt of them, ſo there was a void ſpace to the eaſt; and as follows: the entry on the eaſt-ſide; or, he that brought me from the eaſt[a], as the Keri; and coming eaſtward to theſe chambers, one muſt needs go thro' this ſpace: as one goeth into them from the utter court; if a man went eaſtward into thoſe chambers from the outward court, he muſt go thro' this ſpace, which lay to the eaſt of the loweſt chambers: or the ſenſe is, that from under the north chambers to the ſouth was an entry on the eaſt-ſide, which led from one to the other.

℣. 10. The chambers were in the thickneſs of the wall of the court toward the eaſt, &c.] As there were chambers in the northern part of the outward court, ſome which looked to the north, and others to the ſouth, ſo likewiſe ſome to the eaſt; and theſe were built on the breadth, as it may be rendered, of the court-wall to the eaſt; ſignifying, there will be churches raiſed in all the northern parts of the world: over-againſt the ſeparate place, and over-againſt the building; as the other chambers were; ſee the note on ℣. 1.

℣. 11. And the way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, &c.] The way before theſe eaſtern chambers was exactly like to that of the northern chambers; which was either the way of one cubit into them, or the walk of ten cubits before them, or both; ſignifying, that the way into goſpel-churches is the ſame every where, and the walk and converſation of the ſaints the ſame in all places: as long as they, and as broad as they; which ſeems to confirm that both the way and the walk are meant, which were the ſame in thoſe eaſtern chambers as in the northern; the way being as long, of one cubit, and the walk as broad, of ten cubits: and all their goings out were both according to their faſhions, and according to their doors; the form and faſhion of them were alike; they were built three ſtories high, were as long, and as broad, and the upper ſhorter than the middlemoſt and loweſt; the way of going into them, and coming out of them, were juſt the ſame; their doors were in the ſame poſition: in goſpel-churches there are the ſame ordinances of baptiſm and the Lord's-ſupper; the ſame laws and rules; the ſame privileges and immunities; the ſame graces in the members of them, like precious faith, hope and love; whatever difference there may be in temporal things, there is none in ſpiritual ones; be they rich or poor, their communion is equal, their benefits the ſame.

℣. 12. And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the ſouth, &c.] That is, the doors of theſe eaſtern chambers, were exactly like to the doors of the ſouthern chambers, as well as to the northern ones: was a door in the head of the way; or beginning of the way; the door opened into the way of one cubit, and that led into the walk of ten cubits; and ſuch a way and walk were before theſe eaſtern chambers, as were before the ſouthern and northern ones: even the way directly before the wall toward the eaſt, as one entreth into them; or, alſo a way before the wall direct, a way to the eaſt, as one goes into them[b]; which ſeems to deſcribe ſuch a way from under theſe eaſtern chambers,

---

[x] Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 71.

[y] Ibid.

[z] ומתחת הלשכות האלה & ab ima parte exedrarum, Vatablus; & infra calles has fuiſſe ſpatium, Cocceius, Starckius.

[a] מהקדים המביא is qui deducebat me ab oriente, Junius & Tremellius; quumque is qui introduxerat me ab oriente, Piſcator.

[b] הדרך בפני הגדרת הגינה דרך הקדים בבואן via, inquam, quæ erat ante maceriam rectam orientem verſus, qua venitur ad illas, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; via ante maceriam recta, via orientis in introitu illarum, Cocceius, Starckius.

bers, as were from under the northern or ſouthern chambers, ℣. 9.

℣. 13. Then ſaid he unto me, &c.] The divine perſon, that meaſured and deſcribed theſe chambers, and brought the prophet to take a view of them, ſaid to him, as follows: the north chambers, and the ſouth chambers, which are before the ſeparate place, they be holy chambers; theſe are the two rows of chambers before deſcribed, which were ſouthward and northward to each other, tho' both in the northern part of the outward court; theſe were for holy perſons to dwell in, and for holy things to be done in, as the churches of Chriſt are; they conſiſt of holy perſons, men called with an holy calling, and in them the holy word of God is preached, and holy ordinances adminiſtred: where the prieſts that approach unto the Lord ſhall eat the moſt holy things; which is to be underſtood not of the miniſters of the goſpel, for whom a proper maintenance is to be provided, and who ſhould live of the goſpel they preach; but of all the ſaints, who are made prieſts to God by Chriſt; and who approach unto the Lord by him, in his name and righteouſneſs, and by the faith of him, with true hearts, in a ſpiritual manner; and which is profitable to themſelves, and acceptable to God; for whom ſpiritual proviſions are made in his houſe: theſe have moſt holy things to eat of, the holy word of God, the law-part of which is holy, juſt and good; and the goſpel-part is our moſt holy faith, which is food for faith, ſavoury and ſalutary, milk for babes, and meat for ſtrong men; and which is found and eat, and digeſted by them: alſo our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is the moſt holy, and is the ſum and ſubſtance of the word and ordinances, and the food of believers, the bread of life, the hidden manna, the lamb of God, and fatted calf; whoſe fleſh and blood are meat and drink indeed, and are eaten and fed upon by faith. There ſhall they lay the moſt holy things; lay up the word of God in their minds and memories, and remember the love of God, his ſufferings and death, and the benefits ariſing from them, particularly in the ordinance of the ſupper: and the meat-offering; the Minchah or bread-offering, made of fine flour, typical of Chriſt, the bread of life: and the ſin-offering, and the treſpaſs-offering; both typical of Chriſt, made ſin for his people; and who by one ſacrifice of himſelf, has made atonement for it, and an end of it; ſee the note on ch. xl. 39. theſe were called the moſt holy things, and were laid up in the ſanctuary for the prieſts and their families to live upon, Lev. vi. 17: for the place is holy; the place of theſe chambers holy, as the temple itſelf, where theſe moſt holy things, and holy perſons were.

℣. 14. When the prieſts enter therein, &c.] Into the holy place, theſe holy chambers, and approach unto God, and eat of the moſt holy things, and miniſter therein to the Lord: then ſhall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court; denoting, not that the miniſters of the word ſhould not concern themſelves in ſecular employments, but give themſelves up to the word and prayer, tho' ſo to do is right; but the perſeverance of the ſaints in the houſe and worſhip of God, in grace and holineſs, and in all the duties of religion; theſe ſhould not relinquiſh their profeſſion, deſert their ſtation and the ſervice of God, and return to the world; but continue as pillars in the temple of God, and go no more out, but abide by the truths and ordinances of the goſpel: but there they ſhall lay their garments wherein they miniſter, for they are holy; theſe ſignify Chriſt's robe of righteouſneſs and garments of ſalvation, that fine linen clean and white, which is the righteouſneſs of the ſaints; and fitly repreſented by the linen garments of the prieſts, in which they miniſtred in their office, and were like them, holy, pure, and ſpotleſs; in theſe only ſaints appear before God, and preſent their ſupplications to him, not for their own, but for Chriſt's righteouſneſs ſake, making mention of that only; and herein they have acceptance with God now, and ſhall be introduced into his preſence hereafter, and behold his face, clothed with theſe garments, and ſerve him for ever: and ſhall put on other garments, and ſhall approach to thoſe things which are for the people; theſe are the converſation-garments of the ſaints, which are not fit to appear in before God, being attended with imperfection and ſin; but very proper to appear in before men, among whom their lights ſhould ſhine, and their good works be ſeen, for the adorning of the doctrine of Chriſt, the recommending of the chriſtian religion, and the ſtopping of the mouths of gain-ſayers: for this reſpects not the different habits of miniſters, when they are in their miniſtrations, and out of them; tho' the alluſion is to the prieſts under the law, who wore their prieſtly garments only in the temple, and whilſt miniſtring there, and never elſewhere, or when among the common people on civil accounts: ſo Joſephus ſays [c], the prieſts only wore their holy garments when they miniſtred, at other times they appeared in the habit of private perſons; with which agrees what Maimonides [d] ſays, their garments are not upon them, when they are not miniſtring in the prieſtly office, but then they are clothed as lay-men; or when, as the Targum here has it, “they were mingled with the people.” There were places in the temple, where they put on and off their cloaths, and where they were laid up. So Adrichomius [e] ſays, ſpeaking of the temple, “there were rooms, otherwiſe called treaſuries, and prieſts apartments, which were houſes on the ſide of it, like towers, long, broad, and high; in which the prieſts, when they went into the ſanctuary, put off their common woollen garments, and put on their holy linen ones; and when they had performed their holy ſervices, laid them up there again.” And another writer, quoted by Solomon Ben Virga [f], obſerves, that “here (that is, the temple) was an houſe for the prieſt, whoſe office it was to clothe the reſt of the prieſts at the time of ſervice; and he gave to every one of them four ſorts of garments, as were commanded, and fetched them out of the cheſts of the wardrobe; and on every cheſt, which were at the walls of this houſe, that is, above every one of them, was the name of the garment, that there might be no miſtake nor confuſion when they were wanted.” And this agrees with what is ſaid in the Miſnah [g], that there was one that was appointed over the prieſts garments, and who might be properly enough called the maſter of the wardrobe; on which one of the commentators ſays [h], his buſineſs was “to clothe the prieſts at the time of ſervice, and to unclothe them after ſervice was done, and to

---

[c] De bello Jud. l. 5. c. 5. § 7.

[d] Cele Hamikdaſh, c. 10. § 4.

[e] Theatrum Terræ Sanct. Jeruſalem, N°. 92. p. 161.

[f] Shebet Judah, fol. 43. 2. Ed. Gentii, p. 464.

[g] Shekalim, c. 5. § 1.

[h] Bartenora in ib.

“ keep the garments of the prieſthood in the “ chambers made for that purpoſe.” Very wrongly therefore is the learned Selden [i] charged by Mr. Sheringham [k] with a miſtake, in denying that the prieſts wore their holy garments at any other time, but when they were at divine ſervice.

℣. 15. Now when he had made an end of meaſuring the inner houſe, &c.] The holy place, and the holy of holies, with all the courts and chambers belonging to them; even the whole building within the compaſs of the outermoſt wall, and all that pertained unto it; the chambers laſt mentioned, as well as the reſt, the dimenſions of which are given in this and the two preceding chapters: he brought me forth toward the gate, whoſe proſpect is toward the eaſt; not to the eaſt gate of the outward wall, but to the eaſt gate which led into the outward court; the gate he was firſt brought unto, and which was firſt meaſured, ch. xl. 6: and meaſured it round about; not the eaſt gate, nor the outward wall that went all round the houſe; tho' this was meaſured, and its dimenſions given, laſt of all; nor the houſe itſelf, which had been meaſured already; or the figure of it, as the Septuagint and Arabic verſions; but all that ſpace that was between this building, and the wall that ſurrounded it; the area or compaſs of ground on which the building ſtood.

℣. 16. He meaſured the eaſt ſide, &c.] He began with that, being at the eaſt gate: the building was four-ſquare, and ſo was the wall about it, and had each four equilateral ſides, which were ſeparately meaſured; here the eaſt ſide, from the two angles of it, the north and ſouth points: with the meaſuring reed; which conſiſted of ſix cubits, and which cubits were larger than the common ſort by an hand's breadth; ſo that a meaſuring reed, meaſured three yards and an half: and the whole meaſure of the eaſt ſide, were five hundred reeds; which make one thouſand, ſeven hundred, and fifty yards: with the meaſuring reed round about; not round about the building, ſince only one ſide, as yet, was meaſured; but round about that ſide, or from angle to angle, or from one ſide to the other: having finiſhed one ſide, he went to another, until he had meaſured all round; but did not go four times round it, only once.

℣. 17. He meaſured the north ſide, five hundred reeds, &c.] From the two angles of that ſide, eaſt and weſt; and it was of the ſame dimenſion as the eaſt ſide, juſt five hundred reeds, or one thouſand, ſeven hundred, and fifty yards: with a meaſuring reed round about; he meaſured with the ſame reed, from point to point; and having meaſured this ſide, he went to another.

℣. 18. He meaſured the ſouth ſide, five hundred reeds, &c.] From the two angles of that ſide, eaſt and weſt; and it amounted to juſt the ſame number of reeds, even five hundred reeds, or one thouſand, ſeven hundred, and fifty yards: with the meaſuring reed; the ſame as before: here, and in the next verſe, the phraſe, round about, is not uſed, but is to be underſtood; and having been repeated, there was no need of mentioning it again.

℣. 19. He turned about to the weſt ſide, &c.] And took the dimenſions of that, from angle to angle, the ſouth and north points of it: and meaſured five hundred reeds, with the meaſuring reed; and it was exactly of the ſame meaſure with the other three ſides.

℣. 20. He meaſured it by the four ſides, &c.] Which were equilateral, parallel to each other, each meaſuring five hundred reeds; which in all made up two thouſand reeds, or ſeven thouſand yards: this ſhows, that no material building can be deſigned; never was an edifice of ſuch dimenſions; this ſeems rather to deſcribe a city, than a temple: and denotes the largeneſs of the goſpel-church-ſtate in the latter day, when the Jews will be converted, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles brought in: it had a wall round about; the ſame with that in ch. xl. 5: five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad; it was four-ſquare, as the building was, and exactly anſwered to that in its dimenſions. The Jews ſay [l], the mountain of the houſe was five hundred cubits by five hundred; that is, a perfect ſquare of five hundred cubits on every ſide, two thouſand cubits in the whole compaſs about. Joſephus [m] ſays, the whole circuit was four furlongs, every ſide containing the length of a furlong. Now, ſays Dr. Lightfoot [n], if any will take up the full circuit of the wall that encompaſſed the holy ground, according to our Engliſh meaſure, it will amount to half a mile, and about one hundred and ſixty-ſix yards; and whoſoever will likewiſe meaſure the ſquare of Ezekiel, ch. xlii. 20. will find it ſix times as large as this, ch. xl. 5. the whole amounting to three miles and an half, and about one hundred and forty yards, a compaſs incomparably larger than mount Moriah divers times over; and by this very thing is ſhewed, that that is ſpiritually and myſtically to be underſtood; wherefore theſe meaſures no doubt did, as Mr. Lee [o] obſerves, ſignify the great fulneſs of the Gentiles, and that the compaſs of the church in goſpel-days ſhould be marvellouſly extended. The uſe of it was, to make a ſeparation between the ſanctuary and the profane place; the church and the world; the world is profane, and lies in wickedneſs, and the men of it ought not to be admitted into the church of God, and partake of holy things in it; a difference muſt be made between the precious and the vile; and greater care will be taken in the latter day, of the admiſſion of members into goſpel-churches, Iſ. lii. 1. ſee the note on ch. xl. 5.

---

[i] De Succeſſ. in Pontif. Heb. l. 2. c. 7. Vid. ib. de Synedriis, l. 3. c. 11. §. 6. & Braunium, de veſtitu Sacerdot. Hebr. l. 2. c. 25.

[k] Ad Codicem Joma, c. 7. §. 1. p. 78, 79.

[l] Miſn. Middot, c. 2. §. 1.

[m] Antiqu. l. 15. c. 11. §. 3. Ed. Hudſon.

[n] Proſpect of the Temple, c. 2. p. 1051.

[o] Temple of Solomon pourtrayed, &c. p. 241.

CHAP. XLIII.

THE temple or houſe of God being meaſured, the worſhip of God in it is pointed out and obſerved, in this and the following chapter; and which, tho' evangelical, is expreſſed in the language of the Old Teſtament. An account is given of the glory of the Lord returning to the houſe, and the way he did, and his taking poſſeſſion of it, which the prophet was favoured with a view of, ỳ. 1—5. a promiſe is made of his continuance there, provided his people behaved as they ſhould, ỳ. 6—9. an order is given to the prophet, to ſhew them the form and faſhion, the laws, orders, and ordinances of the houſe to them, to be obſerved by them, ỳ. 10, 11, 12. then follows the meaſuring of the altar of burnt-offerings; which tho' meaſured before, ch. xl. the dimenſions are here given, ỳ. 13—17. and the chapter is concluded with directions about the conſecration of it, ỳ. 18—27.

ỳ. 1. Afterward he brought me to the gate, &c.] The dimenſions of this wonderful building being finiſhed, the prophet's divine guide brought him from the wall about it, he had laſt meaſured, to the gate he firſt had him to, after he had obſerved to him the ſame wall, ch. xl. 5, 6: even the gate that looketh toward the eaſt; or as the Targum, which was open to the way of the eaſt. The reaſon of his being brought hither follows,

ỳ. 2. And behold, the glory of the God of Iſrael came from the way of the eaſt, &c.] The God of Iſrael is Jehovah the Father, the covenant-God of literal Iſrael; and the covenant-God and Father of the whole ſpiritual Iſrael, or his elect, whether Jews or Gentiles; whom he has taken into covenant, loves, cares, provides for, and protects: Chriſt, who is the brightneſs of his Father's glory, whoſe glory is the glory of the only-begotten of the Father, is here meant; and who has the ſame glorious attributes, the ſame glorious names, and the ſame worſhip, honour and glory, his Father has; and in whom, as Mediator, is diſplayed the glory of all the divine perfections: he is ſaid to come from the way of the eaſt; which agrees with him in his character as the riſing ſun of righteouſneſs; and with his incarnation, when as the dayſpring from on high, from heaven, he viſited us, was born in the eaſt, where his ſtar appeared; from this part of the world his goſpel firſt came; here it was firſt preached, and churches planted; and tho' theſe parts have been forſaken by him a long time, he'll return hither again; when he will dry up the river Euphrates, and make way for the kings and kingdoms of the eaſt to be converted to him, Rev. vii. 2. and xvi. 12. to which a behold is prefixed, as a note exciting attention, and raiſing admiration; as it was matter of wonder and joy to the prophet, to ſee the glory of the Lord returning to his houſe, the ſame way he departed, ch. x. 4, 19: and his voice was like a noiſe of many waters; this is to be underſtood of his goſpel, in which he ſpeaks to men, and which is a voice of love, grace, and mercy; of peace and reconciliation; of pardon and righteouſneſs; of life, liberty, and ſalvation: and the metaphor here uſed, is expreſſive of the ſwiftneſs of its motion in the world; of its general ſpread in it, and all over it; of the noiſe it will make, as it always does among men, wherever it comes; and of the rapidity and force of it, being attended with almighty power; and is a ſoul-ſhaking, heart-melting, ſoul-quickening, enlightning, alluring, and comforting voice; ſee Dan. x. 6. Rev. i. 15. The Targum is, “and the voice “of them that bleſs his name, is as the voice of “many waters.” The Septuagint and Arabic verſions, the voice of the camp or army. And the earth ſhined with his glory; with the brightneſs of his glory, as the Targum; with his glorious goſpel, in which the glory of his perſon, office and grace, is diſplayed; this will be ſpread all over the earth, and that will be enlightened by it: it will remove the darkneſs of infidelity, error, ſuperſtition, idolatry, and all falſe doctrines from the world, and the darkneſs of calamity and diſtreſs from the church; which will caſt a luſtre and glory upon it; and with the brightneſs of which the Lord will deſtroy antichriſt, and by it ſet up his kingdom in the world, and reign before his ancients gloriouſly: this will bring on Zion's light and glory, to which kings will come, and upon which will be a defence; ſee Rev. xviii. 1. 2 Theſſ. ii. 8. Iſ. lx. 1, 3. and iv. 5.

ỳ. 3. And it was according to the appearance of the viſion which I ſaw, &c.] Recorded in the 1ſt, 9th, and 10th chapters of this book; the form in which the glory of the God of Iſrael now appeared, was like to what he then ſaw; in each of which viſions was the likeneſs of a throne, and on it the appearance of the glory of God: even according to the viſion that I ſaw, when I came to deſtroy the city; the city of Jeruſalem; not that the prophet deſtroyed it, or came to deſtroy it himſelf, which was to be done, and was done, by the Chaldeans, but to foretel the deſtruction of it; which prediction of his made it as certain, as if it was done. So the Targum, “when I propheſied to deſtroy the “city;” and this was, when he was bid to cauſe in a viſionary and prophetic manner, ſix men, with their deſtroying weapons, to draw near unto it, and ſmite it; at which time he ſaw the glory of the God of Iſrael go up from the cherub, ch. ix. 1, 2, 3. And the viſions were like the viſion that I ſaw by the river Chebar; the four living creatures and the wheels; the throne of ſapphire ſtone, and the glorious appearance above it, ch. i. 3—28. and x. 1—20. only with this difference, then he ſaw the glory of the God of Iſrael departing, eſpecially in the laſt viſion, but now returning: and I fell upon my face; in reverence of ſuch glorious majeſty; affected with ſuch a diſplay of grace and goodneſs, and ſenſible of his own unworthineſs to behold it: the clearer and fuller views ſaints have of the grace and glory of Chriſt, the more humble they are; ſee Iſ. vi. 1, 2, 3, 5.

ỳ. 4. And the glory of the Lord came into the houſe, &c.] Before deſcribed and meaſured; and being fitted and prepared, the builder and owner of it, comes and takes up his reſidence in it; as Chriſt will do in his church, more eſpecially and more viſibly in the latter day: by the way of the gate, whoſe proſpect is towards the eaſt; which was the direct way into the outward court, and ſo to the inward court, and into the holy, and into the moſt holy place; and was the way by which he departed from hence, ch. x. 18, 19.

℣. 5. So the Spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court, &c.] The prophet was fallen down on his face, upon the ſight of the glory of the Lord, and there he lay, until a wind came, as the word ſignifies; or the Holy Spirit, which is compared to the wind, for its inviſible and irreſiſtible power, came and took him up: humble ſouls are regarded by the Lord; he raiſes them up, and exalts them, and brings them into nearer and more intimate communion with God; and gives them clearer views ſtill of the glories of Chriſt's perſon, grace, and love: and it is the Spirit of God only that does this, and that to prieſts only, ſuch an one as Ezekiel was; for none but prieſts went into the inner court: and behold the glory of the Lord filled the houſe; the body of it; both the holy, and the moſt holy place, with all its courts and apartments; ſo the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle, when that was ſet up in the temple of Solomon, when it was built; and the glory of the Lord will fill the church of God, yea the whole earth, in the latter day, Iſ. vi. 3. of this, Chriſt's perſonal appearance in the ſecond temple, which gave it a greater glory than the former, was an emblem and pledge, Hagg. ii. 7, 9. here it may be obſerved, no mention is made of a cloud, as at the ſetting up of the tabernacle, and dedication of the temple; denoting the clear light of the goſpel in thoſe times, and how the glory of the Lord will be ſeen with open face by all the ſaints.

℣. 6. And I heard him ſpeaking unto me out of the houſe, &c.] The holy place, the prophet being in the inward court: this is Jehovah the Father, the God of Iſrael, whoſe glory entred into it; who utters his voice out of Zion; who ſpeaks in his church by his word, and the miniſters of it; and which is to be heard and regarded, not as the word of man, but as the word of God: and the man ſtood by me; whom he ſaw at firſt with a meaſuring line in his hand, ch. xl. 3. and with whom he had been all along, and had ſeen him meaſure the houſe, and all belonging to it: he ſtood by him as the Mediator between God and him; as the medium of communion with him; as the advocate with the Father: he ſtood by him to interpret what was ſaid to him; to guide him further into the knowledge of divine things; to aſſiſt him, protect and defend him; to continue him in fellowſhip with God, and to preſerve him in grace to glory. Here is an appearance of the three Perſons in the Godhead; the Father ſpeaking to the prophet out of the houſe; the Son in human form ſtanding by him; and the Spirit of the Lord, who had took him up from the ground, and had brought him into the inner court.

℣. 7. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] A kind, uſual, and ſingular appellation, given to this prophet: theſe are the words either of the man that ſtood by him, ſo the Arabic verſion; or of Jehovah, ſpeaking out of the houſe to him: the place of my throne, and the place of the ſoles of my feet; that is, this houſe, the church of God, is the place where the throne of the Lord is ſet; where he rules and reigns; where he ſets his feet, and is his reſting place; even his, whoſe throne is the heaven, and the earth his footſtool; here Chriſt, as king of ſaints, dwells, and here he walks and ſhews the glory of his majeſty: where I will dwell in the midſt of the children of Iſrael for ever; not carnal, but ſpiritual Iſrael; ſuch as are Iſraelites indeed, of which the church will be full in the latter day, both Jews and Gentiles; and in the midſt of theſe will Jehovah dwell, and grant his gracious preſence, and never more depart from them: this ſhows that this houſe or building cannot be underſtood of the ſecond temple; ſince the Lord did not dwell in that for ever, but has left that houſe deſolate hundreds of years ago: ſome Jewiſh writers [p] have owned, that it belongs to the times of the Meſſiah: and my name ſhall the houſe of Iſrael no more defile, or profane; or cauſe to be blaſphemed by immoralities, or falſe doctrines, or ſuperſtition and will-worſhip; denoting the holineſs of life, purity of doctrine and worſhip, in the churches of Chriſt in the latter day; ſee Iſ. iv. 3. Joel iii. 17. Zech. xiv. 20, 21: neither they nor their kings by their whoredom; that is, idolatry, which is ſpiritual fornication; ſuch as the kings of Iſrael, and their ſubjects were often guilty of, before their captivity in Babylon, tho' not after; nor will they ever return to it in the latter day, when converted; for they'll never eſpouſe the idolatries of Rome; and thoſe kings and people that bear the name of chriſtians, and yet commit fornication with the whore of Babylon, ſhall do ſo no more after theſe times, Rev. xvii. 2, 16: nor by the carcaſes of their kings in their high places; or, and their high places [q]; that is, by both; by the carcaſes of their kings being buried in or near the houſe of God; ſo the Targum adds, at their death [r]; or by human carcaſes being ſacrificed to Molech or Milchom, which ſignifies their king; or elſe the idols themſelves are ſo called, becauſe lifeleſs and abominable; ſee Jer. xvi. 18. and the worſhip of which the kings of Iſrael encouraged by precept and practice, order and example, and therefore called theirs: and alſo by their high places, which they made for idolatrous worſhip, and which were made where the carcaſes of their kings were laid, as Ben Melech obſerves; and all which were done, eſpecially in the reigns of Manaſſeh and Ammon: but now nothing of this kind ſhall be hereafter, or any thing now ſimilar to it, in the antichriſtian ſtate.

℣. 8. In their ſetting of their threſhold by my threſhold, &c.] The threſhold is the way of entrance into the houſe; when men open any other way of entrance into the houſe of God than he has directed, it is ſetting up their threſhold by his: the goſpel-way of entrance into the church of Chriſt, is Chriſt himſelf, and faith in him, and a profeſſion of it, and ſubmiſſion to the ordinance of baptiſm, John x. 1, 7, 9. Acts ii. 41. and ix. 18, 26. but when men make carnal deſcent, religious education, mere morality and civility, the way of entrance into church-communion; this is oppoſite to God's way, and is reſented by him; this ſhall not be hereafter: and their poſt by my poſt; which is done, when the ordinances of men are ſubſtituted in the room of the ordinances of God, or ſet upon a level with them; when the ordinances of God are changed and altered, or that brought into his worſhip which he has not commanded; and the commandments of men are taught for the doctrines of God: ſo the Phariſees ſet up the traditions of the elders as equal to the written word, and made it of no effect by them; as the papiſts do, by ſetting up their traditions, under the name of the traditions of the apoſtles, and of the church, upon a level with the ſcriptures; and the ſame is done, when men ſet up their own doctrines, concerning the Perſons in the Godhead, concerning the power and purity of human nature, and the way of redemption; and oppoſe their own works to the grace of God, in juſtification, pardon, and ſalvation: the alluſion is to the ſetting up of altars and idols in the houſe of the Lord, by his altar, 2 Kings xxi. 4, 7: and the wall between me and them; that theſe ſins and abominable practices were a wall of ſeparation between God and them, and cauſed him to hide himſelf from them, withdraw his preſence, and deny them communion with him, Iſ. lix. 2. ſome render it, for or ſo that there was but a wall between me and them *; ſo near were their threſholds, poſts, and altars to his: they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed; by their falſe doctrines, idolatrous worſhip, and immoral lives; ſuch abominations as before-mentioned: wherefore I have conſumed them in mine anger; as the Jews are now, and all the antichriſtian ſtates will be.

---

[p] Vid. R. Iſaac Chizzuk Emunah, par. 1. p. 51.

[q] במות & excelſis ſuis, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.

[r] So Abendana takes this word to ſignify in their death; their carcaſes being buried in their gardens, as Manaſſeh, 2 Kings xxi. 18.

℣. 9. Now let them put away their whoredom, &c.] Idolatry, ſuperſtition, and will-worſhip, with which the corrupt church of Rome abounds; and whatever appearance thereof is in the Reformed churches: and the carcaſes of their kings far from me; their idols; ſee the note on ℣. 7: and I will dwell in the midſt of them for ever; now tho' the Jews were never guilty of idolatry after their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, nor even to this day; yet the Lord has departed from them, and left them to blindneſs and ſtupidity, they having rejected the Meſſiah he ſent unto them; which ſhows that this paſſage refers not to thoſe times, but to future times; when the whole Iſrael of God ſhall be cleared of all corruptions in doctrine and worſhip, and the Lord will take up his abode with them, and no more depart from them.

℣. 10. Thou ſon of man, ſhew the houſe, &c.] That is, the houſe the prophet had ſeen meaſured, its gates, courts, and all belonging to it; which he was at firſt bid to obſerve, that he might ſhew it to others; the houſe, that the glory of the Lord was now come into, and had filled; and which is no other than the goſpel-church in its perfection and glory in the latter day. This the prophet, who is addreſſed under his uſual character in this book, is bid to ſhew to the houſe of Iſrael; either to the captives in Babylon, among whom he was, and to whom he often ſpeaks in this book, being ſent with a meſſage to them: and this he is ordered to ſhew them, both to comfort them in their preſent ſtate, with a view of what would be hereafter; and to humble them, and bring them to a ſenſe of their ſins, and ſhame for them, which had brought them into the condition they were, and ſo greatly ſhort of this happy one: or elſe to the Jews in the firſt times of the goſpel; the prophet perſonating the apoſtles of Chriſt, who delivered out the form of a goſpel-church-ſtate to the believing ones, far ſuperior to that they had been in, and into which they entered: or rather he perſonated the miniſters of the word in the latter day, ſhewing to the chriſtians of thoſe times, the order, worſhip, and diſcipline of a pure goſpel-church, who have been greatly deficient in their obſervance of them; and which is the work and buſineſs of goſpel-miniſters to do, as well as to preach the doctrine of the goſpel: that they may be aſhamed of their iniquities; how far ſhort they have come of the model of true goſpel-churches, and of obſerving the order, and maintaining the ordinances, and keeping up the diſcipline of ſuch churches; and when perſons are brought to bluſh and be aſhamed, it looks as if they had a true ſight and ſenſe of their miſtakes, and of repentance for them: and let them meaſure the pattern; that is, of the houſe, and what belongs to it; by which they will ſee their defects, and correct them; ſee Rev. xi. 1, 2.

℣. 11. And if they be aſhamed of all that they have done, &c.] As ſinful and criminal, at leaſt as very imperfect and defective, and not anſwerable to the pattern ſhewn them, from which they have ſadly deviated; if made ſenſible of this, and they acknowledge it with ſhame, not only the houſe in general, but the particulars of it are to be ſhown with them; for to ſenſible and penitent perſons, more grace, light, knowledge, and judgment in divine things are given: ſhew them the form of the houſe, and the faſhion thereof; the form and order of a goſpel-church; which is not national, provincial, or parochial, nor preſbyterian, but congregational; conſiſting of perſons called out of the world by the grace of God, and who are incorporated and knit together in goſpel-bonds; among whom the word of God is faithfully preached, and the ordinances truly adminiſtred, and furniſhed with proper officers, paſtors and deacons; the one to take care of the ſpiritual, the other of the temporal affairs of the church; and to ſee a church in ſuch form and order, and thus organized, is a very beautiful ſight. And the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof; the gates and way of entrance into it, which is only by Chriſt, and a profeſſion of faith in him; and care ſhould be taken that none be admitted, but ſuch who appear to be regenerated and ſanctified by the Spirit of God; to be righteous thro' the righteouſneſs of Chriſt; and that keep the truth, and hold the doctrines of the goſpel: and alſo the way and manner of excluding unworthy perſons, ſuch who are immoral in their lives, and erroneous in their principles, ſhould be obſerved. And all the forms thereof; the decorations of it, ſignified by the cherubim and palmtrees; ſo Jarchi and Kimchi; and theſe expreſſive of miniſters of the word, and faithful men: this is often repeated, that it might be the more obſerved; for to have miniſters to anſwer ſuch characters, is of great conſequence. And all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof; the ordinances are thoſe of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper, which are to continue until the ſecond coming of Chriſt: the laws are, beſides the moral law, in the hands of Chriſt the lawgiver, the law of loving one another, called the law of Chriſt, and his new commandment; and all the laws relating to worſhip and diſcipline, concerning the reproof of members, in caſe of private or public offences; and concerning the excluſion of diſorderly or heretical perſons: and write it in their ſight; the plan and model of this houſe, and all things belonging to it, that they may have it before them, as the rule of their conduct and behaviour: that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them; for all this is ſhown, not for mere ſpeculation, and to gratify curioſity, but in order to be put in practice; all theſe rules, laws, and ordinances, are to be kept in faith, from a principle of love, in the name and ſtrength of Chriſt, and with a view to the glory of God.

---

* והקיר ביני וביניהם ita ut paries tantum eſſet inter me & illos, Piſcator.

℣. 12. This is the law of the houſe, &c.] Which follows, the more general one, which comprehends the reſt: upon the top of the mountain; denoting the exaltation and viſibility of the church of Chriſt in the latter day, as well as its firmneſs and ſtability; ſee Iſ. ii. 2, 3: the whole limit thereof round about ſhall be moſt holy; all belonging to it ſhall be as the moſt holy place in the temple, ſacred to the Lord; laws, ordinances, doctrines, worſhip, members, miniſters, all holy; nothing ſaid or done, or have a place here, but what is holy; ſee Zech. xiv. 20, 21: this is the law of the houſe; the principal one, according to which all are directed and governed.

℣. 13. And theſe are the meaſures of the altar after the cubits, &c.] Of the altar of burnt-offering, which tho' meaſured before, the dimenſions were not given till now; ſee ch. xl. 47. this altar was a type of Chriſt, Heb. xiii. 10. with reſpect to his deity, which is greater than the ſacrifice of his human nature, the ſupport of it, which ſanctified it, and gave virtue and efficacy to it, and rendered it acceptable to God, Matt. xxiii. 19. and the meaſures of it are ſaid to be after the cubits uſed in the meaſuring of places and things belonging to this houſe, deſcribed; and what theſe were, appears by what follows: the cubit is a cubit and an hand-breadth; not the common cubit, but what was larger than that by an hand-breadth, or three inches: even the bottom ſhall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit; or, the boſom[t]; that is, the foundation of the altar, as the Targum and Jarchi; the baſis, foot, or ſettle of it; this was a cubit high, and a cubit broad: and the border thereof by the edge thereof round about ſhall be a ſpan; the edge or lip[u], of this bottom or ſettle, was a cubit broad, for the prieſts to ſtand on, and go round the altar; and to this there was a border of a ſpan, or half a cubit, to prevent their ſlipping; or elſe to keep the blood, poured at the foot of the altar, from running upon the pavement: and this ſhall be the higher place of the altar; or the projection or jetting of it out beyond others, which was further than any other part; otherwiſe it was the lower part of the altar.

℣. 14. And from the bottom upon the ground, even to the lower ſettle, &c.] From the baſis or foundation of the altar, as it ſtood upon the ground, to the lower ſettle or court[w], as it is called, where the prieſts ſtood; and in which they could walk round the altar, to do their buſineſs: ſhall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; that is, two cubits high, and one broad: and from the leſſer ſettle or court, to the greater ſettle or court, ſhall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit; the lowermoſt ſettle is called the leſſer, not in quantity, but in height, it being but two cubits high from the ground; but the upper ſettle was four cubits from that, and one broad, for the prieſts to walk on round about; in all ſix cubits from the bottom.

℣. 15. So the altar ſhall be four cubits, &c.] That is, from the greater ſettle; ſo that in the whole it was ten cubits high, the ſame with Solomon's, 2 Chron. iv. 1. ſome make this to be eleven cubits high, one higher than Solomon's; it is here called Harel, the mountain of God, becauſe it looked like a mountain in the court, for its bigneſs: it was on a mountain our Lord was offered up a ſacrifice for the ſins of his people; and which was far ſuperior to all other ſacrifices, and for more perſons than thoſe ſacrifices offered up on the altar of burnt-offerings. And from the altar and upward ſhall be four horns; or, from Ariel[x]; which was the focus or hearth where the wood was laid, and the fire kindled, called Ariel; which ſome render the lion of God, becauſe, as the Jewiſh Rabbins[y] ſay, the fire of the altar lay upon it in the form of a lion; or rather, becauſe like a lion it devoured the ſacrifices: this name of the altar agrees well with Chriſt, the lion of the tribe of Judah; who was ſtrong to bear the ſins of men, and the wrath of God for them, whereby they are no more; tho' it rather ſignifies the fire of God, which conſumed the ſacrifice, and denoted the wrath of God on Chriſt, and alſo the divine acceptance of his ſacrifice: now from hence and upwards were four horns at the four corners of the altar; which denote the ſtrength of Chriſt, to ſave all that come unto God by him, and his being a refuge to them that by faith lay hold upon him; and that he is acceſſible to perſons that come from all parts, from the four corners of the earth.

℣. 16. And the altar ſhall be twelve cubits long, twelve broad, &c.] The length of it, from eaſt to weſt, was twelve cubits; and the breadth, from north to ſouth, was the ſame; ſo that it was a proper four-ſquare, as follows: Chriſt the altar, or the doctrine of his ſacrifice and ſatisfaction for the ſins of men, is the doctrine of the twelve apoſtles of Chriſt, and embraced by the twelve times twelve, the 144,000 that belong unto him: ſquare in the four ſquares thereof; as the altar in the tabernacle, and Solomon's temple were, Exod. xxvii. 1. 2 Chron. iv. 1. denoting the largeneſs of Chriſt's ſacrifice, the perfection of it, and its ſtability and permanency, to take away the ſins of his people.

℣. 17. And the ſettle ſhall be fourteen cubits long, and fourteen broad in the four ſquares thereof, &c.] Here Kimchi confeſſes his ignorance. Jarchi interprets it, the top of the altar, with the place of the horns, and of the feet of the prieſts, and was twenty-eight cubits by twenty-eight, the fourteen mentioned being to be meaſured from the middle[z]; and he ſeems to be right in making it to be the upper part of the altar, and not the lower ſettle, as ſome; the focus or hearth where the wood was laid, and the ſacrifice burnt; and which had a projection of a cubit on each ſide, and ſo made the twelve cubits, the length and breadth of the altar, fourteen: and the border about it ſhall be half a cubit; or the incloſure, as the Targum; the ledge about it, which went round the altar, to keep the fire or ſacrifice from falling, or that the feet of the prieſts might not ſlip: the Jews expound it of the horns: and the bottom thereof ſhall be a cubit about; or the foundation, as the Targum; which was between the altar, and the border on which the prieſts walked, when they went round it, to do the buſineſs of it: here Kimchi owns his ignorance again: and his ſtairs ſhall look towards the eaſt; ſteps to the altar were forbidden by the law of Moſes, Exod. xx. 26. wherefore, as the height of the altar of Solomon, and ſo of the ſecond temple, required ſome way and method of aſcent to the top of it, to do the buſineſs upon it; the Jews had what they call

---

[t] חיק ſinus, Montanus; gremium, Munſter, Cocceius, Starckius. Ben Melech interprets it the middle of the altar.

[u] שפתה labium ejus, Pagninus, Montanus.

[w] העזרה atrium auxilii, Montanus.

[x] מהאראיל ab Hareil, Starckius.

[y] Miſn. Middot, c. 4. §. 7.

[z] So Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 40. Vid. Miſn. Middot, c. 3. §. 1.

Kibbeſh, a way made of earth thrown up, which roſe gradually, and led to the top of it, and was about two and thirty cubits long, and ſixteen broad [a]; but here ſteps or ſtairs are expreſsly mentioned, which ſhow that this refers to times, when the Moſaic and ceremonial laws ſhould be aboliſhed. Theſe ſtairs were placed eaſtward, ſo that thoſe that went up them, looked toward the weſt, toward the temple and houſe of God, where he dwelt; and turned their backs to the eaſt, or riſing ſun, in direct oppoſition to the worſhippers of the ſun, whoſe faces were to the eaſt. How many ſteps or ſtairs there were to the altar, is not ſaid; Starckius conjectures there might be twelve or fourteen of them, and allows for each ſtep half a cubit; but as the altar was ten, or as others, eleven cubits high, there ſhould be twenty ſteps or more, of ſuch a meaſure. Theſe may ſignify the ſeveral ways and means of coming to, and increaſing in the knowledge of the doctrine of the altar, or of Chriſt's ſatisfaction for ſin; as hearing, reading, prayer, meditation, &c.

℣. 18. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This is the voice of the Lord continued, ſpeaking out of the houſe to the prophet; ſee ℣. 6: theſe are the ordinances of the altar; not what go before concerning the meaſures of it, but what follow concerning the ſacrifices to be offered on it: in the day when they ſhall make it to offer burnt-offerings thereon, and ſprinkle blood thereon; this plainly ſhews, that this altar is the altar of burnt-offerings; for ſuch were to be offered on it, and the blood of them to be ſprinkled thereon, as follows; that is, upon the horns, corners, and border of it, ℣. 20.

℣. 19. And thou ſhalt give to the prieſts the Levites, that be of the ſeed of Zadok, &c.] Who in Solomon's time was put in the room of Abiathar; ſee ch. xl. 46. his name ſignifies a righteous one, a type he was of Jeſus Chriſt the righteous; and here his ſeed ſignify the ſeed of Chriſt, ſuch whom he makes prieſts unto the Lord; to theſe, in a viſionary way, the prophet was to give this altar, for them to ſerve at, and eat of; and all the rites and ordinances to obſerve and keep; and the ſacrifices to offer on it, after-mentioned: which approach unto me, to miniſter unto me, ſaith the Lord God; ſee the note on ch. xl. 46: a young bullock for a ſin-offering; typical of Chriſt, ſtrong and laborious, able to bear the ſins of his people; to become a ſin-offering, and to be made ſin itſelf for them.

℣. 20. And thou ſhalt take of the blood thereof, &c.] Ezekiel being a prieſt. This muſt be underſtood in a viſionary way; for as Kimchi obſerves, Ezekiel did not live to come up out of the captivity, but died, and was buried in the land of Babylon, and ſo did not actually do this: tho' it is a mere dream of the ſame writer, that this is to be underſtood of the reſurrection of the dead, when he ſuppoſes Ezekiel will be high-prieſt, tho' Aaron be preſent; or however be the ſecond, or deputy to him. And put it on the four horns of it, and on the four corners of the ſettle, and upon the border round about; that is, on the four horns of the altar, and on the four corners of the ſettle which went round it, for the prieſts to walk on, and do their buſineſs; either the uppermoſt, or as others the lowermoſt, and as ſome both; and alſo on the border or ledge that incloſed the ſettle. The prophet's doing this, putting the blood on theſe ſeveral things, repreſents the nature of the goſpel-miniſtry, and the buſineſs of it; which is to hold forth the blood of Chriſt, and the bleſſings of grace thro' it, as redemption, peace, pardon, righteouſneſs, and life. Thus ſhalt thou cleanſe and purge it; the altar; thus Chriſt, tho' without ſin, and needed no cleanſing and purging for himſelf, yet was ſanctified by his own blood; that he might ſanctify his people, and perfect by his ſacrifice them that were ſanctified, John xvii. 19. Heb. x. 14, 29. and xiii. 12.

℣. 21. Thou ſhalt take the bullock alſo of the ſin-offering, &c.] Which was appointed for the ſin-offering, according to the divine direction, ℣. 19. the prophet was to take it out of the herd, and ſeparate it from the reſt for this purpoſe, and deliver it into the hands of one of the prieſts: and he ſhall burn it in the appointed place of the houſe; that is, one of the ſons of Zadok ſhould receive it of the prophet, and burn it in its proper place; not within the houſe, without the court, but within the wall of the houſe: this burning of it was typical of the dolorous ſufferings of Chriſt; ſee the note on ch. xl. 39. or of the zeal and fervency of the miniſters of the goſpel, in preaching a crucified Chriſt in the proper place, in the houſe and church of God: without the ſanctuary; the holy place or temple, properly ſo called; or without the camp, typical of Chriſt's ſuffering without Jeruſalem, and of his being preached not only there, but in the Gentile world; ſee Heb. xiii. 11, 12. this was the work of the firſt day of the conſecration of the altar.

℣. 22. And on the ſecond day thou ſhalt offer a kid of the goats without blemiſh for a ſin-offering, &c.] Jarchi obſerves, that this was not in the tabernacle, but ordered to be in future time by him that ſpeaks; inſtead of this, another ram was appointed by the law, Exod. xxix. 15, 19. this ſhows the ceremonial law to be changeable, and now aboliſhed: this was typical of Chriſt, without ſpot and blemiſh, and yet figured by the goat, being made ſin for his people: and they ſhall cleanſe the altar, as they did cleanſe it with the bullock; ſee the note on ℣. 20.

℣. 23. When thou haſt made an end of cleanſing it, &c.] The altar, by the ſacrifices of the bullock and the kid, on the firſt and ſecond days; then on the third day, thou ſhalt offer a young bullock without blemiſh, and a ram out of the flock without blemiſh; all theſe ſacrifices point at the one ſacrifice of Chriſt; which was pure and perfect, and once offered up for the ſins of many, and needs no reiteration; only the doctrine of it is to be frequently inculcated in the miniſtry of the word and ordinances.

℣. 24. And thou ſhalt offer them before the Lord, &c.] Upon the altar of burnt-offering, which ſtood before the houſe or temple where Jehovah dwelt, ch. xl. 47: and the prieſts ſhall caſt ſalt upon them; which was to be uſed in all ſacrifices under the law, Lev. ii. 13. this may denote the ſavoury doctrines and lives of the miniſters of the goſpel, who thereby recommend the truths they deliver, concerning a crucified Chriſt, his blood, righteouſneſs, and ſacrifice to others; ſee Matt. v. 13: and they ſhall offer them up for a burnt-offering unto the Lord; throughout the whole ſeven days of the conſecration and cleanſing of the altar, as follows:

℣. 25.

---

[a] So Lipman. ib. §. 43.

℣. 25. Seven days ſhalt thou prepare every day a goat for a ſin-offering, &c.] By this it appears, that the altar was ſeven days a conſecrating and cleanſing; and that on each day a goat was prepared and offered, typical of Chriſt as before obſerved. Here Kimchi owns, that this was not according to the order of Moſes, or was done by thoſe that came out of the captivity of Babylon; and is obliged to confeſs, that there will be a change or an innovation in the order of ſacrifices in time to come, or under the Meſſiah. They ſhall alſo prepare a young bullock, and a ram out of the flock without blemiſh; which, either one or all of them ſhould be offered up on each of the ſeven days; ſee the note on ℣. 23.

℣. 26. Seven days ſhall they purge the altar, and purify it, &c.] Which denotes the perfect purity and ſanctification of it; which how to be applied to Chriſt, ſee the note on ℣. 20: and they ſhall conſecrate themſelves; the prieſts ſhall conſecrate themſelves, or devote themſelves to the ſervice of the altar; ſo goſpel-miniſters to the miniſtry of a crucified Chriſt: or they themſelves ſhould conſecrate the altar by the above rites: or rather it may be literally rendered, and they ſhall fill its hands, or their own hands[b]; that is, either they ſhall fill the ſides of the altar with ſacrifices, as much as it could hold; or the hands of the prieſts with parts of the ſacrifice, or with gifts, as a token of their being inaugurated into, and inveſted with the prieſtly office: ſo goſpel-miniſters ſhould have their hands full of, or be filled with, the gifts and graces of the Spirit, and with the knowledge of Chriſt, his perſon, offices, grace, righteouſneſs and ſacrifice, that they may miniſter unto others.

℣. 27. And when theſe days are expired, &c.] The ſeven days of conſecration, and all theſe rites and ſacrifices obſerved: it ſhall be, that upon the eighth day, and ſo forward; that is, on the firſt day of the week or Lord's day, the chriſtian ſabbath, the next day after the ſeventh, and ſo upon every return of it; in which chriſtian miniſtrations are exerciſed, the word preached, ordinances adminiſtred, and works of righteouſneſs and charity done; ſee John xx. 19, 26. Acts xx. 7. 1 Cor. xvi. 2. The prieſts ſhall make your burnt-offerings upon the altar, and your peace-offerings; or thank-offerings[c]; preach Chriſt and him crucified to the people, and offer up the ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe unto God for them: and I will accept you, ſaith the Lord God; thro' Chriſt the Mediator, in whom he is well pleaſed; who is the altar on which ſuch ſacrifices are accepted, and become well pleaſing to God, Iſ. lvi. 7. 1 Pet. ii. 5.

CHAP. XLIV.

THIS chapter treats of the eaſtern gate of the temple being appropriated to the uſe of the prince, ℣. 1, 2, 3. of the ſin of the Lord's people, in admitting ſtrangers and unholy perſons into the ſanctuary, either to officiate or communicate there, ℣. 4—9. of the degrading of the Levites that went aſtray, aſſigning them inferior poſts and ſervice in the houſe of God, ℣. 10—14. and of the eſtabliſhment of the ſons of Zadok in their miniſtry, who were faithful, ℣. 15, 16. then follow ſeveral laws relating to their garments; ſhaving of their heads; drinking wine; their marriage; performance of their miniſterial work; their regard to the dead, and their food and maintenance, ℣. 17—31.

℣. 1. Then he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward ſanctuary, &c.] The prophet was brought by his divine guide, from the altar of burnt-offerings, which ſtood before the houſe, where he had given him the dimenſions of it, and the ordinances concerning it, to the temple or holy place, called the outward ſanctuary, in diſtinction from the inward ſanctuary, or holy of holies; and to one of the gates of it, which was a gate of the inner court: and which looketh toward the eaſt; the eaſtern gate, and was the ſame he had been at before, and therefore is ſaid to be brought back the way of it; ſee ch. xliii. 1: and it was ſhut; when he was there before, it was open; for he ſaw the glory of the Lord enter into the houſe by the way of it; but now it was ſhut, and for that reaſon, becauſe he had entered into it; ſignifying among other things, that he would never return, or remove from thence any more. The Miſnic doctors[d] interpret this of one of the little doors to the great gate of the temple, that had two little doors, one in the north, the other in the ſouth; that which was in the ſouth, no man ever entered in by, and this they ſay is underſtood here; but it is not a little door, but a gate here ſpoken of, and that the eaſtern one; of which more in the following verſes.

℣. 2. Then ſaid the Lord unto me, this gate ſhall be ſhut, &c.] In time to come, as Jarchi interprets it, in the latter day; it was ſhut, and it ſhould continue to be ſhut: it ſhall not be opened; any more; tho' it has been, yet hereafter no more: and no man ſhall enter in by it, into the houſe of the Lord, becauſe the Lord the God of Iſrael hath entred in by it; the ſame with the glory of the God of Iſrael, ch. xliii. 2, 4, 5: therefore it ſhall be ſhut; no one being to enter after him. Various are the ſentiments of expoſitors concerning this gate. Some of the ancients have interpreted it of the virgin Mary, by whom Chriſt came into this world in human nature, being born of her, a virgin, who had never known man, and as is thought never did after the birth of Chriſt; nor were any afterwards born of her; no man might come into the world by her, by that ſelf-ſame way the incarnate God did, and for that reaſon. This ſenſe is approved of, not only by papiſts, but by many proteſtant writers. Others underſtand it of the ſcriptures, the word of God, which as it is a ſealed book to men learned and unlearned, ſo a gate ſhut up; it cannot be opened by a mere natural man, or be underſtood by the light of nature; none can open it but the lion of the tribe of Judah; who gives the ſpiritual knowledge of it to whom he pleaſes, the perfect knowledge of which is reſerved to a future ſtate; and there are ſome things in it, which will be always ſhut, and ever ſecrets; as the modus of the ſubſiſtence of the three Perſons in the Godhead;

---

[b] There is a double reading of the words; the Cetib or textual reading is, ידו its hand; the Keri or marginal reading is, ידיו their own hands.

[c] שלמיכם eucharistica veſtra, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

[d] Miſna Middot, c. 4 §. 2.

the generation of the Son, the proceſſion of the Spirit, and the union of the two natures in Chriſt; ſee Iſ. xxix. 11, 12. Rev. v. 1—5. John iii. 13. others think that the gate of heaven, or the way to eternal glory and happineſs is meant; which was ſhut by the ſin of man, and could never be opened again by any mere man; but Chriſt by his blood has opened the way into it; and has entered into it, not as a private, but public perſon, repreſenting all his people; and none but thoſe that belong to him, that are members of him, ſhall enter there; as none but Chriſt perſonal, ſo none but Chriſt myſtical: but I am rather of opinion, ſince this whole fabric, as we have ſeen, is an emblem of the church of Chriſt on earth in the latter day, the way into that is deſigned here; and its being ſhut ſignifies, that as the church is a garden incloſed, a ſpring ſhut up, and is only for the uſe of Chriſt, and ſhould be a chaſte virgin to him, he ſhould have all her heart, affection and faith; ſo it ſhould not be pervious unto others; no natural or unregenerate man ſhould enter into it; and when the Lord ſhall have taken up his reſidence in the church in the latter day, in a more ſpiritual and glorious manner than ever, there ſhall no more come into her the uncircumciſed and the unclean, Iſ. lii. 1. and eſpecially in the new Jeruſalem-ſtate, nothing ſhall enter that defiles, or makes an abomination, or a lie, Rev. xxi. 27. none but thoſe that are Chriſt's, that are true members of his, and one with him; and this ſenſe agrees with what follows in this chapter, and receives light and confirmation thereby; in which the Lord complains of the Iſrael and church of God in theſe its preſent declining times, that unregenerate perſons were admitted into the ſanctuary of the Lord, to communicate with the ſaints, and officiate there, ℣. 7, 8, 9. and commends ſuch who are faithful miniſters and members, who are eſtabliſhed therein, ℣. 15, 16.

℣. 3. It is for the prince: the prince ſhall ſit in it to eat bread before the Lord, &c.] Or, as for the prince, the prince ſhall ſit in it [e]; in the gate which is ſhut to others: not the high-prieſt, as Jarchi, tho' he might have a particular ſeat in the temple, as Eli had in the tabernacle, 1 Sam. i. 9. where he might eat the bread and fleſh of holy things: nor the political prince, the king of Iſrael, tho' he might have a place in the temple peculiar to himſelf; ſee 2 Chron. vi. 12, 13. and xxiii. 13. and xxxiv. 31. and the Jews ſay, only the kings of the houſe of David were allowed to ſit in the ſanctuary: but the king Meſſiah, as Kimchi and Ben Melech rightly interpret it, is here meant; who before, in this prophecy, is called David a prince, ch. xxxiv. 24. and xxxvii. 25. he, who is the prince of peace; Michael the great prince; the prince of life, and the prince of the kings of the earth; the Meſſiah the prince. Such who interpret the gate of the gate of heaven, underſtand this of Chriſt's ſitting down there at his Father's right-hand on the ſame throne with him, having done his work, and being at eaſe, and in honour; and of his enjoyment of glory there, as the heavenly glory is ſometimes ſignified by a feaſt, by ſitting down at a table, and eating bread in the kingdom of God, Matt. viii. 11. Luke xiv. 15. and xxii. 30. and ſo it may intend his being in the preſence of God with the utmoſt delight and joy; having that glory he had with him before the world was, and all power in heaven and in earth; diſpenſing gifts and grace to men, and receiving honour and glory from them, and ſeeing the travail of his ſoul with ſatisfaction: but why may it not be underſtood more conſiſtent with the ſcope of the viſion, of his ſitting in his church, at his table there with his ſaints, eating with them, and they with him, in his word and ordinances before the Lord? ſee Cant. i. 12. and iv. 16. and v. 1. Rev. iii. 20: he ſhall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and ſhall go out by the way of the ſame; which ſome explain of Chriſt's aſcenſion to heaven, and deſcent from thence in the ſame way; he went up to heaven in the eaſtern part of the world, from the mount of Olives, to the eaſt of Jeruſalem; and in like manner ſhall he deſcend, and his feet ſhall ſtand on that mount, Acts i. 11, 12. Zech. xiv. 4. but it may be interpreted of his going in and out of his church at his will and pleaſure; and affording his gracious preſence and fellowſhip with himſelf in his houſe and ordinances.

℣. 4. Then brought he me the way of the north-gate before the houſe, &c.] The north-gate of the inward court, whither he was brought from the eaſt-gate, which was ſhut: this, and what follow, may have ſome reſpect to the churches in theſe our northern parts of the world, in their now declining circumſtances, which are aptly repreſented in ſome following verſes; but will hereafter be filled with the glory of the Lord, as follows: and I looked, and behold, the glory of the Lord filled the houſe of the Lord; as he had ſeen at the eaſtern-gate, ch. xliii. 2, 4, 5: and I fell upon my face; as he had done before, under a ſenſe of the greatneſs and glory of the divine majeſty, and of his own vileneſs and unworthineſs; ſee ch. xliii. 3.

℣. 5. And the Lord ſaid unto me, ſon of man, &c.] This is ſtill the voice of the Lord ſpeaking out of the houſe to the prophet, ch. xliii. 6: mark well; or, ſet thine heart [f]; be attentive to what is about to be ſaid, as being of great concern and importance: and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I ſay unto thee; heart, eyes and ears, are all to be employed in the moſt diligent manner in regarding the things hereafter delivered; the ſame expreſſions exciting attention, were uſed at the firſt of this viſion, ch. xl. 4: concerning all the ordinances of the houſe of the Lord, and all the laws thereof; ſee the note on ch. xliii. 11: mark well the entring in of the houſe, with every going forth of the ſanctuary; the way of entrance into the goſpel-church, and the manner of excluſion from it, and the laws and rules concerning theſe; the prophet is bid particularly to obſerve theſe well, becauſe it was in theſe things God's profeſſing people chiefly offended, as appears by what follows; they were not ſo careful as they ſhould have been in the admiſſion of perſons among them, or in the excluſion of delinquents.

℣. 6. And thou ſhalt ſay to the rebellious, even to the houſe of Iſrael, &c.] This is a character of literal Iſrael from the beginning, Deut. ix. 24. and frequently given it in this prophecy, ch. ii. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8. and iii. 9, 26, 27. and well agrees with theſe declining churches in the latter day, and even in our times; it repreſents them as rebellious, becauſe of their diſregard to the ordinances of God's houſe, and to the laws and rules of it; and are not only called rebellious, but rebellion [g] itſelf; expreſſive of the greatneſs of their ſin, and the aggravations of it: thus ſaith the Lord God, O ye houſe of Iſrael, let it ſuffice you of all your abominations; that is, let the abominations you have committed, will-worſhip and ſuperſtition, paying a regard to the doctrines and commandments of men, be ſufficient; ſtop, and proceed no further; relinquiſh thoſe things which are ſo abominable in my ſight; let the time paſt ſuffice to have wrought them; ceaſe entirely from them; ſee 1 Pet. iv. 3. theſe abominations are more particularly expreſſed in the following words.

---

[e] את הנשיא נשיא הוא ישב בו veruntamen ad principem quod attinet, princeps ipſe inquam, &c. Piſcator; quantum ad principem; princeps ſedebit in ea, Noldius, Ebr. Part. Concord. p. 120.

[f] שים לבך pone cor tuum, Vulg. Lat. Vatablus, Pagninus, Montanus; pone ad cor tuum, Starckius.

℣. 7. In that ye have brought into my ſanctuary ſtrangers, &c.] Unregenerate men, who are in a ſtate of alienation and eſtrangement to divine and ſpiritual things: ſtrangers to God; to the true knowledge of him in Chriſt; to the fear and love of God; to the true grace of God in converſion; and to communion with him: ſtrangers to Chriſt, to his perſon and offices; to the way of peace, life and ſalvation by him; to his righteouſneſs; to faith in him, love of him, and fellowſhip with him: ſtrangers to the Spirit; to his perſon, to regeneration and ſanctification by him; to the graces of the Spirit, faith, hope, love, humility, ſelf-denial, &c. to the things of the Spirit, which they neither know nor ſavour; and to the ſeveral offices he performs, as a comforter, the ſpirit of adoption, an earneſt and ſealer: ſtrangers to their own hearts, and the plague of them, and ſin that dwells in them: ſtrangers to the nature of ſin, and the exceeding ſinfulneſs of it; to the deceitfulneſs of ſin, and the conſequences of it; to true repentance for it, and to the right way of atonement of it, by the blood of Chriſt: ſtrangers to the goſpel of Chriſt, and the truths of it; and to the ſaints and people of God: and uncircumciſed in heart; who never were pricked in the heart for ſin, or felt any pain there on account of it; never had the hardneſs of their heart removed, or the impurity of it diſcovered to them; never were filled with ſhame and loathing becauſe of it; or ever put off the body of ſins in a courſe of converſation; or renounced their own righteouſneſs: and uncircumciſed in fleſh; carnal, as they were born; men in the fleſh, in a ſtate of nature, mind and ſavour the things of the fleſh, and do the works of it; having never been taught by the grace of God to deny ungodlineſs and worldly luſts, and to abſtain from fleſhly ones: or who put their truſt in the fleſh, in outward things, in carnal privileges, and external righteouſneſs: theſe the Lord complains were brought to be in my ſanctuary, to pollute it, even my houſe; either to be members here, and partake of all the ordinances and privileges of the Lord's houſe; or to officiate here as prieſts and miniſters of the Lord: when ye offer my bread, the fat, and the blood; which, under the law, were the Lord's; and here ſignify the miniſtry of the word and ordinances, the goodneſs and fatneſs of the Lord's houſe; and eſpecially the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper, that feaſt of fat things; in which Chriſt the true and living bread of God, whoſe fleſh is meat indeed, and whoſe blood is drink indeed, is repreſented to the faith of God's people: and they have broken my covenant, becauſe of all your abominations; that is, have broken the rule of the divine word and everlaſting goſpel by ſuch abominations; by admitting ſuch miniſters and members, the one to adminiſter, the other to partake of, goſpel-ordinances: this is the true ſtate of the caſe of moſt of the reformed churches in our days; it is to be feared that there are multitudes of unregenerate miniſters in them; that they are full of carnal profeſſors; and notorious it is, that the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper is proſtituted to wicked perſons, and to anſwer ends it never was deſigned for; which muſt be an abomination to the Lord.

℣. 8. And ye have not kept the charge of mine holy things, &c.] That is, have not kept and retained the holy doctrines of the goſpel; nor obſerved the holy ordinances of it, as they were firſt delivered: but ye have ſet keepers of my charge in my ſanctuary for yourſelves; meaning either, that ſuch as were in public office, did not attend to it; but were idol-ſhepherds, and left the flock, their care and charge to others, to ſurrogates and curates to do their work for them; whilſt they indulged themſelves in ſloth and idleneſs: or that the members and hearers ſet up preachers for themſelves, according to their luſts, agreeable to their own carnal ſentiments, without any regard to the will and glory of God.

℣. 9. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] This that follows is the law and rule to be obſerved, and which will be obſerved by the churches in the latter day, tho' ſo little regarded now: no ſtranger uncircumciſed in heart, nor uncircumciſed in fleſh, ſhall enter into my ſanctuary; of theſe ſee the note on ℣. 7. unregenerate men may not be admitted members of a goſpel-church; for that is holy, and holineſs becomes it; but they are unholy, and as unfit to be received as ſwine into a king's palace; ſaints and they can't talk together, their language being different, they barbarians to one another; nor can they walk together, being not agreed in ſentiment and practice; beſides, ſuch perſons diſquiet the churches of Chriſt by their quarrelſome behaviour in it, and immoral converſation out of it; and are dangerous and infectious perſons, whether heterodox in principle, or immoral in life: and much leſs ſhould ſuch be admitted to public ſervice, to preach the word, and adminiſter ordinances; ſince they ſhould be holy that bear the veſſels of the Lord, his name and goſpel; they are blind and ignorant, and ſo not apt and fit to teach others; they are dumb, and can't ſpeak to caſes they are ſtrangers to, as thoſe of wounded conſciences, tempted and deſerted, or backſlidden ones; they will bring in ſtrange doctrines, foreign to the ſcriptures, and the experience of ſaints; and it is no wonder they are unſucceſsful in their miniſtry, and churches don't thrive under them; to which, among other things, we muſt impute the great decline of religion, even among proteſtant diſſenters, who, it is to be feared, have too many of this character among them: but there ſhould not be here of any ſtranger that is among the children of Iſrael; tho' they are among them, nay, tho' they are the children of them, and have had a religious education; yet being ſtrangers to the grace of God, ſhould not be admitted members, and much leſs miniſters of the churches of Chriſt.

℣. 10. And the Levites that are gone away far from me, &c.] Theſe Levites were prieſts, as appears from ℣. 13. who profeſſed themſelves goſpel-preachers, miniſters of the reformed churches; but departed from the reformation-principles; erred from the faith; and either mixed it with the doctrines of men, or wholly dropped, concealed or diſſembled it; departed from the word of God, as the rule of faith and practice; and ſet up their own reaſon, as their guide in matters of religion; were gone off from the pure worſhip of God and his ordinances, and entirely neglected the diſcipline of his houſe: when Iſrael went aſtray, which went aſtray away from me after their idols; tho' there may be an alluſion to ſome apoſtacy of literal Iſrael under the Old Teſtament, and from whence language may be borrowed to expreſs this; either to the Iſraelites, joining themſelves to Baal-peor in the fields of Moab, in the time of Phineas, who was zealous and faithful to the Lord, from whom Zadok deſcended after-mentioned: or to the defection in the times of Jeroboam and Rehoboam, when all Iſrael forſook the word of the Lord: or to the times of Ahaz, when Uriah the prieſt made an altar like to that at Damaſcus by the king's order; and which idolatrous practices increaſed in the times of Manaſſeh; when, no doubt, many of the prieſts and Levites, either thro' fear of kings, or on account of gain, and for the ſake of their livelihood, departed from the Lord and his worſhip: but the reference is to a defection in the times of the New Teſtament, and in the latter days of thoſe times; not to the falling away of the church of Rome, and its departure from the faith and order of the goſpel, predicted 2 Theſſ. ii. 3. 1 Tim. iv. 1, 2, 3. 2 Tim. iii. 1—5. tho', no doubt, ſome truly godly miniſters have been carried away with the errors of that church, and afterwards reſtored, as theſe Levites: but the caſe here referred to, is, the declenſion in the reformed churches; their formality; their great imperfection in the ſervice of God; their departure from the doctrine of faith they once heard and received, which they are called upon to repent of; their defiling themſelves with ſuperſtition and will-worſhip, and going after the idols of their own hearts, corrupt reaſon, the doctrines and inventions of men, and carnal rites and ceremonies; ſee Rev. iii. 1—4: they ſhall even bear their iniquity; that is, the Levites, prieſts or miniſters; they ſhall bear the ſhame and diſgrace, when they come to ſee their errors, and the puniſhment and chaſtiſement of their ſin, of which hereafter.

---

[g] אל מרי ad inobedientiam, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 11. Yet they ſhall be miniſters in my ſanctuary, &c.] Tho' degraded from their office as prieſts and miniſters of the word, yet being reſtored from their ſins and errors, ſhall have a place in the houſe of God, and do their work there in a leſs honourable, and a more ſervile way; as in former times, when miniſters had ſinned fouly, and were degraded from their office, upon repentance they were not reſtored to that, but only admitted to lay-communion; ſee 2 Kings xxiii. 9: having charge at the gates of the houſe; like thoſe ſort of Levites who were porters and door-keepers in the temple, or like our ſextons or pew-openers now: and miniſtring to the houſe; employed as the Gibeonites were in hewing wood and bringing water for the uſe of the ſanctuary, or in repairing of it; learning and exerciſing the buſineſs of ſmiths, maſons and carpenters: they ſhall ſlay the burnt-offering, and the ſacrifice for the people; not bring it to the altar, and offer it there; only ſlay it, and ſkin it for the prieſts; which is not to be underſtood literally, there being no ſuch ſacrifice in goſpel-times; but to denote the menial ſervice and inferior poſt that ſuch ſhall be employed in; if they have no trade, they ſhall learn one, in order to get a livelihood for themſelves, and be ſerviceable to the intereſt of religion in a lower way; but miniſters of the word they ſhall not be: and they ſhall ſtand before them to miniſter unto them; either before the prieſts, whoſe ſervants they ſhall be, or before the people; ſignifying, that thoſe that ſin publickly ſhall be rebuked before all.

℣. 12. Becauſe they miniſtred unto them before their idols, &c.] Had officiated for them in the prieſt's office, their idols being in the courts of the Lord at the ſame time; or preached unto them falſe doctrines, ſuch as are not agreeable to the word of God; and led them into ſuperſtition and will-worſhip, and confirmed them therein: and cauſed the houſe of Iſrael to fall into iniquity; or, were for a ſtumbling-block of iniquity [h]; unto them the means of their ſtumbling and falling; by their miniſtrations, teaching them unſound doctrine; and by their practices and example, leading them into a way of falſe worſhip, and diſſoluteneſs of life and converſation; who ought to have been examples to them in word and converſation, in faith and purity: therefore have I lift up mine hand againſt them, ſaith the Lord; to ſmite and afflict them, and chaſtiſe them for the ſame: or, upon them, or concerning them [i]; and ſo it may be expreſſive of an oath, of which lifting up the hand is a ſign; wherefore, that what the Lord had ſaid of them might be believed and expected, he ſwears to it: and they ſhall bear their iniquity; which is repeated for the confirmation and certainty of it; ſee ℣. 10. what is meant by it follows.

℣. 13. And they ſhall not come near unto me, to do the office of a prieſt unto me, &c.] To bring the ſacrifice to the altar, and offer it there; to ſprinkle the blood, or burn the fat, or the incenſe; to intercede for the people, or bleſs them; ſee Hoſ. iv. 6: nor to come near to any of my holy things in the moſt holy place; to do any buſineſs, either in the holy, or in the moſt holy place; to offer holy things, or eat of them. The ſenſe is, that theſe degraded miniſters, who had ſinned ſo greatly, and had fallen ſo fouly, tho' reſtored by repentance; yet ſhould not preach the word, nor adminiſter any ordinance: but they ſhall bear their ſhame, and their abominations which they have committed; that is, the ſhame of their abominations, of their abominable principles and practices, which they have held and maintained; being publickly diſgraced and degraded, and ſo notoriouſly diſtinguiſhed.

℣. 14. But I will make them keepers of the charge of the houſe, &c.] To be watchmen or porters in it; to open and ſhut the doors of it; to ſweep and keep it clean; to repair and mend it, and to do ſuch like works, as it follows: for all the ſervice thereof, and for all that ſhall be done therein; in a ſervile way; but not as prieſts or miniſters of the word.

℣. 15. But the prieſts, the Levites, the ſons of Zadok, &c.] The prieſts who were of the tribe of Levi, whom the Lord choſe and ſeparated, to miniſter to him, and ſo had a lawful call to this office, and were regularly inveſted with it; and deſign true and lawful, as well as faithful miniſters of the word; theſe are called the ſons of Zadok, who deſcended from Eleazer the ſon of Aaron in the line of Phineas, to whom the Lord promiſed the everlaſting prieſthood, and who was put into this office by Solomon in the room of Abiather, 1 Kings ii. 35. his name ſignifies righteous, and was a type of Chriſt; who, as a divine perſon, is eſſentially righteous; as man, truly and perfectly ſo; and as Mediator, God's righteous ſervant; and who, by his obedience and ſufferings, is the author of righteouſneſs to his people; who are his ſpiritual ſeed and offspring; children given him of his Father; who have their ſon-ſhip and adoption thro' him, and are born of him, his Spirit, and grace; and theſe are made righteous by him, thro' his righteouſneſs imputed to them, and may be rightly called ſons of Zadok: and this agrees with all the ſaints; and who, under the goſpel-diſpenſation, are all prieſts, and offer up themſelves, ſouls and bodies, and their ſpiritual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe unto God by Chriſt; tho' all have not a right to preach the word, and adminiſter ordinances, as miniſters lawfully called have, and who ſeem to be more particularly deſigned here; and ſuch as are regenerated perſons, and juſtified by Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and preach the doctrine of free juſtification by it, are the only fit perſons for ſuch an office: that kept the charge of my ſanctuary, when the children of Iſrael went aſtray from me; that kept and held faſt the pure doctrines of the goſpel committed as a ſacred depoſitum to them, without mixture, and without wavering, with courage and valour; tho' a greater number were on the other ſide, and tho' they were reproached and perſecuted for it; and who taught the people to keep the ordinances of the goſpel as they were firſt delivered, in faith and love, and without ſiniſter ends, and ſo adminiſtered them themſelves; and ſuch faithful miniſters and members of churches, eſpecially in a time of great declenſion and general defection, God takes notice of, and has promiſed them great and good things; ſee Rev. ii. 7, 10, 11, 13, 17, 26, 27, 28. and iii. 5, 10, 11, 12, 21, 22. Matt. xxv. 21: they ſhall come near to me to miniſter unto me; in holy things to his people, which is called miniſtring unto him; as to pray to him for them; to preach to them in his name, and adminiſter ordinances: all the ſaints indeed are prieſts, and may draw nigh to God thro' Chriſt; men are at a diſtance from him thro' ſin; there is no coming near to him, but by Chriſt; and this coming near is not local, but ſpiritual, and includes all acts of worſhip, particularly prayer; and is a great favour and bleſſing: and they ſhall ſtand before me, to offer unto me the fat, and the blood, ſaith the Lord God; which, under the law, were both the Lord's; the one was burnt, and the other ſprinkled, on divers things, and in divers places: here it may reſpect the adminiſtration of the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper, that feaſt of fat things; and which may be eminently called the goodneſs and fatneſs of the houſe of God; and in which the blood of Chriſt is repreſented as ſhed for the remiſſion of ſins, and as ſpiritual drink indeed to believers; and the ſacrifice of Chriſt is commemorated, the feaſt being kept in remembrance of that.

---

[h] למכשול עון in offendiculum iniquitatis, Pagninus, Montanus; offendiculo ad iniquitatem, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; offendiculo pravitatis, Starckius.

[i] עליהם ſuper eos, Pagninus, Montanus; ſuper ipſos, Starckius; ſuper ipſis, Cocceius.

℣. 16. They ſhall enter into my ſanctuary, &c.] Both to officiate, and to participate, which ſtrangers and uncircumciſed perſons might not do, ℣. 9: and they ſhall come near to my table to miniſter unto me; which ſome underſtand of the altar of burnt-offering, which was as a table, and the ſacrifice on it was the food of the Lord, Lev. iii. 11, 16. others, the altar of incenſe; ſee ch. xli. 22. Kimchi interprets it of the table of ſhew-bread; but whatever is meant in the letter, the myſtical ſenſe is, the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper, called the Lord's table, 1 Cor. x. 21. a table richly ſpread, and well furniſhed with ſpiritual proviſion: here Chriſt himſelf ſits, bids his people welcome, eats with them, and they with him; and here all the ſaints are gueſts, and miniſters in particular officiate: and they ſhall keep my charge; continue to do ſo; for this they did before, ℣. 15. but now ſhould be confirmed in their office, and never be diſplaced, as others; they that honour God he will honour, 1 Sam. ii. 30.

℣. 17. And it ſhall come to paſs, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, &c.] The prieſts before deſcribed; when they enter the right way into a true goſpel-church, conſiſting of ſuch who are internally renewed, and have an inward work of grace upon their hearts, and are inward court-worſhippers; either as private chriſtians to pray together, to praiſe the Lord, to hear his word, and ſit down at his table; or as public miniſters, to preach the goſpel, and adminiſter ordinances: they ſhall be clothed with linen garments; meaning not the outward converſation-garments of the Lord's people; nor their inward garment of ſanctification; but the robe of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and garments of ſalvation; that fine linen, clean and white, which is the righteouſneſs of the ſaints; and which, tho' but one, ſerves for many; and anſwers not only all the purpoſes of a garment, but even of many, of change of raiment: like a garment it is on, and not in the ſaints; it is put upon them by imputation; and, like a garment, it covers them, protects them from all injuries, keeps them warm and comfortable, and beautifies and adorns them; and is compared to linen for its whiteneſs and purity; ſee Rev. iii. 18. and xix. 8. and in this all the people of God, miniſters and private chriſtians, perform all their ſervices in the houſe of God; making mention of this, and of this only, whereby they become acceptable unto God, Pſ. lxxi. 16. Eph. i. 6: and no wool ſhall come upon them, whilſt they miniſter in the gates of the inner court and within; it is certain, that the prieſts under the law had wool upon them in the time of their miniſtry; for the purple, blue and ſcarlet, as the Jewiſh writers [k] obſerve, were all of them dyed wool; of which, with other things, the girdle common to all the prieſts, and the ephod and breaſt-plate of the high-prieſt, were made, Exod. xxviii. 5, 6, 8, 15. and which they wore in their common ſervice: to the Jews in general it was not lawful to wear a garment of linen and woollen, Lev. xix. 19. Deut. xxii. 11. and therefore, as Joſephus ſays [l], to the prieſts only it was allowed to wear ſuch a garment; and it is common with the Jewiſh doctors [m] to obſerve, that "the prieſts were not clothed to miniſter in the "temple, but with wool and linen;" indeed on the day of atonement, the high-prieſt when he went into the holieſt of all, had only linen garments on him; and of the ſervice of this day Jarchi interprets the text; but Kimchi rightly objects, that the holieſt of all cannot be called a court; and beſides, it is ſaid in the plural number, they ſhall be clothed, and miniſter; whereas only the high-prieſt went into the moſt holy place; and therefore he truly obſerves, that this is a new thing to be done in future times: and this is true of the ſpiritual prieſthood of ſaints and miniſters of the goſpel, who are to have no wool upon them in their miniſtrations, whether in a more private or public way; who are, and ſhould profeſs to be juſtified by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt only, without any works of their own to be joined with it; which to do, is unneceſſary, indecent and dangerous: wool is obſerved to be the clothing of brute beaſts, and therefore not a fit emblem of the clothing of ſaints; and likewiſe of ſuch as are moſt ſlow, and ſluggiſh, and inactive [n], and ſo an emblem of ſloth; and which ought not to be in any of the people of God, and eſpecially in miniſters, who of all men ſhould not be ſlothful in buſineſs, but fervent in ſpirit, ſerving the Lord. It may be further obſerved, that cloaths made of wool are heavy, and render unfit for buſineſs, and cauſe ſweat, which is offenſive; and which ſeems to be a reaſon, ℣. 18. why wool ſhould not be upon them, only linen garments wore by them; that they might be more quick and expeditious in the diſpatch of buſineſs, and avoid every thing that gives offence, that the miniſtry may not be blamed: woollen cloaths are alſo liable to moths, and worms, and to contract filth; and may ſignify, that the prieſts of the Lord ſhould be clear of carnal and ſenſual luſts; theſe ſhould not be upon them, or they under the predominancy of them, and particularly avarice; they ſhould feed the flock, and not fleece it, and clothe themſelves with the wool of it, Ezek. xxxiv. 2, 3. The phraſe, and within, or in the houſe, ſeems to denote ſome place diſtinct from the inner court, even the more inmoſt place of the temple, the holy of holies; which ſignifies heaven itſelf, into which only the high-prieſt entered once a year, typical of Chriſt's entering into heaven; and who has opened a way, and given all his people who are prieſts unto God, boldneſs to enter there alſo by prayer, in the exerciſe of faith and hope; and which ſervice they perſorm in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and that only; ſee Heb. ix. 8. and x. 19, 20. and vi. 20. Dan. ix. 18.

---

[k] Jarchi and Aben Ezra in Exod. xxv. 4. Maimon. Hilchot Cele Hamikdaſh, c. 8. §. 12.

[l] Antiq. l. 4. c. 8. §. 11.

[m] Miſna, Kilaim, c. 9. §. 1.

℣. 18. And they ſhall have linen bonnets upon their heads, &c.] Denoting gravity and modeſty, ſubjection to God, and authority among men under him; and alſo purity of doctrine, and clearneſs of light and knowledge: and ſhall have linen breeches upon their loins; expreſſive of chaſtity; ſee Exod. xxviii. 40, 42: they ſhall not gird themſelves with any thing that cauſeth ſweat; ſo not with wool, which is apt to cauſe ſweat; and is thought to be the reaſon why it is forbidden in the preceding verſe; and ſo this girdle muſt be different from the prieſt's girdle under the law, for that had wool in it: ſweat is of an ill ſmell, and very offenſive; and may denote unſound doctrine and immorality in life and converſation, which give offence, and cauſe the miniſtry to be blamed, to which is oppoſed the girdle of truth and holineſs, Eph. vi. 14. The Talmudic doctors interpret this of the place of girding, which is liable to ſweat; and they ſay [o], "they uſed not to gird neither below the loins, nor above the arm-holes; but over-againſt, or about the arm-holes;" which is obſerved by Jarchi and Kimchi on the text; and the Targum is, "they ſhall not gird upon or about the loins, but about the heart;" that is, about the breaſt or paps; hence Chriſt our great high-prieſt is deſcribed as girt about the paps with a golden girdle, Rev. i. 13. ſo theſe are girt that are made prieſts by him; denoting their hearty zeal and affection for the truths of his goſpel, and the honour of his name, and their readineſs to ſerve and glorify him: or, they ſhall not gird themſelves looſely [p]; in a negligent manner, which is both indecent, and hinders buſineſs.

℣. 19. And when they go forth into the utter court, &c.] Out of the inner court where they miniſter, when they have done their ſervice: even into the utter court to the people; out of the church into the world, where the people are, doing their buſineſs, whether good men or bad: they ſhall put off their garments wherein they miniſtred, and lay them in the holy chambers; the north and ſouth-chambers; ſee the note on ch. xlii. 13, 14: and they ſhall put on other garments; which are their outward converſation-garments, which are proper to appear in before men, for the honour of religion; tho' not ſufficient to appear in before God, and render acceptable unto him: and they ſhall not ſanctify the people with their garments; the garments of the prieſthood were reckoned holy, and whatſoever was holy, that which it touched was accounted holy alſo; and therefore to preſerve a difference between the prieſts and the common people, they were not to wear their holy garments but in the time of ſervice; or leſt any ſuperſtitious notion ſhould obtain among the people, that they were ſanctified by touching their cloaths; as the papiſts give out, that if a man is buried in a monk's cowl, he ſhall be ſaved: or the ſenſe is, that they ſhould not poſſeſs the minds of the people with a notion of any real ſanctity in their garments; or that their converſation-garments, or good works, can be of any ſervice to them: this may be oppoſed to works of ſupererogation.

℣. 20. Neither ſhall they ſhave their heads, &c.] As the prieſts and worſhippers of Iſis and Serapis did, as Jerom on the text obſerves; and as the Romiſh prieſts now do, from whom the Lord's faithful miniſters muſt be diſtinguiſhed: nor ſuffer their locks to grow long; as the Nazarites, that a diſtinction might be preſerved between thoſe who were, and were not ſuch; or rather, after the manner of women, their locks hanging down, and flowing about their ſhoulders as a token of levity, wantonneſs, effeminacy, pride and vanity; ſee 1 Cor. xi. 14, 15: they ſhall only poll their heads; obſerve a medium between both; neither ſhave their heads cloſe, nor let their hair grow long, but keep it in an even moderate length; for which reaſon godly men of the laſt age among us were called round-heads.

℣. 21. Neither ſhall any prieſt drink wine, &c.] That is, to exceſs, immoderately, ſo as to be inebriated with it, Lev. x. 9, 10, 11. ſhould not be given to it, and greedy of it, and drink it ſo as to diſguiſe themſelves: this is reckoned among the qualifications of a goſpel-miniſter, 1 Tim. iii. 3. otherwiſe it is not forbidden good men, or miniſters of the word to drink wine, for healths-ſake, and for the refreſhment of nature, provided it is done in moderation, 1 Tim. v. 23. and particularly care ſhould be taken that they drink it in ſuch a manner, when they enter into the inner court; to attend divine ſervice, ſince immoderate drinking affects the memory; and ſuch may forget the law and doctrines of the Lord, they are to deliver or hear; and may put them upon ſaying and doing that which is improper and indecent: drunkenneſs in any chriſtian profeſſor is abominable, and eſpecially in a miniſter of the word; and when it appears in his miniſtration, it is ſcandalous to the laſt degree.

---

[n] Lana ſegniſſimi corporis excrementum eſt & prophanus veſtitus, itaque lanea veſtis videtur deſidiam, & ſegnitiem indicare, Apuleius.

[o] T. Bab. Zevachim, fol. 18. 2. and 19. 1.

[p] לא יחגרו ביזע non cingent ſeipſos modo inſtabili, nempe neglectim circumponendo cingulum nimis laxum, Guſſetius, p. 315. The Tigurine verſion is quæ non adſtringent arctius.

℣. 22. Neither ſhall they take for their wives a widow, &c.] Who has been not only another man's, but at her own will, and done her own pleaſure, and been her own miſtreſs, and ſo not eaſily brought into ſubjection, and to behave as becoming her ſtation: or her that is put away; or, thruſt forth [q]; out of doors; whoſe huſband has given her a bill of divorce; ſince ſhe may be ſuſpected of having done ſome ill thing: but they ſhall take maidens of the ſeed of the houſe of Iſrael; virgins, and not of the families of unconverted perſons, who have been brought up in an irreligious way, but of godly families, and who have had a religious education: or a widow that had a prieſt before; and ſo uſed to religious exerciſes, and to the manner of living of ſuch perſons. All good men ſhould be careful whom they marry, and eſpecially miniſters of the goſpel; who are here ſuppoſed and allowed to marry, contrary to the church of Rome, which forbids her prieſts to marry. It is obſerved by ſome, and with great propriety, that in the latter days antichriſtian churches will be diſowned; and that godly faithful miniſters will become paſtors, and take the care of ſuch churches, who are like a chaſte virgin eſpouſed to Chriſt, and ſuch who have had faithful paſtors over them before. This ſeems to refer to the law concerning the marriage of the high prieſt, Lev. xxi. 13, 14. and what is there enjoined him, is here enjoined all the prieſts of the Lord; and therefore, as Kimchi rightly obſerves, this is a new rule reſpecting future times.

℣. 23. And they ſhall teach my people the difference between the holy and the profane, &c.] Perſons and things; not in a ceremonial, nor merely in a moral; but in an evangelical ſenſe, between truth and error; between the doctrine which is according to godlineſs, and that which is corrupt and unſound, and eats as doth a canker; between holy worſhip and ſuperſtition; between holy duties, and profane and heathen rites and ceremonies; and between perſons ſanctified by the Spirit and grace of God, and unconverted ones: and cauſe them to diſcern between the unclean and the clean; impure perſons, doctrines, and manners, and thoſe which are agreeable to the word of God; the ſenſe is, that they ſhall take pains to inſtruct perſons in the knowledge of divine things, and ſhall do it truly, faithfully, and ſincerely.

℣. 24. And in controverſy they ſhall ſtand in judgment, &c.] When any controverſy ariſes among the ſaints concerning civil things, this ſhall not be carried into a court of judicature, of the men of the world; but it ſhall be brought before the church, and there heard, tried, judged, and determined; the miniſters of the word there preſiding, who ſhall give the definitive ſentence, and ſtand to it, and abide by it, 1 Cor. vi. 1—7. and when any controverſy ariſes about the doctrines of the goſpel, or modes of worſhip, or rules of diſcipline; they ſhall riſe up, diſcuſs the point, determine the queſtion, paſs the ſentence, and not depart from it: and they ſhall judge it according to my judgments; not according to their own judgments, or according to their own fancies, or the reaſonings of their own minds, but according to thoſe directions and rules given in the word of God; which is profitable for the ſettling and eſtabliſhing true doctrine, and for the reproof and correction of error, and for the inſtruction of men in the paths of righteouſneſs: and they ſhall keep my laws, and my ſtatutes in all mine aſſemblies; which aſſemblies are the churches of Chriſt, gathered according to goſpel-order; where the ſaints aſſemble together for divine worſhip, and where the Lord grants his preſence; and where his word is preached, and his ordinances adminiſtred, and ſo called his; and of which aſſemblies goſpel-miniſters are the maſters, and where they preſide; and whoſe buſineſs is to obſerve the laws and ſtatutes the Lord has made, and to interpret them unto the people, and enforce them on them, and ſee that they are kept by them: and they ſhall hallow my ſabbaths; ſuch times as are appointed for divine worſhip; theſe they ſhall keep holy themſelves, in the exerciſe both of private and public worſhip, and ſhall exhort and ſtir up all with whom they are concerned to do the ſame.

℣. 25. And they ſhall come at no dead perſon to defile themſelves, &c.] Shall not come into places where they are, nor touch them, nor attend their funerals, Lev. xxi. 1, 11. that their work might not be interrupted, or they thro' grief and ſorrow be made unfit for it, Matt. viii. 22. this, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, may ſignify, that they ſhould have no converſation or fellowſhip with men dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; and ſhould abſtain from all dead works, as all ſinful ones are: but for father, or for mother, or for ſon, or for daughter, for brother, or for ſiſter that hath had no huſband, they may defile themſelves; by coming near them, touching them, at leaſt attending their funerals, becauſe of their near relation to them, and that natural ſympathy and affection that muſt be in them: all ſorrow and mourning for dead relations is not forbidden ſaints, nor miniſters of the word; provided it is in moderation, and not to exceſs, and is not for gracious perſons, as thoſe without hope; and ſhould as little as poſſible break in upon the duties of their office, 1 Theſſ. iv. 13. John xi. 33, 35.

℣. 26. And after he is cleanſed, &c.] From any ſin or iniquity, failing and imperfection, that he has been guilty of at ſuch ſeaſons, in mourning for the dead, by a freſh application of the blood of Chriſt, which cleanſes from all ſin; typified by the water of ſeparation, made of the aſhes of the red heifer, by which thoſe who were in this way ceremoniouſly unclean, were cleanſed, Heb. ix. 13, 14: they ſhall reckon unto him ſeven days; that is, ſeven days ſhall be reckoned from the time of his cleanſing, before he enters on public ſervice again: according to the old law, ſeven days were reckoned from the defilement to the purification; here ſeven more are numbered after the purification is made; and therefore, as Kimchi truly notes, this is a new law or rule, to be obſerved in after-times.

℣. 27. And in the day that he goeth into the ſanctuary, &c.] Into the houſe and church of God, after his cleanſing, and when the ſeven days from thence are up: unto the inner court, to miniſter in the ſanctuary; among the inward court-worſhippers, to miniſter in holy things to them; to preach the goſpel, and adminiſter goſpel-ordinances: he ſhall offer his ſin-offering, ſaith the Lord God; tho' he has been privately cleanſed in the fountain of Chriſt's blood, in which he has waſhed for ſin and uncleanneſs; yet when he comes into the houſe of the Lord, he muſt acknowledge his ſins and imperfections over Chriſt the ſin-offering; which he muſt bring in the arms of his faith, and ſo enter into the courts of the living God, and do the ſervice of the ſanctuary.

---

[q] גרושה expulſam, Montanus, Heb. ejectam, Piſcator.

℣. 28. And it ſhall be unto them for an inheritance, &c.] Either the ſin-offering, or the prieſthood, and the perquiſites belonging to it: or, they ſhall have an inheritance[r]; but what ſhall it be? God himſelf: I am their inheritance; the Lord is the portion and inheritance of his people, who are made prieſts unto him, whether in a private or public capacity; they are heirs of God, he is their portion in the land of the living, and for ever: God in all his perfections is theirs; and tho' incommunicable, they have the uſe and advantage of them, ſo far as they are capable and ſtand in need of them; as his eternity, immutability, omniſcience, omnipotence, omnipreſence, grace, mercy, goodneſs, truth, and faithfulneſs: he is theirs in all his perſons; God the Father is their covenant-God and Father; the Son of God is their head and huſband, their Saviour and Redeemer, mediator and peace-maker, their prophet, prieſt, and king; his blood, righteouſneſs, ſacrifice and faithfulneſs theirs, and even all that he is and has: the Spirit of God is their convincer and enlightener, their quickener and ſanctifier; their comforter, and the Spirit of adoption to them, the ſeal and earneſt of their future glory; and God under every character is theirs, as the God of nature and providence, and as the God of all grace; and this is an inheritance rich and large, a ſoul-ſatisfying portion, an inconceivable and an inexhauſtible one. And ye ſhall give them no poſſeſſion in Iſrael; ſo the prieſts and Levites had none under the law, but were provided for in another way, Numb. xviii. 20, 21. Deut. xviii. 1, 2. Joſh. xiii. 14. the Lord's people and prieſts, under the goſpel-diſpenſation, for the moſt part are the poor of this world, who have no ſhare in the poſſeſſions of it; their good things are not here, but in the world to come, and in God himſelf: I am their poſſeſſion; the Lord is enjoyed by them now; his love is ſhed abroad in their hearts; they have fellowſhip with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt, and communion with the Holy Ghoſt; and which is infinitely better than all the poſſeſſions of this world; and beſides, proviſion is made for their outward maintenance, as follows:

℣. 29. They ſhall eat the meat-offering, and the ſin-offering, and the treſpaſs-offering, &c.] Which were typical of Chriſt; the meat-offering, or rather bread-offering, it being made of fine flour, was a type of Chriſt the bread of life; and the ſin and treſpaſs-offerings pointed at his being made ſin and a ſacrifice for it; which the people and prieſts of the Lord in a ſpiritual ſenſe eat, feed, and live upon by faith: and beſides, as the prieſts under the law had a part in all theſe offerings, whereby they and their families were maintained, Lev. ii. 3. and vi. 29. and vii. 6. ſo it is the will and ordination of Chriſt, that as thoſe that miniſtered about holy things, and waited at the altar, ſhould live of them, and partake with that, ſo they that preach the goſpel ſhould live by it, 1 Cor. ix. 13, 14: and every dedicate thing in Iſrael ſhall be theirs; or, every devoted thing[s]; that is, to holy uſes, what the people willingly offer to ſupport the intereſt of religion; ſignifying, that the miniſters of the word ſhall live upon the free contributions of the people.

℣. 30. And the firſt of all the firſt-fruits of all things, and every oblation of all of every ſort of your oblations ſhall be the prieſts, &c.] Suggeſting, that their offerings or contributions which ſhould be made out of their ſubſtance, ſhould be in proportion to it, and early as well as free; ſee Prov. iii. 9: ye ſhall alſo give unto the prieſt of your dough; either of the firſt they made of the new corn of the year, or a piece or cake of whatſoever at any time they made; ſignifying, that the miniſters of the word, that communicate ſpiritual things to men, ſhould partake of their carnal ones, and have a part and ſhare with them in all good things, in all the enjoyments of life, 1 Cor. ix. 11. Gal. vi. 6: that he may cauſe the bleſſing to reſt in thine houſe; that is, that he, the prieſt or miniſter of the word, that partakes of the above things, and is comfortably provided for and ſupported, may pray to the Lord for ſuch who liberally contribute to him; that a bleſſing may come and abide upon them and their families, and proſperity and ſucceſs may attend them in their worldly buſineſs and employments of life; as well as they and theirs may be bleſſed with all ſpiritual bleſſings, with grace here, and glory hereafter.

31. The prieſts ſhall not eat of any thing that is dead of itſelf, or torn, &c.] They ſhall have no need to eat of ſuch things, being plentifully provided for with better; nor will it become them ſo to do thro' avarice, not allowing themſelves to enjoy what is liberally given them. Here the Jewiſh doctors[t] obſerve that it is ſaid, the prieſts ſhall not eat of theſe things, ſuggeſting that Iſraelites might; this puzzles them, therefore they ſay, Elias will explain this verſe; and the gloſs ſays, till Elias comes, and explains it to us, we know not how to explain it. In the myſtic ſenſe it may ſignify, that the prieſts of the Lord ſhould have no communication with ſuch as are dead in ſin, or are given to rapine and violence, and ſhould abſtain from every thing of this kind themſelves. Whether it be fowl or beaſt; whether phariſees and high-flown profeſſors of religion, or earthly and worldly perſons, and ſuch that are immerſed in carnal pleaſures, in ſenſual and brutiſh luſts. The alluſion is to the law in Lev. xvii. 15. which was common to all Iſraelites, prieſts and people.

---

[r] והיתה להם לנחלה habebunt etiam hereditarium aliquid, Tigurine verſion. Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; omne devotum, Cocceius, Starckius.

[s] כל חרם omne anathema,

[t] T. Bab. Menachot, fol. 45. 1.

CHAP. XLV.

THIS chapter treats of the diviſion of the land in future time, and the perſons and uſes for which it is to be made; one part being for the ſanctuary, and the prieſts that ſerve in it, and for their houſes for them to dwell in, ℣. 1—4. another for the Levites and their chambers, ℣. 5. and another for the city, for the Iſraelites in common, ℣. 6. and the laſt for the prince; and of the ſituation and extent of it, ℣. 7, 8. and of the righteous adminiſtration of civil government in the time of the ſpiritual reign of Chriſt, in abſtinence from violence and exactions, and doing juſtice, for which orders and directions are given, ℣. 9, 10, 11, 12. then of the oblations of the people of the land, ℣. 13, 14, 15, 16. and next of thoſe that are to be prepared by the prince, ℣. 17. and the times of the offering of them at the beginning of the year, on the feaſts of the paſſover and tabernacles, ℣. 18—25. the rules for which are ſo different from the Moſaic law, as ſhew the abrogation of that; and that all this is to be underſtood in a ſpiritual and evangelic ſenſe.

℣. 1. Moreover, when ye ſhall divide by lot the land for inheritance, &c.] This is not to be underſtood literally of the diviſion of the land of Iſrael; which agrees not with the diviſion of it begun by Moſes, and finiſhed by Joſhua, upon his conqueſt of it, and the introduction of the people of Iſrael into it; nor was ſuch a diviſion as this made, when the Jews returned from Babylon; nor is there any reaſon to expect the like, when they ſhall be converted in the latter day; nor is it meant typically of the heavenly inheritance, which ſaints obtain in Chriſt by lot, Eph. i. 11. of which the earthly Canaan was a type; tho' ſome in this way interpret it: but ſince the whole viſion reſpects the church of Chriſt on earth; it muſt be meant myſtically and ſpiritually of the kingdom of Chriſt, and the ſettlement and eſtabliſhment of it throughout the whole world, according to the allotment and determination of God; and they are a diſtinct and ſpecial people that are admitted into this ſtate; it is by the diſtinguiſhing grace of God that they are taken into the goſpel-church, and have a part and ſhare in all the privileges and immunities of it. Ye ſhall offer an oblation unto the Lord, an holy portion of the land; which ſhould be lifted up as the heave-offering was, and dedicated to the Lord: this deſigns ſuch perſons who are ſeparated from the world, and ſanctified by the Spirit of God, who ſhall be brought by the miniſters of the word to the Lord, as trophies of his efficacious and victorious grace, aſcribing the whole glory of their converſion to him; and theſe ſhall preſent themſelves, ſouls and bodies, a holy, living, and acceptable ſacrifice to him; ſee Iſ. lxvi. 20. Rom. xv. 16. and xii. 1. The length ſhall be the length of five and twenty thouſand reeds, and the breadth ſhall be ten thouſand; the kind of meaſure is not expreſſed in the original, ſo that it is a queſtion whether reeds or cubits are meant; ſome think the latter, and the rather, becauſe mention is made of them, ℣. 2. and 'tis added, and of this meaſure ſhalt thou meaſure the length of five and twenty thouſand; which, if underſtood of cubits, will greatly reduce the length and breadth of this holy portion of the land; wherefore it is beſt to take the largeſt meaſure, ſince that ſeems better to anſwer the deſign of the Holy Ghoſt in this paſſage; and the rather, ſince this meaſure is more proper to meaſure land with, and is that which the meaſurer is ſaid to have in his hand, ch. xl. 5. and beſides, the meaſure of the ſanctuary, ſaid to be five hundred ſquare, ℣. 2. was meaſured with the meaſuring-reed, and not the cubit, ch. xlii. 16—20. and which therefore muſt be ſupplied here; and a meaſuring-reed being ſix cubits, by a cubit and an hand's breadth, ch. xl. 5. makes this portion of land to be more than ſix times larger than if it was ſuppoſed to be meaſured by the cubit; and twenty-five thouſand of this meaſure, according to Cornelius A Lapide, made five hundred miles, which was three times as large as the land of Canaan; that being, as Jerom[a] ſays, an hundred and ſixty miles long, and forty-ſix broad; and is a proof that the land of Canaan literally taken is not here meant; but the whole is deſigned to ſet forth the amplitude and large extent of the church of Chriſt in the world, in the times the viſion refers to. This ſhall be holy in all the borders thereof round about; that is, this portion of land meaſured out, and diſtinguiſhed from the reſt: holineſs of heart and life ſhall appear in all the ſubjects of Chriſt's kingdom, and members of his church, which becomes his houſe for ever.

℣. 2. Of this there ſhall be for the ſanctuary, &c.] Or temple, the houſe before deſcribed in the preceding chapters: five hundred in length, and five hundred in breadth, ſquare round about; that is, five hundred reeds ſquare, as is manifeſt from ch. xlii. 16—20. and this denotes the largeneſs, perfection, and ſtability of the church of Chriſt, which the ſanctuary was a type of: and fifty cubits round about for the ſuburbs thereof; which were a void place of fifty cubits round about the ſanctuary, meaſuring from the wall to that; this was done in reverence to the holy place, and to ſhew that we ſhould not ruſh haſtily into the houſe of God, and church of Chriſt, but firſt paſs thro' the ſuburbs or void place. Cubits being here mentioned ſhew, that reeds are to be undeſtood where the kind of meaſure is not expreſſed.

℣. 3. And of this meaſure ſhalt thou meaſure the length of five and twenty thouſand, and the breadth of ten thouſand, &c.] Not that the ſenſe is, that of and according to the cubit-meaſure laſt mentioned, this length and this breadth ſhould be meaſured; but after this meaſure, as Starckius renders it, and as the particle is rendered, Dan. xi. 23. ſee alſo Neh. xiii. 21. and which Sanctius mentions; and Jerom ſeems to have underſtood it in this light: and the ſenſe is, that after he had finiſhed the meaſure of five hundred reeds ſquare, and fifty cubits round, he ſhould proceed to meaſure the reſt of the twenty-five thouſand in length, and ten thouſand in breadth: and in it ſhall be the ſanctuary, and the moſt holy place; that is, in the midſt of this portion of land, conſiſting of the above meaſures, ſhould be the holy place, and the holy of holies; this is but a further explanation of the two preceding verſes.

℣. 4.

---

[a] Ad Dardanum, tom. iii. fol. 21. I. K.

S

ỹ. 4. The holy portion of the land ſhall be for the prieſts, the miniſters of the ſanctuary, &c.] That is, the reſt of it, which is not for the ſanctuary, ſhall be for the uſe of the prieſts that miniſter in holy things in the ſanctuary; either the miniſters of the goſpel, who ſhall have a ſufficient maintenance from the churches of Chriſt, as the prieſts had under the law: or it may be meant of all the ſaints, who are prieſts unto God, and ſerve and worſhip him in his ſanctuary; who ſhall all be ſatisfied with the goodneſs and fatneſs of his houſe, the word and ordinances, and the bleſſings of grace conveyed by them: which ſhall come near to miniſter unto the Lord; theſe ſons of Zadok, theſe faithful ones, in the worſt of times; ſee ch. xliv. 15, 16. and xlviii. 10, 11: and it ſhall be a place for their houſes; in this large ſpot ſhall be many congregated churches, houſes of the living God, where his prieſts and people dwell, and will be ſerving and praiſing him: and an holy place for the ſanctuary; which may denote the church of God in general, as houſes may do particular churches.

ỹ. 5. And the five and twenty thouſand of length, and ten thouſand of breadth, &c.] This ſeems to be another portion of the land, diſtinct from the former, tho' of the ſame meaſure; ſee ch. xlviii. 13: ſhall alſo the Levites, the miniſters of the houſe have for themſelves; ſeparate from the prieſts, to whom they miniſtered, and were as numerous, or more numerous than they; this is ſtill deſigned to ſet forth the largeneſs of the church, and the great numbers of its members, who will all be accommodated and ſupplied with good things: for a poſſeſſion for twenty chambers; which ſome underſtand of twenty rows of chambers; by which may be meant particular congregated churches, as we have ſeen all along in this viſion, erected for the better uſe and conveniency of the ſaints in all places and parts of the world, where they are called.

ỹ. 6. And ye ſhall appoint the poſſeſſion of the city, &c.] Which is ſomething diſtinct from the houſe or temple, which was as the frame of a city, being ſo large, and conſiſting of ſo many parts, ch. xl. 2. and ſeems alſo different from the city in ch. xlviii. 30, 35. the meaſures of the one and of the other not agreeing. Starckius thinks that this city prefigures the academies that ſhould be among chriſtians, in which the prieſts or miniſters of the word ſhould teach thoſe that came out of all parts unto them; but I am rather of opinion, that the civil ſtate of the people of God is here meant, as it will be in the ſpiritual reign of Chriſt; when all civil power and authority will not as yet be put down, only it will come into the hands of the ſaints, and be adminiſtred by chriſtian kings and princes. Five thouſand broad, and five and twenty thouſand long, over-againſt the oblation of the holy portion; five thouſand reeds in breadth are allowed leſs for the civil than the church-ſtate; and tho' they are contiguous, and there is a connexion between them, yet are ſeparate from each other; the material temple was in the city of Jeruſalem, but the holy portion, in which the ſanctuary ſhall be, is without the city, and the city over-againſt that; hence John ſeems to have borrowed his idea and language, I ſaw no temple therein, Rev. xxi. 22. tho' ſpeaking of another city: the church and the world ſhall be no more mixed together; Chriſt's kingdom is not of this world, nor to be fixed on a civil eſtabliſhment: it ſhall be for the whole houſe of Iſrael; they ſhall all be under one and the ſame form of government; I don't ſay they ſhall be all under one temporal king or prince; but all chriſtian kings and princes ſhall exerciſe the ſame kind of rule and government; ſo that as their church-ſtate will be uniform, their civil ſtate or polity will be alike.

ỹ. 7. And a portion ſhall be for the prince, &c.] Meaning not the civil magiſtrate; tho' he ought to be ſupported in his dignity and authority, and in ſuch manner that he may be under no temptation to oppreſs his ſubjects; and who ought to be, and at this time will be, the protector of the Lord's people, both in their civil and church-ſtate; but the prince Meſſiah, of whom ſee ch. xliv. 3. to whom God will divide a portion with the great; Jacob ſhall be his portion, the heathen his inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth his poſſeſſion, Iſ. liii. 12. Deut. xxxii. 9. Pſ. ii. 8, 9: on the one ſide, and on the other ſide of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the poſſeſſion of the city; on each ſide, both of the holy portion, in which are the ſanctuary, the houſes of the prieſts, and the chambers of the Levites, and alſo of the city for the houſe of Iſrael; ſo that his portion will lie, or he be placed on each ſide, both of the church-ſtate and civil ſtate of the Lord's people, and ſo be the protector of both; he will be a wall of fire round about them, a covert and an hiding place for them; he will be near them, and they to him; he'll be on every ſide of them, and preſerve them from perſecuting enemies, and falſe teachers; they ſhall enjoy his word, his ordinances, and goſpel-miniſters, and be kept in the utmoſt peace and proſperity of all kinds; he'll protect and defend them, both in their civil and religious liberties, and none ſhall make them afraid. Before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the poſſeſſion of the city; or rather, over-againſt them [y], as it is rendered, ch. xli. 15. ſo as the poſſeſſion of the city was over-againſt the holy portion, the portion of the prince was to be over-againſt them both: from the weſt ſide weſtward, and from the eaſt ſide eaſtward; which explains on which ſides of them it lay: and the length ſhall be over-againſt one of the portions; that is, againſt every one of the portions: from the weſt border unto the eaſt border; now as there is no meaſure given to the portion of the prince, but the whole ſpace eaſtward and weſtward is left for it, it ſhows the large extent of Chriſt's kingdom; that his dominion ſhall be from ſea to ſea, and from the river to the ends of the earth; his goſpel ſhall be preached every where; the Spirit ſhall be poured down upon all fleſh to make it ſucceſsful; multitudes ſhall be every where converted, and churches ſet up in all places; the kingdoms of the world will become Chriſt's, even all the pagan, papal, and Mahometan nations; Chriſt will be king over all the earth, and his name ſhall be one; there will be but one religion every where, Pſ. lxxii. 8. Zech. xiv. 8, 9. Rev. xi. 15. Some of the Jewiſh writers interpret this of the king Meſſiah, to whom they ſuppoſe is here allotted the thirteenth part of the land: ſo Kimchi ſays, "to Iſrael belong twelve parts or portions, and to the prince the thirteenth part; the portion of the prince is as the portion of one of the tribes in length and in breadth, excepting that within the inheritance of the prince ſhould be an oblation," as in ỹ. 13. and Maimonides [x] ſays, "the king Meſſiah takes out of all lands, ſubdued by the Iſraelites, one

---

[y] אל פני contra faciem, Vulg. Lat.

[x] Hilchot Melachim, c. 4. §. 8.

"part out of thirteen; and this thing is a ſtatute "for him and his ſons for ever;" which ſeems plainly to refer to this paſſage in Ezekiel; though there are ſome who underſtand him of any anointed king of Iſrael, as being his right: but the learned Selden[y] is of opinion, that he is ſpeaking of the king Meſſiah, and has reſpect to this diſtribution; and rightly obſerves from the ſame author[z], that all that was ſubdued by him was his own, and he could diſpoſe of it at his pleaſure to his ſervants and ſoldiers.

℣. 8. In the land ſhall be his poſſeſſion in Iſrael, &c.] Or, as for the land, it ſhall be his for a poſſeſſion in Iſrael[a]; the people of the land ſhall be a people for poſſeſſion, as in 1 Pet. ii. 9. or a peculiar people of his throughout all Iſrael; all the ſpiritual Iſrael, whether Jew or Gentile, ſhall be Chriſt's poſſeſſion and inheritance: and my princes ſhall no more oppreſs my people; neither eccleſiaſtical princes, as the ſcribes and phariſees formerly, nor civil magiſtrates; not the one with falſe doctrines, carnal rites and ceremonies; nor the other with heavy taxes, and rigorous exactions: and the reſt of the land ſhall they give to the houſe of Iſrael, according to their tribes; the ſpiritual and myſtical Iſrael, Jews and Gentiles, who ſhall now inherit the earth, and poſſeſs all temporal good things, as well as ſpiritual ones.

℣. 9. Thus ſaith the Lord, let it ſuffice you, O princes of Iſrael, &c.] Chriſtian kings and princes, for ſuch there ſhall be in thoſe times; and who will have large and ample ſalaries provided for them, as they ſhould have to ſupport their dignity; and with which they ſhould be content, as they will be, and not encroach upon the properties of their ſubjects: remove violence and ſpoil; from your adminiſtration; the ſenſe is, do not uſe violence, and exerciſe rapine and ſpoil, let theſe be far from you; ſeize not on the goods of your ſubjects, or ſpoil them of them by heavy taxes and impoſitions, or by vexatious law-ſuits and unjuſt ſentences: and execute judgment and juſtice; between men; let every one enjoy his own property; and when any matter of controverſy ariſes about it, fairly hear and examine the caſe, and do juſtice: take away your exactions from my people, ſaith the Lord; ſuch as had been exacted of them in former times by tyrannical and unjuſt princes: or, your expulſions[b]; driving them from their houſes, eſtates, fields, and vineyards; either by taking them away from them, and annexing them to their own, as Ahab did; or by levying ſuch taxes upon them they could not pay, and ſo were obliged to leave their inheritances and poſſeſſions. This, and ſome following verſes, contain rules for regulating the civil ſtate of the people of God in the latter day; which did not take place upon the Jews return from Babylon, as appears from Neh. v. 15. but will be ſtrictly obſerved by chriſtian princes in the latter day-glory; ſee Iſ. lx. 17, 18.

℣. 10. Ye ſhall have juſt balances, &c.] That is, take care that true weights and juſt meaſures be uſed in trade and commerce, that ſo one man may not impoſe upon and cheat another; which is the buſineſs of the civil magiſtrate to look after: and a juſt ephah, and a juſt bath; and not make the ephah ſmall, and the ſhekel great, and falſifying the balances by deceit, as ſome did, Amos viii. 5. the ephah was a meaſure for dry things, as wheat, barley, &c. and the bath for liquid things, as wine, oil, &c. as Jarchi and Kimchi obſerve; ſee Lev. xix. 35, 36.

℣. 11. The ephah and the bath ſhall be of one meaſure, &c.] The one held as much of dry things, as the other of liquor; which, according to Bp. Cumberland, were ſeven wine gallons, four pints, and a little more: that the bath may contain the tenth part of an homer, and the ephah the tenth part of an homer; this homer muſt be carefully diſtinguiſhed from another meaſure called omer, written without an h, which was but the tenth part of an ephah, Exod. xvi. 36: the meaſure thereof ſhall be after the homer; as the homer was, ſo ſhould the ephah and bath be, juſt the tenth part of it.

℣. 12. And the ſhekel ſhall be twenty gerahs, &c.] This is a rule for money or coin; the ſhekel was a ſilver coin, and is generally reckoned about the value of two ſhillings and ſix-pence of our money, ſo a gerah about three half-pennies: Bp. Cumberland reckons the ſhekel more exactly at two ſhillings and four pence farthing, and a little more, and the gerah at eleven grains of ſilver; ſee Lev. xxvii. 25: twenty ſhekels, five and twenty ſhekels, fifteen ſhekels ſhall be your maneh; theſe were ſeveral pieces of money; one was a twenty ſhekel-piece, which according to the common account was fifty ſhillings of our money; another was a five and twenty ſhekel-piece, which was three pounds, two ſhillings, and ſix-pence; and a third was a fifteen ſhekel-piece, which was one pound, thirteen and ſix-pence; and together made a maneh or pound, which conſiſted of ſixty ſhekels, or ſeven pounds, ten ſhillings; by which the other pieces ſhould be tried, whether they were of juſt weight: the ſenſe of the whole is, that no adulteration of coin ſhould be made, which is very prejudicial in civil affairs.

℣. 13. This is the oblation that ye ſhall offer, &c.] Not at the dedication of the temple, to be built in time to come, as Kimchi thinks; nor for the daily ſacrifices, as others; but for the maintenance of the prieſts, that is, the miniſters of the goſpel; for here begin the rules for the right ordering of eccleſiaſtical affairs of thoſe times: the ſixth part of an ephah of an homer of wheat, and ye ſhall give the ſixth part of an ephah of an homer of barley; this confirms that an ephah was for dry meaſure, of wheat and barley; and as it was the tenth part of an homer, a ſixtieth part of an homer of wheat and barley was to be given for this ſervice; that is, if a man had an homer of wheat or of barley, he was to give a ſixtieth part of it for the uſe of the miniſters of the Lord: the meaning is, that the people ſhould give freely and liberally, according to their ſubſtance, for their ſupport and maintenance.

℣. 14. Concerning the ordinance of oil, the bath of oil, &c.] This ſhews that the bath was for liquid meaſure; and as oil was a part of food with the Jews, as well as uſed in their offerings, a rule is given for the diſtribution of that to the Lord's miniſters, that they may have every thing convenient for them: ye ſhall offer the tenth part of a bath out of a cor; which was the ſame meaſure with the homer, only another name for it, as follows: which is an homer of ten baths, for ten baths are an homer; ſo that if a man had an homer or ten baths of oil, he was to give a hundredth part of it for the uſe of the prieſts, and Levites, or miniſters of the word; a greater portion of wheat or barley is given than of oil, becauſe there is a greater expence in families of the one than of the other.

---

[y] De jure naturæ & gentium, l. 6. c. 16.

[z] Maimon. ib. §. 10.

[a] לארץ יהיה לו לאחוזה de terra, vel quod attinet ad terram, ſive terræ (illud) erit in poſſeſſionem in Iſrael, Starckius.

[b] גרושתיכם depulſiones veſtras, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus; expulſiones veſtras, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 15. And one lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, &c.] As proviſion is before made for bread and oil, ſo here for meat for the ſervants of the Lord: if a man had two hundred lambs in his flock, one of them was to be given to them; it may be obſerved, that this plainly refers to times when the Moſaic diſpenſation ſhould be abrogated; not tithes of all things are to be given to the prieſts, as heretofore; only the ſixtieth part of wheat and barley, the hundredth part of oil, and but one lamb of two hundred; and which denotes the moderate maintenance of goſpel-miniſters, with which they ſhould be contented, and the people ſhould not grudge to give; nothing extraordinary or extravagant being required of them: this lamb was to be taken out of the fat paſtures of Iſrael; or, out of the watry places[c]; out of thoſe fields which were well watered, and produced good paſture, which fattened the ſheep and lambs that were fed in them; and denotes, that the beſt of the kind is to be given to the Lord, and to his ſervants, or for the ſupport of his intereſt; not the lean and the lame, the halt and the blind, Mal. i. 8, 14: for a meat-offering, and for a burnt-offering, and for peace-offerings; not that the lamb was given for all theſe; but the wheat and the oil for the meat-offering, and the lamb for the burnt-offering, and peace-offerings. The ſenſe may be, that this proviſion of wheat and barley, oil and lambs, or the ſufficient maintenance ſignified by them, was in the room of the meat-offering, burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings, which fell to the ſhare of the prieſts under the legal diſpenſation: to make reconciliation for them, ſaith the Lord God; either to this end, that the miniſters of the goſpel, who have the word of reconciliation committed to them, might chearfully and faithfully diſpenſe it to the people; or that they, by theſe liberal and generous contributions of theirs to the maintenance of them, might teſtify that they have truly by faith received the atonement by the ſacrifice of Chriſt.

℣. 16. All the people of the land ſhall give this oblation, &c.] None ſhall be exempted from it; all according to their capacity and ability ſhall contribute to the ſupport of the miniſtry, and the ſervice of religion: for the prince in Iſrael; not the high-prieſt, nor the civil magiſtrate, but the prince Meſſiah: or rather, to the prince in Iſrael[d]; what the people ſhall do in this way, they ſhall do it as to the Lord, freely and cordially, and for his honour and glory; and he will take it as done to himſelf; ſee Matt. x. 41, 42.

℣. 17. And it ſhall be the princes part to give burnt-offerings, &c.] Or, upon the prince ſhall be the burnt-offerings[e]; it ſhall lie upon him to provide them; who is not the high-prieſt, as Jarchi; nor the civil magiſtrate or king, as Menachem; but Chriſt, who is both prince and prieſt; and whoſe ſacrifice of himſelf is deſigned by theſe, and the other ſacrifices after-mentioned, of which the ſacrifices were all typical; tho' he is but one, they many, his anſwers to them all, and is one for all; and tho' his is but once offered up, they often, becauſe of the fulneſs of efficacy in the one, and the want of it in the other; and tho' in itſelf infinitely ſuperior to theſe. Of the burnt-offerings, and of their being typical of Chriſt, ſee the note on ch. xl. 39: and meat-offerings, and drink-offerings; the meat-offerings, which were rather bread-offerings, were made of fine flour, with oil poured, and frankincenſe put thereon, Lev. ii. 1. and were typical of Chriſt, compared to a corn of wheat dying in the earth, and bringing forth fruit, John xii. 24. and to wheat as bruiſed and ground into fine flour, kneaded and baked, which may denote his various ſufferings, and ſo made bread of; he being the true and living bread, which gives life to men. The oil poured upon this offering, may ſignify the grace of the Spirit without meaſure on Chriſt; and the frankincenſe, how ſavoury and acceptable he is to his people. The drink-offering was of wine, which went along with other ſacrifices, and was very acceptable to God; and may denote the blood of Chriſt, which is drink indeed; and his love expreſſed in ſhedding it, which is better than the choiceſt wine; both theſe are held forth, Chriſt's fleſh, which is meat, and his blood, which is drink, in the ordinance of the ſupper, adminiſtered by his prieſts, whom he furniſhes with ſuch offerings to ſet before his ſaints: in the feaſts, and in the new moons, and in the ſabbaths, and in all ſolemnities of the houſe of Iſrael; in the feaſts of the paſſover, tabernacle and pentecoſt, which were all figures of Chriſt; of his being the paſſover ſacrificed for us, of his tabernacling in our nature, and of the effuſion of his Spirit; and the new moons, and ſabbaths, and ſolemn days, are only Old Teſtament-phraſes to expreſs the times of New Teſtament-worſhip; ſee Iſ. lxvi. 23. as monthly days for the adminiſtration of the ordinance of the ſupper, and the Lord's-day for the preaching of the word, and other parts of public worſhip; in all which the ſacrifice of Chriſt, his blood, righteouſneſs and ſatisfaction, make a principal part: he ſhall prepare the ſin-offering; which alſo was a type of Chriſt; of which ſee the note on ch. xl. 39. and this, with the meat-offering, and the burnt-offering, of which before, were to be prepared by the prince himſelf, or our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and alſo the peace offerings, or thank-offerings[f]; his own thank-offerings for himſelf and his people; ſee John xi. 41. Matt. xi. 25, 26. and the thank-offerings of them, or their ſacrifices of praiſe, which become acceptable thro' him, Heb. xiii. 15. 1 Pet. ii. 5, and even himſelf, for whom the ſaints offer thanks to God, 2 Cor. ix. 15. Eph. i. 3. and v. 20. and as the end of all the legal ſacrifices was to make reconciliation for the houſe of Iſrael; ſo this is the end and uſe of the ſacrifice of Chriſt, typified by them, to make peace for the Iſrael of God; which could not be made by them, by their obedience, repentance or faith; and yet was neceſſary to their happineſs, to their communion with God, and enjoyment of him; this Chriſt has made by his obedience, ſufferings and death, whereby he has fulfilled the law, ſatisfied juſtice, and made atonement for ſin: this is all at his expence, and is meant by his preparing theſe offerings; which denotes his ready and chearful engagement to become a ſacrifice; his voluntary offering up himſelf unto God, or giving himſelf an offering and a ſacrifice unto him; and alſo his furniſhing his miniſters with proper matter for their miniſtrations in all the ſolemn times and ſeaſons thereof, which is the doctrine of his ſacrifice and ſatisfaction, or ſalvation by a crucified Chriſt; and ſo as the people are to offer to their maintenance, Chriſt the prince takes care to furniſh them for their miniſtry.

---

[c] ממשקה de irriguo, Montanus, Vatablus; ex irriguis paſcuis, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Polanus.

[d] לנשיא principi, Caſtalio, Cocceius, Starckius; ſo Abendana.

[e] ועל הנשיא יהיה העולות & ſuper principem erunt holocauſta, Vulg. Lat. Starckius; nam principi incumbet dare holocauſta, Junius & Tremellius.

[f] את השלמים eucharistica, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus, Piſcator.

℣. 18. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Here begins the account of the times and ſeaſons in which the above ſacrifices ſhould be prepared and offered; or that which was ſignified by them be held forth in the miniſtry of the word to the faith of God's people: in the firſt month, in the firſt day of the month; the month Niſan, as Kimchi obſerves, who adds, "which is the month of redemption, in "which Iſrael were redeemed out of Egypt, and "in which they ſhall be redeemed in time to "come:" this month anſwers to part of our March, and part of April; it was the firſt month in the year with the Jews for their eccleſiaſtical affairs; ſo that the firſt day of this month was new-year's-day: thou ſhalt take a young bullock without blemiſh, and cleanſe the ſanctuary; or, make a ſin-offering for it[g]; here the Jews are puzzled; ſince, according to the law of Moſes, in the beginnings of their months, they were to offer a burnt-offering of two young bullocks and a ram, &c. Numb. xxviii. 11. whereas here only one bullock, and that a ſin-offering; wherefore R. Jochanan and R. Judah ſay, this muſt be left till Elias comes to explain it; and as much at a loſs are they how to account for it, that Ezekiel ſhould do this, whom they ſuppoſe to be the perſon ſpoken to; and therefore imagine this will be done by him after the reſurrection, not being able to ſee that this ſhews the abrogation of the law of Moſes; and that not the prophet Ezekiel, but Chriſt the prince and prieſt, is here addreſſed; and whoſe ſacrifice is deſigned by the young bullock without blemiſh; a type of him both in his ſtrength and purity; and by which his ſanctuary, his church and people, have all their ſins expiated; and particularly the ſins of the year paſt, this being repreſented as done on new-year's-day, which the annual atonement prefigured.

℣. 19. And the prieſt ſhall take of the blood of the ſin-offering, &c.] An emblem of the blood of Chriſt, who was made ſin for his people, and an offering for their ſin; and which blood cleanſes from all ſin: and put it upon the poſts of the houſe; of the houſe of God, the ſanctuary or temple; upon every one of the poſts of it, which ſtood at the entrance into it. The Targum is, "upon the "threſhold of the houſe:" and upon the four corners of the ſettle of the altar; or four horns of it; ſee ch. xliii. 14, 15: and upon the poſts of the gate of the inner court; that is, of the temple: this is alſo a new rule or law about putting the blood of the ſacrifice into theſe ſeveral places, of which nothing is ſaid in the law of Moſes; and ſhews that admiſſion into the church of God, and the right participation of Chriſt, the altar, and the bleſſings of his grace, as well as entrance into heaven itſelf, are all thro' the blood of Chriſt.

℣. 20. And ſo thou ſhalt do the ſeventh day of the month, &c.] Of the firſt month Niſan; here's another new rule or law, as Kimchi owns, of which no mention is made in the law of Moſes: for every one that erreth, and for him that is ſimple: ſo ſhall ye reconcile the houſe; or, expiate it[h]; make atonement for it; that is, for the houſe of God, the whole church, all his people; particularly for fallen believers, who have gone aſtray, either in principle or practice; thro' ignorance and ſimplicity, thro' the prevalence of corruption, the temptations of ſatan, and the ſnares of this world; but are recovered again, and brought to repentance; to whom the doctrines of peace and reconciliation, of free and full pardon by the blood of Chriſt, and of atonement of all their ſins by his ſacrifice, are to be preached for the comfort and refreſhment of their ſouls; and they are to be received into the church, having their conſciences ſprinkled by the blood of Chriſt; the ſame things being done on this day as on the firſt. Jarchi thinks theſe words are to be tranſpoſed thus, and ye ſhall reconcile, or expiate the houſe from the man that erreth, and the ſimple one; quite contrary to the deſign of the text, which directs to the reception, and not the excluſion of ſuch perſons.

℣. 21. In the firſt month, in the fourteenth day of the month, &c.] Of the month Niſan, that day fortnight from the cleanſing of the ſanctuary; and that day week from the expiation of the houſe, and the recovery and reception of backſliders: ye ſhall have the paſſover; Chriſt the paſſover ſacrificed for us; held forth in the miniſtry of the word, and in the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper; for the paſſover was a type of Chriſt: his purity and ſtrength were ſignified by the Lamb without blemiſh, a male of the firſt year; his ſeparation to his office, his death, and the time of it, by the taking of this Lamb from the flock ſome time before, and by ſlaying it between the two evenings; the manner of feeding on him with fervent faith, and as a whole Saviour, attended with true repentance, and being willing alſo to ſuffer for him, by the Lamb being eat not raw, nor ſodden, but roaſted, and all of it, and with bitter herbs; and the ſecurity of his people by his blood from wrath and ruin, thro' the ſprinkling it upon their conſciences, by the ſprinkling the blood of the paſſover on the lintel and door-poſts of the Iſraelites, which the Lord ſeeing paſſed by, and deſtroyed them not; and the new rules of keeping this paſſover after-obſerved, ſhew that this reſpects not the type, but the antitype: a feaſt of ſeven days; kept a whole week; and indeed Chriſt the paſſover is by faith to be lived upon throughout the week, as well as on Lords-days, and indeed in every week: unleavened bread ſhall be eaten; and not leavened; with reference to which the goſpel-feaſt is to be kept, not with old leaven, with the leaven of malice and wickedneſs, but with the unleavened bread of ſincerity and truth, 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.

℣. 22. And upon that day, &c.] The fourteenth day of the month Niſan; the firſt day of the paſſover, as Kimchi obſerves: ſhall the prince prepare for himſelf, and for all the people of the land, a bullock for a ſin-offering; here every thing again is new, as the above Jewiſh writer obſerves; no one circumſtance according to the law of Moſes; which ſhews that this reſpects goſpel-times; when the law would be null and void, the types and ſhadows gone, and the antitype take place, Chriſt the ſum of all: under the law, every family was to prepare a lamb for themſelves; but here, the prince is to prepare for himſelf, and all the people of the land; by that it was to be a lamb, here a bullock, and that for a ſin-offering; whereas not a bullock, but a goat was uſed for a ſin-offering. Chriſt himſelf is this prince, and who has prepared himſelf a ſacrifice, even for himſelf, his church, which is myſtically himſelf; and to make atonement for all thoſe ſins which he took upon himſelf by imputation, and made his own; even for all his choſen people, and for all their ſins: of his preparing this ſacrifice, both to be offered up, and to be held forth in the miniſtry of the word, ſee the note on ℣. 17. and who is very fitly repreſented by a bullock for his laboriouſneſs and ſtrength, in bearing the ſins of his people, when he became an offering for them.

---

[g] חטאת expiatoque, Piſcator; expiabis, Cocceius, Starckius.

[h] וכפרתם ut expietis, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; et expiabitis, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 23. And ſeven days of the feaſt he ſhall prepare a burnt-offering to the Lord, &c.] Which is as follows; ſeven bullocks, and ſeven rams without blemiſh, daily, the ſeven days; that is, a bullock and a ram for each day: and a kid of the goats daily for a ſin-offering; all which were typical of Chriſt, ſignified by the bullock, for his labour and patience; by the ram, for his ſtrength; and by the kid of the goats, for his likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and having the ſins of his people reckoned to him; which made him of ill-ſavour to the juſtice and holineſs of God, and for which he fell a ſacrifice. This is alſo different from the law of Moſes, which required two young bullocks, one ram, and ſeven lambs, Numb. xxviii. 19. and therefore Jarchi confeſſes he knew not how to make this ſcripture ſtand, or eſtabliſh the ſenſe of it.

℣. 24. And he ſhall prepare a meat-offering of an ephah for a bullock, &c.] Of the meat offering, ſee the note on ℣. 17. this was to conſiſt of an ephah of fine flour; and for every bullock on each of the ſeven days of the paſſover was a meat-offering of ſuch a quantity to be made: and an ephah for a ram; a like quantity of fine flour was to be made into a meat-offering for every ram on the ſame days: and an hin of oil for an ephah; to every ephah of fine flour, was to be allowed an hin of oil, which, according to Bp. Cumberland, was a gallon and two pints, being the ſixth part of an ephah or bath: here alſo, as Kimchi obſerves, will be an innovation in the offerings in future times, whether we will or no, he ſays; and Jarchi confeſſes his ignorance of theſe things; ſince, according to the law, three tenth parts of an ephah of fine flour were only allowed to make a meat-offering for one bullock, and two tenth parts for a ram, Numb. xxviii. 12. this may denote the more abundance of grace, and of the knowledge of Chriſt under the goſpel-diſpenſation, and eſpecially in the latter day-glory.

℣. 25. In the ſeventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, &c.] The month Tiſri, which anſwers to part of our September and October: ſhall he do the like in the feaſt of the ſeven days; the feaſt of tabernacles, which began the fifteenth of Tiſri, and was kept ſeven days; and on the eighth day was a ſolemn aſſembly, which is not here taken notice of: this feaſt was in commemoration of the Jews dwelling in tabernacles in the wilderneſs; and was typical of Chriſt's tabernacling in our nature, or of his incarnation; and which feaſt is to be kept in goſpel-times, and particularly in the latter day, by believing in the incarnate Saviour, and in all the bleſſings flowing from his incarnation; and by attending the goſpel-feaſt, his word and ordinances, which hold him forth as the only Saviour; ſee the note on Zech. xiv. 16. now, the ſame things are to be done at this feaſt, as at the feaſt of the paſſover: according to the ſin-offering, according to the burnt-offering, and according to the meat-offering, and according to the oil; that is, ſo many bullocks and rams for the burnt-offering, and a kid of the goats for the ſin-offering, as before; and the ſame quantity of fine flour and oil for the meat-offering: this alſo is a new thing, as Kimchi obſerves; for, according to the law, the ſacrifices at the feaſt of paſſover, and at the feaſt of tabernacles, were very different; and it might be further obſerved, that no notice is taken of the feaſt of Pentecoſt, or firſt fruits; and the whole confirms what has been already obſerved, that this ſhows the abrogation of the Moſaic œconomy; and that theſe things are to be underſtood in a ſpiritual and evangelic ſenſe.

CHAP. XLVI.

THIS chapter treats of the ſhutting of the eaſtern gate of the inner court on working days, and opening it on ſabbaths and new moons, for the prince and people to worſhip in, ℣. 1, 2, 3. gives a further account of the ſacrifices of both at theſe ſeaſons, and of their different ways of going in and out, ℣. 4—15. delivers ſome rules about the prince's diſpoſing of his gifts to his ſons and ſervants, ℣. 16, 17, 18. and deſcribes the places for the prieſt's baking and boiling the ſacrifices, ℣. 19—24.

℣. 1. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Which is premiſed to raiſe the greater attention to what is about to be ſaid: the gate of the inner court that looketh towards the eaſt; the eaſtern gate of the inner court; the court of the prieſts, where ſtood the altar of burnt-offerings, and where they offered the ſacrifices for atonement; and ſeems, in the myſtical ſenſe, to deſign the miniſtry of the goſpel, which is a miniſtry of reconciliation; which holds forth Chriſt, as the altar ſaints have a right to eat of; and who is the ſacrifice for ſin, and has made reconciliation for it; and where this is preached, he, the angel deſcending from the eaſt, comes; here appears the riſing ſun, the ſun of righteouſneſs, who ariſes on thoſe that fear his name, and love his goſpel, with healing in his wings: this gate ſhall be ſhut the ſix working days; which ſeems to be the ſame with the gate of the outward ſanctuary, ch. xliv. 1, 2. ſaid to be always ſhut, and never opened; but by what follows here, it appears that that muſt be underſtood with ſome exception and limitation: the ſix working days are the ſix days of the week in which men ſhould labour, and do all the work and buſineſs of their callings, that they may thereby provide for themſelves and families, and have wherewith to give to the poor; during which time, the public miniſtry of the word is intermitted, that men may not be taken off of their neceſſary and lawful employments; and that the miniſters of the word may have ſufficient time to prepare in their ſtudies for their miniſterial ſervice: but on the ſabbath it ſhall be opened; by which is meant, not the Jewiſh ſabbath now abrogated in the times this viſion refers to; but the Lord's day, called by this Jewiſh name: and this being oppoſed to the ſix working days, ſhews that it ought to be kept by abſtinence from all civil, corporal and ſervile works, as well as from dead works or ſins, and in the exerciſe of all religious duties, private and public; and particularly in attendance on the miniſtry of the word, the gate now opened; and which is ſometimes expreſſed by opening the door of faith, and is called an open door; and may be ſaid to be ſo when miniſters have an opportunity without, and great freedom within themſelves, to preach it; and when the doors of mens hearts are opened to attend to it, and many ſouls are gathered to Chriſt, and into his churches by it; ſee Acts xiv. 27. 1 Cor. xvi. 9. 2 Cor. ii. 12: and in the day of the new moon it ſhall be opened; on ſtated monthly days, in which the churches of Chriſt meet together for religious ſervice: the new moon, which is an emblem of new light, and an increaſe of it, is very ſuitable to expreſs the goſpel-diſpenſation; in which, as Cocceius obſerves, there are ſome particular ſeaſons that may be called ſo; as the coming of Chriſt into the world; his reſurrection from the dead; the pouring forth of the Spirit on the day of Pentecoſt; the deſtruction of the temple, and temple-ſervice; the peace and proſperity of the chriſtian churches in the times of Conſtantine; the morning-ſtar of the reformation; and the call of God's people out of Babylon at the deſtruction of it; at all which times there has been, or will be, an opening of this eaſtern gate, or a free, public and glorious miniſtration of the goſpel. Some think theſe ſix working days deſign this life, which is the time of working, after which there will be none, but an eternal ſabbath or reſt; and that for the preſent, ſaints live and walk by faith, and not by ſight; divine and heavenly things are greatly ſhut up, and out of ſight; but then it will be new moon, as well as ſabbath, and all things will be ſeen clearly; but the former ſenſe I think is beſt, which yet I leave to the judgment of others. This Kimchi ſays is a new thing, that will be in time to come.

℣. 2. And the prince ſhall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, &c.] That is, by the way of the porch of the eaſtern gate, even the outermoſt gate of the porch; for, as every gate had a porch, ſo every porch had two gates, one at one end, and the other at the other; now this was the outermoſt gate of the porch, which looked to the outward court, and not that which led into the inner: and ſhall ſtand by the poſt of the gate; this denotes the preſence of Chriſt, the prince with his people waiting at wiſdom's gate, and watching at the poſts of her door. The alluſion ſeems to be to the king's pillar in the temple, where he uſed to ſtand, 2 Chron. xxiii. 13. Some underſtand this of Chriſt's incarnation, of his entrance into the world, and his ſtanding before his Father, and praying for his people, as he did in the garden, and a little before his death, recorded John xvii: and the prieſts ſhall prepare his burnt-offerings, and his peace-offerings; that is, ſhall offer them. The meaning is, that the miniſters ſhall preach Chriſt and him crucified, who, by his ſacrifice, has made atonement for ſin, and peace for his people; tho' ſome interpret this of the concern the prieſts had in the crucifixion and death of Chriſt: and he ſhall worſhip at the threſhold of the gate; of the other gate that led into the inner court, and where he could ſee all that was done in it: or bow[1]; which it is obſerved he did, when he fell proſtrate in the garden, and when he expired on the croſs, and was at the threſhold of the gate of heaven launching into eternity: worſhip and adoration, or bowing, may be aſcribed to Chriſt as man; ſee John iv. 22: then ſhall he go forth; out of this world to his Father, and be ſeen no more, until the reſtitution of all things; tho' this and the preceding may be underſtood of Chriſt's myſtical worſhipping; or of his people, who are one with him; and of their departure from public worſhip, when it is over: but the gate ſhall not be ſhut until the evening; of the ſabbath, or new moon; or the evening of the world, the ſecond coming of Chriſt; the goſpel-miniſtry and ordinances will continue till then, and no longer; and this is owing to his powerful and prevalent interceſſion in heaven, whither he is gone; then the door will be ſhut, and not before, Matt. xxv. 10.

℣. 3. Likewiſe the people of the land ſhall worſhip at the door of this gate before the Lord, &c.] Publickly, and in a ſpiritual manner; attending the miniſtration of the word and ordinances with conſtancy and fervency; praying to God, praiſing his name, and hearing his word with attention; and performing all the duties of religious worſhip. The alluſion is to the people of Iſrael meeting at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, Exod. xxix. 42: in the ſabbaths, and in the new moons: at their ſtated weekly and monthly meetings; ſee Iſ. lxvi. 23.

℣. 4. And the burnt-offering the prince ſhall offer unto the Lord in the ſabbath-day, &c.] In the preceding chapter, ℣. 17. it is ſaid to be the prince's part to give and prepare ſacrifices in the feaſts, new moons, ſabbaths, and all ſolemnities; and there follows an account of them, for new-year's-day, and for the feaſts of paſſover and tabernacles; and here an account is given of thoſe for the ſabbaths and new moons; which is very properly reſerved for this place, to follow the account of the opening of the eaſtern gate at thoſe ſeaſons: and the burnt-offering for the ſabbath ſhall be ſix lambs without blemiſh, and a ram without blemiſh; according to the law of Moſes, only two lambs were the burnt-offering for this day, beſides the continual one, Numb. xxviii. 9, 10. here Jarchi confeſſes his ignorance; and Kimchi ſays, it is a new thing; and indeed it is, and is a proof of the ceremonial law being now aboliſhed. Theſe ſeven denote the perfect ſacrifice of Chriſt, by which he has perfected for ever them that are ſanctified, and being without blemiſh, the purity and holineſs of it; and as the people of God on the ſix working days commit much ſin, and contract much guilt, the ſacrifice of Chriſt is ſignified by ſix lambs, which it is neceſſary they ſhould hear of, and it ſhould be ſet before them in the miniſtry of the word on Lord's-days, which is meant by the offering of it; that they may by faith apply it to themſelves, to the removal of ſin from their conſciences, and take the comfort of it; as the one ram may denote the one ſacrifice of Chriſt, tho' typified by many; and who, like the ram, is the leader and guide of the flock: now, more creatures being offered for this burnt-offering than under the law, denotes the clearer knowledge of the ſacrifice of

---

[1] והשתחוה incurvaverit ſe, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; incurvato ſe, Piſcator.

Chriſt under the goſpel, and the more extenſive efficacy of it, to the removal of the guilt of ſin from the Lord's people.

℣. 5. And the meat-offering ſhall be an ephah for a ram, &c.] See the note on ch. xlv. 24: and the meat-offering for the lambs as he ſhall be able to give; or, and the gift of his hand[k]; it was fixed and ſtinted under the law, Numb. xxviii. 9. but now ſhould be free and voluntary, and according to the ability of the giver; that is, the preacher of the word, who officiates for the prince, and in his name, and ſets before the people the meat, or rather bread-offering, Chriſt the bread of life, freely, and according to the ability and meaſure of the gift of grace beſtowed upon him: and an hin of oil to an ephah; which was alſo a larger quantity than under the law; denoting the larger meaſure of the gifts and graces of the Spirit, ſignified by oil, given unto the miniſters of the word, and the people alſo; ſee the note on ch. xlv. 24.

℣. 6. And in the day of the new moon it ſhall be a young bullock without blemiſh, &c.] This is alſo different from the law of Moſes, which required two young bullocks and a ram, and ſeven lambs, Numb. xxviii. 11. whereas here only one bullock: and ſix lambs and a ram, they ſhall be without blemiſh; and here Kimchi acknowledges again, that this is a new thing to be done in future time. Some have obſerved, that the ſeven lambs under the law, ſhewed that perfection might be hoped for and expected; but there being but ſix now, that this is not yet attained, nor will be till the ſaints get to heaven; tho' perfection is come by the prieſthood of Chriſt, whoſe ſacrifice is a perfect and complete one, and by which his people are perfected, and they are complete in him, yet they have not perfection in themſelves.

℣. 7. And he ſhall prepare a meat-offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, &c.] See the note on ch. xlv. 24: and for the lambs, according as his hand ſhall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah; ſee the note on ℣. 5.

℣. 8. And when the prince ſhall enter, he ſhall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, &c.] See the note on ℣. 2: and he ſhall go forth by the way thereof; the ſame way he came in, he ſhall go out; not ſo the people; and to introduce the manner of their going in and out, this is repeated concerning the prince.

℣. 9. But when the people of the land ſhall come before the Lord in the ſolemn feaſts, &c.] To worſhip the Lord, to pray and praiſe; to honour the Lord, and keep the ſolemn feaſt of love, the Lord's ſupper: he that entreth in by the way of the north gate to worſhip, ſhall go out by the way of the ſouth gate; and he that entreth in by the way of the ſouth gate, ſhall go forth by the way of the north gate; that ſo ſuch as were coming in, and going out, might not meet, and ſtop and hinder one another in going out and coming in: no mention is made of entring in by the eaſt gate, which was only for the prince, ch. xliv. 1, 2. and there was no entring in, or going out, on the weſt: he ſhall not return by the way of the gate he came in, but ſhall go forth over-againſt it; ſignifying, that thoſe that come to the houſe of God to worſhip, and join in communion with the ſaints, ſhould not return to their former ways and practices; to their former rites, cuſtoms, and ceremonies in religion, uſed by them; and to their former principles and errors in doctrines; and to their former ſinful courſes of life; but go ſtrait on and thorough-ſtitch with it in their profeſſion of Chriſt and his goſpel, and in the practice of ſpiritual and evangelic worſhip; ſee Luke ix. 62. Heb. x. 38, 39.

℣. 10. And the prince in the midſt of them, &c.] Chriſt in the midſt of his people while worſhipping: this ſituation of him, agrees with all the deſcriptions of him; as the angel in the midſt of the buſh on fire, and not conſumed; as among the myrtle-trees in the bottom; as walking in the midſt of his golden candleſticks; as the tree of life in the midſt of the paradiſe of God; and as king, prieſt, and prophet in his houſe; and with all the declarations and promiſes of his grace; and which is true in fact: and the phraſe is expreſſive of his preſence, not merely of his eſſential, powerful, and providential preſence, common to all, but of his gracious preſence with his people; he is in the midſt of them, to aſſiſt them in every ſervice; to protect them from every enemy; to ſympathize with them in all their troubles; to deliver out of them; to ſupply them with all needful grace; and to rule over them, and defend them: and his being here ſhows, that he is to be ſeen of all, to be come at and enjoyed by them; than which nothing is more deſirable, and nothing more encouraging in the worſhip of God: when they go in, ſhall go in, and when they go forth, ſhall go forth; when they go to the throne of grace, for grace and mercy to help in time of need, he goes with them; their acceſs is thro' him; he introduces their perſons, preſents their petitions, is their advocate and interceſſor for them, and for his ſake they are heard and accepted: when they go into the houſe of God, and to the ordinances of it; when they go in and out to find paſture, he goes in with them, and before them, as the ſhepherd of the flock, and leads them into green paſtures; he teaches them how to go in and out, and to behave themſelves in the church of God; he is their guide, by way of inſtruction, both by his word, and by his Spirit: when they go out from public ſervice to their own houſes, he goes with them, and by his Spirit brings to their remembrance what they have heard; and when they go forth into the world again, and the buſineſs of it, he goes forth with them, to preſerve them from the evil of the world, and to keep them from falling; and when they go forth out of the world at death, he is with them thro' the dark valley; he ſees them ſafe over Jordan's river, and introduces them into the heavenly Canaan, into his kingdom and glory, where they are for ever with him.

℣. 11. And in the feaſts, and in the ſolemnities, &c.] Or, appointed times[l]; for public worſhip, for the miniſtration of the word and ordinances, which are feaſts and ſolemn ſeaſons; ſee the note on ch. xlv. 15. Kimchi obſerves a difference between theſe two; and that tho' all feaſts are called ſolemnities, or fixed ſeaſons, Lev. xxiii. 4. yet there are ſome ſolemnities that are not feaſts, Gen. i. 14. and xviii. 14: the meat-offering ſhall be an ephah to a bullock, and to the lambs, as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah; the ſame to be done on all feaſts and ſolemnities, as on the ſabbath-day; ſee the note on ℣. 5.

℣. 12. Now when the prince ſhall prepare a voluntary burnt-offering, or peace-offerings voluntarily unto the Lord, &c.] That is, on week-days, diſtinct from ſabbath-days, new moons, feaſts, and ſolemnities, of which before; and ſeems to have reſpect to week-day lectures, in diſtinction from the weekly and monthly ſtated times, for the miniſtry of the word, and adminiſtration of the Lord's ſupper; in which lectures, the principal thing inſiſted on, muſt be the atoning ſacrifice of Chriſt, and peace and reconciliation made by his blood; for the goſpel, which is to be preached in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, is the miniſtry of reconciliation, or the word preaching peace by Jeſus Chriſt; and which ſhould at all times be held forth to the faith of God's people; which is meant by the preparation of theſe offerings: and being voluntary ones ſhew, not only that Chriſt's ſacrifice was a willing one, and offered without any reluctance, with all readineſs and chearfulneſs; but alſo that week-day lectures are voluntary things, which men are not under neceſſary obligation to attend unto, either miniſters or people, but is a matter of free choice, as their circumſtances will admit; and yet are acceptable to God, and agreeable to the will of Chriſt, the prince, ſaid to prepare theſe free-will offerings: one ſhall then open him the gate that looketh toward the eaſt; the place where he ſtood and worſhipped on the ſabbath day; on the evening of which it was ſhut, and remained ſo the ſix days of the week, ℣. 1, 2. only when it was the prince's pleaſure to offer a ſacrifice, or to have the word preached, it was opened by one of the porters of the gates; or there was an open exerciſe of the miniſtry of the word, by one of the preachers of it: and he ſhall prepare his burnt-offerings, and his peace-offerings, as he did on the ſabbath day; the ſame doctrine, reſpecting the ſacrifice and ſatisfaction of Chriſt, muſt be delivered at ſuch times, as on Lord's-days: then he ſhall go forth, and after his going forth, one ſhall ſhut the gate; on the ſabbath day, or the Lord's-day, it was not to be ſhut till the evening, becauſe that day is wholly to be devoted to the ſervice of God; men are not to find their own ways, nor do their own work, nor ſeek their own pleaſure; but on week-days, when the lecture is over, the gate is ſhut immediately, and perſons may return to their worldly buſineſs directly.

---

[k] מתת ידו donum manus ejus, Cocceius, Starckius.

[l] ובמועדים et ſtatis temporibus, Cocceius, Starckius.

℣. 13. Thou ſhalt daily prepare a burnt-offering unto the Lord, &c.] Called the daily ſacrifice, Dan. viii. 11, 12, 13. typical of Chriſt's ſacrifice, which has a continual daily virtue in it, to take away the ſins of his people; and which ought to be looked unto by faith, and pleaded by them for that purpoſe every day, John i. 29: of a lamb of the firſt year without a blemiſh; a type of Chriſt the Lamb of God, without ſpot and blemiſh, ſtrong and able, and ſo fit and proper to be a ſacrifice for the ſins of others: thou ſhalt prepare it every morning; or, morning by morning [m]; this ſeems to be ſaid not to the prince, but rather to the prophet, and indeed to every believer; who ſhould every morning he riſes look to Chriſt as the atoning ſacrifice for ſin, whoſe blood continually cleanſes from it, and who is always in the midſt of the throne as a lamb that had been ſlain, and ever lives to make interceſſion; and as the mercies of the Lord's people are renewed every morning, they ſhould renew their thankfulneſs to God as often, and bring this lamb with them, thro' whoſe ſacrifice, their ſacrifices of praiſe become acceptable. No mention is made of the evening-ſacrifice; ſee Exod. xxix. 38, 39. which ſome think is included in the morning-burnt-offering. Kimchi thinks, that in future time this was not to be offered, only the morning-ſacrifice; but the true reaſon is, Chriſt has appeared once in the evening of the world, and offered up himſelf; yea, it was literally in the evening, or decline of the day, when he ſuffered, or between the two evenings, whereby he anſwered the type of the paſſover-lamb; hence no evening-ſacrifice is mentioned, Chriſt's being offered up.

℣. 14. And thou ſhalt prepare a meat-offering for it every morning, &c.] That is, for the daily burnt-offering, to go along with it; prayer and thankſgiving both for our temporal and ſpiritual food, which ſhould be done every morning: the ſixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil to temper with the fine flour; to mix with it, and moiſten it: under the law, only a tenth part of an ephah of fine flour, and a fourth part of a hin of oil, were ordered to make this meat-offering of, Exod. xxix. 40. wherefore Kimchi obſerves, this is a new thing in time to come: the reaſon of it is this; to ſhew us, that as the bleſſings of grace abound under the goſpel-diſpenſation, we ſhould abound in our thankſgiving to God: a meat-offering continually, by a perpetual ordinance unto the Lord; theſe ſorts of ſacrifices are never to ceaſe; and ſo the Jews [n] themſelves ſay, "in future time, "or in the days of the Meſſiah, all ſacrifices ſhall "ceaſe; but the ſacrifice of praiſe ſhall not "ceaſe."

℣. 15. Thus ſhall they prepare, &c.] This ſhows that not a ſingle perſon is meant in the preceding verſes, but all the Lord's people; who are all prieſts unto God, and who are to offer up daily ſpiritual ſacrifices unto him: the lamb, and the meat-offering, and the oil every morning, for a continual burnt-offering; which is repeated for the confirmation of it, and to excite a careful and conſtant attention to it.

℣. 16. Thus ſaith the Lord God, &c.] Having finiſhed the account of the ſacrifices of the prince and people, the monthly, weekly, and daily ones; here his gifts are treated of, which are two-fold; ſome given to his ſons, others to his ſervants: if the prince give a gift to any of his ſons; Chriſt, the prince, has ſons; he that is the prince of peace is the everlaſting Father; he has children given unto him, whom he preſerves; a ſeed promiſed him in covenant, which ſhall always endure; a family he is maſter of, and cares for; for whoſe ſake he became incarnate, ſuffered, and died: they are ſons by adopting grace, and in their adoption he has a great concern; they are predeſtinated to it by him; they receive it through him; he gives them power to become the ſons of God, and they are manifeſtatively ſo thro' faith in him; they appear to be his ſons, or are evidenced as ſuch by their regeneration, which alſo is of him: it is by his Spirit they are regenerated; it is his grace that is implanted in them; it is he himſelf that is formed in them, and his image that is inſtamped upon them; it is owing to his word and goſpel as the means, and to his reſurrection as the virtual cauſe of it; it is in his church they are born, yea, of her, to whom he ſtands in the relation of an huſband, and ſo they are ſons brought forth to him by her; and theſe are princes by birth, have a free and princely ſpirit, and are brought up and provided for as ſuch: now to theſe Chriſt gives gifts; gifts of ſpecial grace, all ſorts of grace; ſanctifying grace, faith, hope, love, repentance, &c. juſtifying grace, the gift of righteouſneſs; pardoning grace; adopting grace; all ſupplies of grace; ſpiritual ſtrength, peace, joy, and comfort; and perſevering grace, to hold out to the end: and he alſo gives glory or eternal life; this is with him, in his hands; he has a power to give it, and he does give it, to all his ſons; all which, being once given, ever continue. The inheritance thereof ſhall be his ſons, it ſhall be their poſſeſſion by inheritance; that is, it ſhall ever remain with them, ſhall never be taken away from them; theſe are gifts and calling without repentance, irreverſible bleſſings, which are for ever: ſanctifying grace is a well of living water, ſpringing up unto eternal life; faith, hope, and love, always abide; Chriſt's juſtifying righteouſneſs is an everlaſting one; pardon of ſin is of all ſin, paſt, preſent, and to come, and is never made void or called in; once children of God and always ſuch; and the inheritance of heaven is incorruptible, never-fading, and eternal; and all this flows from the unchangeable love of God and Chriſt, to theſe ſons of the prince.

---

[m] בבקר בבקר in mane, in mane, Montanus, Vatablus.

[n] Vajikra Rabba, §. 9. fol. 153. 1.

℣. 17. But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his ſervants, &c.] Who are not his ſons, but his hired ſervants, and who ſerve him in a mercenary way; ſuch are unregenerate miniſters of the word, who preach Chriſt in pretence, and not in reality, for bye ends, to ſerve themſelves, and not him, or to advance his glory; and all carnal profeſſors, who have only an outſide of religion, a form of godlineſs without the power of it: to theſe Chriſt gives gifts, the gifts of nature, wealth and riches to ſome, to whom he gives not grace; theſe are his left-hand-bleſſings, which are given to the men of the world, who have their portion in this life: to others external means, the word and ordinances, but not internal ſpecial grace; yea, to ſome, gifts for the miniſtry, ſo as to be able to propheſy or preach in his name, which are meant by the talents and pounds in the parable; ſome of which were given to ſlothful and unprofitable ſervants; ſee Matt. vii. 22, 23. and xxv. 14, 15, 30. Then it ſhall be his to the year of liberty; the ſervant's, to whom it is given, as long as the prince pleaſes; who when they make no uſe, or an ill uſe of them, takes them away in life-time, and gives them to thoſe that have more, and employ them to better purpoſe, Zech. xi. 17. Matt. xxv. 28, 29. or however at death, which is a time of liberty from civil bondage, the ſervant is free from his maſter; and when good men are freed from the oppreſſion of others, and from ſin, ſatan, and the world, and are delivered into the glorious liberty of the children of God; this is a year of liberty indeed to them; and then all external gifts to others, as riches, are held no longer; the word and ordinances no more enjoyed; propheſying, ſpeaking with tongues, and all mere natural knowledge, ceaſe, and vaniſh away, 1 Cor. xiii. 8. the alluſion is to the year of jubilee, when liberty was proclaimed throughout the land, and every man returned to his poſſeſſion, and to his family, Lev. xxv. 10. and ſo the Targum, Jarchi, and Kimchi, interpret it of the year of jubilee; a type of the heavenly glory, and of the joy of the Lord, which Chriſt's faithful ſervants enter into; and when there will be a manifeſt difference between them and ſlothful ſervants, and the gifts of the one and of the other, and of their uſe of them, as well as between ſons and ſervants: after it ſhall return to the prince; ſignifying, that ſuch gifts are not durable; they are revertible to the donor of them; who will call theſe ſervants to an account for them at death or judgment, if not in time of life: but his inheritance ſhall be his ſons for them; the prince's inheritance ſhall be theirs; for being ſons they are heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt: or that which is given them for an inheritance ſhall always continue; it ſhall never be taken from them or returned; but it ſhall be their own, for themſelves, and enjoy it for ever; which is a confirmation of what is ſaid in the preceding verſe.

℣. 18. Moreover, the prince ſhall not take of the peoples inheritance by oppreſſion, to thruſt them out of their poſſeſſion, &c.] Chriſt, the prince, will never do this; he will never take any part of his peoples inheritance from them, or thruſt them out of the poſſeſſion of any benefit or bleſſing of grace; they have choſen that good part which ſhall never be taken from them, Luke x. 42. this is ſaid, not as a direction to the prince, as a law enjoined him, or a caution to him againſt oppreſſion; but as expreſſing his clemency, grace, and goodneſs to his ſubjects, and their ſafety and ſecurity under him: but he ſhall give his ſons inheritance out of his own poſſeſſion; whatever Chriſt gives his ſons, whether preſent grace, or future glory, it is out of his own poſſeſſion; for all that the Father has are his; all the bleſſings of goodneſs are with him; all the fulneſs of grace is in him; the eternal inheritance is reſerved with him in heaven; and it is all his own, he gives, and not another's: that my people be not ſcattered every man from his poſſeſſion; or, that therefore my people may not be ſcattered[o] every man from his poſſeſſion; becauſe what is given them, and they are in poſſeſſion of, was Chriſt's own, and not another's; and which he had a right to diſpoſe of; and therefore they need not fear being diſpoſſeſſed by another claimant.

℣. 19. After he brought me through the entry, which was at the ſide of the gate, &c.] The north gate of the inner court, where the prophet was laſt, ch. xliv. 4. thro' an entry, by the ſide of that, he was brought by the man his guide: into the holy chambers of the prieſts, ſee ch. xlii. 13: and behold there was a place in the two ſides weſtward; or, on their ſides weſtward[p]; on the weſt ſide of the chambers; the Targum is, at the weſt end of them: the uſe of this place follows, ℣. 20. Then ſaid he unto me, &c.] Declaring what this place was, and what it was for: this is the place where the prieſts ſhall boil the treſpaſs-offering, and the ſin-offering; this was the prieſts kitchen, in which they prepared the ſacrifices that were to be eaten; and which were typical of Chriſt, who was made ſin, and became a ſacrifice for the ſins of his people, whether preſumptuous ones, or ſins of ignorance; the doctrine of whoſe ſacrifice and ſatisfaction, is a principal part of the goſpel-miniſtry; and which ſhould be delivered, not in a raw, crude, and indigeſted manner; but the ſcriptures ſhould be diligently ſearched into, to get a clear and diſtinct underſtanding of it; and theſe ſhould be conſtantly meditated on, and thoroughly ſtudied: miniſters ſhould examine their doctrine by the word of God before they deliver it; and take heed unto it that it is right, according to the oracles of God, and the proportion of faith; and take care to deliver it in the beſt manner, not in a cold, lukewarm way, but with fervency of Spirit;

---

[o] למען אשר לא יפצו עמי ideo ne diſpergantur populus meus, Starckius.

[p] בירכתם in lateribus ejus vel eorum, in extremo, Starckius.

all which may be meant by the boiling of theſe ſacrifices: it ſeems to deſign the laborious and diligent employ of goſpel-miniſters in their ſtudies, preparatory to their public work in the houſe of God; and ſuggeſts, that they ſhould not come thither unprepared, and deliver out unpremeditated matter; or ſet before the Lord's people indigeſted food; or offer that in the ſanctuary of the Lord, which coſt them no pains or trouble: this place, and ſo the boiling places in ℣. 24. are to be underſtood of the cloſets, ſtudies, and places of retirement, where the miniſters of the word employ their time and thoughts, in preparing for their public miniſtry; for theſe were without the ſanctuary, on the ſide of the prieſts chambers, and in the corners of the outward court: where they ſhall bake the meat-offering; or, bread-offering [q]; made of fine flour and oil; typical of Chriſt the bread of God, the food of believers, who is ſet forth as ſuch to them in the miniſtry of the goſpel: the baking of this, ſignifies the ſame as the boiling of the other before; ſee Lev. ii. 1, 4, 5, 7: that they bear them not out in the utter court, to ſanctify the people; that they might not be carried thro' the outer court, where the common people were; leſt they ſhould think it was lawful for them to eat of them, as Kimchi obſerves, when they belonged to the prieſts only; or leſt they ſhould touch them, and become holy thereby, and ſo for the future be employed in ſacred ſervice, and obliged to quit the duties of their calling, which would introduce confuſion in the commonwealth; ſee Hagg. ii. 12. the Targum is, "leſt they be mixed with the people." The deſign ſeems to be to ſhew, that the doctrine of peace, pardon, atonement, and ſatisfaction for ſin, is only to be preached, as belonging to ſuch that truly repent of ſin, and believe in Chriſt; and particularly that the ordinances of the Lord's ſupper, in which the ſacrifice of Chriſt is held forth and commemorated, is to be adminiſtered, not to men in common, but to holy and regenerate perſons; to do otherwiſe would be to caſt pearls before ſwine, and give that which is holy to dogs.

℣. 21. Then he brought me forth into the utter court, &c.] From the holy chambers of the prieſts, and from viewing the place where they boiled the ſacrifices, and baked the meat-offering: and cauſed me to paſs by the four corners of the court; in each of the four corners of the outward court, there was another court; ſignifying, that there will be courts or churches in the ſeveral parts of the world in the latter day.

℣. 22. In the four corners of the court there were courts joined, &c.] To the ſide-walls of the outward court, which met in right angles: or, were made with chimnies [r], as ſome render it; that the ſmoke of the fire of the kitchens in them, and the ſteam of the boiled fleſh, might aſcend thro' them. So the Jewiſh writers, as Jarchi and Kimchi, from the Miſnah [s], generally interpret the word, that theſe courts were made ſo as to let out the ſmoke, and were not roofed or floored over [t]; and in which treatiſe, and alſo by Maimonides [u], the uſes of them in the ſecond temple are obſerved: for in anſwer to the queſtion, what do they ſerve for? it is ſaid, at the ſouth-eaſt was the chamber of the Nazarites, where they boiled their peace-offerings, and ſhaved their hair, and put them under the pot: at the north-eaſt was the wood-chamber, where the prieſts that had blemiſhes wormed the wood; and any wood, in which a worm was found, was rejected from the altar: at the north-weſt was the chamber of the lepers: of that which was at the ſouth-weſt, ſaith R. Eliezer Ben Jacob, I have forgot (ſome render it, found) of what uſe it is; but Abba Saul ſays, there they put the wine and oil, wherefore it was called the oil-chamber. Theſe four chambers, according to the ſame treatiſe, were in the four corners of the court of the women, and conſiſted of forty cubits long, but were not roofed; and ſo they ſay, they will be in future time, according to this paſſage of ſcripture. Theſe places, as Dr. Lightfoot [w] obſerves, are called by the prophet, courts, and in every one of them places to boil the ſacrifices in; and yet they are allotted to other uſes in the Miſnah, and which ſeem to require that they ſhould be roofed; all which may conſiſt together, he ſays: for grant every one of theſe ſpaces to be built within, with chambers round about, there might be very fair chambers, and yet a good handſome open court in the middle; at either end chambers of ten cubits broad, and yet an open ſpace of twenty cubits between; and on either ſide chambers of ſeven or eight cubits broad, and yet an open ſpace of fourteen or ſixteen cubits between: thus therefore, adds he, it ſeems to be, that there were fair chambers round about, which were roofed over as other buildings; and in the middle was an open court, round about which were boiling ranges, whoſe chimnies went up in the inner walls of the chambers, or the walls to the open place: thus the inner court ſerved for boiling places, and the rooms round about for other uſes; ſee the two following verſes. The meaſure of the courts were, of forty cubits long, and thirty broad; an oblong quadrangle: theſe four corners were of one meaſure; the courts that were in theſe four corners, were of the ſame meaſure, as to length and breadth; denoting the equality of goſpel-churches, being of the ſame faith, order and diſcipline, power and authority.

℣. 23. And there was a row of building round about in them, &c.] Within the courts, not on the outſide of them: theſe were either chambers to eat the ſacrifices in when boiled; or they were ſheds which covered the cooks, and the meat they were boiling, from the rain, &c. the Targum renders it, "and walls were made to them round "about;" to the court: and ſo Jarchi and Kimchi interpret this row of building of a ſtone-wall: round about them four; the four courts at the four corners: and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about; under theſe rows of building, chambers or ſheds; or under theſe ſtone-walls were furnaces, and coppers, and caldrons, ſet on them, for the boiling of the ſacrifices.

℣. 24. Then ſaid he unto me, theſe are the places of them that boil, &c.] The kitchens, in which thoſe whoſe buſineſs it was to boil the ſacrifices did it; and who they were, are next declared: where the miniſters of the houſe ſhall boil the ſacrifice of the people; theſe ſeem to be the Levites, as diſtinct from the prieſts before-mentioned; tho' in this prophecy they are both uſed of the ſame perſons; ſee ch. xliv. 15. the ſacrifice of the people were the peace-offerings, which the people might eat of, but were firſt to be boiled; typical of peace and reconciliation made by Chriſt, held forth in the miniſtry of the word, called from thence the word of reconciliation: of the boiling of ſacrifices, ſee the note on ℣. 20. The Targum is, "the holy ſacrifices of the people;" ſee Rom. xii. 1. Heb. xiii. 16. 1 Pet. ii. 5.

---

[q] המנחה the Minchah.

[r] חצרות קטרות atria caminata, Junius & Tremellius. Polanus, Cocceius; fumoſa, Tigurine verſion, Caſtalio; fumigata, Starckius.

[s] Middot, c. 2. §. 5.

[t] Maimon. & Bartenora in ib.

[u] Hilchot, Beth Habechira. c. 5. §. 8.

[w] Proſpect of the Temple, c. 18. p. 1092, 1093.

CHAP. XLVII.

THIS chapter gives an account of the viſion of the holy waters, and of the borders of the holy land, and the diviſion of it to Iſraelites and ſtrangers. The waters are deſcribed by the original and ſpring of them, ℣. 1, 2. by the progreſs and increaſe of them, ℣. 3, 4, 5. by the healing and quickening nature of them, and the places where they were ſo, and were not, ℣. 8, 9, 10, 11. and by the trees which grew upon the banks of them, ℣. 6, 7, 12. The borders of the holy land are fixed, ℣. 13, 14. the northern border, ℣. 15, 16, 17. the eaſtern border, ℣. 18. the ſouthern, ℣. 19. and the weſtern, ℣. 20. which is to be divided by lot to the tribes of Iſrael, and the ſtrangers that ſojourn among them, ℣. 21, 22, 23.

℣. 1. Afterward he brought me again unto the door of the houſe, &c.] The door of the temple, even of the holy of holies; hither the prophet is ſaid to be brought again, or brought back [x]; for he was laſt in the corners of the outward court, viewing the kitchens or boiling places of the miniſters; but now he was brought back into the inner court, and to the door that led into the holieſt of all: and behold! for it was matter of admiration, as well as of obſervation and attention: waters iſſued out from under the threſhold of the houſe eaſtward; this is a new thing, to which there was nothing like it, either in the firſt or ſecond temple. Ariſteas [y] indeed relates what he himſelf ſaw, "a never failing conflux of water, "as of a large fountain, naturally flowing underneath, and wonderful receptacles under-ground; "to each of which were leaden pipes, thro' which "the waters came in on every ſide, for five furlongs "about the temple, and waſhed away the blood "of the ſacrifices;" and ſo the Talmudiſts [z] ſay, there was an aquæduct from the fountain of Etam, and pipes laid from thence to ſupply the temple with water, for the waſhing and boiling of the ſacrifices, and keeping the temple clean: but theſe waters are quite different; they are ſuch as came out of the temple, and not what were carried by pipes into it; nor were they a common-ſewer to carry off the filth of it, but formed a delightful and uſeful river. The fountain of them is not declared, only where they were firſt ſeen to iſſue out, under the threſhold of the houſe eaſtward; the threſhold of the door of the moſt holy place; ſo that they ſeem to take their riſe from the holy of holies, the ſeat of the divine majeſty, and throne of God, with which agrees Rev. xxii. 1. and ſo the Talmudiſts [a] ſay, that this fountain came firſt from the houſe of the holy of holies, under the threſhold of the door of it, which looked to the eaſt: for the fore-front of the houſe ſtood toward the eaſt; the holy of holies was at the weſt end of the temple; but the front of it, and ſo the door into it, was to the eaſt, and from hence theſe waters flowed: and the waters came down from under, from the right ſide of the houſe; they are ſaid to come down, becauſe the temple was high built upon the top of a mountain; and from under, that is, the threſhold of the door of it; or rather in ſubterraneous paſſages, till they appeared from under that; and this was on the right ſide of the houſe; that is, on the ſouth ſide: for ſuppoſe, a man ſtanding with his face to the eaſt, as the prophet did, when he turned himſelf to ſee which way the waters flowed, having his face to the weſt when he firſt ſaw them come out; the ſouth then muſt be on his right hand, and ſo it follows: at the ſouth ſide of the altar; of the altar of burnt-offerings, which ſtood before the houſe.

℣. 2. Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, &c.] Out of the inward court where he was, by the way of the north gate, the eaſtern gate being ſhut: and led me about the way without unto the utter gate, by the way that looketh eaſtward; and from thence he had him round to the outward eaſtern gate, where he was at firſt, ch. xl. 6. to meet the flow of waters that came thro' the inward and outward courts eaſtward: and behold, there ran out waters on the right ſide; that is, on the ſouth ſide of the gate, in a ſmall quantity, and in a very ſtill and eaſy way, like water out of the mouth of a vial, as the word [b] ſignifies. So Bartenora [c], who underſtands this gate of the water-gate, interprets the right ſide of the ſouth; and obſerves, that the prophet firſt ſaw the waters come out very ſmall, like the horns of a locuſt; but when they came to this gate, they became like water as it flows out of the mouth of a ſmall pitcher: and from this whole account of the waters, 'tis plain they cannot be underſtood literally, but figuratively; and which confirm this to be the ſenſe of the whole viſion. They may be applied unto, and ſerve to illuſtrate, the love of God; the ſecret ſpring of which is in the heart and will of God; ran under ground from all eternity; channelled in Chriſt; broke up, and iſſued forth in the miſſion of him into the world, under the threſhold of him, the door of the church; and in, and by him, the altar, ſacrifice and propitiation; wherein the love of God in an eſpecial manner is manifeſted; and which has its heights and depths, immeaſurable and unfathomable, Eph. iii. 18, 19. Pſ. xlvi. 4. Rev. xxii. 1. theſe waters alſo may be applied to the grace of the Spirit of God in regeneration and converſion; which is compared to water, for its cleanſing, fructifying and refreſhing nature; to waters, for the abundance of it; and this flows from the God of all grace thro' Chriſt, and out of his fulneſs is gradually increaſed, and becomes a well, yea rivers of living water, John vii. 37, 38, 39. but it ſeems beſt to underſtand them of the goſpel, and the doctrines of it; which, like water, cools thoſe who are inflamed with the heat of the fiery law; extinguiſhes the thirſt of ſenſible ſinners, and refreſhes them; cleanſes and purifies their ſouls, which is inſtrumentally done with the waſhing of water by the word; and makes them fruitful and flouriſhing: this is not of men but God; comes from heaven, the holy of holies; and out of the houſe and church of God; from Zion and Jeruſalem, by Chriſt the door, and points to him the way; and is chiefly concerning him, the altar, his ſacrifice and ſatisfaction, peace, atonement and propitiation by him; ſee Iſ. ii. 3. Joel iii. 18. Zech. xiv. 8.

---

[x] וישבני reduxit me, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Cocceius, Starckius.

[y] Hiſt. 70. Interpret. p. 32, 33. Ed. Oxon. 1692.

[z] T. Hieroſ. Yoma, fol. 41. Cippi Hebr. p. 10.

[a] T. Bab. Yoma, fol. 77, 2.

[b] מפכים manabant tanquam e phiala, Junius & Tremellius; phialabant, Junius; deſtillabant, Cocceius, Starckius.

[c] In Miſn. Middot, c. 1. §. 4.

℣. 3. And when the man that had the line in his hand, &c.] The ſame as in ch. xl. 3. and is no other than Chriſt, who appeared in an human form to the prophet; and who hitherto had only made uſe of the meaſuring reed in taking the dimenſions of the houſe, and what appertained to it; but now he uſes the line of flax he had in his hand, in meaſuring the waters as they ran; by which line is meant the ſcriptures, the word of God, by which all doctrines are to be meaſured: this is the rule that both preachers and hearers are to go by; and, as by the direction of this perſon the waters flowed where he would have them, ſo the doctrines of the goſpel are preached by the order of Chriſt where he pleaſes; ſee Luke xxiv. 47. Acts xiii. 46, 47. and xvi. 6, 7, 10. and theſe move in a direct line, as thoſe waters did; error is crooked, and has its windings and turnings; but truth is ſtrait and even; all the words of wiſdom are right, and there is nothing froward, perverſe, or crooked in them, Prov. viii. 8, 9: went forth eaſtward; which was the courſe the waters took by his direction; the goſpel was firſt ſpread in the eaſtern part of the world, in Aſia, where many churches were planted by it; it has been ſince in the ſouth, in Africa, particularly in the times of Auſtin, when theſe waters, the doctrines of grace, flowed largely; and they have been ſince in the north and weſt, in Europe, in our northern climes; all which perhaps may be ſignified by the right-ſide, or ſouth-ſide, by which theſe waters flowed, and by the prophet's going to the north gate, and about, to ſee them; but in the latter day they'll move eaſtward again, when the kings of the eaſt and their kingdoms ſhall become Chriſt's; ſee Rev. xvi. 12. Zech. xiv. 8: he meaſured a thouſand cubits; or, a thouſand by the cubit[d]; the Targum is, "a thouſand cubits by the cubit;" with his line, from the eaſtern gate of the houſe, at the right-ſide of which the waters ran out; this was about half a mile: and he brought me thro' the waters; not the thouſand cubits he had meaſured; but when he came to the end of them, he made the prophet to croſs the waters, to go thro' them acroſs, that he might obſerve the depth of them: and the waters were to the ancles; were ancle-deep, a few inches: or, to the ſoles; for, as R. Jonah thinks, א may be additional; and פס in the Syriac language ſignifies a part of the hand, Dan. v. 5. and applied to the feet, deſigns the ſoles of them; and then the ſenſe is, the waters were ſo ſhallow, that they only covered the ſoles of the feet: this may ſignify the miniſtry of John the Baptiſt, who, tho' greater than the prophets, yet the leaſt in the kingdom of heaven was greater than he; and of the diſciples of Chriſt, before the effuſion of the Spirit: or may deſign the more eaſy doctrines of the goſpel; thoſe waters which Chriſt's lambs may wade in; that milk which new-born babes deſire, and are fed with; thoſe plain truths of the word, which thoſe of the weakeſt capacity are able to take in, receive and embrace; in the knowledge of which, tho' fools, they err not; ſuch as ſalvation by Chriſt alone; juſtification by his righteouſneſs; peace and pardon by his blood; which are ſo plain, as to be underſtood by every truly gracious ſoul, tho' of ever ſo mean a capacity: or it may intimate the ſmall ſpread of the goſpel at firſt in Judea, Samaria, and Galilee.

℣. 4. And again he meaſured a thouſand, and brought me thro' the waters; the waters were to the knees, &c.] The man with his line meaſured another thouſand cubits ſtrait on from the firſt; and then bid the prophet croſs and ford them again, and then they were knee deep: again he meaſured a thouſand, and brought me thro'; the waters were to the loins; a third time he meaſured a thouſand cubits ſtill onward, and ordered the prophet to wade thro' them, when they were riſen ſo high as to reach his loins. The waters to the knees and loins may ſignify the greater knowledge of the goſpel, and the myſteries of it, the apoſtles had after the ſpirit was poured forth; and the greater ſpread of it in the world, among Jews and Gentiles: or elſe may deſign thoſe doctrines of the goſpel, and myſteries of grace, which are more ſublime, and more difficult to underſtand; which require ſome pains to ſearch into, and get the knowledge of; as concerning predeſtination, election, the covenant of grace, and the eternal tranſactions between the Father and the Son, &c. which are meat for ſtrong men, who have their ſenſes exerciſed to diſcern between good and evil.

℣. 5. Afterward he meaſured a thouſand, &c.] A fourth time a thouſand cubits. Some think theſe four meaſurings reſpect the preaching of the goſpel in the four parts of the world; but rather they refer to four remarkable ſeaſons of the miniſtry of it; as in the times of John the Baptiſt, and the diſciples of Chriſt before his death; in the primitive churches of the three firſt centuries; at the time of the reformation; and in the latter day-glory, which is the fourth and laſt meaſuring: and it was a river, that I could not paſs over; the prophet could not ſet his foot on the bottom, and wade thro' it, and croſs over it, as he had done before: for the waters were riſen, waters to ſwim in; not to walk in: a river that could not be paſſed over; by any man, on his feet; only by ſwimming, and perhaps not by that, at leaſt not without difficulty: this may ſignify the large ſpread of the goſpel in the latter day, when the earth ſhall be filled with it, as the waters cover the ſea; and the great light into it, and knowledge of it, that men ſhall then have, Iſ. xi. 9. and xxx. 26. and yet that there are ſome doctrines exceeding deep, out of the reach and penetration of men, called the deep things of God, which human reaſon cannot attain, and where it cannot fix its foot, 1 Cor. ii. 9, 10, 14. and which are only to be reached and embraced in the ſwimming arms of faith; and tho' believed, can't be accounted for, as to the modus of them, and are not to be dived into; ſuch as the Trinity of perſons in the Godhead, and the diſtinct manner of their ſubſiſting in it; the generation of the Son; the proceſſion of the Spirit; the incarnation of Chriſt; the union of the two natures in his perſon; the reſurrection of the dead, &c.

---

[d] אלף באמה mille in cubito, Vatablus, Pagninus, Montanus.

℣. 6. And he ſaid unto me, ſon of man, haſt thou ſeen this? &c.] That is, the man that meaſured the waters ſaid to the prophet, haſt thou carefully obſerved all this? from whence the waters flowed? from what ſmall beginnings they roſe, and gradually increaſed? how they firſt iſſued forth, as out of a vial; and now, in the ſpace of about two or three miles, are become a deep river and impaſſable? it is right and profitable to obſerve the riſe and progreſs of the goſpel; what a ſpread it has had in the world, and what it will have: then he brought me, and cauſed me to return to the brink of the river; there to ſtand and obſerve the nature of the waters, and the courſe of them; the multitude of fiſh in them; and the trees which grew upon the banks of them; of all which ſome account is given in the following verſes.

℣. 7. Now when I had returned, &c.] To the brink of the river: behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees on the one ſide, and on the other; here was a new wonder obſerved, which had not been before; and therefore this note of admiration, behold! is prefixed; on a ſudden ſprung up trees on each ſide of the river of a perfect ſtature, and full of fruit; which the prophet had not ſeen when he went along with the man on the bank of it, as he meaſured the waters; but now being returned, ſees this wonderful ſight; an emblem of true chriſtians, believers, and regenerate perſons, who are trees of righteouſneſs, planted by the river of divine love; watered with the grace of God, and doctrines of the goſpel; whereby they become fruitful in good works, and are to be ſeen wherever the goſpel comes with power and efficacy; ſee Pſ. i. 3. Iſ. lxi. 3. or, an exceeding large tree [e]; ſo John ſaw but one tree, which was on each ſide of the river, which he calls the tree of life, Rev. xxii. 2. but here it ſeems to be put for many, as appears from ℣. 12.

℣. 8. Then ſaid he unto me, &c.] The man that meaſured the waters ſpoke to the prophet again, and ſhewed him the courſe of the waters; the quickening and healing virtue of them, and the multitude of fiſh in them: theſe waters iſſue out toward the eaſt country; the goſpel was firſt preached in the eaſtern parts of the world; ſee the note on ℣. 3. or towards the firſt, or eaſt Galilee [f]; in Galilee Chriſt began to preach, and wrought his firſt miracle; here he called his diſciples, and chiefly converſed; and here he had the greateſt followers, and ſome of the firſt chriſtian churches were formed here after his aſcenſion, Matt. iv. 12, 18, 23. Acts ix. 31: and go down into the deſert; or wilderneſs, the wilderneſs of the people, the Gentiles; to whom the goſpel was carried when rejected by the Jews, and who before were like a deſert, but now became as a fruitful field, Iſ. xxxv. 1, 2. and xlii. 1, 11. The Jews [g] interpret this of the plain, or the ſea of Galilee or Tiberias, at which Chriſt called his diſciples; near to this he delivered his diſcourſes concerning himſelf, the bread of life, and eating his fleſh, and drinking his blood; here he met with his diſciples after his reſurrection, and enjoined Peter to feed his ſheep and lambs; ſee Matt. iv. 18. John vi. 1. and xxi. 1, 15: and go into the ſea; the dead ſea, or ſea of Sodom, the lake Aſphaltites, where nothing is ſaid to live; an emblem of dead ſinners; and may repreſent the worſt of ſinners, as the Sodomites were; and to ſuch the goſpel was ſent, and became effectual to ſalvation: or it may rather deſign the great ocean, and may ſignify the whole world, and all the nations of it, to which the goſpel, by the commiſſion of Chriſt, was to be preached; ſee Dan. vii. 2. Mark xvi. 15. The Targum is, "and "go thro' the ſea into the great ſea;" it may be rendered, and go toward the weſt [h]; the Mediterranean-ſea being to the weſt of Judea, it is often put for the weſt; and ſo the ſenſe may be, that theſe waters ſhould flow eaſt and weſt, as the living waters in Zech. xiv. 8. the ſame with thoſe, are ſaid to do; and all the Jewiſh writers think there is ſuch a diviſion of the waters intended, and that they had two ſtreams or rivers; which may receive ſome confirmation from the next verſe, where the word for rivers is of the dual number, and ſignifies two rivers. The ſenſe of the whole is, that the goſpel ſhould be firſt preached in Judea and Galilee; then among the Gentiles throughout the Roman empire; and in the latter day eſpecially throughout the world, when it ſhall be covered with it, as the waters cover the ſea, Iſ. xi. 9: which being brought forth into the ſea, the waters ſhall be healed; that is, which waters of the river being directed and brought into, either the dead ſea, or the great ocean, the waters of the one, or of the other, were healed; and of bituminous and bitter waters, were made clear, ſweet and wholeſome; and ſignify the change made in ſinful men by means of the goſpel, who are thereby quickened, made partakers of the grace of God, and have their ſins pardoned, which is often meant by healing in ſcripture, Pſ. ciii. 2. Mal. iv. 2. pardon of ſin flows from the love and grace of God; is the great doctrine of the goſpel, and by which the Lord ſpeaks peace and pardon, and communicates healing of all ſpiritual diſeaſes to ſinners ſenſible of them; ſee Pſ. cvii. 20.

℣. 9. And it ſhall come to paſs, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, &c.] That is, every living man; every one that lives naturally or corporally, that lives, moves and has his being in God, as all men have, Acts xvii. 28: whitherſoever the rivers ſhall come, ſhall live; or, the two rivers [i]; the waters divided as before, eaſt and weſt; not the two Teſtaments, Old and New; nor the two ordinances of baptiſm and the Lord's-ſupper; but the goſpel, which, wherever it ſhall come with power, and to whomſoever it ſo comes, they ſhall live ſpiritually; not to whomſoever it is preached, for to ſome it is not profitable; ſee ℣. 11. but is the ſavour of death unto death; but to all to whom it is accompanied by the Spirit of God, it is the ſavour of life unto life; the ſpirit that gives life, and is the means of it: indeed, the love of God is the river of water of life, Rev. xxi. 1. it is the ſpring of ſpiritual life to dead ſinners, and what revives drooping ſaints, quickens their graces, faith, hope and love; enlivens and cheers their ſpirits, and greatly influences true religion and godlineſs, and very much promotes the life and power of it: and ſo the grace of the Spirit is living water, by which dead ſinners are quickened; the work of grace in ſaints is revived, and which always continues and iſſues in eternal life, John iv. 10, 14. but the goſpel and its doctrines are rather intended; which are the means of quickening thoſe who are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; ſerve greatly to invigorate the graces of the Spirit in the hearts of God's people; to influence their lives and converſations; to ſupport them under afflictions, and to nouriſh them up to everlaſting life; and point out the way to eternal life, and give a true account of it. And there ſhall be a very great multitude of fiſh, becauſe theſe waters ſhall come thither; that is, a multitude of fiſh in the dead ſea, where none lived before, and owing to thoſe waters coming thither: it ſignifies the great number of living chriſtians, true believers, who ſhall appear wherever the goſpel is truly, purely, and powerfully preached; of theſe ſee more in the next verſe: for they ſhall be healed; ſee the note on ℣. 8: and every thing ſhall live whither the river cometh; not only ſhall live as before, but continue to live, ſhall never die; their graces ſhall not die, nor ſhall they themſelves die the ſecond death, but ſhall have eternal life; becauſe of the purpoſe of God, who has ordained them to it; and the promiſe of God, who is faithful to it; and becauſe of the ſecurity of their life in Chriſt, to whom they are united; and becauſe of the indwelling of the Spirit of life in them. So the Targum, "they ſhall remain in every place "where the waters of the river come."

---

[e] עץ רב מאד arbor multa admodum, Cocceius, Starckius.

[f] אל הגלילה הקדמונה in Galileam primam, Junius & Tremellius; ad Galileam anteriorem, Cocceius, Piſcator, Starckius; Galileam orientalem, Munſter, ſo ſome in Vatablus, Tigurine verſion; ſo the Targum.

[g] Toſaphta Succa in Jarchi & Kimchi in loc. ſo in Ben Melech.

[h] ובאו הימה.

[i] נחלים duo torrentes, Pagninus, Montanus; geminus torrens, Tigurine verſion, Cocceius; fluvius geminus, Starckius.

℣. 10. And it ſhall come to paſs, &c.] In goſpel-times: what follows had a fulfilment in the firſt times of the goſpel, and will have a greater in the latter times of it: that the fiſhers ſhall ſtand upon it; upon the brink of the river, or the ſhore of the ſea, whoſe waters will be healed by this river running into them. Theſe fiſhers are the apoſtles of Chriſt, who of fiſhermen, were made fiſhers of men by him; to whom he gave a call and a commiſſion, and gifts qualifying them to preach the goſpel; whereby they caught men, and brought them to Chriſt; and ſo were the inſtruments of ſaving them, even of great numbers, both in Judea, and in the Gentile world; of which ſome inſtances of their fiſhing, after their call to the miniſtry, were emblematical; ſee Matt. iv. 18, 19. Luke v. 4—10. John xxi. 3—11. likewiſe all other miniſters of the goſpel are here meant, eſpecially thoſe that will be in the latter day; compared to fiſhers for the meanneſs and contemptibleneſs of their employment in the eyes of the world; for their laboriouſneſs in it, and for their patient waiting for ſucceſs therein; and for the bad weather, ſtorms, and tempeſts they are expoſed unto, the reproach and perſecution of men; and for their being the happy means of drawing ſouls out of the abyſs of ſin and miſery unto Chriſt, for life and ſalvation: and their ſtanding upon the brink of the waters to catch fiſh, may denote their conſtancy in their work; their ſtrict attachment to the doctrines of the goſpel, and their waiting for ſucceſs in it. From Engedi even unto En-Eglaim; two places, which, according to Jerom, lay, the latter one at the entrance of the dead ſea, and the former at the end of it; but Reland[k] obſerves that this could not be, if Joſephus is to be credited, who makes Engedi to be three hundred furlongs from Jeruſalem[l]; therefore could not be far from the beginning of the dead ſea, and not where it ended; ſince the dead ſea, or the lake of Aſphaltites, was in length five hundred and eighty furlongs, and conſequently Engedi muſt be more than ſix or ſeven hundred furlongs from Jeruſalem; but that it was at the beginning of it, is ſtill further manifeſt, from the ſame writer making the lake to be juſt ſuch a number of furlongs from Jeruſalem[m], as he does Engedi; and whereas Engedi was on the weſtern ſhore of the lake, as appears from Pliny[n], it is probable there was another city on the eaſtern ſhore, oppoſite to it, called En-Eglaim; and there was a city on that ſide, the name of which was Agallim, which, according to Euſebius, was eight miles from Areopolis: and ſo it may ſignify the extent of the goſpel-miniſtry, which in the latter day will be from one end of the earth to the other; and which took a large circuit in the times of the apoſtles, and particularly by the apoſtle Paul, Rom. xv. 19. They ſhall be a place to ſpread forth nets; that is, the above-ſaid places ſhall be made uſe of for that purpoſe; which deſign the goſpel, and the miniſtry of it, compared to a net, for its meanneſs in the eſteem of the world; and yet is a piece of curious artifice and wiſdom, even the manifold wiſdom of God, and is contrived for the gathering in of ſinners to Chriſt; and tho' it may be like a net per accidens, the means of troubling the world, and drawing out the corruptions of the men of it; yet its principal deſign, and the uſe that is made of it, is to draw ſouls out of the depths of ſin unto the grace of Chriſt; ſee Matt. xiii. 47, 48. the ſpreading and caſting of nets, deſign the preaching of the goſpel, and the opening and explaining the doctrines of it, which are ſhut up and hidden to men; and to do which requires wiſdom and ſkill, ſtrength, diligence, and patience, and is done at a venture; and ſometimes is caſt where fiſh are, and ſometimes not; but here, and at this time, with great ſucceſs. For their fiſh ſhall be according to their kind, as the fiſh of the great ſea, exceeding many; that is, there ſhall be fiſh of all ſorts, ſmall and great, and in large numbers, as in the great ocean, or as in the Mediterranean ſea. Theſe ſignify regenerated perſons, who are born of water and the Spirit by the word of God, which is their element; they can't live but in theſe waters of the ſanctuary, and where the doctrines of grace are preached. Now many of all nations, and men of all ranks, will be called; kings, princes, nobles, as well as peaſants; men high and low, rich and poor, and multitudes of them, like the fiſhes of the ſea; which will be the caſe, when the Jews will be converted, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles brought in.

℣. 11. But the miry places thereof, and the marſhes thereof, &c.] That is, of the ſea; the waters of which were healed, by the waters of the ſanctuary coming into them: but the ditches and lakes, the miry and marſh ground, ſeparate from the ſea, which lay near it, and upon the borders of it, ſhall not be healed; theſe deſign the reprobate part of the world, obſtinate and perverſe ſinners, that abandon themſelves to their filthy luſts and ſenſual pleaſures; that wallow like ſwine in the mire and dirt of ſin; are wholly immerſed in the things of this world, mind nothing but earth and earthly things, and load themſelves with thick clay; whoſe god is their belly, and who glory in their ſhame: alſo hypocrites and apoſtates may be here meant; who deſpiſing the goſpel, and the doctrines of it, put it away from them, and judge themſelves unworthy of everlaſting life, and ſo receive no benefit by it; but on the contrary it is the ſavour of death unto

---

[k] Paleſtina Illuſtrata, l. 2. p. 449. & l. 3. p. 763.

[l] Antiqu. l. 9. c. 1. §. 2.

[m] Ib. l. 15. c. 6. §. 2.

[n] Nat. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 17.

death unto them; ſee Iſ. vi. 9, 10: they ſhall be given to ſalt; left to the hardneſs of their hearts; given up to the luſts of them; devoted to ruin and deſtruction; and remain barren and unfruitful, as places demoliſhed and ſown with ſalt are; ſee Deut. xxix. 23. Judg. ix. 45. or made an example of, as Lot's wife was; that others may learn wiſdom, and ſhun thoſe things that have been the cauſe of their ruin. The Targum is, "its pools and lakes "ſhall not be healed; they ſhall be for ſalt-pits."

ỳ. 12. And by the river on the banks thereof on this ſide, and on that ſide, &c.] On each ſide of the river, on the banks of it: ſhall grow all trees for meat; ſuch as bear fruit, that may be eat, and is good for food: by theſe trees are meant truly gracious ſouls, converted perſons, real chriſtians, true believers in Chriſt; who like trees have a root, are rooted in the love of God, in the perſon and grace of Chriſt, and have the root of the matter in them, the grace of the bleſſed Spirit; and who alſo is their ſap, of which they are full, and ſo grow in grace, and in the knowledge of Chriſt; grow up in him, and grow upwards and heavenwards in their affections and deſires, and in the exerciſe of faith and hope: they are the trees of the Lord, trees of righteouſneſs, good trees, that bring forth good fruit; and are often in ſcripture compared to trees the moſt excellent, as palm-trees, cedars, olives, myrtles, &c. and wherever the goſpel comes, theſe trees ariſe, and are watered and made fruitful by it; ſometimes in leſſer, and ſometimes in greater numbers, as in the firſt times of the goſpel, and as they will in the latter day; ſee Pſ. xcii. 12. Iſ. lxi. 3: whoſe leaf ſhall not fade; as the leaves of trees in autumn do, and drop off and fall; to which ſome profeſſors of religion are compared, who bear no fruit, only have the leaves of a profeſſion, and this they drop, when any trouble or difficulty ariſes, Jud. ỳ. 12. Matt. xiii. 21. but true believers, as they take up a profeſſion on principles of grace, they hold it faſt without wavering; their root, ſeed, and ſap remain, and ſo never wither and die in their profeſſion; ſee Pſ. i. 3. Jer. xvii. 8: neither ſhall the fruit thereof be conſumed; which are the graces of the Spirit, and good works flowing from them: the graces of the Spirit are abiding ones, as faith, hope, and love; theſe never die, are an incorruptible ſeed, a well of water ſpringing up unto everlaſting life; and good works, which are fruits meet for repentance, and evidences of faith, and by which trees are known to be good, always continue to be wrought by believers, in the ſtrength and grace of Chriſt, from whom they have all their fruits of every kind, Hoſ. xiv. 8. Phil. i. 11: it ſhall bring forth new fruit according to his months; or, firſt fruits [o]; that is, every one of theſe trees, or every true believer, ſhall be continually in the exerciſe of grace, and the performance of duty; they ſhall be conſtant and immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; they ſhall never ceaſe from yielding fruit, or doing good; they ſhall ſtill bring it forth, even in old age; ſee Pſ. xcii. 14. Jer. xvii. 8: becauſe their waters, they iſſued out of the ſanctuary; becauſe the waters, which iſſued out of the ſanctuary, ran by theſe trees, and watered them, and made them fruitful, and therefore called their waters: the fruitfulneſs of theſe trees, true believers, is not owing to themſelves, to their free-will and power; to their own induſtry, diligence, and cultivation; but to the ſupplies of grace they receive by means of the goſpel, and the doctrines of it; which bring forth, or cauſe to bring forth fruit, wherever they come with power, Col. i. 6: and the fruit thereof ſhall be for meat; not for ſaints themſelves, who live not, neither on their graces, nor their works; tho' indeed they do eat the fruits of their doings, Iſ. iii. 10. that is, enjoy good things, conſequent on their works, thro' the free favour and good will of God; but for meat for others; for their fruit, which appears in their words and actions, are very beneficent to others; their fruit is a tree of life, Prov. xi. 30. and their lips feed many, Prov. x. 21. with knowledge and underſtanding; with the goſpel, and the doctrines of it; and with the comfortable experience they have of its truths and promiſes: yea, their fruit are meat and food for Chriſt himſelf; who comes into his garden, and eats his pleaſant fruits, feeds and feaſts, and delights himſelf with his own grace in his people, and the exerciſe of it, Cant. iv. 9, 10, 16. and v. 1: and the leaf thereof for medicine; or, for bruiſes [p]; for the healing of them, which is only done by the blood of Chriſt; who is the only phyſician, the ſun of righteouſneſs, that riſes with healing or pardon in his wings; and the whole language of this paſſage is borrowed from hence by John, and applied to Chriſt the tree of life, Rev. xxii. 2. and the goſpel profeſſed by true believers directs to him for healing, or for the remiſſion of ſin, and is the means of applying it, Pſ. cvii. 20. and a chearful conſtant profeſſion of Chriſt and his goſpel, which is the chriſtian's leaf, does good like a medicine, both to the chriſtian himſelf, and to others; who are animated and encouraged thereby to go on with pleaſure in the ways of God.

ỳ. 13. Thus ſaith the Lord God, this ſhall be the border, &c.] Of the land of Iſrael, as deſcribed in the following verſes; which being different from, and much larger, and more extenſive than it was in the times of Moſes or Joſhua, or than it was either before or after the captivity in Babylon, ſhews, that this muſt be underſtood either of the land of Canaan, as it will be when poſſeſſed and inhabited by the Jews, upon their converſion in the latter day; or rather of the church of Chriſt, which is far greater than it was under the former diſpenſation; and eſpecially it will be ſtill more extenſive hereafter, when Chriſt's kingdom will be from ſea to ſea, and his dominion from the river to the ends of the earth; and from the riſing of the ſun to the ſetting of the ſame, his name ſhall be great among the Gentiles. This ſubject is reaſſumed from ch. xlv. 1—8. after the inſertion of various things of moment and importance there, a reſerve upon the diviſion of the land is made of an holy portion of it, for the ſanctuary; for the prieſts, the miniſters of it; for the Levites, the miniſters of the houſe; and for a poſſeſſion of the city, and of the prince; and the reſt to be given to the houſe of Iſrael, the boundaries of which are here fixed: whereby ye ſhall inherit the land, according to the twelve tribes of Iſrael; by which are meant, not literal Iſrael, or according to the fleſh, theſe being not all Iſrael, or the children of God, and ſo not heirs, and ſhall not inherit; but ſpiritual Iſrael, or the ſpecial people of God, that ſhall dwell in the church, and enjoy all the privileges of it; theſe are the ſealed ones of all the tribes of Iſrael, an equal number out of each tribe; ſee Rev. vii. 4—8. Joſeph ſhall have two portions for his two ſons, Ephraim and Manaſſeh, and in virtue of the birthright which fell to him on the forfeiture of it by Reuben; he was an eminent type of Chriſt, with whom the ſaints are joint-heirs; and who has two portions, one for himſelf as Mediator, and another for them.

---

[o] יבכר afferet primitiva, V. L. Vatablus; primogenita, Starckius. So Ben Melech.

[p] לתרופה ad contritionem, vel ad ſanitatem contritionis, Vatablus; ad fractionem ſanandam, Pagninus. So Ben Melech.

ỳ. 14. And ye ſhall inherit it, one as well as another, &c.] That is, the twelve tribes ſhall equally inherit it; one tribe ſhall not have more, and another leſs, but each alike: this was not the caſe, at the diviſion of the land, in the times of Moſes and Joſhua; for to ſuch tribes as were very numerous, a greater inheritance was given; and to thoſe that were fewer in number, a leſſer inheritance, Numb. xxvi. 54. and xxxiii. 54. and upon the return from the Babyloniſh captivity, as the tribes of Judah and Benjamin were the largeſt, and indeed the only tribes that returned as ſuch, they had the largeſt ſhare of the land; but as this reſpects the goſpel-diſpenſation, it ſignifies, that thoſe who are true Iſraelites indeed, ſhall ſhare in the ſame goſpel-church-ſtate, the privileges and immunities of it alike, with all the bleſſings of grace and eternal glory; they being all one in Chriſt Jeſus, Gal. iii. 28: concerning the which I lifted up my hand to give it unto your fathers; that is, ſwore that he would give unto them the land of Canaan; typical of the goſpel-church-ſtate and the heavenly glory; which are as ſure to all the ſeed, by the word and oath of God, as that was: and this land ſhall fall unto you for inheritance; by lot, by the appointment of God, and a goodly one it is, Pſ. xvi. 6. and xlvii. 4.

ỳ. 15. And this ſhall be the border of the land toward the north ſide, &c.] The deſcription of the borders of the land begins on the north ſide; becauſe the goſpel, and the intereſt of Chriſt, would be, as they now are, chiefly in the northern part of the world, before the latter day-glory takes place, and from thence ſpread into the other parts of it: from the great ſea, the way of Hethlon, as men go to Zedad; the line of this border ſhall begin at the Mediterranean ſea, commonly called the great ſea, and ſo proceed to Hethlon, a city in Syria Damaſcena, and from thence to Zedad; of which ſee Numb. xxxiv. 8. the deſcription is taken all along from the places which were on the border of Canaan, or in countries adjacent to it, which plainly point out the enlargement of it.

ỳ. 16. Hamath, Berothah, Sibraim, &c.] The line of the northern border ſhould be drawn on by Hamath, the ſame with Antiochia in Syria, ſince called Epiphania, as Jerom obſerves, from Antiochus Epiphanes; and go on by Berothah, a city of Hadadezer king of Zobah, 2 Sam. viii. 8. the ſame with the Barothena of Ptolemy[q], placed by him in Syria; and from thence the line would be carried on to Sibraim, a city in Arabia Deſerta: which is between the border of Damaſcus; the chief city in Syria: and the border of Hamath; before-mentioned. Calmet[r] imagines it to be that which Iſhmael Abulfeda calls Hovvarin; which he ſays is a village of the country of Ems or Hamath, to the ſouth-eaſt of the city. Hazar-Hatticon, which is by the coaſt of Hauran; this ſeems to be explanative of Sibraim, which lay between the border of Damaſcus, and the border of Hamath; and therefore is called the middle town or village, as Hazar-Hatticon ſignifies; and lay by the coaſt of Hauran, which Jerom calls a town of Damaſcus, with which it is mentioned, ỳ. 18. from whence the country adjacent is called Auranitis, as this place is here by the Septuagint. The Targum calls Hazar the fiſh-pool of the Agheans; but for what reaſon, and what is meant by it, I know not.

ỳ. 17. And the border from the ſea, ſhall be Hazar-Enan, the border of Damaſcus, &c.] Which was the furthermoſt part and end of the northern border, as fixed by Moſes, Numb. xxxiv. 9: and the north northward, and the border of Hamath; if this is carrying on the border further, it ſeems to be another Hamath, diſtinct from the former, ỳ. 16: and this is the north ſide; of the land, and the deſcription of the northern border of it, from the Mediterranean ſea to Hazar-Enan.

ỳ. 18. And the eaſt ſide ye ſhall meaſure from Hauran, &c.] The line of the eaſtern border of the land ſhall begin at Hauran or Auranitis; ſee ỳ. 16. which lay to the ſouth[s] of Damaſcus: and it follows, and from the land of Iſrael by Jordan, from the border unto the eaſt ſea; and ſo from Damaſcus, the metropolis of Syria; and likewiſe from Gilead, a mountain and country beyond Jordan; and alſo from that part of the land of Iſrael near to Jordan; and ſo from the northern border to the eaſt ſea, or ſea of Galilee or Tiberias: and this is the eaſt ſide; of the land, or the eaſtern border of it, reaching from Hauran to the lake of Geneſaret, or to the ſalt ſea, the ſea of Sodom; ſee Numb. xxxiv. 10, 11, 12.

ỳ. 19. And the ſouth ſide ſouthward from Tamar, &c.] Not Jericho, as the Targum, Jarchi and Kimchi, called by this name from the palm-trees which grew near it; according to Jerom, this is Palmyra, ſo called for the ſame reaſon; but it is rather Engedi, called Hazazon-Tamar, 2 Chron. xx. 2. the line of the ſouthern border began here, and went on, even to the waters of ſtrife in Kadeſh; to the waters of Meribah in Kadeſh; ſo called, from the ſtrivings of the children of Iſrael with the Lord there, Numb. xx. 1, 13: the river to the great ſea; it proceeded by the river of Egypt, the river Sihor, the Nile, which is before Egypt, Joſh. xiii. 3. and xv. 47. and ſo on to the Mediterranean ſea: and this is the ſouth ſide ſouthward; the ſouth ſide of the land, and the ſouthern border of it.

ỳ. 20. The weſt ſide alſo ſhall be the great ſea from the border, &c.] From the border of Egypt, and the river of it, to the Mediterranean ſea, is the weſt ſide of the land, and the weſtern border of it; hence the weſtern point is often expreſſed in ſcripture by the ſea: till a man come over-againſt Hamath; Antioch in Syria; ſee ỳ. 16: this is the weſt ſide; of the land, and of the weſtern border of it.

ỳ. 21. So ſhall ye divide this land unto you, &c.] As thus bounded, eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth: according to the tribes of Iſrael; ſee the note on ỳ. 13.

ỳ. 22. And it ſhall come to paſs, &c.] In the laſt days, under the goſpel-diſpenſation: that ye ſhall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you; who were Iſraelites, both by natural deſcent, and by the Spirit and grace of God: the goſpel was firſt preached to Iſrael after the fleſh, and made effectual to the converſion of many of them; and the firſt churches were made up of them, and they ſhared all the bleſſings and privileges thereof; as they alſo will in the latter day, when converted: and to the ſtrangers that ſojourn among them; not ſuch as were ſtrangers to ſpiritual and divine things; for this would contradict the rule in ch. xliv. 9. but converted Gentiles, ſo called becauſe of their natural deſcent and civil ſtate, being with reſpect to both, aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael; yet were to be, as they have been, and will be, taken into the ſame goſpel-church-ſtate with the believing Jews: which ſhall beget children among you; not only in a natural, but in a ſpiritual ſenſe; be the means of begetting many ſouls again to the lively hope of a glorious inheritance: and they ſhall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Iſrael; that is, the children begotten by the Gentiles, ſhall be conſidered all one as thoſe of the children of Iſrael, being born again of the ſame Spirit and grace; and ſo have an equal right to the ſame privileges, and to which they ſhall be admitted: they ſhall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Iſrael; this is a new thing, and what in a literal ſenſe was never granted; for tho' in the times of Moſes and onward, and by his direction from the Lord, ſuch as have been called proſelytes of the gate, and proſelytes of righteouſneſs, have been admitted to various privileges, by conforming to certain rules, rites and ceremonies, yet never were allowed to have any inheritance in the land; and after the captivity, Ezra and Nehemiah drove out the ſtrangers, who by affinity with ſome had got among them: but this reſpects goſpel-times, and the coalition of Jews and Gentiles in the ſame church-ſtate; where there is no difference, but Chriſt is all in all; where they are admitted to the ſame ordinances of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper; partake of the ſame bleſſings of grace, and promiſes of the word, and have an equal right to the heavenly inheritance: Eph. iii. 6. is the beſt commentary on this paſſage; which contains the ſame myſtery the apoſtle Paul was acquainted with, that the Gentiles ſhould be fellow heirs, and of the ſame body, and partakers of his promiſe in Chriſt by the goſpel; ſee the note there, and Eph. ii. 12—20. Col. iii. 11. 1 Cor. xii. 13.

---

[q] Geograph. l. 5. c. 19.

[r] Dictionary, in the word Sibraim.

[s] Vid. Reland. Paleſtina Illuſtrata, l. 1. c. 22. p. 107.

℣. 23. And it ſhall come to paſs, that in what tribe the ſtranger ſojourneth, &c.] Whatſoever particular congregation or church, theſe ſtrangers and ſojourners, as all the Lord's people are in this world, and even in their church-ſtate, or thoſe Gentiles before deſcribed, ſhall be neareſt unto, and to which they ſhall propoſe themſelves for communion, they ſhall be readily admitted: there ſhall ye give him his inheritance, ſaith the Lord God; allow him a name and a place; put him in the poſſeſſion of all church-privileges and immunities; look upon him as a member, a brother, a fellow-citizen, as an heir together of the grace of life, and as equally intitled to the inheritance of the ſaints in light; and for this they have the authority and order of Jehovah himſelf.

CHAP. XLVIII.

IN this chapter an account is given of the portions of the twelve tribes in the land of Iſrael; ſeven to the north of the ſanctuary, Dan, Aſher, Napthali, Manaſſeh, Ephraim, Reuben, and Judah, ℣. 1—7. between which and Benjamin lay the holy portion of the land, for the ſanctuary and the prieſts of it, and for the Levites, and for the city and its ſuburbs, and for the prince, ℣. 8—22. then the portions of the other five tribes to the ſouth of the ſanctuary, Benjamin, Simeon, Iſſachar, Zebulun, and Gad, ℣. 23—29. after which the city is deſcribed by its outlets, north, eaſt, ſouth, and weſt; by its twelve gates, three at each point; by its circumference, and by its name, ℣. 30—35.

℣. 1. Now theſe are the names of the tribes, &c.] That ſhall inherit the land; and an account is given of the ſeveral portions of it they ſhall have for an inheritance; by which are meant, not the twelve tribes of Iſrael literally, among whom the land was never ſo divided as here, either in Joſhua's time, or after the captivity of Babylon; but the chriſtian church, or the people of Chriſt under the goſpel-diſpenſation, as in Rev. vii. 4. built upon the doctrine of the twelve apoſtles of Chriſt: the ſtranger-ſojourners are not here mentioned, who according to the preceding chapter were equally to inherit with the children of Iſrael, but are included; they being Iſraelites indeed, and fellow-heirs, and all one in Chriſt, be they of whatſoever nation. From the north end to the coaſt of the way of Hethlon, as one goeth to Hamath; the diviſion of the land, and the diſtribution of the portions, begin at the north, and ſo go on to the ſouth, by the way of Hethlon and Hamath; of which ſee ch. xlvii. 15, 16. and along by Hazar-Enan, the border of Damaſcus, northward to the coaſt of Hamath; ſee ch. xlvii. 17: for theſe are his ſides eaſt and weſt; the ſides of the tribe of Dan next mentioned, and ſo of every other tribe; which was meaſured from eaſt to weſt, and conſiſted of 25,000 reeds four-ſquare, as appears from ℣. 8, 20: a portion for Dan; or, Dan one[t]; either one tribe, or one portion. This tribe has its portion firſt aſſigned it, tho' it was provided for laſt in Joſhua's time, and not ſufficiently neither, Joſh. xix. 40—47. and is left out in Rev. vii. having fallen into idolatry; but here being provided for firſt, confirms what our Lord ſays, that the firſt ſhall be laſt, and the laſt firſt, Matt. xix. 30. and xx. 16. and ſhows that the chief of ſinners are received by Chriſt, and provided for by him, with grace here, and glory hereafter, who come to him, and believe in him; and that their inheritance is of grace, and not of works.

℣. 2. And by the border of Dan, &c.] Next to it, juſt by it, cloſely adjoining to it; for it ſhould be obſerved, that theſe tribes, and their inheritances, are contiguous to each other; which denotes the union of true chriſtians, or believers in Chriſt, with each other; they are members one of another, one body, one bread, and all one in Chriſt; and their harmony, unity, and concord, their comfortable communion and fellowſhip with each other; eſpecially as it will be in the latter day, when they ſhall no more grieve and vex each other, nor ſeparate from one another; but the two ſticks ſhall be one in the hand of the Lord, Iſ. xi. 13.

---

[t] דן אחד Dan una, Cocceius, Starckius; Danis tribus una, Vatablus, Junius & Tremellius, Polanus; pro Dane portio una, Munſter, Tigurine verſion, Piſcator.

Ezek. xxxvii. 19: from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide; being juſt in the ſame poſition as the former tribe, and of the ſame meaſure and extent: a portion for Aſher; an inheritance for the tribe of Aſher, the bleſſed of the Lord with all bleſſings, ſpiritual and eternal: and it ſhould be known, once for all, that the portions of the ſeveral tribes are exactly alike: true believers have the ſame covenant-God and Father for their portion; the ſame Lord, Redeemer and Saviour, head and huſband Jeſus Chriſt; they are members of the ſame body; partake of the ſame Spirit, and his graces; obtain like precious faith; are called in one hope of their calling; have a right to the ſame privileges and ordinances, and will ſhare in the ſame heavenly inheritance, Eph. iv. 4, 5, 6.

℣. 3. And by the border of Aſher, from the eaſt ſide, even unto the weſt ſide, a portion for Naphtali.] Cloſe to the tribe of Aſher and his inheritance, in the ſame direction from eaſt to weſt, lay the part aſſigned to the tribe of Naphtali: ſuch chriſtians who are wreſtlers with God in prayer, and againſt their ſpiritual enemies, and ſtrive and contend for the doctrines of the goſpel, may be deſigned.

℣. 4. And by the border of Naphtali, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, a portion for Manaſſeh.] Juſt in like manner, next to Naphtali lay the tribe of Manaſſeh, and the portion of land appointed for that tribe; even ſuch chriſtians who forget the things that are behind, and reach to thoſe that are before; forget their former companions, their own people, and father's houſe; their carnal luſts and pleaſures, and their own works of righteouſneſs, and follow after Chriſt and his righteouſneſs.

℣. 5. And by the border of Manaſſeh, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, a portion for Ephraim.] Cloſe to the tribe of Manaſſeh, and the inheritance of it, which is no more reckoned a half, but a whole tribe, and has an inheritance equal to the reſt, lay the tribe of Ephraim, and the inheritance aſſigned to that; even to ſuch believers as are fruitful in grace and good works. Joſeph is not mentioned, as in ch. xlvii. 13, the two portions there given him, being here allotted to his two ſons, Manaſſeh and Ephraim.

℣. 6. And by the border of Ephraim, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, a portion for Reuben.] Who, thro' his ſin, loſt his birth-right; but now his ſin being forgiven and forgotten, has a portion aſſigned him upon the border of Ephraim, and next to the tribe of Judah; when in Moſes and Joſhua's time it lay on the other ſide Jordan: this points to ſuch perſons that ſhall have their lot and portion in ſpiritual things; that ſee the ſon, that look to Chriſt alone for righteouſneſs, peace, pardon, and eternal life.

℣. 7. And by the border of Reuben, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, a portion for Judah.] Such who confeſs the Lord before men, and praiſe his name for all bleſſings, temporal and ſpiritual, they receive from him: theſe ſeven tribes already mentioned, as they lay contiguous to each other, and had portions and inheritances alike aſſigned to them; ſo they were all of them to the north of the ſanctuary and city after mentioned.

℣. 8. And by the border of Judah, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, ſhall be the offering, &c.] Or the oblation of an holy portion of the land unto the Lord before made mention of, ch. xlv. 1. this was cloſe by the tribe of Judah, and in the ſame direction with that, and the reſt of the tribes, proceeding in length from eaſt to weſt: this takes in the whole allotted to the ſanctuary, the prieſts, the Levites, the city, and the prince; each of which are taken notice of in the following verſes: which they ſhall offer of five and twenty thouſand reeds in breadth; from north to ſouth; which makes, as the Jews [u] ſay, ſeventy-five miles; ſome make it ſeventy-ſeven, and others more: and in length as one of the other parts, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide; that is, equal to one of the portions allotted to any one of the tribes, which were alike: what this meaſure was is not ſaid, but was the ſame with the breadth; ſince the whole oblation was five and twenty thouſand by five and twenty thouſand, ℣. 20: and the ſanctuary ſhall be in the midſt thereof; of the holy portion of land; ſee ch. xlv. 3. not in the tribe of Judah or Benjamin; nor in the city of Jeruſalem, as before; but many miles from thence.

℣. 9. The oblation that ye ſhall offer to the Lord, &c.] That which belonged to the ſanctuary, and to the prieſts, which was taken and ſeparated for that uſe; which here, and in the following verſes, is particularly and ſeparately conſidered: ſhall be of five and twenty thouſand in length; that is, five and twenty thouſand reeds from eaſt to weſt: and of ten thouſand in breadth; from north to ſouth; ſee ch. xlv. 3.

℣. 10. And for them, even the prieſts, ſhall be this holy oblation, &c.] This holy portion of land, excepting that which is for the ſanctuary, is to be for the uſe of the prieſts to build houſes on to dwell in; ſignifying, that the miniſters of the goſpel are to be taken care of, and ſufficient proviſion made for their maintenance; ſee ch. xlv. 4: toward the north five and twenty thouſand in length, and toward the weſt ten thouſand in breadth, and toward the eaſt ten thouſand in breadth, and toward the ſouth five and twenty thouſand in length; to the north and ſouth five and twenty thouſand reeds each; and to the eaſt and weſt ten thouſand each; all this belongs to the prieſts, excepting the place for the ſanctuary, that ſtood in the middle of it, as repeated in the following clauſe: and the ſanctuary of the Lord ſhall be in the midſt thereof; as in ℣. 8.

℣. 11. It ſhall be for the prieſts that are ſanctified, &c.] That are ſet apart by the Lord; called by him to this office, and ſanctified with the gifts and graces of his Spirit; and ſo fitted and qualified for the work: of the ſons of Zadok, which have kept my charge, which went not aſtray, when the children of Iſrael went aſtray, as the Levites went aſtray; miniſters faithful to the Lord in the worſt of times; and who are, and will be taken notice of by him, both now and hereafter, Matt. xxv. 21. Rev. iii. 10. ſee the notes on ch. xliv. 15, 16.

℣. 12. And this oblation of the land that is offered, ſhall be unto them a thing moſt holy, &c.] Be peculiarly theirs, and not converted to any other uſe; but be accounted moſt ſacred, and not alienable, or made uſe of by other perſons, or to other purpoſes: by the border of the Levites; it ſhould be continued, and reach unto their border; or where that ſhould begin, and their part aſſigned them, which is next conſidered.

℣. 13. And over-againſt the border of the prieſts, &c.] Next to their border, cloſe to it, running parallel with it: the Levites ſhall have five and twenty thouſand in length, and ten thouſand in breadth; for accommodations for them; for chambers to lodge in, and other uſes; all concerned in the houſe and worſhip of God, ſhall be provided for with every thing neceſſary and convenient for them; ſee the note on ch. xlv. 5: all the length ſhall be five and twenty thouſand, and the breadth ten thouſand; all the length of the land, both for the prieſts and Levites, ſhould be five and twenty thouſand reeds, and the breadth of the land for both ten thouſand reeds: this is repeated for the certainty of it, and to prevent any miſtake about it.

---

[u] Jarchi and Kimchi in loc. e Siphri; ſo Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, fol. 1. 1.

℣. 14. And they ſhall not ſell of it, &c.] Any part of it that is allotted to them, neither the prieſts, nor the Levites; ſimony is not to be practiſed: neither exchange; for any other land in lieu of it: nor alienate the firſt-fruits of the land; or appropriate them to any other uſe, than that of the prieſts and Levites: whatever is appointed for eccleſiaſtic uſes, ought not to be converted to any other; nor ſhould church-privileges be parted with on any account: miniſters and other officers, nay even private chriſtians, ſhould not part with their chriſtian liberty, nor with any of the doctrines and ordinances of the goſpel: for it is holy unto the Lord; what is ſeparated and devoted to religious uſes, is ſacred to the Lord.

℣. 15. And the five thouſand that are left in the breadth over-againſt the five and twenty thouſand, &c.] Which belonged to the Levites, which was a ſquare of twenty five thouſand reeds by twenty five thouſand; by the ſide of, or parallel to the twenty five thouſand in length, ran twenty five thouſand in breadth, two ten thouſands, as in the portion of the prieſts, ℣. 10. ſo in theirs, ℣. 13. the reſidue whereof five thouſand, ſhall be a profane place for the city, for dwelling, and for ſuburbs; to build a city upon for the Iſraelites to dwell in, and ſuburbs to be inhabited by thoſe that were not of the city; or for fields and gardens, to ſupply the city with things neceſſary and convenient; tho' the Jewiſh commentators, Jarchi, Kimchi, and Ben Melech, ſay, the ſuburbs were an open place, where were neither houſes, nor fields, nor gardens: when this ſpot for the city and ſuburbs is ſaid to be a profane place, it is to be underſtood comparatively, with reſpect to the portion for the prieſts and Levites; otherwiſe it was a part of the holy oblation; or rather, that it was common to all the people of Iſrael, who might all dwell in it; and therefore Symmachus and Theodotion render it λαικον. This city ſignifies the goſpel-church, often compared to a city in ſcripture, being compact together; conſiſting of chriſtians knit together in love, of the ſame ſentiment, and joining in religious worſhip: a city ſeated on an eminence; well founded; built on the rock Chriſt Jeſus; its buildings large and beautiful, and of lively ſtones; its inhabitants many, the fellow-citizens of the ſaints; theſe divers, of all nations, of every rank, age and ſex; and very healthful, none of them ſick and diſeaſed; healed of all maladies; living in a wholeſome air, by a river the ſtreams whereof make glad this city, and the inhabitants of it; who have many privileges, being Chriſt's freemen; governed by good laws, under proper officers appointed to explain them, and ſee them executed: a city well fortified with the bulwarks of ſalvation; the city of ſolemnities, and of the great king. The ſuburbs of it are for ſuch who are not yet of it, but are waiting at wiſdom's gates, and at the poſts of her door, hoping for admittance ere long: and the city ſhall be in the midſt thereof; of the area of five thouſand reeds.

℣. 16. And this ſhall be the meaſures thereof, &c.] Of the city: the north ſide four thouſand and five hundred; that is, meaſures or reeds: the ſouth ſide four thouſand and five hundred, and on the eaſt ſide four thouſand and five hundred, and the weſt ſide four thouſand and five hundred; in all eighteen hundred meaſures or reeds, as in ℣. 35. which denotes the largeneſs of the goſpel-church, eſpecially in the latter day; when Jews and Gentiles will be converted, and multitudes, eaſt, weſt, north and ſouth, will be gathered to it; and as it is an equilateral ſquare, this ſhews the perfection, firmneſs, ſtability and duration of the church of Chriſt; ſo the holy city, the new Jeruſalem is for the ſame reaſons ſaid to be four-ſquare, Rev. xxi. 16.

℣. 17. And the ſuburbs of the city ſhall be toward the north two hundred and fifty, &c.] That is, ſo many reeds: and toward the ſouth two hundred and fifty; which make five hundred; and theſe being added to four thouſand five hundred, north and ſouth, make five thouſand: and toward the eaſt two hundred and fifty, and toward the weſt two hundred and fifty; which being added to four thouſand five hundred, eaſt and weſt, make five thouſand; and ſo an equilateral ſquare on each ſide, length and breadth.

℣. 18. And the reſidue in length over-againſt the oblation of the holy portion ſhall be ten thouſand eaſtward, and ten thouſand weſtward, &c.] What remained in length, which ran parallel with the holy portion of the land, after five thouſand reeds were taken out for the city and ſuburbs, were twenty thouſand; ten thouſand to the eaſt, and ten thouſand to the weſt: and it ſhall be over-againſt the oblation of the holy portion; that is, that ſpace as yet undiſpoſed of, the twenty thouſand reeds, ten on the eaſt, and ten on the weſt of the city, were cloſe to, and ran even with, the oblation of the holy portion aſſigned to the prieſts and Levites: and the increaſe thereof; or what theſe twenty thouſand reeds of land ſhould produce, or could be made of them: ſhall be for food for them that ſerve the city; not the Gibeonites given to be hewers of wood and drawers of water, as Jarchi interprets it; which ſenſe is juſtly rejected by Kimchi; ſince, as he obſerves, the Gibeonites ſhall not dwell in Jeruſalem the holy city, nor miniſter in time to come: but either civil magiſtrates, who ſerve the church of Chriſt, when they ſecure the peace of it, protect and defend it; as they will, eſpecially in the latter day, when theſe officers will be peace, and theſe exactors righteouſneſs, do all things juſtly and equitably; and when kings ſhall be nurſing fathers, and queens nurſing mothers to the church; and it is but right they ſhould be provided for ſuitable to their rank, dignity and office, and tribute be given to whom tribute is due: or miniſters of the word, who are the church's ſervants, and ſerve it in preaching the goſpel, and adminiſtring the ordinances of it; and go by various names, as huſbandmen concerned in ploughing, ſowing, reaping, and gathering in the harveſt; as labourers in the vineyard, and employed in planting, watering, pruning, and propping the vines; and as ſtewards of the myſteries and manifold grace of God, to give to every one in the city and family, his portion of meat in due ſeaſon; and as guides and governors, engaged in taking care of the good order and diſcipline of it; as watchmen, that go about it, or are ſet on the walls of it: and it is the will of God they ſhould be comfortably provided for, and eat of the fruit of the field and vineyard they labour in; and of the milk of the flock they take care of; and reap carnal things, where they have ſowed ſpiritual things: or elſe private believers, who ſerve the intereſt of Chriſt and one another by love; praying with, and for one another; bearing one another's burdens, and building up each other on their moſt holy faith: and for whom food, or bread [u], as in the original, both temporal and ſpiritual, is provided; both being to be had of the Lord, with whom there is enough, and to ſpare; Chriſt is the bread of life, and his word and ordinances are the proviſions of Zion; which all that ſerve the city or church of God may partake of.

℣. 19. And they that ſerve the city, ſhall ſerve it out of all the tribes of Iſrael.] Whether they be civil magiſtrates, or miniſters of the word, they ſhall be of Iſraël, and be Iſraelites indeed; and ſhall be taken out of the ſeveral tribes; ſome out of one tribe, and ſome out of another; all ſhall have the honour, as well as the labour, of ſerving the church and intereſt of Chriſt; yea, all true Iſraelites ſhall contribute as much as in them lies to the ſervice of it.

℣. 20. All the oblation ſhall be five and twenty thouſand, by five and twenty thouſand, &c.] Or, every oblation [w]; every one of the oblations; that for the prieſts and the ſanctuary; that for the Levites, and that for the city, its ſuburbs, and the maintenance of thoſe that ſerved the city; each were a ſquare of five and twenty thouſand reeds: ye ſhall offer the holy oblation four-ſquare, with the poſſeſſion of the city; taking in the poſſeſſion of the city, or what that poſſeſſed, the oblation of land for that, and its ſuburbs, and for produce to ſupport thoſe that ſerved it, ſhould be a four-ſquare of the above dimenſions.

℣. 21. And the reſidue ſhall be for the prince, &c.] Not the civil magiſtrate, but the prince Meſſiah, the king, governor, and protector of his church and people: on the one ſide, and on the other of the holy oblation, and of the poſſeſſion of the city; his portion ſhall lie on each ſide of the portion for the ſanctuary, the prieſts and Levites, and for the city and its appurtenances; ſo that he will be the guardian and preſerver of them all; ſee the note on ch. xlv. 7: over-againſt the five and twenty thouſand of the oblation toward the eaſt border, and weſtward over-againſt the five and twenty thouſand toward the weſt border; or, before the face [x] of the five and twenty thouſand of the oblation, &c. that is, next to the tribe of Judah, cloſe by that, and juſt before the holy oblation of five and twenty thouſand reeds, both eaſtward and weſtward, ſhould be the portion of the prince on one ſide: over-againſt the portions for the prince; or, over-againſt theſe ſhall be that for the prince [y]; parallel with the portions of the ſeveral tribes before deſcribed, ſhall be that of the prince, which belongs to him: and it ſhall be the holy oblation; and the ſanctuary of the houſe ſhall be in the midſt thereof; that is, the holy oblation of the land for the prieſts and Levites, and the ſanctuary ſhould be between that part of the prince's portion which lay next to Judah, and that which lay next to Benjamin; of which in the next verſe.

℣. 22. Moreover, from the poſſeſſion of the Levites, and from the poſſeſſion of the city, &c.] Or, beyond theſe, as it may be rendered, on the other ſide of them; or, except [z] theſe: being in the midſt of that which is the prince's; between his two portions; or as it is next explained, between the border of Judah, and the border of Benjamin, ſhall be for the prince; that is, all beyond and excepting that which belonged to the prieſts and Levites, the ſanctuary and the city, were the prince's, which lay between Judah and Benjamin: or thus it was; before the holy oblation one part of the prince's portion ran, parallel with the tribe of Judah, eaſt and weſt; after the holy oblation on the other ſide, another part of his portion touched the tribe of Benjamin, and ran parallel with the eaſt and weſt; and ſo were between them both, as well as on each ſide of the holy oblation: all this denotes the nearneſs of Chriſt to his church and people; his protection of them on all ſides; and the largeneſs of his intereſt and kingdom; ſee ch. xlv. 7.

℣. 23. As for the reſt of the tribes, &c.] Not yet mentioned, which lay to the ſouth of the ſanctuary, and are as follow: from the eaſt ſide to the weſt ſide, Benjamin ſhall have a portion; the ſons of God's right hand, who are as near and dear to him as a man's right hand is to him. Judah and Benjamin are neareſt to the holy oblation, ſanctuary, city and prince; the one to the north of them, the other to the ſouth; theſe tribes being faithful to God, and with his ſaints, when others departed from him; the Lord takes great notice of his faithful ones, and honours them, Hoſ. xi. 12.

℣. 24. And by the border of Benjamin, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, Simeon ſhall have a portion.] Cloſe by the border of Benjamin, running eaſt and weſt, Simeon's part and inheritance in the land ſhall be; even ſuch true Iſraelites as hear, underſtand, and believe the goſpel, and practiſe what they hear. This tribe is not now to be divided and ſcattered in Iſrael, or to have its inheritance in Judah, as formerly, Gen. xlix. 5—7. Joſh. xix. 1—9. but to be diſtinct, and have a portion by itſelf.

℣. 25. And by the border of Simeon, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, Iſſachar a portion.] Next, cloſely adjoining to Simeon's inheritance, and in the ſame direction ſhall be Iſſachar's; ſuch chriſtians as ſhall have the rewards of grace for their ſervices and ſufferings in times of tribulation.

℣. 26. And by the border of Iſſachar, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, Zebulun a portion.] In like manner, next to Iſſachar's inheritance, and bordering on it, ſhall be Zebulun's; who ſhall be no more an haven for ſhips, having a different ſituation and allotment; and may deſcribe ſuch chriſtians as dwell in Chriſt, and he in them.

℣. 27. And by the border of Zebulun, from the eaſt ſide unto the weſt ſide, Gad a portion.] The laſt of the tribes; a troop of overcomers, who are more than conquerors over all their enemies thro' Chriſt: all chriſtians ſhall have their part and portion in the church below, and in all the privileges and immunities of it; and in the church above, in all the glories and bleſſedneſs thereof.

℣. 28. And by the border of Gad, at the ſouth ſide ſouthward, &c.] Of the ſanctuary of the Lord, of the portion of the prieſts and Levites, of the city, and what belonged to that, and of the prince's portion. The deſcription begins at the northern part of the land, and ends in the ſouthern: the border ſhall be even from Tamar unto the waters of ſtrife

---

[u] ללחם in panem, Pagninus, Montanus, Piſcator.

[x] אל פני ante facies, Pagninus: ante faciem, Starckius.

[w] כל התרומה omnis oblatio, Pagninus, Montanus.

[y] לעמת חלקים לנשיא ex adverſo portionum, id vero principis erit, Tigurine verſion; juxta portiones, principi erit, Cocceius, Starckius.

[z] מאחזת.

ſtrife in Kadeſh; and to the river toward the great ſea; ſee the note on ch. xlvii. 19.

℣. 29. This is the land which ye ſhall divide by lot unto the tribes of Iſrael for inheritance, &c.] This is the land, as thus deſcribed; and theſe the tribes of Iſrael, or the Iſraelites indeed, who ſhall have their reſpective ſhares in it, as thus allotted to them for their inheritance; which is not of a worldly, but ſpiritual nature; and a goodly heritage it is, a place and a name better than ſons and daughters; namely, a place in the houſe and church of God; and a right to enjoy all the ordinances of it: and theſe are their portions, ſaith the Lord God; which he has appointed to them, of his grace beſtows on them; and of which they may be aſſured, ſince he has ſaid it: no mention is made of any cities of refuge in this diviſion of the land, as in Joſhua's time, becauſe now the antitype of them is come, the Meſſiah, to whom all ſenſible ſinners are directed to flee; and there is no other aſylum for them, nor ſalvation in any other but in him; and beſides, in this period, there will be no manſlayers, nor any that will hurt and deſtroy in all the holy mountain; and ſo no need of cities of refuge, Iſ. xi. 9.

℣. 30. And theſe are the goings out of the city, &c.] The gates of it, as Jarchi and Kimchi interpret it, by which they went out of it, and into it; and alſo the ſides of it. The Lord here returns to the city again, to give an account of its circumference and name: on the north ſide four thouſand and five hundred meaſures; the north ſide of the city meaſured ſo many meaſures; that is, reeds, as Jarchi explains it.

℣. 31. And the gates of the city ſhall be after the names of the tribes of Iſrael, &c.] According to the number of them, twelve, and called by their names; the names of the ſeveral tribes being written on them; ſee Rev. xxi. 12. this ſhews that all true Iſraelites indeed, Iſrael not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit, have a right of entrance into, and communion with, the church of God; even the whole Iſrael of God, whom he has choſen for himſelf; Chriſt has redeemed by his blood, and the Spirit calls by his grace, and ſanctifies; theſe are all, be they Jews or Gentiles, fellow-citizens with the ſaints, and of the houſhold of God: theſe gates, tho' twelve, with reſpect to the twelve tribes that enter in at them, and the twelve apoſtles of the Lamb that direct unto them, and whoſe doctrine they embrace and profeſs that go in by them; yet are but one in the main, which is Chriſt, faith in him, and a profeſſion of it, and a profeſſed ſubjection to his goſpel and ordinances, John x. 1, 9: three gates northward; for thoſe that lay on that ſide to enter in at: one gate of Reuben, one gate of Judah, and one gate of Levi; theſe tribes, and ſo the reſt, were not placed according to their encampment about the tabernacle in the wilderneſs, or as they were placed by Joſhua in the land of Canaan; which ſhows that the tribes literally conſidered are not intended. Levi had a gate, tho' it had not a portion in the manner the other tribes had.

℣. 32. And at the eaſt ſide four thouſand and five hundred, &c.] Meaſures or reeds: this ſide was equal to the north, as the reſt were to this; the whole city in its circumference making an equilateral ſquare: and three gates; which were as follow: one gate of Joſeph, one gate of Benjamin, one gate of Dan; Joſeph is here as having a gate, tho' he is not mentioned as having a portion; but his two ſons, Ephraim and Manaſſeh, who are here omitted; which made room for Levi's name to be inſerted; and Dan who had his portion firſt, is here placed in the middle, no order being obſerved; the whole being myſtical and ſpiritual.

℣. 33. And at the ſouth ſide four thouſand and five hundred meaſures, &c.] The ſouth ſide of the city meaſured juſt the ſame as the north and eaſt ſides did: and three gates; were on that ſide, as on the others: one gate of Simeon, one gate of Iſſachar, one gate of Zebulun; at which theſe tribes entered, or thoſe they repreſent.

℣. 34. At the weſt ſide four thouſand and five hundred, &c.] Meaſures or reeds; ſo many were the length of this ſide; the ſame with north, ſouth and eaſt, and made a four-ſquare; and ſuch the city was, as the new Jeruſalem is ſaid to be, Rev. xxi. 16: with their three gates: one gate of Gad, one gate of Aſher, one gate of Naphtali; the ſituation of theſe gates on all ſides, eaſt, weſt, north and ſouth, ſhew, that in the latter day people will flock from all quarters to the church of Chriſt, and that there will be an open and free acceſs of all perſons into it; ſee Iſ. ii. 2. and xliii. 5, 6. and xlix. 12, 18. and lx. 4, 5.

℣. 35. It was round about eighteen thouſand meaſures, &c.] Putting the numbers together which each ſide made, the circumference of the city was eighteen thouſand meaſures; which, according to Cornelius A Lapide, were thirty two thouſand miles; which ſhews that no city literally taken can be here meant, but myſtically and ſpiritually the church of Chriſt, which will be of great extent in the latter day; and a large one it had need to be, to hold all nations that will flow into it; it will be ſpread all over the world; the world will become the church; the kingdoms of it will become Chriſt's; the little ſtone will become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth; the kingdom and intereſt of Chriſt, which is his church, will be from ſea to ſea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth; even from the riſing of the ſun to the ſetting of the ſame. Some Jewiſh writers [a], not knowing what to make of theſe large meaſures, ſay, that they have reſpect to the eighteen thouſand worlds God is ſaid [b] to make, which theſe were a ſimilitude, figure, or exemplar of; but thoſe Jews are nearer the true ſenſe of them, who ſay [c], that this is to be underſtood of Jeruſalem above, or as it will be in future time, in the world to come, the diſpenſation of the Meſſiah, Gal. iv. 26: and the name of the city from that day ſhall be, the Lord is there; the goſpel-church has other names, as Jeruſalem, mount Zion, the Lord our righteouſneſs, Hephzibah and Beulah, a city not forſaken, Heb. xii. 22. Jer. xxxiii. 16. Iſ. lxii. 4, 12. but here it is called Jehovah Shammah, the Lord is there, or dwells there; which is to be underſtood of his preſence in it; not in a general way, as he is in all places, and with all his creatures, continually, conſtantly, and every where working in a providential manner; but of his gracious preſence in a ſpecial way and manner: in this ſenſe Jehovah, Father, Son and Spirit, are in the goſpel-church, and will be more manifeſtly in the latter day; Jehovah the Father, as the Father of Chriſt, bleſſing them with all ſpiritual bleſſings in him; granting them his preſence in him, and communion with him, thro' him; as their Father providing all good things for them, and as the God of all grace unto them: Jehovah the Son, as the maſter of the family taking care of it, as a ſon in his own houſe, and the firſt-born among his brethren; as the prophet in the midſt of his church, teaching and inſtructing; as the high-prieſt in the midſt of the golden candleſticks, lighting and trimming them; as the king in Zion, to rule and govern, protect and defend it; ſhewing himſelf in all the glories of his perſon, and the riches of his grace, according to his promiſe, Matt. xxviii. 20. Jehovah the Spirit is here to qualify men with gifts for the miniſtry, to apply the word, and make it uſeful; as a Spirit of grace and ſupplication, and to help the Lord's people in the exerciſe of grace, and diſcharge of duty; and to be their comforter and remembrancer. Jehovah here does, and will diſplay his glorious perfections; his power in the preſervation of his ſaints; his wiſdom in the guidance and direction of them; his truth and faithfulneſs in the performance of promiſes to them; his purity and holineſs in the ſanctification of them; his love, grace and mercy in the large diſcoveries made unto them; in ſhort, he'll appear all glorious to them, and will be the glory in the midſt of them, Pſ. xlvi. 5, 6. Zeph. iii. 17. Zech. ii. 5. the date from whence this will commence is that day; either from the beginning of the goſpel-diſpenſation, that famous day made by the riſing of the ſun of righteouſneſs; or from the day and date of Chriſt's promiſe of his preſence, Matt. xxviii. 20. or from the time the goſpel-church-ſtate was ſet up; or from the day this city will be rebuilt and reſtored, the Lord will more viſibly and manifeſtly grant his preſence to the inhabitants of it, and never more depart from them; ſee Iſ. lxii. 12. The Targum is, "the "name of the city which is ſeparated from the "day, the Lord will cauſe his Shekinah to dwell "there." The Jews [a] produce this place to ſhew that Jeruſalem is called Jehovah, and ſay, don't read Shammah, there, but Shemah, its name; and the Socinians from hence would diſprove the incommunicableneſs of the name Jehovah to a creature, but without effect; ſince this city is not called ſimply Jehovah, but with an additional epithet; and this is to be underſtood, not in a divided, but compound ſenſe, as the altar in Exod. xvii. 15. and the mount in Gen. xxii. 14.

---

[a] Lipman. Tzurath Beth Hamikdaſh, §. 79.

[b] T. Bab. Avoda Zara, fol. 3. 2.

[c] Gloſſ. in T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 97. 2. & Succah, fol. 45. 2.

---

[a] T. Bab. Bava Bathra, fol. 75. 2.

The BOOK of DANIEL.

THIS book is called, in the Vulgate Latin verſion, the prophecy of Daniel; and in the Syriac and Arabic verſions, the prophecy of Daniel the prophet. This Daniel was of the children of Judah, that were carried captive into Babylon with Jehoiakim; and was of princely blood, if not of the royal ſeed, as appears from ch. i. 3, 5. Joſephus[a] is expreſs for it, that he was of the kindred and family of Zedekiah: and Saadiah Gaon[b] ſays, he was of the ſeed of Hezekiah, and ſo fulfilled the prophecy in 2 Kings xx. 18. As to what the author of the lives of the prophets, aſcribed to Epiphanius, ſays[c], that he was born in upper Bethabara, not far from Jeruſalem, it is not to be depended on; or that his father's name was Sabaam, according to a tradition mentioned by the true Epiphanius[d]. The Jews[e] would have it, that this book was not written by Daniel himſelf, but by the men of the great ſynagogue; tho' it is evident from the book itſelf, that Daniel is the writer of it, as from ch. vii. 1, 2, 28. and viii. 1, 15, 27. and ix. 2. and x. 2. and xii. 5. That he wrote books, which were received, read, and believed by the Jews as of God, is affirmed by Joſephus[f]; and the Jews in general acknowledge, that this book was written by the influence of the Holy Spirit, but not by prophecy; they, without any foundation, diſtinguiſhing between the Holy Spirit and prophecy. And ſo Maimonides ſays[g], it is the general conſent of their nation, that this book is among the holy writings, but not among the prophets; nor will they allow Daniel to be a prophet: the reaſons they give are frivolous; what ſeems to have induced them to degrade him, is the manifeſt prophecy of the time of the Meſſiah's coming in this book, which ſometimes they are obliged to own is fixed in it. They tell us a ſtory of Jonathan ben Uzziel, that having finiſhed his paraphraſe of the prophets, thought to have wrote one on the Hagiographa, or holy writings, among which they place the book of Daniel; but was forbid by Bath-Kol, or a voice from heaven, giving this as a reaſon, becauſe that in it is contained the end of the Meſſiah[h], the preciſe time of his coming; and the gloſs on the paſſage adds, by way of explanation, "in the book of Daniel;" tho' elſewhere they would have it, that after it was made known to Daniel, it was taken away from him. For ſo they ſay[i], there are two men to whom the end was revealed, and afterwards it was hidden from them; and theſe are they, Jacob and Daniel: from Daniel, according to ch. xii. 4. but thou, O Daniel, ſhut up the words, and ſeal the book, &c. from Jacob, Gen. xlix. 1. that I may tell you that which ſhall befal you in the laſt days. Yet the prophecy of Daniel was ſo clear, with reſpect to the time of the Meſſiah's coming, that one of their Rabbins, who lived about fifty years before the coming of Chriſt, aſſerted, that the time of the Meſſiah, as ſignified by Daniel, could not be deferred longer than thoſe fifty years[k]; and a moſt glaring prophecy it is, and ſufficient to denominate Daniel a prophet, as well as many more contained in this book. And after all, Maimonides himſelf owns, that he, and the other writers of the Hagiographa, or holy writings, may be called prophets in general. And Aben Ezra obſerves of Daniel in his preface, that he delivered out prophecies of things now paſt, and of things to come; yea, he expreſsly calls him a prophet on ℣. 17. And Jacchiades, another of their commentators on this book, ſays, that he attained to the higheſt degree of prophecy. To which may be added the teſtimony of Joſephus[l], who ſays, he was one of the greateſt prophets, and to be preferred to others; ſince he not only predicted things future, but fixed the time when they ſhould come to paſs. And above all, and what ſhould ſatisfy us chriſtians, he is expreſsly called a prophet by our Lord, Matt. xxiv. 15. There are no other authentic writings of Daniel, which bear his name; the ſtories of Suſannah, and of Bel and the Dragon, which make the thirteenth and fourteenth chapters in the Greek of Theodotion, and in the Vulgate Latin verſion, are apocryphal and ſpurious. The Oriental writers make Daniel the author of a volume, entitled, Principles relating to the explanation of dreams. And there is another book, in the king of France's library, with this title, Odmath-al-mantoul ân Danial al-nabi; which contains predictions of the prophet Daniel, received by tradition from him. This is a book which abounds with falſities, forged by the Mahometans, and founded on the real prophecies of Daniel[m]. This book, written by him, is partly hiſtorical, relating facts in which he was concerned; and partly prophetical, of things that ſhould happen from his time to the end of the world, and eſpecially of the Meſſiah and his kingdom; and it is written partly in Hebrew, and partly in Chaldee. This great man, as he was both in nature and grace, in religion and politicks, lived throughout the captivity, but does not ſeem ever to have returned into Judea; but continued in the courts of the kings of the Medes and Perſians, to take care of the affairs of his people the Jews. Where he died, and was buried, is not certain. Some ſay in Babylon; and others, which is more likely, at Suſa on the Tigris, where he was in the third year of Cyrus, Dan. x. 1, 4. So ſays Abulfeda[n]; with which agrees the account of Benjamin of Tudela[o].

---

[a] Antiqu. l. 10. c. 10. §. 1.

[b] Comment. in Dan. i. 5.

[c] Pſeudo-Epiphan. de vit. prophet. c. 10.

[d] Contra Hæreſ. hæreſ. 55.

[e] T. Bab. Bava Bathra, fol. 15. 1.

[f] Antiqu. l 10. c 10 § 7.

[g] More Nevochim, par. 2. c. 45.

[h] T. Bab. Megillah, fol. 3. 1.

[i] Bereſhit Rabba, § 98. fol. 84. 4.

[k] R. Nehumiah apud Grotium, de ver. Relig. Chriſt. l. 5. §. 14.

[l] Ibid. ut ſupra.

[m] Calmet's dictionary, in the word Daniel.

[n] Apud Schickard. not. in Purim.

[o] Itinerar. p. 86.

CHAP. I.

THIS chapter begins with an account of the firſt captivity of the Jews, in the times of Jehoiakim; of which captivity Daniel was one, and it is mentioned on his account, ℣. 1, 2. who, with others, were ſelected by the order of the king of Babylon, to be educated in the learning of the Chaldeans, and to be maintained at his expence, in order to be his miniſters, ℣. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. but Daniel and his three companions refuſed the king's meat and wine, leſt they ſhould be defiled; in which they were indulged by their governor, after trial being made, that they were fairer and fatter for it, ℣. 8—16. and at the end of the time appointed, they appeared to have a large ſhare of knowledge, wiſdom, and learning; upon which they were taken into the king's court and ſervice, ℣. 17—20. and the chapter is concluded with obſerving, the long continuation of Daniel here, even to the firſt year of Cyrus, ℣. 21.

℣. 1. In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah, &c.] At the cloſe of it, and at the beginning of the fourth, which was the firſt of Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xxv. 1. Jeruſalem ſeems to have been taken twice in his time, and two captivities in it: the firſt was in the third or fourth year of his reign; when humbling himſelf, he was reſtored to his kingdom, tho' he became a tributary to the king of Babylon; Daniel and his companions, who were carried captive with him, were retained as hoſtages: but after three years he rebelled, but it was not until his eleventh year that Nebuchadnezzar came againſt him again, took him, and bound him, in order to carry him to Babylon, but he died by the way; ſee 2 Kings xxiv. 1, 2. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 5, 6. ſome, as Jarchi and Saadiah Gaon, make this to be the third year of his rebellion, and the laſt of his reign: they ſuppoſe that he was conquered by the king of Babylon, and became ſubject to him in the fifth year of his reign; that he ſerved him three years, and rebelled againſt him three years: at the end of which, came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jeruſalem, and beſieged it; with his army, and took it; and the ſame way it is accounted for in the Jewiſh chronicle [p]: according to biſhop Uſher [q], this was in the year of the world 3398, and of the Julian period 4108, and before Chriſt 607 or 606; according to Mr. Bedford [r] 605.

℣. 2. The Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, &c.] And the city of Jeruſalem too, or he could not have took the king; and ſo the Syriac verſion renders it, and the Lord delivered it into his hands, and Jehoiakim, &c. this was from the Lord, becauſe of his ſins, and the ſins of his anceſtors, and of his people; or otherwiſe the king of Babylon could not have taken the city, nor him, becauſe of the great power of the Jews, as Jacchiades obſerves: with part of the veſſels of the houſe of God; not all of them; for ſome, as Saadiah ſays, were hid by Joſiah and Jeremiah, which is not to be depended on; however, certain it is, that all were not carried away, becauſe we read of ſome of the veſſels of the temple being carried away afterwards, in Jeconiah's time, 2 Kings xxiv. 13. and ſtill there were ſome left, as the pillars, ſea, baſes, and other veſſels, which were to be carried away, and were carried away by the king of Babylon, in Zedekiah's time, Jer. xxvii. 19—22. and lii. 17—20: which he carried into the land of Shinar, to the houſe of his god; which Jarchi underſtands both of the men that were carried captive, and the veſſels that were taken out of the temple; but the latter ſeem only to be intended, ſince of men Jehoiakim is only ſpoken of before; and it does not appear he was ever carried into Babylon; but it is certain the veſſels of the temple were carried thither; which is meant by the land of Shinar, where Babylon ſtood, and where the tower of Babel was built, Gen. x. 2. the ſame, as Grotius thinks, with the Singara of Pliny [s] and Ptolemy [t]. So the Targum of Onkelos, on Gen. x. 10. and xi. 2. interprets the land of Shinar, the land of Babylon; likewiſe the Jeruſalem Targum on Gen. x. 10. and the Targum of Jonathan on Gen. xi. 2. Iſ. xi. 11. and Zech. v. 11. only on Gen. x. 10. he paraphraſes it, the land of Pontus. So Heſtiæus [u], an ancient Phœnician writer, calls Shinar, Sennaar of Babylonia. It ſeems to have its name from נער, which ſignifies to ſhake out; becauſe from hence, the men of the flood, as Saadiah ſays, or the builders of Babel, were ſhook out by the Lord, and were ſcattered over the face of the earth. And as the tower of Babel itſelf, very probably was built for idolatrous worſhip, for which reaſon the Lord was ſo diſpleaſed with the builders of it; ſo in this ſame place, or near it, now ſtood an idol's temple, where the king of Babylon, and the inhabitants thereof worſhipped, here called the houſe of his gods [v], as it may be rendered; for the Babylonians worſhipped more gods than one; there were Rach, Shach, and Nego, from whom Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, are ſuppoſed to have their names given them by the Chaldeans, ℣. 7. Rach is thought to be the ſun, whoſe prieſts were called Rachiophantæ, obſervers of the ſun; Shach, to which Sheſhach is referred by ſome, Jer. li. 41. for which a feaſt was kept once a year for five days, when ſervants had the rule and government of their maſters; and Nego either was worſhipped for the ſun, or ſome ſtar, ſo called from its brightneſs. Venus was alſo had in veneration with the Babylonians, whom they called Mylitta; in whoſe temple many acts of uncleanneſs and filthineſs were committed, as Herodotus [x] relates. And beſides theſe, there were Merodach, Nebo, and Bel; of which ſee Iſ. xlvi. 1. Jer. l. 2. the latter ſeems to have been their chief deity, and who was called Jupiter Belus; and with whom were the goddeſſes Juno and Rhea. And in the city of Babylon ſtood the temple of Bel, or Jupiter Belus, which was extant in the times of Herodotus, and of which he gives an account [y], and is this; "the temple of Jupiter Belus had gates of braſs; it was two furlongs on every ſide, and was four-ſquare. In the midſt of the temple was a ſolid tower, a furlong in length and breadth; upon which another temple was placed, and ſo on to eight. The going

---

[p] Seder Olam Rabba, c. 25. in principio.

[q] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3398.

[r] Scripture Chronology, p. 676.

[s] Nat. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 24.

[t] Geograph. l. 5. c. 18.

[u] Apud Joſeph. Antiqu. l. 1. c. 4. §. 3.

[v] בית אלהיו domum deorum ſuorum, Cocceius, Michaelis.

[x] Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 199.

[y] Ibid. c. 181.

“ up them was without, in a winding about each “ tower; and as you went up, in the middle, “ there was a room and ſeats to reſt on. In the “ laſt tower was a large temple, in which was a “ large bed ſplendidly furniſhed, and a table of “ gold ſet by it; but there was no ſtatue there; “ nor did any man lie there in the night; only “ one woman, a native of the place, whom the “ god choſe from among them all, as the Chaldean priests of this deity ſay.” Diodorus Siculus ſays [z], it was of an extraordinary height, where the Chaldeans made obſervations on the ſtars, and could take an exact view of the riſe and ſetting of them; it was all made of brick and bitumen, at great coſt and expence. Here the veſſels of the ſanctuary were brought by Nebuchadnezzar, to the praiſe and glory of his idols, as Jarchi and Jacchiades obſerve; to whom he imputed the victory he had obtained over the Jews. Even theſe he brought into the treaſure-houſe of his god; very probably this was the chapel Herodotus [a] ſpeaks of, where was a large golden ſtatue of Jupiter ſitting, and a large golden table by it, and a golden throne and ſteps, reckoned by the Chaldeans at eight hundred talents of gold. And Diodorus Siculus [b] relates, that there were three golden ſtatues, of Jupiter, Juno, and Rhea. That of Jupiter was as one ſtanding on his feet, and as it were walking, was forty feet in length, and weighed a thouſand Babylonian talents, (computed three millions and an half of our money.) That of Rhea was of the ſame weight, ſitting upon a throne of gold, and two lions ſtanding at her knees; and near to them ſerpents of a prodigious bigneſs, made of ſilver, which weighed thirty talents. That of Juno was a ſtanding ſtatue, weighing eight hundred talents; in her right hand ſhe held the head of a ſerpent, and in her left a ſceptre ſet with precious ſtones; and there was a golden table common to them all, forty feet long, fifteen broad, and of the weight of fifty talents. Moreover, there were two bowls of thirty talents, and as many cenſers of three hundred talents, and three cups of gold; that which was dedicated to Jupiter, weighed a thouſand two hundred Babylonian talents, and the other ſix hundred. Here all the rich things dedicated to their god were laid up, and here the king of Babylon brought the treaſures and rich veſſels he took out of the temple of Jeruſalem; and to this agrees the teſtimony of Beroſus [c], who ſays, that with the ſpoils of war Nebuchadnezzar took from the Jews and neighbouring nations, he adorned the temple of Belus. The riches of this temple, according to hiſtorians, is ſuppoſed to be above one and twenty millions ſterling [d], even of thoſe only which Diodorus Siculus gives an account of, as above.

℣. 3. And the king ſpake unto Aſhpenaz, the maſter of his eunuchs, &c.] That is, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon ſpake to this officer of his, whoſe name was Aſhpenaz; which, according to Saadiah, ſignifies a man of an angry countenance; but Hillerus [e] derives it from the Arabic word شفن Schaphan, as deſigning one that excels in wit and underſtanding; for which reaſon he might have the command of the eunuchs, many of which the eaſtern princes had about them, particularly to wait upon their women, or to educate youth, as the Turks have now; tho', as R. Jeſhuah in Aben Ezra obſerves, the word ſignifies miniſters, and may intend the king's nobles and courtiers, his miniſters of ſtate; and ſo this Aſhpenaz may be conſidered as his prime-miniſter, to whom he gave orders, that he ſhould bring certain of the children of Iſrael; whom he had taken and brought captive to Babylon, and were diſpoſed of, in ſome part or another of the city and country; and out of theſe it was his will, that ſome ſhould be ſelected and brought to his court: and of the king's ſeed, and of the princes; or, even [f] of the king's ſeed, and of the princes; not any of the children of Iſrael, but ſuch as were of the blood-royal, or of the king of Judah's family, or ſome way related to it; or however, that were of princely birth, the children of perſons of the firſt rank, as the word [g] may ſignify; or of nobles and dukes, as Jarchi interprets it.

℣. 4. Children in whom was no blemiſh, &c.] Not mere children, but young men of fifteen or twenty years of age; about which age Daniel is by Aben Ezra ſuppoſed to be, when he was carried captive; and leſs than this he can't well be thought to be, ſince in a few years after, he was put into poſts of the greateſt eminence and importance: ſuch were ordered to be ſelected, that had no deformity or defect in any parts of their body, or wanted any, as an eye, or an hand, &c. or, in whom was not any thing [h]; vicious or immoral, or ſcandalous in their character: but well favoured; of a good complexion, a ruddy countenance, and a healthful look. So Curtius [i] ſays, that in all barbarous or uncivilized countries, the ſtatelineſs and bigneſs of the body is had in great veneration; nor do they think any capable of great ſervices or actions, to whom nature has not vouchſafed to give a beautiful form and aſpect. And Ariſtotle [k] ſays it was reported, that in Ethiopia, civil offices of government or magiſtracy, were diſtributed according to the bulk or beauty of men, the largeneſs and tallneſs of their bodies, or the comelineſs of them; and not only among them, but this has always been the cuſtom of the eaſtern nations, to chuſe ſuch for their principal officers, or to wait on princes and great perſonages, and continues to this day. Sir Paul Ricaut [l] obſerves, “ that the “ youths that are deſigned for the great offices of “ the Turkiſh empire, muſt be of admirable fea- “ tures and pleaſing looks, well-ſhaped in their “ bodies, and without any defects of nature; for “ it is conceived, that a corrupt and ſordid ſoul can “ ſcarce inhabit in a ſerene and ingenious aſpect; “ and, ſays he, I have obſerved not only in the “ ſeraglio, but alſo in the courts of great men, “ their perſonal attendants have been of comely “ luſty youths well habited, deporting themſelves “ with ſingular modeſty and reſpect in the pre- “ ſence of their maſters: ſo that when a paſcha, “ aga, ſpahee travels, he is always attended with “ a comely equipage, followed by flouriſhing “ youths, well clothed, and mounted in great num- “ bers; that one may gueſs at the greatneſs of this “ empire, by the retinue, pomp, and number of “ ſervants, which accompany perſons of quality in “ their journies.” And no doubt Nebuchadnezzar had ſome of theſe ends in view, in ordering ſuch perſons to be ſelected and brought up at his expence; that they might be both for ſervice and uſefulneſs, and for his grandeur and glory. And ſkilful in all wiſdom; in the wiſdom of the Jews, or had a liberal education according to the cuſtom of their country; or were young men of good capacities, capable of being inſtructed, and of improving themſelves in all kind of wiſdom: and cunning in knowledge; or knowing knowledge [m]; having a large ſhare of the knowledge of their own country, cuſtoms, and laws civil and religious: and underſtanding ſcience; the liberal arts and ſciences; or however were perſons of a good genius, and of retentive memories; young men of capacity, diligence, induſtry and application, and of great docility, and ſo very promiſing to make great and uſeful men: and ſuch as had ability in them to ſtand in the king's palace; not only ſtrength of body, which was requiſite to a long waiting there, as ſometimes they were obliged to do; but ſtrength of mind, courage, and undauntedneſs, to ſtand before the king and his nobles, without ſhewing a ruſtic fear, and timidity of mind: and whom they might teach the learning and tongue of the Chaldeans; or, the book and language of the Chaldeans [n]; book for books; ſuch as contained their literature, hiſtory and philoſophy, mathematicks, the knowledge of the ſtars, in which they excelled, as well as architecture and military ſkill; and it was neceſſary they ſhould learn the Chaldean language, which differed from the Hebrew chiefly in dialect and pronunciation, that they might be able to read thoſe books of ſcience, and to ſpeak with a good accent, and readily, before the king and his nobles; or rather the ſenſe is, that they might underſtood the Chaldean language, the manner of reading, writing, and pronouncing it. ספר tranſlated learning, may ſignify the letters of the language, the ſcripture or manner of writing, as Saadiah and Aben Ezra interpret it; which muſt be firſt learned in any language, in order to attain the knowledge of it; ſo it ſeems to be uſed in Iſ. xxix. 12. I am not learned, or know not a book or letters; ſee John vii. 15. and לשון tranſlated tongue, may ſignify the rules, idioms, and properties of the language; the nature, genius, and dialect of it, and ſignification of the words and phraſes uſed in it to be learned, ſo as to be thorough maſters of it, underſtand it, ſpeak it, and pronounce it well. But here a difficulty ariſes, ſince the form and character of the letters of the Chaldee and Hebrew languages now in uſe are the ſame; it may ſeem unneceſſary that Hebrew youths ſhould be put to ſchool to learn the Chaldean letters and language, tho' the dialect and idioms of the two languages might in ſome things differ; but let it be obſerved, that it might be, and it is not improbable, that the letters of the Chaldean language were not the ſame then as they are now; and Hottinger [o] expreſly ſays, that the ancient Chaldee character is not known; not to ſay any thing of the difference of the Hebrew letters then, from what they are now, which ſome have ſurmiſed: beſides, it is a clear caſe, that the Chaldee and Syriac languages are the ſame, as appears from ch. ii. 4. where the Chaldeans are ſaid to ſpeak to the king in Syriac; and yet, what follows, is no other than Chaldee, their mother-tongue, in which it was moſt proper and agreeable to ſpeak to the king: and as it is the opinion of many learned men now, that theſe languages are the ſame, ſo it was the ſenſe of the ancient Jews. Says R. Samuel Bar Nachman [p], let not the Syriac language be mean in thine eyes, or lightly eſteemed by thee; for in the law, in the prophets, and in the Hagiographa, the holy bleſſed God has imparted honour to it; in the law, Gen. xxxi. 47. in the prophets, Jer. x. 11. in the Hagiographa, Dan. ii. 4. to ch. viii. in all which places it is the Chaldee language that is uſed; and that which was ſpoken in Babylon, the head of the Chaldean empire, is called the Syriac; for Cyrus, when he took that city, ordered a proclamation to be made, by men ſkilled, συριστι, in the Syriac language, that the inhabitants ſhould keep within doors, and that thoſe that were found without, ſhould be ſlain [q]; which orders were publiſhed in that language, that they might be univerſally underſtood, being the language of the common people. So Herodotus, ſpeaking of the Aſſyrians, ſays [r], theſe by the Greeks are called Syrians, and by the barbarians Aſſyrians, among whom were the Chaldeans: and as Strabo obſerves [s], the ſame language or dialect was uſed by thoſe without Euphrates, and by thoſe within; that is, by the Syrians ſtrictly ſo called, and by the Babylonians or Chaldeans: and elſewhere [t], the name of Syrians reached from Babylon to Sinus Iſſicus; and formerly, from thence to the Euxine ſea. Now it is certain, that the form and character of the letters in the Syriac language, are very different from the Hebrew, and difficult to be learnt, and might be thoſe which theſe Hebrew youths were to be taught at ſchool, as well as the rudiments of it; and it is as evident, that the language of the Jews, and that of the Syrians, Chaldeans, and Babylonians, were ſo different, that the common people of the former, did not underſtand the language of the latter when ſpoke, as appears from 2 Kings xviii. 26. and Iſ. xxxvi. 11. ſo that there was an apparent neceſſity for the one to be taught the language of the other, in order to underſtand it.

---

[z] Biblioth. l. 2. p. 98. Ed. Rhodoman.

[a] Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 183.

[b] Biblioth. l. 2. p. 98.

[c] Apud Joſeph. Antiqu. l. 10. c. 11. §. 1.

[d] Vid. Rollin's Ancient Hiſtory, vol. ii. p. 70. and Univerſal Hiſtory, vol. iv. p. 409.

[e] Onomaſt. Sacr. p. 752, 753.

[f] ומזרע המלוכה ו ſo is ſometimes rendered; ſee Noldius. p. 276.

[g] פרתמים ex Græca voce πρωτος, Grotius, Junius.

[h] מאום quidquam quod obſtet, Guſſetius.

[i] Hiſtor. l. 6. c. 5.

[k] Politic. l. 4. c. 4. tom. 2. p. 224.

[l] Preſent ſtate of the Ottoman empire, B. 1. c. 5. p. 13.

℣. 5. And the king appointed them a daily proviſion of the king's meat, &c.] Every day a portion was ordered them from the king's table, of the richeſt dainties he himſelf eat of; which was done not only as an act of royal munificence and generoſity, and in reſpect of their birth and breeding; but alſo as a bait and ſnare to allure and entice them, to make them in love with the country and condition in which they were, and to forget their own; as well alſo, in order to preſerve their well-favoured look and good complexion, and fit them for their ſtudy of language and literature; which might be hindered for want of the neceſſaries of life, or by living on groſs and coarſe food: and of the wine which he drank; which, as it was of various ſorts, ſo of the beſt and moſt excellent; and which, moderately drank, conduces to the health of the body, and chearfulneſs of the mind; and which are both uſeful to forward learned ſtudies: ſo nouriſhing them three years; this was the time fixed for their acquiring the learning and language of the Chaldeans; during which, they were to be provided for from the king's table, and at his expence, as above; which term of time was judged ſufficient for their learning every thing neceſſary to qualify them for the king's ſervice; and in which time it might be thought they would forget their own country, cuſtoms, religion and language, and be inured to the place and perſons where they were, and be ſatisfied and eaſy with their condition and circumſtances: that at the end thereof they might ſtand before the king; that is, at the end of three years they might be preſented to the king for his examination and approbation, and be appointed to what ſervice he ſhould think fit; and particularly that they might be in his court, and miniſter to him in what poſt it ſhould be his pleaſure to place them. Some in Aben Ezra, and which he himſelf inclines to, read and interpret it, that ſome of them might ſtand before the king; ſuch as he ſhould chooſe out of them, that were moſt accompliſhed and moſt fit for his ſervice; ſo Jacchiades.

---

[m] וידעי דעת & ſcientes ſcientiam, Pagninus, Montanus; intelligentes ſcientiam, Calvin.
[n] ספר ולשון librum & linguam, Jo. Henr. Michaelis.
[o] Smegma Oriental. l. 1. c. 3. p. 35.
[p] Bereſhit Rabba, §. 74. fol. 65. 4.
[q] Xenophon. Cyropædia, l. 7. c. 23.
[r] Polymnia, ſive l. 7. c. 63.
[s] Geograph. l. 2. p. 58.
[t] Ibid. l. 16. p. 507.

℣. 6. Now among theſe were of the children of Judah, &c.] Among thoſe youths that were ſelected from the reſt, and brought up in the above manner, and for the above purpoſes, who were of the tribe of Judah, and very likely of the houſe of David, and of royal deſcent, were the four following perſons: Daniel, Hananiah, Miſhael, and Azariah; who are particularly mentioned, becauſe they were the moſt famous and renowned of them, and are concerned in the ſubſequent hiſtory, and account of facts: their names are expreſſive and ſignificant; Daniel ſignifies, God is my judge; Hananiah may be interpreted, God is gracious to me; Miſhael is by ſome thought to be the ſame as Michael, he who is God, or as God; and by others, aſked of God, by his mother, as Samuel was by Hannah, ſo Saadiah interprets it; and Azariah may be explained, God is my help, or helps me.

℣. 7. Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names, &c.] Other names, Chaldee names, according to the names of the gods of that country, for honour and glory, as Saadiah obſerves; which was done either to make them more acceptable to the court and courtiers of the king of Babylon; and to ſhew that they were his ſervants, and naturalized ſubjects; and chiefly to cauſe them to forget the names their fathers gave them, and out of hatred to them, having all of them in them the names of the true God, El or Jah; and moſt of all, that they might forget the God of their fathers, whoſe name they bore. This prince of the eunuchs ſeems to be the ſame with the maſter of the eunuchs, Aſhpenaz before-mentioned, ſo Jacchiades; but ſome take him to be another perſon: what he did in changing the names of theſe four Hebrew youths, were not of his own head, and by his own authority, but by the order of the king; ſee ch. v. 12: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteſhazzar; which ſignifies Bel hath hid and treaſured; or Bel's treaſurer, or the keeper of his treaſures; ſee ℣. 2. Bel was the chief idol of the Chaldeans, Iſ. xlvi. 1. and Daniel was named according to him, as Nebuchadnezzar himſelf ſays, ch. iv. 8. and differs but in one letter from the name of a ſucceſſor of his, Belſhazzar, ch. v. 1. hence Daniel is thought by Broughton, and others, to be the Beleſis of Diodorus Siculus: or it may be he had this name given him from Beltis or Baaltis[u], a queen and goddeſs of the Babylonians, and may be compounded of that and Azer: and to Hananiah of Shadrach; which ſome interpret, a tender pap, or breaſt: others, the king's meſſenger, or the meſſenger of the ſun. The word Rach ſignifies a king with the Chaldeans, as it did with the Egyptians, as may be obſerved in the word Abrec, the king's father, in Gen. xli. 43. and is uſed by them of the ſun, the prince of planets, whom they worſhipped: others, the inſpiration of the ſun, their idol. Hillerus[w] explains it, of fire, the object of their adoration: and to Miſhael of Meſhach; or, of Shach, which was a name of a god, or goddeſs of the Chaldeans they worſhipped; at the celebration of whoſe feaſt they were when Babylon was taken by Cyrus: and to Azariah of Abed-nego; or a ſervant, or worſhipper of Nego. The word ſignifies ſhining brightneſs; which ſome underſtand of fire worſhipped by them; others of the bright planet Venus; and others of Lucifer, or the morning-ſtar. Saadiah takes it to be the ſame with Nebo, by a change of a letter, which was a god of the Chaldeans; ſee Iſ. xlvi. 1.

℣. 8. But Daniel purpoſed in his heart, &c.] It being propoſed to him to be brought up in the manner before deſcribed, he revolved it in his mind; he well weighed it, and conſidered it with himſelf, and came to a reſolution about it. This is to be underſtood of him, not to the excluſion of his three companions, who were of the ſame mind with him, as appears by what follows; but perhaps it was firſt thought of by him; at leaſt, he firſt moved it to them, to which they conſented; and becauſe he was the principal in this affair, it is aſcribed to him as his purpoſe and reſolution: that he would not defile himſelf with the portion of the king's meat; by eating of it; partly becauſe it might conſiſt of what was forbidden by the law of Moſes, as the fleſh of unclean creatures, particularly ſwine, and fat and blood, and ſo defile himſelf in a ceremonial ſenſe; and partly, becauſe tho' it might be food in itſelf lawful to be eaten, yet part of it being firſt offered to their idol Bel, as was uſual, and the whole bleſſed in his name; it would have been againſt his conſcience, and a defiling of that, to eat of things offered to, or bleſſed in the name of, an idol: nor with the wine which he drank; which was as unlawful as his food; being a libation to his gods, as Aben Ezra obſerves; otherwiſe wine was not forbidden; nor was it diſuſed by Daniel, when he could partake of it in his own way, ch. x. 3: therefore he requeſted of the prince of the eunuchs, that he might not defile himſelf; he did not in a ſurly, ſtiff and obſtinate manner refuſe the meat and drink brought; but prudently made it a requeſt, and modeſtly propoſed it to the prince of the eunuchs, that had the care and charge of him and his companions; and who alſo joined with him in this humble ſuit, as appears by what follows.

℣. 9. Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.] Even before this requeſt was made; as he gave to Joſeph favour in the ſight of Potiphar, and of the keeper of the priſon; for whatever favour is ſhewn to good men by bad men, is from the Lord; for tho' Daniel's ingenuity, the goodneſs of his temper, and his modeſt behaviour, his excellent natural parts, and other accompliſhments, might be a means of ingratiating him into the favour of this officer; yet all would have been inſufficient to recommend him to him, or to overcome his prejudices on account of religion, if the Lord had not wrought upon his heart to ſhew kindneſs and tenderneſs to him; which appeared not only by his paſt uſage of him; but when he preſented his ſupplication to him, he did not put on a ſtern countenance, and anſwer him roughly, and threaten him if he did not comply with the king's orders; but in a mild and gentle manner, as follows:

---

[u] Vid. Euſeb. Præpar. Evangel. l. 1. p. 38. & l. 9. c. 41. p. 456.

[w] Onomaſt. Sacr. p. 924.

℣. 10. And the prince of the eunuchs ſaid unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, &c.] This he ſaid, not as refuſing and denying the requeſt of Daniel; but as heſitating about it, divided in his own mind, between love and tenderneſs to Daniel, and fear of the king: it is as if he ſhould ſay, I could freely out of reſpect to you grant you your requeſt; were it not for duty to my lord the king, reverence of him, and eſpecially fear of his wrath and diſpleaſure: who hath appointed your meat and your drink; has ordered it himſelf, both the quality and quantity, both, what, and how much; whoſe will is his law, and cannot be reſiſted, but muſt be obeyed; and tho' ſhould I indulge you in this matter, and it may be concealed for a while, yet it cannot be always a ſecret, your countenance will betray it: for why ſhould he ſee your faces worſe liking than the children which are of your ſort? than the other Jewiſh youths that were ſelected at the ſame time, and brought up in the ſame manner, and for the ſame ends. Some [x] render it, than the children of your captivity; who were taken and brought captive to Babylon when they were; but the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, Syriac and Arabic verſions render it, than thoſe of the ſame age [y]; their cotemporaries, that were born about the ſame time, and brought up together in the ſame way: or, than thoſe of your own nation? as ſome [z] tranſlate it: and now, when they ſhould be preſented together to the king, the difference would be obſervable; Daniel and his companions would appear of a pale complexion, of thin and meager looks, and dark diſmal countenances, like perſons angry, fretful and troubled, as the word ſignifies [a]; when their cotemporaries would appear fat and plump, chearful and pleaſant; which would naturally lead into an enquiry of the reaſon of this difference: then ſhall ye make me endanger my head to the king; I ſhall commit a treſpaſs, of which I ſhall be found guilty, and be condemned to die, and loſe my head for it; and now, as if he ſhould ſay, I leave it with you; can you deſire me to expoſe myſelf to ſo much danger? I would willingly grant your favour, but my life is at ſtake.

℣. 11. Then ſaid Daniel to Melzar, &c.] The prince of the eunuchs having put off Daniel with the above anſwer, ſeems to have left him; or however Daniel finding he could not obtain of him what he ſought for, applies to Melzar an under officer, whom he hoped to find more pliable; and it may be, that Aſhpenaz might ſuggeſt it to him, to apply to this perſon, and ſignify that if he could prevail upon him to give him other food inſtead of the king's; who might be under a temptation from profit, being a meaner officer; he for his part would wink at it, ſo be it he came not into any danger himſelf; however, be it as it will, Daniel did apply to this man, whoſe name was Melzar, for ſo moſt take it to be the proper name of a man; which, according to Hillerus [b], ſignifies one in full ſplendor. Joſephus calls [c] him Aſchanes; tho' ſome think it is the name of an office, as a ſteward, or the like; but whether it is expreſſive of his name, or his office, he is deſcribed as one, whom the prince of the eunuchs had ſet over Daniel, Hananiah, Miſhael, and Azariah; to give them their food at proper time.

℣. 12. Prove thy ſervants, I beſeech thee, ten days, &c.] Here Daniel manifeſtly includes his companions, and makes his requeſt for himſelf, and them; deſiring that they might be tried ten days with different ſort of food and drink, and ſee whether any alteration would be made in them for the worſe; which was a proper time for ſuch a trial; for in that time it might be reaſonably ſuppoſed that their food, if it had any bad effect on them, would appear. Saadiah makes theſe ten days to be the days between the firſt day of the year and the day of atonement; but without any foundation: and let them give us pulſe to eat, and water to drink; inſtead of the king's meat, pulſe, beans, peaſe, vetches, lentiles, rice, millet, and the like. The word [d] uſed ſignifies any thing ſown, all kinds of roots, herbs and fruits; and inſtead of wine water; meat and drink, it may be thought, that perſons of ſuch birth and education had not been uſed to; and yet they preferred theſe to the king's dainties, by eating and drinking of which their conſciences would be in danger of being defiled.

℣. 13. Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, &c.] And be thoroughly examined, whether any alteration is made therein for the worſe: and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat; who were either Chaldean youths brought up in this manner; or rather young men of the Jews, who were not ſo ſcrupulous as Daniel and his companions, and made no objection to eating the king's food; let their countenances and ours be compared together: and as thou ſeeſt, deal with thy ſervants; if there is no difference, or we are not the worſe for abſtaining from the king's meat, then grant us our requeſt, and continue to indulge us in this manner; but if otherwiſe, do as thou wilt. Daniel no doubt in putting the matter on this iſſue, as it ſhould turn out at the end of ten days, had a revelation or aſſurance from God how it would be; or he would never have ventured to put it to ſuch a trial.

℣. 14. So he conſented to them in all this matter, &c.] Or, hearkened to them [e]; being convinced that it was a very reaſonable requeſt, and the matter was fairly put; and eſpecially as he ſaw if it ſucceeded to their wiſh, it would be to his profit; ſince the meat and drink of theſe four perſons would be his perquiſite, and fetch him money; pulſe and water being to be obtained at an eaſy rate: and proved them ten days; tried the experiment, by giving them pulſe and water only during this time, in order to ſee how it would agree with them; and whether any viſible alteration could be diſcerned in their countenances, ſo as to bring him or his maſter into ſuſpicion and danger.

---

[x] כגילכם ſecundum captivitatem veſtram, Gejerus; in captivitate veſtra; ſic quidam legunt cum ב Vatablus.

[y] The word is only uſed in this place; but in the Arabic language جيل Gil is an age or generation, as in the Arabic verſion of Gen. vi. 9. Matt. i. 17. and xxiii. 36. Luke xi. 50, 51. So in the Talmudic language, בן גילו is one that is born in the ſame hour, and under the ſame planet, as the Gloſs explains it in T. Bab. Bava Metzia, fol. 27. 2.

[z] So Hottinger, who ſays, the word in the Arabic language ſignifies a nation or country; and renders the words, qui ſecundum nationem & gentem veſtram, Smegma Orientale, l. 1. c. 7. p. 134.

[a] זעפים, ſee Gen. xl. 6. 2 Chron. xxvi. 19. 1 Kings xx. 43. and xxi. 4. Prov. xix. 3, 12. ſo Ben Melech.

[b] Onomaſt. Sacr. p. 600.

[c] Antiq. l. 10. c. 10. §. 2.

[d] מן הזרעים, απο των σπερματων, Sept. de ſeminibus, Montanus; de ſativis, Coccejus.

[e] וישמע להם auſcultans eis, Junius & Tremellius, Broughtonus; auſcultavit eis, Piſcator, Cocceius.

℣. 15. And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer, and fatter in fleſh, &c.] At the time fixed for the trial of them, when they came to be examined, they appeared to be of a better complexion, and a more healthful look, and even plumper and fatter, with good ſolid fleſh, and not ſwelled up as perſons in a dropſy: than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat; who appeared at the ſame time, and were compared with them, being under the care of the ſame perſons: now this was owing to the bleſſing of divine providence, as Jacchiades obſerves; for how healthful ſoever pulſe may be, or the ſeveral things deſigned by it, particularly rice, of which Aben Ezra on the place gives great encomiums, as very ſalutary and nouriſhing, and a purifier of the blood; yet neither that, nor any of the things before-mentioned, tend to make perſons fat in fleſh, as theſe were.

℣. 16. Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, &c.] To himſelf, as the Syriac verſion adds; he took and carried it to his own family, and made uſe of it himſelf; and the portion of four ſuch young gentlemen, maintained at the king's expence, and who had their proviſion from his table, muſt be, eſpecially in the courſe of three years, of great advantage to this man and his family; for this was continued, as the word ſignifies, and may be rendered, and Melzar was taking away[f], &c. ſo he did from time to time; and thus by ſerving the Lord's people, he ſerved himſelf: and the wine that they ſhould drink; which he alſo took for his own uſe: and gave them pulſe; to eat, and water to drink, as the Syriac verſion adds, and which they deſired; when he found this agreed ſo well with them, and he could ſafely do it without expoſing himſelf to danger, and being to his profit and advantage.

℣. 17. As for theſe four children, God gave them knowledge and ſkill in all learning and wiſdom, &c.] As they proſpered in their bodies, they ſucceeded in their ſtudies, and improved in their minds, and became great proficients in all kind of lawful and uſeful knowledge; not owing ſo much to their own ſagacity and diligence, and the goodneſs and ability of their teachers, as to the bleſſing of God, on their inſtructions and ſtudies; for as all natural, ſo all acquired parts are to be aſcribed to God; and which theſe were favoured with by him in a very great manner, to anſwer ſome purpoſes of his. This is to be underſtood, not of magic art, vain philoſophy, judicial aſtrology, to which the Chaldeans were addicted; but of learning and wiſdom, laudable and uſeful, both in things natural and political; for theſe men, who ſcrupled eating and drinking what came from the king's table, would never indulge themſelves in the ſtudy of vain, curious, and unlawful knowledge; much leſs would God have bleſſed the ſtudy of ſuch things, and ſtill leſs be ſaid to give them knowledge and ſkill therein: and Daniel had underſtanding in all viſions and dreams; beſides knowledge and ſkill in all learning and wiſdom, in languages and ſciences, in common with the other young men; he had the honour of ſeeing very remarkable viſions of future things, and of interpreting dreams; and this not by rules of art, ſuch as the Oneirocriticks uſe, but by the gift of God; of which many notorious inſtances follow in this book.

℣. 18. Now at the end of the days that the king had ſaid, he ſhould bring them in, &c.] That is, at the end of three years; which was the time appointed for their education, and when they were to be brought before the king for his examination and approbation: then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar; even all the young men that were taken from among the children of Iſrael and Judah, as well as the four children before and after-mentioned, as appears by what follows. This was done by Aſhpenaz, and not Melzar.

℣. 19. And the king communed with them, &c.] He aſked them ſeveral queſtions upon the ſeveral articles of literature in which they had been educated, to try and ſee what proficiency they had made; he diſcourſed with them on various topics of learning, that he might be able to form a judgment of them, and of their capacities, and what employments under him they would be moſt fit for, and capable of. This ſhows that the king was a man of learning and good ſenſe, as well as prudence, to be capable of taking ſuch a ſtep as this: and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Miſhael, and Azariah; for their learning and knowledge: after the king had gone thro' the examination of all the youths, theſe four appeared to be the greateſt proficients, and were accordingly taken notice of and diſtinguiſhed: therefore ſtood they before the king; miniſtred unto him, became his ſervants, and even came to be of his privy-council, eſpecially Daniel; ſee Prov. xxii. 29.

℣. 20. And in all matters of wiſdom and underſtanding that the king enquired of them, &c.] At the time of their examination before him, when he put queſtions to them, which they gave a ready, pertinent and ſolid anſwer to: and afterwards when he had occaſion to conſult them on any affair, he found them ten times, or ten hands[g] better than all the magicians and aſtrologers that were in all his realm; than all the magi and ſophies, the enchanters, diviners, ſoothſayers, and ſuch who pretended to judicial aſtrology, and to judge of, and foretel things by the poſition of the ſtars; theſe young men were able to give more pertinent anſwers to queſtions put to them, and better advice and counſel when aſked of them, than all the perſons before deſcribed, throughout the king's dominions.

℣. 21. And Daniel continued, &c.] In Babylon, and at court there, and in the favour of Nebuchadnezzar and his ſucceſſors: even unto the firſt year of king Cyrus; by whom Babylon was taken, and when the ſeventy years captivity of the Jews were at an end; during which time Daniel was there, for the ſake of obſerving which this is mentioned: not that Daniel died in the firſt year of Cyrus; or went from Babylon with the reſt of the Jews to Jeruſalem upon the proclamation of Cyrus, as Jacchiades thinks; for we hear of him at the river Hiddekel, in the third year of Cyrus, ch. x. 1, 4. but he was till this time in the court of the kings of Babylon; and afterwards in the courts of the kings of Media and Perſia; for when it is ſaid, he was there, it does not ſo much intend his being there, as the ſtate and condition in which he was there; namely, as a favourite and prime-miniſter; for he is ſaid to proſper in the reign of Darius and Cyrus, ch. vi. 28. This is that Cyrus who was propheſied of by name near two hundred years before he was born, by the prophet Iſaiah, ch. xliv. 28. and xlv. 1. which were ſure prophecies, and to be depended upon; and had their exact accompliſhment in him. Heathen writers report many things, as preſages and predictions of his future greatneſs; they tell us ſome dreams, which his grandfather Aſtyages had concerning his daughter Mandane, the mother of Cyrus; which the interpreters of dreams in thoſe days explained of a future ſon of hers, that was to be lord of all Aſia [h]: and Megaſthenes [i] relates a prophecy of Nebuchadnezzar, who before his death foretold to the Babylonians, that a calamity ſhould befal them, which neither his progenitor Belus, nor queen Beltis could avert; which was, that a Perſian mule ſhould bring them under ſubjection, aſſiſted by a Mede; which is underſtood of Cyrus, who was a Medo-Perſian; his father was Cambyſes king of Perſia, and his mother Mandane was daughter of Aſtyages king of Media; and he with Darius the Mede, or however with his army, conquered Babylon: and he is alſo ſuppoſed to be the mule in the Pythian oracle, that ſhould be king of the Medes; by which Crœſus was deceived, who concluded a mule would never be a king; and therefore, as his kingdom was ſafe till there was ſuch an one, it muſt be for ever ſo [k]. The birth, parentage and education of this prince, together with his victories, and particularly his taking of Babylon, are recorded by Xenophon in his hiſtory, in great agreement with this book of Daniel. Plutarch ſays [l], that Cyrus, or Coreſh as his name is in Hebrew, in the Perſian tongue ſignifies the ſun; and the name of the ſun, Cheres, is pretty near in ſound to it in the Hebrew tongue; and of the ſame ſignification and derivation with Cyrus, or Coreſh ſeems to be Carſhena, one of the ſeven princes of Perſia. Cyrus is remarkably famous for the edict he publiſhed in favour of the Jews, giving them liberty to go to their own land, and rebuild their temple, Ezra i. 1, 2, 3. according to Cicero [m], out of Dionyſius the Perſian, he lived to be ſeventy years of age; and died after a reign of ſeven years, according to Xenophon [n]; and of nine years, according to Ptolemy's canon; the one reckoning from the time he became ſole monarch of the empire; the other from his reigning in partnerſhip with his uncle Cyaxares, or Darius the Mede.

---

[f] נשא fuit ferens, Montanus; auferens, Piſcator, Gejerus; perſeveravit auferre cibum, Cocceius; erat capiens, Michaelis.

[g] עשר ידות decem manibus, Montanus.

CHAP. II.

THE ſubject of this chapter is a dream which Nebuchadnezzar had dreamed, but had forgot; upon which he calls his magicians and aſtrologers together, to tell him it, and the interpretation of it; threatning them with death if they did not, and promiſing them great rewards and honour if they did, ℣. 1—6. they urge the unreaſonableneſs of the demand, and the impoſſibility of the thing; which ſo highly incenſed the king, that he ordered their immediate deſtruction, ℣. 7—13. Daniel and his companions being in danger, he goes in to the king, and deſires time, and he would ſhew him what he dreamed; which being granted, he ſpent it in prayer to God, ℣. 14—18. and the thing being revealed to him, he gave thanks to God, ℣. 19—23. and being introduced to the king, he both told him his dream, and the interpretation of it; which concerned the four monarchies of the world, and the everlaſting kingdom of the Meſſiah, ℣. 24—45. upon which he was highly honoured, and greatly promoted by the king, ℣. 46—49.

℣. 1. And in the ſecond year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, &c.] It was in the firſt year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign that Daniel was carried captive, Jer. xxv. 1. three years Daniel had been under tutors; at the end of which he was preſented to the king, as is related in the preceding chapter; and yet the following dream was in the ſecond of his reign: this creates a difficulty, which is ſolved by ſome thus; in the ſecond year after the deſtruction of the temple, ſo the Jewiſh chronicle [o], with which Jarchi agrees; others, as Aben Ezra, in the ſecond year of his monarchy, after he had ſubdued all the nations round about; and ſo Joſephus ſays [p], it was in the ſecond year after the deſtruction of the Egyptians. R. Moſes the prieſt, in Aben Ezra, would have it to be the ſecond year to his reign, to the end of it, when there were only two years wanting to it; a very unuſual way of reckoning indeed! and therefore juſtly rejected by Aben Ezra: but all theſe dates are too late, ſince Daniel long before theſe times was well known, and in great fame for his wiſdom; whereas, at this time, it does not appear that he was much known, or in great requeſt: it is better either to render it, in the ſecond year, that is, after Daniel and his companions had been preſented to the king and promoted; even in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, as oppoſed to the reign of Darius or Cyrus, in which he flouriſhed alſo: or rather this was the ſecond year of Nebuchadnezzar's reigning alone; for he had been taken into partnerſhip in the throne with his father before his death, as Beroſus [q] obſerves, which is ſaid to be two years; ſo that this ſecond year was the fourth year of his reign, reckoning from the time he reigned conjunctly with his father, tho' the ſecond of his reigning alone: yet it ſeems beſt of all to render the words with Noldius [r], but in the ſecond year, in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar; that is, in the ſecond year of Daniel's miniſtry in, or under the reign of Nebuchadnezzar; who continued at court under different reigns, till the firſt of Cyrus: this was, according to biſhop Uſher [s], and Mr. Whiſton [t], in the year of the Julian period 4111, and before Chriſt 603. Mr. Bedford [u] places it in 604: Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams; which, tho' but one, yet relating to various things, the ſeveral parts of the human body, and the different metals the form he ſaw was made of, as well as the four monarchies it ſignified, is called dreams. Jacchiades ſays, he firſt dreamed the dream, and then the interpretation of it; which is the reaſon of the plural number: wherewith his ſpirit was troubled; it gave his mind a great deal of trouble while he was dreaming it; and when he awaked, tho' he could not recover it, yet he had ſome confuſed broken ideas of it; it had left ſome impreſſions upon him, which gave him great uneaſineſs, and the more as he could not recollect any part of it; his mind was agitated, and toſſed to and fro, and under the greateſt perplexity: and his ſleep brake from him; went away from him, thro' the ſtrangeneſs of the dream, and the effect it had upon him.

---

[h] Herodoti Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 107, 108. Juſtin è Trogo, l. 1. c. 4.

[i] Apud Euſeb. Præpar. Evangel. l. 9. c. 41. p. 456, 437.

[k] Herodotus, ib. c. 55.

[l] In Vita Artaxerxis.

[m] De Divinatione, l. 1.

[n] Cyropædia, l. 8. c. 45.

[o] Seder Olam Rabba, c. 28. p. 80.

[p] Antiq. l. 10. c. 10. §. 3.

[q] Apud Joſeph. contr. Apion. l. 1. c. 19.

[r] Concord. Ebr. Part. p. 452. N°. 1405.

[s] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3401.

[t] Chronological Tables, cent. 9.

[u] Scripture-Chronology, p. 677.

℣. 2. Then the king commanded to call the magicians, &c.] He ordered his ſervants in waiting to ſend immediately for the wiſe men, the philoſophers of that age and kingdom, that ſtudied the things of nature, and the natural cauſes of things: and the aſtrologers; that caſt nativities, and pretended by the poſition and influence of the ſtars to know what would befal men: and the ſorcerers; or wizards, that made uſe of familiar ſpirits, and the help of the devil; necromancers that conſulted the dead, in order to get knowledge of future things: and the Chaldeans; ſo called, not from their country; for probably all the preceding were Chaldeans by nation; but inaſmuch as the ſtudy of judiciary aſtrology, and other unlawful arts, greatly obtained in Chaldea; hence thoſe that were addicted to them had this name[w]: for to ſhew the king his dreams; both what it was he dreamed, and what the interpretation or meaning of it was: ſo they came, and ſtood before the king; they came immediately with great readineſs and willingneſs, eſteeming it a great honour done them to be ſent for by the king, and admitted into his chamber; and hoping it would turn much both to their credit and profit; and being come, they ſtood waiting his will and pleaſure.

℣. 3. And the king ſaid unto them, I have dreamed a dream, &c.] What before is called dreams, is here expreſſed in the ſingular, a dream; for it was but one dream, tho' it contained in it various things; this the king could remember, that he had a dream; for it had left ſome impreſſion on his mind, tho' he could not call to mind what it was about. Aben Ezra makes mention of one of their Gaons or Rabbins, that affirmed that Nebuchadnezzar knew his dream, but was willing to try the wiſe men; but, as he obſerves, he could not ſurely believe the words of Daniel: and my ſpirit was troubled to know the dream; both that, and the meaning of it; he ſays nothing as yet about the interpretation of it; concluding that if they could tell him the dream, they could explain it to him; or then it would be time enough to enquire after that.

℣. 4. Then ſpake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriac, &c.] Theſe ſpake, either becauſe the interpretation of dreams particularly belonged to them; or elſe as being the chief of the wiſe men, and of greateſt authority; or as choſen by the reſt, and ſpake in their name; and indeed this appellation may include them all, being all of the ſame country, tho' they might differ in their profeſſion: they ſpake in the Syriac or Babyloniſh language, the ſame with the Chaldee, being their mother-tongue, and that of the king too; and therefore could more eaſily ſpeak it themſelves, and be more eaſily underſtood by him, than if they had ſpoke in another; ſee the note on ch. i. 14. and from hence to the end of the ſeventh chapter, Daniel writes in Chaldee; the things he treats of chiefly relating to the Chaldeans: O king, live for ever; which is a wiſh of long life, health and proſperity; and does not intend an everlaſting continuance in this world, or an eternal life in another, to the knowledge of which they might be ſtrangers: this was an uſual form of ſalutation of kings in theſe eaſtern nations; like to this is that of Sinætus a Perſian, to Artaxerxes Mnemon[x], "O king Artaxerxes, reign "for ever;" ſo ſaid[y] Artabazus, a faithful friend of Darius, to Alexander the Great, when he met him with the friends and relations of Darius, "O "king, may you flouriſh in perpetual happineſs:" tell thy ſervants the dream, and we will ſhew the interpretation; this was not the thing that was aſked of them, but the dream itſelf; and if that had been told them, they promiſe more than there is reaſon to believe they would have fulfilled, had that been done; it is more than the Egyptian magicians could do, even when Pharaoh had told them his dream: this they ſaid partly to get time, and partly to make a ſhew of their ſkill and knowledge; tho' in a very vain and arrogant manner.

℣. 5. The king anſwered and ſaid to the Chaldeans, &c.] In the ſame language they ſpoke to him: the thing is gone from me; either the dream was gone from him; it was out of his mind, he had forgot it, and could not call it to remembrance; he had been dreaming of monarchies and kingdoms, which are themſelves but dreams and tales, and empty things that paſs away, and which he might have learned from hence: or as it may be rendered, the word is confirmed by me[z]. Saadiah ſays, that ſome obſerve that the word here uſed has the ſignification of ſtrength or firmneſs; and ſo Aben Ezra interprets the word, is ſtable and firm; to which agrees the Syriac verſion, "moſt "ſure is the word which I pronounce;" referring not to the dream, but to what follows the king's declaration, both with reſpect to threatnings and promiſes: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof; the king ſpeaks as if he thought it was in their power, but they were unwilling to do it; tho' no doubt had they been able, they would have readily done it, both for their credit and advantage: ye ſhall be cut in pieces; not only cut in two, but into various pieces, limb by limb, as Agag by Samuel, and the Ammonites by David; and which was a puniſhment often inflicted in the eaſtern nations; as Orpheus was cut to pieces by the Thracian women, and Beſſus by order of Alexander the Great[a]; much the ſame puniſhment as with us, to be hanged, drawn and quartered: and your houſes ſhall be made a dunghil; be deſtroyed, and never rebuilt more, but put to the moſt contemptible uſes: and this was common among the Romans; when any were found plotting againſt the government, or guilty of treaſon, they were not only capitally puniſhed, but their houſes were pulled down, or the names of them changed; or however were not uſed for dwelling houſes; ſo the houſe of Caius Caſſius was pulled down and demoliſhed for his affectation of government, and for treaſon; and that of M. Manlius Capitolinus who was ſuſpected of ſeizing the government, after he was thrown from the rock, was made a mint of; and that of Spurius Melius for the ſame crime, after he had ſuffered, was by reproach called Æquimelium;

---

[w] Vid. Juvenal. Satyr. 6. A. Gellii Noct. Attic. l. 1. c. 9. Cicero de Divinatione, l. 1.

[x] Ælian. Var. Hiſt. l. 1. c. 32.

[y] Curtius, l. 6. c. 5.

[z] מלתה מני אזדא verbum a me firmum, vel firmatum, Michaelis; à me decretum & ſtatutum, L'Empereur.

[a] Vid. Curtium, l. 7. c. 5. p. 206.

inelium; and of the like kind many inſtances are given [b]: and ſo among the Grecians; Pauſanias [c] relates of Aſtylus Crotoniata, that by way of puniſhment, and as a mark of infamy upon him for a crime he had done, his houſe was appointed for a public priſon. Herodotus [d] reports of Leutychides general of the Lacedemonians in the Theſſalian expedition, that having received money by way of bribery, for which he was tried and condemned, tho' he made his eſcape, his houſe was demoliſhed; and the ſame uſage and cuſtom remains to this day in France: thus the unhappy Damien, a madman, who of late ſtabbed the French king; one part of his ſentence was, that the houſe in which he was born ſhould be pulled down, as he himſelf alſo was pulled and cut to pieces; ſee 2 Kings x. 27.

℣. 6. But if ye ſhew the dream, and the interpretation thereof, &c.] Which he was extremely intent upon to know; and therefore makes uſe of every way to obtain it, firſt by threatnings to terrify, and next by promiſes to allure: ye ſhall receive of me gifts, and rewards, and great honour; gold, ſilver, jewels, rich apparel, houſes, lands, and great promotion to ſome of the higheſt places of honour, truſt and profit in the kingdom, as Daniel afterwards had: therefore ſhew me the dream, and the interpretation thereof; at once, directly, without any more ado; for the king was impatient of it.

℣. 7. They anſwered again, and ſaid, &c.] Or, a ſecond [e] time; repeating the ſame words, having nothing more to ſay: let the king tell his ſervants the dream, and we will ſhew the interpretation thereof; the firſt part was but right and reaſonable, tho' the latter was mere boaſting and arrogancy.

℣. 8. The king anſwered and ſaid, I know of certainty, &c.] I ſee plainly and clearly what you are at, and am fully aſſured you mean nothing, but that ye would gain the time; or buy [f], or redeem time, as in Eph. v. 16. prolong time, put off the anſwer to longer time; ſpin out time, as people do in buying and ſelling; or have it in their poſſeſſion and power when to anſwer; and ſo by gaining time, or being maſter of it, might hope ſomething would turn up to their advantage, and extricate them out of their preſent difficulties: becauſe ye ſee the thing is gone from me; the dream he could not remember; or becauſe the decree was certain which he had determined concerning them; ſee the note on ℣. 5.

℣. 9. But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, &c.] For the preſent he does not inſiſt upon the interpretation, only the dream itſelf, at leaſt this is now only mentioned; concluding that if they could do the one, they could do the other, as is after obſerved: there is but one decree for you; for them all; and that was the decree of death; which ſhould never be revoked or mitigated, or the ſentence be changed for another; but ſhould certainly be executed, and in which they were all involved, not one ſhould eſcape: for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to ſpeak before me; framed a deceitful anſwer to impoſe upon me, and ſkreen yourſelves: till the time be changed; either that he could remember his dream, and tell them it himſelf; or all the images and impreſſions of it were wore off his mind, ſo that they could tell him any thing, and he not be able to diſprove them; or he would grow indifferent to it, and his paſſionate deſire after it cool, and he be careleſs whether he knew it or no; or he or they ſhould die; or he might be engaged in other affairs, and be called abroad to war, as he had been; or ſome thing or other turn up, whereby they might eſcape the ruin threatened. Saadiah fixes the time to noon, when the converſation of kings ceaſed, and they were otherwiſe engaged: therefore tell me the dream, and I ſhall know that ye can ſhew me the interpretation thereof; for by being able to tell a dream that was paſt, it might be concluded they were able to tell what was to come, ſignified by that dream; and if they could not declare what was paſt, how ſhould it be thought that they could foretel things to come?

℣. 10. The Chaldeans anſwered before the king and ſaid, &c.] As follows, in order to appeaſe his wrath, and cool his reſentment, and bring him to reaſon: there is not a man upon the earth can ſhew the king's matter; or, upon the dry land [g]: upon the continent, throughout the whole world, in any country whatever; not one ſingle man can be found, be he ever ſo wiſe and learned, that can ſhew the king what he requires; and yet Daniel afterwards did; and ſo it appears by this confeſſion, that he was greater than they, or any other of the ſame profeſſion with them: this is one argument they uſe to convince the king of the unreaſonableneſs of his demand; it being ſuch that no man on earth was equal to; another follows: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler; there neither is, nor never was, any potentate or prince, be who he will; whether, as Jacchiades diſtinguiſhes them, a king over many provinces, whoſe empire is very large; or lord over many cities; or ruler over many villages belonging to one city; in ſhort, no man of power and authority, whether ſupreme or ſubordinate: that aſked ſuch things at any magician, or aſtrologer, or Chaldean; never was ſuch a thing required of any before; no inſtance, they ſuggeſt, could be produced in ancient hiſtory, or in the preſent age, in any kingdom or court under the heavens, of ſuch a requeſt being made; or that any thing of this kind was ever inſiſted upon; and therefore hoped the king would not inſiſt upon it; and which no doubt was true: Pharaoh required of his wiſemen to tell him the interpretation of his dream, but not the dream itſelf.

℣. 11. And it is a rare thing the king requireth, &c.] Meaning not ſcarce, or ſeldom heard of; for they had before aſſerted, it never had been required; but that it was hard and difficult, yea with them, and as they ſuppoſed with any other, impoſſible to be done: and there is none other that can ſhew it before the king, except the gods, whoſe dwelling is not with fleſh; theſe men own there was a God, tho' they held more than one; and the omniſcience of God, tho' they ſeem to have no notion of his omnipreſence; and to ſuggeſt, as if he had no concern with mortals; had no regard to men on earth, nor communicated the knowledge of things unto them. Jarchi, Aben Ezra, and Saadiah, interpret this of angels, who are incorporeal; but the ſuperior deities of the Gentiles are rather deſigned; who were ſuppoſed to dwell in heaven, and to have no converſation with men on earth; theſe, 'tis owned, could declare to the king what he deſired, and no other; and therefore ſhould not perſiſt in his demand on them.

---

[b] Vid. Alex. ab Alex. Genial. Dier. l. 3. c. 23.
[c] Eliac. 2. ſive l. 6. p. 366.
[d] Erato, ſive l. 6. p. 72.
[e] תנינות. δεύτερον, Sept. ſecundò, Pagninus, Montanus, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; ſo Ar.
[f] די עדנא אנתון זבנין quòd tempus vos emitis, Pagninus, Munſter; ementes, Montanus; vos tempus redimere, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator.
[g] על יבשתא ſuper aridam, Pagninus, Montanus; ſuper arida, Cocceius; ſuper arido, Michaelis.

℣. 12. For this cauſe the king was angry, and very furious, &c.] Not only becauſe they could not tell his dream, and the interpretation of it; but becauſe they repreſented him as requiring a thing unreaſonable and impoſſible, which had never been done by any potentate but himſelf, and could never be anſwered but by the gods: this threw him into an exceſs of wrath and fury; which in thoſe tyrannical and deſpotic princes was exceeding great and terrible: and commanded to deſtroy all the wiſe men of Babylon; not only thoſe that were now in his preſence, but all others; concluding from this inſtance that they were an uſeleſs ſett of men, yea deceivers and impoſtors.

℣. 13. And the decree went forth, that the wiſe men ſhould be ſlain, &c.] Or, and the wiſe men were ſlain[h], as the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Syriac verſions render it; and ſo Saadiah: orders were given by the king to his proper officers, and his edict was publiſhed, and his will made known in the uſual manner; upon which the wiſe men, at leaſt ſome of them, were ſlain; very probably thoſe who were in the king's preſence, and at court; and the officers were gone out to ſlay the reſt: and they ſought Daniel and his fellows to be ſlain; who had the character of wiſe men, and might be envied at court, and ſo the officers took this opportunity, having theſe orders to ſlay them: there was, no doubt, a particular providence, that Daniel and his friends ſhould not be at court at this time; both that the vanity of the Chaldean wiſdom and arts might be the more manifeſt and made known, and the divine and ſuperior wiſdom and knowledge of Daniel might be more conſpicuous, and his fame be ſpread in Babylon, and in other provinces.

℣. 14. Then Daniel anſwered with counſel and wiſdom, &c.] In a diſcreet manner, uſing ſoft words and gentle language, humbly and modeſtly enquiring what ſhould be the meaning of all this. The Vulgate Latin verſion is, he enquired of the law and decree[i]; what was the reaſon of the king's orders, which this officer had in commiſſion to execute; with which others agree: or, he made to return the counſel and decree[k], as ſome chuſe to render it; he ſtopped the execution of it for the preſent, by his enquiries and prudent behaviour; but neither ſeem to agree with what follows; the firſt ſenſe is beſt: to Arioch the captain of the king's guards; there was a king of this name, Gen. xiv. 1. this man, according to the Septuagint verſion, and others that follow it, was the chief of the king's cooks; and Aben Ezra ſays, the word in the Arabic language ſo ſignifies: or as it may be rendered, the chief of the ſlaughterers[l]; the executioners of malefactors, ſo Jarchi; he was the king's chief executioner, with which agrees the buſineſs he was now charged with: the Vulgate Latin verſion calls him the prince of the militia; and others the king's provoſt-marſhal: which was gone forth to ſlay the wiſe men of Babylon; who by the king's order went forth from the court into the city, to ſlay all in Babylon who went under the character of wiſe men; tho' they were not among thoſe that could not anſwer the king's demand, ſince they declared none could do it; and therefore he ordered them all to be ſlain, as a ſett of uſeleſs men in his kingdom.

℣. 15. And he anſwered and ſaid to Arioch the king's captain, &c.] Or governor[m]; over the perſons before-mentioned; either the king's guard or militia, or cooks or executioners: before, the manner in which Daniel anſwered is obſerved; here, the matter of it, as follows: why is the decree ſo haſty from the king? or, why this raſh, haſty, or cruel (as the Vulgate Latin verſion) decree from the king? for ſo it was: what is the cauſe and reaſon of it? then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel; who before was ignorant of it; he was not with the wiſe men before the king; either they did not care he ſhould go with them, and therefore called him not; or he did not chuſe to go himſelf, being under no temptation by the rewards offered, and eſpecially having no ſummons from the king himſelf: this being his caſe, Arioch informs him of the whole affair; how that the king had dreamed a dream, and forgot it; and had ſent for the wiſe men to tell him both it and the interpretation; but they not being able to do it, and declaring alſo that it was impoſſible to be done, the king had given orders to ſlay all of that character.

℣. 16. Then Daniel went in, &c.] Or went up[n]; to the king's palace, which might be built on an eminence; or into his chamber, where he probably was; or in ſome upper room, very likely introduced by Arioch; and which was a bold and daring action in them both: in Arioch, to ceaſe from doing his orders, and entring into the king's preſence before he had; and in Daniel, to appear before him, having the name of a wiſe man, when the king was in ſuch a fury; all which was owing to the providence of God, that wrought upon the heart of Arioch, to liſten to what Daniel ſaid, and inſpired them both with courage to go in to the king: and deſired of the king that he would give him time; not two or three days, but only that night till morning, as Saadiah obſerves; and this with a view not to read books, or ſtudy any art, or by reaſoning with himſelf, or converſation with others, to get knowledge, but to pray to God: and that he would ſhew the king the interpretation; that is, of his dream, and the dream itſelf; being perſuaded in his own mind, that God would hear his prayers, and make it known to him. The king granted him his requeſt, tho' he upbraided the wiſe men of their deſign to gain time; but perhaps, upon the ſight of Daniel, he remembred him again, and how ſuperior in wiſdom he was to all his magicians and wiſe men; and beſides, Daniel gave him hope, yea aſſurance, of ſhewing his dream, and the interpretation of it, which his mind was very eager after; but chiefly this ſubſiding of his wrath, and his indulging Daniel in his requeſt, were owing to the over-ruling providence of God.

℣. 17. Then Daniel went to his houſe, &c.] Which Sanctius thinks was in the king's palace; very probably it might be near it, ſome where in the city of Babylon; for that it ſhould be twenty miles from that city, as Benjamin of Tudela relates [o], is not likely; ſince Arioch's orders reached to none but the wiſe men of Babylon, and where he ſought for and found Daniel; hither he went to be alone, and to ſeek the Lord in ſecret: and made the thing known to Hananiah, Miſhael, and Azariah his companions; who either dwelt in the ſame houſe with him, or not far off; whom he ſent for and acquainted with all that had paſſed, both between the king and the wiſe men, and the conſequence of that, and between him and the king, and what promiſe he had made, relying on his God and theirs.

---

[h] וחכימיא מתקטלין & ſapientes interficiebantur, Pagninus, Montanus, Munſter, Piſcator, Michaelis.

[i] התיב עטא וטעם interrogavit de lege & decreto, V. L. ſuper conſilio, Munſter, Calvin; de eo conſilio, Caſtalio.

[k] Redire fecit conſilium & ſtatutum, Pagninus, Montanus; reverti fecit, Michaelis.

[l] רב טבחיא principem carnificum, Montanus, Grotius.

[m] שליטא dominatori, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Broughtonus.

[n] על aſcendit, Gejerus.

ỳ. 18. That they would deſire mercies of the God of heaven concerning this ſecret, &c.] His view in ſending for them, and informing them of this whole affair, was to engage them in prayer to God with him; even to that God that made the heaven, and dwells there, and is above all, and ſees and knows what is done in earth, and rules both in heaven and in earth according to his will; to intreat his mercy, whoſe mercies are manifold, and not plead any merits of their own; and that he would in compaſſion to them, and the lives of others that were in danger, make known this ſecret of the king's dream, and the interpretation of it; which could never be found out by the ſagacity of men, or by any art they are maſters of: this Daniel requeſted of them, as knowing that it was their duty and intereſt, as well as his, to unite in prayer unto God on this account, and that the joint and fervent prayer of righteous men avails much with him: that Daniel and his fellows ſhould not periſh with the reſt of the wiſe men of Babylon; which they were in danger of: this was the mercy they were to implore, being in diſtreſs, and this the intereſt they had in this affair; a ſtrong argument to induce them to it.

ỳ. 19. Then was the ſecret revealed unto Daniel in a night-viſion, &c.] That is, after Daniel and his companions had importunately ſought the Lord by prayer; the ſecret of the king's dream, and the interpretation of it, were made known to Daniel, and to him only; he being the perſon deſigned in providence to be raiſed to great honour and dignity by means of it; this was done either the ſame night, or the night following, and, as ſome think, in a dream, and that he dreamed the ſame dream Nebuchadnezzar did, which he remembred, tho' the king forgot it; or however, the ſame image was repreſented to him, whether ſleeping or waking, and the meaning of it given him: then Daniel bleſſed the God of heaven; gave thanks to him, that he had heard his prayer, and indulged him in his requeſt; which thankſgiving, bleſſing, or praiſe, is expreſſed in the following words:

ỳ. 20. Daniel anſwered and ſaid, &c.] That is, he began his prayer, as Jacchiades obſerves, or his thankſgiving, and expreſſed it in the following manner: bleſſed be the name of God for ever and ever; a form of bleſſing God, or a wiſh that he may be bleſſed by men for evermore; for there is that in his name, in his nature, in his perfections, and in his works, which require that praiſe be given him now, and to all eternity: for wiſdom and might are his; wiſdom in forming the ſcheme of things, and might or power in the execution of them; wiſdom in revealing the ſecret of the dream to Daniel, and might to accompliſh the various events predicted in it: for what Daniel here and afterwards obſerves, has a very peculiar regard to the preſent affair, for which his heart was warm with gratitude and thankfulneſs.

ỳ. 21. And he changeth the times and the ſeaſons, &c.] Not only of day and night, ſummer and winter, and times and ſeaſons of proſperity and adverſity; but all the changes and revolutions in ſtates and kingdoms, in all times and ages, are from him; and particularly thoſe pointed at in the following dream, in the Babylonian, Perſian, Grecian, and Roman monarchies: he removeth kings, and ſetteth up kings; he is King of kings, and Lord of lords; by him they reign, and continue on their thrones, as long as he pleaſes; and then he removes them by death or otherwiſe, and places others in their ſtead; and who are ſometimes raiſed from a low eſtate; and this he does in the ordinary courſe of providence; ſee Pſ. lxxv. 6, 7. and particularly Daniel might have in view the removal of the Babylonian monarchs, and ſetting up kings of the race of the Medes and Perſians; and then the degrading them, and advancing the Grecians to the height of monarchy; and then reducing of them, and raiſing the Romans to a greater degree of power and authority; and at laſt cruſhing them all in their turns, to make way for the kingdom of his Son: he giveth wiſdom to the wiſe, and knowledge to them that know underſtanding; an increaſe of wiſdom and knowledge, to wiſe politicians and counſellors of ſtate, to form wiſe ſchemes of peace or war, to make wiſe laws, and govern kingdoms in a prudent manner; and to wiſe maſter-builders or miniſters of the word, to ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, to diffuſe the knowledge of Chriſt every where, and make known the myſteries of grace to the ſons of men; particularly to Daniel and his companions, who were wiſe and knowing men, the interpretation of the king's dream.

ỳ. 22. He revealeth the deep and ſecret things, &c.] The purpoſes of his own heart, which are the deep things of God, and the ſecrets that belong to him, and which are opened in providence by the execution of them; the arcana imperii, or ſecrets of ſtate, committed to men deſigned for government; the ſecrets or myſteries of grace, the deep things of the goſpel, made known to goſpel-miniſters; and particularly the deep and impenetrable ſecret of the king's dream, and the interpretation of it, revealed to Daniel: he knoweth what is in the darkneſs; the actions of men committed in darkneſs; the ſchemes that are drawn in the privy-councils and cabinets of princes; yea, the thoughts of mens hearts, which lie in the utmoſt receſſes of them, as well as their dreams in the night-ſeaſon; and particularly this of the king's, and which muſt have been buried in darkneſs, had he not revealed it: and the light dwelleth with him; he is light itſelf, and the Father of lights; the light of nature, grace, and glory is with him, and from him; the light of the word, the light of prophecy, and the light of the glorious goſpel; and alſo the light of the world, the ſun of righteouſneſs, the Meſſiah; and of him ſome of the ancient Jews interpret this paſſage. R. Aba Serungia [p], mentioning this paſſage, and the light dwelleth with him, adds, this is the king Meſſiah, as it is ſaid, ariſe, ſhine, &c. and his commentator [q] obſerves, that the ſenſe of it is, he (God) retains the Meſſiah with himſelf, and does not ſend him forth unto us; ſee Pſ. xliii. 3. and elſewhere [r], in anſwer to the queſtion, what is the name of the Meſſiah? among others, this is ſaid, his name is light, as it is ſaid, and the light dwelleth with him; and this is a name that is often given to Chriſt, and he takes to himſelf in the New Teſtament; ſee John i. 7, 8, 9. and iii. 19. and viii. 12. and ix. 5. and xii. 35, 46. where he is called the light, that light, the true light, and the light of the world; as he is both of Jews and Gentiles, even of all his people throughout the world: indeed, the light of nature, which every man has, is from him, as the creator of all; and the light of grace, and the increaſe of it, which any are favoured with, is given by him; and all the light of knowledge in divine things, and of ſpiritual joy and comfort, beams from him the ſun of righteouſneſs: the light of the latter day, which will be ſo very great, as to be as the light of ſeven days, and to make the ſun and moon unneceſſary in a figurative ſenſe, will be owing to him; as well as all that light of life and glory, the ſaints ſhall poſſeſs to all eternity, will be communicated thro' him: and Chriſt, who is this light, dwells with God; he who is the ſame with the divine word, was with God, and dwells with him to all eternity; in the fulneſs of time this word or light was made fleſh, or was clothed with it, and dwelt with men; when it was, that he came a light into the world, of which he often ſpeaks; and having done his work, aſcended to heaven, and now dwells with God in human nature; and will come again, and dwell with men on earth a thouſand years, when he will be the light of the new Jeruſalem-ſtate; and after that, will take his people with him to heaven, and dwell with God, and they with him for evermore. This ſhows, that this light, or the divine logos, is a perſon diſtinct from God the Father, with whom he dwells; that he is an eternal one, God never being without this light and word; and that he is an abiding light to his ſaints, and will be for evermore.

---

[o] Itinerarium, p. 76.

[p] In Bereſhit Rabba, §. 1. fol. 1, 3.

[q] Auctor Yade Moſeh in ib.

℣. 23. I thank thee, and praiſe thee, O thou God of my fathers, &c.] His remote anceſtors, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and more near progenitors, to whom God had made promiſes, and revealed his ſecrets in time paſt, and ſtill continued his favours to Daniel; for which he was abundantly thankful, and owned and confeſſed the goodneſs of God to him, and praiſed him on account of it: who haſt given me wiſdom and might; or ſtrength [s]; courage and fortitude of mind, to go in to the king when in his fury, to promiſe to ſhew his dream, and the interpretation of it; and ſtrength of faith in prayer to God to obtain it, and who gave him wiſdom to know it: Jacchiades interprets this might of power to ſave his own life, and the life of others: and haſt made known unto me now, what we deſired of thee; for tho' it was only made known to Daniel, yet it was in conſequence of the united prayers of him and his companions, to which he aſcribes it; which ſhows his great modeſty and humility, not to attribute it to his own prayer, and the intereſt he had in God, as a God hearing prayer: for thou haſt now made known unto us the king's matter; or word [t]; which he required of the wiſe men, namely, his dream, and the interpretation of it; this being made known to Daniel, he communicated it to his friends.

℣. 24. Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, &c.] Into his apartments at court, or wherever he was in queſt of the wiſe men, of which Daniel had knowledge; this he did as ſoon as the ſecret was revealed to him, though not before he had given thanks to God: whom the king had ordained to deſtroy the wiſe men of Babylon; this is a deſcription of Arioch, from the office aſſigned him by king Nebuchadnezzar, who had appointed him to ſee this his will and pleaſure accompliſhed: he went and ſaid thus unto him, deſtroy not the wiſe men of Babylon; that is, do not go on to deſtroy them, for ſome he had deſtroyed; this Daniel ſaid, not from any ſpecial love he bore them, tho' ſome of them might have been his preceptors in the language and literature of the Chaldeans, and ſo he might have a natural affection for them, and indeed might ſay this out of common humanity; but this did not ariſe from any love he had to their wicked arts, which he abhorred, but from love of juſtice; for however wicked theſe men might be, or however deſerving of death on other accounts, yet not on this account, for not doing what was impoſſible for them to do: bring me in before the king, and I will ſhew unto the king the interpretation; that is, of the dream, and that itſelf: by this it ſeems that Daniel, as yet, was not ſo well known at court, nor of ſo much eſteem and authority there, as to go in to the king of himſelf, but needed one to introduce him; and which confirms what has been ſuppoſed on ℣. 16.

℣. 25. Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haſte, &c.] As knowing how impatient the king was, to have his dream, and the interpretation of it, told him; and how pleaſing this would be to him, and be a means of ingratiating and eſtabliſhing him in his affections, as well as for the ſake of ſaving the lives of the wiſe men: and ſaid thus unto him, I have found a man of the captives of Judah: as if he had made it his buſineſs to enquire after a man capable of anſwering the king's demands; whereas he ſought after Daniel at firſt, not for this purpoſe, but to deſtroy him; and now Daniel made his application to him for introduction to the king, and was not looked after by Arioch; but he here did, as courtiers do, make the moſt of every thing to their own advantage, to inſinuate themſelves into the favour of princes: it looks by this, as if Arioch did not know of Daniel's having been with the king before, and of the promiſe he had made him; that granting him time, he would ſatisfy him in the matter requeſted, which he was now ready to do, as he had told Arioch; and therefore he adds, that will make known unto the king the interpretation; that is, of his dream.

℣. 26. The king anſwered and ſaid to Daniel, whoſe name was Belteſhazzar, &c.] The name given him by the prince of the eunuchs, ch. i. 7. and by which he was known to Nebuchadnezzar; and very likely he called him now by this name, which is the reaſon of its being mentioned: art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have ſeen, and the interpretation thereof? this he ſaid, either as doubting and queſtioning, or as admiring that one ſo young ſhould be able to do that, which his ſeniors, the wiſe men in Babylon, could not do; or he put this queſtion, as impatient to hear what he muſt expect from him, whether the performance of his promiſe, or ſuch an anſwer as the wiſe men had given him.

---

[r] Echa Rabbati, fol. 50. 2.

[s] גבורתא fortitudinem, V. L. Pagninus, Montanus; robur, Piſcator.

[t] מלת verbum, Junius & Tremellius, Broughtonus, Michaelis; ſermonem, Pagninus, Montanus; quod dicit rex, Cocceius.

℣. 27. Daniel anſwered in the preſence of the king, &c.] Boldly, and without fear: and ſaid, the ſecret which the king hath demanded; ſo he calls it, to ſhow that it was ſomething divine, which came from God, and could only be revealed by him, and was not to be found out by any art of man: cannot the wiſe men the aſtrologers, the magicians, the ſoothſayers ſhew unto the king; this he premiſes to the revelation of the ſecret, not only to obſerve the unreaſonableneſs of the king's demand upon them, and the injuſtice of putting men to death for it; but that the diſcovery of the whole might appear to be truly divine, and God might have all the glory; it being what no claſs of men whatever could ever have made known unto him. The laſt word, rendered ſoothſayers [u], is not uſed before; the Septuagint verſion leaves it untranſlated, and calls them Gazarenes; and ſo Saadiah ſays, it is the name of a nation or people ſo called; but Jarchi takes them to be a ſort of men that had confederacy with devils: the word ſignifies ſuch that cut into parts, as the ſoothſayers, who cut up creatures, and looked into their entrails, and by them made their judgment of events; or as the aſtrologers, who cut and divide the heavens into parts, and by them divine future things; or determine, as Jacchiades ſays, what ſhall befal men; for the word is uſed alſo in the ſenſe of determining or decreeing; hence Saadiah ſays, ſome interpret it of princes, who by their words determine the affairs of kingdoms: by ſome it is rendered, fataliſts [w], who declare to men what their fate will be; but neither of theſe could ſhew this ſecret to the king.

℣. 28. But there is a God in heaven that revealeth ſecrets, &c.] By this Daniel meant to inform the king, that there was but one God, in oppoſition to the notion of polytheiſm, that obtained among the heathens; that this one God is in heaven, and preſides over all perſons and things on earth; and that to him alone belongs the revelation of ſecrets, and not to heathen gods, or to any magician, aſtrologer, &c. and of this kind was the king's dream, a ſecret impenetrable by men: and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar, what ſhall be in the latter days; in the latter days of his monarchy, which ſhould be ſubverted, and ſucceeded by another; and in ages after that, during the Perſian, Grecian, and Roman monarchies; and in the days of the Meſſiah, even in the latter of his days: thy dream, and the viſions of thy head upon thy bed, are theſe; which were of God, and of great importance; and that the king might obſerve it, Daniel introduces theſe words with what goes before, and ſays what follows:

℣. 29. As for thee, O king, &c.] So far as thou haſt any concern in this matter, or with reſpect to thee, the following was thy caſe; theſe the circumſtances and ſituation in which thou wert: thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed, which ſhould come to paſs hereafter; as he lay on his bed, either ſleeping or waking, very probably the latter, his thoughts were employed about this great monarchy he had erected, and what would be the iſſue of it; and was very deſirous of knowing what ſucceſſors he ſhould have in it, and how long it would continue, and what would be the fate of it; when he fell aſleep upon this, and had a dream agreeable to his waking thoughts: and he that revealeth ſecrets; a periphraſis of the God of heaven, as in the preceding verſe: maketh known unto thee what ſhall come to paſs; this he did by the dream he gave him, tho' he had forgot it; and now by reſtoring that, and the interpretation of it, by Daniel.

℣. 30. But as for me, &c.] As to the part I have in this affair, I can aſcribe nothing to myſelf; it is all owing to the God of heaven, the recovery of the dream, and its interpretation: this ſecret is not revealed to me, for any wiſdom that I have more than any living; not that he thought, or affirmed that he had, more wiſdom than any man living, as the Vulgate Latin verſion, and others ſuggeſt; but as the king might think he had, by revealing this ſecret to him, and that it was owing to that; but that he had not ſuch wiſdom, and whatever he had, which was the gift of God, it was not thro' that, or any ſagacity and penetration into things he was maſter of, ſuperior to others, that it was revealed to him; and therefore would not have it placed to any ſuch account; this he ſaid in great modeſty, and in order to ſet the king right, and that God might have all the glory: but for their ſakes that ſhall make known the interpretation to the king; meaning not only himſelf, and his companions concerned with him, that they might be promoted to honour and dignity, but the whole body of the Jews in captivity, with which they were in connexion; that they might meet with more civil and kind treatment, for the ſake of the God they worſhipped, who revealed this ſecret to the king; or, but that they might make known, &c [x]. the three perſons in the Godhead, as ſome; the angels, as others; the miniſters of God, as Aben Ezra: or rather it may be rendered imperſonally, but that the interpretation might be made known to the king [y], as by the Vulgate Latin, as it follows: and that thou mighteſt know the thoughts of thy heart; both what they were, which were forgotten, and the meaning of them.

℣. 31. Thou, O king, ſaweſt, &c.] Or, waſt ſeeing [z]; not with the eyes of his body, but in his fancy and imagination; as he was dreaming, he thought he ſaw ſuch an appearance, ſo it ſeemed to him, as follows: and behold a great image; or, one great image [a]; not painted, but a maſſy ſtatue made of various metals, as is afterwards declared; ſuch, tho' not ſo large as this, as the king had been uſed to ſee, which he had in his garden and palace, and which he worſhipped; but this was of a monſtrous ſize, a perfect coloſſus, and but one, tho' it conſiſted of various parts; it was in the form of a great man, as Saadiah and Jacchiades obſerve; and repreſented the ſeveral monarchies of this world governed by men; and theſe being expreſſed by an image, ſhew how vain and deluſory, how frail and tranſitory, are the kingdoms of the earth, and the glory of them: this great image, whoſe brightneſs was excellent, ſtood before thee; right overagainſt him, and near him, as he thought; ſo that he had a full view of it, and ſaw it at its full length and bigneſs, and its dazzling luſtre, ariſing from the various metals of gold, ſilver, braſs, and iron it was made of; which was exceeding bright, and made it look very majeſtic: and the form thereof was terrible; either there was ſomething in the countenance menacing and horrid; or the whole form being ſo gigantic, ſtruck the king with admiration, and was even terrible to him; and it may denote the terror that kings, eſpecially arbitrary and deſpotic ones, ſtrike their ſubjects with.

---

[u] גזרין ſectores, Cocceius, Gejerus.

[w] Fatidici, Munſter, Tigurine verſion; qui de homine determinant hoc, vel illo modo ipſi eventurum eſſe, Jacchiades.

[x] להן־יהודעון ſed ut notificarent, Pagninus, Montanus; indicent, Vatablus.

[y] Sed ut interpretatio regi manifeſta fieret, V. L. eo fine ut indicetur, De Dieu.

[z] חזה הוית videns fuiſti, Montanus, Michaelis; videns eras, Vatablus.

[a] צלם חד שגיא imago una grandis, Pagninus, Montanus; imago una magna, Junius & Tremellius, Cocceius; ſimulachrum unum magnum, Michaelis.

℣. 32. This image's head was of fine gold, &c.] The prophet begins with the ſuperior part of this image, and deſcends to the lower, becauſe of the order and condition of the monarchies it repreſents: this ſignifies the Babylonian monarchy, as afterwards explained; called the head, being the firſt and chief of the monarchies; and compared to fine gold, becauſe of the glory, excellency, and duration of it: his breaſt and his arms of ſilver; its two arms, including its hands and its breaſt, to which they were joined, were of ſilver, a metal of leſs value than gold; deſigning the monarchy of the Medes and Perſians, which are the two arms, and which centred in Cyrus, who was by his father a Perſian, by his mother a Mede; and upon whom, after his uncle's death, the whole monarchy devolved: his belly and his thighs of braſs; a baſer metal ſtill; this points at the Macedonian or Grecian monarchy, ſet up by Alexander, ſignified by the belly, for intemperance and luxury; as the two thighs denote his principal ſucceſſors, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, the Syrian and Egyptian kings; and theſe of braſs, becauſe of the ſounding fame of them, as Jerom.

℣. 33. His legs of iron, &c.] A coarſer metal than the former, but very ſtrong; and deſigns the ſtrong and potent monarchy of the Romans, the laſt of the four monarchies, governed chiefly by two conſuls; and was divided, in the times of Theodoſius, into the eaſtern and weſtern empire, which may be ſignified by the two legs: his feet part of iron, and part of clay; or, ſome of them of iron, and ſome of them of clay [b]; that is, the ten toes of the feet, which repreſent the ten kingdoms the weſtern empire was divided into, ſome of which were potent, others weak; for this cannot be underſtood of the ſame feet and toes, being a mixture, compoſed partly of one, and partly of the other; ſince iron and clay will not mix together, ℣. 43. and will not agree with the form of expreſſion. Jerom interprets this part of the viſion of the image to the ſame ſenſe, who lived about the time when it was fulfilling; for in his days was the irruption of the barbarous nations into the empire; who often ſpeaks of them in his writings [c], and of the Roman empire being in a weak and ruinous condition on the account of them. His comment on this text is this, "the fourth kingdom, which clearly belongs to the Romans, is the iron that breaks and ſubdues all things; but his feet and toes are partly iron, and partly clay, which is moſt manifeſtly verified at this time; for as in the beginning nothing was ſtronger and harder than the Roman empire, ſo in the end of things nothing weaker; when both in civil wars, and againſt divers nations, we ſtand in need of the help of other barbarous people." And whereas he had been blamed for giving this ſenſe of the paſſage, he vindicates himſelf elſewhere by ſaying [d], "if, in the expoſition of the image, and the difference of its feet and toes, I interpret the iron and clay of the Roman kingdom, which the ſcripture fore-ſhews ſhould be firſt ſtrong, and then weak, let them not impute it to me, but to the prophet; for ſo we muſt not flatter princes, as that the truth of the holy ſcriptures ſhould be neglected; nor is the general diſputation of one perſon an injury;" that is, of any great moment to the government.

℣. 34. Thou ſaweſt, till that a ſtone was cut out without hands, &c.] Or, waſt ſeeing [e]; the king continued looking upon the image that ſtood before him, as he thought, as long as he could ſee it, till he ſaw a ſtone; an emblem of the Meſſiah, as it often is in ſcripture, Gen. xlix. 24. Pſ. cxviii. 22. Iſ. viii. 14. and xxviii. 16. Zech. iii. 8. becauſe of his ſtrength, firmneſs, and duration; and ſo it is interpreted here by many Jewiſh writers ancient and modern, as well as by chriſtians; and alſo of his kingdom, or of him in his kingly office; ſee ℣. 44. In an ancient book [f] of theirs, written by R. Simeon Ben Jochai, the author interprets this ſtone, cut out of the mountain without hands, to be the ſame with him, who in Gen. xlix. 24. is called the ſhepherd and ſtone of Iſrael; as it is by Saadiah Gaon, a later writer: and in another of their writings [g], reckoned by them very ancient, it is ſaid, that the ninth king (for they ſpeak of ten) ſhall be the king Meſſiah, who ſhall reign from one end of the world to the other, according to that paſſage, the ſtone which ſmote the image, &c. ℣. 35. and in one of their ancient Midraſhes [h] or expoſitions, it is interpreted of the king Meſſiah: and ſo R. Abraham Seba [i], on thoſe words, from thence is the ſhepherd, the ſtone of Iſrael, Gen. xlix. 24. obſerves, the king Meſſiah does not come but by the worthineſs of Jacob, as it is ſaid, thou ſaweſt, till that ſtone cut out without hands, becauſe of Jacob. This is ſaid to be cut out without hands; that is, the hands of men, as Saadiah and Jacchiades explain it; not cut out by workmen, as ſtones uſually are out of quarries; but was taken out by an unſeen hand, and by inviſible power, even purely divine: this may point at the wondrous incarnation of Chriſt, who was made of a woman, of a virgin without the help of a man, by the power of God; ſee Heb. viii. 2. and ix. 11. and at his kingdom, which was like a ſingle ſtone at firſt, very ſmall, and was cut out and ſeparated from the world, and ſet up and maintained, not by human, but divine power, and being of a ſpiritual nature, 2 Cor. v. 1. Col. ii. 11: which ſmote the image upon his feet, that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces; this ſeems to repreſent this image as in a plain, when from a mountain hanging over it, a ſtone is taken by an inviſible hand, and rolled upon it; which falling on its feet, breaks them to pieces, and in courſe the whole ſtatue falls, and is broken to ſhivers; this reſpects what is yet to be done in the latter day, when Chriſt will take to himſelf his great power, and reign, and ſubdue and deſtroy the ten kings or kingdoms that are given to antichriſt, and him himſelf, and the remainder of the ſeveral monarchies, and in which they will all end.

℣. 35.

---

[b] מנהון די פרזל ומנהון די חסף ex illis quidam ex ferro, & ex illis quidam ex luto, Gejerus.

[c] Opera, tom. 1. in Epitaph. Nepotian. fol. 9. I. ad Gerontiam, fol. 32. E. & in Epitaph. Fabiolæ, fol. 68. H.

[d] Proœm. in Comment. in Eſaiam, l. 11. fol. 65.

[e] חזה הוית videns eras, Montanus, Michaelis.

[f] Zohar in Gen. fol. 86. 2.

[g] Pirke Eliezer, c. 11. fol. 12. 2.

[h] Bemidbar Rabba, §. 13. fol. 209. 4.

[i] Tzeror Hammor, fol. 63. 2.

℣. 35. Then was the iron, the clay, the braſs, the ſilver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, &c.] The feet, the baſis of the image, being broken, the whole body of it fell, and with its own weight was broken to pieces; an emblem this of the utter diſſolution of all the monarchies and kingdoms of the earth, ſignified by theſe ſeveral metals: and became like the chaff of the ſummer threſhing floors; which is exceeding ſmall and light: and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them; for the ſeveral metals, and the monarchies ſignified by them, which were no more: the alluſion is to the manner of winnowing corn in the eaſtern countries upon mountains, when the chaff was carried away by the wind, and ſeen no more: and the ſtone that ſmote the image became a great mountain, and filled the earth; Chriſt's kingdom, from ſmall beginnings, has increaſed, and will more and more, until the whole earth is ſubject to it: this began to have its accompliſhment in the firſt times of the goſpel, eſpecially when the Roman empire, as pagan, was deſtroyed by Conſtantine, and the kingdom of Chriſt was ſet up in it; and it received a further accompliſhment at the time of the Reformation, when Rome papal had a deadly blow given it, and the goſpel of Chriſt was ſpread in ſeveral nations and kingdoms; but it will receive its full accompliſhment, when both the eaſtern and weſtern antichriſts ſhall be deſtroyed, and the kingdoms of this world ſhall become the Lord's and his Chriſt's, Rev. xi. 15.

℣. 36. This is the dream, &c.] Which Nebuchadnezzar dreamed, but had forgot, and was now punctually and exactly made known to him; for the truth of which he is appealed unto; for no doubt, by this account, the whole of his dream, and every circumſtance of it, were brought to his mind: and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king; for tho' both the dream, and the interpretation of it, were only revealed to Daniel; yet he joins his companions with him, partly becauſe they were now preſent, and chiefly becauſe they were aſſiſting to him in prayer for it.

℣. 37. Thou, O king, art a king of kings, &c.] Having many kings ſubject and tributary to him, or would have; as the kings of Judah, Ammon, Moab, and others, and who were even his captives and priſoners; ſee Jer. lii. 32. Jarchi and Saadiah join this with the next clauſe, the God of heaven, and interprets it of him thus, thou, O king Nebuchadnezzar, the King of kings, who is the God of heaven, hath given unto thee, &c. ſo ſome in the Talmud underſtand it of God [k]; but this is contrary to the accents: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and ſtrength, and glory; that is, a very powerful, ſtrong, and glorious kingdom, famous for its mighty armies, ſtrong fortreſſes, and great riches, from all which the king had great honour and glory; and this he had not by his anceſtors, or his own military ſkill and proweſs, but by the favour and gift of God.

℣. 38. And whereſoever the children of men dwell, &c.] Not in every part of the habitable world, but in every part of his large dominion inhabited by men: the beaſts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thine hand; all parks, chaſes, and foreſts, ſo that none might hunt or hawk without his permiſſion, as well as the perſons and habitations of men, were at his diſpoſe; ſhewing the deſpotic power and ſovereign ſway he had over his ſubjects: and hath made thee ruler over all; men, beaſts, and fowl: he not only conquered the Egyptians, Tyrians, and Jews, and other nations about them; but according to Megaſthenes [l], he exceeded Hercules in ſtrength, and conquered Lybia and Iberia, and carried colonies of them into Pontus; and as Strabo [m] ſays, carried his arms as far as the pillars of Hercules: thou art this head of gold; or who was repreſented by the golden head of the image he had ſeen in his dream; not he perſonally only, but his ſucceſſors Evil-Merodach and Belſhazzar, and the Babyloniſh monarchy, as poſſeſſed by them; for this refers not back to the Aſſyrian monarchy, from the time of Nimrod, but to its more flouriſhing condition in Nebuchadnezzar and his ſons; called an head, becauſe the firſt of the monarchies; and golden, in compariſon of other kingdoms then in being, and becauſe of the riches of it, which the Babylonians were covetous of; hence Babylon is called the golden city, Iſ. xiv. 4. and it may be, becauſe not ſo wicked and cruel to the Jews as the after monarchies were: from hence the poets have been thought by ſome to have taken their notion of the golden, ſilver, and iron ages, as growing worſe and worſe; but this diſtinction is obſerved by Heſiod, who lived many years before this viſion was ſeen.

℣. 39. And after thee ſhall ariſe another kingdom inferior to thee, &c.] This is the kingdom of the Medes and Perſians, ſignified by the breaſts and arms of ſilver, an inferior metal to gold; this roſe up, not immediately after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, but after his ſucceſſors, when Belſhazzar his grandſon was ſlain, and Babylon taken by Cyrus; now tho' this monarchy was as large at the firſt as the Babyloniſh monarchy, nay larger, as it had Media and Perſia added to it, new conqueſts made by Cyrus, and was as rich and as opulent in his times; yet in after-reigns it ſunk much, in its peace and proſperity, grandeur and glory, as in the times of Cambyſes and the Magi; and eſpecially in the reigns of Cyrus the younger, and of Artaxerxes Mnemon; and at laſt ceaſed in Darius Codomannus, conquered by Alexander; and was worſe than the former monarchy, being more cruel under ſome of its princes to the people of the Jews: and another third kingdom of braſs; this is the Grecian monarchy, which ſucceeded the Perſian, and therefore called the third kingdom, and is ſignified by the belly and thighs of braſs of the image; ſee the note on ℣. 32: which ſhall bear rule over all the earth; not the land of Iſrael, as Saadiah reſtrains it, but the whole world, as Alexander did, at leaſt in his own opinion; who thought he had conquered the whole world, and wept becauſe there was not another to conquer; and it is certain he did ſubdue a great part of it. Juſtin [n] ſays, "that when he was returning to Babylon from the uttermoſt ſhores of the ſea, it was told him, that the embaſſies of the Carthaginians and other cities of Africa, and alſo of Spain, Sicily, France, Sardinia, and ſome out of Italy, were waiting for his coming; the terror of his name ſo ſtruck the whole world, that all nations complimented him as their king deſtined for them." And Pliny reports [o] of Macedonia, that "it formerly (that is, in the times of Alexander) governed the world; this (ſays he) paſſed over Aſia, Armenia, Iberia, Albania, Cappadocia, Syria, Egypt, Taurus, and Caucaſus; this ruled over the Bactrians,

---

[k] T. Bab. Shebuot, fol. 35. 2.

[l] Apud Euſeb. Prepar. Evangel. l. 9. c. 41. p. 456.

[m] Geograph. l. 15. p. 472.

[n] Ex Trogo, l. 12. c. 13.

[o] Natural. Hiſt. l. 4. c. 10.

“ Medes and Perſians, poſſeſſing the whole eaſt; this alſo was conqueror of India.”

℣. 40. And the fourth kingdom ſhall be ſtrong as iron, &c.] This is not the kingdom of the Lagidæ and Seleucidæ, the ſucceſſors of Alexander, as ſome have thought; for theſe are deſigned by the thighs in the third kingdom; and beſides, the kingdom of Chriſt was to ariſe in the time of this fourth kingdom, which it did not in that; nor the kingdom of Gog, or the empire of the Turks, as Saadiah, Aben Ezra, and Jarchi; but the Roman empire, which is compared to iron for its ſtrength, firmneſs and duration in itſelf; and for its power over other nations; and alſo for its cruelty to the Jews above all others, in utterly deſtroying their city, temple and nation: foraſmuch as iron breaketh in pieces, and ſubdueth all things; ſo this kingdom has ſubdued and conquered all others; not the Jews only, but the Perſians, Egyptians, Syrians, Africans, French, Germans, yea all the world: and as iron that breaketh, or even as iron breaketh all theſe, ſhall it break in pieces, and bruiſe; all nations and kingdoms; hence Rome has been called the miſtreſs of the world, and its empire in ſcripture is called the whole world, Luke ii. 1. ſee Rev. xvii. 18.

℣. 41. And whereas thou ſaweſt the feet and toes, part of potters clay, and part of iron, &c.] That is, ſome of the toes of the feet were of iron, and others of them of clay: theſe toes, which are ten, as the toes of men are, deſign the ten kings or kingdoms, into which the weſtern Roman empire was divided, by the coming in of the Goths, and Hunns, and Vandals into it; and are the ſame with the ten horns of the beaſt, and the ten kings which gave their kingdoms to it, Rev. xiii. 1. and xvii. 12, 13, 17. ſee the notes there, and on Dan. vii. 24. ſome of which were ſtrong like iron, and continued long; others were like clay, and of a leſs duration: the kingdom ſhall be divided; which ſome underſtand of the diviſion of it into the eaſtern and weſtern empires; but rather it means the diviſion of the latter into the ten kingdoms, ſet up in it by the barbarous nations. Abarbinel and Jacchiades interpret it of the Roman empire being divided into Mahometans and Chriſtians, very wrongly: but there ſhall be in it of the ſtrength of the iron, foraſmuch as thou ſaweſt the iron mixt with miry clay; notwithſtanding this irruption and inundation of the northern nations into the empire; yet it ſtill retained ſomething of the ſtrength and power of the old Romans, which were mingled among thoſe barbarous nations, comparable to miry clay.

℣. 42. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, &c.] Or ſome of them of iron, and ſo were ſtrong and powerful, as ſome of theſe kingdoms were; and ſome of clay, and ſo were weak and eaſily cruſhed, and did not ſtand long: ſo the kingdom ſhall be partly ſtrong, and partly broken; this is not unfitly interpreted by ſome of the twofold power which has prevailed in theſe ten kingdoms, thro' the policy of the pope of Rome, the ſecular and eccleſiaſtic power; the latter often incroaching upon, and prevailing over the other, which has tended to the weakening of theſe ſtates.

℣. 43. And whereas thou ſaweſt iron mixt with miry clay, &c.] That is, iron among the clay; otherwiſe iron and clay will not mix and cement together, as is affirmed in the latter part of the verſe; but as ſome of theſe toes were of iron, and others of clay, or ſome part of them were iron, and ſome part of them of clay, they ſhall mingle themſelves with the ſeed of men; the Romans ſhall mix with people of other and many nations that ſhall come in among them, and unite in ſetting up kingdoms; or theſe kingdoms ſet up ſhall intermarry with each other, in order to ſtrengthen their alliances, and ſupport their intereſts: thus France, Spain, Portugal, and other nations; thoſe of the royal families marry with each other, with ſuch views: but they ſhall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay; and yet theſe ties of marriage and of blood, ſhall not cauſe them to cleave to, and abide by one another; but ambition and worldly intereſts will engage them to take part with each others enemies, or to go to war with one another, to the weakening and hurting each other; and thus the potſherds of the earth will daſh one another to pieces; and thoſe who are more powerful like the iron, will trample the weaker like miry clay under their feet.

℣. 44. And in the days of theſe kings, &c.] Not of the Babylonian, Perſian, and Grecian kings; nor indeed of the old Roman kings or emperors; but in the days of theſe ten kings or kingdoms, into which the Roman empire is divided, ſignified by the ten toes, of different power and ſtrength. Indeed the kingdom of Chriſt began to be ſet up in the times of Auguſtus Cæſar, under whom Chriſt was born; and of Tiberius, under whom he was crucified; and was continued and increaſed in the reigns of others, until it obtained very much in the times of Conſtantine; and after it ſuffered a diminution under the papacy, was revived at the reformation; but will not be ſet up in its glory, until Chriſt has overcome the ten kings or kingdoms, and put it into their hearts to hate and burn the antichriſtian whore; and when ſhe and all the antichriſtian ſtates will be deſtroyed by the pouring out of the vials: and then in their days ſhall the God of heaven ſet up a kingdom which ſhall never be deſtroyed; this is the kingdom of the Meſſiah, as is owned by both ancient and modern Jews: ſo it is ſaid in an ancient book [p] of theirs, “in the time of the king Meſſiah Iſrael ſhall be one nation in the earth, and one people to the holy bleſſed God; as it is written, in the days of theſe kings ſhall the God of heaven ſet up a kingdom,” &c. and in another of their writings [q], eſteemed very ancient, it is ſaid, “the Iſhmaelites ſhall do fifteen things in the earth in the laſt days; the laſt of which mentioned is, they ſhall erect an edifice in the temple; at length two brothers ſhall riſe up againſt them, and in their days ſhall ſpring up the branch of the ſon of David; as it is ſaid, in the days of theſe kings,” &c. and both Jarchi and Aben Ezra interpret this kingdom of the kingdom of the Meſſiah; and ſo Jacchiades, a much later writer, ſays, the laſt kingdom is that of the Meſſiah; and another modern Jewiſh writer ſays [r], in the time of the king Meſſiah there ſhall be but one kingdom, and but one king; and this the king, the true Meſſiah; but the reſt of the kingdoms and their kings ſhall not ſubſiſt in his time; as it is written, in the days of theſe kings, &c. which kingdom is no other than his church on earth, where he reigns; has his throne; holds forth his ſceptre; gives out his laws, and is obeyed: and tho' this is already in the world, yet it is not ſo viſible, ſtable and glorious, as it will be at the cloſe of the fourth monarchy, which is meant by its being ſet up, confirmed and eſtabliſhed; and this will be done by the God of heaven, the maker and poſſeſſor of it, and who dwells in it, and rules there, and over all the earth; and therefore Chriſt's church or kingdom is often called the kingdom of heaven; and when it is thus eſtabliſhed, it will ever remain viſible; its glory will be no more eclipſed; and much leſs ſubverted and overthrown, by all the powers of earth and hell. Chriſt was ſet up as king from everlaſting, and the elect of God were appointed and given him as a kingdom as early; and in and over theſe he reigns by his Spirit and grace in time, when they are effectually called and brought into ſubjection to him; theſe are governed by laws of his making; he is owned by them as their lord and king, and they yield a ready and chearful obedience to his commands, and he protects and defends them from their enemies; and ſuch a kingdom Chriſt has always had from the beginning of the world: but there was a particular time in which it was to be ſet up in a more viſible and glorious manner: it was ſet up in the days of his fleſh on earth, tho' it came not with obſervation, or was attended with outward pomp and grandeur, it being ſpiritual and not of this world; upon his aſcenſion to heaven it appeared greater; he was made or declared Lord and Chriſt, and his goſpel was ſpread every where: in the times of Conſtantine it was ſtill more glorious, being further extended, and enjoying great peace, liberty and proſperity: in the times of popiſh darkneſs, a ſtop was put to the progreſs of it, and it was reduced into a narrow compaſs; at the reformation there was a freſh breaking of it out again, and it got ground in the world: in the ſpiritual reign it will be reſtored, and much more increaſed, thro' the goſpel being preached, and churches ſet up every where; and Chriſt's kingdom will then be more extenſive; it will be from ſea to ſea, and from the river to the ends of the earth; it will be more peaceable and proſperous; there will be none to annoy and do hurt to the ſubjects of it; it will be no more ſubject to changes and revolutions, but will be in a firm and ſtable condition; it will be eſtabliſhed upon the top of the mountains, and be more viſible and glorious, which is here meant by its being ſet up; eſpecially this will be the caſe in the millennium-ſtate, when Chriſt ſhall reign before his ancients gloriouſly, and they ſhall reign with him; and this will never be deſtroyed, but ſhall iſſue in the ultimate glory; for now all enemies will be put under the feet of Chriſt and his church; the beaſt and falſe prophet will be no more; and ſatan will be bound during this time, and after that caſt into the lake of fire and brimſtone, with all the wicked angels and men: and the kingdom ſhall not be left to another people; as the Babylonian monarchy to the Medes and Perſians; the Perſian monarchy to the Greeks; and the Grecian monarchy to the Romans; but this ſhall not be left to a ſtrange people, but ſhall be given to the ſaints of the Moſt High; ſee ch. vii. 27: but it ſhall break in pieces, and ſubdue all theſe kingdoms; the Babylonian, Perſian, Grecian, and Roman; the three former in the latter, which has ſwallowed them up; beſides, the reſt of theſe monarchies, which are all ſignified by beaſts in an after prophecy, are ſaid ſtill to live, tho' their dominion is taken away, ch. vii. 12. the ſame nations are in being, tho' not as monarchies, and have not the ſame denomination, and are in other hands; now theſe, and whatſoever kingdoms ſhall exiſt, when this ſhall be ſet up, ſhall be either broke to pieces, and utterly deſtroyed, or become ſubject to it; ſee 1 Cor. xv. 24: and it ſhall ſtand for ever; throughout time in this world, and to all eternity in another; it will be an everlaſting kingdom; which is interpreted by Irenæus[a], an ancient chriſtian writer in the ſecond century, of the reſurrection of the juſt; his words are, "the great God hath ſignified by Daniel things to come, and he hath confirmed them by the Son; and Chriſt is the ſtone which is cut out without hands, who ſhall deſtroy temporal kingdoms, and bring in an everlaſting one, which is the reſurrection of the juſt; for he ſaith, the God of heaven ſhall raiſe up a kingdom which ſhall never be deſtroyed;" this is the firſt reſurrection which brings on the perſonal reign, in which the righteous ſhall reign with him a thouſand years; ſee Rev. xx. 5, 6.

---

[p] Zohar in Gen. fol. lxxxv. 4.

[q] Pirke Eliezer, c. 30. fol. 31. 2.

[r] R. Iſaac, Chizzuk Emunah, par. 1. p. 45.

℣. 45. Foraſmuch as thou ſaweſt that the ſtone was cut out of the mountain without hands, &c.] See the note on ℣. 34: and that it brake in pieces the iron, the braſs, the clay, the ſilver, and the gold; of which the image was made, he had ſeen in his dream; and which repreſented the ſeveral monarchies of the world in ſucceſſion, and deſcribed their nature, condition and circumſtances, and the ruin of them; ſee the note on ℣. 35: the great God hath made known to the king what ſhall come to paſs hereafter; after his own death, and in his own monarchy; and what will be the fate of ſucceeding ones; what will come to paſs in the ſeveral ages of time, and what will be done in the laſt days; what an everlaſting kingdom there will be, when the kingdoms of this world ſhall be no more; and this the great God, who is great in knowledge as well as power, made known to him, which none elſe could; and by which he appears to be great, and above all gods, as Nebuchadnezzar afterwards owns; and which Daniel here ſuggeſts to him; ſee Iſ. xlv. 21. and xlvi. 9, 10: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof ſure; this is certainly the dream the king had dreamed, for the truth of which he appeals to him; and the interpretation of it given would be moſt ſurely and faithfully accompliſhed, on which he might depend; for ſince the dream had been ſo diſtinctly related to him, he had no room to doubt of the true interpretation of it.

℣. 46. Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face, and worſhipped Daniel, &c.] Imagining there was ſomething of divinity in him, that he could ſo exactly tell him his dream, which was paſt and gone; and give him the interpretation of it, reſpecting things to come, which he concluded none but God could do; and therefore after the manner of the eaſtern people, threw himſelf proſtrate to the earth with his face to it, and gave religious adoration to Daniel; for that this cannot be underſtood of mere civil reſpect, appears by his following orders; and had he not thought that Daniel was ſomething more than a man, he a proud monarch would never have behaved in this manner to him; but being ſtruck with amazement at the relation of the dream, and the interpretation of it, he forgot what both he and Daniel were; the one a mighty king, the other a mere man, a ſervant, yea a captive: this ſhows that he was not exaſperated at the account of the fall of his monarchy, as might have been expected, but was filled with wonder at the revelation made: and commanded that they ſhould offer an oblation and ſweet odours unto him; riſing from the ground, he gave orders to his ſervants about him, ſome of whom might be the prieſts of Bel, that they would bring a meat-offering, and incenſe with it, and offer them to him as to a god; but tho' this was ordered, we don't read it was done; for it cannot be thought that Daniel, who had ſcrupled eating the king's food, and drinking his wine, leſt he ſhould be defiled, and afterwards choſe rather to be caſt into a den of lions than to omit prayer to God, would ever ſuffer ſuch a piece of idolatrous worſhip to be paid to him; and tho' he could not hinder the king's proſtration and adoration, which were very ſudden;, yet it is highly probable he reaſoned with the king upon it, and earneſtly deſired that no ſuch undue honours ſhould be paid to him; declaring that this knowledge was not of himſelf, but of God, to whom the glory ought to be given.

---

[a] Adv. Hæreſ. l. 5. c. 26.

℣. 47. The king anſwered unto Daniel, &c.] By which it appears that Daniel interpoſed and expoſtulated with the king, and prevented the oblation to him as a god, and inſtructed him in the knowledge of the true God he ought to worſhip; as the following confeſſion of the king more clearly ſhews: and ſaid, of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods; the God of Daniel and his companions, and of the people of the Jews, to whom they belonged, is above all gods that are named and worſhipped by men: this appeared at this time for the preſent, tho' it did not laſt long, as the following chapter ſhews, a moſt glaring truth; that the God of Iſrael was above all his gods, and whom his magicians and people worſhipped, and above all others: and a Lord of kings; that rules over them, and diſpoſes of them; ſets them up, and pulls them down at his pleaſure; and transfers their kingdoms from one to another, as he learned by the interpretation of his dream, to which he may in this refer: and a revealer of ſecrets, ſeeing thou couldeſt reveal this ſecret; of the dream, and the interpretation of it; which he could never have done, had not his God been a revealer of ſecrets, and revealed it to him.

℣. 48. Then the king made Daniel a great man, &c.] Advanced him to poſts of great honour and dignity; he was a great man before in ſpiritual things, in which he was made great by the Lord; and now he was made a great man in worldly things, thro' the providence of God; thoſe that honour him he will honour: and gave him many great gifts; gifts great in value, and many in number; rich garments, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, and large eſtates to ſupport his honour and grandeur; and which Daniel accepted of, not merely for his own uſe, but to do good with to his poor brethren the Jews in captivity: and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon; the whole monarchy was divided into ſeveral provinces, over each of which was a deputy-governor; this of Babylon was the chief of them, Babylon being the metropolis of the empire; the whole government of which, and all belonging to it, was given to Daniel; a proof of the king's high eſteem for him: and chief of the governors over all the wiſe men of Babylon; here was an univerſity conſiſting of ſeveral colleges, over each of which there was a governor, and Daniel was the preſident of them all; or the principal or chancellor of the univerſity: this office he might accept of, that he might have an opportunity of inculcating true knowledge, and of checking and correcting what was impious and unlawful.

℣. 49. Then Daniel requeſted of the king, &c.] Being in his favour, he improved it to the advantage of his friends, whom he did not forget in his elevated ſtate; but made ſuit to the king for them to be put into places of truſt and honour, which the king liſtened to: and he ſet Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego over the affairs of the province of Babylon; that is, under Daniel, who was made ruler over it; theſe were deputies under him, appointed to take care of ſome affairs, which would have been too troubleſome to him, and would have took up too much of his time from court; where he choſe to be, to improve his intereſt on behalf of the church of God. De Dieu thinks, from the uſe of the word in Chaldee, and from what anſwers to it in the Arabic language, that it was agriculture, the fruits of the field, and the revenues ariſing from thence, which theſe men had the care of: this Daniel got for them; that as they had aſſiſted him in their prayers to God, to obtain the dream, and the interpretation of it, ſo they might ſhare with him in his honours and profits he had on the account thereof; and probably he might ſuggeſt this to Nebuchadnezzar, which the more eaſily engaged him to grant the requeſt: but Daniel ſat in the gate of the king; either as judge there, or to introduce perſons into the king's preſence: or it may be rendered, in the king's court [t]; he was chief man at court, and always reſided there; he was prime-miniſter and privy-counſellor: it was uſual with the eaſtern nations to call their court a port, as the Turks do at this day; the Ottoman court is called the port.

CHAP. III.

IN this chapter an account is given of a golden image made by Nebuchadnezzar; its bigneſs; and where placed, ℣. 1. a ſummons to all his princes, governors and officers to attend the dedication of it, ℣. 2, 3, a proclamation commanding men of all nations to fall down and worſhip it, at hearing the ſound of muſic, ℣. 4, 5, 6, 7. an accuſation of the Jews to the king, particularly Shadrach, Meſhach and Abednego, for not worſhipping it, ℣. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. the king's ſending for them in rage, and threatning to caſt them into a fiery furnace if they continued to diſobey his will, ℣. 13, 14, 15. their anſwer, which ſhewed an inflexible reſolution at all events not to comply with it, ℣. 16, 17, 18. the king's order to heat the furnace ſeven times hotter than uſual, and caſt them into it, which was executed; the conſequence of which was, they that caſt them in were deſtroyed thro' the vehement heat of the furnace, but the three Jews were unhurt, ℣. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23. Nebuchadnezzar's chadnezzar's amazement at the ſight of four perſons, inſtead of three; and theſe looſe, walking in the midſt of the fire without hurt; and one of them like the Son of God, which he obſerved to his counſellors, ℣. 24, 25. upon which he called to Shadrach, Meſhach and Abednego to come out of the furnace, which they did in the preſence of his princes, governors and officers, having received not the leaſt damage in their perſons or cloaths, ℣. 26, 27. and then the king praiſing the God of the Jews, publiſhed an edict that none ſhould ſpeak againſt him on pain of death; and reſtored the three men to their former dignity, ℣. 28, 29, 30.

---

[t] בתרע מלכא in aula regis, Grotius.

℣. 1. Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, &c.] Not of ſolid maſſy gold; but either of a plate of gold, and hollow within; or of wood overlaid with gold; for otherwiſe it muſt have took up a prodigious quantity of gold to make an image of ſuch dimenſions as follow; this he ordered his ſtatuaries or workmen to make for him; whether this image was for himſelf, or his father Nabopolaſſar, or for his chief god Bel, or as a new deity, is not eaſy to ſay; however, it was made for religious worſhip: the reaſons that moved him to it cannot be aſcertained; it might be out of pride and vanity, and to ſet forth the glory and ſtability of his monarchy, as if he was not only the head of gold, but as an image all of gold; and to contradict the interpretation of his dream, and avert the fate of his empire ſignified by it; or to purge himſelf from the jealouſies his ſubjects had entertained of him, of relinquiſhing the religion of his country, and embracing the Jewiſh religion, by his praiſe of the God of Iſrael, and the promotion of Jews to places of truſt and honour; or this might be done by the advice of his nobles, to eſtabliſh an uniformity of religion in his kingdom, and to prevent the growth of Judaiſm; and it may be to lay a ſnare for Daniel and his companions; of which we have an inſtance of the like kind in ch. vi. When this image was made, is not certain; ſome think in a ſhort time after his dream before related; if ſo, he ſoon forgot it, and the God that had revealed it. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions place it in the 18th year of his reign; and ſome are of opinion, that it was after his victories over the Jews, Tyre, Egypt, and others; and that being fluſhed therewith, in the pride of his heart, ordered this image to be made; and out of the ſpoils he brought with him from the ſeveral countries he had conquered. Mr. Whiſton [u] places this fact in the year of the Julian period 4127, and before Chriſt 587; and ſo Dr. Prideaux [w], who makes it to be in the 18th year of Nebuchadnezzar, agreeable to the above verſions. Mr. Bedford [x] puts it in the year before Chriſt 585: whoſe height was threeſcore cubits, and the breadth thereof ſix cubits; a common cubit being half a yard, it was thirty yards high, and three yards broad; but Herodotus [y] ſays, the king's cubit in Babylon was three fingers larger than the uſual one; and according to that, this image muſt be thirty five yards high, and three yards and a half broad; but ſince there is ſo great a diſproportion between the height and breadth, ſome have thought that the height includes the pedeſtal on which it ſtood; and allowing twelve cubits for that, the height of the image was forty-ſix cubits. Diodorus Siculus [z] makes mention of a ſtatue of gold in the temple of Belus, which Xerxes demoliſhed, which was forty feet high, and contained a thouſand Babyloniſh talents of gold, which, at the loweſt computation, amounts to three millions and a half of our money; which image Dr. Prideaux [a] conjectures was this image of Nebuchadnezzar's; but this ſeems not likely, ſince the one was between thirty and forty yards high, the other but thirteen or fourteen; the one in the plain of Dura, the other in the temple of Bel: he ſet it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon; that ſo it might be ſeen of all, and there might be room enough for a vaſt number of worſhippers together. The Septuagint verſion calls this place the plain of Deeira, which ſome take to be the Deera of Ptolemy [b]; but that is in the province of Suſiana; rather this is Duraba [c], which he places near the river Euphrates in the province of Babylon. Aben Ezra ſays, this is the place where the children of Ephraim fell, and where the Chaldeans ſlew the Jews when they came into captivity. In the Talmud [d] it is ſaid, "from the "river Eſhal unto Rabbath is the valley of Dura;" in Arabic دور Dauro ſignifies round; it was a round valley. The Jews have a notion, that this was the valley in the land of Shinar where the tower of Babel was built; and obſerve, that "altho' the "deſign of that generation was not accompliſhed, "yet after their times their puniſhment was made "manifeſt, in that they ſaid, let us make us a "name, Gen. xi. 4. for Nebuchadnezzar having "waſted and ſubverted many kingdoms, and de"ſtroyed the ſanctuary, thought it poſſible to put "in execution the wicked deſign of the age of the "diſperſion; hence it is ſaid, Dan. iii. 1. king Ne"buchadnezzar made an image, &c. and ſet it up "בבקעת דורא in the valley of generation, in "the province of Babylon, which is the valley "ſpoken of in Gen. xi. 2, 9. what therefore they "could not do, he attempted to do; hence he "gathered all the people to worſhip the image, "which agrees with Gen. xi. 4. for he put a cer"tain veſſel of the veſſels of the temple on the "mouth of it (the image), on which was engraven "the divine name, that he might render effectual "the intention of the diſperſed generation; but "the ſcripture ſays, Jer. li. 44. and I will puniſh "Bel in Babylon, and I will bring forth out of his "mouth that which he hath ſwallowed up, and the "nations ſhall not flow together any more unto him; "for Daniel came and cauſed that veſſel that was "ſwallowed to be taken out of the mouth of the "image, whence it fell, and was broke to pieces, "which is the ſame as that in Gen. xi. 4 [e]."

℣. 2. Then Nebuchadnezzar the king ſent to gather together the princes, &c.] He ſent letters, or diſpatched meſſengers into the ſeveral provinces of his empire, and parts of his dominions, to convene all the peers of his realm, and governors of provinces, and all officers, civil, military and religious, expreſſed by various names and titles: the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treaſurers, the counſellors, the ſheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces; who are particularly and diſtinctly deſigned, is not eaſy to ſay. Jacchiades thinks they anſwer to the ſame offices and officers which now obtain in the Turkiſh empire; princes are the baſhaws,

---

[u] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

[w] Connexion, &c. Par. 1. B. 2. p. 87.

[x] Scripture Chronology, p. 709.

[y] Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 178.

[z] Bibliothec. Hiſt. l. 2. p. 98. Ed. Rhod.

[a] Connexion, &c. Par. 1. B. 2. p. 101.

[b] Geograph. l. 6. c. 3.

[c] Ibid. l. 5. c. 20.

[d] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 92. 2.

[e] Kabala Denudata, Par. 1. p. 671.

baſhaws; governors the beglerbegs; captains the agas of the Janizaries; judges the kadies; treaſurers the dephterdaries; the counſellors the alphakies; and zayties the ſheriffs; their chief doctors their muphti's as L'Empereur; and the rulers of the provinces the zangiakies or viziers: but be they who they will, they were the principal men of the empire, both in things civil, military and eccleſiaſtic, who were ordered to come to the dedication of the image, which Nebuchadnezzar the king had ſet up; for tho' it was made and ſet up, it was not a proper object of worſhip till dedicated; and which was done by burning incenſe, blowing trumpets, &c. now theſe great men were gathered together on this occaſion, becauſe of the greater honour done hereby to the king and his image; and alſo by their example to engage the populace the more eaſily to the worſhip of it; and likewiſe as being the repreſentatives of them, ſince they could not all be collected together in one place; and it may be it was done, as ſome think, to enſnare Daniel and his companions. Philoſtratus[f] makes mention of an officer at Babylon that had the keeping of the great gate into the city; which ſome take to be the ſame with the firſt ſort here mentioned; who firſt offered the golden ſtatue of the king to be worſhipped, before he would permit any to enter into the city; which perhaps might take its riſe from the worſhip of this golden image.

℣. 3. Then the princes, the governors, and captains, &c.] And all the reſt of the officers before mentioned having received their orders from the king, in obedience to them, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image Nebuchadnezzar the king had ſet up; at great expence, and with much fatigue and trouble, they came from all parts to attend this great ſolemnity: and they ſtood before the image Nebuchadnezzar had ſet up; they ſtood and looked at it, and viewed its ſeveral parts; they ſtood and beheld it with wonder, its richneſs and largeneſs; they ſtood and attended to all the rites and ceremonies of the dedication of it; they ſtood and were ready to fall down and worſhip it, when the word of command was given; ſo obſequious were they to the king's will.

℣. 4. Then an herald cried aloud, &c.] That his voice might be heard all over the plain; or if it ſhould be thought that one was not ſufficient to be heard throughout, which probably was the caſe, and where ſo great a number being aſſembled together, all could not hear one man, the ſingular may be put for the plural; and many being ſet in different places in the plain, and ſpeaking different languages, might proclaim when the image was dedicated, as follows: to you it is commanded; by the king's authority: O people, nations and languages; the ſeveral kingdoms, ſtates and provinces that belonged to the Babylonian monarchy, and ſpoke different languages, as now repreſented by their ſeveral governors and officers; as the Armenians, Parthians, Medes, Perſians, &c.

℣. 5. That at what time ye hear the ſound of the cornet, &c.] So called of the horn of which it was made; a ſort of trumpet; ſo the Jews had trumpets of rams horns: flute or pipe, or whiſtle, ſo called for its hiſſing noiſe; it is uſed of the ſhepherd's pipe or whiſtle; ſee Zech. x. 8. harp, an inſtrument of muſic uſed by David, and much in uſe among the Jews, and other nations; ſackbut or ſambuca, which, according to Athenæus[g], was a four-ſtringed inſtrument, an invention of the Syrians; and Strabo[h] a Greek writer, ſpeaks of it as a barbarous name, as the eaſtern ones were reckoned by the Grecians: pſaltery, this ſeems to be a Greek word, as does the next that follows, rendered dulcimer; but in the original text is ſymphonia; which does not ſignify ſymphony, or a concert or conſort of muſic, but a particular inſtrument of muſic. Maimonides[i] makes mention of it as a muſical inſtrument among others; Servius[k] calls it an oblique pipe; and Iſidore[l] deſcribes it a hollow piece of wood, with leather ſtretched upon it, and beat upon with rods or ſticks, ſomething like our drum: the king of Babylon might have Grecian muſicians, or however Grecian inſtruments of muſic in his court, as the Grecians had from the eaſtern nations: and all kinds of muſic; that could be had or thought of; and this was done in honour to this idol, and to allure carnal, ſenſual perſons to the worſhip of it, according to the order given: ye fall down and worſhip the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath ſet up; when they heard the muſic ſound, immediately they were to repair to the plain where the image ſtood, and pay their adoration to it; or to fall down proſtrate in their own houſes in honour of it; and perhaps perſons were appointed in all cities and towns throughout the empire to play this muſic; at hearing which, all people, nations and tongues were to bow down, in token of their religious regard unto it.

℣. 6. And whoſo falleth not down and worſhippeth, &c.] Who refuſes to worſhip it, or wilfully neglects it; which would be interpreted a contempt of it, and of the king's command: ſhall in the ſame hour be caſt into the midſt of a burning fiery furnace; ſuch as were uſed to burn ſtones in for lime, as Jarchi obſerves: the muſic was to draw, the furnace was to drive men to, this idolatrous worſhip; the one was to pleaſe and ſoothe the minds of men, and ſo allure them to ſuch ſtupid ſervice; the other to frighten them into obedience. This is the firſt time that mention is made of hours in the ſacred ſcriptures; it was very probably the invention of the Chaldeans or Babylonians; for Herodotus[m] ſays, the Greeks received the twelve parts of the day from the Babylonians.

℣. 7. Therefore at that time, &c.] Such a ſevere edict being publiſhed, threatning with ſo terrible a puniſhment: when all the people heard the ſound of the cornet, flute, harp, ſackbut, pſaltery, and all kinds of muſic; not only at Babylon, and that lived near the plain of Dura, but in all places where it was played: all the people, the nations, and the languages fell down, and worſhipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had ſet up; what thro' love of muſic, the fear of the furnace, regard to ſuperſtition and idolatry, and to the king's command, men of all nations and languages gave it homage and worſhip.

℣. 8. Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, &c.] That is, to king Nebuchadnezzar, either in his palace at Babylon, or more likely in the plain of Dura: and accuſed the Jews; particularly Shadrach, Meſhach and Abednego, as aftermentioned, of not obeying the king's command, to worſhip the golden image: theſe Chaldeans at the time of adoration had their eyes upon the Jews, particularly thoſe three men, to obſerve how they would behave; and as they ſtood up whilſt the others fell down, they were eaſily obſerved; wherefore they immediately haſten to the king, to lay an information againſt them; whoſe places of truſt and honour they envied, and now hoped to be put into them in their room; and if theſe were the Chaldeans, or ſome of them, whoſe lives theſe men had been the means of ſaving, as is probable, they acted a very ungrateful part. Should it be aſked, how came theſe three men to be preſent? it may be anſwered, they came here in obedience to the king's orders, as his officers, who had ſummoned them to this place; which they judged their duty to do, though they determined not to worſhip his image, ſhould he require it; or they came here on purpoſe to bear their teſtimony againſt ſuch idolatry. No mention is made of Daniel; very probably he was not here; for what reaſons cannot be ſaid; however, no accuſation is laid againſt him; perhaps he was too great to be meddled with, being high in the king's favour.

---

[f] De vita Apollonii, l. 1, c. 19.

[g] Deipnoſoph. l. 4.

[h] Geograph. l. 10. p. 324.

[i] Hilchot Celim, c. 10, §. 14.

[k] In Virgil. Æneid. l. 11.

[l] Originum, l. 3. c. 21.

[m] Euterpe, ſive l. 2. c. 109.

℣. 9. They ſpake and ſaid to Nebuchadnezzar, &c.] Having got acceſs unto him, and within his hearing, they expreſſed themſelves in the following manner: O king, live for ever; this they ſaid to ſhew their fidelity and hearty attachment to him, and their regard to his welfare, and the continuance of his life; and the rather, to ingratiate themſelves into his affections, and gain audience of him; ſee the note on ch. ii. 4.

℣. 10. Thou, O king, haſt made a decree, &c.] According to his own mind and will, and which he had publiſhed as ſuch to his ſubjects: that every man; let him be who he will, high or low, rich or poor, in whatſoever ſtation or condition: that ſhall hear the ſound of the cornet, flute, harp, ſackbut, pſaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of muſic; ſuch as had been juſt then blown or played on: ſhall fall down and worſhip the golden image; which the king had ordered to be made and ſet up, and now dedicated, and had been worſhipped by men of all ranks.

℣. 11. And whoſo falleth not down and worſhippeth, &c.] The image; the above is the decree, this that follows the ſanction of it: that be ſhould be caſt into the midſt of the burning fiery furnace; ſee the note on ℣. 6.

℣. 12. There are certain Jews, &c.] Men by birth, by nation, and religion deſpicable, foreigners, exiles, and captives; this they obſerve by way of contempt, and tacitly ſuggeſt that they were never worthy of the king's regard, and improper perſons to be put in places of profit and truſt, and that the king had done a wrong thing in advancing them: whom thou haſt ſet over the affairs of the province of Babylon; not to ſee that the ſtreets, ways, and walls were kept in order, as Saadiah obſerves; for this is mentioned as an aggravation of their crime, that being ſet in ſuch high places, ſhould be guilty of ſuch ingratitude to the king, and ſet ſuch a bad example to his ſubjects: Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; by name; they ſay nothing of the common people of the Jews, who either were not preſent, being employed in a ſervile manner, or were below their notice; nor of Daniel, who was above them, and out of their reach, and whom the king himſelf, as Aben Ezra obſerves, had ordered an oblation to be offered to; or perhaps he was not there, being ſick, or on the king's buſineſs elſewhere; for that he was preſent, and worſhipped, can never be imagined by any that know his character. The Jews, who do not ſhew all the reſpect that is due unto Daniel, ſay [n] ſome very idle and fooliſh things of him, as reaſons why he was not preſent at this time. It is aſked, "where did Da- "niel go? ſays Rab, to dig a large river in Tibe- "rias, ſome copies read in a mountain; but Sa- "muel ſays, to fetch the ſeed of herbs, food for "beaſts; and R. Jochanan ſays, to fetch ſwine
"from Alexandria in Egypt—there were three in "the conſultation about his abſence at this time,
"the holy bleſſed God, Nebuchadnezzar, and Da- "niel himſelf. The holy bleſſed God ſaid, let "Daniel be gone, that it mayn't be ſaid, they (the "three children) were delivered by his merits;
"Daniel ſaid, I'll be gone from hence, that I may "not fulfil that, the graven images of their gods ſhall
"ye burn; Nebuchadnezzar ſaid, let Daniel be ab-
"ſent, that it may not be ſaid he burnt his God
"in the fire." Theſe men, O king, have not regarded thee; ſhewed no reſpect to his perſon and authority; they diſobeyed his orders, and were guilty of rebellion againſt him, and contempt of majeſty: the proof follows, they ſerve not thy gods; whom the king and the nation worſhipped, as Bel, Nebo, Merodach, and others: nor worſhip the golden image which thou haſt ſet up; they did not bow down to it, in reverence of it, as had been ordered; this they knew would be moſt provoking to the king.

℣. 13. Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury, &c.] Which did not become him as a man, much leſs as a king, and ſtill leſs as engaged in devotion and religion: commanded to bring Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; that is, immediately before him; who very probably were not afar off: he did not order them in his wrath and fury to be ſlain directly, as he did the wiſe men and ſoothſayers in another caſe; but to be brought before him, and examined firſt, that he might know the truth of theſe allegations againſt them; which ſhows, amidſt all his rage, he retained ſtill ſome reſpect for them, and eſteem of them: then they brought theſe men before the king; which they had not much trouble to do, being very ready to come and anſwer for themſelves, and give an account of their conduct, and their reaſon for it.

℣. 14. Nebuchadnezzar ſpake and ſaid unto them, is it true, &c.] What I have heard of you, what you are charged with and accuſed of; ſurely it cannot be; ſo Aben Ezra and Saadiah interpret the word as we do, and all the Oriental verſions; it is only uſed in this place: it is expreſſed by way of admiration, as Jacchiades obſerves; it being incredible to the king, what he could never believe, unleſs it appeared plain in his own eyes. Some [o] render it, is it a deſolation? ſo Jarchi; is my decree ſuch, or ſhould you not obey it, was this ſuffered, nothing but diſorder and deſolation would follow in the kingdom: or, is it of purpoſe? as others [p]; have you done this willingly and knowingly, or thro' imprudence and inadvertency? if the latter, it is pardonable; if not, it cannot be bore with. De Dieu, from the Syriac uſe of the word, renders it, is it a joke? are you ſerious, and in good earneſt, or in joke, that ye worſhip not my gods? or do you mock me and them? O Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; on whom I have conferred ſo many favours, raiſed from a low to a high eſtate, and yet uſed by you in this manner: do ye not ſerve my gods? one would think he had no need to have aſked this queſtion; ſince he muſt needs know, that by their nation and religion, they ſerved only one God, and could ſerve no other; and that by their daily practice they never did, in which they were indulged: nor worſhip the golden image that I have ſet up? it is for the ſake of this the queſtion is put; this was the thing his heart was ſet upon, and ſuch was his pride, that he could not bear any controul in it.

---

[n] T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 93. 1.

[o] הצדא nunquid deſolatio? Montanus. So Jacchiades, and ſome in Ben Melech.

[p] An certo conſilio? Junius & Tremellius; ſive ex propoſito? Piſcator; ſo Rabbenu Hai in Ben Melech; an de induſtria? Cocceius; num revera, vel ſtudioſe? Michaelis.

℣. 15. Now if ye be ready, that at what time ye ſhall hear, &c.] The meaning is, that if they were diſpoſed in mind, which the king was very deſirous they ſhould, both for his own honour, and for their ſafety, for whom he had a regard; and were willing to comply with his orders, and readily yield obedience to his will, and worſhip his idol; the following would be a ſignal to them, and all would be well with them: or it may be rendered, when now ye ſhall be, that at what time ye ſhall hear [q]; for the word ſignifies future, as well as ready, and is by ſome ſo tranſlated; and the ſenſe is, when it ſhall be, or for the future, that they ſhould hear the ſound of the cornet, flute, harp, ſackbut, pſaltery and dulcimer, and all kinds of muſic; which was played not once only, but perhaps at certain times every day, and deſigned to be continued: ye fall down and worſhip the image which I have made; it is well; ſo doing, the king's wrath would be appeaſed, their lives would be preſerved, and they continued in his favour, and in their honourable poſts: but if ye worſhip not, ye ſhall be caſt the ſame hour into the midſt of a burning fiery furnace; immediately, without any delay; no reprieve will be granted, and much leſs a pardon: and who is that God that ſhall deliver you out of my hands? he knew their confidence in the God of Iſrael, which he attempts to break and remove; he foreſaw the objection they would make, which he endeavours to anticipate by this proud and vain boaſt, forgetting what he himſelf had ſaid, ch. ii. 47.

℣. 16. Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego anſwered and ſaid to the king, &c.] In a mild and gentle manner, without affronting his majeſty, or inſulting his gods, and yet without the leaſt degree of ſervile fear or fawning flattery: O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to anſwer thee in this matter; about worſhipping the image; we are not ſolicitous about a choice of words, or in what manner to draw up our anſwer, it is ready in our mouths; we have no need to take time and conſider of this matter, and think what to ſay, we are at a point about it: as thou art peremptory in thy will, to have thine image worſhipped, we are as reſolute, as determined never to worſhip it; ſo that there is no need to ſpend time in a debate about it; thou art come to a concluſion, and ſo are we: or in this matter, about the power of our God to deliver, we are not ſolicitous about an anſwer to that; we leave him to defend himſelf, and his own power, againſt ſuch inſults upon him.

℣. 17. If it be ſo, &c.] That we muſt be caſt into the fiery furnace, as thou haſt threatened: our God whom we ſerve; for tho' they did not ſerve the gods of the Babylonians, they did not live without God in the world; they believed in the one true God, the God of Iſrael, their covenant-God and Father; whom they worſhipped, had an intereſt in, and who had, and would have a regard for them: he, ſay they, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; either to prevent their being caſt into it, or to preſerve them unhurt in it, and to bring them ſafe out of it: inſtances of his power in other caſes, ſuch as the paſſage of the Iſraelites thro' the Red-ſea ſafe, when their enemies were drowned, with others, confirmed their faith in this: and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king; they might have a well-grounded hope and perſuaſion of deliverance, ariſing partly from former inſtances of the divine power and goodneſs in ſuch like caſes; and partly from the conſideration of the glory of God, which would be greatly conſpicuous herein; and chiefly becauſe of the king's defiance of God, and blaſphemy againſt him, which they had reaſon to believe would be taken notice of; for it does not appear that they had any foreſight of certain deliverance, or any ſecret intimation of it to them, or a full aſſurance of it, as is evident by what follows:

℣. 18. But if not, &c.] If our God does not think fit to exert his power, and deliver us, which we are well aſſured he is able to do; if it is not his will, we are content, we are reſigned unto it: be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not ſerve thy gods; be it as it will, whether we are delivered or not; we are not ſure of the one, but we are at a point as to the other: nor worſhip the golden image which thou haſt ſet up; come life, come death, we are ready; we had rather die than ſin: they were all of one mind, and agreed in this matter; a noble inſtance of ſpiritual fortitude and courage!

℣. 19. Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, &c.] Nettled at the anſwer given him; perceiving his threats made no impreſſion on theſe three men, and that they were reſolutely determined at all events not to obey his will: and the form of his viſage was changed againſt Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; not only to what it was in times paſt, when they were his favourites, and he ſmiled upon them; but with reſpect to what it was while they were under examination, and he was trying to bring them to his will; when finding it impracticable, fury roſe up, and ſhewed itſelf in the furrows and frowns of his forehead; in the ſharpneſs of his noſe; in his ſparkling eyes, foaming mouth, and gnaſhing teeth, and that general redneſs his face was covered with: therefore he ſpake, and commanded that they ſhould heat the furnace one ſeven times more than it was wont to be heat; this ſeems to be a furnace for this purpoſe, and where it was uſual to burn malefactors; it being a common puniſhment with the Chaldeans; ſee Jer. xxix. 22. the order was to put ſeven times more fuel in the furnace, that it might be ſo much the hotter, and burn ſo much the fiercer; which order of the king ſhows indeed the greatneſs of his wrath and fury, but at the ſame time that it had tranſported him out of his ſenſe and judgment; ſince ſo fierce a fire was the better for the three men, ſuppoſing them to have died as he intended; who would have been the ſooner diſpatched by it, and ſo not ſuffer ſo much pain and torment as in a ſlow fire, or leſs heat; but this was over-ruled by the providence of God, that ſo it ſhould be, that the miracle of their walking in it unſinged and unhurt, and their deliverance out of it, might appear the greater.

℣. 20. And he commanded the moſt mighty men that were in his army, &c.] The moſt famous for courage of mind, and ſtrength of body, that were in all his army: to bind Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; either their hands or their feet, or both; unleſs it can be thought, that they were all three bound together in one bundle, and ſo caſt into the furnace; which is not improbable, as Gejerus obſerves; ſeeing the king afterwards wondered to ſee them walk ſeparately in the furnace: there was no need to bind them, for they would not have reſiſted; and if he ordered this to ſecure them from the power of their God, it was vain and fooliſh: and to caſt them into the burning fiery furnace; if they were all three bound together, it required ſome able bodied men to take them up and caſt them in, eſpecially if the furnace was above them; though it is more probable, that it was a more depreſſed place, or below them, and ſo the caſt was more eaſy.

---

[q] הן איתיכון עתידין ſi futuri eſtis, Gejerus.

℣. 21. Then theſe men were bound in their coats, &c.] Their upper coats, cloaks, or mantles, as Aben Ezra and Jacchiades; though, according to the uſe of the word in the Arabic language, the femoralia [r] or breeches are meant: their hoſen, and their hats, and their other garments; the turbants on their heads, which were uſually wore in thoſe countries; and their ſtockings and ſhoes, and other under garments, as waiſtcoats and ſhirts; which thro' haſte or negligence, or with deſign, were kept on them, to make their torment the greater; but were intended by the Lord to make the miracle the more conſpicuous. According to Cocceius [s] and Bynæus [t], the firſt of theſe words ſignifies the outward covering of the body, as cloaks, &c. the ſecond the covering of the feet, as ſocks, ſhoes, and ſandals; and the third the covering of the head, as caps, turbants, helmets, &c. the laſt the inner garments that were under the upper ones: and were caſt into the midſt of the burning fiery furnace; in the manner and circumſtances before related.

℣. 22. And therefore becauſe the king's commandment was urgent, &c.] Or was ordered to be obeyed in haſte, and with expedition and diſpatch, hence the men were caſt into the furnace with cloaths on; or thoſe that caſt them were not ſo careful of themſelves: and the furnace exceeding hot; being heated ſeven times more than uſual: the flame of the fire ſlew thoſe men that took up Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; which came out of the furnace, being ſo exceſſive hot, and the ſmoke along with it; ſo that when thoſe men took up the three children, and brought them ſo near to it as was neceſſary to caſt them in, the flame and ſmoke catched their breath, and ſuffocated them; who might be men that adviſed the king to ſuch cruel meaſures, or however were very ready, out of ill-will to theſe good men, to execute them, and therefore righteouſly periſhed in their ſins: in the apocrypha it is ſaid, that the flame iſſued out forty-nine cubits above the furnace.

℣. 23. And theſe three men fell down bound into the midſt of the burning fiery furnace.] The fire not ſo much as deſtroying what they were bound with, and much leſs them; but being bound they fell, and there they lay for the preſent, unbound and alive; when thoſe that caſt them in were deſtroyed. In the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, Syriac, and Arabic verſions, follow ſixty-ſeven verſes, containing the ſong of Azariah and his companions in the furnace, which are not in the Hebrew text.

℣. 24. Then Nebuchadnezzar was aſtoniſhed, &c.] At the burning of thoſe that caſt the three men into the furnace, as Jacchiades; or he might be ſeized with a pannic, and his ſpirits filled with fear and dread, as the word [u] is by ſome ſaid to ſignify, and this from the immediate hand of God: and roſe up in haſte; from the place where he was, and went to the mouth of the furnace, to ſee what was become of thoſe that were caſt into it: and ſpake and ſaid unto his counſellors; who had adviſed him to do what he had done, out of envy and ill-will to theſe Jews: did not we caſt three men bound into the midſt of the fire? that is, was there not an order of council for it? and was it not done according to it? they anſwered and ſaid, true, O king; it was certainly ſo: thus they are brought to bear a teſtimony to the truth of this; it was not only the king that gave the orders, and ſaw them obeyed, but his counſellors alſo; and which they own, and ſerves to corroborate the truth of the miracle.

℣. 25. He anſwered and ſaid, lo I ſee four men looſe, &c.] Not bound as the three were, when caſt in; but quite at liberty in their hands and feet, and ſeparate from one another. As this fiery furnace may be an emblem of the fiery trials and afflictive diſpenſations the children of God paſs thro' in this world, being not joyous, but grievous to the fleſh, tho' uſeful to purge and purify; ſo this and ſome other circumſtances attending theſe good men in the furnace, are applicable to the ſaints in ſuch caſes; for tho' afflictions are ſometimes themſelves called cords, with which men are ſaid to be bound, yet by means of them they are looſed from other things; from the power and prevalence of ſin over them; from the world, and the things of it, they ſometimes too much cleave and are glued unto; from a ſpirit of bondage, and from doubts and fears; their hearts under them being comforted and enlarged with the love of God; he knowing, viſiting, and chuſing them in the furnace of affliction; or making known himſelf to them, his love and choice of them; whereby their ſouls are ſet at liberty, and the graces of his Spirit are drawn forth into a lively exerciſe, thro' his love being ſhed abroad in them. Walking in the midſt of the fire; the furnace being large enough to walk in, and where they took their walks as in a garden; nor were they concerned to come out of it; nor uneaſy at being in it; the violence of the fire being quenched, as the apoſtle ſays, referring to this inſtance, Heb. xi. 34. Saadiah ſays, the angel Gabriel, who is over the hail, came and cooled the fire of the furnace. So afflictions are a path to walk in, the narrow way to eternal life, through which all muſt enter the kingdom of heaven, of which there will be an end. Walking in it ſuppoſes ſtrength, which God gives his people at ſuch ſeaſons; and when they have his preſence they are unconcerned; none of theſe things move them, nor can they ſeparate them from the love of Chriſt; they walk on with pleaſure and delight, ſing the praiſes of God, as did Paul and Silas in a priſon, and as many martyrs have done in the flames: converſing with Chriſt, and with his people, they paſs on, and paſs thro' the more chearfully, and are not anxious about their deliverance, but leave it with God to work it in his own time and way; nay, are ready to ſay with the diſciples, it is good for them to be here; and indeed it was better for theſe good men to be with Chriſt in the fiery furnace, than to be with Nebuchadnezzar in his palace without him. And they have no hurt; either in their bodies, or in their garments, neither of them being burnt; they ſuffered no pain in the one, nor loſs in the other. Afflictions do no hurt to the people of God; not to their perſons, which are ſafe in Chriſt, and to whom he is an hiding-place and covert, as from the ſtorm and tempeſt, ſo from the force of fire, that it ſhall not kindle upon them to hurt them; nor to their graces, which are tried, refined, and brightened hereby; faith is ſtrengthened, hope is encouraged, and love made to abound. All the afflictions of the ſaints are in love, and are deſigned for good, and do work together for good to them that love God; they are ſometimes for their temporal, and often for their ſpiritual good, and always work for them an exceeding weight of glory. And the form of the fourth is like the Son of God; like one of the angels, who are called the ſons of God; ſo Jarchi, Saadiah, and Jacchiades; but many of the ancient chriſtian writers interpret it of Chriſt the Son of God, whom Nebuchadnezzar, though an heathen prince, might have ſome knowledge of from Daniel and other Jews in his court, of whom he had heard them ſpeak as a glorious perſon; and this being ſuch an one, he might conclude it was he, or one like to him; and it is highly probable it was he, ſince it was not unuſual for him to appear in an human form, and to be preſent with his people, as he often is with them, and even in the furnace of affliction; ſee Iſ. xliii. 2. and xlviii. 10. to ſympathize with them; to revive and comfort them; to bear them up and ſupport them; to teach and inſtruct them, and at laſt to deliver them out of their afflictions.

---

[r] בסרבליהון cum femoralibus, Pagninus, ſo Syr. Ar. cum braccis ſuis, V. L.

[s] Expoſ. Dict. Chald. col. 1022. rad. פטיש.

[t] De calceis Hebr. l. 2. c. 10. §. 4, 5, 6, 7.

[u] תוה expavit, Munſter, Piſcator, Michaelis; trepidavit, Gejerus; ſo Ben Melech from the Targum on Gen. xxvii. 33. trepidus, Junius & Tremellius.

℣. 26. Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the burning fiery furnace, &c.] He came ſo nigh before, as to ſee at a diſtance four perſons walking in it; now he comes nearer, as near as he could with ſafety: and ſpake and ſaid, Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, ye ſervants of the moſt high God; he not only ſpake to them in a different tone than he did before; not in wrath and fury, but mildly and gently, with great reſpect unto them, and reverence of them; and not only calls them by the names he and his courtiers had given them, but ſtiles them the ſervants of the moſt high God; he owns their God was a God above his: the Chaldeans worſhipped fire, but the God of the Jews had power over that, and could reſtrain the force of it at pleaſure; and he acknowledges that theſe men were faithful worſhippers of him; who had in this wonderful manner appeared for them, and thereby approved their faith and confidence in him, and their ſervice of him; ſee Acts xvi. 17: come forth, and come hither; that is, come out of the furnace, and come to the place where I and my nobles are: then Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego came forth of the midſt of the fire; as they had been caſt into it by the king's order, therefore they did not preſume to go out of it without the ſame; nor were they concerned about coming out; they had very agreeable and delightful company, and had reaſon to ſay it was good for them to be there; however, when they had the king's order, they immediately obeyed it.

℣. 27. And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counſellors, being gathered together, &c.] Either by the order of the king, or of their own accord, to ſee the miracle that was wrought: ſaw theſe men; ſaw them walking in the furnace, ſaw them come out of it at the king's call, and ſaw them when they were out, and examined them thoroughly; ſo that they had ocular demonſtration, full proof and conviction of the truth of what was done: upon whoſe bodies the fire had no power; to bliſter, ſcorch, burn, and conſume them, as it has uſually over the bodies of men, or any creature: nor was an hair of their head ſinged; which is eaſily done with the weakeſt flame; and this muſt be underſtood of the hair of their eye-brows and beards alſo; ſee Luke xxi. 18: neither were their coats changed; neither the ſubſtance, nor form, nor colour of them, but were juſt as they were when caſt into the furnace; the ſame holds good of all their other garments, their interior ones, with their turbants, ſhoes, and ſtockings: nor the ſmell of the fire had paſſed on them; as will upon perſons that ſtay at any time in a place where there is much fire and ſmoke; and eſpecially where much combuſtible things are burnt, as pitch, ſulphur, and the like, as in furnaces; and very probably in this, which had been ſo vehemently heated; and yet there was no ſmell of it on their garments; all which ſerve to make the miracle the more wonderful.

℣. 28. Then Nebuchadnezzar ſpake and ſaid, &c.] In the preſence of his princes and prime-miniſters of ſtate, and made the following confeſſion, to the praiſe and glory of the true God; which was extorted from him at this time thro' the force of conviction; for it does not appear to be a thorough converſion; nor did he relinquiſh his gods, and the worſhip of them: bleſſed be the God of Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; he does not call him his God, but theirs, as he had called him the God of Daniel before, ch. ii. 47: who hath ſent his angel, and delivered his ſervants that truſted in him; the fourth man he ſaw in the furnace, he now calls an angel of God; for the heathens had notions of ſome being the meſſengers of the gods: this ſeems to favour the ſenſe of thoſe, who think an angel is deſigned by the fourth perſon; tho' it does not follow that a created one muſt be meant; for it may be underſtood of the angel of God's preſence, the increated angel Jeſus Chriſt; who being ſent by his divine Father, came and delivered theſe three perſons from being conſumed in the fire, who had in ſo ſtrong a manner expreſſed their confidence in God, which the king now remembers and obſerves; ſee ℣. 17, 18: and have changed the king's word; made it null and void, refuſed to obey it, knowing it was their duty to obey God rather than man; ſo that the king was forced to change his word, and inſtead of obliging them to worſhip his image, bleſſes their God: and yielded their bodies; freely gave them up, without any reſiſtance, into the hands of thoſe who were ordered by the king to take and bind them, and caſt them into the furnace, to which alſo they readily yielded themſelves: ſo the Septuagint and Arabic verſions add, to the fire, that they might not ſerve nor worſhip any god, except their own God; they choſe rather to deliver up themſelves to death, to be burnt in a furnace, than to ſerve any other god than the God of Iſrael; ſuch was their conſtancy and firmneſs of mind; ſuch their attachment to the true God, and their faithfulneſs to him.

℣. 29. Therefore I make a decree, &c.] Or, a decree is made by me [w]; which is as follows: that every every people, nation, and language, which ſpeak any thing amiſs againſt the God of Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego; any thing indecent, blaſphemous, or by way of contempt: he does not give orders that their God ſhould be worſhipped, or ſignify that he would worſhip him himſelf, and quit his falſe deities; no, only that he ſhould not be ſpoken againſt, as very probably before this time he was, to the great grief of theſe good men; and to whom therefore ſuch an edict would be grateful, tho' no more could be obtained; by which it was enacted, that any ſuch perſon, ſo blaſpheming and reproaching, ſhall be cut to pieces, and their houſes ſhall be made a dunghil; ſee the note on ch. ii. 5: becauſe there is no other God that can deliver after this manner; no, not even Bel himſelf, as was plain; for he could not deliver the men at the mouth of the furnace, that caſt in theſe three, for they were deſtroyed by the force of the flame and ſmoke that came out; but the true God delivered the three men caſt in, even in the midſt of it; this was beyond all contradiction, and therefore he could not but own it.

---

[w] מני שים טעם a me proponitur edictum, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator, Broughtonus; a me poſitum decretum, Montanus, Cocceius, Michaelis.

ỳ. 30. Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, in the province of Babylon, &c.] He reſtored them to their places of truſt and profit, and increaſed their honours: or, made them to proſper, as the word [x] ſignifies; they flouriſhed in his court, and became very great and famous. The Septuagint and Arabic verſions add, "and he "counted them worthy to preſide over all the "Jews that were in his kingdom."

CHAP. IV.

THIS chapter was written by Nebuchadnezzar himſelf; and was either taken out of his archives, or given by him to Daniel, who under divine inſpiration inſerted it into this work of his; and a very uſeful inſtruction it contains, ſhewing the ſovereignty of God over the greateſt kings and potentates of the earth, and this acknowledged by one of the proudeſt monarchs that ever lived upon it. It begins with a preface, ſaluting all nations, and declaring the greatneſs and power of God, ỳ. 1, 2, 3. then follows the narrative of a dream the king dreamed, which troubled him; upon which he called for his wiſe men to interpret it, but in vain; at length he told it to Daniel, ỳ. 4—9. the dream itſelf; which being told, aſtoniſhed Daniel, the king being ſo much intereſted in it, ỳ. 10—19. the interpretation of it, with Daniel's advice upon it, is in ỳ. 20—27. the fulfilment of it, time and occaſion thereof, ỳ. 28—33. Nebuchadnezzar's reſtoration to his reaſon and kingdom, for which he praiſes God, ỳ. 34—37.

ỳ. 1. Nebuchadnezzar the king, &c.] This and the two following verſes are annexed to the preceding chapter in the Hebrew bible, and in the Septuagint and Vulgate Latin verſions; as if the author of the diviſion of the chapters thought, that Nebuchadnezzar propoſed by this public proclamation to celebrate the praiſe of the Lord, on account of the wonderful deliverance of the three Jews from the fiery furnace; whereas they are a preface to a narrative of a dream, and an event which concerned himſelf, and moſt properly begin a new chapter, as they do in the Syriac and Arabic verſions. The edict begins, not with pompous and extravagant titles, as was the manner of the eaſtern monarchs, and ſtill is, but only plainly Nebuchadnezzar the king; for he was now humbled under the mighty hand of God; whether his converſion was real, is not evident; yet certain it is, he expreſſes himſelf in ſtronger language concerning the divine being and his works, and under a deeper ſenſe of his ſovereignty and majeſty, than ever he did before. This proclamation is directed unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; belonging to his kingdom, as Aben Ezra; and theſe were many; beſides the Babylonians, Aſſyrians, and Chaldeans, alſo the Medes and Perſians, the Egyptians, the Jews, and the nations round about them; and alſo the Spaniards, Moors, and Thracians, with others: but there is no reaſon to limit this to his own ſubjects, tho' firſt deſigned; for it was his deſire that all people whatever in the known world might read, hear, and conſider what the grace of God had done unto him, with him, and for him, and learn to fear and reverence him: peace be multiplied unto you; a wiſh for all kind of outward happineſs and proſperity, and an increaſe of it; thus it becomes a prince to wiſh for all his ſubjects, and even for all the world; for there cannot be a greater bleſſing than peace, nor a greater judgment than war. This phraſe is borrowed from the common ſalutation in eaſtern countries, and is uſed often in the New Teſtament for ſpiritual and eternal peace.

ỳ. 2. I thought it good, &c.] Or fair [y] and beautiful, highly becoming me, what was my duty, and what might be profitable and beneficial to others, and make for the glory of the great God of heaven and earth: to ſhew the ſigns and wonders the high God hath wrought toward me; to declare by writing the wonderful things, God, who is above all, the moſt high God, had done unto him, by giving him a wonderful dream, exactly deſcribing his future caſe and condition, and then as wonderful an interpretation of it, and which was as wonderfully filled; and after all, in a wonderful manner reſtoring him to the exerciſe of his reaſon, and the adminiſtration of his kingdom, after both had departed from him.

ỳ. 3. How great are his ſigns! and how mighty are his wonders! &c.] They are great, very great, exceeding great; ſo great that it cannot be ſaid, nor even conceived how great they are, what a diſplay of wiſdom, power, and goodneſs is in them; they are wonderful beyond expreſſion and conception; and ſo ſtrong and mighty as not to be reſiſted and made void by all the powers of nature, earth, or hell; and if this may be ſaid of his works of providence, and his miracles of that, how much more of his works and miracles of grace! his kingdom is an everlaſting kingdom; Nebuchadnezzar's reign, tho' a long one, had an end, and ſo have all others, but the kingdom of God is for ever; the kingdom of providence, and alſo of grace; the kingdom of his Son, the Meſſiah, as in ch. ii. 44. from whence Nebuchadnezzar had learnt this: and his dominion is from generation to generation; or, [x] הצלח proſperare fecit, Munſter; proſperari juſſit, Junius & Tremellius, Piſcator; proſperos feliceſque fecit, Gejerus.

---

[y] שפר pulchrum, Montanus, Grotius, Gejerus, Michaelis; decet me, Junius & Tremellius.

with generation and generation[a]; it goes along, and continues with all generations, and will do ſo to the end of time.

℣. 4. I Nebuchadnezzar was at reſt in mine houſe, &c.] Being returned from his wars, and having obtained victory over the Egyptians, and other nations, and made himſelf an univerſal monarch; and now was in entire reſt from all his enemies; enjoying himſelf in his family, and among his courtiers, and nothing to diſturb him from any quarter. Joſephus[b] ſays, this was a little after the hiſtory of the former chapter; but it muſt be many years after that: he reigned 45 years; one year after this dream, it came to paſs; it was ſeven years fulfilling, and he lived after his reſtoration a year or two; ſo that this muſt be about the 35th year of his reign. Biſhop Uſher[c] and Mr. Whiſton[d] place it in the year of the Julian period 4144, and before Chriſt 570; and ſo Dr. Prideaux[e]. Mr. Bedford[f] puts it in the year 569: and flouriſhing in my palace; in health of body, in vigour of mind, abounding with riches; indulging himſelf in all ſenſual pleaſures; adored by his ſubjects, careſſed by his courtiers, and in fame throughout the whole world: a new palace was built by him, of which ℣. 30. being, as Dr. Prideaux[g] ſays, four times as big as the old one; eight miles in compaſs; ſurrounded with three walls; and had hanging gardens in it, he made for his wife.

℣. 5. I ſaw a dream which made me afraid, &c.] Things were repreſented to his fancy in a dream, as if he ſaw them with his eyes, as the tree, its leaves and fruit; the ſhaking and cutting it down to the ſtump, &c. and tho' he did not underſtand the meaning of it, yet he thought it portended ſome evil, which threw him into a pannic; he was afraid that ſomething bad would befal him, tho' he knew not what: thus God can make the minds of the greateſt men uneaſy amidſt all their glory, pride and pleaſure: and the thoughts upon my bed, and the viſions of my head troubled me; the thoughts that came into his mind while he was upon his bed dreaming, and the things which were repreſented to his fancy in his brain, he remembered when awake, gave him a great deal of trouble and uneaſineſs, what ſhould be the meaning of them, and what would be the iſſue and event of theſe things.

℣. 6. Therefore made I a decree, &c.] Publiſhed a proclamation; ſignifying it was his mind and will to bring in all the wiſe men of Babylon before him; all together, ſuppoſing that one or other of them, or by conſulting together, would be able to explain things to his ſatisfaction, and make him more eaſy: that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream; for tho' they could not tell the interpretation of his former dream, becauſe he could not relate to them the dream itſelf; which, if he could, they promiſed him the interpretation; but now he could remember it, and therefore might expect they would make known the interpretation of it to him.

℣. 7. Then came in the magicians, the aſtrologers, the Chaldeans, and the ſoothſayers, &c.] See the note on ch. ii. 2: and I told the dream before them, but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof; becauſe they could not; before they pretended, if the dream was told, they could give the interpretation of it; but now, tho' it was told, they could not do it; which ſhows the vanity of their art, the falſhood of their pretenſions, and that they were but jugglers and impoſtors.

℣. 8. But at the laſt Daniel came in before me, &c.] Whether ſent for or no, is not clear; the reaſon why he came not with the reſt, might be becauſe he did not aſſociate with them; nor did they care he ſhould be among them, and preſent at this time; and it may be, the king had forgot the knowledge he had of dreams; or however did not chooſe to ſend for him until he had tried all his wiſe men; and ſo it was ordered by the providence of God, and which is the chief reaſon of all, that he ſhould come laſt, that the ſkill of the magicians might appear firſt to be baffled, and that Daniel, or rather Daniel's God, might be more known, and might be glorified: whoſe name was Belteſhazzar, according to the name of my god; ſo called by him and his courtiers, after the name of his god Bel, with which this name of Daniel begins; ſee the note on ch. i. 7: and in whom is the ſpirit of the holy gods; meaning either the holy angels, as Saadiah; or ſpeaking in his heatheniſh manner, having imbibed the notion of many gods, ſome holy, and ſome impure; or it may be ſpeaking in the dialect of the Jews, he may mean the one true God, who is holy, and from whom alone is the ſpirit of prophecy, or of foretelling things to come; which he knew by former experience Daniel had: and before him I told the dream, ſaying, as follows:

℣. 9. O Belteſhazzar, maſter of the magicians, &c.] So he called him, either becauſe he excelled them in knowledge, and was greater than they, as Jacchiades; tho' not of their rank and order, which Daniel would have ſcorned to have been among, and reckoned of; ſo that this would have been no compliment, but a grief unto him; or becauſe he was appointed by the king chief over them, and even over their governors; ſee the note on ch. ii. 48: becauſe I know that the ſpirit of the holy gods is in thee; ſee the note on the preceding verſe: and no ſecret troubleth thee; any ways perplexes thy mind to find it out; it is eaſy to thee to come at; it gives thee no manner of trouble to get knowledge of it; there's no ſecret hidden from thee; all is plain before thee, and with the utmoſt facility canſt thou reveal it: tell me the viſions of my dream that I have ſeen; that is, the meaning of them; for the king remembered this his dream, and afterwards tells it very particularly: and the interpretation of it; it may be rendered, that is, the interpretation of it[h]; for that only was what the king wanted.

℣. 10. Thus were the viſions of mine head in my bed, &c.] So things appeared to my fancy thus; they ran in my head or brain in a dream in my bed, as if I ſaw them with my eyes, as follows; for ſo I thought, I ſaw, and behold a tree in the midſt of the earth; an emblem of a powerful prince well ſettled, and ſtrongly ſupported in his power and government; ſo the Aſſyrian monarch, Ezek. xxxi. 3—9. and here Nebuchadnezzar himſelf, as it is afterwards explained; who was well eſtabliſhed in his monarchy, the metropolis of which was Babylon; and which ſtood pretty much in the midſt of the then known world: and the height thereof was great; taller than trees in common; denoting the ſuperiority of the Babylonian monarch over all kings and kingdoms of the earth.

---

[a] עם דר ודר cum generatione & generatione, Pagninus, Montanus, Michaelis; cum omni ætate, Piſcator.

[b] Joſeph. Antiq. l. 10. c. 10. §. 6.

[c] Annales Vet. Teſt. A M. 3434.

[d] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

[e] Connexion, p. 92.

[f] Scripture Chronology, p. 710.

[g] Connexion, &c. Par. 1. B. 2. p. 102.

[h] ופשרה, id eſt, interpretationem ejus, Junius & Tremellius, Broughtonus, Michaelis.

℣. 11. The tree grew, and was ſtrong, &c.] Grew higher and broader, taller and thicker, increaſed in boughs and branches, and became ſtrong and ſtable, that no winds nor ſtorms could move it: this ſhews the increaſing power of Nebuchadnezzar, the enlargement of his dominions, and the ſtability of his empire: and the height thereof reached unto heaven; higher than any on earth; expreſſive of his dominion over all nations and people of the earth; or of his ambition of deity itſelf; and ſo Saadiah illuſtrates it by Iſ. xiv. 14. I will aſcend above the heights of the clouds, &c. and the ſight thereof to the end of the earth; being ſo high, it was ſeen afar off; the fame of this great monarch reached to the ends of the earth; the eyes of all were turned to him; ſome looking upon him with wonder, others with envy.

℣. 12. The leaves thereof were fair, &c.] Or branches[i], as ſome; and deſign either the provinces belonging to his empire, which were very large and flouriſhing; or the governors of them under him, as Saadiah, who made no ſmall and contemptible figure; his princes were altogether kings: and the fruit thereof much; great revenues from all parts of the empire were brought to him: and in it was meat for all; the produce of the ſeveral countries, and the trade carried on in them, brought in a ſufficient livelihood to all the inhabitants: the beaſts of the field had ſhadow under it; the inhabitants of the ſeveral heatheniſh nations under him, and even thoſe that were moſt ſavage, were protected in their lives and properties by him; ſo princes ſhould be a ſkreen, a protection to their ſubjects: and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof; which Saadiah interprets of the Iſraelites, in oppoſition to the foreign nations, comparable to the beaſts of the field: and all fleſh was fed of it; all his ſubjects ſhared in the good things his victorious arms brought into his empire; all enriched, or however made comfortable, and had a ſufficiency of food and raiment; ſo that there was no reaſon to complain of him as oppreſſive to his ſubjects.

℣. 13. I ſaw in the viſions of my head upon my bed, &c.] The king goes on to relate what other things preſented themſelves to his imagination in his dream, concerning this tree which ſignified himſelf: and behold a watcher; which Saadiah interprets of Bath Kol; but Aben Ezra, Jarchi, Jacchiades, and Ben Melech, of an angel; ſo called becauſe incorporeal, ever watches, and never ſleeps, and is always attentive to, and obſervant of, the commands of God; ſo the angels in the fragment of Enoch are called Egregori, watchers; and the ſame word is here uſed in the Alexandrian copy. Some[k] render it an enemy, an holy one; according to the ſenſe of the word in 1 Sam. xxviii. 16. and produce it to ſhew that angels are called enemies: and an holy one; one of the holy angels that never ſinned, nor left their firſt eſtate, but continued in it; in which they are eſtabliſhed by Chriſt, and are impeccable; are perfectly pure and holy in their nature and actions: ſuch an one came down from heaven; the place of their abode, as it ſeemed to Nebuchadnezzar in his dream.

℣. 14. He cried aloud, &c.] Or, with ſtrength[l]; being a mighty angel, and that he might be heard far and near: and ſaid thus, hew down the tree; remove this mighty monarch from his throne; take away his government from him: this is ſaid to fellow-angels employed in the affairs of providence, and the execution of them, to bring about an event ſo momentous: and cut off his branches; take away his provinces, the ſeveral parts of his dominion from him: ſhake off his leaves; cauſe his deputy-governors to ſhake off their allegiance to him: and ſcatter his fruit; the revenues of his vaſt empire, and let others take them: let the beaſts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches; thoſe that have either voluntarily betook themſelves to him for protection; or have been carried captive by him, and have lived under his ſhadow, whether of the more barbarous nations, or more civilized, as the Jews; let them take the opportunity of withdrawing from him, and returning to their own lands; ſee Jer. li. 9.

℣. 15. Nevertheleſs, leave the ſtump of his roots in the earth, &c.] Let him not be utterly deſtroyed, or his life taken away; but let him continue in being, tho' in a forlorn condition, yet with hope of reſtoration; for a tree may be cut down to the ſtump, and yet revive again, Job xiv. 7, 8, 9. and let his kingdom remain: even with a band of iron and braſs; which ſome think was done to preſerve it, and to ſhew that his kingdom remained firm and immoveable; but that is meant by the former clauſe, ℣. 26. rather the alluſion is to his diſtracted condition afterwards related; it being uſual to bind madmen with chains of iron or braſs to keep them from hurting themſelves and others, as in Mark v. 4: in the tender graſs of the field; where his dwelling ſhould be, not in Babylon, and in his fine palace, living ſumptuouſly as he now did; but in the field, grazing there like a beaſt, and like one that is teddered and confined to a certain place: and let it be wet with the dew of heaven; ſuggeſting that this would not only be his caſe in the day-time; but that he ſhould lie all night in the field, and his body be wet all over with the dew that falls in the night, as if he had been dipped in a dyer's vat, as the word[m] ſignifies; and Jarchi ſays, it has the ſignification of dipping; and not be in a ſtately chamber, and on a bed of down, but on a plot of graſs, expoſed to all the inclemencies of the air: and let his portion be with the beaſts, in the graſs of the earth; inſtead of feeding on royal dainties, as he had all his days, let him eat graſs like the beaſts of the field, as it ſeems he did.

℣. 16. Let his heart be changed from man's, &c.] Not as to the ſubſtance, but as to the quality: and let a beaſt's heart be given unto him; from an human heart, let it be changed into a brutal one; let him be deprived of the uſe of reaſon, and have no more exerciſe of it than a brute has; let him be wholly governed by the animal ſenſes, and behave and act as a beaſt does; be as ſenſeleſs, ſtupid and ſavage as that: and ſuch an heart Nebuchadnezzar had; not that his rational ſoul departed from him, then he muſt have died; but the powers of it were ſadly vitiated and depraved; his underſtanding, imagining himſelf to be a beaſt, not a man; his judgment, in not diſtinguiſhing the actions of a beaſt from thoſe of a man; his memory of things paſt utterly failed; he forgot what he had been, and was; his will, inclination and fancy, were towards brutal things, and ran upon deſarts, fields and graſs, and he ſhunned the ſociety of men: and let ſeven times paſs over him; whilſt in this condition; let him remain ſo long in it; not ſeven months, as Abarbinel, and others; nor ſeven half years, or three years and a half, as ſome in Theodoret; dividing the year into two parts, ſummer and winter; and ſuppoſe, that ſeven of theſe ſeaſons paſſed over him before he recovered; but ſeven years are meant, as Jarchi, Saadiah and Jacchiades, as the phraſe is uſed in ch. vii. 25. and xii. 7. ſo many years the temple of Solomon was building, which Nebuchadnezzar had deſtroyed, and ſo long this madneſs muſt remain upon him: no notice is taken of this affair by heathen writers, only Abydenus [n] ſays, that being under a divine afflatus, he foretold the deſtruction of the Babylonian empire by a Perſian mule (meaning Cyrus), and by a Mede, and immediately ηφανιστο he diſappeared; which ſome have underſtood of this time of his madneſs, which quickly followed upon this dream.

---

[i] עפיה ramus ejus, Pagninus, Montanus, Munſter, Vatablus; ramos ejus, Junius & Tremellius; rami ejus, Piſcator.

[k] Lex. Kabaliſt. in voce איב, p. 54, 55.

[l] בחיל in virtute, Montanus; cum robore, Gejerus; fortiter, Cocceius, Michaelis; ſtrenue, Junius & Tremellius, Broughtonus.

[m] יצטבע tingatur, Pagninus, Montanus, Munſter; intingatur, Junius & Tremellius; tingetur, Piſcator, Michaelis.

ỷ. 17. This matter is by the decree of the watchers, &c.] That is, the cutting down the tree, and what is ſignified by it, was with the advice, conſent and approbation of the watchers, by whom is generally underſtood angels; not that they were the authors of this decree, but approvers of it; and were ready, not only to ſubſcribe it, but to execute it; it being againſt a wicked man, and an oppreſſor of the Lord's people; they are repreſented as aſſeſſors with God; called into a conſultation with him; alluding to the manner of kings and princes, who have their privy council, whom they adviſe with on occaſion; tho' properly ſpeaking nothing of this nature is to be attributed to God, only after the manner of men; ſee 1 Kings xxii. 19—22: and the demand by the word of the holy ones; the ſame as before in other words; watchers and holy ones being the ſame, the holy angels; ſee the note on ỷ. 13. and the decree and the demand the ſame; or the requeſt [o], or petition; which ſhews what concern they had in the decree; they only requeſted it might paſs or be carried into execution; tho' ſome underſtand this of ſaints on earth, who, in their prayers and ſupplications, requeſted for the judgments of God to come down upon this proud monarch: tho' after all it may be beſt to interpret the whole of the three perſons in the Godhead, who are perfectly pure and holy, eſſentially and inderivatively; and may be called watchers, becauſe they watch over the good, to bring it upon the Lord's people; and over the evil, to bring it upon their enemies; and to them well agree the decree and the demand; and the rather this may be thought to be the true ſenſe, ſince this decree is called the decree of the Moſt High, ỷ. 24. and who is expreſſed in the next clauſe: to the intent that the living may know that the Moſt High ruleth in the kingdom of men; tho' men have kingdoms on earth, and multitudes ſubject to them, yet they are not abſolute ſovereigns; there is a God that is higher than they, at whoſe controul they are, and does whatſoever he pleaſes in their kingdoms, of which the event ſignified in this dream was a proof; and would be brought about on purpoſe to make it appear, that thoſe that live on earth, (for as for the dead they know nothing what is done on it) both princes and people might be ſufficiently convinced of the truth of it: and giveth it to whomſoever he will; that is, the kingdom; he takes it from one, and gives it to another; pulls down one, and ſets up another, as he pleaſes; ſee ch. ii. 21: and ſetteth up over it the baſeſt of men; or, the loweſt of men [p]; men of the meaneſt and loweſt rank and condition of life, as David was taken from the ſheep-fold, and made king of Iſrael; perhaps reſpect is had to Nebuchadnezzar himſelf; not to his perſon, as Saadiah, who ſays, he was ſhort and low of ſtature; but to his after-ſtate and condition, when he was taken from among the beaſts of the field, and reſtored to his throne and kingdom.

ỷ. 18. This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have ſeen, &c.] So things were repreſented to him by a viſion in a dream: now thou, O Belteſhazzar, declare the interpretation thereof; at once, directly; as he was well aſſured he could, by what he had already done; having both told him his dream when forgotten by him, and the meaning of it; and therefore doubted not but he could interpret his dream being told him: foraſmuch as all the wiſe men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation; he had ſent for them, even all of them; he had told them his dream, but they could not interpret it; ſee ỷ. 6, 7: but thou art able, for the ſpirit of the holy gods is in thee; he not only knew his ability from former experience, but for the reaſon here given; of which he might have more proofs than one, that the ſpirit, not of impure deities, of the gods and dæmons of the heathens, but of the one true, living and holy God, who knows all things, dwelt in him; ſee ỷ. 9.

ỷ. 19. Then Daniel (whoſe name was Belteſhazzar) was aſtonied for one hour, &c.] Not at the difficulty of interpreting the dream, which was plain and eaſy to him; but at the ſad and ſhocking things he ſaw plainly by the dream were coming upon the king: and tho' he was a wicked prince, and juſtly deſerved ſuch treatment; yet Daniel having received many favours from him, both for himſelf, and for his people, could not but be concerned for the unhappy condition, and miſerable circumſtances he would be brought into; and thus he continued for the ſpace of an hour like one thunder-ſtruck, filled with amazement, quite ſtupid, dumb and ſilent: and his thoughts troubled him; both about what ſhould befal the king, and how he ſhould make it known to him: the king ſpake and ſaid, Belteſhazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof trouble thee; he ſaw by his countenance the confuſion he was in, and imagined there was ſomething in the dream which portended evil, and made him backward to relate it; and therefore encouraged him to tell it, be it what it would: Belteſhazzar anſwered and ſaid, my lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies; which is as if he had ſaid, I could have wiſhed, had it been the will of God, that what is ſignified by the dream might have befallen not the king, but his enemies: this he ſaid, not merely as a courtier, but as one that heartily wiſhed and prayed for his peace and proſperity; and to ſhew that he had no ill will to the king in the interpretation of the dream, but was his hearty faithful ſervant and miniſter; and yet ſuggeſts that ſomething very dreadful and diſtreſſing was intended for him; and hereby he prepared him the better to receive it.

---

[n] Apud Euſeb. Præpar. Evangel. l. 9. c. 41. p. 457.

[o] שאלתא petitio, Pagninus, Montanus; poſtulatio, Munſter; hoc poſtulatum, Junius & Tremellius; petitio hæc, Piſcator.

[p] שפל אנשים humilem hominum, Montanus, Grotius; humilem inter homines, Pagninus; humilem virorum, Michaelis; humillimum hominum, Cocceius.

ỳ. 20, 21. The tree which thou ſaweſt, &c.] In theſe two verſes is related part of the dream which reſpects the flouriſhing eſtate of Nebuchadnezzar and his kingdom; ſee the notes on ỳ. 10, 11, 12.

ỳ. 22. It is thou, O king, that art grown, and become ſtrong, &c.] Here begins the interpretation of the dream: the tree was an emblem of king Nebuchadnezzar, of his greatneſs, and growing power and ſtrength: for thy greatneſs is grown, and reacheth unto heaven; he over-topped all the kings of the earth, exceeding them in honour and power, and aſpired to deity itſelf; ſee the note on ỳ. 11: and thy dominion to the end of the earth; as far as Hercules's pillars, as Strabo [a] ſays he came. Grotius interprets it, as far as the Caſpian and Euxine-ſea, and the Atlantic ocean.

ỳ. 23. And whereas the king ſaw a watcher, and an holy one, &c.] Here is related another part of the dream, which reſpects the cutting down of the tree, or the miſerable condition the king ſhould be brought into; ſee ỳ. 13, 14, 15, 16.

ỳ. 24. This is the interpretation, O king, &c.] Of this part of the dream, namely, what follows in the two next verſes: and this is the decree of the Moſt High; called before the decree of the watchers, ỳ. 17. and is no other than the decree of that ſovereign and abſolute being, whoſe purpoſes are unfruſtrable: which is come upon my lord the king; the decree had paſt concerning him, and would be moſt certainly fulfilled; and becauſe of the certainty of it, it is repreſented as if it was; for it would ſhortly and ſurely come upon him, exactly as it was determined, and by the dream ſignified.

ỳ. 25. That they ſhall drive thee from men, &c.] From converſation with men, as unfit for it; from his court and palace, from his nobles and princes. Saadiah interprets this of the angels: it may be rendered impersonally or paſſively, as in ỳ. 33. thou ſhalt be driven from men [r]; not by his family, his wife and children; or by his nobles, who are afterwards ſaid to ſeek him; but by the moſt high God, and to ſhew his power over him; and it may be by means of his miniſtring angels; or he was driven by his own fancy and imagination, which was ſuffered of God to prevail over him, judging himſelf not a man, but a beaſt; and ſo it was moſt agreeable to him to live with beaſts, and not men: and thy dwelling ſhall be with the beaſts of the field; in the open air, or in ſome den and cavern, inſtead of being in his court, and among his nobles; a ſtrange change of condition indeed! and in which he was preſerved by divine providence: and they ſhall make thee to eat graſs as oxen; imagining himſelf to be a beaſt, he ſhould chooſe this ſort of food, and eat it, and feed upon it with a guſt, as if he had really been one; and beſides, having no other food, would be obliged to eat this, as well as his degenerate and depraved imagination led him to it: and they ſhall wet thee with the dew of heaven; ſtrip him of his cloaths, and leave him naked; ſo that he ſhould have nothing to ſhelter him from the dew and rain, and other inclemencies of the heavens; and this his frenzy might lead him to do of himſelf: and ſeven times ſhall paſs over thee; which ſome underſtand of weeks, others of months; others of the ſeaſons of winter and ſummer; but it is beſt to interpret it of ſeven whole years; ſee the note on ỳ. 16: till thou know that the Moſt High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomſoever he will; this was done, as for the inſtruction of men in general, ſo of Nebuchadnezzar in particular; that his proud heart and haughty ſpirit might be brought down, and be made to acknowledge that there was a God higher than he, that judgeth in the earth, and that rules and over-rules, and diſpoſes of all things in it according to his will and pleaſure; ſee ỳ. 17.

ỳ. 26. And whereas they commanded to leave the ſtump of the tree-roots, &c.] That is, the watchers and the holy ones; or it was commanded: this was the order given by the Moſt High: thy kingdom ſhall be ſure unto thee; ſignifying that another king ſhould not be ſet up in his room; and tho' the kingdom and adminiſtration of it would depart from him for a while, yet it would be reſtored again, and be firm and ſtable: after that thou ſhalt have known that the heavens do rule; that is, that God, who is the maker of the heavens, and dwells there, is known and acknowledged by thee to rule on the earth; from the government of which he was deſirous of excluding him, and taking it to himſelf; ſee Luke xv. 18.

ỳ. 27. Wherefore, O king, let my counſel be acceptable to thee, &c.] Since this is the true interpretation of the dream, and ſuch evils are like to befal thee according to it; permit me, tho' thou art a king, and I am thy miniſter or ſervant, to give thee ſome advice; and let it be taken in good part, as done with a good deſign, and a hearty concern for thy welfare: and break off thy ſins by righteouſneſs; this advice carries in it a tacit charge of ſins, and a reproof for them; which ſhows the faithfulneſs of Daniel: theſe ſins probably, beſides pride, intemperance, luxury, and uncleanneſs, were tyranny, rapine, violence, and oppreſſion of his ſubjects, to which righteouſneſs is oppoſed; and by which, that is, by a courſe and ſeries of righteous living, by adminiſtring public juſtice, and giving to every one their due, he is adviſed to break off his ſinful courſe of life; to break off the yoke of his ſins upon his neck; to ceaſe from doing evil, and to learn to do well: and thine iniquities by ſhewing mercy to the poor; to his poor ſubjects, and eſpecially to the poor captives the Jews, Daniel might chiefly bear upon his mind, whom the king had ill uſed, ſhewn no compaſſion to, and had greatly diſtreſſed; but is now counſelled to relieve their wants, and give generouſly to them out of the vaſt treaſures he was maſter of: if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity; peace or proſperity; perhaps by ſuch a conduct there may be a reprieve for a while, the evil portended and threatened by this dream may be deferred for a time; and tho' the decree of the Moſt High cannot be altered, yet the execution of it may be protracted, and proſperity be lengthened out. Daniel could not aſſure the king of this; but as there was a poſſibility, and even a probability of it, as in the caſe of Niniveh, and others, whoſe ruin was threatened, and yet upon repentance was prolonged; it was highly adviſeable to try the experiment, and make uſe of ſuch a conduct, in hope of it; and the father, ſince the humiliation of princes, and their reformation, tho' but external, is obſerved by the Lord, as in the caſe of Ahab. Aben Ezra, Jarchiades, and Ben Meleeh render it, if it may be an healing of thine error; that is, the pardon of thy ſins, that they may be forgiven thee; ſee Acts viii. 22.

---

[a] Geograph. l. 15. p. 472.

[r] לך טרדין truderis, Michaelis.

℣. 28. All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.] All that was ſignified in the dream, his madneſs, the removal of him from the adminiſtration of government, and the brutal life he lived for ſeven years; for this was not a mere parable or fiction, as ſome have thought, framed to deſcribe the ſtate and puniſhment of a proud man, but was a real fact; tho' it is not made mention of by any hiſtorians, excepting what has been obſerved before out of Abydenus, yet there is no reaſon to doubt of the truth of it, from this relation of Daniel; and is further confirmed, by his obſerving the ſame to Belſhazzar his grandſon ſome years after it was done, as a known thing, and as an unqueſtionable matter of fact, ch. v. 20, 21.

℣. 29. At the end of twelve months, &c.] After the dream, and the interpretation of it; which, according to Biſhop Uſher [s], Dean Prideaux [t], and Mr. Whiſton [u], was in the year of the Julian period 4145, and before Chriſt 569, and in the 36th year of his reign: one whole year, a ſpace of time, either which God gave him to repent in, or which he obtained by attending for a while to Daniel's advice: he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon; or, upon the palace [w]; upon the roof of it, which in the eaſtern countries was uſually flat and plain; and ſo Abydenus [x], in the above cited place, repreſents him, ως αναϐας επι τα βασιληια, as aſcending upon his royal palace; when after he had finiſhed his oration on it, he diſappeared. From hence he could take a full view of the great city of Babylon, which ſwelled him with pride and vanity, and which he expreſſed in the next verſe; ſee the note on ℣. 4. where alſo mention is made of his palace, the new one built by him. The old palace of the kings of Babylon ſtood on the eaſt ſide of the river Euphrates, exactly over-againſt it, as Dean Prideaux [y] obſerves; on the other ſide of the river ſtood the new palace Nebuchadnezzar built. The old one was four miles in circumference; but this new one was eight miles, encompaſſed with three walls, one within another, and ſtrongly fortified; and in it were hanging-gardens, one of the wonders of the world, made by him for the pleaſure of his wife Amyitis, daughter of Aſtyages king of Media; who being taken with the mountainous and woody parts of her native country, and retaining an inclination for them, deſired ſomething like it at Babylon, and to gratify her herein, this ſurpriſing work was made: tho' Diodorus Siculus [z] ſays, it was made by a Syrian king he does not name, for the ſake of his concubine; and whoſe account of it, and which is given from him by Dean Prideaux [a], and the authors of the Univerſal Hiſtory [b], is this, and in the words of the latter: "theſe gardens are ſaid to contain a ſquare of "four plethra, or four hundred feet on each ſide, "and to have conſiſted of terraces one above an"other, carried up to the height of the wall of "the city; the aſcent, from terrace to terrace, "being by ſteps ten feet wide. The whole pile "conſiſted of ſubſtantial arches upon arches, and "was ſtrengthened by a wall ſurrounding it on "every ſide, twenty-two feet thick; and the floors "on each of them were laid in this order: firſt "on the tops of the arches was laid a bed or "pavement of ſtones, ſixteen feet long, and four "feet broad; over this was a layer of reed, mixed "with a great quantity of bitumen; and over this "two courſes of brick, cloſely cemented with "plaſter; and over all theſe were thick ſheets of "lead, and on theſe the earth or mould of the "garden. This floorage was deſigned to retain "the moiſture of the mould; which was ſo deep "as to give root to the greateſt trees which were "planted on every terrace, together with great "variety of other vegetables, pleaſing to the eye; "upon the uppermoſt of theſe terraces was a re"ſervoir, ſupplied by a certain engine with water "from the river, from whence the gardens at the "other terraces were ſupplied." And it was either on the roof of the palace as before obſerved, or perhaps it might be upon this uppermoſt terrace, that Nebuchadnezzar was walking, and from whence he might take a view of the city of Babylon; the greatneſs of which as ſet forth by him, he prided himſelf with, in the following words:

℣. 30. The king ſpake and ſaid, &c.] Either within himſelf, or to his nobles about him; or perhaps to foreigners he had took up with him hither, to ſhew the grandeur of the city: is not this great Babylon, that I have built; he might well call it great, for, according to Ariſtotle [c], it was more like a country than a city; it was, as Pliny [d] ſays, ſixty miles in compaſs within the walls; and Herodotus [e] affirms, it was four hundred and fourſcore furlongs round, and ſuch the greatneſs of it, and ſo beautified, as no other city was he ever knew; ſee the note on Jer. li. 58. tho' the king ſeems to have gone too far, in aſcribing the building of it to himſelf; at leaſt he was not the original builder of it; for it was built many hundreds of years before he was born, by Nimrod or Belus, who were the ſame, Gen. x. 10. and was much increaſed and ſtrengthened by Semiramis, the wife of his ſon Ninus; wherefore to her ſometimes the building of it is aſcribed; but inaſmuch as it might be in after-times greatly neglected by the Aſſyrian kings, Niniveh being the ſeat of their empire; Nebuchadnezzar, when he came to the throne, and eſpecially after he had enriched himſelf with the ſpoils of the conquered nations, greatly enlarged, beautified, and fortified it: and Beroſus [f] relates, that he not only adorned the temple of Bel therewith, but of the city, which was of old, he made a new one, and fortified it, built three walls within, and as many without; and another royal palace contiguous to his father's, which greatly exceeded it; and hanging-gardens in it, which looked at a diſtance like mountains, for the pleaſure of his wife; and now becauſe he had done ſo much to the repairing, enlarging, and fortifying of this city, he takes the honour to himſelf of being the builder of it: and this was done, he ſays, for the houſe of the kingdom; that it might be the ſeat of the empire, and a proper place for the royal family to dwell in, to have their palace, and keep their court in: by the might of my power; thro' the great riches he was poſſeſſed of, which he employed in many great works, as before related, to the advantage of this city; he takes all to himſelf, and excludes all inſtruments, and even God himſelf; tho' unleſs the

---

[s] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3435.
[t] Connexion, &c. part 1. p. 105.
[u] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.
[w] על היכל ſuper palatium, Vatablus; ſuper palatio, Coccejus, Michaelis.
[x] Apud Euſeb. ut ſupra.
[y] Connexion, &c. part 1. B. 2. p. 102.
[z] Bibliothec. l. 2. p. 98.
[a] Ibid.
[b] Vol. iv. B. 1. ch. 9. p. 409, 410.
[c] Politic. l. 3. c. 3.
[d] Nat. Hiſt. l. 6. c. 26.
[e] Clio, ſive l. 1. c. 178.
[f] Apud Joſeph. Antiq. l. 10. c. 11. §. 1. & contr. Apion, l. 1. §. 19.

Lord build the city, in vain the builders build, Pſ. cxxvii. 1: for the honour of my majeſty; not ſo much for the benefit of the city, for the good of his ſubjects, as for the honour and glory of himſelf; to ſhew his riches, power, and grandeur, and to make his name immortal to future ages.

℣. 31. While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, &c.] Before the king had done ſpeaking in the above boaſting manner, an articulate voice from heaven was heard by him, and all about him, formed by the angels, and much like what the Jews call Bath-Kol; ſee Acts xii. 21, 22, 23. ſo Abydenus[g], in the account he gives of Nebuchadnezzar's oration to the people, relates, that when the king had ſpoke it, ϖαραχρημα ηφανιϛο, immediately he diſappeared: ſaying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is ſpoken, the kingdom is departed from thee; that is, the adminiſtration of it; for he was not depoſed, or declared to be no longer king; his office was not taken away from him, and another king ſet upon the throne; only the adminiſtration was taken into other hands, either of his wife or ſon, or his nobles; he being unfit for it, till ſuch time as his reaſon returned to him.

℣. 32. And they ſhall drive thee from men, &c.] According to the interpretation of the dream given by Daniel, which this voice from heaven confirms; ſee the note on ℣. 25. where the ſame things are ſaid as here.

℣. 33. The ſame hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar, &c.] Whence it appears, that this was a true hiſtory, and a matter of fact; and not a parable or allegory, as Origen thought, deſcribing the fall of Lucifer or ſatan; but relates what befel Nebuchadnezzar himſelf: nor was the change real as to ſoul and body; for then he would not have been the ſame perſon, not Nebuchadnezzar, and ſo not he himſelf puniſhed, but the beaſt into which he was changed: and tho' there was a ſtrange alteration, both in his body and mind; in ſome parts of his body, and perhaps in his voice, in his ſenſes of feeling, taſting and ſmelling, in his palate, and appetite, and ſtomach; in his rational powers, underſtanding, judgment, and memory; ſo that he acted like a beaſt, and chuſing to live as one; yet ſo as to retain the eſſential parts of a man: his caſe was, that at once he fell raving mad and diſtracted, when they firſt bound him with chains, that he might not hurt himſelf and others, and afterwards turned him looſe into the woods among the wild beaſts; or perhaps into one of his parks, among the deer, hares, foxes, and ſuch like creatures; whither he might incline to go, fanſying himſelf to be a beaſt, and delight to be among them: and he was driven from men, and did eat graſs as oxen; which he did by choice: ſo Aben Ezra reports of one in the iſland of Sardinia, who fled from his parents, and loſt his reaſon, and lived among deer for many years, and went upon his hands and feet like them; and the king of the iſland going a hunting one day, caught many deer, and among them this man, that was taken for one: his parents came and owned him, and ſpoke to him, but he anſwered not; they ſet before him bread and wine, to eat and drink, but he refuſed; they then gave him graſs with the deer, and he eat that; and in the middle of the night made his eſcape to the deer of the field again. And his body was wet with the dew of heaven; lying all night in the woods or fields without cloathing: till his hair was grown like eagles feathers; thick, black, and ſtrong; the hairs of his head having not been cut, nor his beard ſhaved for ſeven years: the Septuagint and Arabic verſions read, as lions: and his nails like birds claws; the nails of his fingers and toes were hard, long and ſharp, like theirs, having not been cut during this time; this ſhows that the ſeven times are not to be underſtood of weeks or months, but of years. Some have underſtood all this as a real metamorphoſis, and that Nebuchadnezzar was changed into a beaſt; the upper part of him was the form of an ox, and the lower part that of a lion, as Epiphanius[h]; ſo Cyril[i] ſays of him, that he was changed into a beaſt, lived in a deſart, had the nails and hair of a lion, eat graſs like an ox; for he was a beaſt, not knowing who gave him the kingdom; and ſo others; cloſely adhering to the letter of the text, but wrongly, for reaſons before given: nor is it to be aſcribed merely to any natural diſeaſe of body, or melancholy in him, by which the fancy may be ſo diſturbed, as for a perſon to imagine himſelf a beaſt; for tho' this was his caſe, yet not thro' any diſeaſes, ſuch as is called the lycanthropy; and much leſs to any witchcraft, or any diabolical art, exerciſed on him; but to the mighty hand of God, taking away the uſe of his reaſon, and throwing him into madneſs and diſtraction, for the demonſtration of his power, and humbling the pride of an inſolent monarch; not but that God could, if it had been his pleaſure, have changed him into a brute, as he turned Lot's wife into a pillar of ſalt; and as a certain wicked nobleman in Muſcovy was turned into a black dog, barking and howling, upon uttering horrible blaſphemies againſt God for ſome judgment upon him, as Cluverius[k] relates, who had it, he ſays, from both ear and eye-witneſſes of it; but ſuch a judgment was not inflicted on Nebuchadnezzar, nor are ſuch things uſual. Hercdotus[l] reports, tho' he himſelf did not credit it, of ſome people among the Scythians, that were every year, for a few days, changed into wolves, and then returned to their former ſhape again; and Pomponius Mela[m] relates the ſame, of the ſame people; and the poets frequently ſpeak of ſuch tranſmutations; but theſe are all fictions and deluſions.

℣. 34. And at the end of the days, &c.] Of the time fixed in the dream; that is, at the end of ſeven years, as Jarchi rightly interprets it: this, according to Biſhop Uſher[n], Dean Prideaux[o], and Mr. Whiſton[p], was in the year of the Julian period 4150, and before Chriſt 563, in the 42d year of his reign; after which he lived but one year, reigning from the death of his father 43 years, and according to the Jewiſh accounts 45; they reckoning from the beginning of his partnerſhip in the kingdom with his father, and his firſt coming with an army into Syria. I Nebuchadnezzar lift up mine eyes unto heaven; for during the ſeven years he eat graſs like an ox, his eyes were fixed upon the earth, looking out for his food, and eſpecially if he went on all four as the beaſts do; but now ſtanding upright, in his erect form as a man, he looked upwards; tho' this phraſe does not merely deſign his looking up to the heavens, and viewing them with his bodily eyes; but his ſenſe and conſideration of the divine majeſty in heaven, his praying to him, lifting up the eyes being a prayer-geſture, and his devotion towards him: and mine underſtanding returned to me; his underſtanding as a man, which he had been deprived of during this time; and ſo came to know in what ſtate and condition he was, by whom brought into it, and for what reaſon: and I bleſſed the Moſt High; the moſt high God, he whoſe name alone is Jehovah, the God of gods, who is higher than the higheſt; him the king bleſſed for returning his underſtanding and reaſon to him, and reſtoring him to his ſenſes; for which he had juſt cauſe to be thankful, for a greater bleſſing cannot be enjoyed: and I praiſed and honoured him that liveth for ever; the living and true God, the author of life to all that have it, and who upholds in it; who lives in and of himſelf, and for evermore; which no mere man, even the moſt exalted and dignified does: whoſe dominion is an everlaſting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation; ſee the note on ℣. 3.

---

[g] Apud Euſeb. ut ſupra.
[h] De prophet. vit. & inter. c. 10.
[i] Catecheſ. 2. §. 11.
[k] Apud Bucheim Diſſertat. de Μεταμορφωσει Reg. Nebuchad. in Theſaur. Philol. Diſſert. tom. 1. p. 880.
[l] Melpomene, ſive l. 4. c. 105.
[m] De ſitu orbis, l. 2. c. 1.
[n] Annales Vet. Teſt. A. M. 3442.
[o] Connexion, &c. part 1. p. 166.
[p] Chronological Tables, cent. 10.

℣. 35. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing, &c.] That is, by the moſt high God, in compariſon of him; and that not only the common people, but magiſtrates, princes, and kings, and even ſo great a monarch as Nebuchadnezzar; they are like mere non-entities, nothing as to exiſtence, ſubſtance, greatneſs, glory and duration, when compared with him: for this is to be underſtood not abſolutely as in themſelves; for as ſuch they are ſomething; their bodies are ſomething in their original, and eſpecially in their make, form, and conſtitution, and even in their diſſolution; and their ſouls are yet more valuable, are of more worth than the whole world, being immaterial and immortal; but comparatively with reſpect to God, in whom they live, and move, and have that being they have, and by whom they are ſupported in it; all whoſe glory and grandeur is fading and paſſing away, and their continuance is but very ſhort; and all nothing with God, the Being of beings, whoſe glory is inconceivable, and with whom a thouſand years are as one day, and who is from everlaſting to everlaſting: and this is meant chiefly of the rational inhabitants of the earth; not of the beaſts of the field, the cattle on a thouſand hills, and the innumerable reptiles of the earth, which alſo are the inhabitants of it; but of men, the principal ones, and of all of theſe, high and low, rich and poor, bond and free; not as in their own account, and that of others; for they are ſomething in their own eſteem, and ſeem ſo in the eyes of others, who judge according to the outward appearance; but they are nothing in the account of God: and as this is true of them in things natural and civil, it is much more ſo in things ſpiritual, or relating to everlaſting ſalvation: in theſe, men are nothing, and counted as nothing; no uſe is made of them, or any account is had of any thing done by them; theſe have no cauſal influence in their ſalvation; they are nothing in God's choice of them to eternal life, which is all of mere ſovereign grace; nothing in redemption, which is only by Jeſus Chriſt; nothing in regeneration, which is alone by the Spirit and grace of God; nothing in juſtification, which is not by the works of the law, but by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt; in ſhort, they are nothing in their ſalvation from firſt to laſt, which is all of grace, and not of works. Jarchi and Saadiah interpret this of an atom or mote in a ſun-beam, which is ſeen flying about, but can't be laid hold on, having no ſubſtance, and diſappears when the ſun ſhines not; ſee Iſ. xl. 15, 17. And he doth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; he orders the angels, which are the hoſt of heaven, to ſtand or go where he pleaſes; and he diſpoſes of men on earth, and puts them into ſuch ſtations, and ſuch conditions and circumſtances, and appoints them ſuch buſineſs and ſervices as he thinks meet. The angels are the army of heaven, or the heavenly hoſt; ſo called for their number, there being legions of them, even an innumerable company; and for their military uſe, being employed to fight for the people of God, to encamp about them, and protect them: thoſe who formerly belonged to them, that ſinned againſt God, he caſt them down to hell, without ſhewing them any mercy; and the reſt he choſe and confirmed in Chriſt, and all according to his ſovereign will; and theſe he makes uſe of according to his pleaſure, to miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation in life, to convoy their ſouls to heaven at death, and to gather in all the elect at the laſt day. The inhabitants of the earth, are the men of it, as before, with whom he does as he pleaſes in things temporal and civil, making ſome rich, and others poor; raiſing ſome to great honour and dignity, whilſt others live in meanneſs, poverty, and diſgrace: and in things ſpiritual; he loves whom he will; he chuſes whom he pleaſes; he redeems whom he thinks fit from among men; he regenerates and calls by his grace, of his own will; and reveals Chriſt, and the great things of the goſpel, to whom it ſeems good in his ſight; he does what he will with his own; he beſtows grace and glory on whomſoever he pleaſes, as free-grace-gifts, without any merit of the creature, according to his ſovereign will and pleaſure. And none can ſtay his hand; ſtop his power, reſiſt his will, or hinder him from acting, or cauſe him to ceaſe from his work, which he is bent upon; his will in both worlds is ſovereign and arbitrary, and his power uncontroulable. It was ſo in creation, he ſaid, and it was done; it is ſo in providence, he does what he pleaſes; there's nothing done without his knowledge and will, and there's no counſel againſt the Lord: it is ſo in his works of grace; in the great work of redemption; no difficulties could diſcourage or hinder Chriſt from the performance of that arduous work, he being the mighty God: and in the work of grace upon the heart of a ſinner, when God begins to work, none can let; not corruptions within, nor ſatan without; nor can any thing hinder the carrying of it on; not indwelling ſin, nor the ſnares of the world, nor the temptations of ſatan. The purpoſes of God cannot be diſannulled; his hand cannot be held, ſtopped, or turned back from the execution of them; he'll do his will and his work in the world, and in his churches, and on particular perſons, maugre all the oppoſition of men and devils. Or ſay unto him, what doſt thou? what is this thou haſt done? and wherefore haſt thou done it? why was it not done in another form and manner, and for other ends and purpoſes? ſee Iſ. xlv. 9. all ſuch like queſtions are vain and fooliſh, and are deſpiſed by the Lord; he gives no account of his matters unto the children of men. Some may with wonder ſay, what has God wrought? but none ought to ſay in a complaining and murmuring way, what doſt thou? and ſhould they, it is of no avail, he will do what he pleaſes.

℣. 36. At the ſame time my reaſon returned unto me, &c.] Or, my underſtanding [q]; this he repeats, not only to expreſs the certainty of it, but the ſenſe he had of the greatneſs of the favour, and of which what he ſaid at this time is a full proof: and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightneſs returned unto me; or form [r], as the Septuagint; his majeſtic form, that royal majeſty that appeared in his countenance formerly, returned again; which graced him as a king, and made for the glory of his kingdom, and the adminiſtration of his office. Jarchi renders it, and to the glory of my kingdom I returned; and to the ſame purpoſe the Septuagint, Vulgate Latin, and Arabic verſions. This whole clauſe is wanting in the Syriac verſion. Jarchi interprets brightneſs, of the form of his countenance; and Jacchiades of the light of it, the ſparkling luſtre and majeſty of it. A ſtrange change and alteration this! And my counſellors and my lords ſought unto me; who very likely had the adminiſtration of government in their hands during this time; and as the dream, and the intepretation, were publickly known, and they had ſeen the firſt part of it fulfilled in the king's madneſs and miſerable ſtate; they had reaſon to believe the latter part alſo, and therefore waited for the accompliſhment of it at the end of ſeven years; when they ſought for him, and ſought unto him, very probably by the direction of Daniel, who was at the head of them; and this may be the reaſon why another prince was not ſet upon the throne, becauſe they expected his return to it at the expiration of theſe years; and in the mean while held the reins of government in their own hands, but now delivered them up to him: and I was eſtabliſhed in my kingdom; as Daniel had told him in the interpretation of his dream, that his kingdom ſhould be ſure to him, ℣. 26: and excellent majeſty was added unto me; or, more majeſty [s]; he had more honour and grandeur than he had before; more reſpect was ſhown him, and homage paid him: his latter end, like Job's, was greater than his beginning.

℣. 37. Now I Nebuchadnezzar praiſe, and extol, and honour the king of heaven, &c.] Now he knew that the heavens ruled, and that there was a God and a King there, above all gods and kings; who had brought him low, and raiſed him up again, and to whom were owing all his preſent glory and magnificence, and therefore worthy of his higheſt praiſes; and which he in the moſt public manner gave, by words before his lords and counſellors, and by writing under his own hand, by this edict and proclamation: all whoſe works are truth, and his ways judgment; every thing he does in providence, and every ſtep he takes therein, are according to truth and righteouſneſs; he is true to his word, and righteous in his works, as he had been to him: and thoſe that walk in pride, he is able to abaſe; not only that ſhow it now and then, but always, and in every thing; in their looks and geſtures, in their talk and walk, and throughout the whole of their converſation; in whom it is public, viſible, notorious, and conſtant; but let them carry their heads ever ſo high, and be as proud and haughty as they will, God is able to humble them; he has various ways of doing it. Such as are proud of their outward beauty, or the ſtrength of their bodies, he can, by ſending a diſeaſe upon them, make their beauty to conſume like a moth, and weaken their ſtrength in the way; ſuch as are elated with their wealth and ſubſtance, and with honours conferred upon them, or dignity they are raiſed to, he can ſoon ſtrip them of all their riches by one providence or another, and bring down thoſe that ſtand in ſlippery places of honour and dignity to deſtruction in a moment; and ſuch as pride and plume themſelves with their wit and knowledge, the natural endowments of their mind, he can take away their reaſon and underſtanding from them, as he did from this monarch, and put them upon a level with brutes: ſuch who boaſt of their own righteouſneſs and good works, and truſt in themſelves, that they are righteous and holy perſons, and deſpiſe others; and think to be juſtified and ſaved by them, and not to be beholden to any other, but be their own ſaviours; theſe the Lord, by his Spirit, can humble, by ſhewing them the impurity of their nature; their impotence to that which is ſpiritually good; the imperfection of their beſt righteouſneſs to juſtify them in his ſight; ſo that they ſhall appear to be polluted and defiled creatures, who thought themſelves very holy; and to be very weak and inſufficient of themſelves, to do any thing ſpiritually good, who gloried in the power and ſtrength of their free-will; and ſee that their beſt works are no other than filthy rags, and to be renounced in the buſineſs of their juſtification and ſalvation: in ſhort, he humbles by ſhewing them that all their temporal good things are owing to the good providence of God, and are dependent on it; and that all they have in ſpirituals is owing to the grace of God, and not to any deſert of theirs; in conſequence of which they become meek and lowly, and walk humbly with their God, who before walked in the pride of their hearts, and in the vanity of their minds. And a power to do this is peculiar to God himſelf; none but God can look upon him that is proud, and abaſe him, and bring him low; and ſooner or later, by one means, or in one way or another, he will ſtain the pride of all glory: it is his uſual way to abaſe him that exalts himſelf, and exalt him that humbles himſelf; ſee Job xl. 11, 12. Iſ. xxiii. 9. Matt. xxiii. 12. Luke xiv. 11. pride being a moſt hateful ſin to him, contrary to his nature and glory, to his grace and to his goſpel; the firſt ſin of angels and men. And of abaſement and humiliation of ſuch proud ones, Nebuchadnezzar was an inſtance in various reſpects; who was one of the proudeſt monarchs upon earth, yet was humbled with a witneſs; but after all, whether truly converted is a queſtion.

CHAP.

---

[q] מנדעי intellectus meus, Cocceius, Michaelis.

[r] זיוי, ἡ μορφή μου, Sept. forma mea, Tigurine verſion; figura mea, Munſter.

[s] רבו יתירא magnificentia amplior, Pagninus, Montanus; amplitudo major, Junius & Tremellius; magnificentia major, Piſcator; majeſtas amplior ſeu major, Michaelis.

CHAP. V.

THIS chapter gives an account of a feaſt made by king Belſhazzar, attended with drunkenneſs, idolatry, and profanation of the veſſels taken out of the temple at Jeruſalem, ℣. 1, 2, 3, 4. and of the diſpleaſure of God, ſignified by an hand-writing on the wall, which terrified the king, and cauſed him to ſend in haſte for the aſtrologers, &c. to read and interpret it, but they could not, ℣. 5, 6, 7, 8. in this diſtreſs which appeared in the countenances of him and his nobles, the queen-mother adviſes him to ſend for Daniel, of whom ſhe gives a great encomium, ℣. 9, 10, 11, 12. upon which he was brought in to the king, and promiſed a great reward to read and interpret the writing; the reward he ſlighted, but promiſed to read and interpret the writing, ℣. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. and after putting him in mind of what had befallen his grandfather Nebuchadnezzar, and charging him home with pride, idolatry, and profanation of the veſſels of the Lord, ℣. 18—23. reads and interprets the writing to him, ℣. 24—28. when he had honour done him, and was preferred in the government, ℣. 29. and the chapter is concluded with an account of the immediate accompliſhment of ancient prophecies, and of this hand-writing, in the ſlaying of the king of Babylon, in the diſſolution of the Babyloniſh monarchy, and the poſſeſſion of it by Darius the Mede, ℣. 30, 31.

